

'Happy Days' generating much TV money

Fonz wonders, 'Heey, who's sittin' on the profits?'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Happy Days," one of the most popular television programs ever, has grossed millions for the studio that makes it, the stars who appear in it and the network that shows it. Some of its stars and producers have contracts which promise them a share of the profits. But until just recently there were none at least on paper.

And this is causing a widening rift between actors, producers and writers, on the one hand, and production firms such as Paramount, Warner Bros. and Universal, on the other. The fact is that the accounting ledgers of most TV series, even the most popular, show losses during their initial network runs. There are top salaries for the stars, an advertising bonanza for the networks, endorsements and all the rest. But profits? Usually not. So, when those with the profit-sharing contracts try to collect, the cupboard is bare. And thus, the fights are starting.

In the case of "Happy Days," American Broadcasting Co. has grossed at least $100 million from commercials since launching the series in 1974. ABC, in turn, has paid at least $20 million to Paramount Studios, which owns the series and has made the 110 episodes filmed so far.

ABC has made money from its $80 million share and Paramount has retained fees from its $20 million, industry sources say. But Paramount didn't declare a profit on the show until last year, after it earned additional millions in daytime reruns of "Happy Days." And superstar Henry "Fonz" Winkler and the show's executive producers, Garry Marshall, Thomas Miller and Edward Milks have contracts guaranteeing them more than 50 percent of the show's profits, in addition to their big salaries. So the quartet has commissioned an audit to see where the money went.

The networks accumulate their multimillion dollar grosses through hefty advertising revenues (up to $85,000 for a 30-second commercial on "Happy Days"); the production companies keep various fees (Paramount receives more than $200,000 from ABC for each episode of "Happy Days" and keeps at least $30,000 off the top); and the "creative talent" makes handsome salaries (Winkler gets about $80,000 for each of 24 episodes produced annually and the three executive producers divide at least $10,000 per episode).

The creative talent of "Happy Days" and other TV shows wants more, however, and the contracts many have negotiated in the past decade say they're entitled to percentages of the profits. As a result, disputes are becoming more frequent. The problems are similar to those in the movie and recording industries. But unlike those industries, the battles in television have not yet reached the courtroom, although that day seems near.

The Associated Press has learned that an outside audit commissioned by Winkler, Marshall, Miller and Milks questioned at least $400,000 in expenses — mostly for sets, props, salaries and benefits — that Paramount charged against the show during its first 3½ years. Every dollar kept by Paramount to offset expenses is one less dollar of profit to be shared with Winkler and the executive producers.

Paramount's chief accountant, Arthur Barron, said that none of the parties involved is bitter and Paramount is negotiating a settlement.

Other TV shows also are being audited. "It seems like it's becoming a tradition," said Marshall. "The studios say, 'Here's the money. Come and find it.'"

"Happy Days," which has been one of the top five rated shows in recent years, is by no means the only hit series that took a long time to show a profit.

"All in the Family," just completing its seventh year, came out of the red about three years ago. "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," on the air for seven years before closing down last spring, is just now beginning to be profitable with reruns. In fact, according to Arthur Price, a spokesman for Miss Moore's production company, the program lost money in each of its last five years.

The path to profitability for a TV series often lies in syndication, in which a series is rerun in non-prime time. The syndication fees are high, sometimes in the millions.

In an earlier Garry Marshall success, "The Odd Couple," one of the stars, Tony Randall, negotiated a clause giving him 22.5 percent of profits. But Randall says he hasn't received a nickel of profit, although the show was popular during its network run. Has been syndicated.

Kidnapped baron found dead

ANTWERP, Belgium (AP) — The body of kidnapped Baron Charles-Victor Bracht was found in a garbage dump early today and authorities said the wealthy businessman had been killed shortly after his abduction March 7.

Police said the body of the 63-year-old nobleman was found at a dump in Oelegem, a village near Antwerp, after an anonymous telephone tip.

Antwerp's Crown Prosecutor Julien van Hoeylandt told reporters after an autopsy that the baron died a violent death. Authorities had considered the possibility that Bracht, who suffered from a heart condition, died of natural causes.

Van Hoeylandt said a telephone caller Sunday night told Bracht's son, Theodore, where the body could be found. The village of Oelegem is about six miles southeast of Schoten, the Antwerp residential suburb where the Bracht family's chateau is located.

Villagers helped the police search the wooded area with searchlights. The body was found in a marshy section near a pond hidden under garbage. Police were questioning villagers living near the area.

Bracht headed an international conglomerate dealing in tropical products, insurance and construction. The firm's many companies had interests in Zaire, the former Belgian Congo, Indonesia, Latin America and West European countries.

The baron was on his way to his Antwerp office when he was kidnapped at the private parking lot near the office where he always left his car.

After the abduction, the police and Bracht's family imposed a blackout on their contacts with the kidnapers.

A week ago, the Antwerp newspaper Gazet van Antwerpen got a telephone call saying the missing man was dead. The caller gave no indication where the body could be found, and the Gazet published a request to the caller to phone again to help find the body.

On Saturday, Bracht's son, who is managing director of the family holding company, in a television appearance pleaded with the kidnapers to contact him.

Bracht was the second rich Belgian baron kidnapped this year. Baron Edouard-Jean Empain, who heads a Belgian-French conglomerate with headquarters in Paris, was kidnapped for ransom in the French capital Jan. 23. He was released March 26 after the French police foiled an attempt by his family to pay $8.6 million and captured one of the kidnapers.

Passage possible for new farm bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate opened debate today on an emergency one-year farm bill, and it appeared that the legislation might be approved there despite President Carter's objections.

Carter has promised to veto the bill if it is approved by Congress. The Senate was taking time out from its Panama Canal treaty debate to vote on the measure today.

Elsewhere in Congress, the House ethics committee was continuing its hearings on alleged South Korean influence-buying while a House committee began work on a tuition tax credit bill.

The administration began urging senators and representatives last week to vote against the farm bill, designed to aid grain and cotton producers.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland predicted it would survive the Senate vote, but foresaw a greater chance of defeat in the House because the administration has more time to make its case with members there.

Administration lobbyists say only about 40 senators can be counted on to vote against the farm bill.

Sen. Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., chairman of the senate conferees who fashioned the package, said today it was not what he wished and more inflationary than what he advised. But "farmers need help. They need help now," he said as he presented the bill today.

The opponents' leader, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, urged the Senate to send the conferees back to find an alternative.

"Farmers will get no help from a bill the president vetoes," he said. Muskie is chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

The Agriculture Department and the Congressional Budget Office say the bill, if it becomes law, would add 58 cents to $2.14 to the average $49.61 an urban family of three spends weekly for groceries.

Two-thirds of the Senate earlier approved the aid bill, modified last week by House-Senate conferees and sent to both houses.

Thursday's vote will be the first in the House, which referred it to the committee without taking any floor action.

The House Budget Committee chairman, Rep. Robert N. Giaimo, D-Conn., said he hopes to stop the bill in the rules committee, which must first take up the measure. Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. is working for its defeat in a full floor vote, however, because he says the proposal "would bludgeon the consumer."

Military retirement may switch to 30 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — A presidential commission today urged overhaul of the hotly-debated military retirement-pay system, offering a "design for the future" that it said would eventually save $10 billion a year.

"The system now costs too much money," said chairman Charles J. Zwick, referring particularly to the system of allowing retirement after 20 years of service. Instead, the commission urges that the 20 years be increased to 30.

The commission acknowledged that its predicted $10 billion a year savings would not be reaped until nearly the year 2000 because all present uniformed men and women with at least four years of service would retain the right to retire after 20 years.

The most junior of today's troops and all those enlisting after the plan becomes effective would come under the new 30-year plan.

In fact, total Pentagon spending on military compensation would rise for the next 12 to 15 years before starting to drop because other parts of the commission's proposal call for a variety of improved benefits for many of the 2.1 million men and women on active duty.

The panel said this would persuade more trained and skilled personnel to remain in uniform longer.

Zwick, a former federal budget director and now a Miami banker, handed the 207-page report to President Carter, who created the nine-member commission last year with orders to develop a "long term solution to military compensation."

