INGRATITUDE.

As The Speeding Ship Shows No Trace Of Its Passing, So The Ungrateful Heart Shows No Signs of Favors Received.

The present situation of this world is a sad commentary on mankind. It sometimes seems that we have reached that stage when you can "Trust not in a friend and put no confidence in a guide." We are no prophet, nor the son of a prophet, but it is our prediction that if that time is here when we can trust not in a friend, nor put any confidence in a guide, then the devil has everything his own way, and that it won't be long before the whole structure will collapse in its own rottenness. He will reign supreme. With confidence destroyed, what is there to hold the world up, what is there to base any hope on for the future? When you try to help people now adays they will swear you are trying to beat them, and will use your confidence in them, your good will and interest in their welfare to "turn the tables" on you. This lack of confidence, this distrust in one another is making for criminality, it is searing the consciences of mankind. All the culture of centuries, refinement, decency, religion, good will, are shedded off like a loose garment. Often the writer has seen men who had been as straight as a shingle for a long life time turn crooks and resort to the lowest things because of this utter distrust of his fellow man. "I'd as well get in the swim" and get all I can, any way I can," they would say. "Do the other fellow before he does you." So the situation has become as a vast whirlpool sucking everything within its reach into its vortex. And it seems that it matters little whether or not one is naturally inclined to be sucked in or not, for the strong undertow has become so great that he gives up the fight and drifts with the tide.

Confidence is the paramount and universal prerequisite not only to business, but to all that goes to make life worth living. We can see this illustrated in almost any species of animals, fowls or insects. Take a colony of bees, for instance. There is not a grafter, not a slacker, not a schemer in the family. There is the utmost confidence, every one has confidence in every other one, and we human beings, are entitled to the fullest confidence that this trust has never been betrayed. They work together. What is to one's interest is to the interest of all. There is unquestioned obedience to authority, because they have implicit confidence in their leader, who never leads them astray. Not one of them spends a moment of time devising a scheme to "corner" all the honey. They dwell in unison, happy, and all their lives are spent in feasting. If humanity had a tittle of this confidence, industry and good will, this world would immediately be transformed into a veritable paradise. In Holy Writ the shiftless, good-for-nothing human being is referred to the ant, but we have ample proof that few have obeyed this divine injunction, or in the least "considered her ways." They prefer to graft on the "others," to make that colossal brain of theirs put them on "easy street." We believe right today there is more ingenuity, more real effort being used to get something for nothing than in trying to produce anything.

This lack of confidence among people is bad enough, but couple this with ingratitude and you have a combination that would disgrace hell in its palmiest days. To feel and realize that men have "become lovers of self," willing to accept all you can do or try to do for them, and show no sign of gratitude for favors received, gives us the conviction that the rank and file of humanity has sunk far below the brutes of creation. We have heard people say, both men and women, that the "more I see of men, the more I love dogs." Just here the editor of the News feels constrained to say that the "more we see of and try to help some people the more we love hyenas."

Happy Christmas

And numerous indeed are the hearts to which Christmas brings a brief season of happiness and enjoyment. How many families whose members have been dispersed and scattered far and wide, in the restless struggle of life, are then reunited, and meet once again in that happy state of companionship and mutual good-will, which is a source of such pure and unalloyed delight, and one so incompatible with the cares and sorrows of the world, that the religious belief of the most civilized nations, and the rude traditions of the roughest savages, alike, number it among the first days of a future state of existence, provided for the blest and happy! How many old recollections, and how many dormant sympathies, Christmas time awakens!

We write these words now, many miles distant from the spot at which, year after year, we met on that day, a merry, joyous circle. Many of the hearts that throbbled so gayly then, have ceased to beat; many of the looks that shone so brightly then, have ceased to glow; the hands we grasped, have grown cold; the eyes we sought, have hid their luster in the grave; and yet the old house, the room, the merry voices and smiling faces, the jest, the laugh, the most minute and trivial circumstance connected with those happy meetings, crowd upon our mind at each recurrence of the season, as if the last assemblage had been but yesterday. Happy, happy Christmas, that can win us back to the delusions of our childish days, recall to the old man the pleasures of his youth, and transport the traveler back to his own fireside and quiet home! —Charles Dickens.

