In a Federal Prison.

Through carelessness of my own I was captured on July 23, 1934, just above a toll bridge on the Amite river, and confined in the old parish jail of Baton Rouge, La. I was kept there three weeks, during which time, acting upon the principle that "all is fair in love and war," I applied for a parole to the limits of the town. It is unnecessary to state what the result would have been had I got the parole, but the prison marshal seemed to be a mind so I got no parole. At the expiration of three weeks I was sent to New Orleans where I was confined in the Carondelet prison one week. However, it is possible to confine the body but not the mind.

Joseph E. Blouin; Joe Huse, Baker, Pegram, Buddy Sanchez and I formed a conspiracy to dig out of that vermin-infested den. On the night of August 20, we completed our work except for the last tier of bricks on the outside wall that opened out on the stairs leading to a freedom. Finding that we could not complete our job and make an escape that night without risk of failure, we desisted further operations, intending to finish the job the night of the 21st. At 4 o'clock that afternoon the Yanks called out 85 in prison to sign a parole to be sent up the river for exchange.

It was 10 o'clock p. m. before we boarded the boat. The Laurel Hill, commanded by Capt. T. P. Leathers. They honored us with deserts from Jones County, Miss., for a guard. We soon learned that there were two paymasters aboard going up Red River to pay off Bank's army. It occurred to us that that must be a lot of money and if we could get possession of it, we would be theed. So with that thought and the glory of freedom uppermost in our minds; and with no place to sleep but on the bare deck, we put in the rest of that night planning.

A little after daylight a young Georgia lieutenant came down on a deck and told us that he had permission to bring down the drinks on giving his word and honor that we would make no trouble, to which all agreed. But some of us being unaccustomed to drink at that particular time, it took but a little to go a long way. The prison had furnished us with rations for the trip, and we had intended to eat breakfast after the drinks but all had taken freely of John Barleycorn, we soon forgot all about breakfast and our pledge as well and began planning to capture that boat and money. We soon had our plans perfected but we had taken one certain man that belonged to some fraternal order with the lieutenant and he gave us away. The gallant lieutenant came down and told us he was aware that the bait was tempting, and he would not say no, but, "Remember, boys, my honor is at stake." So we yielded to reason and desisted.

We reached Baton Rouge about 4 p. m. and were anchored out a short distance from the western shore, where Bill and Dan Jones, Bill Cook, James Beck, and I spent the evening singing Rebel songs. After having lost one night's sleep and passed through a strenuous day, we got a refreshing night's rest. At 8 o'clock we were landed and marched to Redwood Bridge and exchanged for 76 Yankees. —M. H. ACHORD, of Paton Rouge, La.

He's Oldest Man in the County of Coke.

If anybody in Coke County is older than Uncle Bill Murphy of Tennyson, we would like to know it, but so far as we know he is the oldest person now living in Coke—91 last March, and in a few months will be 92. He was in Robert Lee recently with his son, Ben.

Mr. Murphy fought in the Civil War—was with Morgan's brigade, we understand. He has four sons and one daughter. They used to live in the Sisco community, Charlie now lives at Trent, Ben at Tennyson, and is in the oil fields west of here. Miss Texas Murphy, the daughter, is a telegraph operator in New Mexico. —The Brohte Enterprise.

"Uncle" Bill was a citizen of Christovla and irrigation farmer here about 20 years ago, and is remembered by the old timers here as the Confederate veteran that smoked a clay pipe with a cane stem. The Observer wishes this dear old follower of John Morgan a great many more years of good health in Coke county.

Two years ago Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Parker of Hardin county put out 530 feet of bush blackberry vines. This year they had plenty of berries while they were in season, canned 75 quarts and gave 15 gallons to friends and neighbors.

"By the People"— Or by Politicians?

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

During recent weeks America has heard a swelling volume of protest against interference by numerous political Boards, Bureaus and Commissions with the lives and affairs of citizens.

