SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Convicted bank robber Patricia Hearst, who lost appeals to the nation's highest court, is returning to prison today to serve the remainder of a seven-year sentence, according to U.S. Attorney G. William Hunter.

Pleasanton, 30 miles east of San Francisco, under terms of an agreement between U.S. District Court Judge William H. Orrick Jr. and her attorneys. She has been free on $1 million bail while her attorneys exhausted legal appeals of her 1974 conviction of joining her terrorist kidnappers, the Symbionese Liberation Army, in an armed San Francisco bank robbery. Dennis Harvey, executive assistant to the Pleasanton warden, said this morning the prison notified of Miss Hearst's arrival, the standard procedure with most surrenders. Miss Hearst, 24, has already served 14 months of the sentence, part of it at the campus-like minimum security Pleasanton facility. She would need to serve another 14 months before becoming eligible for parole. Miss Hearst lost her last chance to remain free when the U.S. Supreme Court refused on March 24 to review her 1976 conviction for an April 15, 1974 bank robbery.

Since her release on bail, Miss Hearst has been living with her parents in a San Francisco apartment and recently in a home in suburban Hillsborough. On her rare public appearances, she has been accompanied by bodyguards, as specified in the court order setting conditions for her bail.

Carter predicts plan sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, after talking with several senators, is predicting that the Senate tonight will refuse to block his plan to sell sophisticated U.S. warplanes to Israel and two of its Arab neighbors.

Such proposals are automatically approved unless both the Senate and the House vote to reject the sales. On the eve of the Senate showdown vote, Carter lobbied his $4.8 billion plane sale proposal with several senators.

Robert Byrd of West Virginia also foresaw victory. "I think we have the votes to allow the sales to go forward," he said. Two opponents, meanwhile, predicted a close vote.

Meanwhile, in a letter to Carter released Saturday, King Khalid of Saudi Arabia said he wanted "to emphasize that the planes are being acquired for defense" and that his country urgently needs the planes "because of the continuing, and recently stepped up, communist expansion in the area."

free to go ahead with the sales. — House-Senate energy conferees may vote on Tuesday on a proposal to deregulate natural gas prices by 1985. Conference leaders said last week they still needed one vote from the House conferees for approval.

The Senate vote this evening will come after 10 hours of debate today that includes a two-hour closed-door meeting of the Senate to discuss classified aspects of the pending sale. Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., who asked for the closed session, said he wants the lawmakers to discuss the security implications for "the entire Middle East" of the presence in the area of Soviet-backed Cuban troops. Even if the Senate should vote to kill the sale of planes to Israel, Egypt and Saudi Arabia, the proposal would survive if the House refuses to block the sale, too.

He telephoned them Sunday from the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., where he spent the weekend. Then, in a statement issued before he returned to the White House, Carter said he thinks the Senate will approve the proposed sale to Israel, Egypt and Saudi Arabia. The president said he had been "impressed by the sincere desire of senators I have talked with this weekend to rise above partisanship and political concerns." He called the sales "crucial to our efforts to secure a just and lasting peace in the Middle East."

Republican Sen. Jacob Javits of New York said the resolution to disapprove the sale would be decided by "one or two votes on either side." And the assistant Democratic leader, Sen. Alan Cranston of California, said the situation in the Senate was "extremely fluid." Cranston broke with the administration on the warplane deal, saying the White House offer of 20 additional planes later on for Israel was "insufficient." He also said the assurance that the planes sold Saudi Arabia would not be used against Israel was "undependable."

Carter wants to sell 60 F-15s to Saudi Arabia, 50 less advanced F-5Es to Egypt and 15 F-15s and 75 F-16s to Israel. The House International Relations Committee votes on the warplane sale Tuesday. Unless both houses disapprove the sale by May 28, however, Carter is — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee scheduled a vote today to formally reject Carter's plan to lift the three-year-old arms embargo against Turkey.

Lear jet inventor dies, left 150 patents, dreams

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Jim Greenwood remembers once telling multimillionaire inventor William Lear that he should go back to school to learn the meaning of the word "impossible." The reply: "I don't want to." "He felt that life could be met with confidence and the supreme feeling that anything could be done and any challenge could be met," said Greenwood, vice president of corporate affairs for Gates Learjet Corp. in Wichita, Kan.

Lear, who died of leukemia here at age 75 on Sunday, represented the "true Horatio Alger story," said Greenwood in a telephone interview Sunday night. "I don't think there's any other man who reflected the true American pioneering spirit." Lear, whose fortune was estimated at $75 million, pioneered the small corporate jet which took his name. He also invented the car radio, the eight-track stereo and the autopilot, which enables an airplane to fly a set course without the manual steering of a pilot. In all he held about 150 patents. Lear thrived on work but also had a reputation to play. He was known for his parties, his gambling binges and his flamboyance. His death interrupted his most recent transportation dream — a seven-passenger, 400 mph turboprop plane built mostly of plastic. The one major project to stymie Lear was the steam-powered car. His effort to develop a steam turbine engine for cars and buses, begun in a period of boredom and depression, cost him about $17 million. A prototype automobile was made but never put into production.

Lear's drive to succeed was largely shaped by the economic deprivations of his childhood in Hannibal, Mo. At age 12, Lear prepared a "blueprint" to overcome those hardships. "I resolved first to make enough money so I'd never be stopped from finishing any- thing," Lear said several years ago. "Second, that to accumulate money in a hurry — and I was in a hurry — I'd have to invent something that people wanted, and third, that if I ever was going to stand on my own feet, I'd have to leave home."

At the age of 16, Lear joined the Navy, where he was a radio operator during World War I. He said he gave up the Navy after deciding it would "take too long to become an admiral." Lear founded his first company, the Radio Coil and Wire Corp., in 1926. He traded it in 1930 for a one-third interest in the Galvin Manufacturing Co. of Chicago. After Lear developed the car radio, Galvin Manufacturing became the Motorola Corp. Lear is survived by his fourth wife, Moya Marie Olsen, daughter of Ole Olsen of the Olsen and Johnson vaudeville team, six children and seven grandchildren. Funeral services are scheduled here Wednesday, with cremation at Masonic Memorial Gardens.

American women still tied to housework

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — People sleep more, watch more television, spend less time at work and are involved less with family chores than they were a decade ago, a scholarly study indicates. Some of the results must be measured further, said Prof. John P. Robinson, but he claims one conclusion already amounts to a major surprise — that women are devoting less time to household chores. At the same time, he said, a slight increase has been observed in the amount of time men, give to household duties, although such activities continue to be demarcated sharply along sexual lines. That is, he said, men continue to handle such jobs as mowing the lawn while women remain in charge of most childrearing responsibilities. Before this, said Robinson, who authored an earlier study, "How Americans Use Time," it was observed that women continued to set apart the same amount of time to housework even if other responsibilities grew. "It could be that they're more efficient or it might be that they've just decided not to do certain things," said Robinson, a Cleveland State University professor. Whatever, it's a surprise, he said. He offered the personal opinion that "some things seem not to be as important as they used to be" in trying to explain the time-usage change in women's lives. "Maybe they feel they can just let go."

Robinson's findings are contained in a paper, "Changes in Americans' Use of Time: 1965-1975, A Progress Report." His earlier research was partly in conjunction with the Michigan Survey Research Center. Another significant change discerned by Robinson was in the decreased time spent at work or in work-related activities, such as commuting, by all categories in the study. In 1965, married men worked 51.3 hours a week, but in the 1975 updating the number had fallen to 47.4. For single men, the decline was even more marked, from 51.4 hours to just 40. Employed women also spent less time involved with work. Married women worked considerably less in 1975, their hours dropping from 38.4 to 30.1. Single employed women dropped only slightly, from 39.8 to 38.8. In the 1965 study, a scientific cross-section of more than 1,000 people were given diaries to record each minute and even second of activity. Personal interviews were conducted in the 1975 updating. In 1965, Robinson found married housewives slept 53.9 of the week's 168 hours, setting aside 50 hours for family care. In 1975 the sleep hours had risen to 56.8, and family care hours had fallen to 44.3. During the same period, the amount of free time rose from 41 hours to 44.4, but of even greater interest were changes in the use of free time. "Social life," including visiting, fell 2.5 hours, for example. However, the amount of time given over to "media" rose from 15.3 hours in 1965 to 20.4 hours in 1975, making it by far the largest consumer of free time, more than double that of social life. While the media category includes newspapers, books, magazines, recordings, and motion pictures, Robinson suspects — but has not yet proved — that much of the increase was in television viewing. While the numbers vary for each category studied, single and married employed men, single and married employed women, and single and married housewives, many of the trends are pervasive. Sleep, for example, rose for all categories but single housewives, although they slept the longest, 56.6 hours a week. The biggest sleep increase was for single employed men, to 54.1 hours from 50.6. Media activity also rose for all groups, consuming close to 19 hours of the employed man's week, between 14 and 16 hours of the married housewife's week, and 27.2 hours of the single housewife's time. The greater time spent sleeping, in free time activities and in media involvement — and the simultaneous decline in work time — would seem to be at odds with highly publicized increases in two-income families. However, Robinson believes the other trends are strong enough to offset such influences.