Yes, Christmas is the day of days—the greatest holiday the world has ever known. It is the day that turns the hand of time backward in its flight and makes us a "Child again just for tonight." It brings its joys and sorrows, its brilliant phantasies and harsh realities. Verily it is a day to all things. It makes us ask, "Where are now the happy party, I remember long ago, laughing 'round our Christmas fire, bright and by its ruddy glow." Then we realize that they have all dispersed and wondered far away. Some have gone from us forever, some with strangers make their home. So each Yuletide brings its varied memories, its past regrets and future fears. But in spite of all this let us try to make it a season of joy ever to be remembered, one to which we can look from every subsequent point of life, even from the life to come, down on its furthest verge with unalloyed pleasure.

Fun and a Good Time for Everybody

An amusing and lively comedy drama furnishing plenty of romantic interest will be presented in the high school auditorium by the teachers, supported by members of the senior class, Wednesday evening, December 21, at 7:30.

"He's My Pal" is full of lively situations and also has serious situations. It is the story of a girl who falls in love with the pal of her former sweetheart, think that her first lover is gone forever. The pal turns up at the crucial moment and causes a complication which requires the last two acts to unravel. It is a play of romance, laughter, tears, heart-aches, sighs and mystery. Music will be furnished before and between each act. Come and enjoy an evening of pleasure and recreation. Remember the date, place and time.

Tax Collector's Notice

The city commissioners at their last meeting cut the city tax rate from 75 cents on the hundred dollars to 50 cents, the same rate as last year. Owing to financial conditions in general they thought that the best thing to do. So to do that and meet the city's obligations it will be necessary to collect all taxes due the city for the years 1926 and 27. All delinquent taxes not paid by February 1st, 1928, will be put in the hands of an attorney for collection, with instructions to file suits on same.

Christmas Trees

There will be a Christmas Tree at the Methodist church, also one at the High School building. Superintendent A. Dryden appointed financial program committees Sunday. Mrs. J. R. Dean and Miss Claudalea Ledger are the program committee, and A. W. Ormand and H. C. Holt compose the finance committee. The tree at the school building will be under the auspices of the Baptist people.

A Heartrending Tragedy

Yesterday morning Mrs. W. E. Cox left her home to go across the street for a bucket of water, leaving her children in the house. During her absence the house caught fire and on her return was beyond control and entrance was impossible. There were four children, the oldest 6 years old, the youngest 2 months, which she left asleep on the bed. The oldest children made their way out of the house, but the baby was left behind and was burned to death. It was buried Thursday night.

ANOTHER CAR OF TURKEYS SHIPPED

It Was Not Only Sales Day With The Producers, But Exchange Day As Well, Which Will Prove Of Great Benefit in the Future.

Well, it has been done again. Another car has been loaded to capacity with turkeys and in all probability is by this time in Kansas City. And, what we did for the producers before we have done again, only on a larger scale, and stand ready with further aid in behalf of the producers when the opportunity arrives. Of course we encountered obstacles, which might be expected, but we surmounted them all and left the little "jelly beans" to nurse their discomfort and foot up their losses. We are not prone to gloat over the failure of an adversary, nor to extol our own achievements, but the fact that we have put this second car "over the top" and at the same time put much Christmas money in the pockets of the producers that they otherwise would have missed, will, we hope, bring its own reward. Below we give you the program and the conditions under which it was carried out:

Turkeys were 23 cents when we ordered our car, but jumped to 28c after it was known that the car was coming, and prices remained at that for Thursday and Friday. Saturday and Monday the local market was 23 cts again, and we were informed by the local dealer that he could and would not pay over that price. Upon this advice we ordered a second car to protect the producer, as we figured on at least two cars. But when Tuesday a. m. arrived both local dealers got into the market and met our price of 29c. The second car was not filled, but the first car was filled to capacity. The majority of the producers stood by the car loyally, and with few exceptions were pleased with the price and grades received by those in charge. The grading was done by the editor and it was our aim to be fair in this and with all.

