REVAL, ESTHONIA.—When Adam drove and Eva span, where was then the gentleman?

This is the city of the three war-born republics of Esthonia, Latvia and Lithuania. Before the world war they belonged to Russia and their lands were ruled by the Baltic barons. The people were practically slaves, and these barons, the descendants of the German knights who conquered the country about 500 years before Columbus discovered America, owned most of the lands. They had divided the territory among themselves, and the people were held in a condition that reminds one of the conditions described in Ivanhoe and other novels of Walter Scott. Then the world war came on and the peasants arose and overthrew the Baltic. They have been taking over the big estates and giving them to the people. They want every peasant to have his own farm, and to make every noble earn his bread, as the Lord said Adam should, "by the sweat of his brow."

The economic changes are among the most remarkable in history. Almost in a night the territory has jumped from feudalism to the most advanced independence of our modern civilization. The people have fought bolshevism and beaten it, and they are starting on their way along the march of up to date nations. This is the story in a nut shell. To know it in detail I shall ask you to travel with me through the republics and see the great changes that are now taking place.

But first take a look at this part of the world. It is a slice of old Russia and is important because it is the western fringe of the former great empire, shutting it off from the sea, and having the only northern ports through which it can reach the outside world during the winter. The land is flat and covered with forests and farms, lakes and swamps. The capital, Reval, lies east of the Baltic sea, and on the north and west is washed by its waters. On the east are the plains of west Russia, on the south is Poland, and on the north over the Gulf of Finland is the new republic of the Finns. The capital, Reval, is about half that time from the city of Petrograd.

As seen on the map the territory is small but in reality Esthonia is three times the size of Massachusetts, Latvia half as big as the state of New York, and the lands originally claimed by Lithuania are larger than Illinois. Esthonia has as many people as Philadelphia, Latvia as many as both Cincinnati and Cleveland, and all of the inhabitants of Lithuania are more than those of the Great Chicago. All of the countries have excellent ports, and both Reval and Riga are important harbors and are the chief water-gateways to the vast dominions of Russia.

Among the Esthonians a child begins to travel among the Esthonians. They have always been on a higher grade of civilization than the Russians. They are an old race, having come here from 800 to 100 A. D., when they were on the same plane as the Scandinavians with whom they kept up an active competition in journeys for trade or plunder. They lived with the Vikings, and it was about the 13th century that the Teutons and Danes made war upon them. They fought for one hundred years before they were subdued, and then the German Knights of the Sword, and Russia, Poland and Sweden ruled them from time to time. The Germans finally got possession and oppressed them cruelly for six hundred years with the exception of a short time when the Swedes brought in the reformation and gave them some justice.

After that the German landowners recovered their power and for two hundred years the Esthonians were practically the slaves of the Baltic Barons. They were so treated that Jaroa Rossa, the land councillor, reported to the Russian government that the people were "longed body and soul to the landowners. Said he, "The Esthonians may not own anything. They only have property for their labor who dispose of everything as he desires. The degree of their slavery was decided by the landowner, who may punish them without appeal, and tax them as he pleases."

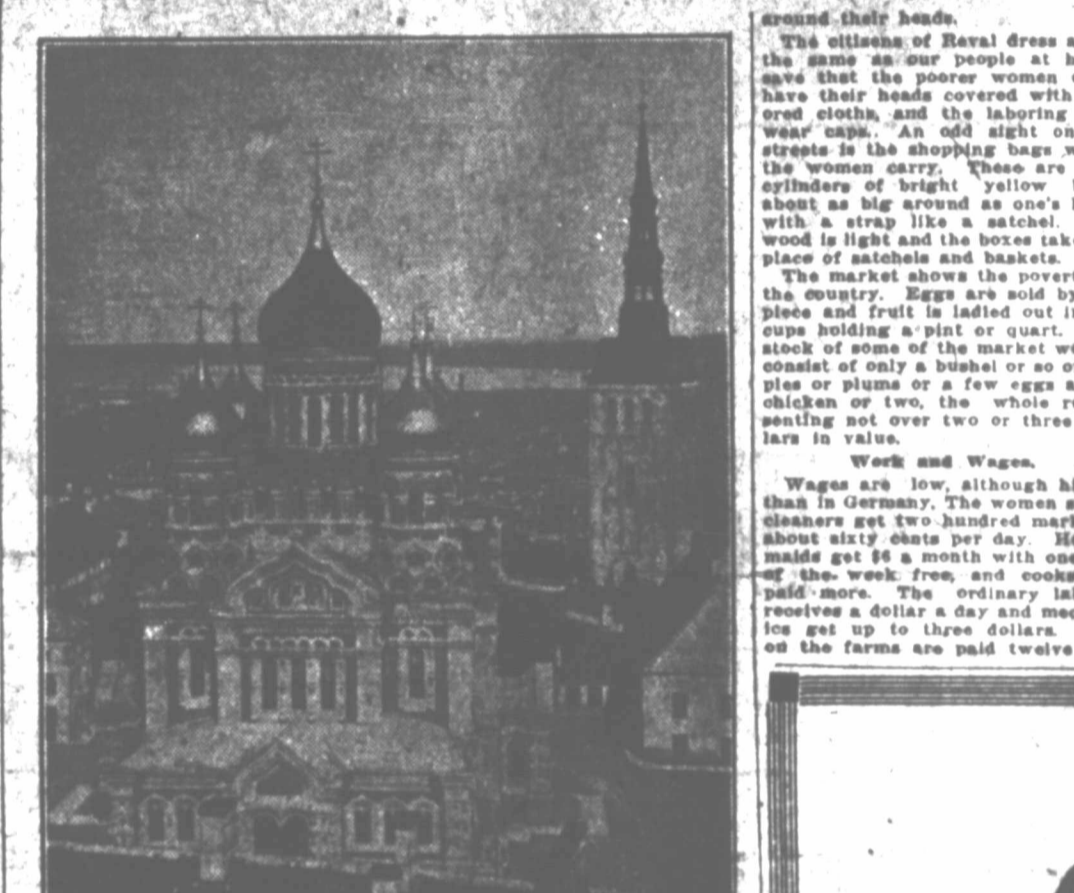

In 1763, eleven years before we declared our independence of Great Britain, the diet here declared that the people were slaves in the strictest legal Roman sense of the word, and it was not until the year 1801 that they were nominally abolished. In 1800 the peasants were given the right to buy their own lands, but legally the rights of the German barons remained unchanged until after the revolution of 1917. Notwithstanding all this the people were able to get some education, and they have about thirteen hundred common schools, several "universities" and agricultural and technical institutes. The University of Dorpat, which was founded in 1823, closed by the Russian before the world war and reopened now as a national seat of learning maintained by the government. This university has almost three thousand students of whom about one-fourth are women.

The capital of Esthonia, Reval, is a young man who, during his first trip to the Mediterranean, wrote back to his holy hermit father:

"After I had been out a few hours from the forest, into the sea, and I reached all manner of men." Moving out of the island situated by the Gulf of Finland in about four hours, they came into the Bay of Reval which is also guarded by islands. The harbor is excellent and many small ships were in the bay, and I could see the smoke rising from the stacks as we came in. One of these factories is a locomotive works which is repairing engines for the Esthonian government, and the men who pointed it out says the Esthonians said in two engines for such one repaired. They have no money, and the price engine goes to Esthonia has a congress or parliament of one hundred members divided among ten parties. The parliament house is of typically Esthonian architecture, with the interior finished in black and the other woods.

The cathedral of Reval seen from the harbor. The church has lacked the support of the Russian government, and the copper plates have been torn off the central dome and sold.

down near the harbor and the other on Castle Hill in the rear. Castle Hill was a fortification in the middle ages, and many of its stone walls still stand. This hill is now the fashionable residence part of the city and the government water, with sharp ridged roofs of red tiles. Some of them have walls of stucco painted bright colors, and there are many shops and businesses along the street. The signs over the stores are in several different languages, but the new nation insists that one must be in Esthonian, although other texts may be added if the storekeeper desires. In addition every store has its picture on the outside wall showing the goods sold within. If the store sells butter or milk, it may have a cow with a girl doing the milking. Or perhaps a sheep, a pig, and a cart of butter and cheese. On my way to the hotel I saw the signs of barbers at work shaving and bleaching their patrons, of typewriter and cream separators, and of household goods of every description such as beds, tables, chairs and candlesticks all painted on the walls of the stores. Six Years Older Than Washington. Leaving my baggage at the hotel I strolled about the narrow streets, trying to realize that I was in the new capital of one of the baby republics that are springing up all over the world. Here the president and the other officials of the republic have their offices and here the new parliament building has been constructed.

In the Market. I find the lower city interesting. The stores are quaint and the common people look like a slice out of old Europe. Much of the buying and selling is done in a market, not far from the harbor. Here there is a square of several acres filled with market women with their wares spread out before them on low tables. The women are mostly peasants who have brought vegetables, grain, fowls and other products from the country. They are short and stocky and show the wear and tear of their hard outdoor work in the fields. They are wearing short dark colored skirts and waists with shawls draped around their shoulders. Nearly all have handkerchiefs or small shawls around their heads. The Esthonians of Reval dress about the same as our people at home, and that the poorer women often have their heads covered with colored cloths, and the laboring men wear caps. An odd sight on the streets is the shopping bags which the women carry. These are long cylinders of bright yellow birch bark, about as big around as one's head, with a strap like a satchel. The wood is light and the boxes take the place of satchels and baskets. The market shows the poverty of the country. Eggs are sold by the piece and fruit is ladled out in tin cups holding a pint or quart. The stock of some of the market women consist of only a bushel or so of apples or plums or a few eggs and a chicken or two, the whole representing not over two or three dollars in value.

Work and Wages. Wages are low, although higher than in Germany. The women street cleaners get two hundred marks or about sixty cents per day. Housemaids get five marks per day of the week free, and cooks are paid more. The ordinary laborer receives a dollar a day and mechanics get up to three dollars. Men on the farms are paid twelve dollars a month and board, but the women farm laborers receive less and work quite as hard. Money is scarce. There was much of the farm population worked by the year for the Baltic barons. These men received almost nothing, and labored from sunrise to sunset. Many of them lived on the estates having a small amount of potato land as a garden, and a certain allowance of food. In some cases the wife of the man was expected to give seventy days work per annum in addition.

Esthonian Money. As I travel about my pockets are bulging with Esthonian money. It is the same here as in Finland and Germany. The currency is so low that one has to have all his pockets filled with bank notes to pay his running expenses. Before the war the Esthonian mark was worth twenty cents and it now takes more than three marks to equal one cent. It takes three hundred and fifty to equal a dollar and the five hundred mark bill which was formerly worth one hundred dollars has a value now of one dollar and fifty cents. The bank notes look like wall paper cut into bills. They have all sorts of fancy decorations. Their colors are green, red and yellow and the engravings are often symbolical. I blush every time I look at a hundred mark note. Of its face are two naked figures, a woman and a man, both as bare as were Adam and Eve before they ate the apple and adopted figleaves. On the back of the note is a girl fully dressed. She sits before a spinning wheel and it may be that she is making yarn for the clothes needed by Adam and Eve on the other side of the hill.

They Hate the Russians. Every where I go I see evidence of a hatred the Esthonians have for the Russians. Leaving the market and going up Castle Hill I passed a granite pedestal on which was en-

Mighty Labor—A Nation's Tribute

THE true wealth of the world is its man-power—Labor. To its proper application we owe all past accomplishments and depend for future achievements.

With respect and regard we, therefore, accord our congratulations—and thanks—for our glorious progress and attainments.

This is our tribute to the trades and industries. May we all join to create a new era of prosperity and perpetuate our commendable past.

YOUR CREDIT— What It Means to You!

—Credit Used Is Your Best Friend; Abused Your Surest Enemy.

—Credit Rightfully Used Is An Asset; Wrongfully Used, a Liability.

When times are good and money is plentiful it's quite easy to keep accounts paid and credit good, but a person deserves but little commendation for keeping accounts paid then; but the real testing time comes when conditions are not so good. Then it is the real measure of a man is taken and his capabilities gauged.

Of all times, though when a man should be most careful to protect his credit is when times are not good—for then it is he who sorely needs credit. It is his surest friend.

Credit is the result of years of fair dealing, and a good credit is the most prized possession a man can have.

Credit is reserve capital—not money—but more than money, for money is the servant of credit and obeys its commands.

The weak ones are dropping out now in every line of activity. The strong ones are fighting just a bit harder than ever before.

It is easy to quit—it takes a real man to fight.

The world hates a quitter—it loves a fighter.

No man has ever failed until he admits it.

A credit established can not be valued in dollars and cents.

Your credit will take care of you through good times and bad. Look well to your credit now, for a good credit is your insurance policy against the future and its every need.

ALL SOUNDED FOR HIGH SCHOOL AND COLLEGE GRIDDEERS

Coach "Bud" McCallum Arrives and Will Start Off Two Squads of Men Tuesday With Season's First Drill

The call for grid volunteers in junior colleges and high school football teams was issued by Coach A. V. McCallum, newly elected athletic director, Saturday. Practice will begin Tuesday, the college players at 9:30 o'clock in the afternoon. All boys interested in the game are asked to meet at the high school building.

Coach McCallum, who arrived from San Antonio Thursday night where he has been for the past five months as athletic director at the army vocational school, looked over the prospects for the new team in the form of old letter men who came in groups all during the day Saturday to see him. The Coyote veterans were met by a tall, black haired young man, who one of them, but who appeared to "know his stuff," as the football men commented.

Coached at University.

"Bud" McCallum is one of the few coaches who has coached four football teams from the University of Texas. For the seasons of 1913, '14, '15 and '16 he was on the line up in the coaching staff of the school, and during those four years played in most of the important games. Previous to his college grid days, he was a star of the Austin high school, where he received his preparatory education.

Coach McCallum knows as a football player, but he has a record as an assistant coach at the university, having coached the business administration classes for one year. For the past five months he has been at the army camp at San Antonio.

He can't talk about the prospects of a team at present. He answered when asked about the 1932 Coyotes. "I'll have nothing to say until the material that reports for practice Tuesday, and how well training is kept. Training is the most important part. The squad may suffer at times, but every player who is caught smoking cigarettes or drinking other intoxicants will be asked to turn in his uniform."

To start slow.

The workouts for the first four or five days, according to the coach, will be light, and the players will be drilled in track drills to induce in handling the ball, passing and running. Later will come the drill of punting. Later will come the drill on the ball, tackling practice, and hitting interferences, after which the regular practice will be in progress. While the more astute members of the squad have been holding light workouts in their own scores and without the aid of a coach, they will be given special attention and extra practice for the first few days.