No justice here

The Christian Science Monitor
THE U.S. Supreme Court ruling that a judge who exceeds his authority and commits "grave procedural errors" is immune to damage suits from the victims of his excessive actions raises some disturbing questions. It appears to put judges "above the law" they are sworn to uphold and leave those whose constitutional rights are violated by such jurists with no legal means of compensation.

The ruling involved the case of a 15-year-old Indian girl whose mother had her sterilized without the girl's consent after petitioning a state judge for permission to do so. The mother contended her daughter was retarded and incapable of caring for children. The girl did not know she was being sterilized, had no hearing, and had no legal representation. Later she was married and when she and her husband discovered she was unable to become pregnant, they filed suit.

A federal district court ruled that only the judge, Harold D. Stump, could be sued since he was the government official responsible. And the Supreme Court, in a 5-to-3 decision, ruled this week that broad judicial immunity—intended to give judges the freedom to make bold decisions without fear of intimidation—shielded the judge from such action.

An appeals court had heretofore held that the judge forfeited his immunity because he had "not acted within his jurisdiction" and "because of his failure to comply with elementary principles of due process." The Supreme Court, although conceding there was no Indiana statute that authorized the judge's action, held that it was more significant that there was no state law prohibiting the judge from doing what he did.

We agree wholeheartedly with Justice Stewart, writing for the minority, that the Indiana judge's decision was "beyond the pale of anything that could sensibly be called a judicial act," that it was in "no way an act normally performed by a judge," and that the offending judge should have been held liable for violating the girl's civil rights. The majority called the judge's decision a "judicial act." It was clearly not a judicious one.

At a time many Americans have had a reason to be concerned about government excesses and abuses of power, particularly by those involved in law enforcement, judges should be held no less accountable for their actions than any other public servant.

Nobel winner would privatize money

By OSCAR W. COOLEY
THE United States government produces, or controls the production of, all U.S. dollars, and for many years the dollar has depreciated in value. In other countries, too, the central government produces the money—and everywhere the purchasing power of the money unit shrinks. It seems logical to conclude that government, as such, is an inept producer of money.

This is the thesis of "Denationalization of money," the latest book by F.A. Hayek, Austrian economist, Nobel prize winner, and a leading champion of free enterprise. Hayek goes further and holds that monetary inflation is the basic cause of economic depression. The market economy's "susceptibility to recurrent periods of depression and unemployment is a consequence of the age-old government monopoly of the issue of money." "No other monopoly," he says, "has done as much damage as that of issuing money."

Inflation is not the act of the seller in marking up his goods. It is the production and "sale" of too much money. The oversupply burdens the market and the value of each dollar falls. For centuries it has been universally assumed that only one kind of money should be circulated in each country and that government must create that money. It is time, says Hayek, that this theory be challenged.

Monopoly in the manufacture and sale of any good or service is looked upon as uneconomic and evil, but oddly enough monopoly in the creation of money is considered good. Even among libertarians, that money creation should be a government monopoly is taken for granted. One wonders if Hayek's erstwhile colleague at the University of Chicago, Milton Friedman, agrees with him on this point.

Many libertarians favor a return to gold standard money, even though gold standard money is made "standard" only by government fiat, and works only as government monopolizes gold and fixes its price. "Standard" money is a money unit which is exchangeable for a fixed quantity of a certain chosen commodity, such as gold. Government makes it so by buying and selling that commodity in any quantity desired, at the decreed price. (Thus, the U.S. government for years fixed the price of gold at $20 per ounce). Thus, gold standard money is definitely not free-market money. Our dollar today, in fact, is more truly a freedom dollar than the gold standard dollar was.

Our money is largely bank credit, created by bank lending and circulated by the writing of checks. We know how to stabilize the value of this kind of money by regulating the supply, but unfortunately our government does not and apparently will not exercise that control. What is to be done?

Set money free, says Hayek. Take the money—creating monopoly away from government. The bankers then would be free to create their own bank credit money, and like other producers would have to sink or swim with the value of their product. This would be a genuine free-enterprise attack on the problem of inflation. Would it solve the problem? Hayek thinks it would. The self-interest of the banker would cause him to issue the right quantity of money, that is, the quantity that would circulate without depreciation.

Money is like steel, or automobiles, or corn; it is subject to the forces of supply and demand. When more is supplied than is demanded, the value, or price per unit, falls. And vice versa.

To have the right amount of steel, neither a surplus nor a shortage, most Americans agree that steel should be produced and sold by free private firms. Self-interest causes each steel company to regulate its output so that it has neither a shortage nor a surplus. The steel firms compete with each other in making and selling steel.

This is simply the enterprise system, under which America has become rich and Americans have enjoyed freedom. Hayek is saying in his book that we should apply the philosophy of freedom also to the production of money. It will work well, he believes, and for the same reasons that our free-market goods system works well.

In the area of goods, each firm differentiates its product, that is, makes it enough different from that of his competitor that the two can be told apart. Each then claims, and tries to persuade the buying public, that his is better.

In the case of money, each country has one kind only. The United States the dollar, England the pound, France the franc, etc., and this is assumed to be the best way.

Not necessarily, says Hayek. In money as in goods, we want the best—the soundest, the most stable in value. To get it, we need competition between various kinds. Such competition, he says, would spring up between banks if they were free to produce money.

One bank might produce dollars, another ducats, another pintos, or what have you. Each would choose a name for its particular brand of money. These brands would compete for public favor, just as Coca Cola competes with Pepsi-Cola.

People would offer their goods and labor for the kind of money they believed to be most stable in purchasing power. They would go to the bank producing that kind, would borrow, deposit, draw checks on it. That bank would prosper, but only so long as it kept the faith. Let its money start depreciating, as our dollar is today, and its customers would leave that bank, exchanging its money for the sounder money of other banks, and that one would languish and fail.

Government, Hayek points out, need not fear failure. It is the only money issuer. It has no competitor. Therefore, it inflates and inflates, without limit. It pretends to be curbing inflation, but it never does. Self-interest does not force it to.

To the contrary, the self-interest of government functionaries impels them in the opposite direction, that is, toward increased spending, for this enhances their power and prestige.

Conclusion: there is no prospect of inflation ending so long as government controls the money supply.

Beef prices are climbing

Sylvia Porter

The prices you will have to pay for beef will climb steadily this year to an average at retail of about $1.55 per pound for choice beef, estimates the U.S. Agriculture Department. This is an all-time record and a whopping 12 per cent above last year's average.

But you easily may find prices higher or lower than this average at your local supermarkets. USDA prices are based on a composite of cuts of choice beef—not just a T-bone steak or roast—and even these vary from month to month.

For instance, the National Cattlemen's Assn., an industry trade group, runs its own slightly different retail meat price survey. Last month it found the average price of five representative beef cuts at around $1.78 per pound.

Whatever the dollar figure and whoever the source, the message is unmistakable: Beef prices are on the rise. And the question is clear: Why?

The short answer: a sharp cutback in beef supplies. Higher production costs combined with adverse weather in some areas and an overabundance of beef for the past three years have compelled cattlemen to cut way back on their herds or to go out of business entirely.

This steep drop in cattle inventories has pushed up beef prices and will continue to do so. Add to this the inflationary pressures on the farm-to-retail spread—the difference between what a cattleman gets for a steer and what a steak costs at the grocery store. While middlemen charges as well as rapid hikes in farm prices may be absorbed in part over the short run, eventually, they are passed on by the producer to you and me, the consumers.

But still, smaller supplies and the widening farm-to-retail spread are merely part of the explanation why beef prices are jumping.

Basic, too, is your demand for meat—which, despite higher prices, remains strong.

Changes in our country's population makeup, lifestyles and attitudes have helped fuel your taste for beef, Richard A. McDougal, president of the NCA, pointed out in a recent speech.

Almost six out of 10 women in the U.S. work outside the home. Almost half of the mothers with children under 18 hold jobs.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Monday, May 15, the 135th day of 1978. There are 230 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1940, the Netherlands surrendered to Germany in World War II.

On this date: In 1571, Moscow was burned by the Tartars.

In 1602, Cape Cod was discovered by the English navigator Bartholomew Gosnold.

In 1767, Genoa sold the island of Corsica to France.

In 1862, the U.S. Department of Agriculture was established by Congress.

In 1918, the first regular air mail service began between New York, Philadelphia and Washington.

In 1924, Congress passed a bill putting immigration into the United States on a quota system based on nationality.

Ten years ago: Tornadoes hit an 11-state area of the Midwest and South, killing at least 70 people and injuring about 1,000.

Five years ago: The Nixon administration's Indochina policy suffered a setback as the House Appropriations Committee voted unanimously to cut off all funds for bombing operations in Cambodia.

One year ago: The prospect of food crises due to crop failures was said to be the lowest in five years worldwide.

Today's birthdays: Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Joseph Califano is 47 years old. Actor James Mason is 69.

Thought for today: No man will ever bring out of the presidency the reputation which carries him into it — President Thomas Jefferson, 1743-1826.

Alaska spends more per pupil than any other state on elementary and secondary school education. The Conference Board reports. Its yearly expenditures average $2,700 per student. New York ($2,360) and Washington, D.C. ($2,200) follow. Spending the least are Arkansas ($1,040), Mississippi ($1,060) and Kentucky ($1,090).

