Fee abolition—For 1,473 against 1,070.
Textbooks for private schools—For 1,251 against 1,518.

History.

Although every newspaper publisher takes pride in maintaining bound volumes of his paper, no precaution is taken, usually, to preserve these precious papers in case of fire.

Such papers, saved since the founding of the community, are an asset in tracing history, and should be kept where fire cannot destroy, or the air deteriorate. An interesting example is that of the first issue of the Lake Preston Times, a copy of which recently came to light. Published more than 50 years ago, when the hammers of carpenters were ringing, and saws were ripping through boards for the building of the new city on the prairie, the paper told the high hopes of these pioneers. It gave the names of those first settlers, and the location of the first business houses.

Without a doubt a study of the files of the Lake Preston Times would tell the story of that city. The perusal of any newspaper in the state should tell the history of the city in which it is located.

If these valuable files are to be kept intact, they should be placed in a fire-proof vault, either in the city hall, the courthouse, or in the newspaper office. They belong to the community.

Capt. B. F. Eddins—A Tribute.

Benjamin Farrar Eddins was born in Ninety Six, S. C., March 21, 1813, of sturdy Revolutionary stock, his grandfather, for whom he was named, serving with the South Carolina troops and subsequently under General Jackson against the Seminoles in Florida. As First Lieutenant and Adjutant of the 41st Alabama in which Captain Eddins commanded company, I desire in this brief sketch to commemorate the virtues and to perpetuate the memory of this truly loyal, gallant, and unselfish patriot, who at the close of the struggle gave up his life, a martyr to the cause he loved so well and served so faithfully.

Captain Eddins was a planter in the ante-bellum days, residing about two miles from Tuscaloosa, Ala., famous for the culture and refinement of its citizens, the seat of the State University and a number of flourishing female colleges, and justly styled the Athens of Alabama. Amid such environment, this typical Southern gentleman of the old school lived and reared a large family, who enjoyed all the advantages of schools and churches in the old city of Tuscaloosa. Captain Eddins and I were very warm personal friends through life, and I often enjoyed the hospitality of the Eddins home with his boyhood and later army comrade, Alexander M. Eddins, the soldier son, who now sleeps by the side of his soldier father. Captain Eddins was a prominent and a consistent member of the First Baptist Church, was a true Christian and exemplified it in his daily walk, his splendid, [useful] life. A man without guile, or falsehood himself, he found none in his fellow men, but was ever charitable to the faults and shortcomings in others.

As a friend, he was always loyal and true; as a citizen he took a deep interest in all matters looking to the advancement of Tuscaloosa and Tuscaloosa County's welfare, and none stood higher in the love and confidence of his fellow citizens. In fact, the elements were so mixed in him that all the world stood up and said "This was a man!" As a father and husband, he was loving, kind, considerate, unselfish, and was idolized by his family. During my army career, when sadly in need of a guiding hand and wise counsel, I was fortunate enough to enjoy the closest intimacy and friendship of this sterling, conscientious Christian gentleman and soldier, and none had a better opportunity to study his character from every viewpoint and to recognize its true worth, the grandeur of the man's life, his lofty ideals, his spotless honor and integrity. To the weak and erring he was a friend to lean upon and trust implicitly. In his daily life he exemplified all the virtues of the citizen, husband and father, and true, unselfish patriot.

The 41st Alabama Regiment, Volunteers, was organized at Tuscaloosa, in March, 1865, with Dr. Henry Tolbird, President of Howard College, as Colonel; Col. James T. Murphree, Commandant Alabama Corps of Cadets, as Lieutenant Colonel; Judge Martin L. St. neel of Hickens County, Major, and the writer, who was in Virginia in Rode's Brig-