The president told him "there are some serious defects" in the retirement system.

He said he hoped to make proposals on the retirement system to congress by next January.

"I'm very deeply grateful to you for this sacrificial work," Carter told Zwick.

Double dippers' scoops top Mondale's $75,000

WASHINGTON (AP) — Walter F. Mondale earns less as vice president of the United States than 39 retired military officers who supplement their pensions with civilian government jobs.

Mondale's salary is $75,000 a year.

An additional 122 retired generals, admirals and other officers have annual salaries higher than the $66,000 paid to Cabinet officers.

The figures come from a House Civil Service subcommittee that investigated "double dipping," the practice of retired military personnel retiring after 20 or more years of service and then taking civilian jobs with the government.

The subcommittee has issued a report that said 141,000 retired military men and women earning $958 million a year in pensions also hold government jobs. And more than half of those "double dippers" — 78,124 — are employed by the Defense Department.

"Many former high-ranking retired officers employed in full-time federal positions receive inordinately high total compensation (military retired pay plus civilian salary)," said the report issued last week. It urged an overhaul of the retirement system.

The report nearly coincided with the release today of the findings of the president's Commission on Military Compensation. The commission, established by President Carter last year, recommends sweeping changes in the military retirement system, including an end to double dipping.

The House report said double dipping is on the increase.

"During the 38-month period from April 1972 to June 1975, the number of military retirees employed as civilians by the federal government increased 26 percent," it said.

And during the same period, the number of military retirees working for the Defense Department went up 33 percent despite an overall reduction in civilian employees working for the Pentagon.

Congress in 1964 enacted a Dual Compensation Act to reduce the retired pay of some military retirees who take new government jobs. But the law applies only to regular officers and not to those classified as reserve officers or to enlisted personnel. Few retirees working for the government are covered by the law and only about 3.6 percent have their retirement pay reduced as a result of the 1964 law, the report said.

Military pensions are determined by the number of years served and rank held. The highest pensions — $21,545 — go to 12 generals.

However, the most numerous officer retirees are 1,347 lieutenant colonels or the equivalent, getting an average of $8,551 a year. The most numerous enlisted retirees are 44,881 at rank E-7 — an Army sergeant first class or equivalent — receiving an average of $6,149 a year.

OPINION PAGE

There is no free lunch

Now that the miners have gone back to work and warmer weather is here, we can put coal on the back burner and appreciate the flowers.

And it looks as if the farm situation can be handled in a similar manner. The farmers made their point, got attention from the public, and now it is time to put in crops once again. The smart ones will do so with vigor. The not-so-smart will plow under and suffer, hoping that the government will hurry to their rescue. And it will if given half a chance. It always has.

Miners have come a long way since the days of John L. Lewis. Back then, they were working for peanuts compared to their wages today. John L. Lewis got them to strike long and hard and just about maneuvered them right out of the energy picture. Coal became too costly.

The most recent strike might not be enough to pull the plug on coal mining but it certainly will prompt exploration for other forms of energy. People will buy what they believe is less expensive as long as their demands are being satisfied. The price of coal will go up measurably now.

Meanwhile, with the coming of spring will also come spring planting. There are many farmer who would like to do as the miners did, walk out and stay out until their demands are met. They can't do that, however, because they are in hook to their eyeballs and they must get seed into the ground and hope that there will be enough other farmers who don't plant to push prices up for those who do.

Farming and coal mining have always been precarious occupations. The weather gets a lot of farmers and caveins do miners in. Every occupation has its hazards, however. You read more about mine tragedies because they are the ones filled with drama and suspense. That makes them no less tragic, however. They are occupations grown old with time but they are still much in demand and of much value to people.

One of the easiest things for people to do when the edge of life gets raw is to turn to government for help. People are doing this by the millions. They are doing it individually and collectively. The welfare rolls are filled with individuals and the government has an eager hand for anyone vaguely connected with unions. The sum of it all is something for nothing—a free lunch.

The tragedy of it all is the bottom line always reads the same: There is no such thing as a free lunch.

Nation's press

Don't subtract add it up

(Wall Street Journal)

If business isn't overjoyed with President Carter's tax favors on its behalf, there is one simple explanation: Businessmen, whatever their other faults, know how to add.

If you add up everything that business faces, the prospect is not for a tax cut, but a tax increase.

The official Treasury calculations show that the package results in a net tax reduction for business of $5.7 billion in 1979, rising to $7.2 billion in 1980 and $6.7 billion in 1981. The major reductions come from a four-point cut in the corporate rate and expansion of the 10 percent investment tax credit to include structures as well as equipment and to offset a larger share of tax liabilities. These are partly offset by a phase-out of export subsidies and foreign source income deferrals and by reduced deductions for business entertainment.

One major problem with the Treasury's estimated benefits is that corporate profits may not rise at the 12 percent to 13 percent rate the government is predicting. If not, the cut in the corporate rate will yield smaller benefits.

More important, though, is what is left out of the calculations. We have noted previously that the administration contrived to eliminate from its budget its largest new expenditure proposal, the rebates connected with its energy program—counting them not as expenditures but as "refunds." Now it has eliminated from its tax calculations its biggest new tax proposal, the crude oil equalization tax. This tax is part of the energy package, not part of the tax package, so tax planners can forget it. Businessmen cannot.

Harald B. Malmgren, former U.S. trade negotiator and now a private consultant, notes that the proposed energy taxes plus boosts already legislated in the Social Security payroll tax, will more than offset the tax package benefits. The combination will add $6.2 billion to the corporate tax bill in 1979, some $13 billion in 1980 and $20 billion in 1981. Corporations will come out with a small tax increase in 1979 and some $20 billion in increased liabilities through 1980 and 1981.

Of course, a lot of arguments can be made about these numbers. The energy taxes have not yet passed Congress and may not. The wellhead tax, which accounts for the lion's share of the energy package, hits only one industry, oil, directly. Most economists argue that the main burden of the employer's half of the Social Security payroll tax falls on the employee, not the employer.

But the Social Security tax, whatever its incidence, will come out of the business cash flow, as will the energy taxes, if they pass. These charges against cash flow must be paid pretty much irrespective of profit levels. By contrast, harking back to our point about the Treasury's optimism, gains to cash flow from corporate rate cuts depend on success in generating profit.

There are, of course, other problems with the tax package itself. The Treasury puts a very low figure on the cost to business of its decision to end deferral of foreign source income, only $88 billion in 1979 and rising to about $900 billion in 1983. But while this calculation may be technically correct, that only partly defines the problem for multinational corporations, since the change could raise their foreign taxes as well. We will have more to say on this problem in a future editorial.

Finally, there is yet another tax increase that we haven't mentioned. Inflation raises corporate taxes by overvaluing inventory profits and making tax-free depreciation allowances inadequate to cover the rising costs of new plant and equipment. At a 6 percent inflation rate, which shows little sign of abating, this is a significant cost. Nor have we mentioned regulatory costs. We see little sign of those abating either.

There are good reasons why the Carter tax plan doesn't have the stock market climbing and businessmen dancing in the streets. All you have to do is add on the taxes that Mr. Carter's package doesn't mention.

A public health hazard

"We must warn the American people that the government intends to take over the delivery of health care." So said the president of the American Osteopathic Association. The speaker was Dr. Philip Adler, who addressed members at the organization's annual meeting.

Adler went on to state that people must be made aware of "exactly what that (the takeover) will mean... not in Washington, not on some abstract level... but at home, right where they live."

In his address, Adler lambasted federal involvement in health programs and blamed government agencies for the rising cost of health care. He urged professionals and consumers to fight the feds at local levels.

Health Education and Welfare (HEW) was termed the agency which, "constantly grinds out thousands of new regulations," making any reduction in accelerating costs impossible. Topping his list of HEW offences is its proposed national guidelines on health planning.

"The proposed standards," Adler said, "attempt to establish the number of hospital beds per thousand population, minimum hospital occupancy rates, minimum obstetrical deliveries and even the number and type of surgical procedures."