Therapy for students

The federal government is threatening to cut funding to psychiatric counseling centers on college campuses. Naturally a great cry has gone up about the lack of humanity in such a suggestion.

The pro-counseling people cite the multitude of mental stresses now burdening college students: the demand for As rather than gentlemanly Cs, the spirit-crushing jostling to get into medical and law schools, the absence of jobs for graduates, and skyrocketing costs, and so on. They even bring up the doubled suicide rate over the last ten years.

It is true college students today have a tough time of it, raccoon-coated innocence is long since past. But that has to do with the over-whelming psychic investment now placed in a college degree. From grade one a college diploma is touted as the sine qua non of the happy life, nor is there time to study with leisure, essential to the classic idea of a liberal education.

Small wonder the rising anxieties, no wonder the suicides among students. And for nothing! The idea that a college degree opens the gate to a more rewarding life is one of the most preposterous, and insidious, to be devil people of the modern age. There is no truth to the assumption, as countless studies have shown. Only bureaucratic personnel managers, themselves suffering a severe culture lag, still require them.

To the extent our economy rewards individual enterprise people will earn abundantly, not because they hold a sheepskin, but because they serve others in the marketplace. To the extent the information revolution supersedes the classroom people will be exposed to a cornucopia of philosophy and literature they will not get in four or six years of regimented curricula.

Playing umpire

All law nestles in the context of common sense. Whenever a lawyer comes up with an opinion that goes outside common sense, something is wrong with the lawyer—not with common sense.

In that vein the California Supreme Court held that Attorney General Evelle Younger went too far when he blocked an initiative petition proposed by former Congressman John Schmitz. The 5-2 decision held that the attorney general improperly delayed the initiative process by refusing to issue a title and summary. Younger had refused to act on grounds that the initiative covered more than one subject.

In one place, the California Constitution says, "The people reserve to themselves the powers of initiative and referendum." And in another place, it says, "An initiative measure embracing more than one subject may not be submitted to the electors or have any effect."

Clearly what constitutes more than one subject in the instance of a proposal dealing with related matters is bound to be a debatable point. The question, therefore, calls for an umpire. When the constitution emphasizes that the people reserve to themselves the power of the initiative, it means that they shall be interfered with no more than what the sheer practicalities require.

Certainly, the constitution does not envision that one man in the chain of process by which a proposition moves toward election shall play legislative traffic cop, holding up his hand and saying to one measure "another." "Thus far and no farther shall you go."

In other words when you take the two pertinent parts of the constitution in the context of common sense, the clause that bars more than one subject simply opens an unduly complex or obviously compound initiative to court test. It does not authorize a one-man blockade. Nevertheless, that is precisely what Younger attempted. In effect, he said, "I am the umpire."

In ruling against him, the court said, "The duty of the attorney general to prepare title and summary for a proposed initiative is a ministerial one and mandate will lie to compel him to act when the proposal is in proper form and complies with statutory and constitutional procedure requirements."

Nevertheless, the Younger strategem was successful. The Schmitz proposal, originally designed for the June ballot, cannot be put before November. In the interim, time has lapsed and the initial funding has dried up. Probably it is too much to expect that a political office holder will not misuse his power. Most of the time he will not be detected. When he is detected, the electors occasionally have an opportunity to pass final judgment.

LEGAL PLUNDER

"But how is this legal plunder to be identified? Quite simply. See if the law takes from some persons what belongs to them, and gives it to other persons to whom it does not belong. See if the law benefits one citizen at the expense of another by doing what the citizen himself cannot do without committing a crime." - Frederic Bastiat, "The Law," 1850

Adair caps poison - spewing gas well

WALTON, Texas (AP) — Thoughts of easy money may have swayed some of the backers of an exploratory well that spewed out poison fumes last week, according to the man who owns the land on which the drilling rig sits.

C.B. Dedmon Jr. said Sunday he fought to prevent the hole being drilled because he considered it a safety hazard.

Red Adair and his crew of oil and gas well firefighters capped the runaway well Saturday night but some officials have expressed concern over the reliability of the cap.

More than 400 residents in a 300-square mile area had to be evacuated beginning last Thursday because of the lethal hydrogen sulfide gas leaking from the well. Most were reported still in motels or at neighbors' homes Sunday morning.

Dedmon said he sought an injunction last December to keep N.F.C. Petroleum Corp., an Oklahoma City-based company, from drilling "Rig No. 12" on his property.

"There had been another well about 3,000 feet away that had leaked and people had to be evacuated that time, too," said Dedmon. "I own some other land near that well (No. 12) and they're not going to drill on that."

State District Court Judge Tom Crofts of Terrell said he denied the injunction "on the basis of the evidence presented." An N.F.C. attorney said testimony from the witness stand indicated the well could be drilled safely provided "every precaution" was used.

Dedmon, who said he owns part of the mineral rights to the affected land, likened the hearing to a "Chinese fire drill" and said a chance for some easy money may have swayed the thinking of some of the proponents of the venture.

"I may get shot for saying that, but this morning I don't much care," he said. "Everybody likes to make money, but when you have human lives involved it's another story."

Jack Fontaine of the U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration said he was told the hydrogen sulfide content from the leaking well was about 600 parts per million, "way above the fatal dose."

Ray Miller, district manager of Texas Railroad Commission

— the agency that regulates oil and gas production — said the well was inspected last April to insure specified safety measures were being maintained. He said another well 3,000 feet from No. 12 suffered pipe failure due to the corrosive effects of hydrogen sulfide and could not be completed.

Miller, however, pointed out that proximity is no way to gauge what might happen at another well.

"You can't take two holes and even come close to having the same thing in them," he said.

Meanwhile, some residents of this oil-rich, East Texas area said the evacuations are getting to be a regular, if wearing, routine.

"This is the third time (in the last year) we've had to evacuate, and I'm getting damn tired of it," said Henderson County Attorney Bill Bandy, a former oil driller. "There's just no sense in it."

Rare book dealer thinks he's found Hemingway's first

By DANIEL Q. HANEY Associated Press Writer NATICK, Mass. (AP) — A frothy, cornball comedy called "Hokum" — never published and only recently discovered — is believed to be the first professional work of Ernest Hemingway, who co-authored the play at the age of 21.

"This is Ernest Hemingway's first book," said William Young, the rare book dealer who hunted down the play. He said the three-act play is a "terribly important" discovery because of Hemingway's position among 20th century authors.

Princeton historian Carlos Baker, a Hemingway biographer, said he has found a letter written by Hemingway to a friend in which Hemingway wrote that he and Morris McNeil Musselman were doing a 50-50 collaboration on a play.

"The fact that Hemingway did collaborate on this hitherto undiscovered thing does give it some significance. His name alone on it is apt to create something of a stir," Baker said in a telephone interview.

But Baker cautioned that Musselman — a high school chum of Hemingway in Oak Park, Ill., who became a successful film writer in Hollywood — probably wrote more of the play than Hemingway.

"I would be skeptical that Hemingway did half of it," said

"I think they're moving in people from other states who are, not familiar with what we've got here (hydrogen sulfide gas). We've got a unique situation — they don't have anything like this in Louisiana or Oklahoma."

"They're going to have to be a hell of a lot more careful than they've been being. If they're not, I'm going to consider a class-action suit against them. They're going to keep jacking around up here until somebody gets killed."

Authorities began permitting farmers and ranchers to tend livestock within a two-mile, cordoned-off area Saturday. However, Bill Egg, N.F.C.'s chief engineer, said it will take two or three days for workers to install a system of surface valves intended as a "blowout preventer."

Police said it may be that long before residents can return to their homes permanently.

Teen killed in car trunk

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A front-to-rear auto accident Saturday killed Russell Luecke, 14, of Del Valle, who was riding in the trunk of a car that was struck from behind.

Two other youths riding in the passenger compartment of the car were unhurt.

Firemen had to use special tools to open the crushed trunk and remove Luecke's body. He was pronounced dead at the scene. Emergency Medical Service workers said he suffered neck and internal injuries.

There was no immediate explanation of what Luecke was doing in the trunk.

Just nine weeks after they are hatched, young eagles play actively in their nest and flap their powerful wings with vigor, says National Geographic.

More students; scores drop

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The man behind the college entrance exams says test scores are dropping because a broader cross-section of students is taking the tests.

Dr. William Turnbull, president of the Educational Testing Service of Princeton, N.J., was here Sunday to speak at Texas Southern College commencement exercises.

"Part of the explanation for the declining scores has been overlooked. High school graduation used to be reserved for a pretty small portion of the students. Now just about everyone will continue through the 12th grade," he said.

But the Canadian native placed part of the blame in the classroom.

"It probably has something to do with how much is asked of the student. Not as much is asked of them as there was 10 years ago so they are not working as hard," he said.

ETS has developed exams for many phases of educational and professional life.

"The poor little thing is likely to be tested as a pre-schooler," he said of 3-year-olds who are tested early in life.

"The unexamined life is not worth living, the philosopher said," Turnbull quipped.

While he believes test scores, if properly used, can be a valuable gauge of a student's potential, there is one line of testing he does not favor.