LEADERS IN MAJOR LEAGUES CONTINUE AT HEAD OF LISTS

CHICAGO, Sept. 3.—The change took place in the batting order of the two major leagues during the last week in the National League, but in the American League the first four men and the pitcher, who was the first to bat, were the same. In the National League, the batting order was changed in the following order: Babe Ruth, who was batting first, moved to second; Hank Greenberg, who was batting second, moved to first; Jimmie Foxx, who was batting third, moved to second; and Earl Brown, who was batting fourth, moved to third. In the American League, the batting order was changed in the following order: Lou Gehrig, who was batting first, moved to second; Jimmie Foxx, who was batting second, moved to first; Hank Greenberg, who was batting third, moved to second; and Earl Brown, who was batting fourth, moved to third.

Idaho Battler Billed In Legion Bout Monday Night

LEONIDAS "LON" MORRISSEY, welterweight battler of Idaho, has returned to Wichita Falls to take on Speedy Binyon in the main bout of American Legion fight show Monday night at the ball park arena. Morrissey was a favorite in Wichita Falls several years back and it is said that he is still the clever battler that made him popular with the Wichita Falls fans.

FORMER AGGIE STAR WILL HELP DEVELOP KANGAROO MACHINE

SHERMAN, Texas, Sept. 1.—The athletic authorities of Austin College have signed a contract with Russell Higginbotham, former Aggie star, to assist coach Pete Cawthon in piloting the Kangaroo machine during the season. Higginbotham will be assigned to assist in the development of the machine during the spring while Cawthon looks after the team.

WHAT THEY THINK ABOUT DEMPSEY-FIRPO MEETING

By JACK HERRNSTEIN

Written expressly for Universal Service

SARATOGA SPRING, N. Y., Sept. 3.—Luis Firpo isn't much of a kid and I don't see how he can get out of it, or I'll allow him to go about four or five rounds with Jack Dempsey rather than do the popular thing and put him to sleep in two rounds.

This Firpo is a tough bird as far as physical power is concerned. If he were just a little less tough, I think he would not go more than two rounds with Jack. But I think he can take whatever Dempsey has to offer for at least three or four rounds, and that when he does go down it will not be one solid smash that will do it, but rather a series of punches that will wear him out.

This fight brings together the greatest two-fisted hitter in the game and a fellow who has nothing but a swinging right hand. It is against all odds, I think, to see a man of this caliber win a championship victory, especially in view of the fact that the other fellow has greater speed and a better jab. Firpo either can't fight and fourth round to the beating which he will endure through those early rounds.

THE LOOKOUT by Al Parker

The cool weather brought on by the rains of Friday and Saturday brings one face to face with the fact that it will soon be time for the start of the football season. This week will see many of the high schools and colleges assembling their football teams for the season. The start of the season will be marked by the start of the football season. The start of the season will be marked by the start of the football season.

Many Sportsmen Off for Prairie Chicken Hunts

Many sportsmen of Wichita Falls departed Friday and Saturday for various points in Lipscomb, Gray, Hemphill and Wheeler counties to take advantage of the first open season on prairie chickens to be enjoyed in Texas in something like 15 years. The open season is in effect in these counties only and the season continues but for 10 days, inclusive of Sept. 1.

UNIVERSITY CO-ED CAPTURES WESTERN WOMEN'S TOURNEY

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—A 28-year-old university student, Miriam Burton of Kansas City, captured a field of 200 western women golfers and became western champion by defeating Louise Farlow of Kansas City, Okla., champion, 4 and 3 in the final round of the little tournament at Exmoor Country Club. Then the Northwestern university sophomore added to her laurels by winning the play-off for low medal score of the meeting by out-golfing Mrs. Lee Mida of Chicago. They had tied at 39 and Miss Burton won the deciding round with an 18, two under par, to Mrs. Mida's 20.

SEVERAL GOOD PRODUCERS COMPLETED IN ARCHER COUNTY

Drilling Active and Many New Tests Are Spudded in; Shortage of Water is Relieved by Last Week's Rains

WICHITA OIL COMPANY IS GOOD PRODUCER

PANHANDLE, Texas, Sept. 1.—Oil is showing high over the crown block for 90 minutes duration at one hour intervals in the Whittington No. 1 Sanford section 23 block 24, Hutchinson county.

The Whittington was completed as a 100-barrel producer in July and shut in for pipe line connections. Latest casing of the Collins Oil Company is estimated as showing ability of drilling the well through the line well at 3445 feet, at which depth drilling was suspended, and aspects of success in production by deeper drilling. The five-inch line has been pulled and a string of five-inch pipe placed in the hole. The Whittington produced a sensation in local oil circles last month when the Panhandle field was extended 10 miles northwest by 2 1/2 square miles.

The Producers and Refiners Corporation has made a location for immediate drilling on section 11, block 7, in the extreme southwest corner of Hutchinson county, five miles southwest of Whittington. Between these two wells, an acreage of 100 acres, section 31 block 23, is being drilled at 3370 feet and producing 150-barrel day with 10-inch pipe. This well is logging in 25-barrel day with 10-inch pipe. It is expected to make a 100-barrel producer.

The Chesnut and McCarty Oil Company has casing set on its No. 1 well in the Petrosen pool at 1865 feet. The Chesnut and McCarty Oil Company has started casing a sand at 1875 feet and is expected to produce 100-barrel day.

RED RIVER RISE HALTS DRILLING NEAR GRANDFIELD

GRANDFIELD, Okla., Sept. 1.—Red river, which a few days ago was as dry as the Sahara desert, but in the last few days, has risen to the heavy rain in the panhandle, has practically stopped all drilling operations until the water recedes enough to allow the pumps to be transported material to the various locations.

West of the river bridge, the Chesnut and McCarty Oil Company has casing set on its No. 2 well in the Petrosen pool at 1865 feet. The Chesnut and McCarty Oil Company has started casing a sand at 1875 feet and is expected to produce 100-barrel day.

REAR DRILLING NEAR GRANDFIELD

GRANDFIELD, Okla., Sept. 1.—Rear drilling, which a few days ago was as dry as the Sahara desert, but in the last few days, has risen to the heavy rain in the panhandle, has practically stopped all drilling operations until the water recedes enough to allow the pumps to be transported material to the various locations.

MAY LOSE SIGHT OF ONE EYE AS THE RESULT OF A SCUFFLING MATCH HAD WITH A YOUNG BROTHER FRIDAY P. M.

A friendly scuffle with a younger brother Friday afternoon in the back yard of the family home may cost Tom Ballard, 1344 West 14th street, the sight of one eye. Mr. Ballard, who is employed at Archer's White Kitchen, was operated on at the general hospital Saturday morning.

Drilling Still Decreasing in Wichita County; Several Locations Made But Few Wells Completed

A general shutdown of all unnecessary drilling was noticeable in all parts of Wichita County during the past week. Very few wells were completed and those were of a small calibre, activity consisting of the drilling of offset sand on the west side of the development. Several locations were made, but it is doubtful if any actual drilling will take place until the market becomes more stabilized.

Little Activity Reported for Graham Field

Special to The Times—Sept. 1.—In keeping with the general plan of cooperation, Young county operators are still resting on their laurels. A survey of the Graham field shows a little activity, but it is true that a number of wildcat wells were drilled, but it is doubtful if any actual drilling will take place until the market becomes more stabilized.

Burburnett News Budget

BURBURNETT, Sept. 1.—The city is making excavation for the laying of the sewer line. The sewer line will be laid along the main lateral of the sewer and when completed the city will be ready to receive the water. The work is being done by the city in which the system will be taken over in the near future.

Wichita Falls Merchants Offer a Wide Variety of Prices and Styles

The merchants of Wichita Falls invite you to inspect the extensive and remarkably attractive stocks that are being offered this season.

Local buyers have returned from trips to eastern points and probably never in the history of this city has so wide and interesting a variety of merchandise been offered shoppers of this trade territory, as will be found on display in the various stores and shops.

The latest in styles and the newest in fabrics may be obtained and a sufficient variety is offered to meet the most discriminating and fastidious tastes.

As will be seen by an inspection of the pages of this section the local stores are, this season, offering all that could be found in any of the larger cities in the way of selection and value.

VISITOR FROM DALLAS.

Miss Maurine Knight, who was complimented with one of the prettiest parties of the month last week at the home of Mrs. O. R. Womack, with Mrs. Womack and Mrs. J. Hayden Drummond hostesses, is an attractive visitor from Dallas.

Ranch Parties Breaking Up, and Groups of Wichitans Returning From Summer Trips; Few Guests

With the breaking up of several delightful ranch parties, the returning bands of various groups of Wichitans who have summured on the west coast, in Colorado and New Mexico, and even out of the United States, the "high sign" for a breath of fall weather has been stily sent to the weather man from Wichita Falls.

Among the ranch parties for which local hosts and hostesses have been responsible, none has attracted more delightful hospitality than that of the W. R. Ferguson and ranch homes. All summer long the party of guests has succeeded in enjoying the Coleman country place in New Mexico, and enjoyed the good entertainment provided.

Personal Mention

Miss Birch Murphy has returned from Denver, Colo. Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hagin have returned from a month in Los Angeles. Mrs. J. H. Fowler went to Woodward, Okla., Friday to spend the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Holloway of Dallas spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Murphy, en route to Manhattan, Okla. Mr. and Mrs. Clayborne Harvey of Abilene are visiting Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Harvey at their home, 1632 Elizabeth.

Miss Anna Mae Nix and her guest Miss Ethel Mae Elston of New York City spent a few days visiting in Electric last week. Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Honaker returned from Fort Worth and Bowie Thursday, where they have been visiting friends.

Miss Lorena Dayvort of 1284 Monroe leaves for a short visit to Texas Sunday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Dave Paul and family have returned from Colorado points where they spent part of the summer. J. W. Thorne and R. W. H. McCullough are in Sherman attending the annual meeting of the North Texas conference, Epworth League.

Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Fysson, I. C. Fysson and Arthur Fysson returned Friday from Camden, Tenn., where they have been spending the summer at their home. Mr. Fysson is registered at the High school and Junior college, and I. C. Fysson is an instructor in the High school, where Arthur is a student.

TWO YOUTHFUL COWMEN Kemp Maer, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Newton Maer, and David Kemp Langford, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Langford, and both grandsons of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Kemp, are caught by the camera man at an opportune moment. They must be plotting something wicked.

The guest of Miss Gay Gwynn the past week or ten days, left Sunday for home, accompanied by Miss Dyer.

Miss Helen and Mildred Mearns came in Saturday morning from Broken Cole, where they spent the summer. Both are members of the public schools faculty.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hare, Miss Florence McCulloch and Mrs. J. B. Stokes have returned from a trip to Yellowstone Park, Salt Lake City, and Denver.

Miss Anna Belle returned to her home at Dallas, Friday after spending two weeks at McArdle, Okla., in the company of this city and Mrs. M. B. Rowe of Burkburnett.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Weaver and family and Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Cecil and family have returned from an overland trip and visit in Colorado Springs.

Miss Jane McCulloch returned Friday from Mexico City where she has been studying in the University of Mexico. She will teach Spanish and English in the local high school this winter.

Miss Juanita Prince left Friday to join her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Lovell at McArdle, Okla., and will go with them to California to visit various points on the coast for an indefinite stay.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Heath, Miss Melba Heath, Miss Estel Lee, and Byron Heath have returned from an overland trip to Bentonville, Ark., where they visited relatives several weeks.

Bill Caskey has returned to his home here from the New York show which he has been conducting. He brought a beautiful Russian Stag hound to the small daughter of his brother, W. K. Caskey.

Miss Ruth Vaughn, who is connected with the Bureau School of Music, has just returned from New York where she took special work under Mrs. Carrie Louise Denning. Miss Vaughn visited in Boston, Niagara, and St. Louis before returning home.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Montgomery have returned home after a month's trip through New Mexico and the western coast states. They were guests of Mrs. W. W. Murphy at the Hammond ranch in Wagon Mound, and enjoyed their stay very much.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Eyer and son, Leon Jr., accompanied by Mrs. Eyer's sister, Miss Alveda Mott, returned Friday from New Orleans after spending the summer with Mrs. W. W. Murphy at the Hammond ranch. Miss Montgomery will attend school in New Orleans this winter.

Miss L. A. Pitts and little daughter, Virginia, have just returned from Colorado, where they spent the summer, and from New York City, where they spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Pitts. Miss Pitts has just returned from a trip abroad.

MRS. ETHEL ALLEN NELSON

A very pretty romance attaches itself to the circumstances which brought attractive young Mrs. Nelson, wife of the gifted violinist who has made his home here the past few days, to her present home at 1114 Tenth street, Wichita Falls, Texas, U. S. A.

The romance began two years ago when Sothe Blom, daughter of a retired Norwegian shipper of Christiania, met Ethel Nelson in Paris, where he had returned after his services as a member of the American overseas forces in continuing his violin studies with a celebrated French master. Miss Blom, with her charming personality and attractive gifts she is already making her own name in the musical world.

And the not entirely unexpected happened. Later there was a visit to the home in Christiania from the young violinist, and after a long time—after Mr. Allen had returned to America, in fact—Father and Mother Blom gave their consent. The splendid school of New York again furnished inspiration to the bride-elect, and just before she sailed from New York she completed special courses in home economics in preparation for her practical home-making in America.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson celebrated their marriage in New York City at the "little church around the corner" immediately after her arrival in the metropolitan, where he had been waiting for her some days and left in ten days for visits to his people in Indiana and Illinois, and in Kansas. They arrived here last Saturday, and are at home for the present at the home of Mrs. Mary J. Dornes, 1214 Tenth street.

Wichita Falls friends of Mr. Nelson, who has made himself a very special place among the local soloists and music-loving public, have given the bride from Norway a warm welcome, and with her charming personality and attractive gifts she is already making her own name in the musical world.

Has Longest Hair in the World

The first is: To any grandmother in the world who can "measure even" with her in the matter of hair. The second: To any woman in the world who can match her record for long hair.

Many Beautiful Homes Nearing Completion; Ed Petersen Will Move into Theirs Pretty Soon

More beautiful homes seem to be nearing completion in Wichita Falls and on the county roads running out from it right now than at any period in the history of the city.

The P. P. Langfords are moving into one of the handsomest residences in the city this month, in their new home on Tenth and Tilden.

Four bedrooms upstairs include the guest room, and all are beautifully finished and furnished with big windows and lovely artificial lighting.

