

TRAIL DUST

By DOUGLAS MEADOR

An arm of light crawls the plains' soft garment of tranquility as the streamer pounds from rails with restless hoofs and spews out of space like a silver monster whose heart is on fire. The tremulous horn reverberates its plaintive despondency into dark valleys between the stars, and with a swish of its red tail the inconsolable metal demon is gone. But the sound of its cry hangs on the cornice of silence like the scream from a tortured child in the star-chamber of a miserable dream. It bellows at the gates of distance and echoes in hills of darkness, finally sobbing on the deep pillow of horizon. In a flame of madness, another gleaming train plows its path through the night and again the melancholy lamentation: the cry of estranged lovers lost to each other for eternity.

Roaches were spaced in motionless impudence on the grease-stained wall beside the vibrant coffee urn in the small Oklahoma cafe. Yellow staples of dried egg rose from the unwashed counter near the tannine blonde who rested her chin in her hands and looked up at the young miner with thoughts that spoke. Order of boiling cabbage, stale grease and scorched potatoes passed under the low and sagging ceiling. Hanging askew above the empty table was a small sign bearing this wording: "We Speak Texas Language."

Being reluctant to accept facts until they are established, I admit the arrival of spring after witnessing heel-flies chase the cattle in wheat pastures and observing an increased number of apparently empty automobiles parked along the highways at night.

Nothing is more revealing than a man who laughs at his own jokes unless it is a man who brushes his fingernails on his coat lapel and looks away, absorbed in other thoughts, at the climax of my story.

Old highways, like broken webs of the past, dangle from hills in silent testimony of progress' cruel disregard for its parenthesis. Dead weeds clot the empty veins where life once moved, and erosion covers unknown history that perished without recording. Now a ragged shelf on the red hills, no one remembers the new buggy with wheels glittering in the sunlight, that made tracks in the dust. There is no record of the young bride's whispered vow at the bend in the old road. No trace remains of the wagons freighted with new and pungent pine, that would build new homes in a new country. Where is the laughter of children who passed this way, their bare legs brushing sunflowers as they sat on the floor of a wagon bed? The chugging, narrow-wheeled automobiles are gone after cutting ruts in the mud that spring rains left, and the snows of many winters have melted, unbroken by rolling wheels. Perhaps youth of a half-forgotten war their cheeks still wet with mother tears, passed on this road never to return. Before the corridor was gutted of its brides, friends followed in slow procession the grim caravans of dead, lovers halted beneath the altar of stars to pledge their devotion. Abandoned roads are empty pockets in the world's old coat, which once contained the sweetened bread of life.

White and gleaming beneath bright Oklahoma sun, the new roadside filling station bore testimony of the two young partners' confidence in the future. Small gold buttons were fixed in the pocketflaps of each boy's spotless uniform. Young grass will soon be sprouting in the mulched soil which held the sign, white with ten-inch neatly-painted red letters, these two words:

"Nothing asks so little and gives so much as the truth."

It would be interesting to know "CLEAN LADIES" how the present housing situation has affected an enterprising real estate operator in Los Angeles who used to have as his slogan: "A lot means a house and a house means a lot."

Conservation Of Food Plus Increased Production Is Two-Fold Job Of Texans

Texans have a dual responsibility in the drive to conserve food for shipment to starvation areas of the world, according to B. F. Vance, state food program manager.

Texas, as the greatest food-producing state in the nation, must supply its full share of the food for the hungry people of the world both from a production and from a conservation standpoint, the food official said.

"It is up to Texas farmers to produce all the grain they can and to cut their feeding rate of livestock and poultry to a point where current feed supplies will be spread as far as possible," he declared. "At the same time, it is up to all of the people of Texas, as consumers of food, to cut down on the amount of wheat products they eat and to use food fats and oils as sparingly as possible."

Enthusiastic responses have been received from civic clubs, churches, farm organizations and other public spirited groups as a result of the Texas USDA Council's call for full cooperation in the food saving program, he said. He again called upon the county USDA councils and county food program managers to exert every effort to get the full story of food needs before all the people of Texas.

Vance said recent actions taken in Washington, such as the feed restriction order and the wheat purchase program would help greatly in the job of supplying the necessary food for shipment, but he emphasized that such moves would not be able to supply the food unless all the people pitched in and did their best to save food in the homes and eating places of the nation.

Dr. A. W. Young Says Most Soils Are Low In Organic Matter

Analysis of West Texas soils conducted at Texas Technological college shows that the average soil in this area is low in phosphorus and nitrogen, moderately well supplied with potassium while most soils are low in organic matter, according to Dr. A. W. Young, head of the plant industry department at Tech.

