THANKSGIVING

For the splendor of sunsets,
Vast mirrored on the sea;
For the gold-fringed clouds, that curtain
Heaven's inner mystery;
For the molten bars of twilight
Where thought leans, glad, yet awed;
For the glory of the sunsets—
I thank thee, O my God!

For the earth and all its beauty,
The sky and all its light;
For the dim and soothing shadows,
That rest the dazzled sight;
For unfading fields and prairies,
Where sense invain has trod;
For the world's exhaustless beauty—
I thank thee, O my God!

For an eye of inward seeing,
A soul to know and love;
For these common aspirations
That our high heirship prove;
For the hearts that bless each other
Beneath thy smile, thy rod;
For the amarant saved from Eden—
I thank thee, O my God!

For the hidden scroll, o'erwritten
With one dear name adored;
For the heavenly in the human,
The spirit in the Word;
For the tokens of thy presence
Within, above, abroad;
For thine own great gift of being—
I thank thee, O my God! —Lucy Larcom.

EXPECT BIG BOOM IN PECOS FIELDS

C. R. Troxell States Upward Ascent of Prices Has Caused "Wildcatting" in Texas—New Wells.

"We can confidently expect the biggest boom in the near future that the oil world has ever known," said C. R. Troxell, at the Paso del Norte, just before leaving for Toyah in the Pecos Valley, where for several months as president of the Texas Petroleum Co. he has been drilling for oil in the Rustler hills. "This boom in oil is due soon," he continued. "Texas and Oklahoma oil is demanding $1 a barrel, and Ohio, Illinois and Indiana oil is bringing $2 per barrel, while the Pennsylvania oil is still higher. "The influence of the European oil fields is barred from the world's markets and will be for several years after the war closes because the production has been curtailed by neglect and destruction. The world's supply must therefore come from the United States and Mexico.

The demand for oil is increasing by leaps and bounds because of the new uses. The decline of the Cushing field in Oklahoma has been as remarkable as its sudden rise, and the American oil production has already passed its high point, and the decline of American production will be rapid unless new pools are discovered.

"The price of oil is, in the opinion of prominent financiers, bound to increase, some predicting that Texas and Oklahoma oil will be $2 a barrel in 18 months. In view of present conditions this is not an unreasonable statement. These conditions are certain to encourage and increase 'wildcatting' or explorations for new oil fields. The statement has been made that five new well rigs are coming in the trans-Pecos region between Fort Stockton and Roswell. Near the former point Bloom and McBride

THINGS ARE MOVING NICELY

The Pecos Valley of Texas Water Users Association About to Complete Its Work.

Mr. Geo. Tucker has been out to all the various systems making an inventory of the farms and business interests, and has completed this work as far up as Pecos, including the Biggs project. Others will be signed up before the end of the week and we hope to have all signed up in the coming week.

The secretary, E. D. Balcom, has just returned from a visit to Buena Vista, Imperial, Grandfalls and the Big Valley, with the petitions all signed by the resident land owners under these systems. To show the hearty cooperation of those living under these systems and earning their livelihood under these lands, they have all signed up to a man, there being no dissenting owners that we have been able to learn of.

The hearty cooperation of these people who are behind this move will win this proposition for them. From the efforts being done at Washington, we look for a great deal to be accomplished this coming winter, something definite on this upposition.

of Kansas and Oklahoma, have a rig, and the Calumet & Arizona Copper Company has let its contract to drill in the same locality.

Odham, the banker, is also securing leases in the oil lands.

"The drilling in the Pecos Valley so far has found very encouraging conditions establishing the fact that somewhere in the confines of the Pecos Valley large pools of oil exist; so far no commercial production has been attained. Capital from Oklahoma, Louisiana, New York and other eastern points is interested in that section, and it may be expected that within the next twelve months important results will be attained.

CARNEGIE LIBRARY NOTES

The culture of the individual as well as of the community is indicated by the books to be found in the home and in the public libraries.

The books in the Pecos library have, for the greater part, been the contribution of the citizens from their home libraries. As such, they reflect credit on the liberality and culture of those citizens whose interest has made the Pecos public library one of the city's proudest possessions. During no month in the history of our library has this interest and liberality been so great as during the month just passed.

Mrs. Jno. McBirney, who has been keenly interested in the library during her short stay among us, has, at her departure, contributed to the library many books on various subjects, besides histories, text books and numerous reference books, a complete set of Dickens novels. For this contribution the young people of the town will certainly rise and call her blessed.

A complete set of Bulwer's novels, ten volumes of the Literature of All Nations, numerous Art magazines, containing steel plate engravings of the best are of all naphotographic views of London, are Another friend of the library, whom we regret to lose, is Mrs. G. G. Nesbitt. Upon her departure for her new home in Shreveport, La., she left with the library many volumes of fiction and several books for reference work.

Mr. D. J. Moran, whose interest in the library began the day it was opened, has just presented a handsome set of Mulbach's Historical Novels, in 14 volumes, making a valuable addition to that department.

The following minor contributions were made during the month of October:

- Miss Leota Beauchamp.....1
- Miss Agnes Jeans,2
- C. S. McCarver1
- Mrs. Wied, magazines.
- Mrs. Tom has given a year's subscription to the Ladies' Home Journal.

Stoddard's Lectures are now on the shelves.

The library have purchased 49 new volumes since the last published report.

The circulation for October was 314; accessions, 135; Newly registered borrowers, 12; total borrowers, 426; total books, 1254.

MORE HOGS ARE SHIPPED

On last Monday F. W. Johnson drove his third car of hogs to the Texas & Pacific pens to be loaded for shipment to market.

The hogs were as fine a lot as were ever shipped from this section of the country. So fat were these hogs that the short drive of two miles resulted in the death of six of them from overheating.

64 head comprised this shipment, and they were consigned to Fort Worth.

SOLD HIS CALVES AND SHIPPED THEM.

Frank Kelton one of our prosperous young stockmen, sold his calves the past week to Chas. Price of Odessa, receiving $25 a head for them. Frank says that he sold his calves in 1910 at $5.55, and they were about as good as these were.

He shipped two cars—96 head—Sunday, to Mr. Price at Odessa.

CATTLE SHIPPED TUESDAY.

Five carloads of cattle were shipped Tuesday from Toyah Creek via the Pecos Valley Southern and Santa Fe railroads, to Carlsbad, New Mexico.

They were a nice bunch and belonged to C. M. Jones.

S. E. EBERSTADT TO LEAVE JEFFERSON.

Jefferson is to lose one of her most prominent, hustling and progressive citizens in the person of Mr. S. E. Eberstadt, secretary of the Jefferson Chamber of Commerce. He has accepted the secretaryship of the Pecos Chamber of Commerce.

Mr Eberstadt was raised here, and has a host of friends who are sorry to see him leave but wish him everything good in his new location. He has been secretary of our chamber of Commerce almost from its beginning and during this time has done a great deal of good for this town.

