AMERICAN LEGION ANNUAL CONVENTION CONVENES MONDAY

SAN FRANCISCO SETS STAGE FOR LEGION CONVENTION

FIVE OF THE MOST POPULAR PROSPECTIVE CANDIDATES FOR LEGION COMMANDER

MANY PROBLEMS AWAIT SESSIONS AMERICAN LEGION

By NEA Service. SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 12.—San Francisco has surrendered. The Golden Gate metropolis capitulates in the face of an invading horde of 150,000 American Legionnaires and turns over the keys of the city to veterans of the world war, who will constitute an army of occupation during the legion's fifth annual convention here, Oct. 15 to 19.

Harry James Ralph Jr. of San Francisco, who heads the reception committee.

The convention will be a combination of work and play. There will be division reunions, parades, dances, even first maneuvers to regale the ex-service men. And there will be serious business. Problems expected to be in the forefront of debate when the legion assembly convenes are: a program for solving the problem of disabled war veterans; Provision for orphans of world war veterans; A more strenuous Americanization program; An international air disarmament conference. And, last but not least, the big question of adjusted compensation.

Provision for orphans of world war veterans will be advocated in two measures, one arguing for a national home and the other providing their care be a matter to be handled through state divisions. Questions concerning the still unsolved problem of disabled war veterans also will be taken up, as well as proposals to induce a national defense act and establishment of a citizen army. The movement for an international air disarmament conference was started some months ago by Legion Commander Alvin Owsley through the Legion Weekly and has strong support.

Delegates, of whom there will be 2,000 and as many alternates, will begin arriving here Oct. 13, along with the vanguard of the 150,000 visiting legionnaires. National and internationally known men are expected from all parts of the world. Already, acceptance of invitations have been received from General Haller of Poland and from various dignitaries of South American republics. Among the prominent Americans expected to attend are General Pershing, Admiral R. E. Coontz, Maj. Gen. John A. Duggan, Secretary of Navy Denby, Secretary of War Weeks, General Frank T. Hines, director of the U. S. Veterans' Bureau; John J. Tigert, commissioner of education; Judge Landis and Samuel Coppers.

of the Pacific fleet, that the greatest armada the American navy has ever assembled in one port in peace time will be here for the convention. It will comprise 1140 officers and 30,000 enlisted men. It will number nine first-class battleships, 21 destroyers and numerous cruisers and auxiliary craft.

Greenville (Ohio) "Forty and Eight" Legionnaires of Cincinnati, Ohio, are planning to capture the 1924 convention for their home city. For that reason it is expected Ohio will not have any contenders for the national commandership when Commander Alvin Owsley's successor is elected.

There will be the plainness garb of the Texans, the charro outfits of the Mexican delegations; some will wear Hawaiian leis and there will be the "five-gallon" hats. The "Forty and Eight" will wear their horizon blue caps, and these will contrast with the flashy raiment of Alpine chamois and the predominating army "O. D." marines Lincoln green and navy blue.

They'll be hostesses at the legion convention. At left is Mrs. Lillian Blake, noted Golden Gate beauty. Above is Mrs. Joseph V. Costello, San Francisco society woman. To the right is Miss Louie Wells, national president of the Women's Overseas Service Legion.

Trading in Germany, to a great extent, is being done in kind, instead of with money.

"MA" BURDICK WILL BE THERE

By NEA Service. SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 12.—"Ma" Burdick, a woman loved throughout the American Legion, will attend the annual convention of the legion here Oct. 15-19. She is the national chaplain of the American Legion auxiliary and is to have charge of the memorial services during the convention. "Ma" and "Pa" Burdick spent 18 months in France, most of that in the service. There the couple were constantly about their work of passing out doughnuts and coffee to the worn fighters and cheered themselves forever to thousands of the army men. It was in the trenches, during some of the heaviest fighting, that they earned the names of "Ma" and "Pa." Mrs. Burdick also earned the French Croix de Guerre. At the third annual legion convention in Kansas City, "Ma" opened a stand and again passed out the doughnuts doughnuts for which she was famous in France. Since the war, Mr. and Mrs. Burdick have been stationed at Wichita Falls, Texas, by the Salvation Army, but recently they were transferred to Chicago, where they are at work in the South Side district.