Fertilizers and irrigation are both highly desired and recommended in the production of most crops in West Texas, Young said.

Irrigation is profitable before planting in the case of both cotton and grain sorghums. For sorghums the general recommendation is one irrigation two or three weeks before planting and one irrigation about the time sorghums are booting.

Cotton fields should be irrigated in late March or early April and about two weeks prior to planting. The general practice for alfalfa is irrigation a week before each cutting of hay followed by another irrigation as each cutting is removed.

The recommended fertilizer for alfalfa meadows in this section is 350 pounds 20 per cent superphosphate applied early in the spring before plant growth starts or otherwise immediately following removal of hay cutting. The fertilizer should be spread uniformly over the field and irrigated into the land.

No fertilizer recommendations are available for cotton on either irrigation or dry farming experimental results to date indicate that West Texas soils are sufficiently fertile to provide cotton plants with the necessary food elements, Young said.

Under irrigation it is believed that an application of one to two hundred pounds superphosphate would be helpful in the production of grain sorghums on soils which are low in phosphorus.

MAKES CIRCUIT TRIM

When Lampros Haikalis cut the hair of 20-month-old William J. Martin, III, at his St. Louis barber shop recently, he realized his wish to trim the locks of five generations of one family. Haikalis started by giving a haircut to William's great grandfather, Andrew J. Johnson, 24 years ago. He later trimmed the beard of Johnson's father, a minister.

Motor Traffic Big Help To Schools

Austin—The Texas motor transportation industry last year contributed heavily toward the education of Cochran county school children and in the construction and maintenance of the county's highway system, it was revealed today in an analysis of the industry's special tax payments released by Lynn E. Shaw, general manager of the Texas Motor Transportation Association.

The 1,753 scholastics in Cochran county benefitted to the extent of $6,314—$3.6 for the education of every school child in the county or in excess of 13 per cent of the total education bill.

Trucks and buses paid $6,224 in special taxes that went toward construction and maintenance of highways in Cochran county.

The industry contributed a total of $39,000,000 in special taxes, a ten million dollar increase over the preceding year, and this figure represents only proceeds from gasoline and license fee taxes paid by more than 280,000 motor trucks and buses; both commercial and private, in Texas. It does not include federal or regular state taxes, such as ad valorem, which are paid by all industries.

Twenty-three Highway workmen have been injured since V-J day, two fatally, by drivers who failed to slow down in passing work areas.

Danger Warning Given Against Malaria Fever

Austin—Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer, today issued a warning against the danger of malaria following the heavy rainfall in Texas, which usually occurs during the spring and early summer months.

"Malaria will remain a major public health problem as long as breeding places are accessible to the female Anopheles mosquito," Dr. Cox said. "Every householder should make sure that there are no tin cans, broken bottles, or other types of rubbish on his premises that will hold water and offer breeding places to this enemy of good health."

Dr. Cox pointed out that in our practice of mosquito control, we are sometime like the man who locked the stable door after the horse was already stolen; we are content to wait until all our premises are swarming with mosquitoes before we bring ourselves into active warfare against these recognized agents of malaria transmission.

Dr. Cox further stressed the importance of conserving the public health and preventing the spread of disease in our present crowded conditions, and he also emphasized the fact that malaria is one of the more debilitating diseases, often causing its victim to lose weeks or even months from his regular employment or from school attendance.

Said Dr. Cox: "The best cure for malaria is prevention. Make sure your premises are free from any stagnant waters, in which may breed the female Anopheles mosquito that transmits the disease."

The motor vehicle mileage death rate at night is about three times the day rate.

Airplane Service For West Texas Area Will Be Available In the Near Future

Cities and communities of West Texas, New Mexico, southern Colorado, Kansas and Oklahoma are going to receive airplane service almost immediately, officials of the Texas-New Mexico Airlines announced in Amarillo this week following notification from the Civil Aeronautical Board they had been allocated permits to operate feeder lines over the area.

Recommendations of the board authorized lines between Trinidad, Amarillo, Fort Worth and Dallas, between Garden City and Amarillo, between Amarillo and El Paso, between Albuquerque and Amarillo, between Amarillo and Big Spring, and between Lubbock and Wink.

Other cities to be served by this line are Dalhart, Dumas, Clarendon, Memphis, Childress, Vernon, Electra, Wichita Falls, Graham, Mineral Wells, Perryton, Canadian, Pampa, Panhandle, Lamesa, Pecos, Wink, Odessa, Midland, Littlefield, and Seagraves.

New Mexico towns receiving the service include: Raton, Clayton, Clovis, Portales, Roswell, Alamogordo, Las Cruces, Las Vegas, Tucumcari, Artesia, Carlsbad, and Hobbs.