Department as First Lieutenant and ordered to report to the Regiment for duty. Captain Eddins, though not liable to military duty by reason of his age, but, his heart throbbing with patriotic feeling for his beloved Southland, and fired by the blood of his ancestors, raised a company of volunteers for this Regiment and was unanimously elected Captain. The Alabama Brigades in the Western Army having their full quota, the 41st Alabama was attached to the Texas Brigade commanded by Gen. Sam Bell Maxey, upon his being ordered to join Bragg's army in Tennessee. Later, the 41st Alabama was attached to the famous old Kentucky Brigade, better known as Buckner's, consisting of four as splendid regiments as the South produced and our gallant 41st Alabama, commanded by these superb soldier, Gen. Roger Hanson, Ben Hardin Helm (who was a brother-in-law to Abraham Lincoln), and Trahee, all three of whom were mortally wounded within the space of one year. This splendid brigade was in every sanguinary engagement in the west and covered itself with glory. In all the engagements, Captain Eddins led his company with distinguished gallantry, winning the commendation of his superior officers by his coolness and soldierly conduct under fire. In the battle of Murfreesboro, or Stone River, as it was more generally known, Captain Eddins and the writer were captured. The prisoners were put in a pen or ring and guarded. The Federal General summoned the highest officers captured up to that time, and Captain Eddins and I were sent. He questioned us in regard to the number of Confederates engaged in battle future plans, etc. Captain Eddins hesitated, saying, "I'm no traitor, and I will die before I will give you any information that would hurt my country," but he said he did not know the strength of the army. General Rosencranz replied, if you do not know officially, say what you think. Upon his replying as best he could, the General straightened himself up and said: "You are a liar, sir. Such a small number could not have whipped my army in such a manner." For it was a badly whipped army at that time.

After an imprisonment of several months at Camp Chase, Ohio, and Fort Delaware, near Philadelphia, we were exchanged at Fortress Monroe, and returned to our command, Camp Chase was very crowded at that time, and in order to make room it was the custom each morning to line the prisoners up, count them, and shoot the tenth man. At one time, Captain Eddins was next in line to the man who was shot, thus escaping death by a hair's breadth. It has been said that no place on earth so quickly and surely brings out the "yellow streak," and that is mean, selfish and despicable in a human being as a prisoner filled with a heterogeneous collection of humanity. Amid these environments, with hunger and other worse suffering staring us in the face, did the true nobility of soul of Captain Eddins shine with transcendent brilliance, and irradiated every thing and everybody within the erats, unselfish, and with a heart of gold, he won the love and admiration and fellowship of his fellow-prisoners, but also by his personal magnetism won the confidence and respect and confidence of every prisoner official with whom he came in contact. None were insensible to the charm of character of this fine, true Christian and soldier.

On account of ill health, due partly to his long imprisonment, Captain Eddins tendered his resignation, which was reluctantly accepted, and returned home to remain with his family but not in idle inactivity. Captain Eddins sacrificed all for his country and himself until no longer fit for active service, and his son, the late Alexander M. Eddins, than whom was no more gallant, faithful soldier in the ranks of the Southern army. Though not in active service, Captain Eddins' heart and soul were still in the cause of his beloved Southland, and opportunity found him ever ready and responsive to the interest of the cause and its heroic defenders in the field.

And now we approach the last crowning act of his life, the last in the drama, his heroic life going out in a blaze of glory when almost the last gun had been fired. Thus he gave his life to the cause he had loved so long and served so faithfully and gallantly. News of approach of Croxton's raiders, April, 1865, spread like wildfire throughout the otherwise quiet old City of Oaks, and quick preparations were made to defend it and check the invaders. Captain Eddins and other leading citizens began gathering together a handful of citizen soldiery and cadets to meet the invading horde. In the memorable engagement at the bridge over the Warrior River, April 3, 1865, this noble son of the South fell mortally wounded, shot by the Yankee to whom he had surrendered his gun; and seven days later, April 10, the knightly old hero, Christian soldier and gentleman, one of the dauntless host who followed the Starry Cross through the bloody years of the memorable struggle, crossed over to the land where heroes bask in the eternal light divine. At the last reveille and the last call of the Gray Hosts above, no braver, truer spirit will respond to name. No citizen of long ago is more deeply enshrined in the hearts of Tuscaloosa than Benjamin Farrar Eddins, — J. D. Leonard, Gilmer, Tex., in Confederate Veteran.

"WE HAVE IT" . . . for homes, for farms, for towns and cities, for industries.
ELECTRIC POWER!
West Texas is abundantly supplied with power resources. The West Texas Utilities Company's 2,600 miles of transmission lines are linked with modern, strategically located generating stations, bringing power to you wherever it is needed.

