BUYING POWER

The average income in the United States, according to the National Bureau of Economic Research, grew from $791 in 1900 to $1,537 in 1920. In real wages, however, this increase is far less apparent. When the purchasing power of the dollar is taken into consideration, the real average income increased only from $823 to $887 in that period. The purchasing power of the dollar of today is a little better than sixty cents as compared with its purchasing power of 100 cents in 1913. In plain, simple language, the purchasing power of the dollar depends almost solely upon each individual's management of the money that comes into his possession. When money is spent extravagantly or wasted, commodity prices rise as the demand for commodities exceeds the supply. Again extravagance has a tendency to inflate the currency by increasing the volume of money in circulation. Notes of the government, like the notes of a corporation, decrease in value as their volume is increased. If, on the other hand, people save a part of their income and turn this money back into the production of wealth, they automatically adjust the money situation and supply industry with the funds necessary for increased and more efficient production. Every dollar that is saved and invested in honest, well managed enterprise is working doubly to bring the purchasing power of the dollar back to its old level.

PARTIAL-PAYMENT TEST

Purchases made on the installment plan have grown enormously in the last few years. The indebtedness of the American people contracted for merchandise bought on this plan is estimated to total approximately $3,000,000,000. The ease with which homes, furniture, automobiles, jewelry clothing and thousands of other things may be purchased on a promise to pay in the future has been beneficial, doubtless, in so far as it has contributed to the high standards of living in this country. Without easy credit home-buying and the purchase of commodities of an essential nature would be impossible on a large scale. On the other hand, however, the ease of payment on the installment plan may lead many people to live beyond their means and to extravagance in the purchase of non-essentials.

The practice of buying securities on the partial-payment plan is also becoming widespread. When good securities are bought from reputable dealers this method is entirely worthy. Bonds are permanent and income producing property. The money that is paid in periodically for their purchase under this plan is actually money saved. There is one danger, however, for the inexperienced investor in the purchase of securities on the installment plan. Fakers and their ilk have adopted this method of selling securities in this manner. Before buying securities in this manner the investor should make, therefore, a special effort to select a reputable investment house. Buy only from a firm or person to whom you know it would be safe to lend money.

LOSS PROBABLE

Although the 1925 Fair in Nolan County will show a financial loss as the result of operations, this situation can be in no way attributed to officials of the Fair Association who had the fair in charge.

The most careful financing has been in evidence throughout. Splendid buildings have been put up with the limited funds at the disposal of the Fair Association. They have made the dollar invested by stockholders do double duty in providing facilities for the present and future fairs.

In spite of the fact that fairs throughout this section showed a deficit last year, the local fair came through with nearly $1,600 surplus. Other fairs throughout this section lost money this year. Amarillo wound up the season with a ten thousand dollar deficit, to quote one example. In spite of the heavy expenditures due to the construction of new buildings and other items incidental to securing a permanent plant for the fair as well as other local events, the 1925 season would have at least broken even if the weather had been at all suitable.

In all fairness to the officials of the Nolan County Fair Association, and citizens who have labored without salary and without thought of self throughout the proceedings, that the Nolan County Fair might be a credit to this county, there can be no hint of blame attached to any financial failure this year.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTERS

BY CHARLES P. STEWART, NEA Service Writer. WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—Washington is worried by the threat of an epidemic of blue law enactments when Congress, its city council, meets.

exclusively from outside itself.

Now, certain of the outsiders have noticed that many Washingtonians are lax, among other things, in the matter of Sunday observance. Said outsiders believe much unnecessary business is transacted in the capital on the Sabbath.

They disapprove of Sunday theatrics and movies, to which the population is much addicted. They frown on Sunday golf and other sports, which are extremely popular in the city's neighborhood.

They were especially scandalized by the big turnout for the recent world series Sunday game of baseball.

Congress is going to be urged to stop all this.

Several bills are scheduled to be introduced on the subject in December. If any one of them should pass judging from advance descriptions, an early-day New Englander, dropping into the capital of a Sunday, would have to walk a chalk line to keep out of jail.

Numerous other things, besides Sunday observance, are on the list for attention, too.

Washingtonians are already holding mass meetings of protest. It's doubtful if they'll do any good. Nobody cares what the Washingtonians want. They ought to be shining examples to the country, if they won't do it voluntarily, the only way to accomplish it is forcibly, by law.

Complaints are heard that Secretary of Commerce Hoover is standardizing the color out of life.

