

Edward Dickinson Baker-Why is he in Rotunda?

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — In the stately rotunda of the U.S. Capitol stand the giants of American history, their images carved in marble and bronze.
George Washington, in bronze statue and marble bust; Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln; Andrew Jackson, the French general Marquis de Lafayette.

Edward Dickinson Baker — Edward Dickinson Baker? For more than a century, this statue of an American senator wrapped in Roman toga has held its ground in the rotunda, an obscure politician whose life likely would have gone unnoticed by history except for his death.
Washington was father of his country. Jefferson wrote the Declaration of Independence. Lincoln freed the slaves.

And Baker? He was killed in the Civil War.
In case this bit of history was missed in school, Baker at various times was a congressman from Illinois, an Army officer and a senator from Oregon. When the Civil War broke out, he left the Senate for the Army.
He literally got up from his desk and went out and was shot right away," says Florian Thayn, art expert in the office of the architect of the Capitol.

The inscription on his statue does not bear legend to legislative greatness, leadership or military courage. Its plaque reads simply "This statue was erected by vote of the Congress."
Baker was killed Oct. 21, 1861, while leading his men at the Battle of Balls Bluffs near Leesburg, Va. Eleven years later, Congress voted to spend $10,000 for a statue, although there was some grumbling about commemorating a colleague.

It is in the Capitol with more than 100 other statues, dozens of busts and over 100 paintings, part of a nation's heritage.
Washington is most immortalized — seven portraits and four busts plus the statue in the rotunda.

There are statues, busts and paintings of several presidents, a handful of Supreme Court chief justices, congressional leaders and assorted well-regarded Americans.
Thirty-seven vice presidential busts have been carved. Thirty-five are on display, but those of Lyndon

B. Johnson and Richard Nixon are in storage at the request of their families, Mrs. Thayn said.
The experts say there's no particular importance to the placement of any of the 35 on display.
But Calvin Coolidge, known as Silent Cal, is off in a niche by himself, where very few tourists are likely to disturb him.
There are 92 statues given by the states, including one of Will Rogers, Oklahoma's favorite son.

There's a popular legend that Rogers once said his eternal wish was to be able to keep an eye on the rascals in Congress.
True story or no, Rogers' bronze likeness is stationed only a few strides from the front door of the House of Representatives.

Soviet dissent crackdown reaches climax in trials

By SETH MYDANS
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — An intensified crackdown on Soviet dissent that began more than a year ago reaches a climax this week with the trials of Jewish activists Anatoly Shcharansky, accused of spying for the CIA, and Alexander Ginzburg.
Shcharansky's 70-year-old mother appealed Saturday to President Leonid I. Brezhnev for word on her son's health and suggested his trial Monday is being held in secret to cover up his death in prison.
"We suspect that a serious tragedy has occurred," Ida Milgrom's note to Brezhnev said.
Perhaps he is no longer alive.
Ginzburg and Shcharansky have been held virtually in-communicado since their arrests early last year.

The superpowers are preparing to meet in Geneva Thursday for a what could be decisive discussions in the long-stalled strategic arms limitation talks.
Washington made it clear to the Soviets Friday that the fate of the two accused dissidents would be an "important indicator" of the Soviet attitude toward détente. A statement approved by President Carter left open the possibility that the trials might be discussed in Geneva.

Shcharansky and Ginzburg were key members of the now almost-inactive Helsinki human rights group formed in May 1976 to monitor Soviet compliance with the human rights provisions of the 1975 Helsinki agreement signed by 35 nations, including the Soviet Union.

Helsinki group founder Yuri Orlov was sentenced May 18 to seven years of hard labor plus five years of Siberian exile for "anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda."

Ginzburg, 41, was arrested Feb. 4, 1977, and Shcharansky, 30, the following month at the start of a new crackdown on dissidents. The campaign of arrests, trials, banishments and forced emigrations has quieted the movement, one of whose principal aims was to agitate for the right of Jews to emigrate from the Soviet Union.

Shcharansky, a leader of the Soviet Jewish emigration movement, faces a maximum penalty of death on the espionage-treason charge. Ginzburg could get up to 10 years in a labor camp and five years of exile in the Soviet Union on a charge similar to Orlov's.
Ginzburg faces a stiffer term than Orlov's maximum sentence because it would be Ginzburg's second offense.
Shcharansky's arrest came 11 days after the government newspaper Izvestia accused him of cooperating with American diplomats and correspondents here as an agent of the Central Intelligence Agency.

City commission to consider annexation

The first reading of an ordinance annexing 1,400 unincorporated acres in north and northwest Pampa will be considered by the city commission during its regular meeting at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday in the City Hall commission chambers.
Residents of the land and developers voiced opposition to the proposed annexation at a public hearing during the last commission meeting, June 27. The city is seeking the annexation in an effort to regulate residential growth in the outlying areas.
The unincorporated land is divided into 13 tracts, some of which might be deleted from the annexation because of

Indira Gandhi may face charges

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Morarji Desai said Saturday "it is very likely" that his predecessor, Indira Gandhi, will be prosecuted on charges arising out of her 1975-77 emergency rule.
Documents listing charges against the former prime minister are in preparation, Desai told reporters at Srinagar, the capital of Kashmir.
Although he did not say definitely that Mrs. Gandhi would be brought to trial, Desai's statement appeared to signal an end to government indecision that precipitated a rift in his ruling Janata Party. The dispute led to the ouster of two Cabinet ministers who had demanded faster action against the former prime minister.