Several prominent box cars will come to the convention in ships as a result of the one-way fare authorized by the shipping board. Delegations of the famous "Forty and Eight" playground of the legion, will journey across country in San Francisco in box cars as a reminder of the days when they rode in the famous French railroad cars that were advertised to carry 40 men or eight horses. The Ohio "Tommy" are bringing the famous

REPUBLICAN LEADERS KEEPING EYE ON SENATOR JOHNSON

Movements and Utterances Are Watched With a Concern Which Varies From Benevolence to Alarm

By MARK SULLIVAN
Political Development of the New York Tribune and Copyright, 1935, by the New York Tribune

Senator Johnson, of California, has come to a point where his movements and utterances are watched with a concern which varies from benevolence to alarm. Senator Johnson personally is in his home state. There he and his friends are making a fight to name the California delegation of 24 members to the coming national Republican nominating convention. Johnson says he would rather see a "progressive" delegation than a conservative one. He has said that "this is without regard to myself."

Practical politicians who survey this action are not necessarily critical about Johnson's good faith, but they do feel that the situation is not what it seems. They are engaged in trying to name the California delegation sooner or later to see whether or not it is the intention that this delegation shall be for Johnson, the president. Senator Johnson says he does not know the situation at some state of the fight the issue will be forced upon him.

It is to be noted in the situation, if Johnson names the delegation it will necessarily be a Johnson-Jones ticket. The opposing faction of the party will crystallize about some other candidate, and Johnson will then be forced to announce himself as a candidate on the most familiar of the terms of practical politics—namely, that you can't fight somebody with nobody. In short, from the point of view of practical politics, Johnson is at this moment engaged in a course which implies strongly either that he already intends to be a candidate for the nomination or that he is not further than merely to name the personal of the California delegation and delegate it to the writer of the platform and throughout the convention generally.

It is entirely possible that the present qualifications in good faith and that he has no present purpose further than to name the delegation. Johnson's attitude is the result of the political stage of persons who are not unconsciously by the law of their nature and who inevitably do the things that persons who are not unconsciously have but as yet not answered over to themselves.

The fact that Johnson would not show his hand to the ring, would not get the nomination, and would not be president of the United States, Johnson himself has said in an intimate letter to a friend which either became public through the machinations of one who is not a friend, much to Johnson's embarrassment and indignation.

Johnson says he has long wanted to be president. He had, however, so long as the late President Harding was alive, definitely been with other candidates, but he had put it aside largely because he believed it would be impossible for him under his particular circumstances.

the situation by Harding's death was favorable to Johnson. While many of the things which are alignments brought about by the emergence of Coolidge tended to make it easier for Johnson to become a candidate, the other way, however, was the fact that the selection of Senator Moses as vice president of the party in 1924. During the period while Harding was still alive, it seemed to us here at Washington that among those who at that time were likely to emerge as Johnson's designation to contest with Harding, the most likely candidate was not far from irremediable opponent of the League of Nations, the world court and the League of Nations. He was and is the very incarnation of the spirit of isolation. He was and is the very incarnation of the spirit of isolation. He was and is the very incarnation of the spirit of isolation. Runyon Says--

Herbert Pennock Was "Master Mind" Of World's Series. By DAMON RUNYON. Universal Service Staff.

POLO GROUNDS, New York, Oct. 13.—A spidery young fellow with a marmoset baseball brain and the heart of a lion was the "master mind" of the fourth game of the world's series of 1923 today.

Herbert Pennock, the thin left hander of the Yankees, as fragile looking as a piece of china, came out of the base of late afternoon that hung over the Polo Grounds, to hold the game for the American League, at a moment when it looked as if they were about to lose a long game.

Over on the Yankee bench little Miller Huggins, chief of the American League, was sitting up and down in his excitement. He had to make a quick decision. Baseball managers always have to make quick decisions.

Johnny Evers Declares Advantage Rests With Yankees Principally Because They Have Best Hurlers

By JOHN J. EVERS, Universal Service Special Correspondent. NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Today's game, a free hitting affair, ended in a victory for the Yanks and was notable for a few reasons. First, because of the fact that they were the most sensational series ever played. I am of the firm conviction tonight that the advantage, if any, rests with the Yankees, principally because of the fact that they have the edge on pitching.

