Countians pay dearly for education

AND WAAAAAY SHE GOES--A minor leaguer is taught as his bat connects with the ball to send it for a ride and buy his way to a two base hit as the Minor League got off to its annual start in Morton last week, thus emphasizing the old American tradition that as soon as the boy, himself, reaches the length and weight of the bat, he will place himself in the batters box and show his metal. He has a great future, progressing up through Little League, Babe Ruth, high school, college--and who knows--Some day the Yankees, maybe?

Within the tightly controlled realm of college football they have what they call the "Gut Check". Not a very appetizing title but very appropo when you understand its meaning.

This takes place when a coach has reason to believe that one or more of his high school "super stars" doesn't have the "guts" to play the hardnosed type football that he requires of his squad. When this doubt enters his mind, he will have that particular candidate for the team out after practice for a little extra curricular activities--involving some of his proven hardnoses. They put him through the mill of "adversity" until the coach is satisfied, either in his favor or otherwise.

We feel that this is what is happening to the United States of America in Southeast Asia right now--The Communists have concluded that we are the "running dogs" or "paper tigers" they thought we were all the time and feel now is a real good time for them to give us our "gut check."

What our reaction is to the piracy of one of our merchant ships is will be intensely studied--not only by our avowed enemies, but by our friends as well. (We use the word "friends" with reservations, but we can be sure that if our reaction is not swift and strong, our "friends" will become even more scarce than they are now.)

We believe that the victory-flushed North Vietnamese would very much like to keep the momentum of their tide of conquest at its peak and move immediately against Thailand,

What price education in Cochran County? How do local governmental expenditures for school operations compare with those in other communities.

A report recently released by the Department of Commerce, following a nationwide survey, shows that education is, by far, the most costly element in local budgets.

No less than 58 percent of the expenditures made in Cochran County by local government agencies are for school construction and maintenance, for teachers salaries, for equipment and for various other expenses connected with school operations.

It runs considerably more than this in some arts of the country and somewhat less in others.

On the average, throughout the United States, local governments have been allotting 41 percent of their budgets for education. In the State of Texas, 53 percent has been earmarked for that purpose.

Local governments provide only a portion of the education bill. The rest comes from Federal and state sources.

The data was compiled by the Social and Economic Statistics Administration in the first study of the kind since 1967. It surveys the finances of local communities every five years.

Of the total expenditures made by governmental bodies in Cochran County, which were equivalent to $453 for every man, woman and child in the population, $263 went for education, it shows.

By way of comparison, the outlay for education at the local level elsewhere in the United States was $234 per capita. The average was $214 in Texas.

The magnitude of education's impact on the American economy is indicated in reports released by the National Education Association and the U.S. Office of Education.

They estimate that expenses in the current school year will HAPPINESS IS-- Two little boys cutting grass for their goats. Joe, left, and Danny Aguilera, were very busy doing just that when this picture was taken Monday evening in a barrow ditch west of Morton on SH116. The boys had been observed there several times and our natural curiosity finally forced us to stop and find out what they were doing. The boys contribute to the chores after school by cutting grass for their herd of goats and thus contribute substantially to their family's subsistence--a most worthy activity for two boys so young.

May, 1775 was month of tension while America geared for war

By Dr. DONALD WHISENHUNT

The month of May two hundred years ago proved to be an eventful period. Following the first shots fired at Lexington and Concord on the previous April 19, for some the future seemed clear while others were more uncertain.

On May 10, 1775, the Continental Congress reassembled in Philadelphia. Later to become known as the Second Continental Congress, this body proved to be the only national governing agency in the English colonies until the Articles of Confederation went into effect several years later.

When the first Congress adjourned in the previous October, plans were made to meet again in May, but probably no one suspected that armed conflict would occur before they met again. However, as we have seen through the intervening months, events moved rapidly.

Some of the members of Congress were baffled by the events and were uncertain of the course to take. Others, more radical and daring, were moving closer to the idea of independence although that event was still more than a year away. The members of the new Congress were essentially the same as in the first one except that of the several new members, a few were destined for historical fame. For example, John Hancock of Massachusetts, Benjamin Franklin and James Wilson of Pennsylvania, and Thomas Jefferson of Virginia took their seats for the first time.

Peyton Randolph of Virginia was again elected President but when he later had to resign, John Hancock was elected in his place, thus putting a known radical in a place of leadership. Hancock later became most well-known for his famous signature on the Declaration of Independence.

Congress had been called primarily to prepare a plan of action for the colonies in relation to the home government. However, now many were uncertain of what to do because of the fighting at Lexington and Concord. They were further distracted because on May 10, the very day the Congress assembled, another battle took place at Fort Ticonderoga.

As the Second Continental Congress assembled on May 10, 1775, two men later to become controversial figures carried the war to the British.