When we see a thing legitimate in one state is bigamy; in another, adultery in another, and when child legitimate in one state is illegitimate and deprived of property rights in another, we see the need of uniform marriage and divorce laws.

Largely through the organized efforts of clubwomen, the following states now have laws providing for the establishment of kindergartens on petition: California, Arizona, Nevada, Maine, Texas, Kansas, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and New Mexico.

Windows all over the place. An upstairs living room, or family sitting room, already provided to be one of the most attractive rooms in the house, for the breakfast room, as the beautiful little breakfast room and a little sun parlor downstairs.

The living and reception room downstairs occupies a large slice of the lower floor, and is handsomely planned. The draperies throughout are most appropriate and lovely, and the beautiful rug arrest the eye and "dress" the feet.

The cement pool, roofed like a summer house, will probably be a favorite retreat for the young people, and there are one or two other summer houses which will be beautiful with rose vines and shrubbery about it.

The living room suite was attractive and colorful with stripes and...

NEW AUTUMN FASHIONS

EMPHATICALLY, yes! Every woman may wear clothes in which the fineness of Fashion is exquisitely exemplified—with the finale of price decisively modified.

'Phone 5101 or 7445 802 Seventh Street'.

Advertisement for The Parisian. 'NEW AUTUMN FASHIONS'. 'EMPHATICALLY, yes! Every woman may wear clothes in which the fineness of Fashion is exquisitely exemplified—with the finale of price decisively modified. The new fashions for Autumn are magnificent in conception—yet modest in cost. Be among the first to wear them!' 'The Parisian FOR SMART STYLES'.

Equisite New Lingerie

It is in her love of exquisite lingerie that a woman shows her true feminine appreciation of dainty, fragile-looking garments. And the glorious displays which are to be found in the shops this fall cannot help but heighten the interest.

The new step in combinations follows the fashion of the frock and are longer waisted than before. They have no fullness above the waistline and while not so closely fitted, they are worn plain with no shirring at the top. The only fullness below the waist is introduced by means of narrow pleats on either hip. The trimming may be a medallion or a flat band of fillet or Irish crochet. Often times exquisite little silken flowers add to the charm of these garments.

A New Bodice

So many women wear silk knickers in winter nowadays. And each one who does, realizes how the cambric and knickers never seem to meet at the waist line but always leave two bands of elastic about an inch apart. So a novel bodice has been designed to obviate this. This bodice is semi-fitted of double crepe de chine or heavy lace over crepe de chine. As this bodice extends two or three inches below the waist, it completely covers the elastic top of the knickers and gives a smooth fitted line at the waist. These bodices are only suited to the slender figure. But she who is slender needs no brassiere with them.

The vest chemise and matching step in is another favorite type of undergarment for the fastidious woman and this season they are more exquisite than ever with fine lace and embroideries.

Sashes for Nightgowns

Even the nightgowns have sashes

now, to emphasize the low waist line. The nightgown itself is cut on long, straight lines with the fullness concentrated in tiny pleats which fall from the shoulder on either side. Then a sash of ribbon about an inch wide is tied about the hips with rather long loops and ends which almost reach the floor.

The "V" neck is a great favorite for this fall. And to most women it is quite the most becoming neckline of all. The batwing neckline is also in high favor, but the newer gowns with this type of neck are made to fall down closely over the shoulder.

Every woman remembers how becoming the caps were which she wore for Red Cross work during the war. So now the smart woman for negligee wear, chooses a cap of heavy lace worn just as the Red Cross cap was worn. Other becoming caps are made almost like a bonnet with a trim of lace falling gracefully at the back of the neck.

The Hostess Gown

The hostess gown of the tea gown as it is frequently called is quite the appropriate thing for tea or for an informal dinner at home. And this season soft velvets beautifully draped and sometimes fur trimmed are quite the most fashionable. And the slender yet flowing lines of these gowns give a graceful dignity which is wholly charming. And it is these gowns that a woman can really study her type and evolve a creation best suited to it, for they do not follow the mode as closely as the more formal dress.

Of course when cold winds are howling at our windows, a warm negligee is quite a welcome if not an absolutely necessary part of our wardrobe. For just such times as this the negligee of quilted silk is quite the most comfortably cozy of all garments. And they are particularly becoming when their simplicity is relieved by a dainty face collar.

The delightfully dainty negligees of chiffon or tricot voile follow the modish silhouettes and have a flat straight back with any fullness gathered in the front, sometimes accentuated by a huge flat bow.

HEAVIER TRACKS TO BE INSTALLED ON KATY LINES

Following the plans of improvements of the M. K. & T. lines between Whitesboro and Wichita Falls, heavier steel tracks will be laid in the immediate future, according to an announcement made Saturday by H. G. Smith, division freight and passenger agent.

The completion of this work of improvement will cost approximately $250,000, according to officials. A portion of the heavier track was placed last year, but the work which will begin within a few days, when completed will place the Wichita Falls branch on an equality with the main lines.

ASK YOUR NEIGHBOR Women Tell Each Other How They Have Been Helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Firm, Plump, Fresh! MARY is the eyes that are turned to gaze with keen admiration on the well developed, healthy girl no matter where she may be—on the rapidly moving thoroughfare or gliding gracefully over the dance floor. All eyes turn because we all appreciate the girl with the figure so firm and plump—the girl who radiantly red cheeks, cheeks that carry a touch of roses from nature's own garden—the girl with the sparkling eyes, keen and sharp—the girl with buoyancy and the swing of youth. Not necessarily an out-of-doors girl. Just a girl with ever increasing blood cells. Just a girl filled with the vim and vigor of youth. S. S. S. since 1888, has stood for increased blood cells. S. S. S. means restored strength—rekindled vitality—added energy. Take S. S. S. and watch the bloom of youth return to your cheeks. Watch away before each that is firm and plump. Red blood cells will do it and S. S. S. will build them: it contains only pure vegetable ingredients. S. S. S. is sold at all good drug stores. The large size bottle is more economical.

To Complete your Costume

To Marie's

Sometimes it seems as though the whole problem of the smartly dressed woman lay in choosing just the right effective background of a well cut frock, one's personality may be beautifully expressed in smartly tailored little accessories. And fortunately they are annually lovely this year.

Ear rings are worn more than ever this season, and they are larger or smaller—of that sounds possible to you. Cut steel, all the gloriously colored semi-precious stones, intricately carved gold, silver, earrings with a tiny pearl on the end of each of many fine, short-gold chains, plain metal, or dainty, wide ear rings—all are good. The only rule seems to be that earrings of some sort or another you must wear if you would be smart. And the wise woman follows only one guide in choosing her ear rings—becomingness.

And the bracelets! There is nothing unusual in seeing a slender, girly arm with from ten to twenty of them. And they are so attractive with the sleeveless frocks. Again, as in ear rings, all types are good from the slender flexible bands to huge wide ones. But quite the most popular are the thick rounded bracelets which are worn in all imaginable colors as well as carved ivory. Quite popular, too, are little tinkling bracelets of gaily colored glass.

For the Hat
It is very seldom, now-a-days that one sees an ornamental coiffure, especially in the evening. For those who find smooth hair, dressed close to the head, becoming, there are stunning Spanish combs. Some are of solid bright colors while others are of shell set with brilliant. But this season one comb no matter how large, is not considered enough. A pair of them are worn as a rule. They are always put in exactly opposite each other. These combs are frequently set straight across the back of the head. If it is more becoming, one is worn a little higher than the other. You will find the balanced effect of these combs utterly charming.

The ever becoming bandeau is still a great favorite. Perhaps one reason for its continued popularity is that it holds the hair just in place

TOTAL OF 572,830 BUILDING PERMITS ISSUED IN AUGUST

Building for the month of August failed to resume itself from the slump into which it fell early in the summer and from which it has not yet revived. Permits during the month amounted to only 572,830, against 576,500 for July and 511,976 for the same month of the previous year.

In number the permits issued during the month showed an increase of six over the number issued in July and an increase of 38 over August, 1922.

During the week ending August 31, building was practically at a standstill. Twelve permits granted from the office of the city clerk during the week did not include a permit for an expenditure exceeding $1,000. All twelve of the permits issued called for minor improvements and repairs to domestic and business property. Permits were granted to the following:

M. W. Hilts, 2144 Avenue O, garage, $75.
C. E. Bradshaw, 2018 Avenue B, garage, $145.
E. Lynn, 2500 Grant, garage, $50.

What the Younger Generation Will Wear

By Marie's

To a certain extent of course, the fashions for children are influenced by the modes which their elders follow. But the day when children simply wore imitations of the fashions of their parents, has not been assigned to the dark ages. And well may any child of today rejoice that their clothes follow low fashions evolved for her and that simplicity, comfort and youthful becomingness are the hallmarks of these fashions.

Children are far more sensitive about their clothing than their parents sometimes realize, and a child who is simply and tastefully dressed in the youthful fashions which find favor among the playmates has learned the first and most important lessons in poise.

And the children's frocks for fall seem to have been designed with that very thought in mind, so charmingly natural and graceful their lines.

While their elders are favoring the low waist-line, the children's frocks have gone a step farther and as a rule have no waist line at all, but hang straight from the shoulder.

The wide, pleated bertha collar is so unusually becoming to fresh youthful faces, and is frequently seen—especially on the frocks of better materials.

Blue serge—ever smart and practical, is very popular for the little girl for school and play while her dressier frocks may be of printed silk or a softer crepe de chine. Pleats are frequently used for these children's frocks either in the form of pleated collars or trimming frills or else the whole frock may be pleated. These pleats, so popular with grown-up fashions, are particularly becoming to the growing angular ages.

When these younger children's frocks do have a giraffe, it is generally a soft sash or a braid giraffe loosely about the hips.

When she grows a bit older, the best school fashions for the young miss are sport clothes. A pleated wool skirt striped or checked with a plain high round neck blouse and a sweater is a great favorite with miss ten to sixteen. Her frocks too, follow the simple, straight lines of the sport frock, with a note of interest added in the narrow belt placed low about her hips.

Printed silk, crepe de chine and velvet are very popular for the afternoon frock of the young miss. The pleats and blue bands seen just now are very becoming to her at the age where armor and legs seem to be awkwardly in the way.

Warden Declares Negroes Victims Severe Sentences

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Sept. 1.—About 150 delegates to the 14th annual convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, being held in Kansas City, Kan., today visited the federal penitentiary here and were allowed to converse with the 54 negro prisoners held in connection with the riot in Houston, Texas, in 1918. The association has declared itself in favor of the release of these men.

These prisoners "are the victims of unduly severe sentences," W. L. Hedges, warden of the penitentiary, said in an address to the delegates. "They are not criminals and not murderers. They are a fine body of men and are worthy of every effort to obtain their release."

Others speakers pledged their effort to keep up the fight until every one of the prisoners is either dead or released.

Simplicity Still Rules in Men's Clothing

There will be no decided style departures in men's clothes this fall and winter. Simplicity and conservatism still rule supreme. While some of the lines may be a bit audacious, there is a tendency to break away from them.

Novalties outside of those usually found in sport clothes will be seen very little during the coming months, particularly in apparel for the well-dressed man. The fast and rick-rack models of the past two years are gradually becoming extinct, and once more the pendulum swings back to the plain and more dignified styles.

English Influence Noted.
The three-button coat will be emphasized. This coat is of loose fitting proportions, with low gorge, notch lapels, no flare and fitted exactly over the hips, with no vent in the back.

Whatever tendency toward extravagance is developed in the new where they were twelve months worn more by the younger fellows than the more mature men. These will favor the soft roll front coats, with very wide lapels, broad shoulders, lower pockets. The front of the coat will be rounded off at the bottom.

Loose fitting effects and the large English type of ulsters are expected to share the limelight in the apparel field this fall and winter. While buttoners were prominent last year, the tendency is to break away from this particular style, although there will be some half buttoners.

Convertible Collars Favored.
Many of the overcoats will have convertible collars and patch pockets; some will show plain backs and others will have yokes and inverted plaits.

Among the coats that won a place in clothing last year and will continue in good taste this year is a forty-four inch garment, with regular shoulders, small self collar and lapel. The sleeves are plain; there are three patch pockets, and they have button through or fly fronts. Such coats will be worn extensively by the younger fellows; the smart business man and college man, who will substitute an angors muffler for a storm collar.

Among the styles the double-breasted appears to be the most favored, but some of the better makers are showing smart, dapper single-breasted garments. These will be shown in topcoats as well as overcoats.

Fabrics More Practical.
Manufacturers are returning to the practical ideas in fabric-fabrics that will look well and wear well, instead of the fluff, soft finished materials of recent years, the weaves will be firmer. While the softer goods made a better presentation, they failed to give the required wear.

In topcoats there is no radical change in styles, but it's the tailoring that determines the quality. In line with this remark, it's the quality of anything, especially in clothes that decides its real value. In conclusion, let us say that it pays to pay a little bit more; for by paying little extra you are saving in the long run.

Double-Breasted to Prevail.
The double-breasted suit which has shown streaks of popularity in recent years promises to come out with a greater flourish than ever. The reason the double-breasted expects to come to the foreground is due to the fact that the new English cut garments lend themselves to these supplies. In the suits of this style, as well as other styles, most waistcoats have blunt bottoms. The trousers will, in many cases, be pleated at the top and straight hanging from knee to bottom. The width of the bottom will be left purely to personal preference, but all will be cut liberally.

In colors the natural tendency is toward the darker shades, as has been the case in past seasons. There will be shown some of the lighter shades but not to any great extent. Among the staple colors will be brown and blue. These have had the call almost since the year was begun to wear good clothes and they promise to continue in popularity for years to come.

Stripes Continue in Popularity.
Stripes will be good again as they have been in past seasons, but with new shadow effects which will give a little variation. Check-stripes also will be shown, but most of these designs will be small and dignified.

As for prices, coats are practically single. There may be a slight increase, due to a small advance in woolens since last spring, but this increase will be so small as to be hardly noticeable. Whatever advances there is will be found mostly in the cost of cheaper clothes. The prices of better made suits, topcoats and overcoats will remain about where they were twelve months ago.

SETTLE CONTROVERSIES OVER ARTICLES IN PAPERS

HAVANA, Sept. 1. (P)—Controversies between Colonel Eduardo Fajol, commanding the army district of Oriente, and Jose M. Masaurieta, editor of El Imparcial, and Representative Gonzalez Beaulieu and Alvaro Baroni, editor of Herald de Cuba, as a result of articles appearing in the papers, have been settled. It was made known today.