Massage may be called a body or skin and nerve tonic. It invigorates the body without the usual dosage of any tonics or stimulants.	It does great aid with very little exertion to the central nervous system. Massage also aids metabolism (the chemical process of repair and waste in the body) and does much toward muscle development. It is particularly an aid to the facial muscles, which receive little or no exercise. These may be stimulated through the great masseter muscle improved by massage. The abdominal muscles are tightened up, aided and strengthened by massage, while the outer skin or muscles towards the shoulders may be developed and improved by this treatment.

The Empress theater announces a special feature to be shown here Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The name of the picture is "The Printer's Devil" and it features Wesley Barry, the rising star, who plays a printer who saves the life of a girl who is being kidnapped by a gangster.

The Olympic theatre announces for a four days engagement opening Wednesday, James Cruze's production "Ruggles of Red Gap" directed by Henry Leon Wilson's novel "Ruggles of Red Gap." Judging the length of the runs that is being given the picture which is being shown in an excellent manner.

The following review was clipped from the Motion Picture News of September 21:

"Chalk up another triumph for James Cruze whose production, 'Ruggles of Red Gap' may be catalogued as exceptionally bright—one executed with a deftness of touch which makes it unusually refreshing on a screen where the brightest comedy gems are found among two reels. Harry Leon Wilson's story carries rich and sparkling film possibilities, all of which have been realized by Mr. Cruze whose gift for discovering humor is accurate and sure."

STRAND WEDNESDAY FOUR DAYS

Mae Murray in "The French Doll"

Exceptional Cast With Mae Murray In Her Latest and Best Production 'The French Doll' at Strand Theater

When the executive officials of Graham Wilson Productions, Ltd., decided to make a screen version of Gertrude Fanny's famous novel and stage play, "The French Doll," the first thought was of the cast of players to be selected to portray the different characters of the story.

First naturally came the choice for the title role of Paddy, and equally naturally the selection of Mae Murray followed a careful study of the entire English and American list of available stars.

Next in the cast come Darryl F. Zanuck and George K. Arthur, both widely known and widely celebrated among English leading men for their very sterling portrayals of classic characters. Mr. Zanuck has the role of Lawrence Blake, first appeared by Fanny Adams, only to be later accepted by Mr. Arthur who plays Jack O'Hara, who is in love with Paddy's sister but who finds the path of love anything but smooth.

A colonel in the English army and in the field for four years during the World War, Sir Simon found after the signing of the armistice that he must immediately get out of the army. He is always interested in motion pictures and his success was immediate.

Others in the cast are Nina Bonomi, who needs no sort of introduction to the American public and who presents a marvelous picture as Mrs. Blake; Tom Coventry, Mildred Evelyn, Bernard Vaughan and Marie Ault.

Dustin Farnum in Fast Action Drama 'The Man Who Won'

Said to rival the soul-stirring power and concentrated intensity of the famous "The Man Who Won," Dustin Farnum's latest William Fox production, to open at the Empress Theatre Sunday for an engagement to last three days, is undoubtedly a production of considerable entertainment possibilities.

Lord James, as the prefix to his name implies, is the ruling terror of Suffering Creek, a locality also appropriately named. His life is made of feminine and mild conquests. He steals the wife of a poor miner, leaving him with the care of two small children. Betraying with her to his forest-faith, and imprudent strength maintained by his small army of Suffering Creek miners, to the bank of Spawns Town.

"Cameo Kirby" Is Early Feature at Empress Theater

When John Gilbert, the Fox star in "Cameo Kirby," played the title role, he stepped into a part with real possibilities. As a boy, Gilbert knew and loved Mark Twain (Sam Clemens), the lovable discoverer of the Mississippi river, who began his career as a Mississippi river pilot.