Mr. Eberstadt is a never ending worker when he gets hold of a proposition, never lets go until results are accomplished or the thing is clear beyond a possibility. He is a good writer and has special ability in being able to prepare descriptive and boosting literature for a town or country.

Mr. Eberstadt is an affable, congenial fellow and as long as he has lived here, and will go away with the best wishes of all our people.

Mr. Eberstadt has gained a statewide reputation as a commercial secretary and is now rated as one of the best in the state. He deserves the rating and will make good.

We predict that Jefferson people will hear more from Sam Eberstadt and that he will climb mighty close to the top in the Commercial secretary business in this state.—Jefferson Jimplecute.

COTTON AND EXPLOSIVES.

Some striking facts regarding cotton and its relation to the manufacture of high explosives were recently given by Sir William Ramsay. In the first place it should be explained that gun-cotton is really cotton waste carefully cleaned, and combed, dried and then soaked in one part nitric acid to three parts sulphuric acid. It is then dried and pressed into cakes. It is employed in the British navy both in a wet and a dry condition, the former, with 30 per cent of water added, being much safer to handle. Sir William Ramsay points out that there is no adequate substitute for cotton for propulsive explosives or ammunition. Other substances have been tried—wood, hemp, straw, and other materials with a woody fibre. But they have not the propulsive power of cotton. To propel as far with woody materials would entail the enlargement of the barrel of every gun and rifle.

The expenditure of ammunition in this war is unprecedented. At a conservative estimate, Germany requires 1,000 bales of cotton a day. A whole bale of cotton is required to fire one of the biggest guns, or for every 8,000 rounds of rifle ammunition. The total cotton stocks in Germany at the outbreak of the war was estimated at 250,000 tons, and this would have carried on the war for 250 days, or about eight months, had cotton, in the opinion of experts, been made contraband at the beginning of the war.

SLEEP REDUCES FEVER AND RELIEVES PAIN.

Women need at least Seven Hours of Good Uninterrupted Sleep. Spend Half Day in Bed.

The mother worn out with household duties should take as much sleep as possible. This is nature's greatest health restorer.

Keeping the children clean, seeing that the household runs on in a smooth manner, going to market and attending to all the sewing is not the easiest task in the world, and plenty of sleep will help her more than all the medicines that come in a bottle.

The girl in business who sometimes feels that the days will never come to an end is probably trying to work all day and keep up a social life in the evenings. The girl with an iron constitution can do this for a time, but eventually it will tell on her as much as it does on her weaker sister. Take half a day in bed now and then and simply relax the tired nerves and the body. Do not take an exciting novel and read it, but let your brain have a holiday as well as your body.

It is not necessary to stay at home from the office on a pretended plea of illness to take the required extra sleep—it can be done on an occasional Sunday morning, or the holidays that are bound to come from time to time, or on a Saturday afternoon.

Women need far more sleep than the average man. Many men can get along with four or five hours' sleep, arise and are perfectly refreshed. Not so with the average woman. She needs at the very least seven hours of good, uninterrupted sleep, and if she is a high-strung woman, she needs at least ten. Just as soon as you begin to steal the hours that you should be sleeping you will age about twice as rapidly that you would were you giving the allotted time to your physical being. Sleep reduces fever and it relieves pain. It helps nutrition, it courts beauty—and the loss of it leaves you a wreck that that nothing can repair.

Women the world over have a baneful habit of living inactive lives. They persuade themselves that they get plenty of exercise while doing housework, and when they go to bed at night they cannot sleep. Just for a change try a little exercise out of doors. Fill your lungs with fresh air, all they will hold, taking deep breathing exercises as you walk and when you go home see if you do not sleep better than you did the night before when you had not taken any fresh air into your starved lungs.

NOTICE OF FIRE CHIEF.

To the citizens of Pecos City:

The Pecos City fire department has adopted the following plan for a system of fire alarms, and have decided to divide the city into three wards.

Ward One means one tap of the fire bell, and this ward takes in all of that part of town east of Cypress street.

Ward Two is designated by two taps of the bell, and includes all of the town west of Cypress street.

The streets are numbered north and south, and, beginning at the T. & P. right of way, is First street, and one tap of the bell; the City fountain is second street and two taps; the fire house is third street, and three taps; the Carnegie library is fourth street and four taps; W. D. Cowan's residence is on fifth street and five taps; Jac Love's residence is on sixth street and six taps; John Hudson's residence is on seventh street and seven taps; Mrs. Elizabeth Newell's residence is on eighth street and eight taps; G. C. Parker's residence is on ninth street and nine taps; and so on through all these streets running from one to nine, and from one to nine taps of the bell means in both wards, one and two.

For instance: If Geo. Landrum's house is on fire; in turning in the alarm, as he lives west of Cypress street and on second street, call up central and just say: "Fire, Ward Two, Street Two. Or if Mrs. Jo Camp's residence is on fire, call up central, and say: "Fire; Ward One Street Five.

North of the track is Ward Three and a fire in that vicinity will need only three taps of the bell.

We desire that everyone familiarize themselves as to the street they live on in regard to the numbering from one to nine, as it is an easy matter to locate the ward, there being only the three, one, two and three.

When sending in an alarm first give the ward then the street. By this method we will never get lost as to where a fire is. This is for your own protection and this is the reason we wish to impress upon you the necessity of knowing just on what street you live.

LOCATING THE TROUBLE.

When one is suffering from back-ache, lumbago, biliousness, sharp pains, sore muscles, and stiff joints, it is not always easy to locate the source of the trouble, but nine times out of ten it can be traced to over-worked, weakened or diseased kidneys. Foley Kidney Pills have benefited thousands of sufferers. For sale by Pecos Drug Co.—Advt.

Two taps of the bell after the general alarm means that the fire is out.

We have one of the best volunteer fire departments in West Texas and every member is ready to answer all calls and do it quick, and the City Council has been very liberal in buying apparatus and equipment. We have the best equipped department of any town of our size in Texas. If you doubt this, just call around and see for yourself.

We have a 40-horse power gasoline engine and pump combined, that is always ready to go, an automobile hose truck that carries 1000 feet of hose and two ladders; an automobile chemical truck that carries one hundred gallons of chemical and also ladders, and we have reel cart that carries 900 feet of hose.

CHIEF FIRE DEPT., Pecos City, Texas.

HOW TO PREVENT CROUP.

It may be a surprise to you to learn that in many cases croup can be prevented. Mrs. H. M. Johns, Elida, Ohio, relates her experience as follows: "My little boy is subject to croup. During the past winter I kept a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house, and when he began to have that croupy cough, I would give him one or two doses of it and it would break the attack. I like it better for the children than any other cough medicine because children take it willingly and it is safe and reliable." Obtainable everywhere.—Advt.