The protest comes from various sources—from merchants, in communities both large and small; from many growers and consumers of our food products; from increasing numbers of men and women in the professions and in business.

What is the explanation? One answer might be that such interference can seriously affect the citizen's means of earning a livelihood. But many keen observers of the current American scene suggest a deeper and more fundamental motive.

The protests, they believe, reflect a surge of resentment against usurpation by political jobholders of powers which American citizens are convinced belong only to officials chosen by the people.

They represent, in other words, a spreading antagonism to Bureaucracy which after expanding swiftly during several decades has achieved an unprecedented growth and power during the past few years.

When one considers the many powers now assumed by the hundreds of Boards, Bureaus and Commissions which crowd the office buildings of Washington, the protests seem more than justified. That such usurpation of authority constitutes an abridgment of the political power of the people is equally obvious.

Under our Constitution the people delegate to Congress—not to appointed Bureaus—the right to make our laws.

Under it we delegate to the Executive Branch of Government—not to appointed Bureaucrats—the power to enforce those laws.

When these powers are usurped by jobholders in whose selection we have no choice and over whose activities we exercise no control, then "Government by the People" becomes an empty phrase.

In its place we get Government by Bureaucrats—which means not only waste of the people's money in unnecessary public payrolls and public expenditures, but a frank surrender of the people's right to govern themselves.

Napoleon's Name.

A Greek scholar has called attention to a very curious coincidence about the name of Napoleon. If you take away the first letter of his name, you have "apoleon;" take away the first letter of that word, and you have "poleon;" do this successively down to the last syllable, and you have "leon," "eon" and "on." Put these several words together in this order, Napoleon on cleon leon eon opoleon poleon, and you have a Greek phrase the literal translation of which is "Napoleon the lion of peoples, went about destroying cities."—Unidentified.

Preserving Canadian Fish.

In compliance with the new Canadian regulations, American fishermen must now obtain licenses, and the rule limiting the day's catch to eight black bass to a fisherman will be rigorously enforced. In the Bay of Quinte, Ontario, a small cruiser is to do duty in enforcing the laws. It is said that some yachts in past seasons took from 60 to 100 bass in a day's fishing.

On Texas Farms.

J. M. Sandusky of Floyd county harvested 900 bundles of red top sorghum per acre from land that was terraced last winter. Sandusky states that there is no other field of red top sorghum in his community which is making more than $500 land per acre.

Billie Dotson, West Co. p. Bailey county 4-H club member, purchased a calf weighing 100 lbs on June 1. At the end of 90 days it weighed 470 pounds, a gain of 370 pounds in 90 days.

Charles Stonkon of Donhawkon in Wilson county has earned on pasture improvement for 30 years. He used to mow weeds in his pasture; now his sheep perform that service at a profit. He has two mesquite grass pastures. Last year he planted 10 acres of cultivated land in Dallas grass, Burr clover and Yellow Sweet clover. In spite of the heavy freezes there is a perfect stand of Dallas grass about knee high. Some clover is beginning to come up.

Elimination of Body Waste Is Doubly Important

In the crucial months before baby arrives it is vitally important that the body be rid of waste matter. Your intestines must function—regularly, completely without griping.

Why Physicians Recommend Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—much pleasanter to take than liquid. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system, and insure regular, complete elimination without pain or effort. Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. President's Defense of AAA and Canadian Treaty—Italy Offered Peace Plan at Ethiopia's Expense—Naval Conference Seems Hopeless.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

WHILE the United States Supreme court was hearing oral arguments in the Hoosac Mills case in which the constitutionality of the whole Agricultural Adjustment act was attacked and defended, President Roosevelt was in Chicago seeking to justify the entire New Deal farm program. He addressed the American Farm Bureau federation in the International Amphitheater at the stock yards and was heard and enthusiastically applauded by some 25,000 farmers and as many others as could get into the theater and adjoining wings supplied with loud speakers.