Hospitals that fail to meet these requirements would have to cut out - patient care or simply close their doors. Adler claimed that public pressure forced HEW to reconsider its proposals. Although HEW responded that the government would not have the authority to close any medical facility, Adler expressed doubts that this would be the case.

We join the good doctor in his doubts, and we add that every American has much reason to fear the steady bureaucratic march to total control of health care in this nation.

It won't be done in one big step. Americans will not accept socialism in too large a dose. By persistent effort on many fronts the agencies of government manage to utilize citizens' own money to keep pecking away until what bureaucracy wants it finally gets.

The career pros in the government agencies may seem, at times, to yield to public pressure, but they know it will not be sustained and when adverse interest wanes they are right back to increase regulatory power and enhance their career interests.

Everyone will suffer unless the steady march to total government encroachment into health care is halted. It is getting late. Will we wake up in time to save ourselves from nationalized medicine?

Epitaph for a great newspaper

(The headline on the 102-year-old Chicago Daily News March 4 said in big type, So Long, Chicago. The newspaper was one of the greatest for many years in American journalism. We thought to comment on its passing but no finer words could be put together than those contained in its last editorial, reprinted below, "Farewell to our family.")

A good newspaper is to be treasured, because it's the eyes and ears of the men and women who, together, make a community.

At its best, it's the conscience of that community, a piece of its soul.

When a good newspaper dies, the death diminishes the lives of the people it served. It puts more distance between each of them. It reduces the quality of life for all, even those who haven't read it.

The death of a newspaper makes democracy a bit more vulnerable, because it withdraws a fragment of the vision that democracy, to remain viable, demands.

The better the newspaper, the more these things are true.

And The Chicago Daily News was among the best of newspapers.

We're not shy about saying so. We assume you'll forgive us for that because we're old and venerable. Not old and doddering; we depart with a voice in full vigor. Venerable.

You, our readers, have repeatedly shown that by responding to the trumpets we've been sounding for 102 years. You've been angry when we revealed evil, often angry enough to hound rascals out of high office. You've been moved to good causes when we pointed out need. You've risen to our happiness, grieved in our sadness. Without your response, our trumpet calls would have been empty wind.

You, our readers, have made us a family. We know it from the respect and affection you've shown in the hundreds of letters you've written since it became known that we were leaving. For these we thank you, from the heart.

There are other credentials to certify our venerability, the Pulitzer prizes (15) and the laurels of lesser fame. We won't list them again, proud as we are of them, because we can't also list all those who, without public recognition, day in and day out, checked and rechecked obituaries, froze to the marrow at fire scenes, blanched over corpses, pushed pencils interminably, carried endless reams of copy. They too also helped make The Chicago Daily News.

Nor will we repeat the names of the Sandburgs and the Hechts and the many others who became legends in American literature while working here.

Discounting rare inadequacies, the editorial staff of this newspaper has been made up of talented, dedicated, proud professionals. And they were here rather than elsewhere because they were drawn by the magnet of a great, dedicated, proud newspaper.

We came to this work, most of us, with a sense of mission, of service. We aimed to inform, and to do so with style. We aimed to entertain, and to do so with wit. The most fortunate of us will carry that sense of mission elsewhere.

But of course mission wasn't the sole draw. The work paid rich dividends in fascination. Each day was bright with new events, new people. Monotony rarely weighed us down. Much of what we reported was history, and we were fortunate to live so close to it. We dealt with the most interesting people of our time, and that was a daily stimulant. The warmest part was sharing our work with the most stimulating people of them all, the staff of The Chicago Daily News. Our closeness, our partnership, our pride in each other's talent and accomplishment was a joy. You, our readers, must have sensed some of that.

As we go our various ways, we do so with humility as well as pride. We know that we sometimes befuddled, when we meant to enlighten; we sometimes erred, though we strove for accuracy; we sometimes caused pain, when we aimed for compassion; we sometimes bored, when we sought to amuse. We regret the lapses.

And we ask any of you who fault us for having seemed strident in our proper role as adversaries to mark the words of Judge Murray Gurfein. Commenting in the Pentagon Papers case, he said: "A cantankerous press, an obstinate press, a ubiquitous press must be suffered by those in authority in order to preserve the even greater values of freedom of expression and the right of the people to know."

After today, the total body of the free American press will be a little less ubiquitous. It doesn't matter that the loss is fractional. It's still a loss.

We were privileged to hold a candle. Now, as it flickers out, we are at peace with the memory of how well it showed the path.

The effort has been rewarding. For by lighting your way, we lit our own.

A bank for consumer co-ops

By SYLVIA PORTER

ITEM: The Group Health Cooperative of Puget Sound, Wash., is the largest consumer-owned health care cooperative in the nation, serving more than 240,000 local residents through a network of two hospitals, 10 medical centers and an extended care facility. The coop has been in existence for 30 years, but was unable to get a major loan from a commercial bank until 10 years ago, when its enrollment exceeded 100,000 people.

ITEM: Co-Op Auto of Washtenaw, Mich., is among the busiest auto repair shops of its size in the area. In addition to repairing cars, the coop runs consumer education classes and a U-Do-It program for customers who want to work on their cars themselves. Today, the repair shop does $40,000 of business each month. But five years ago, Co-Op Auto was on the edge of bankruptcy, and was saved only by its present president's management ability and luck at obtaining credit from a coop life insurance company as well as the Cooperative Foundation.

ITEM: Until 1975, when a cooperative grocery store opened on isolated Daufuskie Island, off the South Carolina shore, the only thing the 140 permanent residents could buy on the island was a postage stamp. There was no bridge connecting the island to the mainland. Transportation is still iffy and many problems threaten to close this struggling coop grocery. As of now, there are no government or private sources willing or able to provide capital or training or transportation to help the island grocery coop survive.

Launching and maintaining a cooperative is tough—even though an estimated 3 million Americans belong to cooperatives providing members everything from eyeglasses to TV repair services.

The organizing skills and experience required are hard to obtain. The availability of bank financing at the initial stages is limited or nonexistent. Even more established coops have trouble getting loans to expand. Government aid for coops is "fundamentally deficient," testified Roger C. Altman, Asst. Treasury Secretary, recently.

With the exception of housing coops, most cooperatives are small businesses, yet they are not eligible for the loans and training assistance provided by the Small Business Administration.

The situation soon may change, though, for the Senate is to consider a bill to establish a National Consumer Cooperative Bank, eventually to be owned by its borrowers and designed to provide nonfarm cooperatives with technical help and loans at prevailing interest rate levels.

Start-up money for the bank would come from stock purchases by the Treasury, reports my Washington associate, Brooke Shearer.

This money/eventually would be repaid through borrowers' investments in the bank as well as the bank's earnings. To obtain most of its funds, the bank would sell its securities to investors in the open capital markets.

The bill also calls for the bank to run a "Self-Help Development Fund," to make low-interest loans to poorer cooperatives and to administer a counseling and training program for fledgling or faltering coops which need this training more than anything else.

A similar version of the Coop Bank bill was passed last year by a one-vote margin in the House. Earlier in its term, the Carter White House questioned the need for an independent bank and merely supported a $20 million pilot program. But it has since revised its position on the proposal.

Now, after many visits to cooperatives throughout the U.S. and after meetings with informed officials of other agencies, President Carter is enthusiastically backing the concept—although in a scaled-down form.

The administration's modified turn-about plus the widespread and persistent support of a diverse collection of urban, farm, labor and consumer organizations suggest that this proposal for a National Consumer Cooperative Bank has a fair chance of passage.

The key points that appeal both to groups adamantly opposed to more government organizations and those fervently in favor of such expansions as this are:

The Coop Bank would provide an alternative to government hand-out programs instead of adding to them; It would help precisely those Americans who resent handout deals and who want only to get the essential technical aid and fair-interest loans to be able to help themselves.

family records together. You may think you have everything paid and then find they have another back bill on a son or a daughter or yourself. Be sure you check the bill close for the address and the date, so as to be certain the bill is yours. If you do owe money, have all bills consolidated so as to be able to pay monthly.

Most everyone has been upset, but people are setting back to let everyone else to make everything right, it is your place to help take care of your hospital, your town, and your family.