CALOMEL DYNAMITES

A SLUGGISH LIVER

Crashes into sour bile, making you sick and you lose a day's Work.

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a 50 cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel today you'll be sick and nauseated tomorrow; besides, it may salivate you, while, if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it.—Adv.

OUR PUBLIC FORUM

R. C. Duff On Cotton As Contraband.

Hon. R. C. Duff, one of the highest authorities on International law in the nation and one of the most capable citizens in the United States, when asked to investigate the exporting of cotton and interpret the laws of nations on this subject for the American plowman, said in part:

"Article 23 of the Declaration of London reads as follows: 'The following may not be declared contraband of war: (1) raw cotton, wool, silk, etc.' Great Britain is not only a signatory of the Declaration of London, but in fact called the conference and insisted upon the inclusion of raw cotton on the list of absolute non-contraband. Under this declaration, which was subscribed to by all the maritime nations, we have a right absolutely to ship cotton, not only to neutral ports of Europe, but to Germany and Austria themselves. Humanity shudders at the thought of the death of the splendid Americans who went down on the Lusitania, but humanity would have more cause for shuddering if it could have presented to it in some similarly striking and dramatic way the woe, sorrow and suffering that will be occasioned to multiplied thousands of men, women and children in the Southern states as a result of cotton being forced down to starvation prices.

The reason why cotton does not command 18 or 20 cents per pound is simply because Great Britain has a naval strangle hold on our shipments and, therefore, on the world supply. England sends her ships of war out into the open seas, captures American cotton, no matter to whom the same may be destined, carries it into British ports, sets up prize courts of her own nomination, which prize courts, of course, are operating in her favor and which, under such circumstances, after whatever delay they elect to impose, assess the damages of the American shipper at whatever price they see fit and then, after having by such process 'bought' our cotton, she avails herself of the extraordinary high prices existing on the continent of Europe, produced in part by her diversion of our shipments, to resell it at a profit. The American shipper has no recourse except to the government. The acts of Great Britain referred to, according to the well-recognized principle of International law constitute war against the United States.

This grievance is now of many months standing and the South is about to bring to market another great crop of cotton. Under such circumstances one would expect that our government, without prompting, would know perfectly well how to deal with acts on the part of the British government, amounting to warfare against our trade and country.

It is not necessary for us to resort to war against Great Britain in retaliation. A simple, adequate and obvious remedy would be for the president to advise Great Britain that unless she respects the law of nations as regards our foreign commerce, he will call on Congress to adopt a resolution forbidding the exportation of arms and munitions of war to foreign countries

The Voice of Now

It is the present, the today, the NOW in which we are interested. Shakespeare wisely says:

"Tomorrow never yet On any living mortal rose or set."

It is the printed page which deals most intimately and with the greatest detail in the movements of the present. It is THE VOICE OF NOW proclaiming to the world the things that are happening today. The Government of the United States is NOW gravely concerned in certain aspects of the war in Europe and has had trust on it several serious international problems which are NOW in process of solution. The American farmer is NOW interested in this titanic struggle, for his interests are being affected by it today and will be tomorrow, and he wants to keep in close touch with it NOW.

EVERYBODY is interested in the cotton crop from the time of its planting to the days of its harvesting and marketing. They want to know "the NOW" in all that pertains to the great Southern staple, they want to know "the NOW" of all other agricultural markets, the latest in modern farming, the facts of the warehousing problem, and all else that pertains to the progress of the times in every theater of life.

The tens of thousands of men and women who know the Semi-Weekly Farm News know it is "THE VOICE OF NOW," telling in direct and positive tones of what is going on at home and abroad.

 The game laws are not worrying the inhabitants of Europe.

 Thanksgiving's gone. The wide eyes of the youngster are now glued on Christmas and Santa Claus. To be a boy! "Backward, turn backward—" Oh, what's the use?
 Three births were reported in last week's issue of The Times. Verily, prospects are good for the 1916 Better Babies contest.
 Competition is the life of trade, we've heard. But when its a revival against a movie show, we are a little afraid the rule don't work.

 The breath of Amarillo is blamed for our cold spells. Turn its head the other way and this section would then be a land of perpetual summer.
 One Billion Dollars—the program for National defense proposes to expend this sum in the next five years for our protection. If it be the means of averting such horrors as are now being enacted in Europe it will be money well spent, and the individual citizen cannot be taxed too much as his share towards the fund. It's cheap at half the price.
 A man in Brooklyn, taking the negative side of an argument in favor of frequent bathing, wound up with the following: "I am 89 years old and have not had a bath for a number of years. The people from where I come seldom bathe, and as a race are considered unusually strong." No doubt this argument left the affirmative without a plausible defense.
 Pay your poll tax and then cast your ballot. Failure to do these things not only forfeits your rights as a citizen, but also your privilege to cuss the administration.
 Obregon, the one-armed hero, as some of the dailies address him, has been making some very modest (?) remarks relative to what he is going to do to Villa, is hugging the Arizona border closer than it seems necessary. Probably when Pancho makes his final dash for the U. S. he'll be handy to head him off.

 If the inhabitants of this section haven't enough sand and grit in their craws for all worldly needs, it is because they didn't hold their mouths open long enough yesterday.
 The Ben Franklin Casualty Co. of Chicago is circulating a bulletin containing the following clever suggestion that all may profit by:
 "Start a saloon in your own home and be the only customer (you'll have no license to pay). Go to your wife and give her two dollars to buy a gallon of whiskey, and remember that there are 69 drinks in a gallon. Buy your drinks from no one else but your wife, and by the time the first gallon is gone she will have eight dollars to put in the bank and two dollars to start business again.
 Should you live 10 years and buy all your booze from her and then die with snakes in your boots, she will have enough money to bury you decently, educate your children, buy a house and lot, marry a decent man, and quit thinking about you entirely."

SENATOR OWEN URGED TO BE CANDIDATE.
 A quiet boom to make Senator Robert L. Owen, of Oklahoma, a nominee for vice-president, has recently been launched by his friends in the senate at Washington.
 The senator is one of the most popular men in Washington. The present vice-president, Mr. Marshall, has expressed himself as having no desire for renomination and should Owen consider the nomination, he will have a clear field.
FAVORABLE IMPRESSIONS.
 A meeting was held at Laredo, recently, between Governor Ferguson and President Carranza of Mexico. When terminated, there were expressions of good feeling between the men that composed the conference. There were many points of interest talked over regarding the issues of the war in Mexico, but all was of apparent good feeling. Reports of the said meeting have not been fully given out.
BE YE ALSO ON THE WATCH.
 A high wind and dust storm began yesterday at about 4 a. m., the wind rising from the northwest and continuing until the afternoon.
 At times the wind was so strong and the dust so blinding that one hardly knew where he was going.
 It has been reported that the fish were blown from the river in large bunches and the snakes, in order to save their lives had to wrap themselves around the mesquite bushes, and that they killed all the rabbits that sought shelter under said bushes.
 Wonderful, wonderful things, how they do happen!
CHINA UNWILLING TO ABANDON NEUTRALITY.
 Proposition Has Not Been Put Before Government Formally, Minister Says.
 Peking, Nov. 23.—The informal suggestion of the entente powers that China join the allies has not been well received by President Yuan Shi Kai, who is not willing to abandon neutrality and sacrifice German good will. Japan apparently has not participated in the suggestion, which is believed to be of British origin.
 Visiting the foreign office, Eki Hioki, Japanese minister to China inquired whether China sought admission to enter the entente or was invited to enter by any entente power. Lu Cheung-Haiang, the Chinese foreign minister, replied that China did not seek admission and had not received any formal overture to ally herself with the entente powers as far as he knew.
 Virtually all Chinese papers are printing announcements of a definite postponement of the change in China's form of government to a monarchy. Predictions are freely made by the press, without official contradictions, that the republican form of government will not be abandoned during the continuance of the war.