"IQ tests are alive and unwell. They've worked a lot of mischief in the world. They are sometimes taken to represent the native potential of a student and it's assumed to be beyond change," he said. "It can lead to stereotyping."

But Turnbull defended ETS' exams. Through the years there have been charges that the tests are culturally slanted toward middle-class white students.

"There have been a lot of conscious attempts to remove questions that are systematically answered better by students from the majority culture," he said.

ETS has also helped border area schools develop bilingual exams, he added.

Tests developed at the New Jersey research center are now used for non-scholastic purposes as well. In some areas auto mechanics must take ETS tests to earn certification.

Turnbull said there is no trick to doing well on the various tests.

"There are some people that manage better on tests. It's a matter of anxiety level. That's a good reason why test scores shouldn't be used by themselves," he said. "There's very little you can do to prepare except realize you're in an important situation."

It's a situation Turnbull has studied but has never been personally involved in. Educated north of the border, he never took any of the ETS tests while a student.

Tower blasts defense 'mistake'

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The Carter administration has made "several extremely serious mistakes" concerning the national defense of the United States, according to U.S. Sen. John Tower, R-Texas.

Tower said Sunday in remarks prepared for an Armed Forces Week speech at Randolph Air Force Base here that the mistakes "if not corrected, will decidedly affect the future ability of our armed forces to maintain the peace and stability which the United States enjoys today."

He is survived by his wife, Dame Pattie, and one son. "All Australians will mourn his passing," said Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser, a protégé of Menzies. "He gave his party and his country inspiration."

Australian prime minister dies

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Sir Robert Gordon Menzies, Australia's longest serving prime minister who guided the country's postwar development, died today at his home in Melbourne, the government announced.

Sir Robert, the son of a country storekeeper, was 83 and had been living in retirement since 1966.

Known as the Australian Winston Churchill, he dominated Australian politics as prime minister from 1949 to 1966 and also headed a wartime coalition government from 1939 until 1941.

A staunch conservative, lawyer, orator, Anglophile, and cricket fan, Menzies was unswervingly loyal to the British Crown, loved good food, cigars and witty conversation, and made no attempt to hide his contempt for journalists, socialists and the United Nations.

A brilliant parliamentarian and politician, he put together the Liberal-Country Party coalition which ousted the Labor government in 1949, when Australia was bedeviled by strikes, tired of wartime restrictions and worried about Communism.

The coalition won five more elections with the help of rising affluence, Labor disunity, the Communist bogey and a war-with-Indonesia scare.

Queen Elizabeth II knighted Menzies in 1963 and three years later he handed over the government to the late Harold Holt, the federal treasurer. Before stepping aside, he won Parliament's endorsement for Australia's entry into the Vietnam War in support of the United States.

He is survived by his wife, Dame Pattie, and one son.

"All Australians will mourn his passing," said Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser, a protégé of Menzies. "He gave his party and his country inspiration."

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: It's that time of year again. The day after Mother's Day, and I'm writing in behalf of "overworked mothers."

Even though we never fail to remember our husbands, sons and daughters with gifts on Father's Day and birthdays, what do we mothers get on "our" day?

We get to prepare a big dinner for all our children and their children. Then we have the mess to clean up alone after they have enjoyed themselves and said, "Goodbye, and Happy Mother's Day," until next year.

We're lucky if someone sends us a plant. Why doesn't someone realize that a nice Mother's Day gift would be a chance to get out of the kitchen and be taken to a nice restaurant for a change?

Maybe a word from you on the subject would help, Abby. I am thinking of taking a trip out of town on Mother's Day next year. What's your opinion?

DISAPPOINTED AGAIN

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: If you let your children trap you into preparing a dinner and cleaning up the mess alone, you have only yourself to blame. You should know your children well enough to speak frankly with them, and if you don't, it's time you did.

DEAR ABBY: I have been a widow for many years. I have a son and a daughter who are as different as night and day. Both are married and have families.

My son has always been a very selfish person, and his wife is just like him. They never have time for me. I hear from them only when they want something.

My daughter has been wonderful to me. She's always calling me, inviting me to be with her and her family, and she lets me know that she is there should I ever need her.

When my husband died, he left everything to me. I am not a millionaire, but I do have a sizable estate. My lawyer is after me to make a will, and that's where I need your help, Abby. Should I divide what I have equally between my son and my daughter? I wouldn't totally ignore my son, but I don't think he's entitled to as much as his sister.

If you think I'm being petty and small-minded to want to punish my son for treating me shabbily, let me have it. I can take it, and I've been wrong before.

UNDECIDED

DEAR UNDECIDED: An inheritance is a gift. You need not apologize for deciding against giving your son a gift you feel he's not entitled to. Use your own judgment, and don't feel guilty.

DEAR ABBY: My teen-age daughter is a mess! And the sad part of it is, she does it to herself. She is a very bright girl, and God gave her a pretty face, but she ruins her appearance by wearing her hair in a frizzy unruly mop and letting her posture go.

I've told her that if she would cut off half that mop and practice holding her stomach in and her shoulders back, she would be attractive, but she doesn't listen to me. Should I continue to nag her? Or should I leave her alone? She's losing out because she's such a mess.

DISGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: Leave her alone. If she's as bright as you say she is, she will soon realize she is losing out (if indeed she is) because of her appearance, then she'll do something about it.

Who said the teen years are the happiest? For Abby's new booklet "What Teenagers Want to Know," write Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Enclose $1 and a long, stamped (24 cents), self-addressed envelope, please.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have been watching your column for tips on cholesterol. My husband is 46 and has 80 percent blockage of the main artery. He is on a NO cholesterol diet, plus he had to lose 18 pounds.

He has lost the weight. He stays on his no cholesterol diet here at home but when we go out he has a lot of beer and sometimes cocktails. If we eat out he says, well what's the use, it's too late now, and eats all the animal fat foods. I feel he ruins the effort I have made all week with his weekend eating. I say to stick to the diet at all times.

He thinks he can keep up dancing fast and pop a few nitroglycerine tablets. This takes away the choking and burning feeling he has. I say he should be careful at all times as he could have a bad heart attack. Am I being too careful and should I just let him go and do what he wants?

DEAR READER — The best way to get your money's worth out of your doctor is to use the advice you paid to get. If your husband has serious blockage of arteries to his heart and is on a diet, he would be wise to follow it. That does not include going off the diet when he chooses. Beer and alcohol do not contain cholesterol but they are a source of calories.

If your husband has any significant amount of fat under the skin around his waist he should try to lose all of it. Also he should start a careful exercise program. I like to have people like him walk daily. The distance can gradually be increased within his tolerance level, taking care not to get tired or walk until he has pain or discomfort. The walks may be short at first but can gradually be increased. This is a lot better than sporadic episodes of "dancing fast" to the point that it is necessary to take pills to relieve the discomfort.

Your husband is not understanding the right things all week. But he is harming himself by not following the same sensible program all the time. A lot of wives complain — with justification — about husbands going off the diet as soon as they are out of the house. It's bad but it would be worse if they didn't follow a diet at home either.

I doubt your husband is on a NO cholesterol diet. The only foods that are completely free of cholesterol are the non-animal products. Most animal products, including skim milk, lean meats, fish and chicken contain some cholesterol.

It is also important that your husband be on a low-fat and low-saturated fat diet. I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-3, Diet, Preventing Atherosclerosis, to give you a general concept of the diet usually recommended to prevent fatty-cholesterol blockage of arteries. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

I would like to point out, however, that a person needs to lose any body fat he has to get the best results from any dietary program. If you are overweight and don't lose enough weight it won't help as much as it could.

A combination of a sensible exercise program and diet helps many people to improve their health, even after a heart attack, if they were lucky enough to survive it. I presume your husband does not smoke but if he does he should stop at once.

Allergies: your personal poisons

Medicine may cause reaction

BY JOHN BARBOUR
The Associated Press

CHAPTER SEVEN

There are well over 1,000 drugs in the American medicine cabinet, not the one in your bathroom of course, but the one symbolized by the omnipresent drugstore.

They are partly responsible for the fact that Americans can expect to live more than 25 years longer today than those born at the turn of the century, and with less physical discomfort.

And drugs continue to improve every year—in potency, effectiveness and variety. But thereby hangs a problem.

Many of today's drugs from aspirin to antibiotics are so formidable that they cause adverse drug reactions of some kind. Almost every drug carries a warning of possible side effects, a warning of who should not use it.

It is estimated that at least a quarter of the adverse reactions to drugs are really allergic responses.

Three of the most common drugs are the most frequent causes of drug allergy, partly because they are so universally used. They are aspirin, penicillin and the sulfonamides. There are no sure figures, but federal publications indicate that up to 90 percent of all allergic drug reactions stem from the use of that common trio.

Doctors are wary these days in prescribing penicillin. There was a time when many of them, in response to a patient's demands, would give penicillin for the symptoms of the common cold. Besides not being effective against viral agents, which cause most colds, penicillin carries its own hazards.

It is probably the most common cause of drug allergy, and the most common reactions are hives and rash. No one knows for certain what percentage of the population is allergic to penicillin. Estimates run from one in 100 to one in 10. But in its most severe form, penicillin allergy can cause anaphylactic shock in minutes after injection, and that fact alone gives any doctor, and should give any patient, pause.

