Three downtown business houses barglarized Friday night; cash drawers rifled; four youths held

Three business houses were forcibly entered some time Friday night by burglars and in each place the cash drawers were rifled. The intruders were afterwards with approximately $20 for their efforts.

The Wilford Harrison Drug Store on Eighth street was entered some time after the burglary. Cash drawers were rifled and the store was closed for several days.

The Miller Drug Store at Eighth and Ohio was entered in the same manner and the door was permitted to stand open after the burglary. Between $20 and $30 was taken by the men from this place of business. Both cash drawers were rifled.

In both the drug stores nothing was taken so far as it can be ascertained. A close check-up on the supply of prescription whiskey and narcotics revealed nothing of value. The Kohn Motor Company on Scott street, between Sixth and Seventh, was the third place entered, but here the burglars re-

RIP WHEELER'S TWENTIETH VICTORY IS 9 TO 0 SHUT-OUT

Ripper Gives Slugging Bears But Three Hits and Only One Gets as Far as Second; Coombs Bags Four

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Aug. 24.—Rip Wheeler pitched the Bears with three hits for the Spudders' only victory in the three-game series that closed Friday. The final count was 9 to 0, the winning average finding a pair of San Antonio hitters to their liking.

"It was Wheeler's twentieth victory of the season and he was so good that only one was reached second base. Boone doubled in the first with two out and Simon walked. Fuller singled in the sixth and reached in a double play. Tedd singled in the ninth with two gone. Aside from these four instances Wheeler pitched perfectly. Only Boone faced him in the nine innings.

Coolie Coombs, the Spudder handy man, led the attack on a pair of San Antonio hitters, getting four hits and putting in five innings. Among the collection of slams was a four-bagger over the left field wall that scored a runner ahead of two of his three victories and drove in runs.

Morrison started for the Bears and went out in the first with the bases full and two outs. Adams failed to stem the onslaught and was hit hard throughout the game.

Morrison chased Barry. The Spudders rested Morrison and got three runs in the first inning. After Williams went out Grigsby singled, stole second and went to third when Fuller failed to stem for the drive. Coombs singled to center, scoring Grigsby. Coors walked and Walee scored Coombs with a single to center. Barry walked and the bases were loaded. Coors scored on Berger's fly to right and a pass to Bischoff again filled the bases. Wheeler struck in the third, but the home crowd doubled for the Bears with two out and Simon walked, but Barrett threw out Morrison.

The visitors got another in the second. Williams singled and pulled up with a "Charley horse" at first. Wheeler ran for him and hit the bases when Fuller failed to get to the infield. Coombs went out and hit left. San Antonio went out in order in the second and Wichita Falls led in the third. Bischoff bunted safely with two out and was left. Wheeler again put the Bears away in succession in the third.

Wheeler struck through. Grigsby was safe with one away in the fourth and Coombs followed with his third single. The Spudders led in the sixth when Coors scored on a double steal. For the third straight round Wheeler disposed of the Bears, but in the seventh Adams and Wheeler had it on the hitters again in the fifth, both being retired in order.

The interesting part of the contest was brought to an end in the sixth when the Spudders got three more runs. With one out Wheeler and Coombs walked and Walee scored when Grigsby fled to second. Coombs fourth hit of the game was a home run over the left field fence, making the Spudders lead in the ninth. Wheeler struck in the ninth, but the Bears got their first hit when Fuller singled in the fifth. He perished in a sacrifice bunt, however, the visitors in the seventh, but was out at the plate when Berger rolled to Fuller. The Bears once more went down in order in the eighth. Adams went in two with a single to left. Oakley, Kahlbeck and Gross were quick out in the ninth half.

Berger's home run, however, was singled in the ninth, but the hit failed to produce any more runs. Tedd got the Bears' third hit of the game with two out in the ninth. Boone ended the game with a single to Walee.

Double-Header Main Event Feature Of American Legion's Fight Shows Saturday Night at Ball Park Arena

All is in readiness for Pat Corry's American Legion post's weekly boxing show Saturday night at the ball park arena. It was announced Saturday morning by Sam Kelly, who is in charge of the program. The boxes all are in tip-top shape for their bouts and one of the best shows of the season is in store for the fans. Mr. Beatty says.