The farm program, the President said, aimed to "stop the rule of tooth and claw that threw farmers into bankruptcy or turned them into serfs." As evidence that it is succeeding, he asserted that farm income "has increased nearly $3,000,000,000 in the past two and a half years."

Necessarily Mr. Roosevelt defended the new Canadian trade treaty because only two days before that pact had been bitterly attacked by his late trade adviser, George N. Peek.

"Just as I am confident," said the President, "that the great masses of city people are fair-minded, so I am sure that the great majority of American farmers will be fair in their judgment of the new treaty."

"If the calamity howlers should happen to be right, you have every assurance that Canada and the United States will join in correcting inequalities, but I do not believe for a single moment that the calamity howlers are right."

"We export more agricultural products to Canada than we have imported from her."

"We shall continue to do so, for the very simple reason that the United States, with its larger area of agricultural land, its more varied climate and its vastly greater population, produces far more of most agricultural products, including animal products, vegetables and fruit, than does Canada."

"In the case of the few reductions that have been made, quota limitations are set on the amount that may be brought in at the lower rates."

In his analysis of the Canadian agreement, Peek showed that 84 per cent of the tariff concessions which the New Dealers granted to Canada were on agricultural and forestry products. He also showed that the articles on which the New Dealers granted tariff reductions amounted to 308 million dollars in 1929, whereas Canada in return had granted concessions on articles valued at only 245 million dollars.

After completing his speech and eating luncheon with a lot of local notables, the President went to South Bend, Ind., where he received an honorary degree from Notre Dame university and delivered another address.

BEFORE the American Farm Bureau federation closed its convention in Chicago, it adopted a resolution endorsing reciprocal trade treaties. To avoid dissension, the resolution did not mention specifically the recent trade agreement between Canada and the United States, which lowered the duty on many farm products coming in over the northern border.

Another of the 17 resolutions adopted at the meeting concerned "federal fiscal policies." Indicating their uneasiness over the mounting federal deficit, the farmers recommended that the fiscal policies of the government be modified, and that "its revenues shall be increased, and that its expenditures shall be decreased, to the end that within the next few years a balance shall be attained."

The federation also approved a resolution pledging itself to defend the Agricultural Adjustment administration act. The meeting offered no serious criticism of the act, but asked that its administration be simplified.

The delegates, representing a paid up membership of 300,000 farmers in 37 states, re-elected Edward A. O'Neal of Alabama as president of the federation for a term of two years. Charles E. Hearst was re-elected vice president and all 15 members of the board of directors were reappointed.

ITALY is being punished for starting the war against Ethiopia, and will be well paid for stopping it. That in a nutshell is the status at this writing. Great Britain and France reached an agreement as to the offer to be made to Mussolini before the imposition of an oil embargo, set for December 12. This plan for peace, drawn up by British Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare and Premier Laval, was based on the proposal that Italy should retain part of the territory already conquered in Ethiopia, chiefly in northwestern Tigre province, including Adowa and not the sacred city of Aksum, and that the Italian Somaliland border should be rectified. In return, Ethiopia would be given a seaport, either in Eritrea or in British or French territory. Thus poor Ethiopia, already declared by the League of Nations to be a victim of Italian rapacity, would be still further victimized by the consent of the two great powers that dominate the league. Presumably, if Emperor Haile Selassie refuses the terms and decides to continue his fight for the territorial inviolability guaranteed by the league covenant, he will be abandoned to his fate.

Dispatches from Dessye, Ethiopia, said the emperor rejected the Franco-British plan, asserting:

"The Ethiopian government cites its previous declarations, notably that of October 8, to show that Ethiopia never wished and does not wish war. But today we are bound to defend our soil, which Italy has violated.

"Ethiopia agreed at the time of the Paris conference and the meeting of the League of Nations committee of five to all concessions comparable to its dignity, to avoid Italian aggression, but that aggression has been committed. We cannot submit to force which we never provoked, because that would be rewarding violence."