Notice all major companies: they should notify all newcomers they should make arrangements immediately for a doctor in town and be sure they either have a good insurance or have money in their pocket or they may be turned away from our county hospital.

I understood when we voted for the hospital, it was to be used for everyone, rich and poor alike, regretfully lately just hasn't been so.

The hospital says it is operating in the red and yet frequently people are being turned to other towns to seek help because of lack of a doctor or cash, but later could be an income to the hospital.

I'm sure there are other things in our city and county that should be reviewed, but none is more important than our health.

I'm not running for city or county office, or wish to work at the hospital. I have been a citizen of Pampa for 49 years, by the hospital records I have not owed them anything since 1974, but however I have a lot of friends both white and black, rich and poor in Pampa and don't care to see any of them die on the way to other towns because of lack of Medical Care in Pampa.

Gulf Coast residents lack fresh water

EDITOR'S NOTE — For Texas Gulf Coast residents water — salt water — is a way of life. It influences their lives and their lifestyle. But in the future, where will fresh water come from — the water necessary for life itself? This special report, one of a series, shows that fresh water is available — available at a price.

By JIM BRIGANCE

Associated Press Writer HOUSTON (AP) — Along the Texas Gulf Coast there is water everywhere, plenty enough to drink — if one has the price.

But in the years to come those most concerned with supplying water say the availability will hinge largely on how much users are willing to pay.

Already, some coastal residents have begun paying part of the price for fresh water. Land is sinking the Baytown-Pasadena-LaPorte area as fresh underground water is pumped out. And scientists say the important shellfish industry may be threatened if over-drawing of fresh water alters the delicate coastal ecology.

"We think we have plenty of water but the problem is trying to keep up with expansion area-wide ... the problem is money," said H. R. Norman, assistant director of the Houston public works department.

Water men agree there is no real or threatened shortage of water on the teeming Gulf Coast. But there is a shortage of money to transport it from one growth area to another. The problem is — they say — how much are industry and private users willing to pay?

South of Houston the land sinks in a long, unbroken line to the sea — past oil rigs and refineries, past the onerous smell of petro-progress and past small bayside communities.

Salt grass and scrub replaced the carefully tended rice fields, and urban sprawl slowly replaced all of that over the past 25 years. Drab by birth, raped by opportunists, this vast savannah from Beaumont to Corpus Christi yet remains rich in natural assets. There are oil fields and refineries and seaports and marine life and tourism.

And now there is a problem of how to bring in water for the demanding millions whose numbers increase annually.

Harris County's millions — many of them immigrants from other states — get their water from Lake Houston and Lake Livingston. But the U.S. Geological Survey estimates the need for water will increase fourfold by the year 2020.

The city of Houston is moving westward to tap groundwater supplies and "tremendous amounts of water stored in aquifers north and east of Houston could be withdrawn with reasonable planning," according to Sergio Garza, a hydrologist with the geologic survey.

Norman said, "There will always be wells and we can go farther and farther out for our water but then the farther out you go the more it costs to pipe the water back. It's a question of how much industry and home users are willing to pay for their water."

In their zeal to produce drinking water, Houston area drillers created a monster perhaps more critical than water shortages — land subsidence.

"This historic current level of pumpage from this (Gulf Coast) aquifer has caused severe water-related problems — notably land subsidence," said A.L. Black, chairman of the Texas Water Control Board. "In order to minimize land surface subsidence in the area it will be necessary to limit the quantity of water withdrawn from the aquifer."

Land subsidence is a condition created when the ground sinks because of removal of its underground water. Such low areas then become vulnerable to flooding from ocean tides, and rainfall collection.

Residential and business areas in Pasadena-Baytown-LaPorte suffered more than $150 million in damage during the period between 1969 and 1973. To combat this insidious problem the Harris-Galveston Coastal Subsidence District was formed, the only organization of its kind in the state.

Since its formation, the group has gained control of regulation of fresh water well drilling and according to Jim Dewberry, an administrative assistant with the group, land subsidence has been checked.

In the quest for water, marine biologists caution that coastal cities — particularly the larger ones like Beaumont, Houston and Corpus Christi — must guard against removal of too much water from rivers and streams which empty into the Gulf of Mexico.

It is the delicate blend of fresh water and salt water in bays and estuaries that creates the womb-like spawning grounds of shrimp and oysters.

Scott Holt with the Marine Sciences Institute at Port Aransas explains:

"When you cut off fresh water (in bays and estuaries) you cut off the nutrients, and these shellfish need the nutrients. Oysters do well in salt water, but so do their predators and disease."

Holt said the flushing action of fresh water also improves the oyster and shrimp crop by cleaning the spawning area of pollution and disease organisms. Most of Galveston Bay has been closed to oyster-because of pollutants pumped into

Electric rates could be revamped

By LOUISE COOK

Associated Press Writer Steadily rising electric bills have focused new attention on the way utility rates are calculated and on possible changes in the traditional system under which big customers pay proportionately less money.

Proposals pending in Congress would require state utility commissions to consider new and controversial ways of setting rates and distributing power. Among the alternatives are "lifeline" systems to provide a minimum amount of electricity at rock-bottom prices for the poor and variable rates keyed to the time of day or season of the year.

A recent report by the Cooperative Extension Service of New York State showed that electricity costs have increased by 78 percent over the past 10 years. The recent coal strike and settlement boosted prices still further.

More and more of the fuel used to produce energy in the United States goes to generate electricity. The National Conference of State Legislatures

Consumer Watch

says 15 percent of all energy consumed in 1950 was used to generate electricity; by 1976, 29 percent of all energy wound up as electricity.

High consumption can be traced to the days when fuel was abundant. People were encouraged to use lots of electricity. "The more electricity demanded, the lower the per-kilowatt costs of production," said the Cooperative Extension Service.

This situation led most utilities to establish what is known as a declining block rate structure — the more electricity you use, the less you pay per kilowatt hour (kwh).

Supporters of the declining rate structure, including large industrial users, note that it still costs less to deliver 1,000 kwh to one large user than to deliver 100 kwh to 10 small customers. "Rates must reflect cost of service," said Jay B. Kennedy, executive director of the Electricity Consumers Resource Council, an organization of industrial users.

Here are some alternatives to the declining block rate structure:

LIFELINE RATES — Provide minimum service to all customers at low prices. Charges are set just below the cost of production. The utility makes up for lost revenues by billing customers who use more than the minimum at a rate slightly above the cost of production.

TIME USE RATES — Designed to reduce peak demand. Utilities often must build facilities which are used only during certain periods; this adds to costs. To spread out demand, utilities charge a higher rate per kwh for electricity used during peak periods.

INVERTED RATES — The opposite of the declining block rate; the more you use, the more you pay per kwh.

FLAT RATES — All customers pay the same amount per kwh, no matter how much they use.

Woman called Carter, got job

WASHINGTON (AP) — The young woman who talked to President Carter about a government job a year ago now is working at one and very happy with it, she says.

Leslie Pfenninger, 22, a college graduate from Lanham, Md., has been at the Government Printing Office for about eight months. She has had one promotion and is a GS-5, a Civil Service grade that starts off with a salary of $9,959 a year.

What part, if any, her call to Carter played is unknown.

"The GPO was a little surprised when they found out I had made that phone call," she told a reporter who had called some GPO officials in search of her.

Miss Pfenninger was one of the persons who reached Carter by telephone during his radio broadcast March 5, 1977, when he took questions from the public. She didn't ask for a job, she said, but asked that restrictions then in force on government hiring be lifted. Carter promised that he would look into her case.

The White House followed up with arrangements for an appointment at the Civil Service Commission. Miss Pfenninger already had filed her application with the government.

Her first government job was a temporary one that lasted four months, as an assistant curator for the museum of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. An official at the bureau had seen a wire service clip of her story, became interested and contacted her.

She was out of work for about two weeks last summer before going to the GPO, where she had filed an application.

Her father has worked for the GPO for about five years, and "Dad had been encouraging me to apply," she said.

She works in the Document Sales Service, Field Operations Division, which means coordinating work with GPO bookstores across the country.

