Relief Work Conference to be Held at Montreal.

Austin, May 26.—The future place in society of the millions of people now on relief rolls and the direction of efforts to bring about recovery from America's most lasting economic crisis will be described by world famous sociologists at the National Conference of Social Work, to be held June 9 to 15, at Montreal.

Officials of the national conference have advised Mrs. Val M. Keating, director of social service for the Texas Relief Commission that Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins will speak on the "Outlook for Economic and Social Security in the United States." Other addresses include:

"Social Justice in the United States," by Professor Paul Douglas of the University of Chicago; "Toward World Peace," by President Raoul Dandurand, of Montreal University; "Social Work and the Economic Crisis" by Mary van Kleeck, director of industrial studies for Russell Sage Foundation, New York.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will preside and Harry L. Hopkins, federal emergency relief administrator, will make the principal address at a dinner, the theme of which will be "Recovery and Reform."

Discussion meetings will be held on such subjects as the public works program and various problems relating to social work in state emergency relief administrations. Reduced railroad rates to Montreal have been obtained for members of the conference and it is expected that some 6,000 workers from all parts of the United States will attend the meetings.
Additional information about the conference may be obtained from Howard R. Knight, general secretary of the National Conference of Social Work, 88 N.
High Street, Columbus, Ohio.

Nearly five miles of concrete tile have been made and laid by relief workers in Ochiltree county this spring, according to the report of J. T. Stovall, county agricultural agent. The exact figures are 25,957 feet. The tile has been furnished in such cases as actual material costs plus a one-fourth toll of the garden crops which are produced on the subirrigated land. The material cost has been approximately one and one-fourth cts.
per foot.

The Battle of Cloyd's Farm.

The following statement is intended to correct any erroneous impressions that may have been made by the late W. P. Robinson in the account of the battle of Cloyd's farm, published in the March number of the Veteran.
For a better comprehension of the situation some preliminary explanation is given.

The entire Confederate force engaged was under the command of Brig. Gen. A. G. Jenkins. The greater part of the force consisted of a brigade, the 36th and 5th Virginia Regiments and Bryan's Battery of six pieces, which for a long time had been commanded by John McCausland colonel of the 30th Regiment.
The regiment was commanded by Lieut. Col. Thomas Smith, and the major was William E.
Fife. Colonel McCausland (soon afterwards made brigadier general of cavalry) was the ranking officer under Gen. Jenkins.

On the extreme right of the Confederate line the 45th Virginia Regiment and Beckley's Battalion were being pressed back by a superior force which enveloped the right flank, and the 30th regiment, which was on the extreme left, was ordered to the right wing. All this is correctly narrated by Robinson, but he entirely misconceived what followed. As it may not be convenient to consult Robinson's account, his statement is here reproduced. "In a short time after I began firing, the 36th Virginia came, and General McCausland, sitting on his horse by my gun, and to the left of the 36th, resting on the gun, ordered them to charge. They went down the hill in good alignment, and I thought they would sweep the enemy from before them, but in a few minutes their Lieutenant Colonel Smith was shot down and carried from the field and the regiment came running back in great disorder behind my gun and could not be rallied."

The account shows that Robinson thought that that splendid regiment of brave men turned and fled because of cowardice. These facts cause me to feel that it is a solemn and imperative duty to put on record the real facts, which seem strangely to have escaped Robinson when he examined the official records. These facts are as follows:

About the time the 45th Virginia was resting from its slight entrenchment, the 36th arrived and formed line about two hundred yards behind the space covered by Beckley's Battalion and some detached companies of the 45th. It formed in two (double) lines, the left half in rear of the right. Gen.
Jenkins had been mortally wounded, and Colonel McCausland, now in command, ordered the 36th to charge. Just then couriers reached McCausland announcing that the left [of the entire force], where there was nothing but artillery and one company of infantry, was being turned; and so, when the front line of the 36th was almost in contact with the enemy, the regiment was halted and Lieutenant Colonel Smith was ordered to conduct it back to the left wing. Immediately after this, Smith received the very severe wound mentioned by Robinson.
Major Fife, commanding the second line, did not know why the regiment was falling back, nor did he for some time even know that Smith was wounded. Fife, even when he made his official report, seems not to have known that the regiment was ordered back to the left. There is confusion in the official reports, not without contradictions. McCausland seems to have thought the regiment went back, which it certainly did not do, but for some time was like a flock of sheep without a shepherd. The object of this communication being to defend the 36th Virginia against the charge of cowardice, no further facts will be narrated here nor comments made on this episode of the battle.