Fortunately, in most cases, there are other antibiotics that can be substituted for penicillin, although some allergic patients will develop a sensitivity to these as well. A patient should keep his doctor alert to any known sensitivities to drugs, and in some cases should carry warnings on his person if he knows he is sensitive to penicillin. He is otherwise flirting with death.

Aspirin, the most commonly used pain-killer and anti-inflammatory drug, can also bring on allergic attacks—hives, giant hives, asthma attacks and anaphylaxis. What makes aspirin an even more insidious problem is that it is often combined with other medications and the user will not even know it is in the cold tablet he is popping into his mouth. There are probably more than 200 medications in which aspirin is present.

Most frequently, a patient will have some warning that he is having an allergic attack—swelling in the oral cavity, difficulty in breathing. There are many substitute medications, and a doctor will know what they are.

The longer acting sulfa drugs may produce a wide range of allergic reactions from hives to an inflammation of the blood vessels, from an ordinary rash to blood problems. And these drugs cover a range of medications from antibiotics to diuretics to oral antidiabetic agents.

While these three classes of drugs are the most common causes of medical allergic reactions, there are a forest of other less frequently encountered drugs, antioxins, tranquilizers, barbiturates, hormones and anesthetics that are potential allergens.

So great is the American ingestion of drugs of various kinds that the U.S. government estimates that $3 billion a year is spent each year in treating adverse drug reactions in American hospitals.

The specific problem of allergic drug reactions is only a part of that, but a dangerous part. Proof of the allergic nature of reactions rests on finding the presence of a sensitizing antibody in the sera of these patients. When classic responses such as anaphylaxis or serum sickness or asthma occurs, the doctor is relatively certain it is an allergy. He also relies on other symptoms and signs, and an allergy is sometimes proved by simply withdrawing the suspect drug and substituting another.

Besides the classic allergy symptoms, drugs can produce a number of other reactions attributed to allergy. In some cases fever is the only symptom, developing a week to 10 days after the onset of therapy. It sometimes hides behind the fever that is an expected symptom of the disease.

Unlike other allergies, skin testing is of limited use in the case of drugs. Their reliability is questionable, and there is always the possibility of a sudden, dramatic drug reaction.

The best test is the patient's own recollection of his reactions to various drugs he has taken in the past. The doctor will probably investigate any drug previously taken, including nose drops, ointments, tonics, laxatives, vitamins and other everyday preparations most people don't think of as drugs. Certainly people with a history of asthma should be aware of taking aspirin or any medication that contains it.

And just as certainly no person should take any drug casually or without good reason.

Beene's look soft, relaxed; Oscar shows smocks, jackets

NEW YORK — After the Boy Scout scene and the square dancing and the elegant loose clothes, the cheers rang out in Geoffrey Beene's showroom for Seventh Avenue's current international ambassador of fashion. Unlike the other fall and winter collections shown this week, this one was not making its debut. It has already been presented in Milan and in Paris as part of the fashion festivities abroad. To the relief of Beene fans, the clothes held up on second and sometimes third viewing.

"It looks even better than it did in Europe," the designer was told repeatedly by well-wishers after the show. He obviously has a winner on his hands. Though he added a few pieces since his last show in Paris — notably a black serge pants suit, supple though tailored — he made no obeisance to the current penchant for tough, hard clothes. All his clothes remain soft, relaxed and comfortable looking — the suits and separates for day as well as the silks for evening. Mr. Beene believes that women have never had an opportunity to feel as ease in their clothes as they do today — and he is not about to change that pleasurable situation for some arbitrary reason.

There was an international flavor to Oscar de la Renta's showing also as visiting designers such as Issey Miyake of Tokyo, John Bates of London and Andre' Oliver of Paris stopped by to see how they handle fashion shows in New York.

The first squeals exploded when Alva Chinn, one of the city's favorite models came down the runway in a loose printed challis dress. It was obvious that her baby was due in two months. She was followed by Iman, in another printed dress. The squeals became cheers. Three cheers for motherhood as the models joined hands and finished their turn together.

It wasn't a joke. As the show progressed, they appeared in other styles, from sporty to festive ones. They looked great. Obviously, the designer didn't believe in fitting his clothes too tightly.

He did invoke padded shoulders in tailored styles for day, but at night, everything was floating and glittering, with filmy fabrics shot with gold predominating. There were girlish smocks and sophisticated pants outfits with velvet jackets among the evening outfits.

Mollie Parnis, who knows a thing or two about glamour herself, proposed big taffeta skirts with glittering tops, jackets rimmed with feathers and even ruffles and sequins as appropriate evening fare for next winter's big parties. But she also acquitted herself well for day, with soft suits, some of which had knitted jackets. Her angora knitted dresses looked soft, cuddly and lovable.

lie Wacs, who specializes in coats, made an astonishing point in his collection. He padded the shoulders of his coats in the mode of the moment. But then he cut the styles a little longer than usual. Lo and behold, the models looked 10 feet tall — and even slimmer than models usually look. That's what shoulder pads can do when they're handled properly. The coats look magnificent. For women who would prefer something softer, he does unlined styles with feather-stitched edges that are as soft as sweaters. In what looks like a good coat season, his styles are superb.

He did invoke padded shoulders in tailored styles for day, but at night, everything was floating and glittering, with filmy fabrics shot with gold predominating. There were girlish smocks and sophisticated pants outfits with velvet jackets among the evening outfits.

Mollie Parnis, who knows a thing or two about glamour herself, proposed big taffeta skirts with glittering tops, jackets rimmed with feathers and even ruffles and sequins as appropriate evening fare for next winter's big parties. But she also acquitted herself well for day, with soft suits, some of which had knitted jackets. Her angora knitted dresses looked soft, cuddly and lovable.

Prof wants housing to go underground

By SOLL SUSSMAN
Associated Press Writer
ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — If a Texas architect has his way, trees and gardens may become parts of the roofs of the future.

A conference sponsored by the U.S. Department of Energy in Fort Worth this week is about earth-covered residences. Its organizer, Frank Moreland, says putting houses partly underground and covering them with dirt can help the nation's energy problems.

Moreland, director of the University of Texas at Arlington's Center for Energy Policy, said most of the technological problems of earth-covered construction were solved 20 years ago. Moisture control, insect penetration and design strong enough to sustain a heavy load of dirt were the major ones. "It's really only been in the last couple of years that people have begun to be interested," he said. "Twelve years ago, it was slim pickings."

The conference Wednesday through Saturday is a successor to a similar event held three years ago.

"In the past year, the rate of increase in interest is just incredible," Moreland said. He attributed the increase to earth-covered construction's "extraordinary ability to conserve energy."

Earth-covered construction's method is simple and durable. Dirt is piled as deep as 15 feet in some locales on top of a concrete hull. The hull's bottom is about three feet below ground, leaving most of the house itself above ground and allowing a space for windows to be cut through the concrete and dirt. The top of the pile absorbs heat in the summer. And the dirt filters the heat through the pile down to the house just in time for winter. Cool temperatures on top in winter sink to the bottom by summer to provide natural coolness. On top of a concrete hull, the hull starts slightly below ground level, leaving most of the house itself above ground and allowing windows. "Heating and cooling costs will be less than any other building type, with a few exceptions," Moreland said. For example, the technique is not useful in hot and humid coastal areas.

"If we can get some of these things built, I think we can demonstrate that the United States has enough to gain to buy it," he said. "I think this thing would set the stage for a sense of community."

While earth-covered buildings are surprisingly numerous around the nation, few have been built as part of a community plan. Moreland proposes rebuilding neighborhoods under earth, and he says the result would not be bleak vistas but rather lush park surroundings.

The interiors would be flexible, designed to fit individual needs and tastes. A family living in an earth-covered house might easily remodel to a new plan once the children leave home.

Practical urban densities could be achieved, but Moreland said privacy would be greater than today because piles of earth would insulate noise better than thin apartment walls.

Moreland said an innovative Fort Worth developer plans to start a subdivision this summer using earth-covered construction. If the first few houses sell, as many as 50 would be built on a site yet to be selected.

"He (the developer) thinks this is the wave of the future, and I think he's right of course," Moreland said.

CHOICES

Karen Blaker Ph.D.

DEAR DR. BLAKER — I started therapy last summer because I was having serious problems with men. I was 23 years old and had never been out on a date. Even though I feel a lot better about myself and even have a steady boyfriend, things aren't going very well. Now my best girlfriend and I seem to be drifting apart.

Lately she has started criticizing me for being too analytical. She says I am always looking for hidden meanings in everything.

She also thinks I should confide only in my boyfriend, not in her, if I want to keep him. That really upsets me because I value her as a friend. What's her problem?

DEAR READER — Her problem — and yours — is that you are both very insecure about your friendship.

She probably feels jealous about the changes you have made in therapy and rejected because of the time you spend with your boyfriend. Before therapy you were certainly more available. She may need a lot of reassurance from you — reassurance that you still want her as a friend.

You no doubt feel insecure in the friendship because she is being more critical than usual. Rather than blaming the whole problem on her, why not take a closer look at your behavior?