Marchers against Marcos arrested

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Government lawyers prepared sedition and incitement charges today against more than 550 opponents of President Ferdinand E. Marcos arrested during a peaceful march mourning "the death of freedom and democracy" in the Philippines.

The presidential palace said leaders of the peaceful march Sunday also were being investigated "for their participation in the violent and riotous demonstration... Thursday evening."

That referred to a noisy outpouring of support for opposition candidates in Friday's National Assembly elections, the first in 5 1/2 years of martial law. That demonstration also appeared generally peaceful, with reports of only a few minor incidents such as toppled police traffic stations. But Marcos said there were deaths, injuries and destruction of public and private property.

Among those arrested Sunday were former Sen. Lorenzo J. Tanada, 76, one of the country's most respected constitutional lawyers; six Roman Catholic nuns, four opposition candidates, including another former senator Marcos said lost in the elections and a prominent attorney who had handled the opposition's legal affairs.

Police claimed the demonstrators carried homemade bombs and seditious placards calling for revolution. But witnesses said there was no violence and no such banners or placards.

Instead, the marchers carried two wooden coffins and sprays of flowers with purple ribbons on which were written: "Condemnances to Freedom and Democracy."

The opposition alleged massive fraud and voter intimidation during the election. The government election commission rejected the charges, saying no proof was offered.

Former Sen. Jovito Salonga said he protested the arrests to Undersecretary of Defense Carmelo Z. Barbero, head of the Office of Civil Relations. He said he pointed out that the constitution guarantees citizens the right to petition the government for redress of grievances, but Barbero countered that the march violated presidential directives.

Tabulation of election results continued at an extremely slow pace. Marcos said his wife, Imelda, and the 20 other administration candidates in Metropolitan Manila had been elected. But the announcement of the latest official results indicated less than 200,000 of possibly 3.5 million votes had been counted.

The announcement said Mrs. Marcos was leading with 106,304 votes, followed by Foreign Secretary Carlos P. Romulo with 106,026.

News watch

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government will try to determine whether 95 federal run natural areas should be given better protection against air pollution.

Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus said Sunday the areas include 82 national monuments, two national preserves and 11 primitive areas. The Agriculture Department is making similar studies of another 17 primitive areas.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Harold Brown says the neutron warhead isn't the only way that NATO countries can stop a Soviet tank attack in Europe.

Brown said on a television interview show Sunday. "There are other ways to do the same thing... I would not want anyone to think it is the (only) new idea in warfare and that it would make a difference in itself." He commented on President Carter's decision Friday to delay production of the weapon.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 90-page manual released by Ralph Nader tells readers how to appraise and improve their daily newspapers. Nader called on consumers to take an active role in making newspapers more accountable to the people they serve.

The manual, written by Nader associate David Bollier, suggests ways that consumers can check the coverage and internal politics of a newspaper. Nader released the report Sunday at a news conference marking the opening of the American Society of Newspaper Editors annual convention.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency is telling Congress that noise is a serious health problem and its full effects are still not understood.

Despite the reports by EPA officials, witnesses at last week's Senate Environment Committee hearings testified the government's noise control program receives too little money and is hurt by bureaucratic infighting. Federal noise control legislation is up for renewal this year.

WASHINGTON (AP) — "More and more women are working or going into business and accepting new financial responsibilities," says Eve R. Grover, named as the first president and chief executive officer of the First Women's Bank of Rockville, Md.

Ms. Grover, former vice president of the State National Bank of Maryland, has more than 28 years of banking experience. The women's bank is expected to open in Rockville, a Washington suburb, later this year.

LACLEDE, Mo. (AP) — The boyhood home of World War I hero John J. Pershing has been declared a national landmark. Several hundred persons, including representatives of France and Belgium, turned out Sunday to hear Pershing hailed as the man who molded the Allied Expeditionary forces that sped the end of World War I.

Somalia blames Soviet, Cuba

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Radio Somalia says "new imperialists hostile to Somalia" — the Somali government's label for the Soviet Union and Cuba — were behind an unsuccessful attempt by army officers to overthrow President Mohammed Siad Barre.

"We have overcome them. All is well, all is normal," the president said in a radio speech.

He said loyal troops smashed the rebellion Sunday, which he said was attempted by "a few" officers and enlisted men. They were caught and would "be tried according to Somali law," he added.

Diplomatic observers had predicted Somali soldiers embittered by their defeat in the recent Ogaden war in southeast Ethiopia might try to overthrow Siad Barre, who himself seized power in a military coup in 1969.

The Somali army helped rebellious Somali tribesmen in the Ogaden capture most of the disputed territory last summer. Then Cuban troops, Soviet arms and Soviet advisers turned the tide for the Ethiopians, and Somalia abandoned the rebels last month.

Said Barre said he was "very sad" that "individuals connected with the imperialists should attempt to shed Somali blood." He urged his people to be "vigilant against the agents of colonialism who are out to disrupt national unity."

Western diplomats in Mogadishu, the Somali capital, said gunfire erupted Sunday morning in a village about eight miles south of the city, and small arms fire and explosions were heard on the outskirts of Mogadishu. The sources said pedestrian and auto traffic was back to normal by early afternoon in the capital although soldiers were patrolling the streets along with the police.

Government broadcasts gave no casualty reports, but the diplomats there were indications some persons were killed. The Sudanese government news agency reported a number of senior army officers were killed, but it did not say whether they were rebels or loyalists.

The Sudanese agency also reported that Siad Barre said four officers would be tried for fomenting the coup attempt.

Fire kills three

TEXAS CITY, Texas (AP) — Three children died in this Southeast Texas city early Sunday in a fire that swept through a two-story duplex located near the downtown area, officials said.

Russell Baugh, 26, who was in an upstairs bedroom, was reported in stable condition at a Galveston hospital where he was being treated for burns and injuries sustained when he leaped from the burning building.

Police identified the dead children as Kenneth Turner, 2, Marcel Turner, 4, and Edgar Downey Jr., 6.

Beans spilled at cookoff

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) — A chili cookoff that attracted 10,000 persons Sunday also attracted members of a motorcycle gang. An ensuing brawl left one man hospitalized with stab wounds and at least eight others treated for less serious injuries.

Police arrested 13 members of the Banditos motorcycle gang and sought at least five more.

Initial reports were sketchy, but police say the fracas apparently started when a cyclist tried to get a woman to ride with him. Her escort protested, and police said gang members jumped the escort, touching off a free-for-all.

Traders' Village operations director Allen Hughes was among the injured, suffering facial cuts and bruises.

"They hit him with chains or some damn thing," said I.L. Taggart, president of the merchandising center. "It's a shame these bad apples could cause this kind of trouble. The chili group is a really happy bunch. I hate to see this kind of thing happen."

Police confiscated several knives, chains and guns after the fight.

Fort Worth Police Sgt. Henry Roemich said the Banditos' activity in the area has been sporadic. "But if they completely left town and cut off their operations, we would be that much better off," he said.

The Banditos, headquartered in Houston, reportedly have several chapters throughout the Southwest.

County board installed

Two Gray County school board trustees were sworn in today at a regular board meeting, but will probably serve only eight months of the two-year terms to which they were elected.

Oaths of office were administered to W.A. Rankin of precinct 2 and Marvin M. Finney, member-at-large by Don Cain, 223rd district judge. The two were elected in April 1 school board elections with Rankin at 1315 votes and Rankin at 1189.

Mrs. Rena Belle Anderson, Gray County school superintendent, said the men will probably serve only eight months of the two-year terms. Action by the Texas legislature will most likely make the entire board defunct by December, she said.

In other action, board members canvassed results of the county and local school board elections.

Elected for representation at the following schools were: Harlan M. Belt, Joe Dan Watson and Garrel Robertson, Lefors; Waylon Acker, George Collingsworth and Ronny B. Babcock, Grandview - Hopkins; Carol Seiler, Faye Conner and Carolyn Stokes, Alandree; and Tommy Smitherland and June Suggs, McLean.

The board approved telephone and travel expenses of $133.32 for two months.

Absent from the meeting was Arlie Carpenter, who recently celebrated his 88th birthday.