It is to be regretted that in Robinson's account specific instances of men showing cowardice were stated and especially that their names were recorded, and I am constrained to protest especially against one of these charges. Speaking of Lieut. A.
B. White, the narrator says: "The lieutenant in command of the gun told Sergeant Berger he was going after more ammunition. The ammunition came very soon, but the lieutenant was not seen any more until the next day." Now, it is possible to conceive of many contingencies, any one of which may have kept him away from his company. Anyway, early the next morning, at New River Bridge, thirteen miles from Cloyd's Farm by the road we followed, Capt. Thomas A. Bryan, now acting as Chief of Artillery, assigned Lieut. White to the command of one of the pieces of Bryan's Battery, and White, in assuming command, gave one order, the sergeant and his men were to act as if he, White, were a private among them, and he was going to act as such in the impending artillery duel, and this he did bravely during the several hours of the engagement though he might have stood officially from the gun in the usual position for officers commanding artillery, and in that position he would have been comparatively little exposed to danger, as an infantry was firing and cannon, in artillery duels, fire only at cannon. The writer was the sergeant of that piece.—Milton W. Humphreys, University, Va., in Confederate Veteran.

Forty-eight dollars was made recently by the Kerrville Home Demonstration Club at a sales day at which aprons, children's clothing, quilts and pillow protectors, homemade bread, cakes, pies, jelly, native ferns and cacti were among the articles sold.
All home demonstration clubs in the county contributed and co-operated in the sales and the proceeds were turned over to the county home demonstration council to help fill the budget of $162.25 for the year. Another sales day will be held June 22, in connection with the wardrobe achievement day, according to Miss Frances Wilroy, the Kerr county home demonstration agent. Each club will sponsor one event until the full amount amount called for in the budget has been raised.

Famous Horses in the Confed- erate Army.

Two of the handsomest horses used by Confederate generals were products of the famous Woodstock Farm of Kentucky.
They were the mounts of Gens.
Albert Sidney Johnston and Simon Bolivar Buckner.

Charles N. Meriwether of Todd County, Ky., owned some of the best horses in the South. In the fall of 1861, fearing that his section would be invaded by the Federal army, he sent some of his most valuable horses to his brother, Dr. J. H. Meriwether of Arkansas for safe-keeping.
Among them was Empire, a handsome dapple gray, sired by Ambassador.

Dr. Meriwether, both liberal and patriotic, thought the safest keeping he could give Empire was to present him to Gen.
Johnston. The horse had not been shod, and was sent to Memphis for the purpose. But no sooner done than he deliberately pulled the shoes off with his teeth. After he was reshod, he had to be haled in a way that he could not reach his feet until he was accustomed to wearing shoes. While he was being broken, he showed signs of being vicious, and the stable boys called him "Spitfire," and in the "Life of Gen.
A. L. Johnston," by his son, he is called "Fire Eater," but his real name was "Empire." So symmetrical in form was he that Doyle, the sculptor, used a picture of him as a model for the equestrian statue of General Johnston at Metairie cemetery,
New Orleans.

Cumberland, another handsome horse from Woodstock, and half brother of Empire, was sent to Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner, of Kentucky. General Buckner rode him through the war, and he died of lockjaw in Texas during the late sixties.—The Nash-

TREMENDOUS TRIFLES

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

A COSTLY WEEK-END

LORD GEORGE GERMAIN, British secretary of state for the American colonies during the War of the Revolution, was ready to leave London for a pleasant week-end at Stone-land in Sussex. The duties of his office had tired him and he looked forward to the quiet of the English countryside.

On his way from his chambers he stopped at his office to sign some official papers. One of them directed to Lord William Howe, British commander in New York city, ordered him to co-operate with Gen. John Burgoyne by moving north up the Hudson to join forces with Burgoyne who would start south from Canada.

But the letter to Howe hadn't been "fair copied" and wasn't ready for the signature of the secretary of state.

"So!" exclaimed my Lord Germain. "My poor horses must wait and I must lose time because of this!" Then a clerk named D'Oily said that he would make the "fair copy" and would write from himself to Howe, enclosing the instructions to General Burgoyne which would tell him all that he would need with this and made ready to "keep his time" for he could never bear delay or disappointment.