Largest Exterior Set Ever Built in 'Marriage Maker'

One of the largest exterior sets ever constructed inside a studio was used at Paramount's West Coast plant at Hollywood, California, for scenes in William de Mille's Paramount production of "The Marriage Maker," which will be shown at the Olympic theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

What to Put

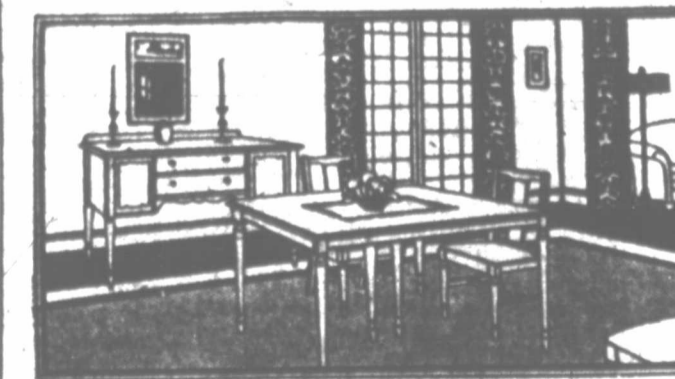

In the Living Room

In a small living room such as is found in the average small apartment, it is best to avoid large bulky furniture. Though the suite shown here is over-stuffed it is not cumbersome and does not give the room a crowded appearance. A davenport, a winged armchair, a reading table, lamp, cretonne draperies, a two-tone rug, a few accessories and a fireside chair seem to take care of this room pretty well. Such an outfit need not cost more than $300.

In the Bedroom

Here again only such pieces of furniture as are necessary are used. A friendly dresser; a cozy chifforobe, a comfy double bed, night table and chair ought to make a pretty comfortable bedroom. Such a suit for as low as $175.

In the Dining Room

Though this room couldn't hold any more than a buffet, table and six chairs, it was made to look cheery by dressing up the Buffet with a pretty mirror and two candle sticks holding some vivid blue candles. The rug is gray and the dominating color in the cretonne draperies is the same color as the candle sticks. Surely many a happy meal could be served here. The price is very moderate.

Frank Carpenter Writes of Labor And Wages in Country Where Men Toil for Fifteen Cents Per Day

In the Cotton Mills of Lodz and the Iron and Steel Plants of Polish Silesia—Skilled Machinists at Two Dollars a Week—The Low Cost of Living—Reconstructing the Factories—Germans versus Poles—How 100,000 School Boys Struck for Their Right to Pray.

(Copyright 1923, Carpenter's World Travels)

LODZ, POLAND.—Imagine a dreary plain extending on and on in every direction. Plant in its midst a dreary city as big as Cincinnati or Pittsburgh. Let the city have one thousand blocks, stacks rising high over the houses, and let its buildings run for three miles along two narrow streets paved with cobblestones. Put short cross-streets here and there and you have the somber outlines of Lodz, the great textile center of Poland.

A closer view shows mighty factories surrounding each smoke stack, masses of brick and glass that seem to wall in the gloom, making the view more dreary than ever. Now walk through the main street and make notes of the people. They fit their surroundings. The town is composed of factory workers and it seems to be Poverty's Kitchen. A large part of the inhabitants are lower-class Israelites who go about with unshaven faces, a long lock hanging down on each side of the cheek from their round, visorless caps. These Jews wear black coats which are buttoned tight to the throat and fall almost to the feet; the long gaborlins which have been their costume from time immemorial.

Stop a moment and watch the traffic as it moves through the streets. It is so dense and the stream goes on and on. There are quiet covered wagons, driven by ragged peasants in from the country; horse-drawn carts, heavily laden with coal and other bulky articles; and many a motor car, pulled by men, harnessed to the front, and shoved along by women walking behind. There are men and women carrying on their backs great loads which are sometimes held on by straps and motor trucks are conspicuous by their absence. Man-power and horse-power do most of the work. There is but little leafing and everyone seems to be on the go.

The Manchester of Poland.

Lodz has been called the Polish Manchester, after the great cotton weavers center of England. Before the war it had four hundred mills, and its population was about 400,000. The mills had more than 100,000 workmen, and the cottons and woolsens which they manufactured were shipped all over Russia. Lodz was created by Russia. When Boston was a baby it had no existence, and it sprung into being under the command of the Czar. It was some time after Napoleon was overthrown that Alexander I started the factories by offering grants of forests and lands to the German weavers if they would come here and work at their looms. They came by the thousands, and protective tariffs aided in establishing the industry. The story of Lodz is practically the same as that of Lyons and Manchester. Lodz had no silk industry to speak of until Francis I sent out word to the weavers of Europe that if they would settle in France he would give them free lodging, let them live without taxes, and wear woolsens which were made in France, only to the nobles. This brought in many skilled workmen from Venice. They first made the broadest velvet famous in Italy, and then began to weave the light, beautiful silks for which, since then, France has been noted. The French weaved new designs and Lyons soon led the world in such manufactures. When the war broke, Poland was making woolsens and cottons to the amount of $200,000,000 annually consumed, 200,000 bales of raw cotton. About two-thirds of this came from the United States and the rest from India, Egypt, Australia, Turkey and the United States.