Names in the news

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP) — British television host David Frost, who recorded 28 hours of interviews with former President Richard Nixon last year, says Watergate isn't the only reason Nixon has given up public life.

Nixon, who resigned in 1972 due to the scandal and who says his political life is over, probably prefers his new, non-political existence, Frost said.

Frost spoke to delegates at the 31st annual convention of the California Associated Press Television-Radio Association on Saturday.

"Nixon had been through the fire. The best he could hope for was a rebalancing of history," said Frost, whose interviews with Nixon were televised in a nine-hour series.

"Because he did not prevail in the Watergate situation, you have to feel sympathy because of the emptiness of his future," Frost added.

The interviews were especially difficult for the former president, Frost said, because Nixon had to come to grips with himself — "it was Nixon versus himself."

NEW YORK (AP) — With Radio City Music Hall apparently about to close, President Carter's daughter, Amy, has joined the thousands to visit the theater in its final days.

While hundreds of families waited in long lines Sunday to enter the art deco showplace in Rockefeller Center, the 10-year-old girl was escorted into an "executive entrance" to see what could be Radio City's final production, an Easter show.

The show was the high point of a day-long trip for Amy and 240 elementary school classmates, who journeyed here from Washington.

Before seeing the high-kicking Rockettes and a movie, the students took a walking tour of the area. Afterwards, Amy returned to the White House with two close friends in a Secret Service car while classmates made the trip in buses.

Managers of the music hall have said it will close April 12 because of financial problems.

LONDON (AP) — Farrah Fawcett-Majors has renewed a royal acquaintance with Prince Charles.

The actress and the prince, who first met in Hollywood, spoke backstage after a charity show Sunday at the London Palladium.

"I find him to be very intelligent, and very charming. I think the best thing about him is that he makes you feel comfortable," Miss Fawcett said.

After the show, which raised $40,000 for the United World Colleges fund, she attended a party with the show's stars, comedian Bob Newhart and singer Johnny Mathis. Prince Charles also attended.

The actress, a former star on the television series "Charlie's Angels," came to England especially for the show with her parents and a sister.

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Actor Glenn Ford has been inducted into the Hall of Fame of Great Western Performers, and he credits humorist Will Rogers and actor Roy Rogers with making it possible.

Ford said Will taught him how to ride a horse and Roy taught him how to break in a Stetson hat.

"If it hadn't been for Will Rogers and the man that made my hat, I wouldn't be here tonight," Ford said.

Rogers, his wife Dale Evans and Gene Autry were among 1,500 guests at the 17th annual Western Heritage Awards banquet at the Cowboy Hall of Fame here Saturday night.

DETROIT (AP) — Being sister to a president and pal to a pornographic magazine owner has hurt her ministry, says evangelist Ruth Carter Stapleton.

Mrs. Stapleton said in Detroit on Sunday that celebrity hunters flock to evangelical conferences just to meet Jimmy Carter's sister.

The celebrity seekers are looking for a handshake rather than religious fulfillment, she said.

Mrs. Stapleton said she has reduced the length of evangelical meetings from three days to one to avoid the celebrity hunters.

The 48-year-old Mrs. Stapleton says some people who genuinely want her help shy away from the conferences because of all the publicity.

The evangelist also says she has canceled nine meetings since being linked to Larry Flynt, owner of Hustler magazine.

The sponsors of her appearance in Detroit received critical telephone calls from people upset with her link to Flynt, she said.

Flynt, recovering in Atlanta from gunshot wounds he received March 6 during an obscenity trial in Lawrenceville, Ga., credited Mrs. Stapleton last year with converting him to Christianity.

She says she was introduced to Flynt through a mutual friend and has no regrets about the association.

"I did with my eyes wide open, knowing many people would misunderstand it and they did," said Mrs. Stapleton. "I had never seen the magazine, and he had never been to church."

ated in 81 U.S. cities and has drawn big audiences abroad.

"All we've seen are statements issued to me saying they're still in the red," Randall said. "I don't see how it could be possible." Paramount responds that even a hefty syndication deal can't result in profits until losses are recouped.

Here, based on information gathered in interviews with network and studio officials, actors, producers, and show-business lawyers and accountants — and using "Happy Days" as an example — is how a smash hit can be a loser:

"Happy Days," riding a wave of 1950s nostalgia, began its run as a midseason replacement in January 1974. ABC paid Paramount the then-common rate of about $125,000 per episode, out of which came all production costs — salaries, sets, etc.

That money is called a license fee. As in any business, the networks try to pay as little as possible for the product.

But Paramount, like most production companies, takes 15 percent of that fee (in this case $18,750) for what it calls overhead costs, which include studio rental, salaries of studio employees who watch over the show, and legal and accounting services. There also is a 10 percent distributing fee (in this case $12,500 per show), which the studios say covers the costs of their advertising sales staffs.

Price, the spokesman for Miss Moore's production company, says about 95 percent of the current shows are in deficit financing.

This was the case with "Happy Days." Although precise figures are closely guarded, Ken Ziffren, a lawyer for Miller and Milkis, said the show had a per-episode loss of about $50,000 during most of its run.

However, because the license fee paid by ABC has nearly doubled to $200,000, the producers say the weekly loss has slowed somewhat.

In its second full year, "Happy Days" ratings improved steadily as Winkler's role became larger than the supporting part it previously had been. Soon, he was a teen-age hero and the show routinely was in the top five. But success bred a problem.

Winkler was making about $750 a show when the program began, without the profit-sharing his contract now includes. As the new star, he successfully renegotiated his contract several times and now is earning an estimated $80,000 per episode, plus the profit cut. The "Happy Days" license fee of more than $200,000 per show is partly to cover higher salaries, but there still isn't enough money in the budget to pay $80,000 per episode to just one cast member.

Sources said that ABC, unwilling to risk the loss of such a popular actor, and Paramount, which wanted to keep Winkler happy so he would make movies for the studio, agreed to put up some of the money.

So there were plenty of costs to make up when daytime reruns of "Happy Days" began appearing on ABC in September 1975. This is grossing more than $3 million per year for the production company. The money comes from ABC, which earns it from commercials on the reruns.

And merchandising deals in which pictures of "Happy Days" stars appear on posters, T-shirts, games etc. earn a six-figure income for the production company each year. But even all that wasn't enough to get the show out of the red until recently. And as the show's potential earning power became clear, Winkler and the three producers followed the now-common practice of paying an outside accountant about $175,000 to check Paramount's books.

The producers and studios say the industry's problem originates with the often inadequate license fees paid by the networks. "The networks now are in a tremendous buying position," says Ziffren. "There are only three buyers and hundreds of pilot ideas each year."

About four years ago, the U.S. Justice Department filed suit against the networks, charging that their business practices reduced competition for programs and limited profit potential of most shows.

NBC signed a consent agreement, but ABC and CBS are still fighting the suit in court.

NBC consented to certain provisions and guidelines regarding its relationship with suppliers of TV programs. Those provisions included the number of hours of TV programming NBC may itself produce and certain aspects of the contractual relationship between NBC and its program suppliers, including contract length.

As for "Happy Days," more profit payments seem to be ahead for Winkler and the producers. In addition to the network reruns, the program already is being sold for syndication on local stations when the network run is over. One New York City station alone has agreed to pay Paramount $35,000 per episode, which comes to $3.8 million just for the 110 episodes already produced. Similar, though smaller, deals are expected in about 200 other cities.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Equal time, please, with the stewardess who describes all stewardesses as "intelligent, gorgeous and in their 20s," and all pilots as "balding, burned out, middle-aged and broke."

May I remind her that pilots are hired in their 20s, and many are handsome, intelligent, eligible and have a very good earning potential.

If this stewardess looks around, she will see many stewardesses who are in their 50s, chubby and old enough to be the pilot's mother.

AN AIRLINE PILOT

DEAR PILOT: Here's how another airline pilot put it:

DEAR ABBY: What would a balding, middle-aged pilot who earns more than the vice president of the United States want with a 20-year-old stewardess (or any other 20-year-old) whose vocabulary consists mainly of "Oh, wow," and a few other juvenile clichés?