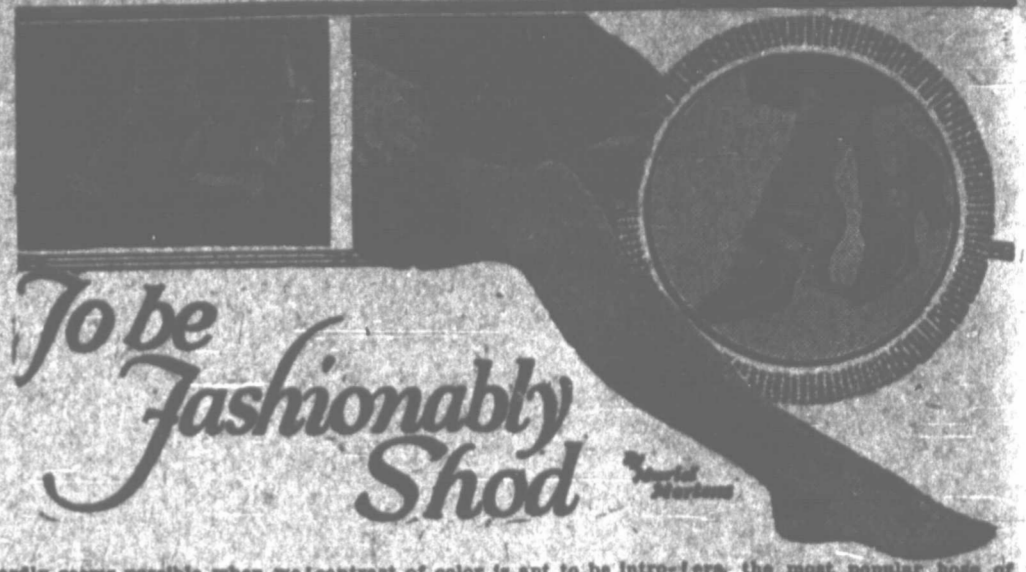

Masaurieta and Baroni were slightly injured in their arms, while "examining swords" at their residence, says La Prensa.

THREE MORE POLICE OFFICERS RELIEVED BY CHIEF SATURDAY

Further reduction in the city police force was made Saturday when two patrolmen and one detective were relieved by Chief of Police George Hodgins. The reductions became necessary in keeping the expense of the department within the budget, Chief Hodgins said, and announced that the vacancies caused by their release would not be filled.

The officers relieved of duty Sept. 1 were Harry Bendrich, Detective; A. Spencer and C. M. Willis, patrolmen.

It hardly seems possible when we look back a few years, to think that the plain oxford and pump formed such an important part of the foot wear fashions of the well-dressed woman. For now elaboration and still more elaboration is the keynote of footwear smartness.

Straps Are the Thing.
The strap slipper is quite the most popular of all. Straps of every kind and description are seen—some extending way up to the ankle in such narrow bands that they resemble narrow ribbons. Frequently lattice work is seen in the sides of the slipper, or in the front coming up the instep. In fact, the more unusual the strap, the smarter the slipper. Sometimes these straps are fastened with tiny buckles. In the wide slippers they are very apt to have a button which may be covered if you so desire, with a slide buckle of pearls or rhinestones. These buckles add greatly to the smart elaboration of the dressier slipper.

Patent leather is so attractively trim and smart that it is admirably suited for street wear with the smart tailleur. However, suede or suede trimmed with patent or dull leather is to be seen in the foremost ranks of foot wear fashions. In these suede shoes great ingenuity is shown in the countless fascinating ways in which the contrasting leather is introduced. Sometimes slashes in the suede show the contrasting leather, or it may be put on trailing work or as a mere conventional edging. Certainly never before did the shoe designers have such an opportunity to exercise a fertile imagination as that which they must use at present if their shoes are to attain any degree of popularity and smartness in the eyes of the well-dressed woman.

With the contrast of leather a contrast of color is apt to be introduced. Sometimes this contrast is given by a darker self tone, or it may be given by a contrasting shade of brown, tan and caramel, are seen in the newer footwear models. However, with the afternoon frock if it is black, black satin strap slippers are just the thing.

For evening wear the gold-colored slipper is always correct, but one who wishes to introduce more originality into her costume will choose some of the gorgeously brocaded slippers or even satin ones. However the latest thing is to have the colors of these slippers a contrast to the shade of the gown rather than harmonizing with it.

The Sports Shoe
Very good for sports wear is the low-heeled suede slipper trimmed with a contrasting leather. But for the more energetic sports, the practical low-heeled, mannish oxford is just the thing.

With the black slippers, unless you wish to achieve an entirely black costume, the light hose are generally worn.

In the gray tones Moonlight, Babbling Brook, Pilgrim and Cut Steel are the newest, while the most recent fashions in shades are Blush, Rosalita, and Star Dust. Then there are the fascinating sun tints which include Laguna, Gateau, Freckles, Novelty, Dawn, Sunset and Parchment.

Of course there are innumerable shades of gray and tan which have been carefully planned to match the newer shoes exactly.

Though wool hose will be worn for skating and always with knicker-

Leading the way to Winter Smartness
By Muriel Mertens

After the hot summer months, how welcome the smart darker shades of fall are! And what a relief it is to see them after the riot of summer's colors. In a clever new tailored frock and a smart little toque every woman feels that she is at least on her way to meet the genius of a new winter season.

Blue serge is returning once more to the height of fashion. Of course every American woman will be glad to hear that for even though blue serge may fall temporarily in the estimation of the smart Parisienne, the well dressed American woman never lets it quite get out of fashion. And wise she is, too, for blue serge is so youthful and trimly becoming, and there are occasions when a blue serge frock seems to be the only thing quite suitable to wear.

Cost Dresses Are Good

And when fashion develops the ever useful coat dress in blue serge, the result is a frock which is perfectly suitable as well as suitable for almost every day time occasion. The silhouette of these street frocks is usually very straight and slender, sometimes there is no belt or giraffe of any sort, but the dress is just fastened at the side front with a small side bow or an elaborate buckle.

Some very attractive models have a pointed collar, in fact, in fact, the dress is just fastened at the side front with a small side bow or an elaborate buckle.

You Still Need Ice

As a general thing, after August rolls by we think that Fall is upon us. But quite to the contrary, September is usually hotter than the mid-summer months and you require just as much—if not a little more—ice to keep you and the family comfortable.

We're still holding production up to the top notch and still maintaining the complete delivery fleet that gives you such splendid service.

BUY YOUR ICE WITH OUR COUPON BOOKS

With a coupon book at hand, you're independent of change making—no handful of wet silver must be handed to break the $5 bill, which happens to be the smallest you have when the ice man calls.

Besides their convenience a substantial saving is effected by using our coupon books as you save from 15c to 20c on every hundred pounds of ice you buy. A coupon book also saves time for yourself and the driver and enables us to render the speedy service you appreciate.

MRS. WALLACE REID IN "HUMAN WRECKAGE" AT THE EMPRESS

Picture Specially Produced and Classed Among Year's Best Will Be Presented During Entire Week

By MRS. WALLACE REID
With the appalling information that there are more than a million narcotics addicts in this country today and that the tide of addiction is rising rapidly in this and other nations isn't it high time we did something to stem the growth of the great beast that harrases humanity and spreads misery in its wake?
Unless immediate action is taken by those empowered by law to take such action, no child will be safe from the ravages of the dope peddler.
Embodied in the protection they have enjoyed from unscrupulous politicians these heads of boys are venturing to the very school house itself. The school house, pride of our vanquished civilization, at the mercy of these vandals. Imagine that and then ask yourself what you are going to do to assist in this world-wide movement to check the spread of addiction.

The substance of the production of "Human Wreckage" for one great purpose—to make the people think. Once we arouse the forward thinking men and women of this country to deep thought on the matter of the dope problem, we are certain to get the sort of concerted action the situation so desperately requires.
It is not for me to reveal the horror of dope addiction. It is not for me to reveal the personal ordeal through which I have passed, but it is for me to beseech every man, woman and child to do his or her part to make our campaign a success. Only by such concerted action can we make any appreciable headway in our efforts to slay the beast of narcotics.
"Human Wreckage" will be presented at the Empress for a whole week, beginning Monday, Sept. 2nd.

Musical Comedy Success 'Irene' Will Open Theatrical Season at Palace Wednesday, September 12

"Irene," the outstanding musical comedy success of the past decade, will be seen at the Palace Theatre as the opening attraction of the new season on Wednesday, September 12th. After breaking records for long runs and return engagements in all the principal cities of Europe and America, "Irene's" popularity in New York was greater than that of any other musical play ever seen there and it holds the record for number of performances in one theater.
James Montgomery, author of the book, has written an interesting love story and has created in his chief character, Irene O'Dara, a truly golden girl, who is chosen to display the smart gowns created by a fashionable dressmaker. While wearing garments of the latest style and associating with the smart set, she gradually becomes polished and develops into a lady of charming manners at the same time espousing not only the heart of the man she loves, but the hearts of all even those who had scoffed at her humble origin.
Joseph McCarthy, to whom this same little wage earner appealed on a becoming muse, wrote the lyrics for a round two dozen catchy songs to fit the play, and last but not least, Harry Tierney, who composed the music, and who did it so well that now, "Allies Blue Gown," "Castle of Dreams" and "My Boyhood" are being written and sung to the uttermost corners of the earth. The high standard established during the run of "Irene" in New York will be maintained with the result that when this musical offering comes to this city, it will be elaborately mounted and interpreted by a star representative artists and a superb chorus of singing beauties.

WOMEN SECURE LIBERTY UNDER PECULIAR LAW

Two women who had served a number of weeks in the county jail through the terms of a statute which many lawyers construe as a most peculiar one.
Both women were serving out a heavy fine with court costs attached, but neither one of the terms had been more than approximately one-third served.
Through a writ of habeas corpus sued out in the justice of peace court the women sought their liberty and won. The statute brought into play appears in the penal code of the state of Texas and provides that a defendant may serve out a fine in jail at the rate of one dollar a day.
But a clause was added which in substance states that if the county

Juvenile Officer Calls Attention To Attendance Law Requiring All Children to Go to School 100 Days

With the opening day of school only one week away, Juvenile Officer Healey is turning his attention to informing children and their parents about the compulsory school attendance law. In making people acquainted with this law he states that there will be no truancy whatsoever this year and that parents who do not send their children to school will be taken to task and children will be compelled to go as required.
The law states that every child in the state who is eight years and not more than fourteen years old shall be required to attend public schools in the district of his residence, or in some other district to which it may be transferred as provided by law, for a period of not less than 100 days for the scholastic year beginning September 1, 1935. The period of compulsory school attendance at each school begins at the opening of the school term, unless otherwise authorized by the district school trustees for absence.
The law, however, has some exceptions which state that the following classes are exempt under the law: Any child who attends a private or parochial school or who is being properly instructed by a private tutor; any child whose bodily or mental condition is such as to render attendance inadvisable; any child who is blind, deaf, dumb or feeble-minded; any child living more than two and one-half miles by direct and traveled road from the nearest public school; any child who is more than 12 years of age who has satisfactorily completed the work of the seventh grade.
With reference to excuses for absence the law reads as follows: "Any child not exempted from the provisions of this act may be excused for temporary absence due to personal sickness, sickness or death in the family, quarantine, severe storm which has destroyed bridges and made the regular means of travel dangerous, or for unusual causes acceptable to the teacher, principal or superintendent, provided that the excuse are in writing and signed by the parent or guardian of said child."
Another article in the law applies to the employment of children or school age during the school term and follows: "No child under fourteen years of age not lawfully excused from attendance upon school shall be employed by any one during the school hours in any occupation during the period in which the child is required to be in school. Any person, firm or corporation found guilty of employing any child or any person inducing any child to remain out of school who is subject to the provisions of this act shall be fined not to exceed ten dollars for each offense and each day said child is employed after due notice given by any school official that said child cannot be legally employed shall constitute a separate offense."
The law also gives the attendance officer the power to investigate all unexcused absences from school and to file charges against the proper persons in the courts.
Duties of Parents.
An entire section of the law is devoted to duties of parents or guardians. Any parent or person standing in parental relation to a child within the compulsory school attendance age who is not properly excused from school attendance, who fails to require such child to attend school regularly for a period of 100 days will be warned by the county school attendance officer and if the parent or guardian then fails to require the child to attend school, the officer shall file a complaint against them in the county court or justice court and upon conviction of the first offense he shall be fined the second offense $10 and each following offense $25.

In case, however, the parent or guardian can show by satisfactory proof that he has attempted to compel the child to attend school and the child will not attend, action can be brought against the child, who will be subject to commitment to the state juvenile training school.
This same rule applies to an incorrigible, insubordinate, disorderly or immoral school child.

Seven before the time of the immortal Shakespeare, comedy-drama was popular and in heavy demand. Today this type of drama is even more popular than it ever has been. Evidence of this is the fact that a remarkable preference for this sort of picture, and thirty-seven thousand high school students of New York recently filled out questionnaires with the result that thirty per cent of these picture fans declared in favor of comedy-drama as their favorite picture.

There is a psychological reason for the success of this questionable, and in fact, unscientific, evidence. It is that the most people in general are just a little subnormal, or rather, sub-normal, with nature. They are most people in general, to a greater or less degree, depending. From a physiological standpoint, the most natural thing for a person to do is to smile. The class of the face are required to be brought into action for the latter will only give muscles can produce smiles.

A well-balanced comedy-drama has a lesson of ethics which provides relief from the humor which would otherwise pall.

There is also a great reason why people like out-of-door settings for their pictures. It is the greater beauty and the greatest of all scenic art. No scenery, no technical effect, can help to improve on nature. The sky, mountains, plains, valleys and forests provide a grandeur that man-made settings can but poorly imitate.

And then there is man's primitive instinct which, through the subconscious mind, draws him back to the days when man was closer to nature.

One of the most refreshing, romantic comedy-dramas of the great out-door type is "The Huntress," the screen adaptation of Herbert Footner's popular novel of the same title, a First National picture, which is to be shown at the Strand at the Olympic Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

"The Huntress" interweaves comedy and action in depicting the story of a white girl who was rescued by Indians and who believed herself a Indian, though her nature craved, unconsciously, of white. Immediately she learns from the sage and philosopher of the tribe that she is a white girl, and she immediately formulates her own emancipation proclamation and declaration of independence, and to make sure she will not be deceived in any Indian brave, sets out to capture a white husband. Her unconventional means to an end make this one characteristically humorous entertainment.