The Lodz mills were managed by Germans and they were famous for their good work and their modern machinery. Aided by the tariff, they competed successfully with the other great textile centers.

During the world war this industry was destroyed by the German invaders, who used the forests here as in northern France. They captured Lodz in 1914 and went through factories, looting and burning each of its brass and copper. They shipped the best of the machines off to Germany and the others were methodically destroyed. They sent away all the raw materials and manufactured goods, and the result was the plants were practically ruined and Lodz left as a shell. That was the condition three years ago. Since then every factory has been reconstructed and made a going concern. A new industry has been organized, with modern machinery, and some of the mills are now working three shifts a day. More than 125,000 men and women are employed in the factories and the goods made are sold not only in Poland but in Hungary, Bulgaria, and other lands of the Balkan. The Poles are smuggling their textile machinery to other parts of Europe and are exporting to South America. They import wool from Argentina and send back cloth made of the wool to Poland. It is an odd thing that Poland has now almost as many factories working as before the war, although the output is less on account of the eight-hour day which has been established.

In a Big Woolen Mill.

During my stay here I have gone through some of the larger mills. The first I visited was that of the Bensch Brothers which makes cloth for overcoatings, ladies' dress goods, traveling rugs, and men's clothing of various kinds. It is devoted to woolsens and it has been noted for generations for its fine goods.

I went through the mill with Charles Bensch, every department and was shown every department and its operation. Before the war it employed 4,000 workmen. It has now only 900 but its efficiency has been increased by the new machinery. I went through rooms filled with the latest of the new models of looms of all kinds, and was told that some had doubled the efficiency of the old. In one place a single employee was managing twelve machines and in another one man controlled twenty-four. The machines came from Germany and they are nearly all automatic.

I was impressed with the cleanliness and sanitary conditions of this factory. Windows are everywhere, the walls are painted white, and there is plenty of heat and air. Indeed, it is hard for one to realize that he is on the edge of Russia.

Now and then I stopped and talked with the laborers. These men look much the same as those in our woolen mills, save that every one has a mustache, which is somewhat of a peculiarity of the employes here, and women and girls are seen and then (Copyright 1923, Carpenter World Travels) Weavers are common in many parts of Poland and in winter wolf-hunting is a favorite sport for the wealthy. A bill as large as this is not unusual.

(Copyright 1923, Carpenter World Travels) Lodz is the chief cotton and woollen manufacturing center of Poland. Most of the factories were destroyed during the war, but are now regaining their former production.

there. It is the chief city of a little territory containing about twenty square miles, which is one of the world's treasure vaults. It has mines of coal, zinc, iron, silver and lead, and the coal will make coke and steam.

As we came into Katowitz we rode for miles with smokestacks in sight, passing many plants devoted to the production of steel, zinc and lead. The coal mines numbered fifty and in them alone 150,000 men are employed. There are even more in the factories and foundries, and just now both are humming with work.

This part of Poland was developed by Germans, almost everything connected with the rolling mills, steel plants, and mines was operated on a high grade of efficiency. The capital was German, and so were the managers. Today the French have invested largely in the mills, but as most of the plants are owned by stock companies, it is difficult to say to just whom they belong. The government has some large properties, including coal mines and works for the reduction of silver and lead. Immediately after the plebiscite there were some labor troubles. The Germans committed outrages on the Poles, and the Poles on the Germans; but now everything has gone back to normal and international friction has almost disappeared.

Work and Wages.
The amount of manufacturing is rapidly increasing. Three shifts are employed and many of the plants work day and night, and even on Sundays. The wages paid are about one-third more than at Lodz, and the hours are the same, with one-half hour off in the morning for rest and lunch.