THIRTY YEARS UP FRONT

DEAR ABBY: I am an unattached woman in my early 50s. I frequently receive dinner invitations from gentlemen who come to town on business, having been in business myself for many years. I enjoy their company and want to reciprocate without the muss and fuss of preparing a dinner for two in my own apartment, so I invite them to be my guests at a fine restaurant.

I stress that they are to be MY guests, but somehow, when the bill is presented, I wind up being the guest. In order to avoid a scene, I quietly yield, but it bothers me because I know that in some cases I can better afford to pay the check than the gentleman. How does a lady get the check when she truly wants to be the hostess?

ALWAYS THE GUEST

DEAR GUEST: When she makes the dinner reservation, she selects a restaurant where she is known and has credit. She instructs the maitre d' to charge everything to her account, including the usual gratuities. No muss, no fuss, no check, no embarrassment, and everyone will be happy.

DEAR ABBY: You wisely told a woman, "Even with your limited education, you are probably a lot brighter than you think you are."

She most certainly is, Abby. I recall the words of the late Will Rogers:

"There is nothing so stupid as an educated man, if you get off the thing that he was educated in."

ARTHUR H. PRINCE

DEAR ARTHUR: Right on. And someone else said, "We're all ignorant—but on different subjects."

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU. If you are into contemporary poetry, get Jim Kavanaugh's newest book of poems titled, "Winter Has Lasted Too Long." I loved it. If your local bookstore doesn't have it, it should.

Are your problems too heavy to handle alone? Let Abby help you. For a personal, unpublished reply, write: Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Could you give me some information on the nutritional content of buffalo meat? How close is it to being like beef? My husband has gout and was taken off red meat. He claims that buffalo meat is different than beef. I need to know.

DEAR READER — There is no great difference except that buffalo meat is usually less fat — that depends on the feeding of the animal and the cut used for cooking. They are close enough that some people are trying to produce enough animals of a cross between the cow and the buffalo to yield more good and cheaper meat for commercial use. The product is called beafalo.

And I am a bit curious about the directions to eliminate red meat anyhow. It sometimes helps to limit red meat if a person wants to restrict saturated fat to help avoid the complications of fatty-cholesterol deposits in the arteries that cause heart attacks and strokes. This is a common complication of gout. But the diet changes needed for that purpose are a bit more extensive than that. A low-fat, low-saturated fat, low-cholesterol diet is usually recommended for that along with a weight control program.

Otherwise to lower the uric acid level, which is high in gout, the usual approach is to use medicines. The old-fashioned gout diets are of minimal effectiveness since the excess uric acid is produced by the patient's own cells and not obtained from the food he eats. I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-3, Gout, Uric Acid, to give you a more complete understanding of gout and uric acid. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P. O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. After you have read it you may want to talk to your doctor again to find out exactly what he really wants to accomplish for your husband with a diet.

Incidentally don't let him go on a severe reducing diet. Rapid weight loss can often cause an acute attack of gout.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Recently I had a physical examination and was told my hematocrit was a little low. It was 35 and it should have been 40. They gave me some vague explanation which I didn't understand.

The lab technician said in her opinion it was not too low. I would like to know what this means. I'm 63 years old.

DEAR READER — It's really pretty simple. Your blood is a fluid — called plasma — and blood cells are suspended in it. The hematocrit is just an expression of what percentage of the volume of your blood is blood cells and how much is plasma. In your case 35 percent of your blood is made up of cells and the rest is plasma fluid.

The percent of blood cells varies easily because fluid moves into and out of your blood vessels easily. The movement of fluid is associated with swelling of the feet and ankles. The technique including how tight the arm band is and how long it is left in place before drawing the blood sample affects the value.

Your value is a little low. The range for women is often given as between 37 and 47 percent and for men 40 to 54. Such border line results should be retested since there is so much variation in laboratory technique. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

DEAR POLLY — I have a 78-year-old treadle sewing machine that was not sewing the way it should. I discovered the trouble was that I had cotton thread on the bobbin and polyester on the top. Anita's bittersweet victory

By GEORGE VECSEY (c) 1978 N.Y. Times News Service

SAN ANTONIO — Anita Bryant's "victory" has been costly.

Last year she was booked for 80 secular concerts at $8,500 and up; this year she sings mainly at revivals, sharing whatever people drop in the cardboard buckets that are passed around.

"We were at the top of the list," Miss Bryant said the other day. "Now we'll take what we can, and praise the Lord for changing our directions. But I'll admit, this was a struggle for me, not to get bitter." Then the red-haired singer went out to deliver her hymns and her religious witness in an athletic center, before about 3,500 people.

Although some in the audience were stimulated into spiritual frenzy by the revival, most seemed to be there to see the woman who has gone from pop performer to national symbol since she led a crusade to keep homosexuals out of public jobs in Dade County, Fla.

While the evangelist Cecil Todd exhorted the audience to put prayers back in public schools and keep homosexual teachers out of them — and suggested that the first step would be to put $10 or $100 into the container — Miss Bryant sat in the cement block locker room that smelled of basketball players and talked about the great changes in her life in the last year.

According to her husband and manager, Bob Green, she used to command about $8,500 for a one-night show, sometimes more for conventions or corporate meetings. She can love songs, secular songs, and tossed in a few of the best-known neutral gospel tunes.

The former Miss America runner-up also sang at Billy Graham rallies and other religious meetings as part of her spiritual life, but she says: "I never used to charge religious groups. It hurts me to do it now."

Last year when the Miami area was embroiled in a controversy over homosexuals in public jobs, Miss Bryant volunteered to join a fight to overturn an equal opportunity law by a referendum. She became such a lightning rod in the controversy that a panel of religion writers for Christian Century magazine picked her as the ninth most influential person and the leading woman in United States religion.

The referendum was defeated by a 2-to-1 margin, and Miss Bryant has been marked as an enemy by homosexuals ever since. She has been heckled frequently, has had her show disrupted several times and has been hit at least once by a thrown pie.

A recent article in the Gay Community News of Boston began, "We should not rest until Anita Bryant is utterly destroyed." The writer, Donald Cameron Scott, urged homosexuals to continue boycotting Florida orange juice, whose growers pay her $100,000 a year for her endorsement and commercials.

"Nobody had ever said a bad thing about me in my life," Miss Bryant says. "It was hard to understand the viciousness. All of a sudden, nobody would touch me."

Miss Bryant says she lost every secular booking and was dropped as a commentator for the Orange Bowl television show. Her main source of income is the Florida Citrus Commission, which retained her late last year after some nervous moments.

"Understand they have lost half their income," said Todd, the evangelist, who pays her out of the money he collects from the people who attend his rallies.

"We are thinking of changing our life style," says Green, Miss Bryant's husband, referring to their 27-room home on Biscayne Bay.

"We feel we could live with less. This has made us more free. But it has affected us already: we had a fellow with us 13 years as musical arranger who had to take another job."

Most of Miss Bryant's appearances are like the one here, when she was the feature act for Cecil Todd's Revival Fires evangelical group, based in Joplin, Mo.

At the Blossom Athletic Center on the outskirts of town, Miss Bryant was greeted, as usual, by a circle of 50 orderly pickets singing, "Jesus Loves Me" and carrying signs that said, "Judge Not Lest Ye Be Judged," or "Straights for Gay Civil Rights."

Most of the audience seemed to be factory or farm people, dressed up for a Saturday night's entertainment. At least a quarter of them were from the large Mexican-American community here. Some waved their hands, chanted "Amen" or prayed silently with moving lips for much of the evening.

Near the end, she appealed to any homosexuals in the audience, as well as "idolators, fornicators and adulterers."

"If you are willing to look at this sin, you will have God's forgiveness. You are washed. You are sanctified."

Gift was no bumb steer

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Manuche says he's received a lot of crazy gifts from the sports stars and fans who hang out at his restaurant here in the Big Apple.

They've included wild turkeys, a pig, and even a duck on a leash.

But last weekend, the restaurateur said, he got the biggest, heaviest, and most astonishing present "in 28 years in the business," a 500-pound brown and white steer.