HUSBAND RESCUED DESPAIRING WIFE
After Four Years of Discouraging Conditions, Mrs. Bullock Gave Up in Despair. Husband Came to Rescue.
 Catron, Ky.—In an interesting letter from this place, Mrs. Bettie Bullock writes as follows: "I suffered for four years, with womanly troubles, and during this time, I could only sit up for a little while, and could not walk anywhere at all. At times, I would have severe pains in my left side.
 The doctor was called in, and his treatment relieved me for a while, but I was soon confined to my bed again. After that, nothing seemed to do me any good. I had gotten so weak I could not stand, and I gave up in despair.
 At last, my husband got me a bottle of Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I commenced taking it. From the very first dose, I could tell it was helping me. I can now walk two miles without its tiring me, and am doing my work."
 If you are all run down from womanly troubles, don't give up in despair. Try Cardui, the woman's tonic. It has helped more than a million women, in its 50 years of wonderful success, and should surely help you, too. Your druggist has sold Cardui for years. He knows what it will do. Ask him. He will recommend it. Begin taking Cardui today.

MA AND HER AUTO RIDE.
 Before we take an auto ride Pa says to Ma, "Mf dear,
 Now just remember I don't need assistance from the rear;
 If you will just keep still back there and hold in check your fright I'll take you where you want to go and get you back all right.
 Remember that my hearing's good and also I not blind,
 And I can drive this car without suggestions from behind."
 Ma promises that she'll keep still, then off we gayly start,
 But soon she notices ahead a peddler and his cart.
 "You'd better toot your horn," she says, "to let him know we're near.
 He might turn out," and Pa replies "Just shriek at him my dear."
 And then he adds: "Some day some guy will make a lot of dough By putting horns on tonneau seats for women folks to blow."
 Alittle further on Ma says: "He signaled for a turn."
 And Pa says: "did he?" in a tone thats hot enough to burn.
 "Oh, there's a boy on roller skates"
 Ma cries. "Now, do go slow,
 I'm sure he doesn't see our car."
 And Pa says, "I dunno,
 I think I don't need glasses yet, but really it may be
 That I am blind and cannot see what's in front of me."
 If Pa should speed the car a bit, some rigs to hurry past,
 Ma says: "Now, do be careful, you are driving much too fast."
 An' all the time she's pointing out the dangers of the street
 An' keeps him posted on the roads where street cars he will meet.
 Last night when we got safely home Pa sighed and said, "Ma dear, I'm sure we all enjoyed the ride you gave us from the rear."—Ex.

HOW TO PREVENT COUGHS
 It may be a surprise to you to learn that in many cases coughs can be prevented. Mrs. H. M. Jones, Elida, Ohio, relates her experience as follows: "My little boy is subject to cough. During the past winter I kept a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house, and when he began to have that cough, I would give him one or two doses of it and it would break the attack. I like it better for the children than any other cough medicine because children take it willingly and it is safe and reliable. Obtainable everywhere.—Adv.

DISTRESS IN THE STOMACH
 There are many people who have a distress in the stomach after meals. It is due to indigestion and easily remedied by taking one of Chamberlain's Tablets after meals. Mrs. Henry Padghan Victor, N. Y., writes: "For some time I was troubled with headache and distress in my stomach after meals, also by constipation. About six months ago I began taking Chamberlain's Tablets. They regulated the action of my bowels and the headache and other annoyances ceased in a short time." Obtainable everywhere.—Adv.

The Broken Coin

A Story of Mystery and Adventure By EMERSON HOUGH From the Scenario by Grace Cunard

(Copyright, 1915, By Wright A. Patterson)

Novelized From the Motion Picture Drama of the Same Name. Produced by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

SYNOPSIS.

Kitty Gray, newspaper woman, finds in a curio shop half of a broken coin, the mutilated inscription on which arouses her curiosity and leads her, at the order of her managing editor, to go to the principality of Gretzhoffen to piece out the story suggested by the inscription. She is followed, and on arrival in Gretzhoffen her adventures while chasing the secret of the broken coin begin.

FOURTH INSTALLMENT

CHAPTER XV.

If Your Majesty Please.

In full view of the spectators, who now had left the dancing floor and gathered in groups at a respectful distance from royalty, Kitty received the envelope from royalty, Kitty received the envelope from the messenger—the same packet which she had herself sent to the palace that morning for delivery at midnight.

She did this with a fine air of indifference, for she felt quite sure that success now had met all her plans; nor did the outward appearance of the packet afford any reason to suspect otherwise.

Yet, even as she took the envelope in her hand, there came to her a sharp conviction that something was wrong. It had a strange lightness—it did not seem quite the same as when she herself had sealed it that morning. Hastily, she opened the envelope, her lips compressed. It was empty!

Yes, the mysterious coin was gone. Entrusted to the safest messenger she could find; sent to the king himself; received by the king's trusted official; guarded, as was to be supposed, every moment of the time since it had left her hands—none the less, the coin had disappeared as though some specter hand had abstracted it.

The blank book of surprise which came to her face was something not to be mistaken. King Michael frowned. "What is this, mademoiselle—where we made the subject of some sport? How now?"

Kitty stood regarding first one, then the next of the faces about her. On the countenance of Count Frederick she read only chagrin and surprise equal to her own. There was no trace of guilty knowledge there—she was sure of that. Then another hand had come into the game! Some other mind also was interested in the mysterious coin of Gretzhoffen.

"What then, mademoiselle?" demanded Michael, himself not yet so fully advised as others regarding the nature of this packet which had been intended for him. "What was it that you were so good as to intend sending us?"

Kitty dared not answer this direct question. She concluded quickly that it would be far safer to add as little as possible to the number of those who knew the full story of the traveling coin.

