

Pride to march in Rose Bowl parade

By JANE P. MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff
The Pride of Pampa high school band will march in the Tournament of Roses Parade on New Year's Day.
The P.I.S.D. board gave its stamp of approval Monday afternoon at a meeting in Carver Center, 321 W. Albert.
Band director Jeff Doughten assured the trustees that "no tax dollars" would be spent on the California trip. The band boosters organization will raise the funds required for the trip which will take place over Christmas break.

Doughten said students would miss one or two days of school depending upon whether the group flew or rode a bus. He had no estimate of the cost yet.
Jan. 1 will mark the first time a Pampa band has performed in the nationally televised parade.
In other action Monday, the board spent nearly an hour trying to find funds to put $44,828 of repairs into the high school tennis courts.

Dick Stowers told the men that the local tennis club would raise $5,000 to help pay for the renovations.
Ed Lehnick, athletic director, recommended that the north courts be resurfaced with post-tension concrete and that the south courts be repaired.
"Something needs to be done," he told trustees. "In the condition they are in now, maintenance could be $4,000 a year."
Board members agreed that mere maintenance was not enough.
"If we could find the money, I'd recommend we go with Mr. Lehnick's plan," said board president Bill Arrington.

teachers $500 above the state-set minimum wage scale. There was little discussion, none from the audience.
Retiring teachers were recognized. They are Aubra Nooncaster, Frances Nooncaster, Lois Marsh, Hazel Plaster, Martha Fischer and Mabel Torvie.
Resignations were accepted from Ann DiCosimo, Terry Wright, Roberta Kincaid, John Banks and Tim McGaughy.
One-year contracts were extended to 250 teachers.

The board also approved minutes, paid bills and studied a budget report.
Bills include: $21,906.43 for January gas bill, $1,786.43 to Don Lane for delinquent tax collection, $413.43 to Bob Phillips for AASA convention in Georgia, $12.50 for cleaning red rags, $186.36 to city of Pampa for copies of tax office field sheets, $297 to Gary Abercrombie for state basketball tournament, $166 to Mike Eckhart for lodging at regional swim meet, and $300.40 to Harold Barrett Ford for liability insurance policy and floor mat.

Trustees at the meeting were Arrington, Simmons, Curt Beck, David Crossman and Bob Lyle. Absent were Al Smith and Buddy Epperson.
The next meeting, which is open to the public, has been set for 4 p.m. April 3 in Carver Center.

City may consider contracting parks

By THOM MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff
Ah, springtime — new leaves, new blades of grass, new life all 'round.
And new ideas being tossed about in the city manager's office.
Mack Wofford, the man occupying that spot, said that city officials are considering a suggestion made to them by the Pampa Environmental Beautification Association: i.e. contracting to some private individuals for the care of some of the city's park areas.
Wofford said, "We'll be making a pitch on that soon at the Senior Citizens Center and maybe at the high school."

He said the smaller parks are the ones being considered in the arrangement.
"Those would be Burdette Park near the Hughes Building, the little Browning and Cuyler mini-park that was developed last year, and the small area on the east side of Harvester and Duncan," the city manager said.
He indicated the first areas would serve as a pilot program and if it works, other park areas could be contracted out to other interested individuals.
Currently the city employs nine people to take care of Pampa's 250-plus acres of parks.
Another proposal before the city concerns the half dozen block-long median areas between Francis and Cook streets on Somerville.

The Pampa Environmental Beautification Association has offered to donate materials for underground sprinklers in the median islands if the city undertakes the chore of cutting down the trees and installing the watering equipment.
Wofford said cost of the sprinkler equipment is estimated to be about $3,000.
He also indicated he expects considerable opposition to any proposal to cut down the trees. But he said the roots of the Chinese elms have been responsible for much of the crack damage to the road surface.
Wofford said, "The least expensive thing we could do is tear the street out and rebuild it without a median."
But he added that pro-median sentiment may be so strong as to require some other plan.
City commissioners are expected to discuss the issue when they meet March 28.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate today voted to raise price supports and income guarantees for grain and cotton farmers by about 20 percent.
The proposal, adopted 58-35, was sponsored by Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., as an amendment to an emergency farm bill that orders the Agriculture Department to pay farmers for idling cropland.

The McGovern amendment would raise the so-called target prices on wheat from $8 a bushel to $3.55, on corn from $2.10 to $2.50 a bushel and on cotton from 52 cents a pound to 70 cents.

Governor politics in Panhandle

Gov. Dolph Briscoe, center, was greeted at the Pampa airport Monday by political well-wishers and some unhappy area farmers. Briscoe has serious expression as Charles Bowers, left, Henry Hernley and Paul Eakin express their concern over the present economic plight of the family farm. Briscoe's stop in Pampa was part of a three-day campaign tour which took him over the major portion of the state. About 60 attended the 45-minute session at the airport.

Pothole patching costly

Lawrence Moreno spreads asphalt on potholds along North Duncan St. as Bill Hayes prepares to pack the patch with a roller. But Pampa city employees aren't the only ones in Texas mending streets torn by winter weather. Dallas officials estimate the cost there will be $600,000. Fort Worth already has spent $225,000 on potholes.

Israel declares cease-fire

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel declared a cease-fire in southern Lebanon today effective at 6 p.m. — 11 a.m. EST.
"The minister of defense has instructed the chief of the general staff to effect a cease-fire along the entire front in Lebanon as of 1800 hours today," said the brief army spokesman's announcement. "As from that hour the Israeli defense forces will maintain a cease-fire."

The announcement came after a day of scattered shooting between Israeli forces and Palestinian guerrillas around Tyre. But the shooting had died down from previous days.

Seven days ago Israel launched an air, land and sea attack to clear Palestinian guerrillas from the area along its northern border. The operation followed a Palestinian terrorist attack in Israel which killed 35 Israelis.

The Israeli announcement came as Prime Minister Menachem Begin was meeting with President Carter in Washington and as the United Nations tried to work out details of a U.N. peacekeeping force to go into southern Lebanon.

There was no immediate indication if Israel had taken a unilateral action in announcing the cease-fire and whether the Palestine Liberation Organization would go along with an end to hostilities.
The Israeli army claimed to control all of southern Lebanon up to the Litani River, except for a small area around the port city of Tyre.
A token U.N. peacekeeping force was waiting to move in

Fires belt Texas ranges

By The Associated Press
Firemen at Wichita Falls were hoping for the best today but expecting the worst.
They were joined by firefighters from four other fire departments Monday in battling a range fire that spread along U.S. 277 and U.S. 287 for eight miles from the northern edge of Wichita Falls.
"The weather bureau says the wind should change northerly with a 40 percent humidity, and a very high danger of fire tomorrow," an observer at Wichita Falls said Monday night.
Range fires also plagued several areas of East Texas Monday.
Four businesses were destroyed in a downtown section of Winnsboro, in East Texas, in a fire that began about 8:30 a.m. and raged for two hours.

Two fires broke out within a half hour early Monday at the 50-unit Cove Apartments in the Pleasant Grove section of Dallas. Damage was assessed at $170,000.
Destroyed in Winnsboro were East Texas TV Service, East Texas Appliance, Edge Realty and Hornbuckle Gift and Flower Shop. Fire Chief Charles McCarver said the fire began in the real estate office.
"At one point, it threatened the entire west side of the downtown area," McCarver said. The downtown area comprises about seven square blocks. Southerly winds of 15 to 20 miles per hour hampered firemen, he said.

Fire units from Sulphur Springs, Como-Pickton, Mineola, Quitman, Mount Vernon, Pittsburg and South Franklin helped fight the blaze.
Static sparks from a north-bound train were blamed for setting the grass fire that kept firefighters busy Monday in the Wichita Falls area. Several fires were started along the tracks that spread into one big fire.
Several thousand acres of rangeland were in flames as the fire swept on both sides of both U.S. 277 and 287 going northeast and northwest from Wichita Falls toward the Red River and the Oklahoma border.

when fighting stopped, but U.N. officials in New York said it could be "weeks or months" before Israel heeded the Security Council's demand to withdraw its troops from Lebanese territory.
The Israeli army reported shelling guerrilla positions but said the level of firing had dropped.
Independent observers in Lebanon said the south was comparatively quiet after intensive Israeli bombardment of Tyre and other guerrilla fallback positions north and south of the Litani on Monday night.
A Palestinian communique issued in Beirut said Israel made two air strikes during the night against guerrilla positions near Tyre and in the Arkoub region, 50 miles to the west in the foothills of Mount Hermon.