Since Mussolini showed a disposition to consider the proposals, the oil embargo was postponed to permit negotiations. If he rejects the plan the embargo would go into effect later and supposedly the war in Africa would continue at least until the rainy season next spring.

PROBABLY with slight hope of accomplishing anything worth while, representatives of the United States, Great Britain, France and Japan met in London and opened the international naval conference. Italy also was represented, but only as an observer and listener. Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin welcomed the delegates in a smooth address asking the chief sea powers to lessen some of their demands to "avert the calamity of unrestricted naval competition."

Admiral Nagano

Norman H. Davis offered President Roosevelt's suggestion of a 20 per cent reduction in existing naval treaty tonnage, or, failing that, a continuance of present fleet limitations.

Then arose Admiral Osami Nagano, chief of the Japanese delegation, and told the conference that Japan demanded parity with Great Britain and the United States instead of the existing 5-5-3 ratio and requested a "just and fair agreement on disarmament."

After several days of discussion and debate, the Japanese demand for parity was flatly rejected by the delegates of the four other nations.

The pessimistic feeling that prevailed was attributed to the Japanese demand for parity, the rivalry in the Mediterranean between France and Italy, the war in Ethiopia and its sanctions developments and recent occurrences in north China. Any one of which might wreck the conference.

THE United States and Great Britain, in the conference at Washington, agreed upon a plan that is expected to result in regular air mail and passenger transportation across the Atlantic by the summer of 1937. Negotiations were under way for the northern route by way of Canada, Newfoundland, and Irish Free State to England, and the southern route from Porto Rico and American ports to England.

The northern route is more practicable than the southern route because of the shorter distance, but is less practicable in winter because flights would be undertaken under less favorable conditions.

Under the agreement experimental flights will begin next summer. When regular service is inaugurated, according to the agreement, four round trips will be made each week.

JOHN H. HOEPEL, congressman from California, and his son, Charles, were found guilty by a jury in the District of Columbia Supreme court of conspiring to sell an appointment to West Point for $1,000. They were released on bail pending motion for a new trial. Hoepel was elected to congress in the Roosevelt landslide of 1932 from the Seventeenth California district, and was re-elected in 1934. He is fifty-four years old; his son is twenty-one.

GEORGE L. BERRY, industrial coordinator, found great difficulty in mustering his proposed industrial council, in which many great industrial groups had refused to participate. The initial session of his conference broke up in disorder amid shouts of "har" and threatened fist fights. Further doings were postponed for a week or more and most of the delegates went home, declaring they wanted nothing to do with a permanent council which might lead to further government interference with private business. The labor unions stood by Berry, hoping his program would aid their plans for a 30-hour week and government licensing of all industry.

JOHN J. LEWIS, president of the United Mine Workers and head of the "rebel" committee on industrial organization that is seeking to gain control of the American Federation of Labor, invited President William Green of the federation to resign and accept chairmanship of the committee. In a letter to Lewis, Green declared that he never had associated himself with any minority seeking to split the A. F. of L. and never would do so. He mildly rebuked the insurgents by saying that he himself "in a spirit of good sportsmanship took it on the chin" whenever he had found himself outvoted in the A. F. of L. convention.

ADMINISTRATION officials state that President Roosevelt will ask the new congress for a $100,000,000 appropriation as the initial fund to launch the federal social security program going into effect January 1. The fund is to be distributed among the states for the needy old aged in the form of pensions, for maternity and child welfare, and to aid the blind.

State commissioners and public welfare directors were summoned to Washington by the social security board to discuss formulation of regulations and procedure.

POLITICIANS, especially Republicans were greatly interested in a meeting in Washington between former Vice President Charles Curtis and Senator Borah, and its possible implications. Curtis insisted to the press that he is still advocating the nomination of Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas for the Presidency, but the Idaho senator is himself a leading possibility for that honor. Curtis had recently had a conference with Landon in Topeka, but he said there was no connection between that and his call on Borah.