"Your majesty," said she, turning upon him so dazzling a smile as would have made any man forget all else. "It was nothing! It was but a small favor I would have sent your majesty, to show the acknowledgment of my own country, since your majesty has done such honor to me tonight. Perhaps someone in my humble menage has been unfaithful—if so, it was but small loss after all. If your majesty will forget it and give me a few added days of grace, I will explain—I will try again, I hope with greater fortune."

Michael was ready enough to agree to anything which would bring back to his society this dazzling young creature who stood beside him.

"Very well, mademoiselle," said he, "as you like."

A certain relief was felt by all concerned, as now he turned and made a sign to the leader of the orchestra, who stood, baton poised.

"With us, excellenza?" The king offered his arm. The king and the young American, of whose origin he knew and apparently cared to know, nothing whatever, were the observed of all. Michael at least could dance, and as for Kitty, she was an American girl.

As they swept on in the evolutions of the dance, Kitty caught sight of the dark face of Count Sachio.

That she had earned this man's dislike, or at least, had deeply hurt his masculine vanity, Kitty was well enough aware.

As for King Michael, he was extraordinarily sober; which, in his case, was equivalent to saying that he was not extraordinarily happy.

Count Frederick evaded the throngs about the king. Unwillingly he turned away his eyes from the beautiful figure of the young American as she danced. He never had seen a woman who thrilled him thus. He himself did not dance. This was no evening of pleasure for him. He had other plans.

Count Frederick started toward the door before a second thought came to his mind. If there should for any reason, king's good graces. Because, revolution or no revolution, the throne of Gretzhoffen was not worth having unless his owner had both halves of this missing coin. Frederick cared not to be a penniless king, and only the united coin could give any king of Gretzhoffen actual wealth and actual power.

The murmurs of the people, vague, indefinite, had from time to time been audible at the open door of the grand entrance.

"Why do we starve while they dance?"

They began to edge towards the palace steps, a dark, dense mass. The soldiery were not eager to oppose them with steel. The soldiers were themselves of the people. Moreover, they had had small cause for loyalty to the king and court of Gretzhoffen. They were ill paid and ill governed.

The people lacked leadership. Count Frederick had hinged his own plans of action upon one event—the public disgrace of the king—and that event had not occurred.

He frowned as he stood looking out over the dense mass which filled the streets. Even he began to feel, almost in spite of himself, some sort of a vague pity for these less fortunate ones.

Still over the voice of the strings and reeds rose the low mutterings of the mob, strange to hear, impossible to describe.

King Michael heard this sound. All heard it, this voice of the people, as yet undecided. The king's face paled—terror smote home upon his soul. The courage of his usual alcoholic stimulant being tonight denied him, his weak nerves gave way.

He saw Count Frederick, now returning to the salon, from the great entrance door. The latter saw the terror on his monarch's face, and recognized on the instant the opportunity for himself to strengthen his own position in the king's good graces.

"Your majesty," exclaimed the astute nobleman, now advancing and offering his hand, "forgive me! I was in fault today in my conduct toward your majesty. 'Twas but a mad jest of my own. Give me but opportunity to prove my loyalty to your person and our country, and you shall not find me lacking. The people are about us—yes, it is true—there is danger of revolt, of revolution. I shall not attempt to deny that; but give me leave to handle them, your majesty, and I promise you safety. I promise you to send them away.

"Come to Me Tomorrow at My Hunting Lodge."

"You are indeed my friend, after all, Count Frederick!" exclaimed Michael. "What you counsel seems wise. Use your own discretion, but disperse them—disperse them."

Count Frederick, hastened to address the people, who now halted, uncertain as to what move next to make. His own agents had been among the people, and had made known his own plans. Yet here was their master, evidently, for some reason, disinclined to give the word for actual outbreak, and now counselling calm consideration, dispersal.

"My good people," began he, as he stood at the head of the great stairway above them—"his majesty thanks you for the honor you have done him stirring days. He has planned this great ball in order that you might see the equanimity of his own soul in these events, so difficult alike for a king and his people to endure. Therefore, remain loyal to your king, whom I represent before you. The ballroom soon will be cleared. Let the streets also be cleared. Go to your homes. Wait, and depend on us who have your true welfare at heart."

There surged up to him now the figures of more than one man, some in uniform, from places in the throng, in the street. "What is it—what is wrong—why do we not have the order to march on the palace?" they demanded eagerly.

"All's wrong," whispered the Count them. "For some reason, best known to himself, the king is not drunk tonight, but sober. His people are not turned against him—on the contrary, they seem to respect him more than they have done for months—there would be division among them if we started a new revolt now."

"Here, take this gold, my friends," he added, and stripped himself of some considerable sums he had brought with him. "It is all I have Give it to those who need it most. Take them away from here—let them go to the drinking places. See that these places are filled now, and that the toast shall be 'Long live King Michael!'"

"We may not yet cry 'Long live King Frederick!'"

The nobleman shook his head. "Not yet," said he. "They still shall cry 'Long live King Michael.' That will do for the time at least."

Count Frederick returned through the great entryway and rejoined King Michael where he stood. "Your majesty," said he, "your people are returning to their homes."

"Frederick, my friend, my savior!" The weak king, his features working, grasped the hands of the stronger man. "You tell me they will disperse!"

"Even now they do so, your majesty."

Kitty, by this time somewhat forgotten in the king's vacillating mind, stood looking from one to the other of these two. As she read the situation, it carried something of defeat to her. An instant ago she herself had dominated the scene. Otherwise now; for Count Frederick gave her a somewhat sarcastic smile. It was the time of his triumph and of her discomfiture.

"Mademoiselle is distraite?" said he. "She is not dancing—she will return to her hotel, perhaps? What can one do for mademoiselle?"

Kitty turned toward him calmly. "If I might ask one of you gentlemen to secure my car for me?" Count Frederick smiled and bowed as he turned away.

But Kitty was not so soon to leave the great salon of the palace that night. She passed toward the entrance slowly, caught in the crush and confusion of others who were crowding out in the fiasco of the much-vaunted black and white ball. For the time, she found herself in the shelter of a great column, where she was willing enough to pause. As she halted here she heard voices just behind her—one deep voice, which it seemed to her she had surely heard before.

"It is a pity that the affair did not come off tonight, your excellency," she heard another whisper hoarsely. "We have everything in our own hands now. I have all the plans of the fortifications, the maps of the avenues, the specifications for each street crossing. It would have been entirely simple for the army of Grahoffen to march through this ramshackle city as it liked."

"Yes!" broke in the deep voice which haunted Kitty's memory, "I suppose so; but what would we do if we could not pay our troops the next day? How much better off than Gretzhoffen would then be our own case? No, Frederick is right in his main plan. The throne alone is worth nothing—it is worthless in his kingdom or in our kingdom, or in any other—a poverty-stricken kingship is no business for any man. Why have you not a diagram of the treasure's burial place—with that, now, the matter would be somewhat different tonight."

"Hush!" she heard the other voice whisper. Apparently warned, at least, by their suspicious, they moved away, although Kitty shifted her own position so that her presence was not known.