Eating our seed corn

Any farmer worth his salt knows that if he allows his family to consume his seed corn during the winter, there will be nothing to plant come spring. And, if spring planting does not take place, of course, there will be no harvest in the fall.

It is the same with capital and production. If sufficient capital to fund future production is not permitted to accumulate, is taxed away and consumed on counterproductive boondoggles, the future production upon which both jobs and consumption depend will not take place.

Being a former farmer, President Carter, of all people, should understand this economic fact of life and, consequently, the great importance of today's savings to tomorrow's economic health.

Yet, under policies being pushed by the former Georgia peanut farmer, taxes continue to mount, government spending of funds thus taken from the private, productive sector grows by leaps and bounds, and monetary inflation, eating away at the value of the dollar, progressively reduces the buying power of what savings the people are able to put away.

Little wonder, then, that "the most important problem facing the U.S. economy today," as pointed out recently by two leading economists, "is our insufficient rate of capital formation."

The two scholars, Prof. Michael J. Boskin of Stanford University and Prof. Jerry Green of Harvard, were addressing a conference on "Tax Policies in the 1978 Budget" sponsored by the American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy Research, a nonprofit educational and research organization located in Washington, D.C.

Our insufficient rate of capital formation, the two declared, is "not only a short run problem tied to the current recovery and recent inflation," but, more to the point, "our grossly inadequate saving rate is a fundamental, pervasive problem which involves an enormous waste of resources. It is caused largely by our heavy taxation of capital income."

Noting that the need for an increase in our rate of capital formation is now widely recognized by professional economists and has also been recognized in a variety of recent tax reform recommendations, Boskin and Green warned that there is, however, considerable misunderstanding of the U.S. tax system in its economic impact on all our lives. And nowhere in this confusion more evident, they emphasized, than in the discussion of tax reform to stimulate capital formation. Most such recommendations, including the President's major business tax proposals, amount to a tax boost, rather than a tax cut, the two asserted.

"The net impact of the President's policy when combined with social security tax increases and automatic tax increases due to inflation, is almost certain to reduce private income and saving substantially." To reverse this trend of the government taking progressively more, leaving the private, productive sector progressively less, Boskin and Green recommend three steps to stimulate capital formation:

1. Indexation of income taxes to adjust for inflation to help offset the tendency of tax revenues to rise more rapidly than income and thus decrease savings.

2. Dividend relief and integration of corporate and personal income taxes; or, in layman terms, discontinuance of the present government practice of taxing the same profits twice—once at the corporate level and again at the individual stockholder level.

3. Serious consideration of a switch from income to expenditure as the tax base; or, in other words, quit penalizing incentive and saving potential by taxing people on the basis of their income, and start applying the tax to the consumption spending, instead. Thus, people would be taxed according to what they take out of the economy, rather than on their capacity to contribute to the economy by saving part of their earnings. "There is now considerable evidence," Boskin and Green concluded, "that such a switch, by increasing the net rate of return to saving, would substantially increase saving, and thus the capital-labor ratio, productivity, and future wages, consumption and income."

All of which makes considerable sense. However, warned George L. Perry of the Brookings Institution, addressing the same conference, any "economic program without an effective program for slowing inflation" (which, in effect, means cutting government spending) "is fatally flawed."

We just cannot continue to permit the government to go on consuming our capital "seed corn" without expecting a drastic reduction in our standard of living in the days ahead.

The littlest dollar

The Treasury Department now proposes to mint a shrunken metal dollar. It will be just a little over the size of a quarter and much smaller than the present half dollar. As nearly as we can figure, it would yield about two cents worth of copper, if melted down. The silver in our old precious metal dollar has a value today of $3.86. No one in his right mind would melt one down for the silver, since it is almost impossible to buy one for less than $5.

Dollar bills don't last long in circulation, and officials hope the shrunken metal dollar will save some production expense. However, if coined, it may become a constant reminder of the lost value of the U.S. dollar and it may not be accepted any better than the newly issued $2.

If it is minted, this token may also fail to become popular in circulation. To a great extent, people use quarters instead of half dollars, so a dollar smaller than a half dollar may have little appeal.

We called the proposed coin a token because we cannot, in good conscience, term it money. Money to serve the over-all purpose of being a true and adequate medium of exchange must have the quality of being a store of value which is readily acceptable.

We believe this proposed token will fail on both counts. At the time when we had money of value, the silver dollar gave meaning to the term "dollar." If we had the proposed "dollar" on hand today it would be, in buying power, equal to about 26 cents as compared to the value of the amount of silver in the original precious metal coin.

With inflation forging ahead, when this token dollar is in circulation it will be worth much less. So maybe it would be better simply to make it the size of a nickel or a dime in anticipation of its buying power by the time of the issue.

Now when printing-press "money" is looming in the foreseeable future, it does seem an exercise in futility to bother much with changing metal coins to meet conditions.

If it had not been for some of the more sophisticated methods of producing fiat money, we could be in the middle of a paper-money avalanche. We have been spared that so far. But, unless history is proved wrong, the day of monetary reckoning is waiting in the wings. And the saga will include all of the Western World as well as our United States.

We keep hoping for signs of fiscal responsibility which could turn the trend around. We still hope to see them, even though it becomes more difficult each day to remain optimistic.

Essay: a cask of amaretto

By WILLIAM SAFIRE
(c) 1978 N.Y. Times
News Service

WASHINGTON — When a woman, who refuses to be identified, claims a White House aide spewed a drink down her back at a swinging bar—that's not news.

But when the White House press secretary, whose office did not return a reporter's call for comment before the gossip item appeared, issues an 8,000-word, 33-page collection of documents to refute the charge—that's news.

Since criticism of the Carter administration has occasionally been aired in this space, today's essay will redress the balance by quoting copiously from a remarkable, official White House release.

"I first became aware of this situation to the best of my recollection on Friday," begins the statement by J. Lester Powell, White House press secretary. "... when I arrived at the office Friday morning, I received a copy of the (Rudy) Maxa article in the (Washington) Post magazine. Needless to say, I was horrified."

After cross-examining the reporter, Press Secretary Powell tracked down the bartender of Sarsfields pub: "I then called the bartender and asked him if he would be willing to make a statement to a lawyer from the (White House) Counsel's office."

White House counsel Michael Cardozo conducted the interrogation of the bartender, Daniel V. Marshall 3d, whose boss is a part-time White House advance man. After establishing that White House aide Hamilton Jordan had eaten a steak and salad, the lawyer asked: "What was Hamilton drinking?"

"Amaretto and cream," replied the bartender, "because he wanted something sweet which is..." His voice trailed off. He started again: "The Amaretto we use is only 40 proof so with the cream it is not exactly like putting martinis down..."

It was very crowded... wall-to-wall people... there were other girls coming up to Hamilton and 'woo-woo,' you know what I mean?" (The official White House transcript puts the "woo-woo" in quotations.) "Three or four of them just kind of basically hanging around and just hoping that he would turn around and say something to them or whatever."

Bartender Marshall continued, according to the White House: "And I think Hamilton said something, he pretty much had enough of these girls falling all over him. And he did say something to the point where enough's enough and I don't want to talk to you anymore and I think one of the girls got insulted—I don't think I know she got insulted."

The White House counsel then handed the bartender the accusatory article. Marshall read it and said: "If he did spit all over the girl it had to be an Amaretto and cream which would have been quite a mess and she certainly wasn't wet... I didn't see it and there was no indication of it happening... it's not like a scotch and water or something—it's cream."