So the "poor horses" of Lord Germain weren't kept standing in the street and he was able to hasten to his country estate for a pleasant week-end. But the five or ten minutes that he did not want to wait were costly ones for England.

D'Oily forgot to write the letter to Howe and when his Lordship returned to his office from his week end in Sussex, he also forgot to ask about the matter.

ICE-JAM OF COURSE, an ice-jam isn't such a trifle, but the one which choked the entrance to Chesapeake bay in the winter of 1784 was insignificant—if you compare its size to the broad expanse of the blue Atlantic.

German named Jacob Astor who was going to make his fortune, beginning by the sale of seven flutes he was bringing with him.

At last the ship reached Baltimore and young Astor nestled on to the metropolis of New York city. But his venture in flutes was a failure.

GLITTER OF GOLD THIS is a story with some highly important "ifs" in it.

If James Wilson Marshall had chosen to build a sawmill on Capt. John Sutter's lands instead of going to the beautiful vale of Coloma, forty miles away to do it.

If a mid-January flood hadn't nearly swept away the mill-frame and brush dam, making it necessary to widen and deepen the dry channel he had selected for his mill-race.

Well, the course of American history might have been entirely different!

One of the important phases of the new compromise is that it will exempt from its provision all holding companies whose interests are confined to operating companies inside one state.

Another modification is even more important. It exempts from the provisions of the proposed law holding companies whose operations are chiefly in one state, but extend for short distances beyond its borders.

Still another compromise provision would exempt holding companies that are interested exclusively in operating companies outside the United States.

Such as American and Foreign Power. So that first and last a considerable number of big holding companies, with—far more important politically—a considerable army of stockholders will Washington.—In Paris a new Ford sedan costs, delivered, just about $1,700. Or about $1,000 more than it does in most American cities.

Which is of the essence when it comes to the problem of removing international trade barriers, as that problem is now being attacked, from two widely different angles and with much animosity between the advocates of the two plans.

The amazing point about this price for Fords in Paris is that the French duty on automobiles has nothing to do with it! The Ford cars sold in Paris are not made in the United States.

Wages are an inconsequential phase, or would be, if mass production could be utilized in Strasbourg.

More taxes are certain, despite all the propaganda by the administration one way, and by the bonus advocates the other.

Dealer's Profits Even if there were no tariff—or far more important—no quota—in France against importation of American automobiles, of course, they could not be sold as cheaply in France as they are in the United States.

Teeth Extracted A back-stairs compromise has been reached on the public utility holding company bill, which has so modified its original drastic provisions that in all probability the White House will apply pressure in order to "put the teeth back in."

International trade barriers could be removed, the people of the various countries of the world could enjoy a much higher standard of living than is at present the case.

As for example, the sharp limitation on imports of American automobiles, machinery, and other items, by Italy and Poland. Just last month!

German visitors to Washington in the last few weeks have talked gloomily about the prospects of each nation becoming self-contained.

Another phase of New Deal policy right down this same alley was the securities act—and the stock exchange regulation bill.

Analyzed critically, it is easy to see that this would tend to prevent anyone not now rich from becoming so.

Hence the popularity of New Dealers of inheritance taxes. Cynics comment that most of the New Dealers are young, and not worried about death duties.

The New Dealers do want to do something about some of the very large fortunes now in existence. They regard them as a menace—a constant threat not only to the success of the New Deal politically, but to the actual working of New Deal ideas.

The New Dealers are helped in this aspiration to chisel away at the big fortunes by death duties by the fact that politically there is less danger to the average senator and member of the house in voting heavier inheritance taxes than almost any other variety of levy.

And when some of the other taxes under consideration are examined, it will be found that most of them have very important possible political repercussions. Such as the tax on life insurance premiums, for instance, despite the fact that it would be paid by the life insurance companies.

Under the under-cover negotiations which led to this compromise some of the gentlemen interested in saving as many utility holding companies as possible nearly lost their battle after they thought they had it won.

Still another modification does leave discretion with the securities commission. This is to extend from five years to seven years the length of time in which companies still retained under the death sentence may be allowed in which to wind up their affairs and liquidate.

Which in a way is the most interesting of all the changes. For the argument used to give this additional discretion would not be appreciated at the White House at all.

And the fact that the argument got somewhere—that it has been accepted by some very important senators and members of the house—would seem to indicate that some perfectly good Democrats are no longer taking all the proposed brain trust legislation as having been divinely inspired.

be let out. Which of course pacifies their stockholders, thus reducing the amount of opposition that the final form of the bill might bring down on the devoted heads of senators and members of the house who vote its final passage.