Frederick and Guyton are the Oklahoma cities on the line.

In Kansas, Garden City and Liberal will be served. Trinidad is the only Colorado city affected.

Agents will be appointed in each city within the immediate future, Byron Singleton, executive vice-president and general counsel, announced. Schedules and comparative rates will also be announced as soon as the Civil Aeronautic Board approves. "Rates will compare favorably with existing transportation rates of first class, or lower," Singleton declared.

Lockheed 10's, or aircraft approved by the Board will be used throughout the service, the executive said. However, he added, D-C-3's are now available and may be pressed into service. The planes will accommodate 10 passengers or more in any event, he said.

Officers of the Texas-New Mexico Airlines include: Court P. Shropshire, Pres.; Frank V. Davis, vice-pres. Traffic; Carl J. Rotter, vice-pres. Operations; Singleton; and Bob Houck, Secty-Treas.

Cops Take Training In Race Relations

MILWAUKEE — The problem of race relations will be carried directly to police officers of the nation in a series of training programs opening here April 22, according to plans completed this week. Under auspices of the American Council on Race Relations, courses will be established in major cities.

Joseph T. Kluchesky, former Milwaukee police chief and now a member of the faculty of the national police academy of the FBI, will make a circuit of the country aiding in establishing the courses. Basis for training will be a training bulletin developed by Attorney General Robert Kenny of California, and aimed at higher police standards in handling minority groups.

FARM AGENCIES OFFER AID FOR VETERANS

Counsel and financial assistance through a number of state and federal agencies are available to war veterans who wish to return to the farm, or to catch up on wartime farming developments, the extension service points out.

These include the county agricultural agent, Roy Hickman, whose job it is to help all farmers, and who has been designated to work with returning servicemen. Valuable counsel also is available from working farmers serving on county veterans advisory committees. They may be approached through the county agent.

From a financial standpoint, county Triple A administrators and committeemen, and the Farm Security administration with D. E. Benham as head, can be of assistance. The Triple A can aid through the conservation program, either in the form of cash payment or in conservation of materials and services. FSA long term loans can be arranged through county FSA personnel. Also aiding with loans are the National Farm Loan association and Production Credit association.

Among others is the Soil Conservation service which provides technical assistance in many phases of the farm program.

In addition to veterans affairs, Mr. Richardson will conduct the regular business of the Unemployment Compensation Commission while in town.

Adequate Sunlight Needed For Well-Fruited Cotton Plants

College Station, (A & M C)—Adequate sunlight is shown to be an important factor in cotton plants becoming well-fruited under conditions that favor the production of a large number of blooms, little shedding and moderate vegetative growth by studies just reported by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

Variations in the amount of light, such as accompany periods of cloudy weather, short days, and close spacing of plants were found to result in impairment of fruiting and excessive vegetative growth. The heavy shedding of young bolls often noticed by growers following periods of rainy weather was thought probably due to the interruption in high sunlight intensity rather than to the direct effect of rain on the flower.

Modified light conditions and other factors that induce shedding have been found to hinder photosynthesis and to reduce the carbohydrate content in the cotton plant.

Differences in the sensitiveness of cotton varieties to unfavorable light conditions were said to indicate the importance of careful selection of varieties for a given region, according to prevailing weather conditions during the growing season, and the need for attention to these inherent varietal differences by the cotton breeder.

These studies are reported by Dr. A. A. Dunlap, chief of the Station's Division of Plant Pathology and Physiology, in Bulletin No. 677, entitled "Fruiting and Shedding of Cotton in Relation to Light and Other Limiting Factors."

Peggy Key was a Lubbock visitor over the week-end.

River Commerce Boom Is Evidenced

KANSAS CITY—A post-war revival of river commerce and new action for the control of water against floods and for use in power development were reported here recently.

Docking of the Franklin D. Roosevelt which arrived with a shipment of Brazilian coffee and returned loaded with Kansas wheat had marked the opening of a new era in navigation in the region as engineers announced that the Missouri river will soon be a broad-gauge main-line route.

First major action was reported on the PickSloan plan which calls for a program of control for reservoirs, flood walls and levees and will ultimately turn the waters of ten states to the use of man.

Veterans' Questions & Answers

Q. How does the Veterans Administration determine the amount of pension to be paid a disabled veteran?

A. The Veterans Administration has rating boards that review the veteran's medical records. These boards decide how much he is disabled and award him a pension based on the percentage of his disability. The awards range from $11.50 to $115.00 per month.