The ex-Vice President said of the nomination:

"I have no second choice, but a lot depends on what happens at the convention. I have the highest regard for the senator. I'm for Landon, who is well equipped to run, after giving us an economic administration in Kansas—something we need here in Washington more now than ever before."

CARLOS MENDIETA resigned as president of Cuba because of a fierce quarrel in the government over procedure for the election of a constitutional president. Mendieta had held the office for two years. Secretary of State Barnett took over the office and reappointed all members of the cabinet, and preparations for the election went ahead.

CONTINUOUS rioting in Cairo, directed against British control of Egypt, attacks on English soldiers and smashing of street cars and shop windows, forced Premier Nessim Pasha and his cabinet to decide to resign. The rioters demanded the restoration of the constitution of 1923 and the ministers pleaded with Sir Miles Lampson, British high commissioner, to give his consent. He was obdurate in his refusal until King Fuad, Nessim Pasha announced that he would quit, but yielded then to avoid disorders similar to those of 1919.

Therefore, with the consent of Great Britain, King Fuad signed a royal decree restoring constitutional government, and the cabinet members withdrew their resignations. The constitution thus restored provides for a senate and chamber of deputies and takes control of Egypt's internal affairs completely out of British hands. It does not, however, affect Britain's control of Egyptian foreign affairs, nor the British military protectorate.

NORTH CHINA autonomists, supported by the Japanese armies, evidently are too much for the Nanking government, of which Chiang Kai-shek has now become the premier. The provinces of Hopei and Chahar, with a population of 30,000,000 or more, have been granted virtual self-rule under a political council. The central government made only three stipulations—that Nanking would continue to control the new state's foreign affairs, financial, military and judiciary matters; that all appointments would be made by Nanking, and that there would be no actual independence for the area.

No machinery was provided to prevent the new council from doing exactly as it pleased under Japanese protection and guidance.

BRUNO HAUPTMANN, convicted of kidnaping and murdering the Lindbergh baby, lost almost his last chance of escaping the electric chair when the Supreme court refused to review his case. The decision was made through the single word "Denied."

Hauptmann's attorneys had announced previously that, in the event a review was refused, they would seek a new trial if new evidence could be found and would appeal, for a commutation of the death sentence to life imprisonment.

CONSUMERS who buy potatoes in regular retail establishments are not liable to a fine as high as $1,000 if the spuds are grown and marketed in violation of the potato control act. Only the first purchaser of unstamped potatoes is liable. This is the ruling of the AAA, and the act may be amended later to include this provision.

The bureau of internal revenue regulations require that the producer cancel the stamps, after they are attached, by writing in ink or indelible pencil or by stamping his initials and the date.

A Dressy Frock Fitting Budget

"As easy as pie" to fit between two graceful raglan sleeves, a wedge-shaped yoke is a distinguishing feature of this rather dressy, yet inexpensive afternoon frock. You'll find it hard to decide which sleeve treatment is the more charming, the one that tapers to a snugly buttoned cuff, or the one which stops just short of the wrist. Don't forget to note the very new, gored skirt with its subtle flare. If it's a dressy dress you want, black satin is ideal; but if you're out for color, choose a richly hued novelty synthetic.

Pattern 9545 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3 1/2 yards 39 inch fabric and 3/4 yard contrast.

Wealth Merely Means to Proper Ends of Humanity

Let wealth be regarded by any society as an end in itself, and that society shall be cursed and paralyzed alike in its wealth and in its poverty from top to bottom. Our own society is only not cursed so completely as it might be because there are luckily a considerable number of people of all classes in whom the instinct for a better life persists. But these are not sufficiently strong and self-conscious to form a determining factor in the philosophy and politics of the nation.

Let wealth be regarded by some society of the future as a mere means to the proper ends of human life, and whether it is rich or poor on the whole, its wealth will be fairly distributed, and that society happy and healthy.