Those who in any way were displeased we would be glad to have them call at the News office and discuss matters, as it will be a help to both. It is our aim to ship a car load of poultry and we want to be able to render the best service possible to the producer, and secure for him the highest price possible. It has been demonstrated that we can handle the produce business here and receive much better prices than has been paid. It is a well known fact that the cars coming in were the direct means of putting $7560.00 into the pockets of the producers of this section.

Show Windows Reflect Holiday Spirit

Sudan show window reflect the holiday spirit in their display. The children especially are much attracted and linger awhile to admire and comment on the scene and display.

It is worth much to watch these little fellows on the tiptoe of expectancy, their little hearts thrilled with the joys of anticipation of the good things soon to come. Surly, indeed, must be the man or woman who can fail to respond to these childish joys and make them in reality part of their own. As we watch these little fellows with Christmas only a few days away, it brings vividly to our mind the scenes of our childhood, and as we look back down the vista of time we live over again the happy days long gone by. These little fellows gazing through the show windows at the pretty things displayed there, is just what we used to do, and it is the earnest wish of the News that their every hope and expectation may be realized.

Historic Christmases

Christmas Day on the Delaware, 1776.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

AN ARTICLE about "Historic Christmases" would be incomplete without mention of the first—and most historic—Christmas of all. For had it not been for certain events in the little town of Bethlehem in Palestine some nineteen centuries ago there would have been no Christmas to be celebrated each year, hence no Christmases to be characterized as "historic."

What those events were have been recorded by "the beloved physician," St. Luke, who, more than any one of the four apostles who have written the story of Christ, has given the historic background of those events. And this is the story of that first historic Christmas, as St. Luke tells it:

And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Caesar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed.

(And this taxing was first made when Cyrenus was governor of Syria.)

And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city.

And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem; (because he was of the house and lineage of David.)

To be taxed with Mary, his espoused wife, being great with child.

And so it was, that, while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered.

And she brought forth her first-born son and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn.

And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

And lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid.

And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying,

Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us.

And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger.

And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child.

And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds.

But Mary kept all these things, and considered them in her heart.

And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told unto them.

Those were the events, then, which were destined to bring about the world-wide celebration of December 25 of each year. However, this observance did not begin at once, for the very first evidence of a feast having been held in honor of the birth of Christ was in Egypt about the year 200. Although the regular observance of Christmas began sometime in the Fifth century, it was not until the Thirteenth century that the celebration became a general custom.

It is interesting to note that the first Christmas celebration in the New world took place only a little more than two months after that event which is usually referred to as "the discovery" of America. Soon after Christopher Columbus set foot upon the soil of the New world he started upon an exploration of the group of islands which he had found. During this time he anchored his ships in a harbor of Haiti, to which he gave the name of a saint whose day is celebrated on December 6 and who in the minds of children is inseparably connected with Christmas day—St. Nicholas.

The Battle of Trenton

ON Christmas-day in Seventy-Six Our ragged troops, with bayonets fixed,

For Trenton marched away The Delaware see! the boats below! The light obscured by hail and snow! But no signs of dismay.

Our object was the Hessian band, That dared invade fair freedom's land, And quarter in that place. Great Washington he led us on, Whose streaming flag, in storm or sun, Had never known disgrace.

In silent march we passed the night, Each soldier panting for the fight, Though quite benumbed with frost. Green on the left at six began, The right was led by Sullivan, Who ne'er a moment lost.

Their pickets stormed, the alarm was spread, That rebels risen from the dead Were marching into town. Some scampered here, some scampered there, And some for action did prepare; But soon their arms laid down.