In this picture, which was directed by Lynn Reynolds, one of the foremost directors of silent drama, comes the story of a young woman, business with radiance of humorous incident and radiance of superposition to form an attraction of the highest quality.

But the descriptive power of this picture is not even equal to the best in the world. The action is depicted as the screen through the interpretations of a remarkable star cast which is headed by the charming Colleen Moore in the title role.

Opposite Miss Moore, who is making her initial appearance, under her the morning. No other show has ever attempted the staging of a fox hunt, and success was only attained after weeks of training and work. It was not a great effort to get the dogs to follow the scent of the six trained foxes, but keeping them on the hippodrome track and away from the feet of the horses, required great efforts by the trainers. The horses are perfectly trained hunters and jumpers, and at the conclusion of the chase engage in high jumping contests. In "Porter," "Maid-of-the-Mist" "Alta Boy," the management claims to have three of the champion jumpers of the universe. "Porter" clears the bars at over 7 feet in a liberty jump, while "Maid-of-the-Mist" with a rider, is but an inch under this height. "Alta Boy" specialty is broad jumping, and as yet he has not reached his limit.

RAILROAD CONSOLIDATION

By Walter Spruill, Member Texas Commission

ARTICLE IV. Texas and the Consolidation of the Railroads. The tentative plan which was put out by the interstate commerce commission about two years ago in order to provide criticism and to encourage the roads and the public to come before the commission and give testimony, or as the lawyers would say, to make a record, upon which the commission could base its findings, proposes that Texas should be served by four systems, the Santa Fe, the Southern Pacific, Rock Island, the Missouri-Pacific, and the Frisco-Katy-Cotton Belt. The people of Texas, both those favoring consolidation and those opposed, have objected to these proposed systems. It is felt that if the Rock Island be given to the Southern Pacific that the Southern Pacific may lose interest in Texas ports upon the Atlantic seaboard and that we may not have in Texas water compelled rates as in the past. Communities like Fort Arthur object to the proposed Missouri-Pacific combination because the Missouri-Pacific is financially interested in New Orleans, and since the Missouri-Pacific is the Missouri-Pacific, Fort Arthur fears that the Missouri-Pacific would route its tonnage to New Orleans and would not be so much interested in developing Texas ports. The tentative plan of consolidation proposes to give the Fort Worth and Denver City Railway to the Santa Fe. This is objectionable to most of the people served in northwest Texas by these properties. Heretofore, as new counties and areas have developed on the plains in the northwest, part of the Santa Fe and the Denver and Pacific, each has constructed a feeder of short line to protect its interest in the territory. If the Denver should be given to the Santa Fe, there would no longer be any incentive to build these short lines for all of the freight whether it would have to go east or west by train on the Santa Fe, if the Santa Fe owned the Denver, the Denver is now owned by the Burlington interests, which also own a half interest in the Trinity & Brazos Valley. The Burlington interests want to come into and across Texas to the gulf and they strenuously object to being deprived of the Denver and joining their outlet to the Gulf of Mexico. It would certainly be of advantage to Texas to have a strong system like the Burlington, which has long existed and which will not constitute a system strong enough to stand up by the said of the Union Pacific, the Burlington, or the Southern Pacific.

Interesting But... Not long ago, a skilled physician was demonstrating a new electrical machine which was very unique. It would accurately register the heart beat, making a motion picture of the heart action. "Its purpose," he explained, "is to aid in diagnosis. It doesn't have a great deal of value, and it is not as important as a good stethoscope, but it is interesting." How very true was this statement, and the same might be said of nearly all other experiments in the medical world. It is interesting to count blood corpuscles, and study germs through a microscope. It is interesting to listen to the heart beat or murmur through the stethoscope. It is interesting to make various blood tests and urinalysis. It is interesting to note the various chemical reactions of bodily fluids and tissues in the test tubes, but after all of what real value is it to the sick? Has it gotten any one well? The only purpose of all these tests is to be able to diagnose or name the disease, and then it is necessary to make other experiments and tests in a vain effort to find a cure. A skillful chemist can take food and put it through a chemical process very similar to digestion. He can produce many reactions that resemble the chemical action that takes place in the body, but with all his skill, he cannot produce even the lowest form of living fresh and blood. He cannot compensate for the vital force or innate intelligence that pervades the living form. This force, or intelligence, is given expression through the nervous system, and controls and directs every action of the body. Life or disease is measured only by the degree to which this force is given expression. When a subluxation or slight displacement of some vertebra of the spine pinches the nerves supplying any tissue or organ, there will be a weakness or diseased condition in that part. All the chemical reactions of the body are directed by the nervous system, or normally, in any part there will be abnormal function. Urinalysis, blood tests, etc., may show this, but that is all. They will not correct the trouble. Chiropractic is little interested in these tests, or the names conferred upon disease. A chiropractor finds the cause of the trouble, the nerve pressure in the spine, and he removes this cause by adjusting with his hands the misaligned vertebra. When he adjusts the cause and nature is again able to send her curative forces to the affected parts, they are repaired. The proper chemical action is again resumed in the body, and health is restored, and so it is that. CHIROPRACTIC GETS YOU WELL. C. W. HARPER, M. D., D. C. INSURANCE RATES DROP 10 PER CENT ON 4-WHEEL BRAKE

Four-wheel brakes on 4-wheel trucks, explained Captain E. V. Rickenbacker, when he received notice that accident insurance companies had decided to offer a differential of 10 per cent in policies on collision, liability and property damage in case of cars having 4-wheel brakes. One insurance company offers a 15 percent reduction.

"This action of insurance companies fully justifies our contention that 4-wheel brakes do not present any liability to driving."

"Insurance companies don't guess, they base their premiums on absolute facts, actuarial percentages and statistics."

"As a matter of fact, I expect to see a still greater reduction in premiums from time to time as the safety factor furnished by 4-wheel brakes becomes more and more apparent. And it will apply not only to the accident clause, but to other risks that are reduced by this superior feature."

"The next step will be for the various states to legislate against the insurance companies' rate increases. It is imperative that all four wheels be equipped with brakes."

"Several contingencies in Switzerland, which are exceptionally mountainous, have already passed laws to this effect."

"American tourists traveling that country recently have been returned home because they had only one or two wheels."

In a letter just received from J. F. O'Brien, formerly general sales manager of the Studebaker Automobile Company, and now residing at Lausanne, Switzerland, he says: "Rickenbacker is to be congratulated on taking the leadership in this most important improvement. You will have the satisfaction of seeing every other car manufacturer follow this policy, because it is inevitable that all cars must be so equipped. If the manufacturers' organizations will not dictate this policy, the laws of the various states certainly will."

Lower Prices and Greater Values In Cars Result in Record Summer Many New Models on Market Now

By ROY C. HAYES, Universal Service Special Correspondent.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 1.—Lower prices and greater values are the order of the automobile world today. Unprecedented efforts in motor car building, coupled with increased production, have brought automobile prices to their lowest point in years.

Prices are averaging 30 per cent lower than three years ago, when the average value offered at the time precipitated a record demand. In some instances current prices are even 40 per cent below those of 1929.

Lower prices and greater values may seem to be strange pairs, but they are springing together before the public eye with unmistakable attraction and results are following logically.

Motor car dealers are reporting a record summer, particularly in Detroit. New sales marks are being broken as every week shows automobile new. And according to some of Detroit's best known dealers, everything points to a continuance of the demand.

Many New Models Appear.

The urge of competition and the appearance of so many new models at this time of the year has played a big part in the sliding of prices that now seems to be the order.

Fifteen new lines of cars were introduced in the last two months and six more are scheduled to appear in September. The arrivals of new lines have been a most potent factor in stimulating sales, particularly after a slump of the price.

Optimism in manufacturing circles has it that few new lines will be introduced between October 7 and the national automobile show in New York.

Three downward revisions have been made in the last week. They include Maxwell, Chrysler and Buick. Reductions on the Maxwell run as high as $50. Chrysler revisions range from $10 to $150 down. "Maxwell and Chrysler reductions are the result of increased manufacturing efficiency," according to Arthur E. Barker, vice-president in charge of distribution.

Practically the same reason is given for the $50 to $100 cut made in Buick prices.

Ford Prices Unchanged.

Ford prices remain the same, although the company has brought out an improved car with a slightly

INCREASING USE OF PENN OIL REPORTED BY LOCAL MANAGER

Recent crude oil situation throughout the oil fields of the United States, Mr. Williams states, "is contrary to a very common idea that Pennsylvania crude oil is overvalued on production and that not much Pennsylvania oil is produced. The actual fact is that the demand for this oil is not as great as the Pennsylvania producers hope to make it. In substantiation of this Mr. Williams reports that the Pennsylvania producers and refiners are now formulating a plan whereby each barrel of Pennsylvania crude oil will be sold at one cent on each barrel of Pennsylvania crude oil to the stills and one cent on each barrel produced to create a fund for publicity. It is hoped that this direct to consumer advertising campaign will point out to the public the desirability of Pennsylvania motor oil for internal combustion engines. That it is not hard to create a

FARLEY CLOTHING STORES OPEN 10 NEW BRANCHES IN SOUTH AND WEST

In line with the policy of the company to increase its number of stores as rapidly as business conditions and the development of the organization permit, the Farley Clothing Stores, operating a chain of 85 units selling men's and women's apparel on credit, will open 10 new branches this fall in various southern and western cities. Announcement to this effect was made yesterday by W. T. Farley at the semi-annual convention of representatives of the company at the Hotel McAlpin.

Since the establishment of its first unit in Utica, N. Y., in 1914 the organization has forged rapidly ahead. The 1932 volume of business of the present stores of the concern, which are located in 16 states throughout the south and southwest, was the best in the history of the organization, and it is expected that the 1933 sales total will be even higher. Mr. Farley pointed out.

Approximately 85 persons connected with the Farley chain attended the conference yesterday, including branch managers, district managers and representatives of the New York office, which is located at 35 Fifth avenue. These conferences as a rule are held twice yearly in different sections of the country and are largely educational in scope.

All the purchasing for the concern is done through the New York office, where a large buying staff is maintained to secure the requirements of the many stores owned by the group, which, officials claim, is the largest in the United States handling apparel on the credit plan.

Mr. Farley was of the opinion that the south is due for a period of prosperity. Wages there, he said, have increased more rapidly than in the north or middle west. Sales and payments he found have been better in this section of the country than ever before. He predicted that business would be generally good for the stores of the organization this fall.

Six Reasons Why you should own a Willard Threaded Rubber Battery:

- 1—It has more power to start a stiff engine;
- 2—It requires less recharging;
- 3—It suffers less from overheating in summer;
- 4—It saves you a $10 or $12 bill for re-insulation;
- 5—It lasts much longer;
- 6—It gives more all-around satisfaction.

and the insulation is guaranteed to last the life of the plates. This is something no other battery manufacturer offers.

Faith and Works and Service to Others Discussed by Judge Kay In Sunday Lecture on Barnabas

One hundred thirty-nine members of the Kay Bible Class at the First Methodist Church, south, heard Judge John C. Kay deliver the following lecture on "Barnabas" at the Strand theater, 3:30 o'clock Sunday morning, August 31.

"Barnabas was a good man. Now, that literally means that he was good-hearted. It also means that he could get along with people. Paul would do that. Paul, the greatest man in the history of the Christian church, failed to get along with other men. He got into a row with Felix, one of the apostles, who followed the law, and finally had a row with Barnabas and others.

"Barnabas could get along with people. He was one of the finest men of his time. He was a man who could get along with people. He was a man who could get along with people. He was a man who could get along with people.

"Paul was three times a missionary. He was a missionary before he became a pastor. He was a great missionary among the Pharisees and became a missionary as a Christian. He had been working as what he thought was a religion, till his life.

"I noticed in the newspaper the other day that they had a great crowd of people. He came and said this old machine is rusty and runder and not good for anything and what he could do was where else he said in the Lord. 'Here is the shell, this machine won't run any more, it is without value. It is without value and without power and you can have it.' If you are going to be a good man let me say to you do not put it off. A man might be converted in his old age, he might be saved, but he cannot build the character or a reputation for righteousness in his old age that he could in his youth. He is then denied the fruit that follows a clean life, because his life is behind him and no fruit can grow on it other than that which is already there.

"They say Barnabas was a good man and full of faith. Just what does that mean, full of faith? You know that thing that you read in the Bible that says 'I need them and their faith put to a test right then. While they were writing this about Barnabas, almost every one of us has had a friend who has been a failure. Of course that wouldn't excite any comment in your mind, of not much, but did there and these people prepared for it and lived through it.

"Barnabas could get along with people. He was one of the finest men of his time. He was a man who could get along with people. He was a man who could get along with people. He was a man who could get along with people.

do you think you live seven days a week, three hundred and sixty-five days in a year. How much of your thought and your planning has been for your own selfish interest? How much of it is in the way of your own work? I do not object to trade with that man and then take one with this fellow, I will buy that other fellow's rubber upon which you do so by legitimate methods, but there ought to be some justice in your time that you concentrate on the benefit of your fellowman.

QUESTION OF PIPES IN YOUR HOME

When you build a new home, certain things should be done in order to secure good natural gas service. No matter how good the supply may be, your service cannot be satisfactory without adequate house piping.

Two of the mistakes most commonly made are to install pipes of insufficient size, and to obstruct these with many turns and reductions.

Simple Obstructions

Remember that the capacity of a house line is controlled by the smallest opening in it. True, a 1 1/2 inch pipe with a half inch reducer at the meter may have some value as storage room, but it would be of much more value if it were the larger size everywhere.

Then the frequently unnecessary turns in house lines check the free flow of gas. Sometimes the pipe at these turns is half filled with white lead, and the capacity thereby greatly reduced.

This company is at great expense every year in keeping its lines as near perfect as possible. Cannot you, for the sake of better service in your home, see that pipe lines are of ample size, free of all obstructions, and gas tight?

Lovely Soft Gray Broadcloth Makes This Morning Frock That Features Wrapped Scarf Sleeves.

By Mme. Frances
The Famous Creator of Fashions

THE frocks we see about town at the smartest places invariably are those with long sleeves. Everywhere—shopping in the morning, lunching at the most exclusive hotels and restaurants and teazing in the afternoon—the sleeves are long. There are myriad different designs, but always the sleeve reaches to the wrist or below.