"Let's Have Cheap Power!"
We Have That, Too.
Power is a commodity which grows cheaper the more it is used. The power from this company's lines, available every hour in the day or night for a variety of uses, can be purchased cheaper than it can be manufactured by the individual city, or the individual industry, farm or homes.

"Let's Have Abundant Power, for a More Abundant Life." We Have That in West Texas, Too.
You may recall, many years ago, when some neighbor was able to boast of his electric lights through cords hanging from the ceiling. Light was expensive then, only the well-to-do could buy this service. Today, everybody uses electric service, for the electric dollar buys now an abundant amount, about three times as much electric service as it did before the World War. Electric service is delivered to you now so cheap that its daily cost can be counted in pennies.

The area served by the West Texas Utilities Company has ample power facilities to meet the demands of this growing and progressive "Land of Opportunity," West Texas.

Railroad Service in Holland. Electricity and Bacteria.
Of the railroad in Holland E. V. Lucas writes: "The trains come in to the minute and go out to the minute. The officials are intelligent and polite. The carriages are good. Every station has its waiting room, where you may sit and read and drink a cup of coffee that is not only hot and fresh, but is recognizably the product of the berry. It is impossible to travel in the wrong train."
Among interesting papers read before the Royal Society in London recently was one by C. Ruess upon the electrical reactions of certain bacteria as applied to the detection of tubercle bacilli in urine by means of an electric current. Another by Prof. H. A. Wilson described his experiments to determine the effect of a magnetic field surrounding it upon the electrical conductivity of a flame.

IS OUR AMERICAN HOME GROWING ANEMIC?

RED blood generally denotes health; lack of it, disease. The first question asked about any patient these days, is "What is the blood count, doctor?" It is time we were taking the blood count of the American home. While the medical profession is working so assiduously on lengthening of life, what the world needs today is the strengthening of life. This must be done in the home, because it is nearer the beginning of life than any place on the planet. Parents train not only young life, but they "begin" life, they create it. The home is the source of all of the human energies of our nation, whether physical, mental, moral or spiritual.

Probably three causes have contributed most to this anemic condition of the seemingly bloodless home life in our country. First, easy divorce laws are gnawing at America's vitals. She heads the world's list with one divorce out of every five marriages. Compare this with her nearest neighbor, Canada, who has only one divorce out of every 161 marriages. Secondly, the insidious heresy of companionate marriage based entirely on selfish gratification. Thirdly, America's trait for imitation as shown by Hollywood's heinous example of promiscuity on the silver screen. These are "the why" of America's anemic home life.

The world concedes, I believe, the first six years of child life to be the most impressionable of his whole life, because at this time the child's character is being formed by external influences from which later he will form his own convictions. Over a decade and a half of close contact with both parents and their children, as dean of women, I can see why some children are launched into life with hardly a fighting chance to grow strong. In fairness to youth it should be said that in most cases of problem students, there have been also problem parents.

A student was once dropped from the university because of very low scholarship. After several talks with her I could only sense something at home was troubling her. Her family pride forbade her revealing it. Later I talked with the father. Upon leaving the office, to hurry back to Chicago, he hurled the remark over my desk, "You will have to keep her here anyhow, as my wife and I have moved into a small apartment and haven't room for her."

"No child can grow up twice," Dorothy Canfield once said. Heaven help the children who are born to anemic homes.

A VISIT TO THE BELGIAN QUEEN

TEN women physicians, from as many countries met in Belgium for a conclave. Among them was a friend of mine from Iowa. It had been arranged for them to meet the Belgian queen. When the appointed hour came they were ushered into a long salon of the palace, to await her majesty. Much excited were these visitors, no one of whom had ever before seen a queen. Most of them were able to speak English, although some brokenly. The question on the lips of each was, womanlike, "How will the queen be dressed?" "Will she wear a velvet gown, have jewels in her hair; will she be tall and queenly?" These sub-joined conjectures stopped as the attendant asked the physicians to form in line to meet the queen. Immediately the queen was announced and her majesty came smilingly into the room.

Extending her hand to the first visitor, she said, "So your home is in England, I love the English resorts, we play over there whenever we can." The next physician in line had come from France, and the queen in passing told her of her recent visit to Paris. The American physician stood third; to her the queen expressed her gratitude for the wonderful horses Iowa had sent to Belgium in the past. Thus through the line she went, until she had spoken personally with each one.

