WOODWORK

BY DALTON

FRANK SINATRA is retiring, he says. Reportedly he has something wrong with one of his hands. It must be the one he slugs reporters and photographers with, and of course he can't go on without that.

Actually, I always kind of liked Frank Sinatra, both as a singer and an actor, although the image of him that comes across through the interpretation of the reporters and columnists suggests pretty strongly that he's not exactly amiable. Of course, some reporters and columnists and photographers can be pretty obnoxious at times, too.

Sinatra was the first bobby sox idol, the first hero of teenagers to elicit swoons and screams when he appeared. I recall when this first started happening how disgraceful everyone thought it was that audiences would interrupt and carry on so about a performer. You see, in those days, audiences were expected to be reserved until the proper time for applause.

It was said at the time--and I don't know if this is truth or not--that Sinatra's press agents hired some of the teenage girls to scream and faint at his appearance at first, then later on others took it up and the hiring part wasn't necessary.

In the early years of his fame as a crooner, Sinatra was also noted for being unusually thin. Bob Hope once cracked that Sinatra was so skinny that when he drank tomato juice he looked like a thermometer as the temperature went up.

Like most persons of my age, I'm fairly well afflicted with nostalgia, and despite all the things that Sinatra has accomplished in the years since his start, I still think of him singing "Long Ago and Far Away", in the superb style which he introduced at that time.

SEN. JOHN TOWER the other day commented that labor unions are "pricing themselves out the market" in some industries, a statement which many have long recognized as true but nobody seems to know an answer to the problem.

Sen. Tower pointed to the large number of foreign automobiles in use today, and other persons recently have noted the increasing need of American manufacturers to sell some of their products in foreign markets.

A Wing Ding Budget Stretcher

If you're looking for a little elbow room in a tight food budget, try chicken "fingers" chicken wings—that is. In this Chicken Wing Ding recipe from the Crisco test kitchens, the chicken wings turn up crispy and brown with a toasted onion coating. The recipe is also very economical, costing about 30 cents per serving. If whole tenderloin fryers are attractively priced, save the extra cost of store-cut chicken and learn to do your own cutting up. This way you can save the wings in your freezer until you have enough for a meal. Use the backs and necks for soup and stew and the meatier pieces for broiling and frying.

CHICKEN WING DING
(Makes 4 servings)

2 pounds chicken wings 1 cup dairy sour cream
Salt 1 cup flour
1/2 tablespoon (1/2 envelope) onion soup mix 2 cups all-vegetable Crisco

Tuck under chicken wing tips and sprinkle wings lightly with salt. Blend onion soup mix and sour cream. Using a pastry brush, spread sour cream mixture on chicken wings, covering completely. If mixture seems too thick, thin with a little milk. Roll chicken in flour, let stand 10 minutes, then roll again in flour. In a large skillet, heat Crisco to a depth of about 1/2 inch. Cook chicken, about half at a time, in hot shortening (365° F. in a temperature-controlled frying pan) until browned on all sides. Return all browned chicken to pan, cover and reduce heat to 300°. Cook 15 minutes, turning wings occasionally. Drain on paper towels. Serve hot or cold.

Note: Remaining half of soup mix may be used to season a pound of ground beef for hamburgers or blended with a cup of sour cream for a chip dip.

Taking office were Leader, Ramona Ingram; co-leader, Veda Terrell; secretary, Oleta Reese; treasurer, Verdie Gann; weight recorder, Mayfair Graves; assistant weight recorder, Winifred Dykes; reporter, Letha Gordon.

There were ten members present with a 7 1/2 pound weight loss. Ruth Baker captured the coveted "Pin for March" as the monthly queen for having lost the most weight during the month.