"Let me get this straight," the transcript released by the White House has the White House counsel saying. "If he did spit, it would have to have been Amaretto and cream. You know he didn't spit the beer." After an extended colloquy establishing the bartender's conviction that the women were tipsy and Hamilton Jordan was blameless, the White House lawyer bled in: "Are you sure that Hamilton was drinking Amaretto and cream? You're positive?"

Bartender Marshall: "They're a (deletion by the White House) drink to make. You don't forget something like that. You have to get a shaker out, you got to shake it, you have got to clean the cream off the glasses, you don't forget it. It's not like scotch and water... Like I said, we use the cheapest Amaretto—it's 40 proof—for anybody to get drunk they would have to down four dozen."

This strange release is quoted here to show what is happening to two quite different men close to the President.

Press Secretary Powell has evidently lost all sense of proportion. A gossip item, if untrue, is to be curtly denied or contemptuously brushed off. It is ludicrous—worse, unprofessional—to send out Government lawyers to get statements from bartenders and drinking buddies, using White House secretaries to type, Xerox and distribute a torrent of denials twice as long as the State of the Union Address.

For chief of staff Hamilton Jordan, however, one can feel a certain sympathy. "I very seldom go out in Washington to public places," he states in one of the 33 pages, "because I am often bothered by well-meaning people who do not respect my privacy."

There, in an odd twist, is a fallout of the Haldeman celebrity: the White House aide as a superstar. Ham Jordan, 33, is now being pushed by his boss into the top-secret foreign policy areas; he must wonder if he is not getting in far beyond his depth; he lives in a crucible, with every word and act subject to criticism; he is separated from his wife and is tasting some of the misery and guilt that goes with the fun at the center of power.

Which is why the White House overreaction to the gossip item is so revealing and poignant: It shows us the President's closest aide, alone in a crowd of political groupies, looking for a good bar.

Some letters to the PTA

By BUTLER D. SHAFFER

"Dear P.T.A. My name is Debbie Blodgett, and I am in the seventh grade at Darth Vader Junior High School. Now that you people have devoted so much time and effort in trying to get rid of violence on television, I am wondering if you could try to get rid of the violence on our playground. There is a gang of ninth grade boys at our school—they call themselves 'The Force'—and they terrorize the rest of us kids. They demand that we pay them money or else they will beat us up. These boys broke the arm of one of our classmates after he complained to the school principal about them. The principal said he was 'looking into the matter' and promised to try and have a talk with these boys. Since you people apparently know so much about violence and how to get rid of it, I thought you might help kids here at Darth Vader. Sincerely yours, D.B."

"Dear P.T.A. I am writing this letter unannounced. I am a junior at Genghis Khan High School. I read in the paper that you are trying to get television networks to stop all this sex and violence stuff on television. Well, it's like we have lobsa that here at our high school, too. I mean, take Mr. Fondalero, our gym teacher for instance. He has a nickname of 'Mr. Fondler,' and he sure earned it. There ain't any of us girls in the school who isn't afraid to be alone with him in his office. I told my folks about it and they complained to the school, but there wasn't nothing they could do. It seems old 'Fondler' has something they call 'tenure' and the school can't hardly get rid of him. Maybe you can do something. P.S. Please don't pay no attention to my bad english. Our regular english teacher, Mrs. Klutznick, hasn't been with us for the past couple of months. She got a bad concussion when she tried to cross a picket line that the rest of the teachers had here during a strike last fall."

"Dear P.T.A. Hey, I was watching TV the other night, you know, and they said on the news that you was trying to clean up them programs on television, and that you had almost six and a half million members. It's like, I mean, Wow! I want you to know how much I helped you get some of your members. Our school started a big P.T.A. membership drive last October and told all the kids in the school that every room that had 100 percent of the parents join the P.T.A. would get to have a day off from school to go to Disneyland. Well, I mean you sure know what appeals to me, cause I don't like going to school any more than I have to, you know? Anyway, I told all the other kids in our sixth grade room that they'd better see to it that their parents all sign up, cause if they didn't I'd have to take care of them if you know what I mean. Well, I'll tell you that most of these kids ran right home and got their parents to sign. Some of them pleaded and begged and cried a lot, but their parents finally signed up (but they don't have to come to no meetings). A couple of the kids even forged their parents signatures and paid the dues out of their allowances, and a few others had to be 'persuaded' after school, if you know what I mean, but we ended up with all thirty-five kids in our room getting their parents to join the P.T.A. I'm glad you ended up with so many members. Yours truly, 'Rocky' Young."

"Dear P.T.A. I saw a story in the paper the other day that the P.T.A. was criticizing the TV networks for the violent programs they have. One of them you didn't like was 'Welcome Back, Kotter.' Maybe you people didn't like this program because it's so realistic. So many of the kids in our classrooms are very unruly. Hardly a day goes by that some kid doesn't hurt another, and right in class, too. The teachers always say they can't do anything about it. And if you knew how often kids trip other kids when they are walking down the stairs, or how many fights there are on the playground, or how dangerous it is to go to school parties or football games, or how often we come out of school and find our bikes stolen or tires slashed. What goes on at our school is much worse than in 'Welcome Back, Kotter.' I just thought you might want to know, cause since you started this TV violence project thing a couple of years ago, we never see anyone from the P.T.A. around our school. Very truly yours, Cindy Johnson, 10th grade, Watergate High School."

Dishonest reformers

Wall Street Journal
"TAX REFORM TO HELP THE POOR is easy... the poor don't pay any taxes."

That explains why government officials talk about tax reform to help the poor. Senate staffer Paul Craig Roberts relates in the latest Harper's magazine. He also says "reformers" are dishonest when they talk about ending deductions that let the rich avoid taxes: Actually they benefit middle-income earners more than the rich according to IRS data, asserts Roberts, an adjunct professor at George Mason University. "Government is refashioning its tax net to catch those it pretends to protect."

The biggest "loophole" is the way inflation becomes a boon for the government, he says. A 10 percent inflation rate produces a 16.5 percent revenue gain for the government because taxpayers are pushed into higher brackets. Rather than closing so-called loopholes for the rich, "the central issue of tax reform is closing this (inflation) loophole," he says.

Government had a claim to 42 percent of the national income in 1976. "In relative terms our position today is worse than that of a medieval serf who owed the state one-third of his working time," Roberts contends.

BRIEFS: Who pays: Taxpayers earning more than $30,000 a year make up only 5 percent of the population, yet they paid 39 percent of the personal income taxes the IRS collected in 1976.

The Greatest Drama--2

Jewish crowd hails Jesus; experts alarmed

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the second act in a five-act drama of Easter. All dialogue is Scriptural, but settings sometimes are altered for this format. Some unattributed comments are attributed, and minor crowd expressions are used to convey Biblically stated attitudes.

Act II, Scene 1: Nisan 8, 30 A.D., six days before the spring Passover celebration. Place: A hilltop overlooking sun-splashed Jerusalem with its high walls, terraced houses, bridges, towers and alabaster spires of the Temple.

Two disciples, the brothers James and John, lead a young ass to the site, throw a goat-hide blanket on his back. Their rabbi, Jesus, waiting with other disciples, swings astride. He gazes affectionately over the city.

Jesus: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, killing the prophets and stoning those who are sent to you! How often would I have gathered your children together as a hen gathers her brood under her wing, and you would not."

The Jewish crowd of friends and the curious increases about him, and excited cries of others come from milling people down the hill. Jesus leans over and whispers in Matthew's ear.

Matthew frowns uncomprehendingly but nods, mechanically repeating the words: "What was spoken by the prophet — Behold, your king is coming to you, humble, and mounted on an ass. On a colt, the foal of an ass."

Jesus starts riding down the hill, trailed by followers, others billowing in front, children holding up flowers, darting about to get closer.

Jewish crowd: "Blessed be the king who comes in the name of the Lord. Hosanna! Save now! Blessed be the kingdom of our father David that is coming."

A local fellow rabbi in cap, white tunic with blue tassels, spots Roman soldiers watching from wall towers and from the roof of the adjoining Fortress Antonia. He presses his way to Jesus and pointing, shouts warningly above the clamor: "Teacher, rebuke your disciples."