After she had gone, the women looked their complete satisfaction, "a real queen" they voiced in unison. "What kindly eyes she had," said one. "Her low well modulated voice I shall never forget." "Her handclasp was firm but so gentle." Said another, "She seemed sincerely glad to meet us, she had a personal word for each." Suddenly some one asked, "How was the queen dressed?" The ten women recalled only with difficulty, for jewels, or lack of them passed unnoticed, when they looked into her eyes.

Thus this gift, for it is the greatest of life, can be a part of everyone who genuinely desires it. It is not alone the attribute of queens, though it be a queenly trait. Personality cannot be taught in six lessons as I saw recently advertised in a weekly magazine. It comes from the heart. It must be lived years before it becomes one's whole being.

The queen had put her queenly adornments within her heart instead of upon her head. Her crown of jewels was an understanding heart. Is this not within the reach of each one of us?

New Autumn Woolens Are Striking

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WOOLENS to "suit" the smart woman this fall are that fascinating we are not going to be able to resist them and you wouldn't if you could after once glimpsing them. From every inch of their wool and their warp the woolens brought out this season radiate a beauty of coloring, of texture, of novelty in patterning and weave which is simply taking the world of fashion by storm.

Seeing that the American mills and the mills abroad are giving us the most amazing, the most beautiful woolens fancy can picture, it is to rejoice that the English habit of wearing sporty or tailored costumes for all daytime occasions in contrast to most resplendent and glorious formal fashions for evening has spread to America. Now that the smart thing to do this fall is to go very colorfully and handsomely tailored in the daytime, it is safe to predict that dresses, suits, swagger costumes together with three-piece ensembles made of stunning woolens will predominate by a large majority in the wardrobe of every fashion-wise woman.

One of the most dramatic gestures which has to do with this sweeping vogue for grand woolens is the costume which goes fifty-fifty gorgeous cloth and high-colored suede. That is to say, a skirt of rich woolen is topped with a jacket or sweater of suede or leather which carries the key color of the plaid or striped material. To climax the scheme of design, the newest thing is the blouse which is knitted of the identical yarn in which the wool material is woven. Thus a perfect color harmony is achieved.

Another thing likable about the new woolens is that they are so delightfully soft and caressing to the touch, and give ear to this bit of good news—they are so woven in combination of yarns, they do not wrinkle.

Just to mention a few of the smartest and newest of new woolens—there are kemp tweeds, bright nubbed tweeds of unusual treatment, sawtooth checks, broken plaids, mari tweeds, chevron stripes, ribbed diagonals, ombre plaids and others too numerous to cite.

The colorings of the versatile woolens brought out this season are a triumph both in art and of science. A complete wardrobe may be planned to include several colors, none of which conflict because the most vivid plaids and gay hues are given dusky overtones which bleed into one grand symphony via misty interweavings of grayish or brownish yarns. The attractive Seton Cotterill collection of London which was recently shown in America by the Chicago wholesale market council stressed particularly this feature of color blend in smart woolens. The trio of high-style woolen fashions here pictured were displayed in this exhibit.

See illustrated to the left in the group a perfect travel costume. The Scotch plaid in black and white, of which it is made, has a heavy nub yarn interwoven to give highlights of canary yellow.

A new chevron-stripe wool in tones of amber, rustique and brown makes the suit with tuxedo topcoat (centered in the illustration). Note the smart cross-scarf of the jacket. Semifitted lines and woolen buttons give a new smart air, also the front fullness of the skirt.

The new skirts are marvelously built. They are most deceptive. They look as innocently pleated and paneled as you please, while in reality they are concealing slits which allow for perfect freedom of action. Such a skirt is the one to the right in the picture. "Swagger collezienne" describes this ombre plaid suit in rich tones of duobonnet red and ivory. It has a snug collar and stock scarf and is worn with matching sweater.

COAT OF PIGSKIN

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Have you heard about the too-chic-for-words new polo coats which are made of fine pigskin? Just study this picture and see how smart they are down to the slightest detail. You can get them either in natural or rich dark dyes. The model illustrated has all the latest "touches," such as big, roomy bellows pockets, the new ash belt which ties so casually, strap-band sleeves which are adjustable about the wrist, deep-set yoke and an intricate seaming which gives the garment exquisite dress. The hat is of pigskin to match the coat. The paisly print scarf is up to the moment in style.