About the same rent and living conditions obtain. The average dwelling of a workman consists of two rooms and a kitchen, and at the present low rate of exchange the rent is about three cents per month. The families are usually large, and all sleep in the little room outside the kitchen. The people have plenty to eat and I venture that at present they are far better off than the Germans of the same class. The working man's dinner is usually soup, meat and potatoes, with often a salad. His breakfast on rising is coffee, bread and butter, and meat, and he takes a lunch of bread, butter, and sausage with him for the half hour recess. He goes to the mill at six o'clock in the morning, eats his lunch about ten, and closes the work day at two p. m. or a little thereafter. When he gets home he has dinner, and, along in the evening, has tea or coffee with what is left from the big meal. He has been argument is doing all it can to Polandize those who remain. They have made it a rule that all government officials must speak Polish within two years after their appointment, and they give free lessons in Polish to civil service employes.

Building School Here.
The region about Katowitz was one of the centers of German Poland. The Germans owned the mines and the factories, and they did all they could to Germanize the people. They formed colonization societies and practically forced the Polish peasants to sell out their lands. They established public schools in which German only was taught, and I am told that the teachers whipped the children for speaking Polish on the playground. The officials tried to prevent the use of the Polish language in all public meetings. They changed the names of the villages, and put German signs over the railway stations.

What caused the most trouble was an attempt to prohibit religious instruction in any other language than the German. Before 1904, the children were allowed to say their prayers and their catechism in Polish, but that year went forth the law that all prayers must be in German. This caused a mighty sensation, and the children, backed by their parents, went on strike. They tore up the German catechisms and sang songs deriding the officials. They compared the Prussians to Pharaoh and Herod, and at one time there were 100,000 children who refused to go to school. The government tried to put down the strike, and their parents were fined. The Germans finally prevailed but the feeling aroused against them was such that it exists to this day. At present Polish is the language of the schools, but nothing has been done to denationalize the Germans. They may study in their own language in the public schools, anyone may speak as he desires, and the Polish railway employes must also know German.

GENERAL MOTORS PERFECTS PRODUCT CALLED DUREX

Under the name of Durex, General Motors Corporation has perfected a new porous, oil-absorbing, super-lubricating product.

Durex not only soaks up oil, but it holds it in its pores, preventing it from being absorbed by the bearing surfaces.

There are many places in which Durex can be utilized without provision for additional lubrication and bearings of this type have run as long as 10,000 hours at 2,000 r. p. m. on a 1/2-inch diameter shaft.

In some installations, of course, the supply of lubricant held within the walls of the bearing material should not be relied on for continual lubrication, but should be considered as a reserve for emergencies.

Durex bearings may be made in any desired size. The relation of wall thickness to length and diameter of bushing will naturally be governed by the principles applying to the design of bearings.

Durex bearings are installed in the following manner: The bearing is placed on a hardened plug of the desired size of the finished hole.

After pressing into position, the plug is removed, leaving the hole of exact size and fit without adjustment. This method of installation eliminates finish reaming.

General Motors research engineers are well pleased with the showing that the new material has made in service.

That the area to be protected from the thief and the criminal in Los Angeles. And that's why Chief of Police August Vollmer believes in an adequate motorized police body, and the wisdom of this belief for the consummation of which Chief Vollmer and his loyal co-workers are laboring unceasingly.

"The selection of the proper type of motor equipment for a task involving such strenuous and exacting duty," says Fred Albertson, of the Albertson Motor Company, "is a problem which Chief Vollmer has met in a most satisfactory manner according to the cost and maintenance aspects of Chief Driver and Chief Clerk of the Los Angeles Police Department."

Mr. McFall made the sale of the cars mentioned in the clipping which follows: From the Los Angeles Examiner: Three hundred and eighty square miles.

That's the area to be protected from the thief and the criminal in Los Angeles. And that's why Chief of Police August Vollmer believes in an adequate motorized police body, and the wisdom of this belief for the consummation of which Chief Vollmer and his loyal co-workers are laboring unceasingly.

No Further Price Adjustments Are Expected This Fall-Production And Sales Continue at High Peak

By ROY C. HAYES, Universal Service Special Correspondent.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 13.—With the price relations of the better known automobiles established no further price adjustments are expected for this year.

Production schedules are being slightly tapered off in many plants. However, on the other hand those companies that introduced new models since mid-summer are straining every effort to boost the output.

Although some Detroit factories are beginning to find the issue before them more of a sales problem than a production task, there is not a whisper of anxiety in Detroit motor circles.

