Jobs Open For 70 New Patrolmen

Austin — The director of the Texas Department of Public Safety announced this week that there are 70 vacancies in the uniformed patrol services with increased salaries going into effect September 1 and another raise scheduled for one year later.

Col. Homer Garrison Jr. said that under the biennial appropriation bill, salaries will range from $453 up to $484 per month, depending on branch of service. In addition, he pointed out, patrolmen receive longevity pay of $10 per month for each five years of service up to a maximum of $50 per month. Promotions are given on the basis of competitive examinations.

"Here is an opportunity for qualified young men to join the ranks of dedicated career officers in a proud organization whose purpose it is to serve and protect the people of Texas," Garrison pointed out. "It is also an opportunity for men to further their education while in training."

He pointed out that student patrolmen receive some 800 hours of study in 95 subjects, such as highway law, accident investigation, first aid, professional driving, care and use of firearms, and many others.

Applicants must be between the ages of 21 and 35, not less than five feet eight inches tall, not less than two pounds nor more than three pounds per inch of height; and meet other requirements before being eligible. Full information can be obtained by contacting any DPS patrolman or station July 6 is the deadline for filing applications for examinations on July 14 and 15.

Sen. Tower Acts For Ranchmen On Bracero Program

Sen John Tower this week introduced in the Senate a measure that removes from the Secretary of Labor jurisdiction in determining when a state needs foreign agricultural workers. His bill would place that responsibility with the state agency having primary concern with agricultural policies. In Texas, this would be the State Commissioner of Agriculture.

The bracero program, under which Texas farmers, ranchers, and consumers benefitted for many years, was not renewed this year. Last year more than 200,000 foreign workers, most of them from our good neighbor Mexico, entered the United States to help harvest crops. This year only about 1,500 have been allowed to enter. The results are well-known. In California, for instance, valuable crops of strawberries were plowed under because of the labor shortage. Prices to consumers, on many farm produce items have almost doubled, but the added money did not go to the farmers. Rather, the added cost reflects, in many instances, additional labor costs. In 1960, of each $312 spent on food by the average American, our farmers received $132. In 1964, on the other hand, the spread had grown, according to the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives, to such an extent that for every $417 spent on food by the average American, the farmer received only $133. And apparently the trend is continuing.

The Texas Employment Commission bulletin for the Brownsville, Harlingen, San Benito area, and for Starr and Hidalgo counties, indicates that the "possibility of a farm labor shortage exists for harvesting spring vegetables." As all Texans know, this is a region of heavy agriculture production, and a farm labor shortage here will hurt consumers far and wide.

Sen. Tower said: "I do not believe there is a single Texas farmer who would employ alien workers rather than domestic workers if those domestic workers were available for employment. But if they are not available, I do not believe we ought to allow crops to rot in the fields with the resultant price increase to consumers, just because the wheels of the federal bureaucracy move so slowly."

"In a recent exchange of letters, Secretary of Labor Wirtz assured me he is working with the Texas Employment Commission to meet the labor needs of Texas growers."

"But time is running out. We must act quickly."

Sen. Tower said: "I do not believe there is a single Texas farmer who would employ alien workers rather than domestic workers if those domestic workers were available for employment. But if they are not available, I do not believe we ought to allow crops to rot in the fields with the resultant price increase to consumers, just because the wheels of the federal bureaucracy move so slowly."

den, according to Harold D. Theilig, president of the company who has been in Sanderson several days.

He said that from 15 to 30 men would be employed, depending on the demand for the rock, and he hoped that demand would even raise the number of employees beyond that.

W. A. Garrett of Houston will be the general superintendent of work at the quarry and a mobil home has been moved to the site to Mr. Garrett and his wife.

The rock quarry is on the ranch formerly owned by Roy Barksdale and several different operators have produced rock for building, but never in the quantity proposed by the Texas LedgeStone, Inc.

There are several varieties and colors of rock available in and near the present quarry site and in such quantity as to make possible large quantities of rock for various building needs or desires.