Was it Count Sachio's voice she had heard—was he, the king's friend, Count Frederick's friend, the worst traitor of all, and was he also plotting for the restoration of the two lost bits of the Gretzhoffen coin?

"Which way should she turn now? To Frederick? Impossible. To Michael? Equally impossible.

The two men whose talk she had overheard passed now from behind the pillar toward the interior of the palace. Apparently they were known there and welcome, for surely they were not stopped by any of the king's guards or chamberlains, and Kitty herself, equally well identified, passed readily just behind them.

Kitty needed but one glance at the man she trailed to see it was indeed Count Sachio whose voice she heard.

The men passed now to a little room at one side of the main hall, which traversed that portion of the palace. A window and a door, both lightly curtained, opened from the hall within. Kitty, as she drew up, could see them now—Sachio, and one whose identity she did not know.

"Listen now," she heard Count Sachio's voice they felt themselves quite safe from intrusion; "listen, while I tell you what is the real key to all these matters. It is this document, bearing on the missing treasure of old King Michael. He died rich, but like a miser, he hid his gold. He left a clue, yes—I have told you all of that. That clue was the broken coin.

"That coin was the same as a deed in the old days. All transfers of realty, as you remember, were made on parchment, written in pen, and the parchment always was cut in two pieces on a wavy line. The seller kept half the parchment, the buyer the other half. And always it ran 'This indenture witnesseth: The indenture was the wavy line which divided the parchment; and the parchment was proof of the transaction, so each holder held half the proof."

"Now, this indenture of the broken coin of Gretzhoffen witnesseth that Michael the First had transferred to his people his treasure—their treasure—he kept half the deed for himself, or for the man who was to stand for himself. In some way he meant to give the people the other half—that is to say, the other half of the indenture went somewhere, no one to this day can guess where—except myself!"

"These papers of old told of the torture chamber somewhere under the fort. Our maps cover that, but they do not mark the spot of the treasure's hiding. Only the old coin restored, indenture to indenture—the one-half to the other—ever can settle that."

"Now, look here, my friend," Count Sachio held up before him a little object, which caused Kitty to start where she stood.

It was the king's coin! Yes, there was the half coin which she with her own hands had sent for delivery to the king on the dancing floor at midnight that night—and Count Sachio, by means which he only knew, had been the thief! It now was plain to her. Here was one more claimant for the treasure of the dead king of Gretzhoffen.

Count Sachio went on. "This is one-half only of the coin. Alone, it does not serve. I know well enough where lies the other half. Within the next twenty-four hours I will have it—I will have both halves within my own hands. Then, my friend, we shall see what we shall see! Events will happen which will surprise this part of the world, at least."

"Come to me tomorrow at my hunting lodge in the forest, at the edge of the neutral lands. That is the rendezvous of the other half of the coin. I shall seek a messenger to secure it. I know well enough how. Have our men there, for I, Count Sachio, will be prepared to show them all the reading of a riddle which has puzzled both these kingdoms for so long."

Had Kitty remained a moment or so longer she might have seen what the conspirators themselves, anxious as they were, did not see. The face of a strange man peered in at the window of the room which they occupied. He, too, could see now all that Kitty had seen, although he had not been noticed by the latter at the time of her departure.

The grand salon by this time was well cleared, and Kitty made her way rapidly toward the main exit. Suddenly she found herself face to face with a little group made up of the king and notables of his court. They, too, for a time had been absent from the grand salon—apparently for a certain purpose. King Michael now did not lack the stimulus of wine. "Our fair young American again!" he exclaimed, as he came. "What, mademoiselle has not even yet departed?"

"It is my fault, your majesty," said Count Frederick. "I promised to secure for her a car, but for the time I lost sight of her. The confusion has been so great that it has been difficult to find service of the usual sort."

An attendant of the palace escorted her to her car—willing enough to conclude the events of the day.

CHAPTER XVI.

Another seeks the coin. Debarred by his own station in life from participating in any such function as the state ball, the faithful Roleau had contented himself as best might be by remaining at the hotel until the return of his mistress. By morning, as soon as he got word of her presence in her apartments, he sent word that he was in readiness to be at her commands.

"Roleau," she said to him when they met. "Listen. We have still more to do. There is still another journey across the desert."

"Whither, excellenza?" inquired Roleau.

"To the hunting lodge of the Count Sachio—the same place where you and I took the part of two horse thieves, Roleau!"

A few moments later the two, once more provided with a speedy motor car, were on their way down the avenues of the capital.

"I think it might be well to drive past the two palaces," said Kitty Gray. "We might pick up some news there. First, let us go to the palace of Count Frederick—perhaps he is not out this early."

But, early though it was, Count Frederick was astir—was indeed ready for the street apparently, as was also his guest, Count Sachio. Even as Kitty's car swept by the palace front they saw the count and Sachio step into their own car, which waited for them.

"Quick!" said Kitty, sinking back deeper in the seat that she might not be observed. "Drive around the block. Don't let them see me." She motioned also to Roleau to conceal himself as best he might. Their own car, swinging around the corner, gave way for the vehicle of Count Frederick, which sped on down the street.

Once more, still undaunted, Kitty directed her own car to pass around the block and stop in front of Count Frederick's palace. This was done in the nick of time; for now, as they passed at lower speed, in order to have time for such examination as they cared to make of the exterior, they saw a man in some sort of official uniform walking from the front door of the driveway for the side entrance of the great building.

"Stop!" cried Kitty to Roleau—"I know that man—that is a friend of Sachio! I saw the two of them together last night. It was to him Sachio showed the coin. I heard him tell this man where the missing half was. Roleau, that man has gone to get Count Frederick's half of the coin!"

"Certainly, excellenza," said the stolid Roleau. "Count Sachio also means to put this and that together, does he not? What can we do? Is your excellency game to try one more entrance into Count Frederick's house?"

"Yes," said Kitty. "Come—let us see if we can trace where this man is going."

Once more these two presented themselves at the door of Count Frederick's abode, and were admitted without question.

The two passed without detention through the main hall to the passage-way which Kitty knew so well. They followed down this narrow hall, suspecting that the destination of the man whom they had seen about to enter was none less than Count Frederick's little bedchamber.

Their suspicion was correct. Even as they approached they heard someone in the room who had arrived before themselves. Roleau, followed closely by Kitty, stepped up to the door—peered in, and gave one mighty bound.

In the powerful hands of Roleau, the stranger, taken by surprise, was helpless. Roleau clapped a hand over his mouth, another to his throat, and held him until he himself made the sign of submission. "Silence!" hissed Roleau. "Don't move—one word of alarm and I will end you!"

"What are you doing here?" demanded Kitty virtuously—"what do you seek—tell me!"

The man, gone sullen now, looked from one to the other, and knowing well enough what failure would mean for him, refused to speak. "Well, whatever it was," said he at length, "I have not found it. At least, you came too soon."