Jesus, flint in his voice: "I tell you, if these were silent, the very stones would cry out."

Many of the Jewish throng fling off their shawls and cloaks and lay them in his path. Other pull down palm and eucalyptus branches and spread them before him.

Crowd: "Hosanna! Save now! Hosanna to the Son of David. Blessed be he! Even the King of Israel!"

Jesus, his eyes brimming with tears: "O Jerusalem! Would that even today you knew the things that make for peace. But they are hid from your eyes."

A flock of children, jumping with glee at the excitement, shout the words of their elders: "The Son of David! The King of Israel!"

The anxious rabbi, tugging at Jesus' cloak: "Do you hear what these are saying?"

Jesus, leaning to answer, with a sad smile: "Yes; have you never read, 'Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings thou has brought perfect praise?'"

The city rabbi drops back with colleagues, alerting them to the observing troops, and spreads his hands helplessly: "You see that you can do nothing."

Another rabbi: "The world has gone after him."

Scene 2: Three days later on the ramp at the south side of the Temple, near the double Huldah gates of the royal portico.

Stage announcer: "With hundreds of thousands of Jews swarming the city for the holiday, Mark 12:12 says, 'The great throng heard him gladly.'"

Jesus, to assembled listeners: "Beware of false prophets who come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly are ravening wolves. You will know them by their fruits . . . Not everyone who says to me, 'Lord, Lord, shall enter the kingdom of heaven, but he who does the will of my Father who is in heaven.'"

Comments among listeners: "Is not this the man whom they seek to kill?" "And here he is speaking openly."

Jesus: "Whatever you wish that men would do to you, do so to them . . . He who is faithful in a very little is dishonest also in much . . . No servant can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or he will be devoted to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon."

Listeners: "He is a good man." "No, he is leading the people astray." "How is it that this man has learning when he has never studied?"

Jesus: "Every one then who hears these words of mine and does them will be like a wise man who built his house upon the rock; and the rain fell, and the floods came, and the winds blew and beat upon that house, but it did not fall because it had been founded on the rock."

Jewish crowd: "He is really the prophet." "This is the Christ." "Is the Christ to come from Galilee?" "Never was anything like this seen in Israel."

Jesus: "Think not that I have come to abolish the law and the prophets; I have come not to abolish them but to fulfill them . . . Do not lay up for yourselves treasures on earth, where moth and rust consume and where thieves break in and steal, but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven . . . For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."

Voice: "What is the kingdom of God like?"

Jesus: "It is like a grain of mustard seed which a man took and sowed in his garden; and it grew and became a tree, and the birds of the air made nests in its branches . . . It is like leaven which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal, till it all was leavened . . . The kingdom of God is not coming with signs to be observed; nor will they say, 'Lo, here it is!' or 'There!' for behold, the kingdom of God is in the midst of you."

Crowd questioner: "Who do you claim to be?" "Who are you?"

Jesus: "Truly, truly, I say to you, I am the door. If any one enters by me, he will be saved, and will go in and out and find pasture . . . I came that they might have life, and have it abundantly . . . I am the good shepherd. The good shepherd lays down his life for the sheep. I did not come to judge the world, but to save the world."

Some fellow rabbis, enviously: "He is mad." "Why listen to him?" "He has a demon." Others, fascinated: "These are not the sayings of one who has a demon." "Who gave you this authority?"

Jesus: "My teaching is not mine, but his who sent me. When you have lifted up the Son of man, then you will know that I am he, and I do nothing on my own authority but speak as the Father taught me."

Crowd voices: "Where is your Father?" "Abraham is our father."

Jesus: "If I glorify myself, my glory is nothing; it is my Father who glorifies me. Your father Abraham rejoiced that he was to see my day; he saw it and was glad."

Critic, scoffing: "You are not yet 50 years old, and you have seen Abraham?"

Jesus: "Truly, truly, I say to you, before Abraham was, I am."

Temple officers pick up stones to pelt him, but are restrained by the resentment of the Jewish crowd, muttering, "Bosheth! Bosheth!" "Shame! Shame!"

A commotion breaks out on the edge of the crowd, where other officers have dragged a ragged, formerly blind beggar up against the wall.

Officers, demanding: "How were your eyes opened?"

Beggar, frightened: "The man called Jesus made clay . . . He put clay on my eyes, and I washed, and I see."

Officer: "This man is not from God, for he does not keep the Sabbath . . . We know that this man is a sinner."

Beggar, trembling: "Whether he is a sinner, I do not know; one thing I know, that though I was blind, now I see."

Officer, accusingly: "You are his disciple."

Jesus, thundering: "You shall not make my Father's house a house of trade."

Traders and customers alike scatter before the foray, along with birds, sheep and oxen. Temple guards retreat with the rest as Roman sentries collect atop the Fortress Antonia on the northwest corner, buckling on armor.

Jesus, sweating, breathing hard, still driving back traffic: "My house shall be called a house of prayer for all nations. But you have made it a den of robbers."

The sudden onslaught gradually empties the huge court of business and visitors.

Stage announcer: "Mark's gospel notes that Jesus' group temporarily controlled the entire area, blocking it off and would not allow anyone to carry anything across the vast court."

Jesus and his allies stand motionless but vigilant in the vacant area, panting, defiant, uncertain. Jesus drops his whip to the pavement and he and his followers slowly exit.

Scene 3: Two days before Passover, inside the Temple's outer Court of the Gentiles, paved with varicolored stones, nearly 400 yards long and 200 yards wide, bounded by tall pillars, a noisy scene of commerce — stalls selling cooped pigeons and lambs, coin-exchange tables, booths displaying rugs, prayer shawls and leather phylacteries.

Jesus, standing near the north gate, surrounded by his men, his face taut and angry, braids leather thong into a long whip. He strides forward, shouting over the din: "Take these things away!"

He strikes out, overturning tables, toppling benches, knocking down pigeon cages, upsetting tables. Coins and wares spill across the pavement. His apostles and a wave of supporters take part in the onslaught.

Jesus, his arms about the shoulders of two men: "Do not be anxious about tomorrow, for tomorrow will be anxious for itself. Let the day's own trouble be sufficient for the day."

Scene 4: Same day, in the Hall of Hewn Stones, adjoining the central Temple. The turbaned high priest Caiaphas in robes and jeweled breastplate sits on a raised chair at one side. Other Sanhedrin councilors pace about or sit in mulled talk on circular benches.

Battle against slick 'hopeless'

BREST, France (AP) — French naval authorities said today there is virtually no way to treat the huge oil slick from the wrecked American tanker Amoco Cadiz that is fouling the north Brittany coast.

Adm. Jacques Coullondres, who heads the cleanup effort, said an overnight wind change pushed the slick into the north coast between the island of Batz and the port of Roscoff, near the mouth of the English Channel.

"When the oil is near the coast, it is almost impossible to treat it," Coullondres said. "We can't navigate into the very rocky coastline and anyway chemical dispersants are more dangerous to marine life than useful."

Previous pollution had been confined to the west coast of the Brittany peninsula, south of the wreck.

Coullondres said stormy seas have cleaned most of the oil from the estimated 35 miles of polluted coast south of the tanker wreck.

He said authorities rejected the idea of burning the wreck and the oil now aboard because of the risk of an explosion and estimates that it could burn for up to three months, creating heavy smoke pollution inland.

New storms threaten to break open the supertanker and spill the 29 million or more gallons of oil still aboard.

More heavy weather was predicted as gale winds and high seas swept the vessel Monday, delaying a survey for underwater rocks so that a smaller tanker can get alongside to pump out the remaining oil.

Capt. Claude Phillips, marine transport manager for Amoco, said the operation is "completely subject to the weather. We cannot risk lives or ships out there."

Environmental experts said the rough weather could have a beneficial effect by moving the oil away from the coastline and helping to emulsify it, thus reducing the concentration, as has happened in some past spills.

The 1,067-foot tanker carried 67.6 million gallons of oil in 15 tanks when it ran on the rocks and broke in two in a storm

Friday. Harry Rinkema, Amoco vice president for marine transport, said he was told there was "a huge slick, eight miles long and a mile wide, containing perhaps 50,000 to 60,000 tons of oil, floating out to sea in the English Channel."