Like every season of fashion, the long sleeve is a decided reaction to the very abbreviated one. But, to tell the truth, many women seem to prefer the short sleeve to the long one. American women have become so accustomed to the straight-line frock, the short sleeve, the corsetless figure, that they are inclined to continue favoring them as being easy to wear. For if you consider the costume ensemble of the past few seasons, you'll realize that each part can be described as something essentially easy to don and allowing all possible freedom of movement when worn.

However, even if long sleeves seem a bit binding until we become accustomed to them, they are wonderfully attractive and they seem to be particularly in keeping with gowns for Fall.

The perfectly straight slim frock, often guiltless of belt as it is, is designed to make the woman who wears it appear as much as possible in the guise of a pipestem. Very often if the frock is rep or fine serge or Pointe twill its sleeves are very long and very tight, ending in a point well down over the back of the hand.

Then, again, in a gown of more flowing lines, like the sapphire crepe model above, the huge Russian sleeves are brought into the wrist and tied with jade and gold tasseled ribbons.

The other dress, a gray broadcloth for morning shows an interesting new note in its scarf sleeves that wrap around the arm and drop well below it.

The coats both exploit wide sleeves that come in to a narrow wrist though made on very different lines. The model in the circular frame boasts wide bag sleeves that are richly embroidered in bronze and silver and tied with orange moire ribbon at the wrists. Those on the gray broadcloth model are huge squares lined in black crepe, wrinkled smartly about the wrists and finished with black crepe frills.

The hats here bear evidence of the effort to get away somewhat from the universal cloche. Every woman will insist upon having a cloche for sports, at least, it seems. And this is wise enough, for there's nothing quite so becoming or comfortable.

A number of wrapped turbans appear. These are usually built fairly high at the front, where their smoothly wrapped folds are held by chic double-headed pins of diamonds, or tortoise-shell or onyx, or sometimes all three.

Then, again, we see smart tricorne, and we notice that many of the hats which roll up slightly from the face have a cunning little dip upward where the brim joins the crown, revealing more than the usual forehead expanse. This seems as strange at first as the sight of pink ears protruding from beneath the new smooth-combed coiffures, for just as ears have been hidden by marcelled waves, foreheads have been altogether concealed by hats which rested down upon the very eyebrows.

By way of trimmings for hats, there are interesting shaving-brush aigrettes and dangling ostrich feathers which fall below the shoulders. Other plain small cloches, whose perfect lines are things at which to marvel, are unadorned save for chic little square-mesh veils that tie closely about the face beneath, and serve to keep the smooth coiffure smoother still.

The introduction of the pipestem frock will come as a hardship to the woman who has not kept the youthful lines of her figure. The slim young things are in their element, but the more mature woman must see what she can accomplish by dieting and selecting the proper slim straight underthings.

Just as the introduction of the bouffant skirt and the skirt with circular insets brought on the vogue for petticoats following the same lines, so will the tight straight frock have much to do with eliminating surplus underthings. The slim boyish frock is nothing new with us, and bloomers and combinations conform well to their lines, but now that it has grown more tailored, doubtless undies will become skimpier still.

Two-piece alpaca frocks are smart for street wear. Gray is the smart color in this shiny material, and the frocks are usually made with a long-sleeved jumper and pleated skirt. White organdie collar and cuffs relieve the gray.

The three-quarter-length coat has evidently become a fixture. Some of these complete a costume, and others are made to wear separately.

The Chinese influence is most prominent both in embroideries and colorings. Velvet is smart for the new three-piece models that pose a three-quarter coat over a crepe frock hemmed in velvet. Tailor made costumes are not much seen.

Panther fur is used to trim a stunning velvet model that embroiders a panther on the front of its red crepe blouse. Felt hats will continue to be very smart into the Fall, with one change. The felt will be the softer, pliable variety rather than stiff felt.

Sweaters have given place almost entirely to jackets that are gaily embroidered in colors. The Fall coat sweater, however, is still of value and is lovely in soft imported wool with striped or checked front and plain color back and sleeves. Tomato and sulphur yellow are combined in a model of this type, worn with a tomato-colored pleated skirt.

Tiny colored suede hats are adorned with still tinier feathers that curl under one ear. A new metal cloth is of very dull silver, almost gun-metal, with a leaf figure printed over its surface. When cloth frocks boast belts, they are likely to be narrow belts of the frock material, clasped at the front with a tiny buckle of tortoise shell.

Gloves sport all manner of ornate trimming treatments. Some gauntlet affairs in two colors have little flowers appliqued on the cuffs, while others have cut-out designs with colored leather placed under them. Black and brown is one of the smartest color combinations for day wear. A brown wool frock drops its three-quarter tunic over a black satin foundation skirt and embroiders its rounded yoke in black. The few tailored suits seen about are always smart, either with blouses a trifle frilled or severely plain blouses and polka-dotted ties. Huge silk scarfs, with fringe sometimes two feet deep, are worn over afternoon frocks as wraps.

Will Paris Stop U.S. "Bootleg Divorces?"

Special apartment houses are being established for the sole accommodation of Americans seeking divorces. Is it any wonder, then, that consternation has fallen upon the American divorce colony following the announcement that French judges have petitioned the Ministry to abolish the law allowing the granting of divorces to Americans by mutual consent?

That's What's Worrying the Many Fashionable American Women Now Temporarily Domiciled in French Capital in Quest of "Mutual-Consent" Separations

CONSTERNATION sits heavy and Dame Rumor flits busily from room to room in a certain fashionable apartment house in Trocadero Square, in Paris. This is an ornate structure conceived by a certain on-the-job-and-a-little-bit-ahead-of-it realtor of the French capital. It is perhaps the only habitation of its sort in the world. Other landlords have achieved fame by throwing open their doors to families with nine children, to students with musical aspirations, to night watchmen who want to sleep in the daytime. But this original moulsieur has won not only fame but the undying gratitude of beautiful American women by opening for them an apartment house where they might establish a residence in Paris for divorce purposes only.

The consternation within these pleasant walls is caused by the sudden announcement that Paris judges have petitioned the French Ministry to abolish the law allowing the granting of divorces to Americans by mutual consent.

FIVE bootleg divorces is, in fact, what the French have lately christened the neat, quick, high-priced separations fashionables from all over the United States have obtained in their courts. The realization has at last come that while some Americans have been smuggling suitcases of contraband and liquor over the border in their own country, other Americans have been packing contraband troubles into equally deceptive pieces of luggage and smuggling them onto French soil. Six Americans divorces were granted or applied for all in one day in the Paris courts one day last month. The great lure is the absence of publicity, the "mutual-consent" clause and the remarkable speed with which, because of almost negligible domicile requirements, the decree is put through. Mrs. Clarence Mackay, Mrs. Ogden L. Mills, Jr., and Mrs. Leonard Thomas were the first Americans who, five years ago, saw and made use of the advantages of these conditions. The habit has grown slowly but surely until now all at once Paris takes her light out from under the bootleg and stands forth as the scene of divorce hunters—the second zone. Heavily a ship lands now that does not contribute at least one to the stream of marital refugees streaming across the Atlantic to file divorce papers in Paris and then hurry back to America to get married again.

FIVE chief complaint of France against these runaway alienates who want the silent way out is that they violate the laws of their own country by obtaining their divorce in Paris through collusion or simply a conspiracy on the part of the husband and wife to dissolve a union that has for trivial reasons become irremediable. One decree awarded lately to a husband and wife seen almost constantly together during the whole court proceedings was called an insult to the French bar.

In some respects Nice is an even finer place for obtaining divorce than Paris. The applicants there are not so numerous and the beauty of the watering place makes the necessary stay delightful. It was there that the papers severing the matrimonial bond between George Jay Gould, Jr., and his young wife were served.

Another instance of the limits to which collusion practiced in the shadow of the Paris courts has gone is cited in an amusing instance of divorce sold by a wife to her husband on the installment plan. By the original arrangements of the bargain, the wife was to receive $50,000 in five installments of $10,000 each. Upon arriving in Paris to start proceedings she received her first payment. But the French workings of the law were so rapid that she soon discovered she would be a "free woman" and incidentally her husband a "free man" before the time came for the making of the second payment of $10,000. What to do? An embarrassing situation, you will agree, if there ever was one. She had to think quickly. She jumped on a boat, returned to New York and demanded a new compact. Hence the drafting of a new bargain by which installments were done away with and the lump sum was agreed to be paid upon the granting of the decree by the French courts.

Armed with the new contract the wife sailed back to Paris.

"No pay, no divorce," she told her friends in the grass-widow colony on her return.

"MARRY it haste and repent in Paris" is the cynical slogan of those who have easily wed and wish to be as easily rid of a bad bargain. All of the usually attractive young matrons who gladden the hearts of the shopkeepers by carrying their marriage difficulties to France are not, however, of the hasty-wedding type. Mrs. Thomas

B. Clarke, who was not recognized as the famous Elsie Ferguson when she first made a discreet entry into Paris several months ago, married her wealthy banker husband back in 1916. Her decree was handed down the other day just in the nick of time to escape the possible hold-up of other false divorce hunters. The grounds were extreme indifference, desertion and failure to provide. Other decrees handed down as well, just in time to clear any impending obstacles, were those awarded to Morris Roderick Volk, of New York, and his wife, Mildred Lucille Everett Volk. Mr. Volk is the son of Mme. de Gama, wife of the Brazilian Ambassador to Great Britain. The decree of the Vicomtesse Bellissent-Durban, formerly Miss Virginia Chapman, of New York, and her husband, the Vicomte Bellissent-Durban, slid through on this same summer-season crop as did the divorce of Mrs. William Bullitt, daughter of Henry S. Drinker, former president of Lehigh University, and Mrs. Earl Mendenhall, both Philadelphians. Despite the denial of Irene Castle that she obtained a divorce from her husband, it is said that she, too, remains definitely on record as one of this season's Franco-American divorces. The alleged Castle-Treman divorce is said to be one of those that helped to cause the stir in judicial circles, the claim being made that the two danced nightly in restaurants off the Bois de Boulogne just as though nothing had happened.

Mrs. James Vall Converse, twin sister of Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt, was recently quoted as enthusiastically praising Nice as a divorce rendezvous.

Mrs. Converse, now in motion pictures, said: "Speaking of places to get a divorce—well, I just heard of the new way to get one in Nice, a wonderful place for such things. It doesn't matter where you live. You can go to Nice and just go up to the Judge and tell him you are unhappy with your husband and wish to get a divorce. The Judge tells you to stay in Nice for three weeks and return to him after that time. When you return, the Judge asks if you still want the divorce, and if you say yes he gives it to you."

According to Mrs. Converse, Nice is beginning to rival Paris in the business of untying wedding streamers. It will be remembered that last spring the young George Goulds obtained their decree in that southern city.

The actual obtaining of divorces goes like this: According to the chivalrous divorce tradition of the French, the woman calls the lawyer. Shortly after a court bailiff calls on the husband and formally summons him to return to his wife. The husband refuses and the court officer notes the refusal. The very day of the bailiff's visit the wife may appear in court with her lawyer and file her petition. About three weeks later the couple are summoned before a magistrate for an attempted reconciliation. The couple both say "no" in chorus and then they may go away and worry no more. The lawyers take care of the rest.

Nice as an ideal spot for divorce is highly spoken of by Mrs. James Vall Converse, twin sister of Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt. Above—Not many persons recognize in Mrs. Thomas B. Clarke, whose divorce was recently announced in Paris, the stage favorite, Elsie Ferguson.

Watch That Eclipse!

Like a gigantic prairie fire the flames, leaping from the sun, seem to run along the silhouettes of the moon. During an eclipse these banners of heat go streaming by, sometimes with the rhythmic regularity of heart beats, and again with weird abandon of whirling dervishes of the sky.

How They Will Measure the Sun's Heat

Eclipse This Month of Old Sol to Be the Occasion of Special Scientific Research in Study of Great Flames That Leap From Fiery Orb Thousands of Miles High

AT THE coming eclipse of the sun was week from tomorrow, when the moon's shadow will traverse a path 150 miles wide in Southern California, certain observations never before attempted will be made. The radiation from the solar corona will be measured, and the light emitted by the great flames leaping up from the edge of the hidden sun around the black lunar disk will be analyzed, to find out what gases compose them.

The corona—so long a puzzle to astronomers—is now known to be a vast cloud of volcanic ash-dust thrown out by the sun. It is never visible save during a total eclipse, when its filmy, lace-like streamers, stretching millions of miles away from the solar luminary, emit a ghostly and beautiful radiance.