Twelve hundred servile miscreants, With all their colors, guns and tents, Were trophies of the day. The frolic o'er, the bright canteen, In center, front and rear was seen Driving fatigue away.

Now, brothers of the patriot bands, Let's sing deliverance from the hands Of arbitrary sway. And as our life is but a span, Let's touch the tankard while we can, In memory of that day.

—Old Ballad.

The first Christmas in the New world—and surely it was a historic one—was an eventful day for Columbus and his men. They spent it in a vain effort to save the flagship, the Santa Maria, which had been beached on Christmas eve. Finding that their efforts were doomed to fail, they took what goods they could from the ship and carried them on board the Nina. Since this vessel was too small to carry all those who had been on board the flagship, Columbus found it necessary to leave some of his men in a fort which was built on an island and which in honor of the season was called Le Navidad, "The Nativity."

Although Christmas was, no doubt, celebrated by the early Spanish and French settlers in the New world, there is no record of any outstanding events on that day connected with these settlements which would make their Christmas celebration worthy of the characterization of "historic." Christmas must also have been a joyful occasion for the settlers of the first English colony at Jamestown, Va., even amidst the privations and troubles of the early days of that colony. For they doubtless brought with them the English tradition of the old country Yuletide with all of its feasting and merrymaking.

Quite different was the first Christmas of that other English colony founded "on the stern and rock-bound coast" of New England. The Pilgrim fathers landed on the Mayflower at Plymouth on December 21, 1620. But Christmas day that year brought with it no thought of revelry or gaiety to these Englishmen. This first Christmas day found them without shelter from the piercing winds, since the day before was Sunday and no one was allowed to labor and disturb the sanctity of the Sabbath even for the purpose of building some sort of shelter from the icy blasts of a New England winter. So, instead of observing Christmas in any such manner as their descendants do, these pioneers celebrated the day with the swinging of axes, the felling of trees and the clearing of ground upon which their rude log cabins were to stand.

When the second Christmas in New England came around there was no joyous celebration, for still another reason. During the preceding year another ship had brought a load of emigrants and of this colony William Bradford, a stern Puritan, was governor. He formally outlawed Christmas, as the Puritans of England had done when they had gained control of parliament, because it was looked upon—at least so far as the Old English celebrations with their strange mixture of ancient Druid customs and Christian ceremonies—as a "godless and pagan rite." More than that, the General Court of Massachusetts, frowning upon the idea of making the Christmas season a time of enjoyment, passed an enactment which stated that "who is found observing by abstinence from labor, feasting or in any other way, shall pay for every offense five shillings."

For more than a century the stern Puritan influence prevented anything but a most joyless observance of Christmas until the gradual growth of Episcopal influence in Massachusetts and its association with official power, when the colony came under the direct control of the crown, brought about a relaxation of the anti-Christmas sentiment of the Puritans. In contrast to the Massachusetts type of Christmas was that celebrated in the great manor houses in Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia and Maryland, especially in those days when George Washington was unknown to fame except as a prosperous Virginia planter.

And it was this same George Washington who was the central figure in what is perhaps the most historic Christmas in the annals of America.

On the evening of December 25, 1776, the Continental army, led by this former Virginia planter, was drawn up for evening parade near Newtown, Penn., nine miles above Trenton on the Delaware river. Instead of returning to their quarters they were marched toward McKonkey's where Colonel Glover's fishermen, Massachusetts bay were manning boats and trying to launch them in the river.

It was a cold raw evening and a snow storm had set in. The wind was from the northeast and beat in the faces of the ragged, barefooted soldiers, who were about to embark upon one of the most desperate enterprises in history. For Washington was planning to cross the Delaware that night and lead them on a nine-mile march over snowy roads to Trenton where the Hessian troops of Colonel Rahl were celebrating Christmas with feasting and merrymaking.