A double header main event tops the card for Saturday, July 16, 10-round bouts being billed as features. Red Bryd, the Wichita Falls water-weight, attempts a comeback in meeting Mattie Simpson of Reno, Nev. in the main event. The other half of the double header main event brings together the Ryan of Dallas and J. C. Williams, another pair of water-weights.

In the former meeting of Bryd and Simpson, the latter gained a technical knockout in four rounds and Bryd in attempting to erase this defeat Saturday night. Simpson is a former champion and has won a number of fights. Williams is a former champion and has won a number of fights.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 25, 1933. D. T. & I.

Ford will spend 20 to 30 million dollars for complete electrification of the D. T. & I. It is 495 miles long, so the cost of electrifying a steam railroad averages $40,000 to $60,000 a mile.

Our country has around 264,000 miles of railroads. To electrify them would cost from 10 to 16 billion dollars, at the Ford rate.

That would be expensive or cheap, according to economy that would or would not result.

The first link of the D. T. & I. to be electrified is about 13 miles long. In a sense, it's probably a laboratory experiment.

By using current on a big scale—$60,000 horsepower at work, night and day—Ford expects to cut his electric power cost to a tenth of what it is now.

It is logical to expect that all American railroads will be electrified eventually. The coal probably will be burned at the mines, generating electric current to be sent to far distances over high tension wires—or by radio transmission, who knows?

A system like this is the dream of a great many scientists who are trying to solve the coal problem. They vision a day when the whole nation will be on an electrical basis with the power derived from coal burned at the mines, incidentally saving tremendous coal freight bills.

Ford climbed to the top by making autos. It will be interesting to see if he rounds out his career by becoming as big in the railroad business as he is in the auto industry.

His whole life seems to revolve around the problem of cheap, fast transportation.

SMILE A WHILE

Some men argue with their wives. Others are single. Women powder their noses in public, so why can't men shave on the cars as they ride to work?

Golfers and woodpeckers are about the only birds who use their heads to get into the hole.

All men are born helpless, but some help less than others.

Only a short time before fall, not, however, a fall in prices.

Several of our latest books were not late enough.

An auto in hand is worth two in the ditch.

THE LURE

Around the booking offices where they hire actors for vaudeville, there's a saying: "When they can sing they want to dance, and when they can dance they want to sing."

Quite a bit of psychology there, in a few words. No matter how successful or happy we may be, we always cherish a notion that we would be more successful and happier doing something else.

For instance, there's an old saying that every reader thinks he could get out a better newspaper than the editor. The editor at times is willing to concede that maybe they're right.

In the accompanying pen-picture our old friend, Artist Satterfield, shows the kind of life he'd prefer to any other. "I love the outdoors and in this picture he shows the sort of existence he'd consider real success in itself. The interesting feature of this is that Satterfield is an accomplished and successful artist, with a national reputation in the newspaper profession, and with an enviable standing in private life by reason of his watercolor and oil paintings.

When they can paint and draw great pictures, they want to fish. And when they can fish, they want to paint and draw. Nearly every industry expert at fishing, wants to be an artist. And in his crude, half-artistic way.

Yes, no matter how successful and happy we are, we always imagine that we could be more successful and happier at something else. All of which may be "kidding ourselves." But it expresses the spirit of discontent, restlessness, that makes civilization progress steadily.

Disatisfaction with present conditions in what makes humanity create a better condition for the future. The dissatisfaction often takes queer forms, but this doesn't change the general principle.

THE CELEBRITY

It took but limited selling to bring about a decline in September corn, while the advance in futures was strengthened by higher prices for wheat. After starting to go off to the advance, December 1933 to 1.07 and May 1.11 to 1.12, were followed by a slight advance all around.

Provisions were firm in line with wheat. Open High Low Close. Pork 1.05 1.04 1.01 1.03. Lard 1.08 1.07 1.04 1.07. Bacon 1.11 1.10 1.07 1.11.

CHAPTER SEVEN
"I am my master's servant—and I am everything."

The Dutchman came into the room of the Dutchman. "Not very often," he laughed easily. "Whittaker is our orderly officer here. He takes your first thing to see everybody's up to the mark. Still, ten at five is his means."

"That's my usual arrangement." "All right, Rabat, you can get to bed unless Mr. Van Dusen wants you."