That would be 14.7 million to 17.6 million gallons, or about 20 to 25 percent of the total aboard. Millions of gallons more have fouled the coastal fishing beds and some 80 miles of beaches along the Brittany peninsula.

Hundreds of fishermen kept ashore by the pollution of the lobster beds and fishing grounds handed in their licenses to reinforce their demands for immediate government compensation.

Local mayors prepared damage inventories for the government in Paris.

Five British ships experienced in treating oil slicks were en route to join 11 French navy ships spreading dispersants, detergents, chalk and absorbent plastic balls. Experts from the U.S. Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration arrived to give assistance.

Carter plans inflation fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — As part of its new anti-inflation program, the Carter administration plans to speak out against wage and price increases it believes are unjustified, says the administration's chief inflation fighter.

"Private decisions are not completely private when it comes to wages and prices. . . . The government has to be prepared to step in," Barry Bosworth, director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, said in an interview Monday.

While the council can't force wage and price rollbacks, Bosworth said it will use all the powers it does have, including public hearings and subpoenas of wage and price information.

Bosworth said the inflationary cycle can be broken only if the government takes a more aggressive public role in wage and price decisions. He said the administration's anti-inflation policy "will not be credible if we're not willing to speak up."

Bosworth, 35, was a senior economist at the Brookings Institution here before Carter named him to the council post.

He acknowledged the program already has a credibility problem because nothing has been done to put it into operation. "On the basis of what they've seen so far, I agree with them (the public) that the program is going to fail."

Bosworth said the president "needs to play a far more visible role than he's been playing," but has been diverted by other problems. He said Carter may make a major speech on inflation soon.

The framework of the program was announced by Carter in January. It is voluntary and aims to reduce the rate of inflation by 0.5 percent a year by convincing unions and companies to hold new wage and price increases to levels at least 1 percent below increases of the last two years.

When the program is in operation, possibly in another two weeks, the administration plans to call in leaders of major industries to press them to restrain price increases. A similar push with unions is planned next year.

Kidnapper seeks morphine

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — His demands for a lethal dose of morphine unanswered and his hostages gone, a 24-year-old man surrendered to police and ended a tense seven-hour standoff in a suburban bank.

In custody today for investigation of kidnapping and false imprisonment was an unemployed truck driver identified by police as Robert C. Foster.

Shaken but safe were two bank employees — one Foster's estranged wife, Janie, 24, and Phyllis Matthews, 37, assistant manager at the Wells Fargo Bank branch in the Santa Clara shopping center.

They had ducked out a side door Monday night shortly before Foster gave up, police said.

Lt. Bernard Doleshel said a third woman, Valerie Kaufman, was found by officers hidden and unharmed in an upstairs room of the bank after Foster surrendered. He said the gunman was never aware the woman was there.

Blacks sworn in SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Three black moderate leaders were sworn in today to join Prime Minister Ian Smith at the head of the transitional government to shepherd Rhodesia to black rule by the end of the year.

Bishop Abel Muzorewa, the Rev. Ndabani Sithole and Chief Jeremiah Chirau took an oath of allegiance to Rhodesia and its laws at a 45-minute luncheon ceremony at Independence, Smith's suburban residence. The proceedings were closed to reporters.

Smith himself remains bound by the oath he took when he was returned as prime minister following national elections last fall in which only white Rhodesian citizens voted.

The four men make up the policy-making Executive Council of the new government outlined in the constitutional settlement agreement signed 17 days ago.

The new council was to hold its first meeting later today and begin work on its first major task, appointment of a second-level ministerial council.

Miners mum Friday vote

By The Associated Press
Rank-and-file members of the United Mine Workers are giving few hints on how they will vote on the coal industry's latest proposal to end the 106-day nationwide coal strike.

Local UMW leaders began presenting the proposed 26-page contract to members Monday. All miners were to have seen the contract by Wednesday; voting starts Friday.

The UMW has rejected two offers from the industry, the first of which never got beyond the bargaining council, and miners have defied a federal Taft-Hartley back-to-work order that a federal judge in Washington last Friday refused to renew.

In an interview with The Associated Press in Washington Monday, UMW President Arnold Miller said "it looks a lot better" for ratification this time. He said UMW district leaders "are explaining it better than last time."

Senate to vote on emergency farm bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is taking a day out of its Panama Canal debate to discuss and vote on emergency legislation to aid grain, cotton and soybean farmers.

Although some provisions would benefit many more farmers, growers of those crops would be the main beneficiaries of the measures on tap today.

Equally important, since President Carter has veto power, the Cabinet's economic policy council also has scheduled a meeting on farm policy today.

It could decide whether to soften the administration's months-old stand against taking any further measures to boost farm prices.

Both branches of government are under pressure because of springtime planting decisions

Witness points to Gestapo agent

CHICAGO (AP) — Speaking in Polish, the witness pointed to a South Side factory worker and said that was the Gestapo agent who 36 years ago had shot and killed a ghetto woman who had refused to remove her clothes for him.

"I have very good eyesight," said David Gelbhauer, a 60-year-old locksmith from Bayam, Israel.

Asked if Frank Walus was the man Gelbhauer remembered from the Jewish ghetto in Czestochowa, Poland, he said, "Yes."

Federal prosecutors have charged the 55-year-old Walus in a civil complaint with lying about his past to immigration officials when he became a naturalized citizen in August 1970.

Walus could lose his citizenship and face deportation hearings if U.S. District Judge Julius Hoffman rules in favor of the government, a prosecutor said Monday after opening arguments.

Gelbhauer testified he was a forced laborer at Gestapo headquarters in Czestochowa and that his jobs there included removing victims of Nazi questioning from interrogation rooms when they were unable to leave on their own. He said he saw Walus there numerous times.

The locksmith, who spoke through a translator, said he also had to pull wagons carrying bodies for burial when Nazis began "liquidating" the ghetto.

He recalled one such incident in October 1942. Gelbhauer said he was loading bodies onto a wagon when he recognized Walus, dressed in the uniform of an officer of the Gestapo, or Nazi secret police, talking to a woman with two children.

Defense cross-examination of Gelbhauer had just begun when court adjourned for the day. It is expected to continue today.

The highway will receive an underseal and an asphaltic concrete overlay designed to protect the surface from deterioration. According to Jay Hawley, engineer in charge of the work, the project will be completed in about four months.

Names in the news

LONDON (AP) — Ginger Rogers drew whistles and applause as she took the audience on a nostalgic journey into the 1930s and 40s at the London Palladium.

With comedian-dancer Donald O'Connor as guest star, Miss Rogers gave a running commentary Monday night on her life in Hollywood and on the stage, showed brief clips from some of her famous films with Fred Astaire and other stars, and sang songs.

She danced too, bringing back visions of scenes from the "Gay Divorcee," "Shall We Dance," and other smash screen hits.

"We love you," one man called from the stalls. "How about dinner Saturday night?" Pleading another admirer as she was given a standing ovation.

HOUSTON (AP) — Former heavyweight champion George Foreman talks more about Jesus than boxing these days and he says that's the real reason he's coming out of retirement to fight again.

Foreman says he became a "born again" Christian in his dressing room March 17, 1977, shortly after losing to Jimmy Young, and gave up boxing to preach about Jesus.

Foreman, 29, will use the money he earns in the ring to build two churches, one in Los Angeles and another in New York, he said Monday in an interview with the Houston Chronicle.

"I want to call it the Church of Our Lord Jesus Christ," Foreman said. "And there won't be a gymnasium attached to them either."

Foreman has not announced any fight dates.

Asked if he thought he could again become heavyweight champion, Foreman said "I don't know. Once I get into fighting again, I'm going to train. But I definitely don't have any more hatred in me. If I ever had a killer instinct it's dead now."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Steve Ford, the 21-year-old son of former President Gerald Ford, is riding high in a new job — call roper and chief public spokesman for a professional rodeo team.