Later in April after the battles of Lexington and Concord, the Massachusetts Committee of Safety authorized Benedict Arnold to raise 400 soldiers and to attack the British post at Fort Ticonderoga on Lake Champlain. However, in the meantime, Arnold discovered that Ethan Allen and his "Green Mountain Boys" of Vermont were planning a similar campaign.

Arnold's forces joined those of Allen, but Arnold's attempts to take command failed. Instead the two forces operated together to surprise the 42 British soldiers at Ticonderoga and to capture the post with only one minor casualty. Ethan Allen later claimed that the British

IS THE CHURCH PART OF YOUR LIFE?

Love and Security

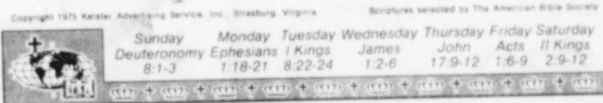

You don't need to know much about polar bears to get the message here. This cub hasn't a worry in the world. But one day he'll grow up to know all the frustrations of life in captivity.

Highland is security—but only for awhile. And the human mother is no more able to perpetuate the bond of total protection than is her wild counterpart.

Some parents today have abdicated their responsibility to guide their children. They have broken the family bonds too soon. Their children pay for this negligence. They age—but they don't mature.

Whims are fickle—and momentary. The Church strives to replace such elusive goals with something more substantial, something more stable. The inner values of character and faith remain as vital today as ever.

In our turbulent society, tranquility can only be found inside a person. Such stability and serenity could be your greatest gift to your child.

surrendered when he demanded it "in the name of the great Jehovah and the Continental Congress."

Two days later Crown Point, just north of Ticonderoga, was also taken by the Americans. On May 16, St. John's across the Canadian border, was captured by Benedict Arnold and his forces.

Even before Congress received news of the capture of members were chosen from councils of governments throughout the nation.

The selection of Judge Thompson to serve on this new committee is an honor to his continued leadership in SPAG. The South Plains region is fortunate to have him represent all of us here on the South Plains of Texas on this national body," local SPAG officials stated.

Ticonderoga the members had decided that they must act to defend themselves against British forces. Therefore, on May 15, a resolution was adopted to put the colonies in a state of defense even though few had any idea yet of how that might be accomplished.

When the news of Ticonderoga arrived in Philadelphia on May 17 and the actions at Crown Point and St. John's a few days later, the Congress was somewhat stunned. Whatever the individual reactions, the importance of these events was soon clear. For one thing, much needed military supplies were taken by the Americans. More important, however, was the fact that the way had been cleared into Canada if Congress were to decide that acquisition of Canada was a desirable objective. That question proved to be a very troublesome one in years to come.

The victories over the British were exhilarating although few could say what ultimate importance they might have. While Americans were organizing for war the reorganization of Spanish Texas had continued. On March 10, 1773, the "inspector comandante" mentioned last week was appointed by the viceroy. He was Don Hugo Oconor who had recently been governor of Texas. His reputation had been firmly established while in that position, especially among the native inhabitants of the area to whom he was known as "the Red Captain."

For carrying out the reorganization of Texas, Oconor chose Baron de Ripperda, then governor of Texas. More will be said about his activities next week.

Spanish authorities attempted to consolidate the position somewhat earlier than British Americans. "Inspector comandante" Oconor charged Baron de Ripperda with the responsibility of closing two presidios and four missions on the Texas frontier that already had been scheduled for abandonment by the inspector. He was to remove the San Antonio the garrison, artillery, munitions, whatever settlers might be there. Thus, Spain was trying to consolidate her position in Texas.

Nick Rice working on educational projects

Working under a Robert A. Welch Foundation grant, Nick Rice, a senior at West Texas State University from Morton, has completed two projects and is now working on a third.

Rice, a biology major and chemistry minor, has completed projects concerning the crystal structures of two platinum compounds and the organization of platinum compounds.

One of four grants given to the instructor to distribute, the scholarship awarded to Rice provides $1,500 per year and is renewable. The Foundation supplied $5 million yearly for similar projects in Texas.

The project Rice recently began involves research on the determination of molecular structures of crystalline compounds by X-ray diffraction. He works at the Killgore Research Center on campus.

Rice is studying and investigating compounds made by Dr. James D. Woodyard, associate professor of chemistry, and another brought to him by a graduate student at Texas Christian University in Ft. Worth.

He then sends the compounds to the University of Western Ontario in London for checking. They tell him of the finer details of molecular geometry, Dr. Woodyard explained.

Rice began the work in June of 1974 and programmed projects dealing with minor synthetic lab problems, Dr. Woodyard said.

He plans to attend the WTSU

Graduate School to continue work on the projects. "I'd like to stay in chemistry because I really enjoy it. I don't yet exactly know what field to go into."

Dr. Woodyard explained that through the research, Rice "could land himself a fairly substantial job."

Dr. Woodyard plans to attend the National Science Meeting November of 1975 in Mexico City to speak about Rice's project. Rice, a member of Beta Beta Beta, the national biology honor society, and the American Chemical Society, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Rice, 708 E. Lincoln.