The gift, delivered to the restaurant in a dusty truck sporting Texas license plates, came from Abe Lemons, coach of the Texas Longhorns basketball squad.

The Longhorns were in New York two weeks ago for the National Invitational Tournament championship, and the team spent a lot of time hanging around Mike Manuche's.

"I guess they thought the restaurant was a good-luck charm, or something, and helped them win the tournament," Manuche said, laughing.

Motor use taxes such as motor vehicle fuel and license taxes contributed more than $13 billion to state treasuries in the United States in 1976.

He said he recalled that the coach had "promised I'd be hearing from him soon."

"These Texans — they're crazy guys. I've never seen anything like this in the 28-year history of the restaurant," Manuche chuckled.

He added that the steer "never even got off the truck. It was such a big baby. ... It was already startin' to get horns and must've weighed, oh, about 400 or 500 lbs."

He said he directed the truck driver on to the Manuche farm in Newburgh, in the state's Hudson Valley.

And the name of the gift beast?

"Oh, I'll probably call it 'Texas.' Just 'Texas,' Manuche laughed.

Astro-Graph
By Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

April 11, 1978

You will travel a great deal this coming year and the trips will not necessarily be long distance ventures. A sojourn near the water may put you in contact with one who will make a good and profitable partner.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Something positive can result today by discussing budgeting or finances with your mate. Conditions that are acceptable to both could be finalized. Find out who you're romantically suited to by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter Mail 50 cents for each and a long self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify your birth sign.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Take the bull by the horns today if you see a chance to develop a program that can increase your earnings in your work or career.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't be bashful today in protecting your self-interests. Humility is fine but you must know when it is counterproductive.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) In business situations today, don't jump at the first offer even though it's enticing. Playing hard-to-get could put you in a better bargaining position.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be more democratic than authoritarian today. You'll have a lot more fun and your attitude will be infectious.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Concentrate on the areas that affect your prestige, career or finances singly or jointly today. These are where you can make the greatest strides.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Envision things in the broadest perspective today. You can tie up the loose ends later if you make the sweeping plans and decisions now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Conduct important financial matters with as little fanfare as possible today. Unless others are involved, don't make them privy to your secrets.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If something good comes to you, consult your old friends first to share the windfall. Remember those who were there when you needed them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your ambitions can be realized, but you know that you need strong allies. Develop them now with whatever arrangements are necessary.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) The concepts you have for attacking a tricky situation may be excellent, but their time isn't ripe. Stick to proven ideas for a solution today.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You belong at the flea market today. You're good at bargaining or being the middleman to help a companion get a better deal.

Player takes Masters with 64

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — He is 150 pounds of gristle, guts and unquenchable pride.

"I don't say I am the best golfer in the world. I will say I have the best record in the world." South Africa's Gary Player declared after winning his third Masters crown Sunday.

It followed an unbelievable surge from seven shots back by the plucky little guy of 42 who was discounted as too old, too rusty and too muscle-bound to meet the challenge of such younger lions as Tom Watson, Hubie Green and Jack Nicklaus.

What did Gary do? He cut them off at the legs with a course record-tying 64 that put him level with Ben Hogan in major championships won — nine.

It probably was Player's most satisfying victory.

"It was getting to be a sore point with me," he said. "I read where you fellows said I was a fading star and you were asking why I didn't win any more. And earlier in the week I read where Robert Trent Jones (the famed golf architect) said I didn't have a chance because I was tight in the muscles."

The golfing gold prospector from Johannesburg refuses to downgrade Nicklaus, whom he counts as his best friend and acknowledges to be No. 1 in the world, but he bristles when aspersions are cast on his own achievements.

In his mind, Nicklaus' record is based on major championships — an unparalleled 16 — and success on the American tour where he has scored 65 victories and won more than $3 million. Gary likes to consider himself a unique man of the world.

Have clubs, will travel. "I have played everywhere," he said. "I have won 112 tournaments. I can't even count all the continents on which I have played. Golf is a different game wherever you play — different conditions, different balls, different ways you have to maneuver."

"I am not discrediting Jack but I'd like to see him make five round-trips a year to South Africa the way I make five trips a year to play in this country. Then I'd like to see how well he did."

Player is proud that he is one of four men (the others are Nicklaus, Ben Hogan and Gene Sarazen) to have won the four major championships — the Masters, U.S. and British Opens and American PGA — at least once and to be one step away from a second sweep. Another U.S. Open would do it.

He is pointing to Denver.

Gary feels, perhaps justifiably, that he is not given enough credit for his many international triumphs — 11 South African crowns, seven Australian, numerous Japanese, World Cup and others.

He scoffs at the suggestion that advancing age will slow him down. "A man should win as easily at 50 as at 30 years old," he said. "I think I'll still be winning when I am 50."

Arkansas keeps lead

By The Associated Press

The Texas Aggies keep winning but can't gain ground on the invincible Arkansas Razorbacks in the Southwest Conference baseball pennant chase.

Texas A&M defeated Texas Christian in three games over the weekend to raise its SWC record to 12-3. However, there was nothing but bad news for the Aggies from Fayetteville, Ark., where the Razorbacks swept the Texas Tech Red Raiders.

Arkansas is 15-3 and 1½ games ahead of the SWC defending champion Aggies. Arkansas has a 23-7 overall record while the Aggies are 25-10 for the year.

In other games Saturday, Houston swept a doubleheader from Southern Methodist as Houston pitcher Billy Blum upped his season record to 9-0 by winning the first game and receiving credit for the save in the nightcap. Baylor split with the Texas Longhorns, winning the first game 4-0 and losing 10-4 in the nightcap.

Gervin grabs title

George Gervin and the San Antonio Spurs viewed their final regular season game as a success, even if they did get clobbered 153-132.

Gervin scored 63 points, including a record 33 in a single quarter, to clinch the National Basketball Association scoring title in a loss to the New Orleans Jazz Sunday night.

Spurs Coach Doug Moe, whose team had already won the NBA's Central Division and was bound for the playoffs, acknowledged that the Spurs didn't really care whether they won against the Jazz.

"Our game plan was to get Louis Dampier his two points (for a career total of 15,000) and to get George Gervin his 58 points (enough for the title)," said Moe.

Gervin entered the game locked in a duel for the scoring title with David Thompson of Denver, who poured in 73 points Sunday afternoon in his team's 139-137 loss to Detroit.

Gervin's 33 points in the second quarter broke the NBA record of 32 in a quarter that Thompson had set earlier Sunday. The old mark of 31 in one period had stood for 16 years, since Wilt Chamberlain did it on March 2, 1962, en route to his NBA record 100-point game against the New York Knicks.

Gervin scored 53 points in the first half against the Jazz and got his 59th point midway in the second half. He hit 19 of 34 field goal attempts in the first half and finished the game with 23 of 49. He played only 11 minutes in the second half.

"That was a phenomenal performance," said the Spurs' coach. "We were going to George exclusively and the Jazz were trying to stop him exclusively and it was something to watch."

Gervin said the Jazz didn't want him to win the scoring title against them.

"All the Jazz defenders were tough and they kept a hand in my face all night," he said. "George could have scored 80 points easy, the way he was going," said Moe. "If we had come out in the second half trying to win the game, we could have done it, because the Jazz were playing two men on George all night and we always had somebody open."

Hondo bows out

BOSTON (AP) — John Havlicek has crossed the National Basketball Association threshold — from superstar to legend. "You don't replace the ultimate player," said Boston Celtics teammate Dave Cowens after Havlicek closed the books on a 16-year record-setting NBA career Sunday with a frenzied finale.

"It's been a long journey ... I cannot turn back the clock," the Celtics captain said as he wept during halftime ceremonies.

Then he scored 21 points in the second half — and finished with 29. The performance padded his career log to 26,395 points, third in NBA history behind Wilt Chamberlain and Oscar Robertson.

The farewell also helped Boston end its woeful season with a 131-114 victory over the Buffalo Braves.

The former Ohio State star endured an emotion-packed day, playing 41 minutes in his 1,270th regular season NBA game, a league record. He appeared in all 82 Celtics contests this season.