"Blond Baby" By LEE CALVERT

McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Service

STELLA NORTON poked the pillows into a more comfortable angle at her back and picked up the open letter on the counterpane.

It would be like Billy to get roped by a chorus girl. Stella was frankly panicked.

"I had a letter yesterday from Fay Campbell who is in Chi with 'Pretty Baby,'" Etta had said in the cat-hats eaten-a-mouse-tone.

"Oh, yes," Stella broke in, confident, however, that Etta would not believe the hastily invented lie.

It was only the second time in their twenty years of married life that Stella had been separated from Billy.

Warnings had reached her then, as now, and just a few weeks after the infant's birth, Stella had lost no time in rejoining the troupe of which Billy Taylor was the leading comedian.

Poor Billy! He was so susceptible. A trim ankle was provocative to him as a sweet pea to a bee.

"There's no fool like an old one," she muttered. "At your age, Billy Taylor, you should have some sense."

An inconsiderate appendix had sent her to the hospital just a few days before June Francis opened in Cleveland.

"Billy ought to consider Jane Ann," Stella fussed. "Doctor or no doctor, I'm going to leave for Chicago tomorrow. I won't wait another week. That may be too late."

Stella carefully timed her arrival in Chicago. She drove directly to the hotel where Billy and she always stayed and had her bags checked in the parcel room.

"Don't you want to go up, Miss Norton?" the clerk who knew her, inquired. "It's a surprise for Mr. Taylor," she refused.

Stella sat back in the corner of her cab watching. The matinee jam evaporated. One by one the members of the company emerged, blinking in the bright light of the late afternoon sun.

The echo of Billy's effervescent chuckle reached her and she leaned as far forward as she dared, without being seen as the comedian's long slight figure appeared.

"What was Jane Ann doing there in Chicago?" Stella shook her head to clear her eyes and then leaning forward, her arms extended, called to the pair standing in the shadow of the stage door.

"Billy—Jane Ann." "Stella!" "Billy Taylor was half in and half out of the automobile, his arms around her and his lips on hers."

"So I see," she lifted her daughter's face to hers. "Jane Ann, what are you doing here?" "Oh Mommie, darling," Jane Ann flung herself in the waiting arms, almost strangling her mother in her embrace.

"I knew you would never let me go on the stage; not for years and years and years. When Daddy left Cleveland I ran away and met him at the train and he just had to take me with him, didn't you, Billy dear?" she appealed.

Stella Norton sat between them, an arm encircling each. This was the one time she need have no fear of a Blond Baby. Perhaps if Jane Ann were with him, Billy would be so busy teaching her the tricks of the game he knew so well he would have no time for anyone else.

"Oh, Mommie," their daughter was pleading. "Please don't send me back." Stella patted her hand gently. "You haven't an ounce of sense, Billy Taylor," she scolded, but both husband and daughter read the laughter in her voice.

"The minute my back is turned you get into mischief, both of you!"

POULTRY

PEN ROOSTER WHEN NEEDED NO LONGER

Poultrymen Should Consider Breeding Stock.

By Roy S. Dearstyne, Head Poultry Department, North Carolina State College. —WNSU Service.

When the hatching season is over, the flock is changed from a breeding flock to a laying flock and only fresh, infertile eggs are desired by the trade.

This means that the male birds should be moved to separate quarters. In doing this, however, the poultryman will consider his prospects for breeding work next season. All those male birds which do not measure up to the owner's standard for type, color and breeding ability should be discarded. If the birds are below standard they will be a dead expense during the period they are producing no returns to the owner. Sometimes, it is necessary to remove the males because in-breeding has begun. In such a case new blood will be needed.

If the owner does have some desirable roosters, however, and no adequate place to keep them, it might be well to build summer range houses. These are constructed at low cost and will answer the purpose very well.

In removing the male birds, it is well to keep in mind that eggs from some of the hens will be fertile 21 days after the male bird has been removed. A fertile egg will start incubation at a temperature of 70 degrees and in a few days the embryo chick will begin development. Such eggs are objectionable.

Another economy measure to put into practice after the hatching season is over, is that of culling. Every economy is needed to make the flock pay in summer.