"Ain't" Is Vulgar, Yet We Shy at "Am I Not?"

A teacher of English has pointed out a curious effect of the constant stressing of the vulgarity of the use of the word "ain't" in conversation. Admitting that the continued instruction has been useful in some directions, he says that, when it comes to questions, the result seems to have been to substitute one error for another.

"The child would ordinarily remark, 'Ain't I glad I don't have to do it?' or, 'I'm right, ain't I?' is now likely to change, somewhat self-consciously to 'Aren't I glad I don't have to do it?' or, 'I'm right, aren't I?' Especially, to the girls, it seems, that sounds a lot more elegant, even if ungrammatical.

It is strange that people should shy at the little expression, "Am I not." Americans just do not care for those three little words. Among our homespun citizenry there is a deep-seated suspicion that they can note either condescension or pose. Many prefer to stumble around looking, ineffectually, for something just as good, which they seldom find.—Boston Herald.

Nothing Gratis
"You can't get something for nothing in this life."
"That's right," replied the gloomy citizen. "If I want even a few kind words about my disposition and some hope of future success, I've got to go to a fortune teller and pay for them."

A Church To Fill

by Frances Grinstead

OUR family had attended Christmas services at the church on the brow of the hill. It is just a "little brown church," but of recent years it has been modernized with a furnace, a basement for church dinners, and work tables and sand piles in the Sunday school rooms. The grown-ups like it better since there are more and bigger oil lamps.

"What Else Are You Doing at Your Church?" Asked Uncle Joe.

New England minister, with his eyes usually set on heaven; but he does like turkey.

"Why, nothing else," mother answered. "What would we have at the church besides Sunday services and the Christmas sermon, since we've left off Wednesday night prayer meetings?"

"Tell you what I'd do if it were my church," replied uncle, watching father carve. "I'd keep that place warm from morning till late night all this week, with somebody serving tea to any who might drop in, and something going on throughout the holidays. I heard Dave say last night there's nowhere to go but the movies."

Brother jumped. "You wouldn't expect me to go to church every day, sir?"

"I'd fix it so you couldn't stay away. Would you turn down a chance at an old-fashioned taffy pull in overalls and aprons? Would Frances refuse to learn book-binding or candy-making? And don't tell me Billy and Sue wouldn't come in to warm their toes and noses and have chocolate and cookies after coasting down that hill a dozen times! . . . A little of the dark meat, please, Roger."

"Then, since your mother doesn't have to get you off to school this week, why shouldn't she go herself? Mary, you've been telling me about that woman on the next farm who's lonely for someone to talk to about books. Why not call a meeting at the church and let her tell the rest of you about them? And ask the lady who used to teach music to lead you in group singing and explain the origins of the Christmas carols."

"Are you leaving me out, Joe?" asked father, laying down the carving tools.

"Not by any means! This would be a mighty good time to get your county agent to tell you what to raise next year instead of corn and hogs. Or to get your hand in at chess. By the way, I'd have all those big low tables covered with games. I'll bet there are sets of anagrams and cribbage just going to waste in your attic—"

"There are!" cried Dave, "and wouldn't it be fun, mom, to get out our old phonograph to show the fellows? We got some good records."

"Yes, but hurry, so you can wash the dishes while I use the phone. There's going to be so much going on at that church, we'll be falling over each other to get into it."

Christmas Gives

Agnes Myers

"LUELLA," said her mother with a warning look, "take your hand out of those raisins and finish paring the apples for my pies."

"But, I've done most a bushel already," giggled the guilty youngster.

"Spose you have! How many pies do you figure you children eat? Besides, Christmas time we have to have extras for folks coming in."

"Mercy me," she continued, "it's time for Joel to be home from the church bazaar! Look at that snow; I shouldn't wonder if we had a blizzard before morning."