BEETLES DAMAGE TREES

The long-horned borers--so named for their impressive tapered feelers or antennae--spend only a minor fraction of their time in the beetle form most familiar to us. The beetles become adults in the winter or spring, and begin emerging in May to early June, seeking leaves and bark from younger twigs before mating. Soon the female, much larger of the two sexes, will be found chewing holes in the bark near the soil line and forcing eggs into the cavities thus formed in the bark by the mandibles. Many eggs are laid, and may be found from the soil line up to shoulder height. The elongated, pale eggs are scheduled to hatch and tiny, legless larva to bore deeper into the februous bark until they reach the juicy cambium or growing layer. Eventually these grubs or larvae bore into the sapwood and eventually toward the tree heart, continuously increasing the diameter of their rounded burrows. After two or more years of such feasting, given by Brian May. It was announced that the District Food Show would be April 17. The club voted to have a 4-H Playday in June. The program on Method Demonstrations was presented by Helen and Barbara Black. The meeting was adjourned and refreshments served.

the larva enlarges its burrow just beneath the bark, changes to a pale leggy pupa--a resting, non-feeding stage which immediately precedes the adult form. Since several years are involved in the development of an individual beetle, many home owners are baffled by the apparent ineffectiveness of a spray treatment or two. Numerous tests here and elsewhere indicate that trees can be protected by applications of rich trunk sprays to kill emerging and egg-laying adults, and by killing newly hatched larvae before they can penetrate to the relative inaccessibility of the inner wood. Since adult emergence may extend from about the 10th of May to August, three or four applications per year should be applied to trunk and lower limbs at about three-week intervals beginning in mid May and continuing as long as an inspection can locate any active adults. We should remember that the large holes found at the soil line are exit holes, and little good can be accomplished by pouring sprays or fumigants into these burrows. Adults are strong fliers, and cleaning up your own "home grown" beetles does not exempt you from necessity of future protective treatments. Painting trees with either asphalt or white-wash paints seems rather ineffective as a control measure.

4-H NEWS

The Sudan 4-H Club met Thursday, March 18 in the community center when president Helen Black presided. Barbara Black led the motto and pledge and the inspiration was Happy Home Environment WHAT'S THE IDEAL?

- Most people would agree that the ideal happy home environment must take into consideration the environmental aspects as well as the spiritual and human relationships.
- In the present state of technology, electricity does its job well when it comes to environmental aspects of conditioning the air in your home.
- The ideal system, now available, not only does its job of comfort heating in winter and comfort cooling in summer but also refines the air itself. Electric humidifiers control the amount of moisture in the air and electrostatic air cleaners remove undesirable dust particles.

- So then, things to give you a happier home environment... electric heating, electric cooling, electric humidification and electric air cleaning... and all of it automatically. Ask your Public Service manager for complete information.

Berlin Host to 14 Major Expositions

Whether by day or night, well-traveled roads lead to the beautifully landscaped Fairgrounds flanked by the Radio Tower above in West Berlin which continues to be a favorite site for the free exchange of ideas in every field. The major international events to which Berlin has already played host in the January-March quarter of this year include the Green Week Agricultural Show, the Boating and Leisure-Time Show, the Tourism Exchange and Congress (the only combined Travel Trade Fair and Seminar in Germany), and the Pedigree Dog Show.

In April the Fairgrounds will be taken over by the Inter-Chic Int'l Women's Fashion Fair. In May there will be a great fun for your taste buds at the Int'l Bakery Exposition. Experts attending the Medical and Pharmaceutical Exposition will be there in June.

In late August, that same tower will be right at home at the Int'l Radio and Television Exposition. September will bring the "Partners for Progress" Overseas Import Fair. Inter-Chic will return in October, sharing the limelight with the Officers Equine Show.

Berlin's crowded calendar of international exhibitions will start winding up in November with another double-header, this time the German Industrial Exhibition and the Int'l Book Fair.

December will bring Berlin's traditional Christmas Fair, also at the Fairgrounds, under its famous landmark the Radio Tower, that 43-year-old 609-ton steel giant rises to 492 feet and affords superb panoramas of the city both from its restaurant (189 ft.) and from its observation platform (410 ft.).