Turkeys, Like Chickens, Good and Poor Producers

People often ask how many eggs a turkey hen will lay, and it is the general impression among those inexperienced with turkeys that they lay very few eggs, 20 or so during the spring, after which they go broody and from then on they loaf. This is a fallacy, states a writer in the Missouri Farmer. The egg production of turkey hens is comparable to the production of chicken hens in that there is a variation in number of eggs among the individuals and, if not allowed to go broody, some of them lay all summer and fall and they have made production records in excess of 150 eggs per year. Some of them lay every day for a week, then pause. Others lay every day for a month and more without a pause. Generally speaking, turkey hens, not having had the broodiness bred out of them, will lay 20 or 30 eggs and go broody. If broken up, they will soon resume laying until 18 or 20 eggs are laid and go broody again and if repeatedly broken up will continue laying throughout the summer if they are good producers.

Feather-Producing Geese

As feather producers all breeds of geese are good, though the lordly Africans are much harder to pluck either alive or dead. As for eggs, the various breeds stand about in the following order: White Chinese, Toulouse, African and Embden. These four breeds are the ones largely kept in this country for various purposes and all of them are excellent and serve their purpose well. There is a great difference in the strains of geese kept, and some of the Africans now seem to hold all leads in egg production; though as with all others it is more of a matter concerning the man who carries the feed than that it is in breed alone.—Rural New-Yorker.

Shade for Young Pullets

Shade is of prime importance for all poultry, especially during the summer months. Where houses are crowded and shade is not available on the range there will be a high mortality. A cheap and adequate shelter may be constructed by driving 2 by 4 supports in the ground and thatching these over with bagging or green branches. These shelters, however, should be cleaned of droppings at regular intervals.

Poultry Jottings

A cap about 3 or 4 inches above the brooder stove pipe prevents back drafts.

After the first ten or twelve weeks, both mash and grain should be available at all times to pullets.

Chicks have no teeth; they have a gizzard instead, but the gizzard cannot grind feed if it has no grit in it to grind with.

Mites are a common pest. They are tiny and infest all joints, nail holes and crevices in the droppings boards, in the perches, side walls, and under boards nailed to the floor to brace roosts.

On the average, about 40 out of every 100 eggs set fail to hatch.

Since lice increase in warm weather, and reduce both egg production and flesh, treatment for destroying them is essential to the highest returns from the flock.

Chic Triple Sheer Print's the Thing

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THE perfect costume for all-around practical daytime wear has arrived! See it pictured herewith. It's the dress with a jacket that is fashioned of the now-stylish triple sheer print. The smartest, the neatest, the most sensible and serviceable, the most attractive and best looking are befitting words when it comes to describing these jacket outfits.

There is not the slightest doubt about the wisdom of including one of the new ingeniously designed jacketed costumes in one's spring and summer wardrobe. It will prove an ever faithful standby ready for every daytime occasion. In the illustration we are showing three particularly good-looking models. They are types that women can live in from morning to night and always look well groomed.

These brand new jacket styles are in that famous fabric, triple sheer of bemberg, which is expensive in looks but not in cost. The material is pure dye, cool, washable, or dry-clean perfectly, if you so prefer. Furthermore, it may be pressed with a hot iron without fear of pulling or slipping at the seams. And, oh, joy of joys, it is practically wrinkle proof and resistant to perspiration.

The extremely good-looking jacket suit to the right in the group is the sort that is ready to go places at a moment's notice. White pique spaghetti cordings and fastenings effectively trim the navy-with-white (other color combinations are available) sheer of bemberg material. Bandings of self-fabric are stitched row-and-row on a net foundation for the sleeves, the same also effectively used in the yoke of the dress. This treatment which has to do with appliques and stitched bandings and folds of the dress print on net backgrounds is one which is being played up by designers throughout current styling.

A flattering jacket costume in a new flower-patterned triple sheer with collar of organdie applique on a foundation of mousseline de soie is pictured to the left. Shirring accents shoulders, sleeves, and pockets. Shirring is very popular just now. It is the fashion to wear flowers, too, which is why this charming young woman has pinned a cluster of dainty posies at her throat.

What's more, fashion goes so far as to suggest "sets" of flowers. That is to say, a gardenia on one's hat is matched with a boutonniere of gardenias. More flower news is to be expected that the floral motif is to be changed to time in with the mood and the color scheme of the costume. Pin violets on your hat today, wearing matching flowers on your coat lapel or on the bodice of your frock. Perhaps bright field flowers is choice for the day following, or if you would flaunt the favorite flower of the moment, it's the carnation.