"I feel the concept of Major League Rodeo will give America's oldest sport the recognition it deserves and will show . . . what truly fine athletes today's rodeo performers are," Ford said Monday at a press conference called by the Los Angeles Rough Riders.

The Rough Riders are one of six teams that make up the Major League Rodeo circuit, which was formed this year.

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Equal Rights Amendment opponent Phyllis Schlafly says the people who shout her down when she speaks against ERA are against the right to free speech.

She made the comment Monday after doing verbal battle with backers of the proposed amendment to the U.S. Constitution during an appearance at the University of Rochester.

"I bet everybody who came here neutral will be turned off," she said of the constant interruptions from the audience.

She told the largely male student audience that when they graduate, "if you do," they should thank her for encouraging women to stay home and out of the job market.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Steven Ford, the 21-year-old son of former President Gerald Ford, has signed a one-year contract as a call roper and chief public spokesman for a professional rodeo team.

"I feel the concept of Major League Rodeo will give America's oldest sport the recognition it deserves and will show . . . what truly fine athletes today's rodeo performers are," Ford said Monday at a press conference called by the Los Angeles Rough Riders.

The Rough Riders are one of six teams that make up the Major League Rodeo circuit, which was formed this year.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A nine-foot white flowering dogwood tree has been planted near the gravesites of Elvis Presley and his mother.

The tree, the only living memorial to the late singer on the grounds of Graceland mansion, was given by the Elvis Is King Fan Club of Sunderland, England. The tree, planted Monday, is about 100 feet west of the gravesites and is visible from Elvis Presley Boulevard.

Elvis' father, Vernon Presley, said earlier he had received numerous requests for similar memorials to be placed near the graves, but turned them down because the area would become crowded.

Tom Jefcoat, landscape architect and operations manager of Pulliam Nurseries, Inc., which planted the tree, said the dogwood and planting costs were about $200.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A month ago we received an invitation to a wedding in England. (We live in Maryland.) The groom has been a guest in our home on several occasions and we are friendly with his parents.

Yesterday we received word from the groom's mother saying that we would not be included in the very, small family wedding group, but were expected at the reception, and she hopes that we will "understand."

We were terribly hurt and do NOT "understand." We are on a retirement income, and would not consider making such a costly trip for a "reception" only. But if we were invited to the wedding, we would gladly go.

I have already written to tell them that "something has developed" that may prevent us from making the trip, in order to leave it open for the moment.

Are we wrong to feel as we do? What would you do?
FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: I would write to the groom (leave his mother out of it) and tell him that it is customary to invite out-of-town guests to the ceremony, and unless you are included, you must decline. Period.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem that you or one of your readers may be able to help me with. I own several ranches in the Wyoming-Colorado area, and when I meet a city person for the first time and he learns that I'm in ranching, he invariably asks, "How many acres do you have?"

Abby, I consider this a very personal question. It would be like asking someone, "What is your net worth?" or, "How much is in your bank account?"

I realize that they mean no harm, and are just trying to make conversation, but I also feel that how many acres I have is none of their business.

Can you (or one of your readers) suggest an answer that wouldn't hurt their feelings, and at the same time wouldn't give them any information about the size of my operation?
RANCHER

DEAR RANCHER: Any evasive response will do, provided it's given in a friendly, good-humored tone. (a) "Too many." (b) "Not enough." (c) "All I can handle."

DEAR ABBY: I have three healthy, wonderful daughters, ages 7, 5 and 3, and they are all beautiful in my eyes. However, the eldest is an exceptionally attractive child with a head full of golden curls, enormous brown eyes and long dark lashes. I know she's pretty, and so does she, and so do her sisters, who happen to be very plain.

My problem, Abby, is the well-meaning idiot who stops me in the supermarket when I am with all three and says, "My, what a GORGEOUS child! She should be in the movies!" Or, "Wow, what a heartbreaker that blonde will be when she grows up!" (She is 7, and she's already asking me when she is going to start breaking hearts!)

Please comment about people who fuss over one child in the presence of brothers and sisters. It makes it so hard on the others.

Any suggestions on how to handle these idiots? I'm sure other mothers have to deal with it, too.
MIDWEST MOM

DEAR MOM: There is no help for the idiot. You can only try to shut him up by signaling with your face or hand—or your foot, if necessary. But I'll print this in the hope that well-meaning but thoughtless strangers who are overwhelmed by the beauty of a child will think twice before they speak.

Who said the teen years are the happiest? For Abby's new booklet "What Teenagers Want to Know," write Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Enclose $1 and a long, stamped (24 cents), self-addressed envelope, please.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 48-year-old woman. I'm a teacher and do not smoke or drink. I exercise by riding my bike a mile a day and have no real mental stress.

A year ago my cholesterol was 240. After a few months on a very strict 1000-calorie, low cholesterol diet and losing 22 pounds with the diet and exercise my count was 250. Since then I have kept my cholesterol intake quite low but have gained back 12 of the 22 pounds I lost. I eat very little meat, pork about once a month and steak about once a week with fish and chicken once a day in small amounts.

I don't use saturated fats and use only corn oil and polyunsaturated margarines. After a year of this my count was 255. Could you give me some information on how serious this is? What are my chances of a complication such as a stroke or a heart attack? What do you suggest I try next?

DEAR READER — I suggest you relax but don't go to pot...fat-wise. Office and many laboratory tests of cholesterol tend to be about 10 to 15 percent higher than the values used from epidemiological research studies. So your value by research methods might be closer to 220, which means a minimal risk for a woman with normal blood pressure who doesn't smoke.

You are following the right pattern in general with your diet, but you should try to stay lean and avoid increasing your fat deposits for a large number of health reasons.

Those variations in your cholesterol levels are all within the range that you might expect with different tests.

To give you a summary of what diet you should be following I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-3, Diet, Preventing Atherosclerosis. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am interested in your opinion of the benefits of honey to the general health of a body, and especially the part which honey may play in developing a stronger and healthier heart. I have heard of various benefits that are derived from the consumption of honey, but I would like a medical opinion of its value.

DEAR READER — Special health benefits from honey are folklore and not facts. The simple truth is that honey contains no significant amounts of vitamins or minerals. It is almost all sugar and water. The sugar in honey is fructose and glucose. The only difference in the honey sugar and table sugar is that fructose and glucose are chemically combined in table sugar. This is changed in the small intestine where enzymes convert table sugar to the same single sugars, fructose and glucose, that are naturally in honey.

Honey contains a carcinogen, meaning it may stimulate the formation of cancer, although there are no identified cases of cancer from the use of honey. Dr. Thomas H. Jukes cited this in a recent review in the New England Journal of Medicine (August 25, 1977) and the original report was from Science. The carcinogen comes from the pollen used in making honey.

So honey, a natural food, like some other food substances of so-called synthetic origin, is not completely perfect. Honey is no different in this regard than sugar. When calories have to be limited all sweets need to be limited.

Dallas men start local photo mag

By SOLL SUSSMAN
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) — David Stephens, editor and publisher of the slick and grammar-defying DallasPhoto magazine, said his creation came to him "in a flash" one Sunday afternoon in December.

He called up his partner in the advertising production business, and they developed the name, the logo and the first issue's cover that same day. The complete first issue was on the newsstands within 90 days for March sales.

The monthly magazine is designed to appeal to professional and amateur photographers, capitalizing on Dallas' growing reputation as an advertising and media center. The publisher believes it is the only slick local photography magazine in the nation.

"The reason that we think it will work in Dallas is that Dallas is a very rapidly growing advertising production center," Stephens said. "Probably five years ago was the turning point."

The Dallas area also has a sufficient number of amateurs as potential subscribers. "It seems that everybody is a photographer. Amazingly, there are so many people out there that are serious about photography."

With national publications using perhaps one portfolio each month, Stephens said most photographers have little chance of being published.

Plans at DallasPhoto call for about five portfolios each month. "They have a very real chance of getting their own works in it," the publisher said. "Even if they don't get in it, they can identify with those that are. If we start running the works of Arizona photographers, then we've defeated the purpose of our magazine."