Mrs. Dodge opened the cold closet and peered with secret delight at the fast filling shelves. Coffee cans filled with steamed plum puddings, a fine baked ham, frosted chocolate cakes, a whole row of pies—pumpkin and mince; and a big bowl of cranberry sauce, skins and all.

"Sally, you better help Luella with the apples, we're almost finished with the baking; and now if your father would bring the turkey, I could stuff it tonight."

"Mother! Mother!" Shouted Joel, Bounding into the House.

She glanced toward the kitchen window—

"My stars! Here comes old Emil Cooper! I'll just give him a jug of that new cider and a mince pie, when he's going home."

Mrs. Dodge had a bountiful nature. She anticipated Emil Cooper and the many other hangers-on, who always showed up around Christmas; while the supply of pies and puddings grew less and less as the visitors departed.

"Father's coming!" cried the children and they ran to the door excitedly to meet him, followed by Mrs. Dodge. But a look of perplexity, almost distress, spread over her face.

"Where's the turkey?" she gasped. "Fact is—" hesitated Mr. Dodge. "I gave it to Ned Blake on the way home—for his poor family. Mother—I couldn't, couldn't help it."

"Well," sighed Mrs. Dodge, with a crest-fallen face, "I guess they need it all right—and we still have the ham."

A light quick step sounded on the snowy porch.

"Mother! Mother!" shouted Joel, bounded into the house with a bundle larger than himself. "See! See what I have! I won the big 25-pound turkey at the bazaar!"

"Why son!" exclaimed Mr. Dodge, "that turkey is twice the size of the one we gave away!"

Blooms at Christmas Time

According to tradition the famous thorn at Glastonbury Cathedral was brought and planted there by Joseph of Arimathea and was part of the crown of thorns which was pressed upon the brow of Christ. According to tradition it blooms at Christmas time and the possession of a piece is said to insure good fortune through the year.

STAR DUST

Movie • Radio

By VIRGINIA VALE

NOW it's William Powell who threatens to shake the dust of California from his feet and take up his residence in England, and all because of taxes. He says that 75 per cent of what he makes goes that way, and that he'd like to hang on to more than 25 per cent of what he earns—which seems reasonable enough. So it looks as if he might spend six months in England and six here, and if that means that we will see him in fewer pictures it's bad news indeed. He's at the height of his popularity at present—and after seeing him in "Rendezvous" I think you'll agree with me that he should be seen more often. It's one of those pictures that just must not be missed. Of course, the gossips are inclined to wonder if this means that the romance between Bill and Jean Harlow is definitely over. Others say that he's liked Europe, always, and has wanted to live there.

Wm. Powell.

And I recall meeting him for the first time, years ago, when he had just returned from a European vacation. At luncheon, in his hotel suite, he was tastefully clad in a black silk lounging robe with flashes of red about it—the three women interviewers, all accustomed to film stars though they were, were just a bit goggle-eyed when they first caught sight of that dashing robe. But Powell was so thrilled over Florence, (Florence, Italy, not a girl!) that he couldn't think of anything else. He wanted to live there. Perhaps he still does—maybe that's one reason for this threatened departure.

Rudy Vallee's not going to make that picture, "Lucky Me"; won't go to California because his wife would start legal trouble all over again.

Pert Kelton, whom you've seen in several pictures—her next one is "Anne Oakley," with Barbara Stanwyck—made all Broadway laugh the other day. She'd been known there as a stage actress, a brunette; she reappeared as a blonde, as guest of honor at the weekly luncheon of a group of motion picture men, and this is the story she told, which everyone present has been telling ever since. Mrs. Morrow, years ago, had asked the elder J. P. Morgan, an old friend, to tea. Before he arrived she took her daughters, then very small girls, aside, and warned them that they were not to say anything about his nose—a very large, bulbous nose. They weren't even to stare at it. They were just to come in and speak to him, and then excuse themselves and go upstairs.

Stanwyck.