LUXURIOUS METALS TOUCH UP FABRICS

Inspired by Oriental and period influences fabric manufacturers have outdone themselves in producing beautiful and luxurious metals on every type of silk ground.

In addition to being important for afternoon and evening gowns, the new metals are widely used for millinery—notably turbans—scarfs to be worn with wool as well as silk suits, blouses, waistcoats, bags, vanity and cigarette cases. In superb evening sandals and evening jackets that have a decidedly new look.

Metals with solid burnished faces in silver, gold—and newest of all—copper are shown in the market and considered especially good for jackets and accessories.

Silk crepes with double borders in metallized broche show distinct traces of Persian, Hindu and Japanese influence in their rich colorings and delicate patterns.

Sheer silk gauzes, completely metallized, form one of the newest and loveliest of the metals.

Pink Rates Coolest Shade and Looks Most Expensive

Pink, fashion's favorite color this summer, is the coolest-looking and, incidentally, the most expensive appearing shade you possibly can wear. There are pink linen and shantung suits for town and country, handsome pink sweaters to wear with white skirts when you week-end out of town and glamorous evening gowns in various tones of this lovely shade. One particularly nice evening gown is fashioned from double layers of pink chiffon and is worn under a billowing wrap of matching material.

Paris Loves Blue

Blue is a favorite color of Paris this year. Smart women seen at the races are many of them gowned in navy with white relief; also navy and white prints. Pale, misty blue crepe frocks are worn with darker blue hats, bags and shoes.

Different Ways of Making Rugs

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

The making of rag rugs has interested needleworkers for hundreds of years. One very good reason for this is that rugs are practical and wanted in every home. The larger the rug the harder the work; the weight increases as the work progresses. Making a rug of motifs and then assembling takes the hard labor out of rug making and the work becomes interesting. Work these motifs in spare time at home or elsewhere and, when all are finished, assemble.

Folder No. 532 contains a lot of information about making the hexagon motif in various sizes in hexagon shaped rugs and in various color combinations. Hexagon motifs are crocheted in any size and color scheme according to your own idea. Amount of material and all the stitches are given and other hints of value to rug makers. A new kind of chart for selecting your colors gives you an opportunity to see what your rug looks like before you go ahead with the work. You can get some wonderful ideas from this folder on "Different Ways to Make Rugs." It will be mailed to you upon receipt of 10 cents.

HATS IN ELEVATORS

Men of Sydney, Australia, are nothing, if not polite. They, for instance never fail to remove their hats in an elevator, when ladies are present.

That is why a storm of controversy has been aroused by neat little notices just pasted in the elevators of the Bank of New South Wales, asking men to keep their hats on.

Bank officials say the removal of hats congests business. Men hold them carefully against their manly chests, or lower down to protect them from being crushed. The result is that in an elevator built to carry 20 people, only 16 can get in.

Most of the obviously married men customers of the bank are now keeping their hats on, but the younger men lift theirs.

Why a Scouring Plant or Wool on Mill in Texas?

San Angelo is in the very heart of the wool growing section of Texas, and Texas is by far the greatest producer of wool in America, as per the 1934 report of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The yield of wool in Texas for 1933 was 74,800,000 pounds and of mohair more than 14,000,000 pounds.

Under the present also, system of handling this wool, freight on the gross weight (dirt, grease and wool) must be paid from this point to some Atlantic seaboard point for cleaning and processing. Then the freight on the cleaned and manufactured article back to us.

It is conceded by those competent to know, that the losses in weight on Texas wool is 60 per cent or more. Thus, when Texas ships its average annual production of wool to the East its wool-growers are paying freight to destination on approximately 45,000,000 pounds of waste. Is this system favorable to our best interests? Most emphatically not.

BUT WHAT CAN WE DO ABOUT IT?

The Southwest Wool Scouring Mill Company, now in process of organization in San Angelo, Texas proposes as follows: [1] To organize a Wool Scouring Plant with a capitalization of $75,000.00; said capital to be raised from sale of 750 shares of stock of the par value of $100 each. [2] All of said stock shall be of one and the same kind, common stock, fully paid and non-assessable. [3] That the organization expense shall not exceed 10 per cent, and that there shall not be any bonus or promotion stock issued to anyone.