Among the first issue's items are a behind-the-scenes look at Esquire's sultry cover photo of the Dallas Cowboys cheerleaders, an explanation of how newspapers handled photo coverage of the Super Bowl and a Caribbean travel feature with a Dallas model.

The second issue will examine the career of Bob Jackson since he snapped his Pulitzer Prize-winning photo of Jack Ruby shooting Lee Harvey Oswald.

Lt. gov. vetoes ERA block

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Two years ago, Lt. Gov. Thelma Stovall fought successfully to prevent Kentucky's Legislature from withdrawing the state's 1972 ratification of the proposed Equal Rights Amendment.

"How is it going to look for Kentucky, with a woman lieutenant governor, to take this slap at women?" Mrs. Stovall asked then.

This year, Mrs. Stovall, an ardent advocate of women's rights, could not prevent the General Assembly from approving a resolution to rescind the ERA vote.

So, in her capacity as acting governor because Gov. Julian Carroll was out of the state, she did the next best thing. She vetoed it. "Through a maze of the most dubious parliamentary maneuvers, the Legislature allowed itself to be used by the misguided and plunge itself into action which I consider regrettable," Mrs. Stovall said in her veto message Monday.

The 58-year-old Mrs. Stovall came under immediate criticism from ERA opponents, who said they would challenge the veto in court. That appears to be the only avenue open — the General Assembly adjourned its 60-day session Saturday and will not meet again until 1980.

A Frankfort attorney, Joseph Leary, said the state constitution, in Section 89, "makes it crystal clear" that a legislative resolution can be vetoed by the governor or acting governor.

Mrs. Stovall, who announced her candidacy for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination for 1979 by saying "I'll run if I'm alive," said she did not fear political backlash from ERA opponents.

Mrs. Stovall said Monday that she was "darn glad" that Carroll had left for a three-day vacation Saturday — just as the legislature closed. At the same time, she indirectly criticized the governor for not taking a public position on the rescission resolution.

"When the people vote to elect their leaders, they expect them to act and act decisively," she said.

Elderly escape from flood

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Roy Gilliam, 90, forgot his false teeth. His 78-year-old wife left behind her glasses. They had no time to spare when the sheriff came to take them away in the back of a truck — out of the path of surging flood waters.

The Valley, Neb., couple left their home with only the clothes they were wearing. They say they've never seen a disaster like this Platte River flood, which has already forced the evacuation of more than 4,000 people in seven eastern Nebraska counties.

About 25 miles upriver from Valley, 71-year-old widow Emily Hedges was found dead Monday in flood waters near her North Bend home, a day after she refused to evacuate, said the Dodge County sheriff's office. Mrs. Hedges was the only known fatality.

All 1,600 residents of Valley were ordered evacuated Monday by the mayor.

"The sheriff knocked on our door about 9 a.m. He said we had to go," Gilliam recalled tearfully at a Boys Town disaster center. "I told him we wasn't going. He said, 'Yes,

Longhorns to meet NCS in finals

NEW YORK (AP) — Texas Coach Abe Lemons may be the king of the college basketball jokers, but everyone knows the kidding stops at the opening tipoff.

It'll be no different tonight when the jovial coach sends his Longhorns into the National Invitation Tournament final against North Carolina State. Lemons spent part of Monday entertaining the media at the NIT luncheon, bemoaning New York prices, poking fun of his coaching ability and absolutely refusing to pay attention — outwardly, anyway — to the Longhorns' bid for the title of the 41st NIT.

"I just came from breakfast and I had a couple of eggs that cost $4.95," said Lemons. "I asked to see the chicken. Where I come from, I never saw a chicken that could lay eggs worth $4.95."

"That's more amazing than this game."

Yes, just another game for Lemons and his 25-5 Longhorns. He doesn't know what to expect from the 21-9 Wolfpack and doesn't seem to care much.

"I never scout an opponent," he said. "How smart can I be?"

I've never written a book." The Wolfpack enters the final showdown still talking about the last-second 40-foot shot that Clyde Austin sank in overtime to give North Carolina State its dramatic 86-85 triumph over Georgetown in the semifinals Sunday.

"When that shot went in, I tore up my notes," said Lemons, who admitted in the next sentence that he really hadn't kept any on the Hoyas and it wouldn't have mattered if he had.

"Very frankly," he said, "coaches don't contribute that much to a team's success. If you've got self-motivated people that are talented, that's all you need."

If it's any comfort to Lemons, the season will be over by this time tomorrow. The NIT title will have been decided — not by one-liners, but by action.

And the Wolfpack presents a very real threat. North Carolina State, with 7-foot-2 Glenn Sudhop and 6-8 Tiny Pinder up front, will have a definite edge in height.

But they all pay the same price for breakfast.

Sonny Allen predicts Kentucky

By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Since Sonny Allen is 0-5 against three of the final four in the NCAA basketball playoffs in St. Louis, the Southern Methodist basketball coach qualifies as something of a shell-shocked expert on the possible winner.

His choice? Kentucky. SMU took a 110-86 thumping at Kentucky in the opening game of the season. The Mustangs later lost to Duke 91-67 in Dallas and to Arkansas three times.

"Kentucky is really a tournament-experienced team," said Allen. "They have four seniors who got to the final four as freshmen and lost to UCLA. As sophomores, they won the NIT (National Invitational Tournament) and last year as juniors they got beat in the Eastern Regional finals by North Carolina."

Foreman would rather talk about Christianity

HOUSTON (AP) — Former heavyweight champion George Foreman prefers to talk more about Jesus than boxing these days and he says that's the real reason he's coming out of retirement to fight again.

Foreman, a product of Houston's tough Fifth Ward, says he became a "born again" Christian in his dressing room March 17, 1977, shortly after losing to Jimmy Young, and gave up boxing to preach about Jesus.

Now, after a year away from the ring during which he did no training, an overweight Foreman says he's returning to the ring to praise Jesus.

Foreman will use the money he earns in the ring to build two churches, one in Los Angeles and another in New York, he said Monday in a copyrighted article in the Houston Chronicle.

"I want to call it the Church of Our Lord Jesus Christ," Foreman said. "And there won't be a gymnasium attached to them either."

Asked if he thought he could again become heavyweight champion, Foreman said: "I don't know. Once I get into fighting again, I'm going to train. But I definitely don't have any more hatred in me. If I ever had a killer instinct it's dead now."

Foreman said it would be hard to return to boxing. "I'm a year older now," he said. "I'm 29. Guys are going to give me a hard time now, they're really going to whip me, brother."

Foreman said he would use boxing to get peoples' attention and then tell them about Jesus. "God has not ordained me, but He did give me some bait to catch fish with," Foreman said. "Ever since I came out of the ring I've been using George Foreman for Jesus and I'm going to continue to use George Foreman for Jesus."

Asked how he views the religious beliefs of World Boxing Association champion Leon Spinks, Foreman said "You can't ask God to help you win a fight. He's (Spinks) got to learn that. God's with the man that lost, even more than with the one who's winning."

Finley says it's no bluff

By ERIC PREWITT AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco Bay Area baseball situation resembles a poker game, with everyone wondering who's bluffing. Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley said Monday that if other owners think it's him, they are dead wrong.

PHS grad to be coach at Arkansas

John R. Jenkins, a 1970 graduate of Pampa High School who has been serving for the past two years as defensive coordinator and assistant head coach for the Arkansas High football team, (in Texarkana), has accepted a position on the University of Arkansas coaching staff.

The school is located in Fayetteville, Ark. The 25-year-old former UA football and baseball player is author of a book on football, "Into the Open Field."

Jenkins, a bachelor, said his marital status enables him "to travel a lot and visit spring training at different schools." That is how he learned of the UA opening.

He said baseball's top brass has told him it will cost him $2 million to get out of his Oakland Coliseum lease so that the A's can be sold to Denver oilman Marvin Davis. The San Francisco Giants then would split their home schedule between the Coliseum and Candlestick Park.

"I told them six weeks ago that, whatever the cost might be, I'd go to $1 million and there was no way I'd go over that $1 million," Finley said Monday after telling American League President Lee MacPhail and Commissioner Bowie Kuhn the same thing again.