Q. When a veteran applies for a loan to buy a home does he have to pay the appraisal fee on the property?

A. Yes. However, the veteran may arrange with the lender for payment of this fee out of the loan.

Q. Can a veteran go to college or school as long as he wants to?

A. Veterans are entitled to one year of schooling, plus one month of schooling for each month of active duty in the armed services up to a maximum of 4 years.

Q. If a veteran becomes disabled while taking on-the-job training, is this considered the same as a service-connected disability?

A. Yes.

Q. Are all veterans entitled to free private dental care?

A. No. Only veterans with service-connected conditions are entitled to this service.

Q. Can a veteran convert his National Service Life Insurance policy into a 20-year or 30-year endowment policy?

A. No. He can convert his term insurance only to ordinary life, 20-payment life or 30-payment life policies.

Q. Is the widower of a woman veteran entitled to pension at her death, and are the children entitled to any pension?

Garrison Claims Alcohol And Gas Doesn't Mix

Austin—Colonel Homer Garrison, director of the Texas Department of Public Safety, took a drink today.

This was unusual indeed, since everybody knows that his annual quota of alcoholic stimulation is somewhat less than one convention highball.

Into his office strode N. K. Woerner, chief statistician of the Department, with a drink in one hand and a piece of paper in the other. Woerner handed Garrison the drink and said, "Here, keep this handy. You're going to need a drink in a moment. I am going to blast you out of your chair with the figures on this piece of paper."

"An atomic bomb disguised as a sheet of paper, huh? J. Edgar Hoover will be interested in this," Garrison said, placing the glass on his desk.

"It's a bomb, all right," Woerner insisted. "But not atomic. It's alcoholic. These figures show that in 1945, 29 per cent of all drivers and 41 per cent of all pedestrians involved in Texas collisions were under the influence of alcohol."

"Good Lord!" Garrison exclaimed, "do you mean that one-third of our accidents are being caused by drunken drivers and pedestrians?"

"Not necessarily drunk, in the usual sense of the word," Woerner said. "As you know, our accident reports show 'had been drinking' as the classification for the presence of alcohol, in whatever quantity."

"Well, it's the same difference," Garrison said. "The tipsy driver is more dangerous than the one who is sloppy drunk. And even if the average person does refuse to believe it, just an ounce or two of alcohol will befuddle his reflexes enough to make him dangerous in traffic. What do your figures show concerning fatal accidents?"

"They show," Woerner said, "that alcohol and gasoline, when combined, produce speed. This speed produces collisions, and the excessive force produces death. Thirty eight per cent of drivers involved in fatal accidents last year had been drinking."

"And the pedestrians?" Garrison asked.

"The pedestrian statistics are rather odd. Thirty seven per cent of those struck by cars had been drinking. Forty one per cent of those injured had had a few. But only 27 per cent of those killed were under the influence. This is undoubtedly due to the well known 'limber' condition of drunks. When a drunk pedestrian gets hit, he doesn't stiffen up the way a sober person does, and that keeps him from being hurt as severely."

"Then you are offering definite proof that it's safer to be hit by a car when you're drunk," Garrison remarked facetiously.

"Yes," Woerner said, "but I haven't figured out the advantage in matching man's puny flesh and bone against the hard steel of automobile bumpers and fenders, drunk or sober. The car always wins."

"What can we do that we haven't already done?" Garrison sighed. "As things stand now, there's no way in the world for us to handle the situation. It's the people whose lives and limbs are at stake, and it's the people who must help us to help themselves."

"It does seem that the people are more interested than ever before," Woerner observed. "But that apparently isn't doing much good—yet."

"It will," Garrison said reassuringly. "While you were away in the Army we discovered something new about traffic law enforcement. We learned through driver licensing that only 15 per cent of the drivers are causing 85 per cent of the collisions. And we are concentrating enforcement against that dangerous 15 per cent."

"The other 85 per cent of drivers are 'on our side'. Now if we could teach that 85 per cent to drive and walk more carefully—" Colonel Garrison gazed at the glass on his desk. Little beads of moisture had collected on its outside. Little beads like the beads of perspiration that were cropping out on his forehead.

"People need to do something more than just 'drive carefully.' With these drunks tearing around, they need to drive—that's it—they need to drive defensively!"

"That's the answer, Woerner, if there is an answer. I'll talk to the reporter and the Texas Safety Association about that. Defensive driving—just take for granted that the other fellow is drunk or crazy and try to stay out of his way!"

Garrison picked up the glass and drank down its contents. The water was no longer cold, but it was wet. And as Woerner walked out the door, to go back upstairs and count some more traffic fatalities, the State Police director looked at the big map on his office wall, spotted like a kid with measles to indicate the places where hundreds upon hundreds of Texans have been killed in traffic, and slowly shook his head.