"A chair creaked as the other dropped into it. No thanks. You know where to put my clothes for the morning. I like my boots here—by this chair, he turned to Pennington. "I wish about in my slippers with my feet comes round, you know, I find it more comfortable."

"Our boots on the veranda then, Rabat-Pilai?" "That, Tuan," said the Dutchman. The customary salutation carried the servant to the passage. He glanced back once, then vanished altogether.

"What sort of man?" "A Chinaman, Tuan. There was no word spoken between them. He hit it and held it above his head. A man stole from the shadows and hid in the doorway.

"Excellent. What happened to the Tuan Van Dusen?" "He took a box to a but by the railway line. It was dark when he entered, after that there was a light."

"The man nodded. "He came out of the but several times, looking round everywhere. The door was bolted presently from the inside—and I looked through a place where the boards were loose and saw a Chinese tube in the pocket—a tube with some dark liquid inside."

"That you, Van Dusen? I was just saying to Rabat-Pilai I could manage a cup of tea at five in the morning. I suppose you'll join me?" "You've placed me in a delectable position," he complained. "Until I replace my late servant, I suppose I'm at liberty to fall back on yours."

"Rabat-Pilai is entirely at your service." "The Dutchman looked up his riding boots and moved off in search of his slippers. Pennington—once more alone—sat down at the table. He took that wheeled found the flame of the lamp.

"Between nine and ten Van Dusen went out, taking the path to the south line. Half an hour later Rabat-Pilai crept on to the veranda and waited before Pennington's chair. One of Chai-Hing's men came. "Well?"

"Great Tuan, the Dutchman, left the gate by the gate that faces the sea. He went some little distance into the forest to where a big tree stands alone. There was a brilliant lamp hidden in the branches. The man Van Dusen lit it and held it above his head. A man stole from the shadows and hid in the doorway.

"Pennington stared at the ceiling. "What sort of man?" "A Chinaman, Tuan. There was no word spoken between them. He hit it and held it above his head. A man stole from the shadows and hid in the doorway.

"I am my master's servant—and I am everything." "All that was possible of the grin vanished as Van Dusen appeared at the head of the passage. "Morning, Pennington. Hope I haven't with you waiting. I've never in the least, old bird. I've always cherished a sort of fancy notion you'd be waiting early for me. Suddenly he uttered a sharp exclamation and he back in the chair, his lips parted, his mouth smiling and going in about seven feet. "What's the matter, Pennington?"

"Nothing, Rabat-Pilai, you didn't say when you knock down this confounded salt?" He fell forward, buried his face in his hands, then lurched to the floor, where he lay jerking spasmodically. "The native—uncomprehending nothing—plucked a long knife from his belt. With a wide cry he covered the planter, who covered him with an automatic.

"Stop where you are, Rabat-Pilai, can you hear me? In half an hour from now it won't matter very much whether your friend in session finds his finger joints at those breaks. I've a launch in the bay and a long-kong standing off ready to take me to the Philippines. I killed Domborg. We loathed one another pretty heartily ever since he used to send Domborg blood in Chai-Hing's way—and mine. It was Chai-Hing's way to Jessenton—to get you here. Drop that knife, you black-skinned devil, and get over to the corner where I can see you. He reached down for his boots. He stamped his feet home—and the

"The man with the Chinese eyes kicked off his slippers. His foot was on the point of entering the boot when Rabat dropped a pile of worn volumes. Pennington started and looked up. The servant was signaling furiously, his mutilated face queerly contorted. The Englishman's hand moved to his head, his fingers gripped between finger and thumb and from the left boot shook what looked like a tin-can with an enormous head. He was still staring at it when Rabat-Pilai picked it up without turning a hair. He retreated with it to Van Dusen's chair, grinning over the back of it at his master.

"Good Lord! it was louch and go the time with a tremendous bang. The bahaman whistled. Rabat, if I'd trodden on that how long would I have been in hospital?" "Ten minutes, Tuan." "How did you know?"