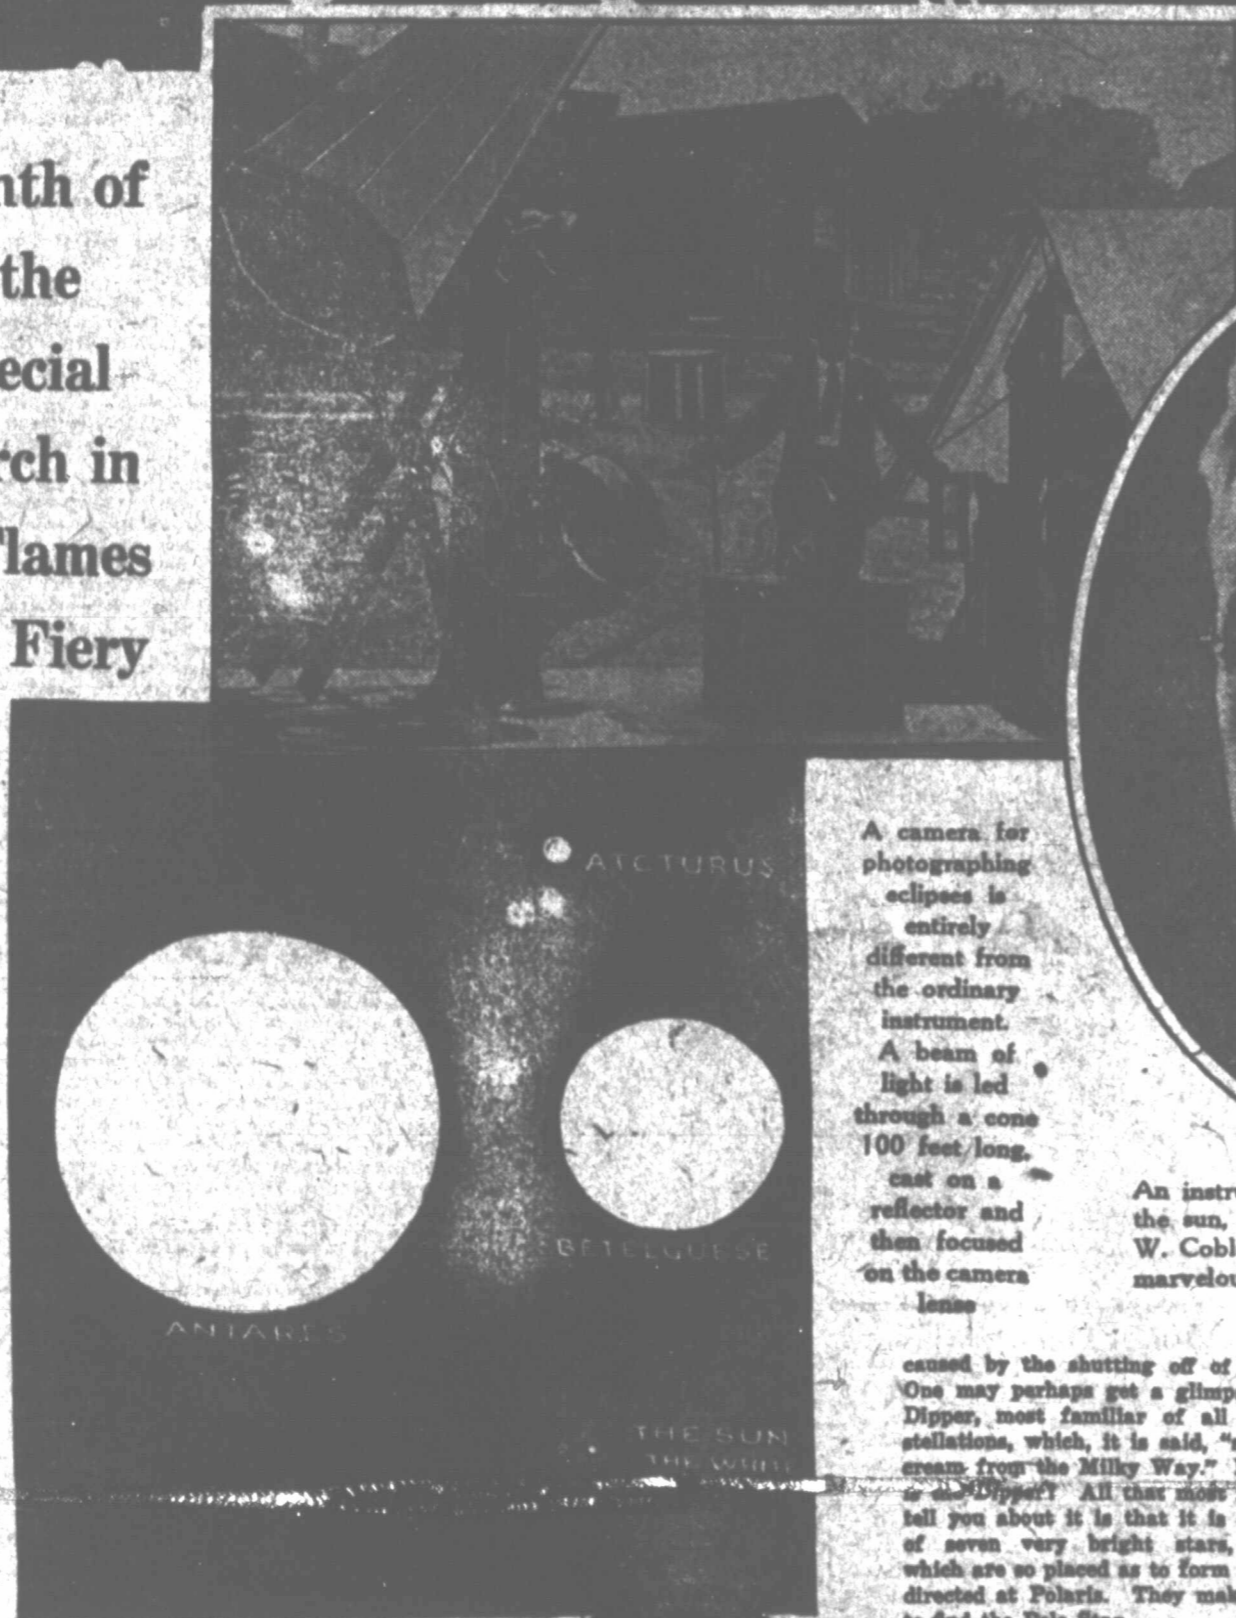

This radiance, of course, is a reflection of the sun's rays. To measure it, the rays emitted by the corona will be collected by a concave mirror three feet in diameter and focused upon a very delicate "thermopile"—an instrument acting on the principle that a difference of temperature at the junction of two metals, made up into a closed wire circuit, produces an electric current.

The apparatus is the invention of Dr. W. W. Coblentz, of the Bureau of Standards, who, working at the Lick Observatory in California, has used it to measure the heat of distant stars. So marvelous is its delicacy that, if the experiment could be made in the void of space, which is a vacuum, it would detect the heat of a candle at a distance of fifty-three miles.

Dr. Coblentz says: "If you should take a teaspoonful of water and focus upon it all the heat coming from a blue star"—meaning one of the hottest of the billion stars that bespangle the heavenly vault—"and could conserve all the heat delivered, it would take a million years to raise the temperature of the water one degree." The star, you see, is so far away. Nevertheless, the instrument can measure its heat.

By means of this instrument Dr. Coblentz has been able to detect the dark companions of many "binary," or double, stars. Sirius, otherwise called the Dog Star, a star thirty times as bright as our sun, has such a companion, the two revolving about a common center of gravity. But the companion, about three-fourths the size of our sun, is almost invisible, having only one eleven-thousandth of the brilliancy of Sirius.

Astronomers believe that at least one-fourth of all the stars are double or multiple. The North Star, Polaris, is probably triple. Alpha Centauri, our nearest celestial neighbor, only twenty-five million miles away—is really a pair of bright suns, each of them about the size of our own orb of day. That it is a double can be seen with the help of a good field-glass. But the Coblentz instrument has discovered a number of dark stars, presumably dead suns, which hitherto were unknown.

Our speck-of-dust world is not large enough to even show on the chart giving the relative sizes of various fixed stars.

THE shadow of the moon, on the occasion of the eclipse, will pass across the summit of Mount Wilson, where, near Pasadena, is located the famous observatory. There a study will be made of the enormous flames that shoot out from the rim of the sun's disk to heights sometimes exceeding 400,000 miles. Nothing else can give so vivid an idea of the tremendousness of the sun's activity.

The sun's "atmosphere," so to call it, seems to be composed mainly of burning hydrogen. But it is thought that something more definite can be ascertained by analyzing the light emitted by the great flames above mentioned, and for this purpose, when the eclipse arrives, use is to be made of a "solar tower" on top of Mount Wilson, which is a skeleton structure, 150 feet high, surmounted by a revolving dome. A beam of light, admitted through an aperture in the dome, wherein the observer sits, passes down through a vertical tube to the base of the tower, where it is received into a "rainbow" by a powerful spectrocope. The observer, by studying this rainbow, is able to discover what elements—hydrogen, calcium or what not—produce, by their burning, the light-beam.

IT SEEMS very curious during an eclipse to see many stars twinkling in the sky, owing to the temporary darkness

A camera for photographing eclipses is entirely different from the ordinary instrument. A beam of light is led through a cone 100 feet long, cast on a reflector and then focused on the camera lens.

An instrument to measure the heat thrown off by the sun, the "thermopile," is the invention of W. W. Coblentz, of the Bureau of Standards. It is so marvelously delicate that it will register the heat thrown off by a distant star.

caused by the shutting off of the sun. One may perhaps get a glimpse of the Dipper, most familiar of all the constellations, which, it is said, "skims the cream from the Milky Way." But what is the Dipper? All that most folks can tell you about it is that it is composed of seven very bright stars, two of which are so placed as to form a pointer directed at Polaris. They make it easy to find the Pole Star.

As a matter of fact, the seven stars of the Dipper are eight, one of them being a double. They are huge suns, probably hundreds of times bigger than our sun, and all of them are brilliantly white and very hot, save the one at the edge of the lip of the receptacle, which seems to be older and more or less decrepit, like our own solar luminary.

Astronomers say that the Dipper is slowly going to pieces. Five of its stars are traveling in one direction, and two in another. The star at the end of the handle and the star on the edge of the lip are bound southeast; the remaining five southwest. Thus, with its handle bending, its bottom dropping out, and its sides-spreading, the dear old Dipper will soon be ready for the scrapheap.

Sirius, the Dog Star, is brightest of all the suns in the northern heavens, and one of our nearest neighbors, being less than twice as far away as Alpha Centauri. A ray of light, traveling 150,000 miles a second, takes not quite eight and a half years to reach us from Sirius, which is a sun in the heyday of its life, tremendously brilliant and correspondingly hot.

What has Sirius to do with the Dipper? Why just this. Our solar system is between Sirius and the Dipper. When we know that, it gives us some sense of location in the immensity of space. But, of course, we cannot feel very satisfactorily "put," taking into consideration the fact that our sun, carrying us with it, is traveling through space at a rate of twelve miles a second, apparently in a straight line; that Sirius and the Dipper stars are moving as fast or faster, and that all the heavenly bodies are likewise trying to get somewhere else at inconceivable speeds.

Thus at the end of the present century the configuration of the heavens will not be quite the same as it was at the beginning, though the stars are so far away that there is, from our viewpoint, not much change in their length of time. A vast majority of them, say the astronomers, are so distant that it takes light thousands of years to come from them to us.

WE ARE interested in the coming eclipse because our sun is of much more importance to us than all the billion others in the universe. But our sun is a dwarf star, a wretchedly little one, compared with millions of others. Its diameter is 865,000 miles, whereas that of Betelgeuse, according to recently revised figures, is about 215,000,000 miles. Once upon a time our sun was young and big, but now it is aged and shrunken.

A rather near neighbor of ours is Arcturus, only thirty-four "light years" distant. There is a worthwhile sun for you, 21,000,000 miles in diameter. Yet it is small compared with Betelgeuse—a name, meaning "giant's shoulder," bestowed upon it by the ancient Arabians, who, by the way, had no small knowledge of astronomy. And even Betelgeuse is by no means the biggest of the stars. Recent measurements made by Prof. Albert A. Michelson, of the University of Chicago, assign to Antares a diameter of 400,000,000 miles!

Measurement of the stars is astronomy's most recent achievement. As yet only the diameters of a few stars have been determined, but the work is being continued. When one realizes that, even to the most powerful telescope, the largest star, such, for instance as Betelgeuse or Antares, appears only as a needle of light, without any appearance of a disk, it seems amazing that such measurements can be made.

The giant stars are balls of burning gas of low density, which, in a way, is why they are so enormous. They are bright red in color. In the course of ages, according to the theory now held, they shrink and heat thereby produced causes their temperature to rise, their color changing to white and, later on, to blue. Eventually they turn yellowish, and finally to a deep red, having by that time arrived at their last stage as orbs radiating heat and light.

OUR sun is still a fairly hot little star, with a temperature estimated at about 10,000 degrees Fahrenheit; but there are others that run up to three or four times that high. Sirius is so hot that, if we were as near to it as we are to our solar luminary, we would be quickly scorched to death. Even if we could endure the heat, we would be chilled to near congelation, such as electric welders use, to protect our eyes against the blinding glare.

If, during the coming eclipse, you were standing on the dark side of the moon, the side turned toward the earth, you would be inconvenienced not merely by finding yourself in a vacuum, the lunar orb having no atmosphere, but also by inconceivable cold, approximating the absolute zero of space, which is no temperature at all. On the other hand, if you were on the bright side, toward the sun, you would find the heat almost unbearable—about 177 degrees Fahrenheit, according to Dr. Coblentz.

He has, with the help of his wonderful instrument, measured the radiation from the bright side of the moon, when that orb is full, and also that of the various planets. If a planet be hot, as is the case with Jupiter, it may be expected to radiate heat. If it be cold, like Mars, it nevertheless receives heat from the sun and radiates it off again.

As a matter of fact, Jupiter, though known to be very hot, is found not to radiate any heat at all, because all of it is "trapped" in the lower levels of its deep and very dense atmosphere. Venus, with an atmosphere less deep and dense, radiates a little. Mars radiates six times as much as Venus, and the moon more than twice as much as Mars.

This planet, in which we are so much interested, has a very thin atmosphere, only one-twelfth as dense as ours. Hence a housewife on that orb could boil water in her saucepan or kettle at eighty-two and one-half degrees. Although Mars is half again as far away from the sun as we are, its surface is considerably warmed by the solar rays. Owing to the water vapor in our atmosphere, only sixty per cent of the solar rays that reach us are effective in warming the earth, whereas almost nine per cent are effective for warming Mars. At night the Martian temperature falls below freezing, but at midday it rises to sixty or seventy degrees.

East, West, North or South Which Has the Prettiest Girls?

Atlantic City Bathing Beauty Contest This Week Brings Out Sectional Rivalry Among Fair Sex of All States for Crown of "Miss America"

BACK in the days of ancient Greece, Venus, Minerva and Juno scrambled for the Golden Apple marked "For the Fairest" and sent down to world history the first famous beauty contest.

Is modern America dipping back in the days of mythology? Atlantic City's great National Beauty Tournament is fast developing into a tradition that smacks of the picturesque contests of the ancients. In fact, so remarkable has been the growth of this tournament, which started first merely as a frolic, that this year, the third of its existence, guests are traveling from the far parts of the world to look on.