Mr. Theilig also stated that they hoped to use as much local help as was available in the operation of the quarry.

WASHINGTON AND 'SMALL BUSINESS'

By C. WILSON HARPER

Napoleon is supposed to have once said something along the line that with the Italians for allies one needs no enemies.

Of course that was over a hundred years ago. If the Little Corporal were alive today and an American, he would probably bring that up to date by saying that anybody that has any allies needs no enemies.

For this C. W. Harper was basically what Rep. Paul Rogers was talking about recently in the Congress on this question of continuing the multi-billion dollar American foreign give away program.

He stated quite emphatically that in the latter part of 1964 over 200 ships flying flags of presumed allies were hauling supplies to North Vietnam.

Of these ships 40% were British, with the ships of Japan, Greece, Norway, Lebanon, Italy, West Germany and Panama also engaged in supplying the American enemy.

He also pointed out these nations received some $29 billion out of the American foreign give away bonanza.

Thus, there is quite a paradox developed here. While the nation struggles to keep a foothold in southeast Asia for the free world, other members of the free world with large delegations at the United Nations, supply enemy seeking to drive free world out of Asia.

Perhaps this could be considered as one of those monstrous jokes which the U. S. State Department has continually perpetrated, except for one apparently largely overlooked factor.

And that is the grim fact that American men are being killed in Vietnam. The American embassy has been bombed with a loss of life. American ships have been attacked.

But despite these facts, the "allies" of America supply the enemy. It would appear that their only alliance is with the state Dept. to extract money from the U. S. taxpayers.

There is a peculiar quality to the indignation level of the American people. The entire government is involved in a situation whereby in a southern state a probably unnecessary amount of force was used to enforce local law.

Yet in Vietnam Americans are killed by the enemy being supplied by the ships of "friendly" nations.

A youth is stabbed to death in a New York subway with no one attempting to stop the murder. This is an appalling blot on what some term the American civilization.

Yet it is this appalling as the killing of American men by an enemy supplied not only by supposedly friendly nations, but nations who also receive vast sums of American wealth, some of which is extracted from the parents, wives, families of the slain men? Is this not a revival of the ancient English custom of the condemned man paying a gratuity to the hangman?

Ten Reasons for Measles Immunization

Of the 20 million children who have never had measles, take any ten - and you've got ten good reasons for measles immunization. The illustration above suggests statistically what will happen if a vaccine isn't used. Sooner or later, almost everyone gets measles. And each one who does, according to the U.S. Public Health Service, runs a 1-in-1,000 chance of getting measles encephalitis, or inflammation of the brain. One of every ten measles encephalitis victims dies. A higher percentage suffer permanent brain injury, with mental retardation and sight, hearing, and behavioral problems. There are other measles complications, including pneumonia, but danger of encephalitis alone makes physicians wonder why parents subject their children to such a risk. At a recent national conference of the United Cerebral Palsy Associations in Los Angeles, John M. Adams, M.D., professor of pediatrics at the University of California Medical School, said: "I don't understand this indifference to measles. You wouldn't take that kind of risk in an airplane. And I doubt if you would drive on the freeways with those odds." Luther L. Terry, M.D., surgeon general of the U.S. Public Health Service, has pointed out that last year nearly 500 American children died from measles. Measles causes more deaths annually than any other infectious disease of childhood. Noting that safe measles vaccines are now available, Dr. Terry said: "I urge all parents of children who have not had measles to see their physicians or health departments about measles vaccination without delay. Let's immunize the children of America against their enemy, measles."

Rep. White for our words against the reported proposal and suggested that he learn who is doing his talking for him and seek to stop such future news releases without his authority.

Such idle rumors as that could possibly be the beginning of such a project, which when lost in the confusion of bureaucratic red tape might emerge as a reality. The unauthorized news release as well as the idea of a jet landing strip for Big Bend National Park are equally unwarranted in our opinion.