As you can see, looking at the costume centered in the picture, a black print in triple sheer of bemberg has a heap of swank about it. The brief jacket is styled in cape effect, and the yoke of the slim frock alternates narrow stripes of self-material spaced with the net foundation to which they are stitched. Her lovely summery chapeau has gone very feminine what with its flowers and ribbons and a big floppy brim.

GLAMOR OF LACE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Lace has been shown in beautiful creations at every Paris collection this season. This very choice formal is of salmon pink lace, the full transparent skirt showing the slim, color-matched slip beneath. The sash of velvet ribbon is also in the identical salmon pink. Three strands of graduated pearls, a rhinestone bracelet and a pearl bracelet are the complementing jewelry notes.

PLEATED SKIRTS IN CHIFFON NEW STYLE

The tidal wave that has brought in more width for skirts has also brought in pleats. This type of fuller skirt is available in daytime and evening fashions, although the evening skirt version is being seen more often at present. It is a fashion that may be said to have come out of the emphasis on floating chiffon skirts, for most of the pleated styles so far are done in chiffon.

There is a particular genre in chiffon and pleats that goes with sunburst pleats, entire skirts and bodices also pleated—very Grecian, and reminiscent of the sunburst evening skirts which Mainbocher and Louiseboulanger offered in evening frocks at their openings.

But there are other interpretations of the pleated idea, in front fullness or back fullness, in those concentrated panel godets that are used often for adding width this season.

Coarse Novelty Straws Take Lead in Millinery

It is the way of hats to be anything and everything but ordinary. One of the new lines—it's impossible to designate any one type as the newest—is the hat with a brim which projects forward. Beret types are draped that way.

Coarse novelty straws, some shiny, some rough, are everywhere, but so, too, are Milans. There are any number of stitched taffeta hats and unusual felts.

The long threatened return of trimming has come. Milliners have followed the lead of the couturiere and are trimming with flowers.

Formal Swagger Coat

The formal swagger coat is a piquant newcomer. Done in woolens that vary from black to palest blue, with full sleeves and soft collars, they flare and swing above the most elegant of afternoon dresses.

Abyssinian Empire Has Only One Railway Line

The empire of Abyssinia has one railroad, and even that does not belong to it. The shares of the Djibuti-Addis Ababa railroad are in French hands. There is also no time-table announcing when the trains leave and arrive.

As a matter of fact, the train goes from Addis Ababa to Djibuti and back only once a week. Usually it goes on Wednesday, but it may be that some important Abyssinian wants to leave Addis Ababa or some French official wants to leave Djibuti on Monday. In that case the train goes on Monday, and the foreign visitor who has planned to take the train on Wednesday must wait eight days until the next train leaves.

This does not disturb the Oriental, who does not understand that time has any value, for has anyone ever succeeded in pouring time into a vessel? But the hotel porter understands and, in return for a large tip, sees to it that the foreign visitor goes his train. He is informed about any changes in the schedule and thus makes his living. Anyone who cannot or will not pay must wait.

The passenger traffic on the railway is of only secondary importance. The line is primarily "strategic."

On Texas Farms.

If they "haven't a thing to wear at the end of 1935, it will be because they are not among the 9,778 rural women in 107 Texas counties who are serving as wardrobe demonstrators for home demonstration clubs, according to Mrs. Dora R. Barnes, extension clothing specialist.

Nor can they be listed among the 504 4-H club wardrobe demonstrators and 7,831 cooperators in the 65 counties where 4-H club girls are doing clothing work coached by home demonstration agents.

Hansford county has gone in for concrete subirrigation tile in a big way this spring. Through an agreement with relief agencies labor has been furnished from the relief rolls for making and installing the tile while the farmer have furnished the cement and sand and have agreed to pay one-fourth of the produce from the subirrigated garden for the year 1935. In this way 30,000 feet of tile have been put down.

Twenty other gardens using 22,000 feet of tile have been subirrigated by farmers in this county working independently—making a total of 52,000 feet of tile which will subirrigate Hansford county gardens, according to G. Lester Boykin, the agricultural agent for the county.

Because this Extension wardrobe demonstration includes taking a clothing "census," planning and making clothing to turn you out well and suitably dressed for all the occasions of your life; facilities for care and storage; and keeping clothing accounts.