Has therapy changed the way you communicate? It is very common for a patient to unknowingly take on some of the characteristics of his or her therapist.

If you ARE talking like a therapist, your friend may feel you are acting in a superior manner. Ask her to let you know when you are being overly analytical.

Once you know what you are doing that is so annoying, discuss it with your therapist.

Analyzing everything can be a way of distancing yourself. You may be unconsciously trying to push your friend away. At the risk of sounding overly analytical, that may be based on feelings that you don't deserve both male and female relationships at the same time.

While you are thinking about all this, do not discount the possibility that you have changed to the point that you and your girlfriend are not as compatible as you once were. If so, you may both want to develop new friendships.

But whether you work things out with her or find other friends, remember that having a same-sex friend is essential.

In fact, two or three are even better than one. Although few people have the time and energy for that many close friends, a deep involvement in two or three other lives lends a certain perspective to one's own, limited time on this earth.

Because of our conditioning about the nature of male-female relationships, they can rarely provide the closeness of same-sex friendships.

My last bit of advice is that things will probably never be perfect. The trick is to continually strive for growth and change.

Farm loans not difficult

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A recent survey shows that while some farmers are having trouble getting loans to tide them over from a financial crunch, most can still borrow money readily from banks and other lending institutions.

The survey was made in March by the Agriculture Department of banks and production credit associations (PCAs) in 12 states where farmers have been particularly hard-hit by depressed prices for grain and other commodities in the last two years.

"No economic shortage of loan funds to the farm sector is evident, but marginal operators will continue to have problems getting credit and repaying outstanding loans," the report said. "A small but significant number of borrowers in the surveyed states — about twice the normal number — cannot get loan funds from commercial sources."

In the case of banks, for example, about 3 percent or 22,000 of their borrowers last year would not qualify for non-real estate loans this year, the report said. Normally, about one percent or 9,000 farm customers would not qualify.

In the case of PCAs — cooperative lending associations making short-term loans to farmers — about 4 percent of the farm applicants were not qualified, compared with a normal rate of 2 percent, the report said.

"Of the 253,000 borrowers applying for loans from banks between Jan. 1 and March 15, 1978, about 6 percent or 14,700 were refused loans, up from a normal 4 percent for this time of year," the report said. "PCAs experienced a similar increase in the rate of loan refusals."

Many farmers have avoided being delinquent on loans by refinancing debts over longer periods of time by using real estate as collateral so that annual payments can be reduced.

"At banks, borrowers refinancing short-term loans into real estate debt rose sharply from a normal of 2 percent or about 18,000 at banks to about 7 percent or 50,000," the report said.

Again, PCA customers also sharply increased refinancing of short-term debt during the last year.

"About 60 percent of all bankers reporting said that borrowers not qualified were poor managers, 73 percent cited inadequate equity (in their holdings), and two-thirds reported that borrowers had insufficient income prospects," the report said.

The survey was conducted by the department's Economics, Statistics and Cooperatives Service among 883 of the 5,328 banks and all 171 PCAs in the 12 states, which included Colorado, Georgia, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Dakota and Texas.

In the banks surveyed, deposits overall increased 13 percent in 1977. Total loans grew 17 percent and farm loans rose 10 percent, the report said.

"In Minnesota, Indiana and Iowa, farm loans and total loans grew faster than deposits," it said. "In Oklahoma and Texas, farm loans increased at nearly the same rate as deposits. PCA loan activity actually declined in Colorado and Texas. No change occurred in Montana, but PCA loans increased sharply in Indiana."

The ratio of loans to deposits in banks "appear high compared to conditions earlier in this decade," said the survey.

"Banks in Colorado, Minnesota, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Georgia and Indiana appeared to have relatively more funds to lend than in the remaining states, while banks in Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota and Texas appeared to be the shortest on loan funds," the report said.

"In general, banks were optimistic about the quality of their farm loan portfolio with nearly 75 percent saying that it was as good as or better than a year ago," the report said.

"However, 47 percent of the PCAs said the quality of their portfolio had deteriorated. Bankers in Nebraska, North Dakota and Colorado tended to be the most pessimistic. PCAs in Kansas and Montana were most pessimistic."

WASHINGTON (AP) — World cotton production probably will decline in 1978-79, primarily because of a drop in U.S. production, according to the Agriculture Department.

Preliminary indications are that global production in the year which begins Aug. 1 will range between 59 million and 65 million bales, depending on final plantings and growing conditions, the department's Foreign Agricultural Service says.

World cotton production this season is estimated at 63.9 million bales. The mid-point of the range predicted for next year would be about 62 million bales.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Brazil may be forced to import as much as 4.5 million metric tons of foreign wheat this year to help make up for its disappointing 1977 harvest, the Agriculture Department said today.

Brazil imported about 2.8 million tons of wheat last year, by comparison, the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said.

The agency said that wheat imports from the United States may rise to 3 million tons, more than Brazil bought from all countries in 1977. A metric ton is 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat.

Astro - Graph

by Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

May 16, 1978

This coming year you may form several attachments quite impulsively. The aspects indicate they could turn out to be worthwhile and lasting relationships.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You might form a quick partnership with several friends today when an unusual opportunity comes along, but be wary of a deceptive outsider horning in. Find out more about yourself by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A chance to perform some exceptional service will come to you today. Jump at the opportunity, but good results will come only if you do it alone.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Answer personal communications promptly today. Someone who likes you is trying to set up something beneficial.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be doubly careful today if you're putting a guest list together that you don't overlook a sensitive old friend.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A situation is likely to shift rather unexpectedly today to your advantage. If you're too timid to act, you may later regret it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't be reticent today concerning your just dues. Humbling yourself unnecessarily could cause the other party to think you're asking for too much.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Something you're hoping for today will not be outlandish. It may be necessary to use a different approach than you first considered.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) An important goal is reachable today provided you team up with an ally whose methods are more practical than yours. Another dreamer is just deadweight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Greater progress will be made today by adding a slightly new twist to standard routines. A little experimentation could prove valuable.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be alert for situations today where you can add an ingredient and create a place for yourself in the enterprise.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Over-analyzing plans today tends to create indecision rather than serving a constructive purpose. Act, then correct any mistakes as you go along.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Unsolicited help from an old friend will suddenly pop up today, causing you to think more about business than pleasure.

Trevino: "I love it"

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer
FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — "Golf is a crazy game," says Jerry Pate, and along comes Lee Trevino to prove it. With his lead in jeopardy, Merry Mex chipped in from off the green for a birdie, swept in with a sparkling 66 and won the $200,000 Colonial National Invitation Sunday in a runaway record 268.

"A fantastic week," said Trevino of his 12-under-par performance and its $40,000 reward. "I love it."

Trevino abandoned his swash-buckling, go-for-broke style and said it was a craftier Latino who fired rounds of 66, 68, 68, 66 to capture his second Colonial crown by a comfortable four shots.

"I just kept jabbing away," he said. "I think I played it very smart."

Pate knifed through the pack with a closing 5-under-par 65 to tie Jerry Heard at 272 for second place. The consolation prize was $18,000 apiece.

Heard, the only serious challenger in the stretch run, slipped in with a 68 after a bizarre turn of events at the 14th and 15th holes that ended a tense duel in the Texas sun.

"The turning point was the 14th," said Trevino, who was nursing a 2-shot lead, flirting with a bogey five and looking at Heard's second shot resting 10 feet from the cup.

"Everything was up for grabs until the 14th hole," he said. "It looked like Heard was going to get even and instead he went three down."

Trevino holed out from 30 feet and Heard, the 1972 Colonial champion, missed his 10-footer.

A double bogey at the par-4 15th ended the Heard threat.

"I looked at the board when I stepped on the 16th tee and I had a 6-shot lead." Trevino marveled. "That was it. I put my marbles away...I bogeyed the 17th but by then it was all over."

What does one think about with a 6-stroke lead?

"You just hope to hell you run out of holes in a hurry," said Trevino.

Pressure?

"Pressure's playing for $10 when you don't have anything in your pocket," said golf's most beloved hustler, now a millionaire with 21 PGA victories and third behind Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer in career earnings.

Gerulaitis triumphs

By GREG THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Newly-crowned World Championship of Tennis title-holder Vitas Gerulaitis has a message for one of his teammates on the World Team Tennis' New York Apples: Take that Billie Jean King.

"I know this will show Billie Jean, because she says I never work hard enough," Gerulaitis joked Sunday after quickly dispatching a ragged and struggling Eddie Dibbs 6-3, 6-2, 6-1 for the WCT crown.

"I'm gonna go back and tell her. I'd like to see you go out and win that tournament," quipped Gerulaitis, who has never had a reputation as a hard worker on the practice court, perhaps because of his conscientiously-groomed playboy image.

The well-rested Gerulaitis got into the finals on a default Friday by injured, top-seeded Bjorn Borg and hadn't played since Wednesday night. He needed only an hour and a half to overwhelm Dibbs with his deadly volleys and newly-strengthened serve.

"I was never in the match with the guy," said Dibbs, who played Thursday and Friday night. "I couldn't get going. The racquet felt like it was dead or the strings were dead. My forehand was really bad. It was usually my big shot in the last two matches."