Census Bureau Statistics Show That Level of Wages in 1921 Was Higher Than in 1919 in United States

By O. P. ARTIN, Statistician, The National City Bank of New York

Announcement from Washington that the value of manufacturing output in the United States in 1921 was $12,422,000,000 against $11,785,000,000 in 1919, and $12,387,000,000 in 1920, is especially interesting in supplying a basis for comparing our post-war manufacturing activities with those preceding the war. While the 1920 census, stating the output for 1919, showed a decrease in value of output, number of persons employed and wages paid, the fact that the year 1921 immediately followed the year of the war, reduced the value of their use as a basis for comparison with the figures of the normal years preceding the war. Fortunately, however, congress in 1920 enacted a law directing the census bureau to in future take cognizance of manufacturing activity every second year, instead of every fifth year as formerly, and under this new law that biennial census was taken in 1921.

The figures for the calendar year 1921, and the figures of that year, and the value of output, number of persons employed, and wages paid for wages and salaries, enable us to compare the condition of the manufacturing industry in the United States in the post-war period year, 1921, with that of 1919 and the preceding year, 1920.

While the figures with those of earlier years by reason of the fact that the census figures of 1921 (1921) exclude returns from territories whose output was less than the census in 1919, the figures of the United States in the post-war period year, 1921, with that of 1919 and the preceding year, 1920, are as follows:

Value of output of manufacturing industry in the United States in the calendar year 1921, $12,422,000,000; in 1920, $12,387,000,000; in 1919, $11,785,000,000.

Number of persons employed in manufacturing industry in the United States in the calendar year 1921, 15,000,000; in 1920, 14,500,000; in 1919, 14,000,000.

Wages and salaries paid to persons employed in manufacturing industry in the United States in the calendar year 1921, $1,500,000,000; in 1920, $1,400,000,000; in 1919, $1,300,000,000.

These figures show that the value of output of manufacturing industry in the United States in the calendar year 1921, was 6.1% higher than in 1920, and 6.1% higher than in 1919. The number of persons employed in manufacturing industry in the United States in the calendar year 1921, was 3.6% higher than in 1920, and 3.6% higher than in 1919. Wages and salaries paid to persons employed in manufacturing industry in the United States in the calendar year 1921, was 7.7% higher than in 1920, and 7.7% higher than in 1919.

YOU AND I

BY ALBERT APFEL

ESCAPES
Labrador, which skirts the Atlantic coast of Hudson Bay, has been losing population steadily since 1824, and there are now only 100,000 square miles, though it has plenty of summer, excellent harbors and valuable fisheries and even good soil for wheat. Labrador to avoid its rigorous ice-bound winters, tendency of population is to follow the line of least resistance, Europeans, when they realize the frightful economic mess ahead of them, will pack up and migrate to the land of least resistance, probably as their chief destination. It is not impossible that Europe is going to join the Lost Civilizations.

CAUTION
A prosperous man of standing in a New York City, C. T. T. two years ago he escaped from the state penitentiary where he was doing 10 years for robbery. Now he goes back to finish his term. It must be a bitter pill to swallow after so many years of freedom.

STAGE-FRIGHT
Radio operators, talking into the broadcasting microphone, frequently get stage-fright. It isn't due to awe of their invisible audience. Victims of radio stage-fright say they lose their voice because of a sudden sensation that they are alone in space, foolishly talking to themselves, with no friendly answer such as they have over the telephone wire.

COVERAGE
Coverage is a matter of confidence in self. That's why, in regular life, the cock sure man of average or even inferior ability frequently outdistances the super-man semi-paralyzed by timidity. The first essential to any kind of accomplishment is a firm belief that you can do it in spite of any obstacles.

COOL
Put your electric fan on the floor and open windows from top as well as bottom, to get best results, suggest a "Cooling" fan. Working several manufacturers. His theory, and it's logical, is that the fan, usually in a closed room, blows the floor imperfections that have risen clinging to the warm air. Even better: Put the fan at an open window so it won't blow a breeze, but will suck fresh air from outdoors. Leave a window open from the top to permit escape of hot air and noise.

GAS
Calvin, 14 year old son of President Coolidge, has been spending his summer working on a tobacco farm near Hatfield, Mass. A newspaper reported found him carrying a tin dinnerpail, sweating in the broiling sun as he bundled tobacco leaves and hung them on drying racks, and riding eight miles each way to and from work on a bicycle.

Such a picture of the son of the ruler of the greatest republic in history is a surprising reminder of our system of democracy in which the humblest of us has a right to share in the government.