"I will tell you, excellenza," said Roleau at length. "It will do us no special good to have him join yonder party of which we know. I will tie him up, if your excellency will allow me."

Accordingly he did bind the official of Grahoffen neck and hands. "Quick!" said Kitty. Stealing away silently they left the door locked and took with them the key.

CHAPTER XVII.

At Count Sachio's Lodge. Such speed did Roleau manage to get out of his own car that Kitty and he arrived at the hunting lodge of Count Sachio well in advance of all others bound thither that evening morning.

Kitty and Roleau moved about very much as they pleased after their entry. It pleased them best to hide themselves in a small room adjacent to the main hall where they feared the main events of the day would pass. The connection between these two rooms, and behind the curtains in the small room they feared they could be sufficiently concealed.

But there were others who had an interest in the events to come in the hunting lodge of Count Sachio that morning. The tangled skein of the mysterious coin was expanding, drawing in yet others. Roleau had Kitty and Roleau secreted themselves before they heard footsteps under the window of the gallery which ran along that side of the chalet. They wondered who might be the author of what his purpose.

It was somewhat later before they heard the mingling of voices and the sound of footsteps.

"Rudolph!" exclaimed Count Sachio. "Why has he not come? What has gone wrong?"

But none could explain to him why Rudolph had not arrived—nor at the time did either Kitty or Roleau know who or what Rudolph might be, though, as a matter of fact, it was he whom they themselves had left behind and foot in Count Frederick's palace. Nor could any of these present know that before this time Count Frederick himself, returning to his palace, had found yonder intruder bound and left helpless, in his private apartment. The man had made such excuses as he could by declaring that he had been robbed and thrown in the room by a ruffian, as Count Frederick, finding on the floor of his own apartment a tiny handkerchief, had needed some more than one guess as to who that young man had been.

But as to all these side scenes which had been enacted, Count Sachio was altogether ignorant. Whereas he now walked up and down now claiming his own doubts. His attention was obvious enough to Kitty as she peered through the veiled curtain and strained her ears to learn what he was saying.

Even as she stood intent on what was going on in the main room, Roleau close at her side, also absorbed, the author of the stealthy footfall in the gallery below the window crept, silently up and looked in upon those who in turn spied upon others.

"So, she is not alone!" he whispered to himself. "That man with her will make a different proposition. Be tween them, they will take away from Count Sachio what I want for myself!" He slipped in now from the gallery through the open window. Seized as a cat, he crept up inch by inch upon the two watchers.

"I tell you," cried out Count Sachio, crashing his fist down upon the table, "there is no such thing as explaining a thing like this! This failure can never be justified. I sent Rudolph to get the coin—he knew what it was—he was not suspected by anyone—I told him precisely what to do. Has he done it? No. And here he waits. It is something I shall not forget."

These loud words caught Kitty's attention. She pressed forward eagerly, her figure still half shrouded. Her own senses, strained as they were to catch what was going on in the main room, were less regardful of what was going on immediately about her. The silent man who had spied upon them crept in now from behind them. Slowly, deliberately, he raised his right hand above the unsuspecting girl. In that hand he held poised a murderous-looking blade.

On Woman's Suffrage.

Equal rights do not imply that both sexes should engage promiscuously in the same pursuits, but rather that each sex should discharge those duties which are adapted to its physical constitution and are sanctioned by the canons of society.

The insistence on a right of participation in active political life is undoubtedly calculated to rob woman of all that is amiable and gentle, tender and attractive; to rob her of her innate grace of character, and give her nothing in return but masculine boldness and effrontery.

When I deprecate female suffrage, I am pleading for the dignity of woman, I am contending for her honor, I am striving to perpetuate those peerless prerogatives inherent in her sex, those charms and graces which exalt woman and make her the ornament and the coveted companion of man.

Though woman is debarr'd from voting she brings into the world and rocks the cradle of the nation's future citizens. She rears and molds the character of those who are to be the future rulers and statesmen; the heroes and benefactors of the country. Surely this is glory enough for her.

Talks With the Boys

By J. L. HARBOUR, IN THE VISITOR.

The Boy in the "University of Hard Knocks."

Benjamin Franklin, that man of keen perceptions, had a way of putting things rather tersely. This was true when he said that the best thing for a young fellow was a "good kick out of doors." It is easy to understand that he meant by this that throwing a young chap on his own resources he would develop them to such a capacity as he had to make himself self-reliant.

It was one way of saying that it is a good thing for a boy to enter the "University of Hard Knocks." That is the university from which most of the successful men in the world have been graduated from. It is never a good thing for a boy to have too easy a time of it. The boy in a soft snap position will never be likely to develop the best that is in him.

He is not eager to put himself to the test. One of the chums of my boyhood is now one of the most successful men I know. He is a man of large wealth and wide influence for good. I distinctly remember that when we were boys together in a little country town in the Middle West this man was always ready for any hard task.

When we spend as much money advertising Christ as we do for advertising cigarettes the great hurrying throng of humanity will stop and listen to the news of the Master. Dean Williams said that Jesus was a past master in the art of advertising; that the apostle John was a great editor and that there was no better reporter than the Evangelist Luke.

Senator Money of Mississippi once asked an old colored man what breed of chickens he considered the best, and he replied: "All kinds has merits. De white one is easiest to find, but the black one is easiest to hide after you find them." "Do you want the court to understand that you refuse to renew your dog license?" "Yes, sir, but—" "Wen want no 'but'. You must renew the license or he fined. You now the license expired on January, don't you?" "Yessah; so did the dog, sah."

If you want to know where to find something good to eat, look in the Pecos Times. I have heard him say that nothing stirred his fighting blood more than to be told he could not do this, that or the other. I remember once that some one charged him with inability to do a thing in particular his dark eyes would flash and he would say "I'll show you if I can't."

I once heard him say that he did not believe that he would ever have succeeded in life if it had not been for some of his failures. He said that they sort of made him mad and urged him on to greater effort. He did not take defeat very kindly, and he would not allow it to keep him down very long. I feel sure that he had the "never give up" spirit of the man who was the author of these stirring lines that every boy would do well to remember:

"Never give up; for the wisest is holdest. Knowkng that Providence minggles the cup; And all of the maxims, the best is the oldest. In the stern watchword of "Never give up." Be firm; one constant element of luck, Is genuine, solid, old Teutonic pluck. Stick to your aim; the mongrel's

But only crowbars loosens the bulldog's grip; Small though he looks, the jaw that never yields Drags down the bellowing monarch of the fields.

Now, boys, there is an admonition of pluckiness that it will pay you to keep in mind. The world of our day has no use for the "I can't boy." It never did have any use for him. He has always been a failure in life. He will always be a failure.