And in a weak attempt at humor, Dibbs added, "I don't know what it was. Maybe somebody switched racquets with me or something."

Dibbs, who had won all four of his matches against Gerulaitis, had swept into the finals without losing a set, largely on the strength of his hypnotically-flawless baseline game.

But Dibbs was continually plagued by mistakes on his shots Sunday, many of the errors being forced by Gerulaitis' whistling serves and crisp play at the net. Dibbs lost 55 points because of errors on his shots.

"I knew what I had to do. I just played a sound game. I didn't do anything spectacular," Gerulaitis said. "Eddie didn't play well, but I didn't give him a chance. There's not much he can do if I'm serving and volleying well."

Dibbs agreed. "He (Gerulaitis) was very tough. He's very quick, very tough to pass. He comes to the net very well. His serve got better, especially his first serve. It was very tough."

Apples' Coach Fred Stolle told Gerulaitis last month that he needed a stronger serve if he wanted to become one of the world's three top players. Gerulaitis has been developing the serve and double-faulted 14 times in his Wednesday night quarter-final victory over Raul Ramirez.

He trimmed that to only three against Dibbs and didn't double-fault in the final two sets. The victory was worth $100,000, while Dibbs got $40,000.

"There was a question about whether I was really No. 4 or 5 in the world," said Gerulaitis.

Thompson, Issel muffle Sonics

DENVER (AP) — Some minor adjustments, such as a switch in defensive assignments, and one major change, an effort to set picks for superstar David Thompson, helped extend the Denver Nuggets' season at least another game.

With Thompson regaining his shooting touch and his confidence to score 35 points, the Nuggets held off a second-half Seattle comeback and beat the SuperSonics 123-114 Sunday in their National Basketball Association semifinal playoff series.

The triumph reduced the Sonics' lead to 3-2 in the best-of-seven Western Conference Finals. Game 6 will be played Wednesday night in Seattle. Game 7, if necessary, would be played Friday night in Denver.

The winner of the series meets the Washington Bullets in the championship round, which begins next Sunday at the home of the Western champion.

"Now the monkey's on their back," said Thompson after the Nuggets bounced back from three straight defeats to stay alive in the series. "Seattle has to win up there. I'm sure they don't want to come back here for the seventh game. We can go up there Wednesday and be loose. Just play our game."

From an historical standpoint, Denver's task would not appear to be quite that simple. Only two teams in NBA playoff history have rallied from 3-1 deficits to win a series. In addition, the Sonics are no pushovers at home, having won 19 straight games at the Coliseum.

"They're still in the driver's seat," admitted Denver center Dan Issel, who scored 27 points and pulled down 10 rebounds as the Nuggets held a 55-40 rebounding edge Sunday over the taller Sonics. Issel said winning the sixth game "is a pretty good size hill to climb, but stranger things have happened."

Slew slayed 'em

NEW YORK (AP) — "I'll remember the winter of '78 for a long time," said Mickey Taylor, standing in the wind and rain of Aqueduct and basking in the sunshine of Seattle Slew's comeback.

"It's a great feeling to know that he's back."

Slew won easily in the seven-furlong allowance race Sunday. But more importantly, he raced after months of doubt.

The Triple Crown winner and Horse of the Year in 1977 had been scheduled to return to the races in January, but he contracted a serious blood disorder that knocked him out of training and almost out of racing.

Now the doubting is over.

"He's back," a relieved Taylor said after Seattle Slew ran away from five rivals. "Now it's just a matter of hoping for the best. I was probably more anxious today than nervous. We waited 10 long months."

The race was Slew's first since he had finished fourth 16 lengths behind winner J.O. Tobin in the Swaps Stakes July 3.

"Super," said veterinarian Jim Hill, another Slew co-owner. "It couldn't have been better. He went along easily and did it like a workman."

Jockey Jean Cruguet, who has ridden Slew in his all his races, said simply, "I thought he ran pretty good."

Birds corral Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — When Richie Zisk grabbed his bat with the bases loaded and only one out in the bottom of the ninth, Texas Ranger fans were lining up to make bets on whether his game-winning hit would be a single or a home run.

Even the Baltimore Orioles, who had taken a 3-2 lead on Lee May's two-run homer in the ninth, were ready to concede one run.

Instead, Zisk struck out on a bad pitch and reliever Don Stanhouse picked up his sixth save of the season when he got Ranger catcher Jim Sundberg on a grounder to short.

"I take all the responsibility for this loss," a dejected Zisk said in the clubhouse.

"There's no way we don't win or at least still be playing. At worst, I hit a fly ball. At worst, That's the kind of situation they got me for," added Zisk, who had delivered the winning hit in five games this season, including three last-inning home runs.

The Ranger right fielder said it would have been different if Stanhouse had thrown good pitches at him, "but I helped him out by swinging at balls, and then I took a strike three down the middle. That's ridiculous."

May had driven in four runs in Baltimore's 5-1 triumph Saturday night with two home runs and a single.

After Sunday's game, Ranger Manager Billy Hunter said: "I've seen him hit a streak like this before many times, but I'd just as soon not have seen it again the last two nights." May's homer followed a single by Ken Singleton and a fielder's choice by Eddie Murray.

The win went to John Flinn, 1-0, who came in for starter Mike Flanagan in the seventh inning. He set down Texas in order in the seventh and eighth innings, then gave up a single to pinchhitter John Lowenstein and a double to Mike Hargrove in the ninth and yielded to Stanhouse.

Stanhouse walked Juan Benitez intentionally to load the bases and got Toby Harrah to hit a pop-up to short right field. That brought up Zisk.

Dock Ellis, 2-2, was the loser. He went all the way, retiring the first 16 batters and giving up only two hits through the first six innings. He gave up his only walk, to Ken Singleton, in the seventh and Eddie Murray doubled and Pat Kelly singled for the Orioles' first run in the game.

Bert Campaneris and Sundberg hit RBI singles for the Rangers in the second and third innings. Campaneris also picked up his 600th career stolen base in the second inning.

After 20 years, Halpern is back

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Bobby Halpern steps through the ropes and into the ring at Madison Square Garden tonight to continue boxing's most unlikely comeback.

It will be Halpern's second date in the Garden ring. The first one was 20 years ago.

Halpern was a promising young heavyweight in 1958, a tough kid, who had learned his fighting in the streets and had won more of those sidewalk bouts than he had lost. The Garden put him in against Tom McNeely for a four-round prelim bout that December and the two men put on a slugfest.

Three years later, McNeely fought Floyd Patterson for the heavyweight championship of the world. Halpern spent that fight night in a prison cell.

"I remember that, McNeely fighting for the championship," said Halpern. "I remember thinking, that could have been me."

Sent to prison on armed robbery and kidnapping charges that he is still appealing, Halpern met a convict who knew McNeely. Bobby recalled that Garden blood bath and a few months later, he received a letter from McNeely, who had heard of the meeting.

"He said he had never fought a tougher guy than me," said Halpern.

There is pride in his voice when he relates that story. Pride and a bit of bravado constructed from having survived 17½ years of what the authorities call rehabilitation. Halpern laughs at the term.

"There is no rehabilitation," he said. "To them, rehabilitation means conforming to their standards."

He is a lot of things but nobody ever accused Halpern of being a conformist. You can tell that from his face, which looks like a map of the streets where he learned his craft.

Like McNeely, there are a lot of guys who never fought anyone tougher than Halpern. Most of them had their bouts with him in the social register of New York State prisons — Sing Sing, Dannemora, Attica and Green Haven.

Ironically, Halpern believes the years he spent behind bars allowed him to return to the ring at an age when most boxers are long since retired.

"Prison preserved me," he said. "In prison, you keep good hours, you can't drink, you can't go running around at night. I feel in better shape today than when I was a kid."

Savings Bond sales growing

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Sales of U.S. Savings Bonds are growing at a steady pace, despite the increased array of other investment opportunities for consumers.

The Treasury Department reports Savings Bond sales in the first three months of 1978 topped $2.1 billion, up 4 percent from the first quarter of 1977. The first-quarter total was the highest since the War Bond drive of 1945.

A study conducted for the Treasury Department last year by the Survey Research Center at the University of Michigan showed that 35 percent of all families questioned owned Savings Bonds. The study also showed, however, that most people are unfamiliar with the value of their investment. Only 15 percent of those polled said they knew the annual interest rate on the bonds and less than 15 percent gave the right answer — 6 percent when the bonds are held to maturity.

To help you learn more about

Savings Bonds, here, in question and answer form, are some of the basics:

Consumer Watch

Q. What kind of Savings Bonds are sold today?

A. Series E and Series H. Series E bonds are sold at a discount and can be redeemed at face value when, in five years, they reach maturity. There are eight denominations, ranging in price from $18.75 (face value $25), to $7,500 (face value $10,000). Series H bonds, in denominations from $500 to $10,000, are sold at face value. Interest is paid semiannually and the bonds reach maturity in 10 years.

Q. What if I want to cash in the bonds early?

A. You must hold Series E bonds for at least two months. After that, you can cash them in at most banks and many other savings institutions. You must provide proof of ownership. You also can exchange Series E bonds for Series H bonds which can be redeemed at face value at any time six months after the issue date.