The crossing had begun at six o'clock. Washington had planned to have his entire army on the Jersey side by midnight, begin the march to Trenton by one o'clock, so that he could make his attack just at daylight. But the river ice threatened to spoil his whole program and Gates and other generals declared that the whole scheme was impossible. The iron will of Washington was not to be daunted, however, and although the crossing took no less than ten hours it was finally accomplished.

Then he set out for Trenton, and after a terrible march, with some of his men leaving tracks of blood in the snow and others struggling along with their guns wet and useless, he arrived in Trenton and immediately attacked. As he had anticipated, the appearance of his army was a complete surprise. Although the Hessians rallied and put up a stubborn resistance for a short time, the determination of the Continentals could not be denied. Rahl, the commander, and seventy of his men were killed and 1,000 of the Hessians surrendered. So Christmas day, 1776, is a red letter day in American history because on that day a great commander gave to his country one of the finest Christmas gifts that has ever been bestowed—a brilliant victory at a time when the cause of freedom seemed all but lost.

Sunlight and Rickets

Confirmation of the medical teaching that sunlight is the best preventive of rickets, the disfiguring and crippling bone disease of childhood, may be found abundantly in China, according to Dr. A. Hartman, a German physician who has had long experience in the far-eastern land. The Chinese houses, especially of the poorer class, rarely have glass in the windows, he reports, and therefore, there is nothing to prevent the ultra-violet rays, which cannot penetrate ordinary glass, from pouring into the houses. Cases of rickets are exceedingly rare among the poorer Chinese in spite of the malnutrition and lack of sanitation all too prevalent among them.

Won Fame as Poet

Jacques Jasmin, the last of the troubadours, who began life as a barber in Germany, was called the "barber poet." He was well known, and a contemporary versemaker of Paris once said he "left his presence trickling all over with poetry and vibrating like an Aeolian harp."

Weasel Supplies Fur

Pahmi fur comes from animals of the weasel family. Their habitat is central China. The pelt is heavy, bright yellow and silky underfur, top hair grayish brown. A white line runs down the back along the middle from neck to tail and along the sides. It is also known as Chinese marten.

Non-Advertisers Fail

We knew that non-advertisers have little chance of succeeding in business but ye gods and little fishes, we had no idea the mortality rate was so great among them. The Midwest Coal Retailer, published at St. Louis, has some interesting figures in regard to non-advertisers.

"A careful checkup through the Federal bankruptcy courts," says the Retailer, "shows that the average percentage of failures made by non-advertisers in 32 cities is 83.6 per cent. In Los Angeles 92 per cent of the failures since the first of 1927 have been non-advertisers. The lowest non-advertising mortality rate was shown in Bridgeport, Conn., and Nashville, Tenn., with 60 and 67 per cent, respectively, while Troy, N. Y., was highest with an even 100 per cent."

In other words, out of every 100 business men who fail 83 of them are men who haven't advertised. Seventeen who are classed as advertisers fail but this may be because they didn't advertise consistently or because they spent their money unintelligently. Men who know how to advertise intelligently and get the most possible for every dollar they spend are never seen in the bankruptcy courts.—Booneville (Mo.) Advertiser.

There is another angle from which to look at this advertising proposition. In our opinion the failures are not altogether attributable to the absence of advertising, but in a measure to that which prompts one not to do so. Publicity being one of the first and most important requisites to the success of most any public business, it follows clearly that the man who has not the judgment nor the business acumen to see this, is handicapped from the beginning. So if a man cannot see, or disregards this fundamental principle, he is almost sure to prove deficient and incapable regarding other details of his business, and of course failure inevitably results. There are many businesses, we think, which will confirm this view. Take the railroad, for instance. What is the first thing it does when it puts on an excursion? Why, they send the news of it broadcast. They use the newspapers, posters, radio—anything to get the news to you. And but for this advertising we have no idea that they would sell enough tickets to pay for the coal they would burn on the trip. Also you will see their advertisements at every crossing to "cross crossings cautiously," "railroad crossing," "for the most direct route and cheap rates, see the agent, who will take 'pleasure' in giving you all the information you want," etc. And, they don't put these ads up for you to read today and take them down tomorrow, but they "keep it up." People have to know about your business somehow, else just bum along until landed in the bankruptcy court. In other words, the non-advertiser isn't "cut out" for public business.