Not long ago the pastor of the church to which I belong told me that the mother of a boy of sixteen, whom we both knew, had been to him to talk about her boy. She said that there was no such thing as budging him from a thing once his mind was made up to do it.

"Good," said the pastor, to the great surprise of the troubled mother. "That is a fine trait in the lad. You should be glad of it. Such boys make the strongest men. They prove that they are not a bit weak of will. The thing to do is simply to get him to do the thing that is right. Don't try to lessen the fine and strong spirit of resolution. Simply try to guide it straight. The boy who cannot be budged is the kind of a boy that the very strongest of men are made. I am glad to know that Edward has so much pluck. I shall tell him so the next time I see him."

The world of today needs nothing more than it needs boys who have graduated from the "University of Hard Knocks." There are men who are not afraid to undertake arduous tasks of the world. They are the men who are bringing the great things to pass. I hope that every boy who reads this will want to join their ranks when the years of manhood have come. Here are some lines that are very expressive and ought to be a source of inspiration to all boys:

"I like a man who faces what he must With step triumphant and a heart of cheer; Who fights the daily battle without fear; Sees his hopes fail, yet keeps unfaltering trust That God is God; that somehow, true and just, His plans work out for mortals. Not a tear Is shed when fortune, which the world holds dear, Falls from his grasp; better with love a crust Than living in dishonor; envies not; Nor loses faith in man; but does his best, Nor murmurs at his humble lot; But with a smile and word of hope gives zest To every toiler; he alone is great. Who by life heroic conquers fate."

CURED BOY OF CROUP.

Nothing frightens a mother more than a loud hoarse cough of croup. Labored breathing, strangling and choking and gasping for breath demand instant action. Mrs. T. Neureur, Eau Claire, Wis., says: "Foley Honey and Tar Compound cured my boy of croup after other remedies failed." Recommended for coughs and colds. For sale by Pecos Drug Co.—Adv't.

A BUSINESS ROMANCE.

There are few people in any civilized part of the world who have not heard of the well-known kidney remedy, Doan's Kidney Pills. The story of the introduction of this remedy from country to country until the globe had been girdled would read like a romance. It is a strong testimonial to the merits of a remedy which has now been on the market for fifty years and for the progressiveness of a typical American business firm. ORDER NURSERY STOCK IN THE FALL.

Now is the time to place orders for nursery stock. Nurseries fill orders in the order in which they are received. By ordering early the pick of the stock is assured and also it is on hand to plant in fall.

Orders should be placed only with reliable nurseries. If considerable acreage is to be planted it is a good plan to visit the nursery and select the stock while it is growing. Only the best grade of trees should be planted. Nursery stock is only a very small portion of the cost of growing an orchard and it is poor economy to plant cheap trees.

One year old trees are the best for planting. Select medium-sized and well matured trees, not oversized ones. If one year old trees cannot be secured two year old ones will give good results, but care is to be exercised in selecting them to get ones that have not been headed too high by the nursery men. W. B. Lanham, Horticulturist for the Extension department of the Texas A. & M. College, says he has always had the best results with fall planted trees; in some cases, getting fully twice the growth of spring planted trees.

In most places in Texas fall planting is recommended. It may be that in the extreme northern parts that better results might be obtained from spring planting, but in practically all of the fruit belt of the late fall planting is to be recommended.

The land should be well prepared as for a crop of corn or cotton. All broken or diseased roots should be removed and the tree planted to the same depth that it stood in the nursery row.

One reason many trees fail to grow is because dirt is not well packed around the roots, especially under the crown of the tree and it dries out. This point should receive special attention. The fall planted trees are less likely to die from this as the dirt will be packed firmly around the roots by winter rains and they are ready to start with the first warm days of spring.

The Extension department will furnish information to any grower as to the selection of varieties, or any planting problems that may come up. Any information of this character is free upon application to the Directors of the Extension Department of the A. & M. College. CLARENCE OUSLEY, Director of Extension, A. & M. College, College Station, Texas.

BEWARE OF CHEAP SUBSTITUTES.

In these days of keen competition the public should see that they get Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and not take substitutes sold for the sake of extra profit. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has stood the test and been approved for more than forty years. Obtainable everywhere.—Adv't.

C. E. Schaff

On The "Katy" Going to Church.

The railroads are fast becoming the great moral educators of the nation. A big corporation issuing an order against immorality is more far-reaching in its effect than the most powerful sermon. The fear of a time check oftentimes has more influence for righteousness than the fear of the great conflagration.

Mr. C. E. Schaff, President of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Lines, when asked what that road was doing toward influencing religious growth and moral progress of the country his railway serves, said in part:

"The M., K. & T. Lines are as liberal as the law will permit in issuing passes for religious and charitable purposes. We give free transportation to such organizations and issue the clergy half rates, and we also make reduced rates to religious conferences, conventions, etc. It is our policy to co-operate in every way possible that a common carrier can consistently do in the moral uplift of the communities we serve.

We endeavor to employ only men of high moral standards and prefer to get them from Christian homes. It is as important that our employes be morally capable as that they be physically sound, and we encourage righteous living in every reasonable manner.

The company contributes liberally towards the support of the Railway Young Men's Christian Associations, which have a large membership. At least 50 per cent of our trainmen use the Y. M. C. A. Substantial and comfortable buildings are maintained at the principal terminal points along our line for the use of our employes, where they are provided with baths, clean beds, reading and social rooms, etc. This association is doing much toward the moral and physical uplift of the men in the way of providing them with wholesome environment which they might not otherwise have opportunity to enjoy.

We encourage Y. W. C. A. matrons to occupy office space in our stations and our employes co-operate with them in their work. In this and other ways the railway co-operates in work which in its inception and actual operation has a vital effect in producing better conditions of life and morals. Rather than that a railway has no soul, it should be said that the railway has a soul as big as its operations and as far-reaching as its influence.

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO

Their Unceasing Work Keeps Us Strong and Healthy.

All the blood in the body passes through the kidneys once every 20 minutes. The kidneys filter the blood. They work night and day. When healthy they remove about 500 grains of impure matter daily when unhealthy some of this impure matter is left in the blood. This brings on so many diseases and symptoms—which vary widely but may include pain in the back, headache, nervousness, hot, dry skin, rheumatic pains, gout, gravel, disorders of the eyesight and hearing, dizziness, irregular bowels, debility, drowsiness, dropsy, deposits in the urine, etc. But if you keep the filters right the danger is overcome. Doan's Kidney Pills have proven an effective kidney medicine.

H. A. Clifton, Sixth street, Pecos, says: "I have been troubled with my kidneys off and on for quite a long time. My back always seems to be the source of most trouble. It gets weak and lame, and aches. I find it hard to do any bending or lifting, and at times the kidney secretions are too frequent in passage and highly colored. Every time I am in this condition I get a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at the Pecos Drug Co. and they never fail to relieve me in a short time."

Price 50 cents at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Clifton had. P. F. Peter-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Advt.