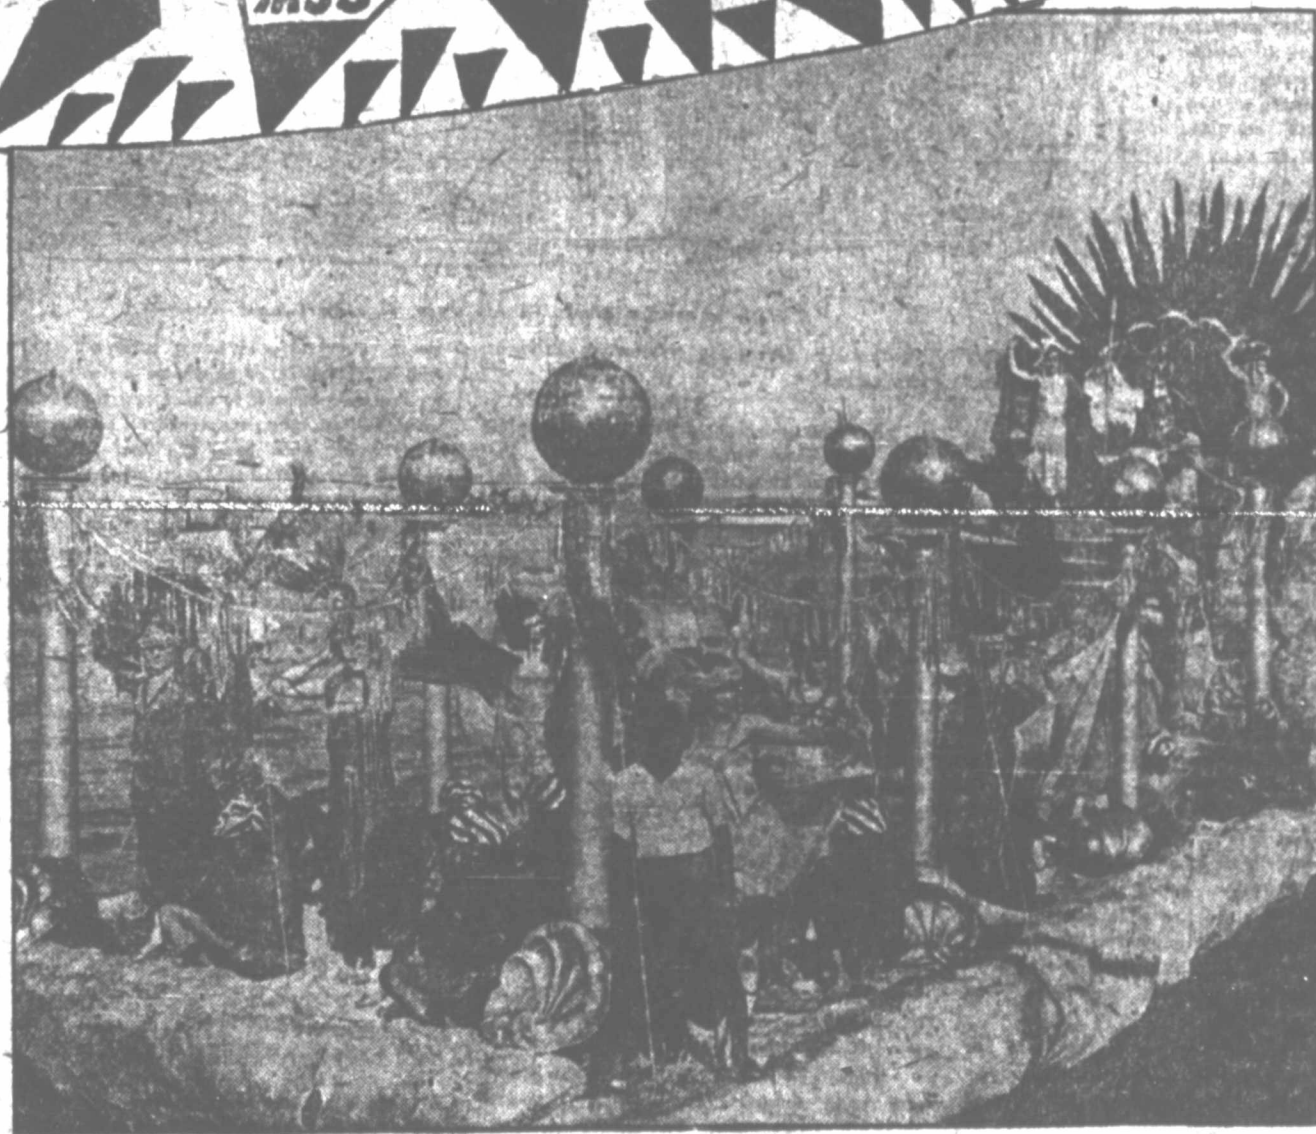

The young women who will compete are the fairest each section of the country has to give. They will show their beauty before judges even as the three famous beauties of Greek legend vied with theirs before that sole judge, Paris. The loveliest maidens of Greece vied for a golden apple. The prettiest girls of America scheduled to take part in the seashore tournament contend for a golden mermaid. History has not put on record the value of that early trophy, but this little solid gold diving man who goes to the fairest girl in all our land is worth $5000.

WHOLL win? That was the question 3000 years ago. That is the question now. Paris gave the Golden Apple to Venus because she promised him the most beautiful wife in all the world. She gave him Helen of Troy, stealing her from Menelaus and that started the Trojan War No Trojan War is scheduled for the pageant which opens next Wednesday in Atlantic City, although there are probably enough Helens of Troy speeding shoreward this minute from all parts of the United States to start sixty-seven of them.

Two Septembers ago, the year the contest was launched, little Margaret German—scarcely five feet two, golden-haired and as dainty as Dresden ribbon—swept all honors before her and carried them back triumphantly (she was terribly bashful about it) to her home town Washington, D. C. Last fall, nearly sweeping the crowd off its feet with her beauty of face and figure, Mary Catherine Campbell, a gloriously built, auburn-haired girl, just seventeen, wrested the beauty diadem away and carried it victoriously back to the Middle West, moving the pin in America's beauty map to Columbus, O., to be exact. Now the Pacific Slope, the South, New England, and other sections are all claiming at once that those two times were just a mistake and that—well, just watch and see, and you'll find out which section of the United States chronically grows the prettiest maidens.

AND which does? The languid, clinging-vine little beauty notoriously comes from the South. Her cheeks are warm and soft and her eyes are lazy and as lovely as a summer day. You'll find her under a pretty pose parlor in Charleston, S. C., or maybe she's gently playing with an ice cream soda in Macon—a Georgia peach! Sweet to look at, a coquette before she's out of Beauty competitions are generally semi-aquatic, and white sands, rolling combers and brilliant sun are essential. Most of the pageants are ruled over by King Neptune, who rules over a court on wheels from which he bows to his subjects as he is rolled along the beach front her cradle, fascinating as her drawl. That's the South.

The New England girl seems just about the opposite of all this. While the sun has slowly coaxed gentle roses into the cheeks of her little Southern cousin, snow banked higher than the street cars and wind whistling around the corner have painted her face the color of two bright red apples. The prettiest girl from Boston, Fall River, Augusta and Bangor has no languid, clinging-vine look in her bright eyes. She's had to hurry too often to keep warm. Firm-ankled, athletic, a swimmer, an expert on skates, a flying figure on the skis she so often rode to school in the days of her little girlhood. That's the New England type the judges must appraise in the contest. The Middle Atlantic girl has a bit of the North and the South in her beauty, but if you were seeking for a single term to classify her type you might call her the "confident beauty." Life in the biggest cities has induced poise. The rounds of big city living is apt to yield slimmness. She's like the stem of an American Beauty rose. She walks as though she knew she was beautiful.

Pep. That describes the Western girl. Though perhaps she's never done anything wilder than ride in a street car or in her own snifty little roadster, she somehow gives you the impression of just having come in from a swift gallop over the plains. The breezy spirit of the West (not a legend) has given her eyes a friendly beauty—a kindly warmth, which, by the way, goes straight to the heart of any impartial judge, and there's a flowery quality about the California beauty—ask that same judge.

THIS year's method of choosing the winner of the contest lends itself especially to the argument of which section of the country's climate and manner of living yields the most truly lovely young women. The United States is to be divided into five sections. Over each of these sections will rule a noted artist-illustrator. With others on his committee he will select the three most beautiful girls in his territory. These three girls will each receive a prize, but what is a great deal more important, they are the fortunate ones who will represent their district in a final battle of the beauties. The judges who will supervise the selections in each district are such noted artists as Howard Chandler Christy, Harrison Fisher, Charles Dana Gibson, Coles Phillip and Norman Rockwell. Each regional chairman forms part of the final committee to decide on the final winner.

Here, to be exact, are the general points taken into consideration: General appearance, distance between the eyes, shape of the nose, whether the eyes are of a decided color, shape of the mouth, condition of the teeth, set-up of the forehead, texture of the hair, angle at which the ears are joined to the head and where they are placed, width of the brow, condition of the skin, width of the upper lip, length of the eyelashes and eyebrows that conform to the other features. Bobbed-haired girls may have a chance to win a prize, although bobbed hair is not largely favored, because it suggests, the artificial, and natural beauty is the most important condition of the contest. A little powder is not ruled against, but the liberal use of cosmetics would absolutely ruin the chances of any girl.

Science Now Shows Why Music is Mightier Than Muscle

The Strange Power of Rhythms Utilized by Doctors and Trainers to Heal the Sick, Produce Athletes and Assist Babies Into the World

The Eternal Triangle—in One, Music and Muscle Make This Achievement of Josephine Carter-Waddell, a Sixteen-Year-Old Dancer, Possible.

Learning the Strokes to Waltz Music—as Taught at the Kiltredge School of Athletics in New York.

Now science has turned its penetrating eye on music, seeking to analyze and reveal the astonishing effect that rhythms have upon the human body. Recent experiments in Europe and America show that music is mightier than muscle, that it can produce champion athletes in short order, that it aids sick bodies in throwing off disease, that it is invaluable in child-birth and that it is partly responsible for the extraordinary achievements of double-jointed acrobats and dancers of the stage.

The important point is, you must have the right kind of music. The wrong kind of music produces the opposite effects.

In Europe Havelock Ellis, perhaps the greatest psychologist writing in English, has after years of investigation produced a book called "The Dance of Life," purporting to show the very secret of successful living lies in adjustment to rhythms which are all about us, but for the most part unknown to us. These rhythms are the hidden music of life, which composers, more sensitive than ordinary folk, can bring forth and pass on to the world.

At the New York Nursery and Child Hospital music has been used by Dr. Harold C. Cox, resident physician, not only to produce healing effects on sick people, but to soothe mothers while their babies are being brought into the world. The effect is beneficial not only to the mothers, but to the newly born babies as well.

In Los Angeles, Mrs. Adela Hatch gives music the credit for the beauty and swimming skill of her beautiful fifteen-year-old daughter, Olive Hatch. Olive was born in the Canadian wilds, and her mother, a talented pianist, devoted hours of each day to the rendering of the works of the great composers both before and soon after the child's birth. She believes the music not only had a strong pre-natal influence on the baby, but established rhythms in the child's body after her birth, when Olive, only a few weeks old, lay in her cradle listening to the sonatas of Beethoven and the preludes of Chopin.

Now that Olive has developed into a beautiful girl and is a student at the Polytechnic High School in Los Angeles, she has suddenly taken up swimming and developed into a local champion after three lessons. She attributes her success to music as well as to swimming and declares that each time she races she times all her strokes to some bit of music.

So far science has been unable to gauge the full extent of music's effect upon the body or to find the reason for it. But there is no doubt but that astonishing results are obtained. At the Kiltredge school of athletics in New York, for instance, swimming is now taught to the music of the violin and instructors notice that the muscles of the swimmers seem to respond much more quickly because of this aid of the additional rhythm. Whether the music stimulates the brain so that it can carry the messages of the instructor to the muscles, or whether it acts on the nerves and makes the muscles more chantey" being made as the accented word. The sailors also have "heaving chantey."

In the early Mississippi river steamboat days some wise man noticed how the negro stevedores, or roustabouts, sang at their work and bethought himself of a plan. He hired a band to play lively music, whereupon the negroes worked twice as fast and more than paid for the cost of the band.

One of the chief ways in which music has been brought into use as a strengthener and guide of muscles is in gymnastics, both in schools and colleges and in stage work. Scores of schools and colleges, now using music in gymnastic classes find that pupils respond much more quickly to instruction than when the music is omitted. Not only that, but under the influence of music students are able to accomplish on parallel bars feats that they often seem unable to do without that aid. One interesting case that bears this out is that of four-year-old Anita Backstrom, of Brooklyn, who has been trained by her father in aerial acrobats. Anita has been performing since she was one year old and is a willing pupil. Undoubtedly the early adapting of her pliable muscles to the difficult feats worked wonders in itself, but the use of music in the training has also helped a great deal, it is believed.

Music has also played an important part in bringing Josephine Carter-Waddell, the beautiful sixteen-year-old daughter of Mrs. Sam Carter-Waddell, to perfection. Mrs. Carter-Waddell has always trained her daughter to music, and the result is that Miss Josephine has recently been adjudged 99 per cent physically perfect. She is a beautiful ballet and interpretive dancer.

Famous families of acrobats both in Europe and the Orient train their young children for the dangerous profession almost before they are able to toddle. Heretofore scientists have thought that double-jointedness, the ability to twist the joints in a way not given to ordinary people, was either present with the child at birth or acquired at a very early age by the peculiar training. Now it has been shown that music has often played a prominent part in making possible the achievements of contortionists.

The influence of music on the swimming of beautiful Olive Hatch of Los Angeles is perhaps the most astonishing case that science has revealed. Fifteen-year-old Olive took up swimming just a short time ago. At the first lesson there was no thought of music and her progress was not so pronounced. On taking the second swimming lesson, however, Olive had just come from her music lesson and the tune she had been practicing kept running through her head. She tried to adapt her strokes to it, and to her own astonishment and that of her instructor found that she fell into the swing of the breast stroke and the freestyle with ease. So amazing was her progress that after the third lesson she decided to enter a swimming race at Venice, California. There she won the Southern California championship for free stroke swimming for women in 1 minute and 11 seconds. A few weeks later, at Redondo, California, she won the 500-yard event, in which some of the most noted girl swimmers of the West Coast were entered. Her time was 7 minutes and 53 seconds. Since then she has won numerous other races.

"I always keep my strokes timed to a little tune I hum," she explained, "and have done this ever since I discovered the value of music. I believe it is the whole secret of my speed."

The manner in which the rhythms created by a composer can be literally introduced into the minds and bodies of sick people was discovered by accident. A phonograph was brought recently to the New York Nursery and Child Hospital for the use of the nurses. The physician in charge was at first afraid that the music would disturb the patients, but found that it had just the opposite effect.

It was then introduced into the various wards, where marvelous results were obtained. Classical selections and waltz numbers were tried at first, especially those possessing soothing, dreamy rhythms. Said Dr. Harold C. Cox:

"Patients tossing in pain and fretful with nervousness became quiet with the first piece. Others took on a dreamy expression. And when bedtime came there was not a complaint in the entire ward. We found that we got the beneficial response from the waltz music and classical pieces. The jazz pieces seemed too stimulating except for those patients who were so convalescent that they were almost ready to go home."

The next step was the installing of a phonograph in the rooms where babies were about to be born. The rhythm of the music soothed the mothers, making their ordeal more easy, and when the baby was born the first thing it heard was not its mother's voice but the tones of the "Missouri Waltz," "Old Black Joe," or perhaps "Love's Old Sweet Song."