Assuredly, he is a standardizer. For example, the commerce department went to work some time ago on tacks. Manufacturers were turning out 229 varieties.

"Users of 113 of these kinds of tacks," the department found, "could use some other kind just as well."

Accordingly, hereafter only 186 kinds will be made.

In multiplicity of patterns of any given manufactured article there is loss, Hoover holds. This loss means higher prices all around. So reduction in the number of different kinds of everything is the secretary's method of bringing down the cost of living.

By getting the country's wood industries to stop sawing lumber into so many weird shapes, he says he has saved millions of dollars to buyers of articles made from wood.

But standardization reduces everything to a dull, dead level of the commonplace?

Secretary Hoover denies it. Persons of original tastes which they wish to gratify can continue to do so, but at their own expense. The man who insists on using one of the 113 varieties of tacks which are no longer to be had can get them, but they will have to be made to order, which will cost him more.

And so it should. There's no justice in letting him shove off part of the load onto users of the 186 standard kinds.

That's Secretary Hoover's reasoning.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Soap boxes are still a long way from the antique rooms.

Any night at Columbus Circle, where seven streets join in a great traffic hub, you will see orators springing up mushroom-like. A Salvation Army revivalist competes with the radical. You can have anything from politics to religion and you will see faces from the world over—the shouting Hungarian, the argumentative Scot, the arm-waving Russian.

The other night, as I walked through Second Avenue, on the East Side, I stopped before an impassioned young radical speaker who jumped about on his soap box near St. Marks on the Bowery, the church made famous by Dr. Guthrie's non-conformity.

The fiery young speaker was speaking sardonically of all the nation's officeholders. Restoring to bitter irony he shouted:

"And now, friends I wish to place in nomination for president and vice-president of the United States—Frederick Nietzsche and Herbert Spencer—"

He waited a moment for the crowd to be shocked. Some laughed, some shrugged, but from somewhere in the crowd came the voice of a little German, speaking in broken English:

"But dey are dead—dey are bode!"

"No—dey live!" came back the orator in rushed tones. "You will find them alive—in the public library."

Then, one by one, the orator went through the cabinet and congress and the senate, naming philosophers, scientists, great thinkers and each time came the puzzled echo from the crowd:

"But dey are dead—all dead!"

The inevitable reply would be: "No they live."

I don't know who the fiery young dreamer was, nor do I know the reflector of common sense who spoiled his indignation in German accent.

I know merely that I felt I was looking in upon a symbolic picture of the eternal dual between the ideal-ist and the practicalist with the situation balanced on a sense of humor.

A Lexington Avenue barber shop has added a jazz band as a lure to customers. Upon the opening day of the shop pretty maids did the Charleston on the tile floor and haircuts were the greater demand than shaves, while massages were almost unknown. It is not recorded whether or not the barbers have learned to shave rhythmically, or whether a "red hot" tune results in a slipping razor.

"SECOND CORINTHIANS"

Friends of the Near East Relief in this city have recently received from Corinth, Greece, one of the most effective appeals which this organization has ever issued. It consists of a reproduction of a photograph of hundreds of little children, on a wide plain, grouped together to form the letters and figures making this legend "Second Corinthians 1: 8-11."

The children represented in this "living epistle from the Corinthians" are but a part of the two thousand orphans under the care of the Near East Relief in modern Corinth alone.

near the site of the ministry of St. Paul of old. The message is particularly reasonable at this time, as it serves to draw attention to the American observance on December 6th of Golden Rule Sunday, on behalf of this humanitarian and educational work overseas.

It is interesting to read the passage from the Epistle of St. Paul to the Corinthians so dramatically referred to in the picture: "For we would not, brethren, have you ignorant of your trouble, which came to us in Asia, that we were presed out of measure, above strength, inasmuch that we despaired even of life. "But we had the sentence of death in ourselves, that we should not trust in ourselves, but in God, which raiseth the dead."

What are the predisposing causes of rheumatism?—how may the disease be avoided? Causes of Rheumatism. The following causes are listed as being possible pre-disposing causes of rheumatism, namely: enlarged tonsils, adenoids, and diseased teeth or gums, particularly pyorrhea. To be exposed to cold—to remain for some time in wet clothing—to get thoroughly or repeatedly chilled, may, it is believed, lead to an attack of rheumatism directly or it is thought that in some cases, the rheumatism may follow tonsillitis, a cold or some other acute respiratory condition which may have been caused by the exposure.

