We seem to be victims of circumstances. Yet, many of these circumstances can be controll- Christmas budget as well as

Let's look at how this feeling of presure and frustration builds up. At times, it may be due to an unforseen crisis, but usually it happens because little or no advance planning was done by family members to determine the kind of Christmas they really want.

Without advance planning. families get caught in the hectcatalogues of folders that have ic pace of spending and entertaining. Last-minute shopping often leads to impulse buying that is costlier than expected.

There is still time to avert some of the financial and physical strain of this year's Christmas season by better family planning. There's still time to emphas ize true meaning of Christmas of "giving" instead of "getting" Children like to help with Christmas preparations. Selecting the tree, making some of the gifts, gathering holiday greenery, wrapping gifts, and making decorations for the tree and table can be happy holiday activities. Shared by family members, they can shift emphasis from the material side of the picture and help relieve emotional and financial strain of this busy season.

Family traditions and customs strengthen the family. American families have inherited a rich blend of traditions from many lands.

Spur team has faced all year. The Bulldogs' Copeland, with the capable aid of all his teammates, led the scoring for the visitors. The lad proved very adept at following his interference through the Birds' secondary then shifting to high gear to go all the way.

The Golden Cranes' only tally came with 10 seconds left in the first half. Spur was unable, even with their tremendous power, to tally a point after all night.
At the half the score stood Crane 8, Spur 12.

Spur goes on now to meet Abernathy this week for the Regional crown. Certainly the Birds can be proud that a team like the Bulldogs was what it took to knock them out of the running. The Spur aggregate played superb ball, were big and went about their work just like the Cranes, in a methodical thorough manner. They were as fine a team as far as ability and sportsmanship as any coach could wish for. It was a game of good clean football down to the whistle as any fan could wish to see.