Q. Can I keep them after they reach maturity?

A. Yes. Both Series E and H bonds may be held for at least 10 years after their original maturity date and you will keep getting interest at the annual rate of 6 percent.

Q. Many investments offer tax breaks. What about Savings Bonds?

A. They provide several tax advantages. The interest you earn is subject to federal income tax, but is exempt from state and local income taxes. In addition, with Series E bonds, you can defer your federal taxes until you actually cash in the bonds.

Q. What about buying bonds in my children's names?

A. Another potential tax break since the tax due in any given year is unlikely to exceed the child's exemption. The first year you do this, however, make out an income tax form for your child, listing the interest earned. This establishes your intent to pay.

Q. Where can I buy Savings Bonds?

A. Series E bonds can be bought at most banks and other savings institutions or through a Payroll Savings Plan run by your employer. Series H bonds are sold by Federal Reserve Banks and their branches and the Bureau of the Public Debt, Securities Transactions Branch, Washington, D.C., 20226.

Armstrong will honor father

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Evangelist Garner Ted Armstrong, stripped of power within his father's Pasadena-based religious and college empire last week, says he will bow to Herbert W. Armstrong's authority.

"I prefer to honor my father and will defer to his authority," the 48-year-old television and radio evangelist said.

He was quoted by the Los Angeles Times in a telephone interview from Texas.

"There would have been a power struggle if I had struggled against my father's authority," he said.

The younger Armstrong, who had long been regarded as heir apparent in his father's empire, has been silent since last week when he was told he would no longer be doing his weekly half-hour television program.

It was also reported that the younger Armstrong's March announcement that Ambassador College's undergraduate program would be transferred to Texas had been rescinded, and that the program would end this summer.

Because these decisions were made without the younger Armstrong's participation, there has been speculation that a power struggle is under way for control of the 65,000 member church and the college, which takes in more than $60 million annually.

"I was totally surprised by the nature of these decisions," Garner Ted Armstrong said Sunday, breaking his week-long silence.

He said he had no desire to be stripped of his authority, nor to stop his television broadcasts, but added that these decisions were apparently part of his father's move to "take back the reins of leadership."

The elder Armstrong has made "a remarkable recovery" from his cardiac arrest of a year ago, Garner Ted Armstrong said, adding that he planned to return to Pasadena today or Tuesday to "sit down and talk with my father."

"What concerns me is that I don't want to be cut off from the herd and have people taking potshots at me," the younger Armstrong said, adding that efforts to reach his father by telephone had been unsuccessful.

Garner Ted Armstrong made his comments in the wake of his father's talk Saturday to followers in the Pasadena headquarters, where the elder Armstrong said there is "complete unity" within his empire and asserted that he had come back to resume a leadership role.

Bids to be let for I-40 work

The Texas Department of Highways and Transportation is expected to let out bids Wednesday and Thursday for continued improvements of Interstate 40 in Carson and Gray counties.

A 5.3-mile stretch of I-40 starting about two miles west of Groom and extending about 2 miles east of Groom is the second construction phase in this area.

News watch

ATLANTA (AP) — West Africa is experiencing increased outbreaks of Lassa fever, and the National Center for Disease Control says the once rare disease seems to be spreading to other parts of the world. A CDC study said the spread could be increased by international movement of patients.

The disease brings about abdominal pain, nausea, vomiting and diarrhea.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — It was cold, and it rained a lot. There were hundreds of sore backs, some aching heads, a few chipped teeth, some scraped knees and even a couple of broken bones. America's classic bike ride, the Tour of the Scioto River Valley, was "the worst since 1963," said director Charlie Pace. In 1963 there was a blizzard.

Pace estimated that 70 percent of the 3,544 riders from 34 states and Canada finished the two-day, 210-mile tour along the Scioto River, from Columbus to Portsmouth and back.

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Cheryl Davis is serving five days in jail, close to the ones she loves. The 27-year-old has been jailed for making harassing telephone calls to the Tampa Police Department — she called officers repeatedly to say, "I love you."

She was convicted after officers said she called them 19 times during an eight-hour period. "We tried not to be rude to her," said Lt. J.C. Perkins.

"But her frequent calls tied up our lines, and while she was saying, 'I love you' someone could have been trying to get in touch with us because of an emergency."

MCCOOK, Neb. (AP) — The only Frank Lloyd Wright house in Nebraska may be razed soon to make room for an apartment building. Its owner says the 23-room house designed by the famed architect in 1907 has become a drain on his budget, and he cannot find a buyer.

J.M. Donaldson is asking $83,500. The City of McCook and the High Plains Historical Society declined to purchase the house, which was built for the late Harvey Sutton, a prosperous McCook jeweler. Donaldson said recently he is considering building apartments on the site.

NEW YORK (AP) — Inflation and stricter environmental requirements have boosted the cost of pollution control more than 31 percent to $38.4 billion for U.S. businesses, according to a survey by the Economic Department of the McGraw-Hill Publications Co.

Fifty-four percent of pollution control costs are aimed at air pollution, 36 percent at water pollution, and 10 percent at solid waste.

TORRINGTON, Conn. (AP) — Community opposition apparently has buried a proposal to evict several bodies from a 19th-century cemetery to make room for a parking lot. Alfred Waterfall, a local bank president who made the suggestion, says "it's time the idea was dropped."

Waterfall had said relocating the graves could be done with "grace and courtesy," but some city officials said it was too expensive, some relatives of the dead objected, and an undertaker who serves on the parking authority said 150-year-old remains might constitute a health hazard.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal veterans' preference system is not aiding young Vietnam-era veterans, a spokesman for a veterans group says.

Frank E.G. Weil of the American Veterans Committee is telling Congress that only 9 percent of the federal work force is composed of Vietnam-era veterans. Weil's group is supporting President Carter's proposed reduction of veterans preference from lifetime to a 10-year term, with disabled veterans retaining lifetime rights. The Senate Governmental Affairs Committee begins work on the final version of the proposal Thursday.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate debate doesn't begin until Tuesday, but an opponent and a supporter of labor law revisions aren't waiting for the official arguments. Sen. Harrison A. Williams, D-N.J., who supports the changes, and Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, an opponent, squared off Sunday on a television interview show.

Hatch said the revisions were prompted by organized labor's loss of recent representation elections. Williams said the legislation "in no way deals with working people's elections and how they will vote." The measure would streamline operations of the National Labor Relations board and speed the process of union representation elections.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Labor Department official says his agency is making progress despite limited resources in gathering more information about unemployment among Spanish-surnamed Americans.

Julius Shiskin, commissioner of labor statistics, defended the department Sunday against a critical report by the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights. The commission said the department's efforts were inadequate despite a 1976 law requiring the information to be collected and published.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposed Labor Department regulation could force employers to raise wages for low-paid supervisors and managers by up to 46 percent, business lobbyists charge.

The lobbyists say the department wants the increase while President Carter is trying to hold down inflation. The department denies the proposal is inflationary or that employers would be forced to provide sizeable increases. The dispute involves proposed department rules on minimum salaries for workers who are exempt from overtime pay.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor and congressional supporters of national health insurance have scheduled an Aug. 6 rally in New York's Madison Square Garden to kick off a drive for the legislation.

Aides of the leading congressional backer, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said the senator is ready to conduct coast-to-coast hearings of his Senate health subcommittee on the issue.

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Eleven more journalists and other newspaper employees have been sentenced to prison for from three to nine months for violating a ban on public demonstrations.

Four were sentenced to up to five lashes and were flogged shortly after the sentencing Sunday.

A total of 45 newspaper employees have been sent to prison in the past two weeks for demonstrations against the military government's ban on the Lahore paper Nusawaat, which is owned by the family of deposed Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto. Bhutto is in jail under a death sentence for ordering the murder of a political opponent.

TOKYO (AP) — Only half of 5,000 Europeans questioned in a five-nation survey know Japan is a democracy, and 70 percent think the country has nuclear weapons, the Foreign Ministry reports.

American and Japanese research organizations questioned 1,000 people each in Britain, France, West Germany, Italy and Belgium. Thirty percent of the British said they thought Japan was a Communist dictatorship.

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — For the first time in two years, a Soviet submarine from the Black Sea fleet crossed the Bosphorus Strait Sunday and headed for the Mediterranean. This brings the known Soviet naval force in the Mediterranean to 64 ships.

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Agriculture Minister Sudarsono said he expects Indonesia to be self-sufficient in foodstuffs by next year, the Antara news agency reports.

Sudarsono said self-sufficiency would result from putting more acreage into rice and in-tenification of rice growing. Indonesia imported 2.4 million tons of rice last year.

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — With the temperature hitting 77 degrees, hundreds of thousands of Portuguese flocked to the beach Sunday for the start of the summer season.

During Mark Twain's days as a newspaperman, he was editor of a small Missouri paper. One day he received a letter from a subscriber, stating that he had found a spider in his paper, and asked if this was an omen of good or bad luck. Twain replied: "Finding a spider in your paper is neither good nor bad luck. The spider was merely looking over our paper to see which merchant was not advertising so that he could go to that store, spin his web across the door, and lead a life of undisturbed peace ever afterward."