The Coliseum management wants $3 million and, according to Finley, the proposal of the major leagues' Executive Council is for Finley to pay $2 million and other clubs, including the National League's Giants, to split the other $1 million.

"Has anyone asked (Giants co-owner) Bob Lurie to pay $1 million?" Finley said from his home in Chicago, declaring that with the A's in Denver "the value of the Giants franchise will increase tremendously."

Finley talked to Lurie Monday, apparently suggesting that he throw in $1 million. But Lurie said, "To ask us to put up another $1 million is wrong, completely improper."

Whatever Finley paid would come out of the $12.5 million Denver's Davis is prepared to pay if the A's can be freed from their stadium lease. He'd still show a healthy profit on the franchise he bought for a reported $2 million in 1961 when it was in Kansas City.

But he said Monday, in vowing to stand tough: "If necessary, I could operate the team again in Oakland. They may think I'm dead — or half dead — physically and financially. But I ain't dead spiritually."

Here's how to move fast, safely

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Moving day is coming soon for millions of Americans and families who want to avoid problems should start now to make sure their possessions are shipped promptly and safely.

One moving company estimates that nearly one-fifth of all Americans change their addresses each year; more than half the long-distance moves are made between May 15 and June 15.

The first step to success is a check of companies' performance reports, required by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The mover must give you a copy of the report for his firm; he also should provide a copy of an ICC moving guide for consumers, BOP 103.

Consumer Watch

Prices depend on weight and distance. Interstate movers must file tariffs with the ICC on rates and charges. Copies are available at movers' offices and no interstate mover may charge more — or less — than his ICC rates.

Movers must, on request, give you a written estimate of the cost of a move in advance, but the estimates are not binding.

It is important to make sure you are not charged for more than you actually ship. The ICC, in announcing a crackdown last year, said some companies had been caught trying to boost weights — and prices — by adding everything from bricks to old engine parts to moving vans.

Go to the weigh-in of your shipment. The mover must notify you in advance of the location of the scale.

The weight of a shipment is determined by weighing the van before and after loading your goods. The driver should be in the van for the initial weighing. Fuel tanks must be full and the van must contain all pads, claims, dollies, hand trucks, etc. that will be used.

The driver must give you copies of two tickets, one showing the poundage before loading your shipment; the other showing the weight after. The tickets given to you must contain the same weights shown on the official tickets issued by the weighmaster and must include the bill of lading number for your shipment.

News watch

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — "Yankee Doodle" has joined the praying mantis, the sperm whale and the garnet as a symbol of Connecticut.

Gov. Ella Grasso signed into law Monday a bill making the Revolutionary War-era tune the state song. The closest contender had been "Boola-Boola," the Yale University fight song. The praying mantis is the state insect, the sperm whale the state animal and the garnet the state mineral.

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. and the Top Value trading stamp company have agreed to pay $625,000 to a Georgia girl who was paralyzed in a car accident when she was hurled out of her baby seat and into the car's dashboard.

An attorney for Tammy Butler, 11, now a fifth-grader in Atlanta, had argued before the out-of-court settlement that both the 1964 Chevy II and the baby seat — which was purchased with trading stamps — were unsafe.

NEW YORK (AP) — Page 15 of today's New York Times was bordered in black and otherwise empty except for a drawing of a thin, two-inch-high spire at the bottom.

A Times spokesman who asked not to be identified acknowledged that the spire was that of New York's Chrysler building, and that the ad was one of a series of three scheduled to run through Thursday.

The spokesman refused to say who had bought the ad — which cost $13,000 — or what the ultimate message would be.

ATLANTA (AP) — Nobody seems to know how they got there, but more than 50 dead crows were found evenly distributed along the center line of Northside Drive.

Some had been run over, and it wasn't immediately known how the crows had been killed. "There ain't no way they would have walked out there and died on the center line," said Firefighter J.D. Hicks.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The California Supreme Court says it doesn't have the power to order Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. to extradite American Indian Movement leader Dennis Banks to South Dakota.

In a 5-2 decision Monday, the court ruled that no California court may order the governor to extradite a person to another state.

Banks, 40, was convicted in South Dakota in 1975 of rioting while armed with a dangerous weapon and assault with a dangerous weapon. He was released on bail and failed to appear for sentencing the following month. South Dakota requested Banks' extradition Feb. 9, 1976, following his arrest in California.

WASHINGTON (AP) — CIA Director Stansfield Turner says the agency will fire only 50 more employees, less than a quarter of the 225 the spy agency had planned to trim from its headquarters staff by Oct. 1.

The announcement last fall of the planned cutback hurt agency morale and increased the rate of attrition, said CIA spokesman Herbert Hetu. He said more members of the agency's undercover division resigned or retired than expected, eliminating the need for the full quota of firings.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robbing liquor stores, supermarkets or other businesses could become a federal crime under a new criminal code passed by the Senate, say criminal defenders.

The bill lays the groundwork for "unprecedented... expansion of federal criminal jurisdiction," Edward F. Malek, a public defender from Cleveland, told the House Judiciary Committee on Monday.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's nominee for budget director, James T. McIntyre, is one step closer to Senate confirmation following his unanimous endorsement Monday by the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

McIntyre, 37, former Georgia state budget director, has been acting head of the Office of Management and Budget since September. He replaced Bert Lance, who resigned while government agencies were investigating his financial dealings.

TYLER, Texas (AP) — The daughter of paroled swindler Billie Sol Estes was chastized by a judge Monday when she stepped off the stand in his court and cursed the Mississippi promoter who says Estes and others swindled him out of $6 million.

Pam Tedford and six others were denied their motions to quash subpoenas requiring them to testify in the aggravated kidnapping trial of Estes' accuser, 40-year-old Don Trull.

As Mrs. Tedford finished testifying during the hearing to quash her subpoena, she left the stand and muttered "son-of-a-bitch" at Trull and his attorney.

State District Judge Glenn Phillips told Estes' daughter he hopes she enjoys her stay in Smith County, but that if she persisted in such comments, she would enjoy her stay in the Smith County Jail.

Don Trull, 40, is charged with holding Bill Mays, an employee of Tyler financier Billy Pyron, hostage last August in Pyron's office at the Heritage National Bank.

Trull is accused of threatening to burn the office unless he received a car, $10,000 in cash and Pyron's signature on a $775,000 promissory note.

Trull said his actions in the bank resulted from his being swindled by Pyron and Estes, and that he was trying to get his money back. He also denies he held Mays against his will.

Mays was released unharmed when Trull surrendered to police four hours after he splashed gasoline around the office and threatened to ignite it.

Jury selection was scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. today. Attorneys said it probably will take two to four days to select the jury. Testimony in the trial is expected to begin Monday. The trial was moved to a larger courtroom to accommodate the crowd expected to attend.

Estes, dressed in a blue pinstripe suit, sat with his daughter and his secretary.

Estes, his daughter and more than 70 other persons have been subpoenaed to testify, 55 of them by Trull's attorney, G. Brockette Erwin.

Two armed sheriff's deputies stood at the back of the courtroom, which was almost full because of the number of witnesses subpoenaed. A source said the officers were in the courtroom to prevent trouble, since many of the witnesses are bitter enemies.

The judge denied the motions to quash the subpoenas for Mrs. Tedford, Mr. and Mrs. Gaston Swafford, Gerald Holcomb, Raymond Ray Cure, Lester O. Berg and their attorney, Jack H. Bryant. They argued the subpoenas should be quashed because they had "no knowledge of transactions subject to Erwin's inquiries."

All witnesses were ordered to be in court at 1:30 p.m. next Tuesday. Trull said he was taken in a scheme involving non-existent portable steam cleaners — a complaint now under investigation by the FBI, the attorney general's office and the Internal Revenue Service.

Pyron has denied any involvement in the alleged steam-cleaning scheme or subsequent land deals. Trull said the deals were arranged by Estes with Pyron's financing. Estes has declined comment, referring all questions to his attorney, Jack Bryant, who branded Trull "a common felon."