It is well to avoid exposure—and one should learn that colds and sore throats are not trivial matters. Care of the teeth is important and a visit to your dentist is recommended at least once in six months. Rheumatism usually develops quite suddenly. It may follow immediately an attack of sore throat or tonsillitis or there may be an interval of a week or ten days of perfect health following such an attack before the disease develops. There may have been nothing preliminary to it, in so far as we can determine.

Fever and Chills Are Symptoms. There are usually sensations of chilliness followed by fever and a train of symptoms, all developing usually within 24 hours from the onset. One or more joints become swollen, the face is flushed, there are profuse sweats, the temperature is high, the pulse rapid and the patient is very uncomfortable. Often the suffering is intense. The joints most frequently involved are the knee, ankle, elbow, wrist and shoulder. In the order named. The swelling may wander from one joint to another. An attack of rheumatism may last a week or ten days or it may last much longer. Rheumatism should always be regarded as a serious disease on account of the permanent damage to the heart which may result. Do not attempt to treat an attack of rheumatism yourself. Stay in bed and send for a physician. The large number of persons disabled annually by rheumatism either from chronic joint conditions or from a chronically diseased heart, makes the prevention of rheumatism of great importance.

Teeth, Tonsils or Adenoids May Cause Rheumatism

BY DR. HUGH S. CUMMING, Surgeon General, United States Public Health Service.

Rheumatic fever or rheumatism, as it is sometimes called, is a disease of almost universal interest. It is fairly common, though not as frequent today as it was a number of years ago. Patients with rheumatic fever make up from 2 to 7 per cent of the total sick admitted to our large hospitals.

Once rheumatism develops, it often resists treatment; or, there may be repeated attacks and the disease may become sub-acute or chronic. Even when the patient has fairly recovered, there may be left painful reminders, such as aching, or somewhat stiffened joints.

The worst feature of rheumatism, is the fact that it is often the direct cause of heart disease. There is no doubt but what rheumatic fever proper is an acute, infectious disease caused by a germ or germs. It is probable that there may be several different diseases included under the term, "rheumatism" as commonly used.

Muscular rheumatism is a term applied to affections of the muscles as distinguished from affections of joints. Lumbago is a term applied to muscular rheumatism affecting the large muscles of the back. Painful points under the shoulder blades in the back are commonly due to this same condition.

There may also be painful conditions due to the same cause in the muscles of the chest which may lead the patient to suppose he has heart disease or pleurisy. Such pains are superficial and while they may sometimes be severe, they may easily be distinguished from pains caused by disease in deeper structures. Rheumatic fever is especially prevalent in temperate climates. It is most common during the latter months of winter. It occurs most frequently between the ages of 15 and 35 years.

It is more common in men than in women, although between the ages of 10 and 15 boys and girls seem to suffer from rheumatism in about equal numbers.

What are the predisposing causes of rheumatism?—how may the disease be avoided? Causes of Rheumatism. The following causes are listed as being possible pre-disposing causes of rheumatism, namely: enlarged tonsils, adenoids, and diseased teeth or gums, particularly pyorrhea. Clothing should be adequate. One should always take the best possible care of his health; his clothing should be adequate and suitable to the temperature; dampness should be avoided; a well balanced diet should be taken, guarding against overeating or of eating too much of one kind of food and too little of other kinds. If there is any diseased condition of the teeth or gums, of the throat or of the tonsils, then certainly these should be attended to whether you have rheumatism or not.

PALACE

It requires much longer for a girl to get married in the movies than it does in real life. For instance:

Norma Talmadge, in her latest First National picture, "The Only Woman" marched to the altar eight times before she was finally married to Eugene O'Brien. As the picture, now at Palace theatre, shows there is first a long shot of the wedding scene, then a medium shot, and later a close up. Then comes a reverse long shot marriage taken from behind the bride and groom; a reverse close-up, and a reverse medium shot of the ceremony. The last two marriages were shot from other angles. The filming of these scenes required two days.

LYRIC

Apicture typical of California is "Flower of Night," starring Pola Negri at the Lyric Theatre today. Not alone is it a dramatic story with historical significance, and atmosphere peculiar to California, but the locations are magnificent in scenic beauty.

Some of the exteriors were filmed in the mountains of Northern California, the sites of the first gold diggings. Other scenes were made on the towering stone crest of Chatsworth Park, forty miles from Los Angeles, while still others show the wooded hills and vales to be found off Dark Canyon Road in the Hollywood foothills.

The story is a colorful Spanish romance of California in 1856. Warner Oland, Helen Lee Worthing and other big names appear in the cast.