Many Problems Before 70th Congress

Many legislative measures confront the present session of Congress. Among those which are most outstanding are tax reduction, food control, farm relief, the Boulder Dam project, and the disposition of Muscle Shoals. It will also be necessary to bring up and pass the deficiency appropriation bill which failed in the Senate at the last session. An idea of the many bills that must die in committee is gained when it is learned that 5,400 bills and resolutions were poured into the hopper of the House on opening day.

Five of the so-called progressive group in the Senate have united in a demand upon the Republican organization for assurance of a vote on a farm relief bill, a bill to limit the powers of the Federal courts with respect to the issuance of injunctions, and a resolution calling for an investigation of the United States policy in Latin America.

A bill providing for the creation of a department of education with a secretary in the President's Cabinet will, no doubt, be again introduced before the nation's legislative bodies. Though there are many measures of immediate importance such a bill, looking forward to the assurance of progress in the most dominant factor in a republican form of government—the education of its youth—should gain immediate attention. This can be greatly aided by the interest of the public. The President in his message to Congress as being in favor of the establishment of such a department, said:

"For many years it has been the policy of the Federal Government to encourage and foster the use of education. Large sums of money are annually appropriated to carry on vocational training. Many millions go into agricultural schools. The general subject is under the immediate direction of a Commission of Education. While this subject is strictly a State and local function, it should continue to have the encouragement of the National Government. We are still of the opinion that much good could be accomplished through the establishment of a Department of Education and Relief, into which would be gathered all of these functions under one directing member of the Cabinet."

The Journal of November 25th carried a local news item which at the time, we thought was strictly our own. Since then, however, we have been "kidded" to the extent that we are not so sure of ourselves.

There is one thing we do know, and that is that the Journal was on the exchange tables of a number of neighboring publications before one of them came out with the news item in question, word for word, with the exception of three names.

It is not the copying of an article that ruffles the sweet disposition of the Journal force. We like to have articles copied, but not one of this particular kind. It is the misunderstanding of the public that causes us to get on our "hind legs."

If our neighboring friend is unable to write his local news, we offer our humble assistance. In fact we would like to insist that we assist him. Then the wording could be changed to some degree, and in this way keep the secret to ourselves.—Muleshoe Journal.

So the Muleshoe paper takes the News to task for what it tries to make appear an irreparable injury in copying an account of the proceedings of a Texas Utilities Company's meeting which was held some time before at Lubbock. The account of this meeting was going the rounds of the press almost verbatim, et literatim, et punctuatim, and was entirely public property until the Muleshoe paper had "cornered" it. The article in question was simply an account of this meeting and had nothing in it whatever that belonged to any particular paper. Now, to say that the editor of the Muleshoe paper has made a pearl gray ass of himself would be putting it very mildly. The only thing that would get on its "hind legs" in handling such a "load" as the above from the Journal is a tumblebug, and if he will follow his true instincts and put it where it belongs, whatever force he has and a few others might breathe a little freer. If we had to plagiarize from such a snot-rag as the Muleshoe paper we'd resign and ask the scavenger to take us out on a "couple of chips."

Service of this kind is worth more than the money you spend. To do business with a "grouch" is costly to your fellys, if not your pocket, so why take chances on either? The B. and B. Take Off Them Whiskers

From the way their ads read you'd think some of the present day tire dealers were going to be unhappy the rest of their lives if they accidentally sold you a tire at a profit.

I hate to be a kill-joy but that stuff is the bunk. You know and I know that the tire business, as in any other business, Christmas only comes once a year.

Maybe I'm slow but I make no pretense of being a philanthropist. I don't try to tell you I'm selling tires below cost, and I don't think you expect to buy them that way.