ODD
An old married couple in Kochi, Japan, recently celebrated their 70th funeral, which they decided to hold before their deaths. This is real news—something that probably never happened before.

After the ceremony, the old couple banqueted the "mourners" and said that the funeral had given them a new lease on life.

In the last analysis, life is a preparation for death. It's a journey between two mysterious stations.

BUG
The boll weevil can be practically wiped out by spraying cottonseed calcium arsenate in dust form. So claim some of the bug experts at United States agricultural experiment station, Tallahassee, Fla. They have successfully attached boll weevils this way in limited acreages. The policy cost a dollar an acre.

Valuable scientific progress, of course, but it starts us pondering, what may be accomplished by poison-motivated airplanes in future wars. We are progressing mechanically faster than we are morally, giving a savage a high-powered rifle before he can be counted on not to use it recklessly.

ESCAPES
Labrador, which skirts the Atlantic coast of Hudson Bay, has been losing population steadily since 1824, and there are now only 100,000 square miles, though it has plenty of summer, excellent harbors and valuable fisheries and even good soil for wheat. Labrador to avoid its rigorous ice-bound winters, tendency of population is to follow the line of least resistance, Europeans, when they realize the frightful economic mess ahead of them, will pack up and migrate to the land of least resistance, probably as their chief destination. It is not impossible that Europe is going to join the Lost Civilizations.

CAUTION
A prosperous man of standing in a New York City, C. T. T. two years ago he escaped from the state penitentiary where he was doing 10 years for robbery. Now he goes back to finish his term. It must be a bitter pill to swallow after so many years of freedom.

STAGE-FRIGHT
Radio operators, talking into the broadcasting microphone, frequently get stage-fright. It isn't due to awe of their invisible audience. Victims of radio stage-fright say they lose their voice because of a sudden sensation that they are alone in space, foolishly talking to themselves, with no friendly answer such as they have over the telephone wire.

COVERAGE
Coverage is a matter of confidence in self. That's why, in regular life, the cock sure man of average or even inferior ability frequently outdistances the super-man semi-paralyzed by timidity. The first essential to any kind of accomplishment is a firm belief that you can do it in spite of any obstacles.

COOL
Put your electric fan on the floor and open windows from top as well as bottom, to get best results, suggest a "Cooling" fan. Working several manufacturers. His theory, and it's logical, is that the fan, usually in a closed room, blows the floor imperfections that have risen clinging to the warm air. Even better: Put the fan at an open window so it won't blow a breeze, but will suck fresh air from outdoors. Leave a window open from the top to permit escape of hot air and noise.

Raw Material Value Low
The manufacturing activities of the year represented by the latest census, 1921, may be considered as slightly below the average of the years 1919 and 1920, as evidenced by the fact that the value of crude manufacturing material imported in 1921 was $1,752,000,000 against $1,752,000,000 in 1920, and approximately $1,500,000,000 in the fiscal year 1922, suggesting a decline in manufacturing activities of 1922 and 1923 are good, and perhaps greater than that of 1921, though the figures are not yet available. The decline in manufacturing in 1922 and 1923 may have been due in some degree to the high prices.

Perhaps the most striking feature of the census figures of 1921 lies in the fact that they indicate that the rate of wages paid has not only declined at the rate of 1919 but that it shows a slight increase when compared with the average wage of 1921 with that of 1919. While there was a material reduction in the number of employees, both wage earners and those at a fixed salary, the average wage or salary paid per individual employee was not only as high as in 1919 but apparently slightly higher, suggesting that there occurred an actual advance in the average factory wage in the two-year period, 1919-21. This increase is small, the fact that there was an increase rather than a reduction is especially interesting.

Average Wage
A careful comparison of the census figures of wage earners and sum paid for wages in the two years named, 1921 and 1919, shows that while the number of wage earners paid for wages in the two years named, 1921 and 1919, shows that the average wage per individual is at least sufficient to indicate that the prediction of a reduction in the rate of wages paid have not been realized and this is equally true in the percentage paid to married employees, to whom the average payment in 1921 was slightly higher than in 1919. Taking the entire group of factory employees, wage earners and salaried employees, the average payment per individual in 1921 was apparently $1211 against $1175 in 1919.