The cars are used, in addition to general police work, for night patrol and in fact, every angle of police activity is aided by this fleet. It is predicted that, if the city continues to grow as rapidly in the future as it has in the past few months, that the near future will see at least 100 more cars added to the police fleet to assist a much larger police force in making Los Angeles the safest of cities.

MARMON Reduced to $27.85

The lowest priced car to operate and maintain now becomes the lowest in first cost in its quality class.

The real story of Marmon goodness has been re-impressed on thousands of motorists throughout the country during the past few days.

Prompted to investigate the Marmon because of its remarkable new value, and on the endorsement of their Marmon-owning friends, they have found behind the Marmon wheel a new kind of motoring satisfaction.

"I have driven many makes of high-grade cars, but none ever had such hard service as my Marmon. They pile up mileage with practically no maintenance expense to me. Believe me, there's no car equal to a Marmon for dependability, performance and economical maintenance."—BARNET OLDFIELD

If you want to know how the automobiles of earlier days looked, see the 1897 model of the "Fuller Horseless Carriage," which is on display in the showrooms of McFall Brothers on Ohio avenue.

This ancient example of the automobile industry was driven to this city from Crowell, Texas, on its own power—two cylinders, the car having been obtained from a farmer in the Crowell neighborhood by the Dodge Brothers dealer, E. Swain, of that city.

OVERLAND CHAMPION SOMETHING REALLY NEW SO SAYS DEALER

In producing the new Overland Champion, a closed car of unique design, Willys-Overland has succeeded in actually introducing to the public something really new and fresh, a type of motor car that many people have often longed for and hoped for. It is probably the only divergently used car ever brought out and an unusually large demand for it is expected from all classes.

This truly remarkable creation, like the famous Willys-Knight conversion, has doors both front and rear and the front and rear seats can be easily and quickly adjusted to three distinct, different positions, permitting the driver to manipulate the rear seat without any uncomfortable cramping of his legs. By the same token, a short drive can adjust the front seat so that he can easily reach the pedals without stretching. At the same time, the rear seat can be moved back so that passengers can sit in the rear of the car as if they were in the front when the front seat is moved forward.

Another unusual characteristic of the Champion is that both front and rear seats and upholstery can be entirely removed and folded into a luxurious bed right in the bed, becoming the whole length and width of the car. This feature has a great deal to offer owners. Again, still another clever feature of this versatile car is the odd arrangement whereby the rear seat and upholstery can be taken out, providing the extra seat of extra space for the motorist's baggage. The rear seat, however, and the front seat, while the driver will rejoice in this available room, the driver's feet and other equipment that is necessary to transport, all of which can be folded through the rear door of the car.

The usual trunk on the back of the car, with which the Champion is supplied in combination with a large amount of personal traveling impediments, parcels and bags. This car with its most appearance and obvious forms of utility is finished inside with Spanish leather grained upholstery that is valuable. The body is of steel, cradled in the well known patented triple springs that create exceptionally comfortable riding.

The Champion is solidly built with noted Willys-Overland care and thoroughness of workmanship. The design throughout is the result of long considered planning and unusual foresight. The standard Overland chassis is used, which serves safely a hundred and nothing has been left undone that would in any measure contribute to the general all round intrinsic value of this notable model.

As a distinguished, really new type of closed car it is destined to receive a tremendous amount of attention. This new type of car is destined to receive a tremendous amount of attention. This new type of car is destined to receive a tremendous amount of attention.

Plans Under Way for Convention of National Motorists Association Washington, D. C. November 16-17

General plans for the annual convention of the National Motorists Association are beginning to take shape along the lines of cooperation with the organization's program for 1934. The convention will be held in Washington, D. C. on November 16th and 17th.

The program, according to Judge Walter D. Meals, president of the N. M. A., will include the following principal objectives: (1) Nation-wide campaign to attend the pioneer safety work of automobile clubs, on the basis of practical methods for stimulating traffic hazards, improving streets and highways, and promoting sane regulations, rather than on the basis of spasmodic safety slogan campaigns.

(2) Correlation of anti-theft work throughout the country by means of clear cooperation among hundreds of automobile clubs. (3) Interchange of legislative experience for the purpose of advancing uniform automobile laws, so far as practical with reference to peculiar local conditions.