[4] All stock to be paid for in cash at $100 per share, one-half with application and balance on or before January 1, 1936. [5] That with the net proceeds from sale of stock, the company will obtain site, erect proper building and install necessary and sufficient equipment. And it is conservatively estimated that out of the proceeds thus obtained from the stated 750 shares of stock, the company will then have ample funds to carry out the above program and also a sizeable working surplus in addition.

No part of this program is the product of the fertile mind of some high-powered promoter, nor is it being fostered by outside interests. It is purely a San Angelo and West Texas proposition, and is being sponsored and supported by the people interested in the future of West Texas and its citizens. A large number of San Angelo's best, far-sighted, progressive and community building business men have contributed of their time and money in the initiative and assure us of their support 100 per cent heretofore; That kind of cooperation will not fail, but is a guarantee of the success of this enterprise.

Five leading business men and ranchmen have been selected to act as officers and directors for the Company in its infancy. They have been approved by the Department of State at Austin, and a permit has been granted by the State of Texas for the raising of the authorized capital structure of the Company. And it is anticipated that actual construction of the plant will be in full operation and ready for the 1936 wool clip.

No high-pressure or professional stock salesman will call on you. We will not recognize or tolerate that, but we are solecting, after careful investigation, a few high class men of clean past records to invite those who are desirable to us to become interested with us in a nominal investment in the capital structure of the

CONTROL OF CREDIT A BASIC QUESTION

Economist Describes Conflict Between Opposing Social View-points on Government Bank.

Attention for government banking is a phase of the conflict between our present "personal competitive enterprise system" in America and the "compulsory state collective security system" of several European States. Virgil Jordan, President National Industrial Conference Board, says in an article in a recent issue of "Banking" published by the American Bankers Association.

"They involve irreconcilable principles of human conduct and philosophy of life and the conflict between them is the very heart of the economic and political struggle of today," Mr. Jordan says.

The enterprise system of which "the development of the United States has been the unexampled example, depends for its motive power of progress upon the inexhaustible reservoir of energy in individual desire for personal advancement in prosperity, but it guarantees nothing to the individual save freedom of opportunity," the article says in part.

The collectivist security system, he says, "places all emphasis upon the maintenance of a minimum standard of living for the mass without regard to the creative power of the individual, quite simply the security system involves the modern form of the philosophy of the slave society." He continues:

A Sign of the Times "The many-sided movement toward governmental banking, deposit insurance and currency management is the most direct and decisive expression of the universal instinctive search for security which is the sign of the times. In America our so-called social security legislation is an important indication of the drift away from the enterprise system toward a collectivist security system with concentration of authority in a central Federal government.

"The nationalization of credit is crucial and indispensable for complete state control of the complex industrial and business structure of this country. The drive toward government banking and monetary control is most determined because the relation of the state to credit goes to the root of the enterprise system. A collectivist security system is inconceivable without nationalization of credit. An enterprise system is inconceivable with it."

Under a collective security system, based on government banking the controls "lie solely in the hands of a few persons and depend upon their judgment, will or caprice," Mr. Jordan says, adding that it is they who must determine "upon the basis of some predetermined plan or upon pure political expediency of the moment, what lines of industry and even what individual enterprises shall have access to the credit reservoir." The state, he says, has the power of life and death over all enterprise that utilizes credit.

"Every government is an organ of party power and must respond to the will of the party that put it in power," the Jordan article says. "Under unchecked government operation it is an inescapable tendency of every currency to depreciate and for credit to expand. However much it may be in the interest of the nation, deflation is too dangerous politically for any government to undertake it deliberately.

"In the end government banking and currency management resolve themselves simply into the use of credit as a political instrument of power, and this instrument tends to be used in the long run for expropriation of the savings of the community."

When You're Dead.

It tests the doctor how the folks will keep as you lie in your coffin so fast asleep, and sing of your goodness in countless ways while the person prescribes and takes and prays "The doctor how the public will subject and lead you up to the vaulted sides, when the undertaker has called your bluff and emptied you full of our halting staff, but when you wakes on the earth, I swear, you were nothing more than a plodder there, and you'd have fainted or dropped down dead at any price that the public said. It's not, when you're a doctor, that the honest people will need to be told—the doctor demands