I sell Goodyear Tires, I sell them at a fair margin of profit and I back them with helpful, money saving tire service. And this combination of quality plus service is keeping my old customers and constantly bringing me new ones.

Next time a tire dealer offers you something for nothing you just grin and tell him: "Take off them whiskers, you ain't Santa Claus." Then come around and let us sell you a Goodyear.

Grange Says He Won't Coach

RED GRANGE has turned thumbs down on the idea of becoming a football coach. "If there's anybody in the world who takes more grief in the form of criticism than the President of the United States," Red said...

Red Grange.

"Of course," the recumbent "galloping ghost" went on, with a glance at the woolen blankets under which lay one of his greatest assets, now slightly impaired by a stubborn case of water on the knee...

"It was purely accidental," Grange declared of this first serious mishap that has overtaken him in his long football career...

"Fun in this pro game," Red pursued his horizontal reflections. "These fellows who were all Americans in college aren't half so tough as some of these birds from small colleges that you never heard of."

"Another thing—age doesn't seem to count. There are a lot of fellows thirty-five and thirty-six years old playing football in this league that we'd be mighty glad to get on the Yankees. They can put it all over the young lads of twenty-one or twenty-two, just out of college."

Grange failed to agree with the view of Bennie Friedman, ex-Michigan star, that the pro game was more exacting. "If I'd been at Illinois when I got this knee," he grinned...

"You were a regular with a big game coming along you had to play."

Five Daughters Made Athletes

"Tobasco Kid" an Authority on Bringing Up Girls. Norman A. Elberfeld, former major league baseball star and once manager of the New York Yankees, is rearing a new brood of athletes. The one-time "Tobasco Kid" of the diamond has become an authority on bringing up the modern girl, and he is guiding five daughters to fame in the world of sport. "Feed 'em and let 'em play," is his recipe. "While I lived the life of a baseball star the diamond was my schoolroom," he explains. "I learned there some mighty valuable lessons which have been of a lot of benefit to me in rearing my five girls. I have trained them all to proficiency in virtually every well-known American outdoor sport."

A Terrible Mistake

It was a painful mistake, an error sad and grim: I waited for the railroad train, the light was low and dim. It came at last, and from the car there stepped a dainty dame, and looking up and down the place straight unto me she came. "Oh, Jack," she cried, "Oh dear old Jack," and kissed me as she spoke; then looking again, and frightened cried: "Oh, what a bad mistake." I said, "forgive me, maiden fair, for I am not your Jack, and as regards the kiss you gave, I'll straightway give it back." And since that night I've often stood upon the platform dim, but only once in a man's whole life do such things come to him.--El Campo News.

We stood one night alone upon a platform dim; a maiden also squeezed us hard, also took us for him. She glued her rosebud lips to ours in one long, lingering smack that made our necktie come undone, and our shirts crawl up our back. She also shrieked in wild dismay, that we were not her Jack, and the watch and diamond stud we lost have never yet come back. Sometimes we stand alone at night and watch the engine pass, and think the maiden called us right; we were a big Jack.--Judd Lewis.

A Card of Thanks

We often hear the remark made by some folks that the world, day by day, is growing worse, but we challenge the statement. We still have doctors who are willing and ready to ease the pain and suffering, also we still have men with big hearts filled with love and sympathy for those who are in sorrow and are in distress.

Bro. and Sister W. O. Wright wish to thank the good people of Sudan and every one who rendered any assistance in any way in the hour of sorrow, for we know that a friend in need is a friend indeed. We cannot carve words nor frame sentences to express our heart-felt thanks for what has been said and done in behalf of our dear boy, Levell, in his hour of suffering, and that his friends may know we think that day by day he is gaining some strength, and we trust and pray that he will soon be restored to his wonted health. Many thanks to all, and we trust some day or some how, we can return all that hath been done for us in this hour of trouble. W. O. Wright.