Like this they work—in Hunt county an all day county-wide meeting of wardrobe demonstrators was held and each "foundation pattern" owner learned how to cut collars to her taste. Collars becoming to round face-long slender faces, and perhaps square jaws and receding chins were made up and tried on.

Sleeves, too, were cut and tried with regard to implying pleasant curves for the tender person and decreasing the ponderosity of that "too, too solid flesh" so deplored by the stylish stout.

Working Girls' Vacations. It is said that 6,754 out of the 200,000 working girls in New York go vacations through churches, social service agencies and unions.

TRENDS FAVORABLE IN STATE BANKING

Recent Figures Indicate Large Increases in Deposits and Invested Funds

Improvement in the condition of state banks in almost every respect during 1934 is shown by statistics recently assembled, Robert M. Hanes, President Wachovia Bank and Trust Company, Winston-Salem, North Carolina, points out in an article in "Banking" published by the American Bankers Association. The figures on which this statement is based were gathered by the Committee on State Bank Research of the association from reports furnished by state bank supervisors throughout the country.

"Ever since 1921 the number of state banks has been declining," Mr. Hanes says. "Between 1921 and 1934 the decline was rapid. Figures for December 31, 1934, showed that the downward trend has not yet ended, but the decline last year was the smallest in twelve years."

There are now, he says, about ten thousand state banks, which term includes all state chartered institutions with the exception of mutual savings banks. The article continues: "Even more significant was the ending of the decline of deposits in state banks which had been going on since the collapse of the stock market boom in 1929. In recent years for which figures are available the drop has been particularly abrupt. Total deposits in state banks declined from $29,355,742,000 on December 31, 1931, to $15,424,823,000 on December 31, 1932. The record for 1934 shows a recovery to $17,565,766,000 at the year-end."

Significance of Increased Deposits. "It is particularly gratifying to note the expansion of deposits, since it was their decline which made necessary the liquidation of investments, the calling of loans, and all the other phenomena which go under the name of 'deflation' and have brought banks so much criticism in recent years. It is now plain that this was due to efforts of the banks to place themselves in the possession of enough liquid assets to meet the growing demands of depositors for the return of a part of the money which had been placed on deposit."

"That this is true is borne out by the movement of invested funds of state banks, which has paralleled that of deposits. These invested funds (loans and discounts plus investments) for state banks, dropped from $29,251,329,000 at the end of 1931, to $14,915,773,000 at the end of 1932. By December 31, 1934, however, they had recovered to $15,709,519,000. All of this gain is accounted for by the increase in investments during 1934, the expansion amounting to approximately $1,300,000,000.

"As for loans and discounts, they registered a slight drop again in 1934, but the rate of decline was much smaller than in previous years, which in itself is progress. Where the drop in loans and discounts amounted to approximately $2,700,000,000 in 1932, and to approximately $1,500,000,000 in 1933, it was less than $500,000,000 in 1934.

"In another respect the balance sheet figures for December 31, 1934, were especially impressive. Bills payable and rediscounts of the state banks, which at the end of 1932 had reached a depression high of $369,769,600, had dropped by the close of last year to the low figure of $2,101,000. One must search the records as far back as 1917 to find bills payable and rediscounts of state banks at a lower figure. Moreover, it is reasonable to expect a further reduction of such borrowings during the current year."

TO FOIL BANK CROOKS

NEW YORK.—The American Bankers Association Protective Committee has developed a plan of bank inspection to bring out exposure hazards or weak spots in respect to attacks by criminals based on its long-established, nation-wide experience in investigating bank burglaries, holdups and sneak thefts.

The inspection covers eighty leading questions and seventeen recommendations which are instructive in the prevention of such crimes. These relate to such subjects as the use of alarms and other protective equipment, also the condition of windows, doors, skylights and other entrances which have facilitated the early morning entry of bandits who kidnap bank employees from their homes during the night, or break into the bank premises and blind and gag the employees.

BANKERS HELP

"Save the Land and You Save the Man" is the essence of a suggested agricultural program recommended by the Arkansas Bankers Agricultural Committee. "Beware of impoverished soil. It leads to impoverished horses," says a statement sent to the banks to be distributed to their farmer customers. "To help nature save the land, build up the soil, by:

- a. Stopping soil erosion.
 - b. Planting legumes.
 - c. Raising livestock.
 - d. Developing pastures.
- "Look ahead with confidence—know what you are doing, therefore:
1. Draw up a farm inventory.
 2. Keep a record, daily or weekly.
 3. Budget expense, and keep within it."