(4) Development of a country-wide system of emergency mechanical and towing aid, so that eventually the tourist will be able to find service through the chain of official automobile club garages radiating in every direction, through every state federated in the National Motorists Association.

(5) Standardization of motor vehicle headlight regulations, so that motorists may have sufficient driving light without endangering other motorists by glare; and so that the manufacturer's problem of meeting the great variety of requirements in the various states will be simplified.

(6) Extension of the campaign against the "phantom" that hampers the motorist. (7) Improvement and modernization of interstate automobile club organization and operation for the purpose of bettering the service given to members.

FAVORITE SPORT IN MOVIE WORLD IS CADILLACING

"My word, is this a Cadillac motor?" That was a recent visitor at one of the largest motion picture studios in California, when he noticed with amazement the flaming array of colored cars parked in the driveway and in front of the gates of the studios.

It has been our policy to ask our customers to call at our service station every month for car inspection, free of charge; however, many owners fail to do so. When owners realize the importance of this in order that they may get the best of service but of their car, the dealer's problems will be largely solved, and automobiles will last much longer and give better satisfaction while they last.

Five weeks in the afternoon is considered the most dangerous hour for automobile traffic of the day and night. The Connecticut Department of motor vehicles counted the machines of heavy traffic during the day and came to this conclusion.

"I have been in the automobile business a number of years and I have always felt that the time would come when all automobiles would be good, and the question of service would be the predominant factor in the selection of a car."

"If a concern establishes a reputation for service, the customer is bound to have it, it doesn't make much difference what make of car it is handling, the public will recognize the service as the important factor."

The best automobile to be had today is the poorest investment that can be made if it is not properly maintained.

Appreciation of Natural Beauty Encouraged By Highway Department

Managers of motor cars and builders of roads share equally in the concern of the average American for making available to him the great beauties of our country. Many of our modern motor cars are being furnished through the countryside, whereas a few years ago such a trip was made only in the carriages and the vehicles of the farmer.

With this breaking down of the old barrier between city and country, the city man whose boyhood days were spent in the country has come to recognize and appreciate the natural beauty of his former surroundings. The charm of the landscape assumes new value; the colors of the fields and wood lots in the distance are beautiful; the lights and shadows in a grove of fine trees at the side of the road are cool and restful.

Several highway departments have issued the following instructions: "You will appreciate that it is of the utmost importance that no trees shall be cut down in connection with highway improvements unless it is absolutely necessary. Plan your work in such a manner as to take full advantage of shade trees now working for you."

Barry Fox, who played Captain Dobbin in the same picture. Conrad Nagel, one of the most popular stars on the screen, declares Cadillac is his favorite sport. Ted Edwards is another enthusiast. Raymond Griffith, who is taking part in two Goldwyn pictures at present, "The Sisters" and "Red Lights," says his Cadillac has "em all beaten; while Colleen Moore, the demure Irish lass of "Ziegfeld Girl," says it is just as infatuated with her Cadillac as if its cost were arms and a shaddock.

Several highway departments have issued the following instructions: "You will appreciate that it is of the utmost importance that no trees shall be cut down in connection with highway improvements unless it is absolutely necessary. Plan your work in such a manner as to take full advantage of shade trees now working for you."

The Gathering Station

Since gas comes at different pressures, it is necessary that the various pipe lines be assembled in one place and this pressure made uniform. This is accomplished through the use of Compressors. The gas is literally compressed to a uniform pressure before it is put into the transportation lines.

Compressors are gigantic machines, in instances having 650 horse power, are driven by natural gas and draw the gas from a number of pipe lines into one chamber, discharging it at from 200 to 300 pounds per inch.

From the Compressor gas goes through a cooling device, because the act of compression raises the temperature. This cooling device consists of coils of pipe through which the gas flows and over which water is pumped. Compressor Stations thus call for a water supply, and it has been necessary to build reservoirs large enough to furnish an abundance of water in dry seasons.

A Compressor Station may have from one to twenty compressors. These compressor stations are located at strategic points where the inflow of gas may be taken with the least mileage in pipe lines, and where the gas may be delivered to the best advantage.

Inasmuch as pools of gas may fall, it is sometimes necessary to move expensive process—weigh from 30 to 40—the complicated and water systems these stations—on for the engines tons each, and with systems of pipes make a huge plant.