Came the day, with Mr. and Mrs. Morrow chatting with Mr. Morgan. The eldest daughter came into the drawing room, said "How do you do?" to Mr. Morgan, very politely, and left. In came Anne, who was to grow up and become Mrs. Lindbergh. She said "How do you do, Mr. Morgan," very pleasantly, was told by the elderly financier that she'd grown amazingly, and then she excused herself and started for the stairs. At the foot she paused, fascinated eyes on his face. "Well, good-by, Mr. Morgan," she said. And again, half-way up, still gazing at his face. "Well—good-by, Mr. Morgan," and he replied, cordially, "Good-by, Anne."

Mrs. Morrow, so goes the story, was on tenter hooks. If only the child would go on, without making some awful reference to his nose! At last Anne disappeared from sight. And Mrs. Morrow, turning again to the tea table and picking up a cup, was horrified to hear herself saying,

"Mr. Morgan, do you take cream and sugar with your nose?"

"The Adventures of Frank Merriwell" is a picture that's guaranteed to make old-time movie goers feel older than ever. For three of the young men connected with it are House Peters, Jr., Wallace Reid, Jr. and Allan Hersholt, son of Jean.

ODDS AND ENDS . . . Al Jolson says he's not superstitious, but he wouldn't start his new picture, "Singing Kid," on the 13th . . . Freddy Bartholomew is spending his time getting acquainted with the Great Dane that will appear with him in "Little Lord Fauntleroy" . . . 20th Century-Fox will call Fred Allen's new picture "Tommy Hall Tonight" . . . They do say that Constance Bennett is being awfully nice to newspaper reporters, for a change, since her contract wasn't renewed . . . Patsy Kelly's to be starred . . . There'll be no more "Buck Rogers" on the air after December 16 . . . Leslie Howard's daughter, who broadcast with him so successfully last spring, may make a picture for Paramount.

Records of Achievements

More names, dates and records of achievements are carved in the rocky cliffs of the Dog river near Beirut, Syria, than in any other spot on earth. For the past 3,000 years this gorge has been a favorite pass for armies marching between Africa and the East and few conquerors, from the pharaohs of Egypt to the marshals of France, have failed to leave inscriptions on its rocks.

Human Sacrifice Still Prevalent in New Guinea

Sacrifice of human beings to propitiate the spirits of wind and water was witnessed by a British patrol officer in Papua, according to his report recently submitted in Port Moresby. The government has ordered that the rite cease. The officer said the rite is traditional. The victim may be either a man or a woman, and is always a member of another tribe, found alone in the swamps.

To the accompaniment of dancing, singing and the beating of drums, the victim is killed, and the body cut up "with full ceremony." Some parts of the body are eaten; others are preserved as trophies. The upper part of the skull is retained by the chief and the lower jawbone is the requisite of his second in command. With these trophies slung on corbels round the necks of their leaders the raiders believe they cannot lose.

Fairy Story Is Told on Danish Postage Stamps

A fairy story from the post office is very unusual, but the Danish post office is sending them out in millions. It is a hundred years since Hans Anderson was born, and running through the leaves in the books of stamps that bear his picture is the famous but sad story of the little girl who sold matches and struck the last three or four she had to try to keep warm before she died.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed. How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs is one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminators thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins. Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the system. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds. Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

CUTICURA SOAP

Cuticura Soap contains the delicately medicated, emollient properties of Cuticura which bring to the skin a condition of healthful cleanliness.

The Fox Who Had Lost His Tail.
A fox caught in a trap escaped with the loss of his brush. Thereafter feeling his life a burden through the ridicule to which he was exposed, he schemed to bring all other foxes into like condition with himself, that in the common loss he might better conceal his own deprivations. He assembled a good many foxes and publicly advised them to cut off their tails, saying they would not only look much better without them, but would get rid of the weight of the brush, which was a very great inconvenience. But one of them interrupting, his said: "If you had not yourself lost your tail, my friend, you would not thus counsel us"—Aesop's Fables.