Briscoe urges voters be given greater voice about tax matters

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe urged the Legislature on Saturday to give voters a greater voice on tax matters and to make it more difficult to enact tax bills.
Briscoe's proclamation to the special session that will open Monday also includes a wide-open invitation for legislators to introduce any constitutional proposal that would limit local taxing and spending.
The total price tag on Briscoe's proposals "is slightly over $1 billion" for 1980-81, Secretary of State Steve Oaks told a news conference.
Oaks said this figure "is fiscally responsible" and can be covered by projected state income.

Tower stresses his conservative views during his Pampa visit

By JOHN PRICE
Pampa News Staff
Taxes, government spending and the national defense were among the topics covered by U.S. Sen. John Tower during a question-and-answer session Saturday afternoon at the Senior Citizen Center in Pampa.
Tower emphasized his conservatism and discussed his upcoming race against Democratic U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger during the informal session. His visit here was part of a week-long campaign swing through the state.
The Republican senator called California's Proposition 13 "a reflection of national feeling" and said "Congress needs to give the people two things: tax relief and a smaller scope of government."
"In this Congress we are likely to get a tax reduction, but not an overall tax limitation," Tower said.
When asked about the chances of attaining a balanced federal budget, he replied "I can visualize a balanced budget, but we need a conservative president and Congress. Unfortunately, we have a liberal president. I think — we don't know what he is — and a liberal Congress."
"We need to trim the size and scope of government. That's the first step toward cutting costs."
Tower criticized the policies of President Carter and the Democratic Congress several times during his talk. Carter is actually helping Republicans throughout the nation, he said.
"The enormous dissatisfaction with Carter and the Democratic leadership over the type of legislative programs they are introducing will help the Republicans," Tower said.

Mentioning Carter's plan to raise beef imports as a measure to control prices and fight inflation, Tower said "This is unconscionable in my view. It's so basically dishonest!" He said the measure would not affect inflation, but rather is "calculated to adversely affect our domestic producers so they can't build up their herds. It's going to hurt consumers. This is called the politics of gesture."
Referring to defense, Tower said "overall we are in rough equality" militarily with the Russians. "We're even but we're going to lose it if we don't increase our defense spending by at least three percent."

Tower said he would like to see the B-1 bomber, cancelled by Carter, back in production, but "it's not likely."
"What disturbs me is not just the cancellation but the mentality behind it," he said.
"The President and the Secretary of Defense say it's a good system but we can't afford it. They don't say they can't afford the best in the Soviet Union."
Mentioning his opposition to the Labor Reform Act which failed to pass through Congress, Tower received a round of applause by saying "I might note that I've been designated as organized labor's number one target this year."

Tower, who has represented Texas in the Senate since 1961, said "I view the upcoming race (against Krueger) with confidence but not overconfidence."
"I think the majority of people in this state approve of the way I've voted," he said. Krueger has spent most of his adult life in the East and "is out of touch with the state."
"The other fellow tries to be all things to all people. He's a liberal — no doubt about it."

Socialist, World War II hero elected new Italian president

ROME (AP) — Sandro Pertini, an 81-year-old Socialist and World War II resistance hero, was elected president of Italy Saturday in a compromise that ended a nine-day stalemate and preserved the country's fragile political balance.
Pertini, who will be sworn in Sunday for a seven-year term, received 832 of the 995 votes cast on the 16th ballot by the electoral college consisting of the members of Parliament and 58 regional representatives.

It was the widest margin given a presidential candidate in the 32-year history of the republic.
A former president of the Chamber of Deputies, Pertini becomes the republic's seventh head of state and succeeds Christian Democrat Giovanni Leone, who resigned as president last month amid charges of involvement in the Lockheed payoff scandal and tax irregularities while in office.

Leone, who as a former president is now a senator for life, emerged from seclusion for the vote.
The post is largely ceremonial, although the president is responsible for appointing a premier to head the government after consulting with party leaders.

Political sources said the parties' decision to rally behind a compromise candidate rather than push their individual choices reflected a desire to avoid confrontation and maintain the current political formula in the face of Italy's troubles with its economy and urban terrorism.

The minority Christian Democrat government now rules with the parliamentary support of five other parties — the Communists, Socialists, Social Democrats, Republicans and Liberals — and there had been fears that a clash in Parliament over the presidency would lead to a government crisis.
Pertini will be Italy's second socialist president. Giuseppe Saragat, a member of the Italian Socialist Party until he left to form the moderate Socialist Democratic Party, served as president from 1964 to 1971.
Pertini, who spent almost 10 years in various jails for his resistance activities against the Italian Fascists and later the Nazis, was one of the founders of the Italian Socialist Party. But he is not a strict party ideologue and is considered open to other ideas, a factor in his selection as a compromise.
During his term as president of the Chamber of Deputies, Pertini, a lawyer, developed a reputation for impartiality and skill in assuaging tempers in heated debates.
He was a candidate for the presidency seven years ago but the electoral college selected Leone. It was widely predicted that former Premier Aldo Moro would succeed Leone when his term expired at the end of this year, but the race was thrown open with Moro's kidnapping and murder this spring by Red Brigade terrorists.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Now, for number one

Are we now ready for "Proposition Number One?" Until fiscal responsibility and monetary sanity is forced on the federal government, all voter revolts at local levels can become without relief for taxpayers.

To bring about such a goal will be a long and difficult task. For starters we suggest that the federal government be enjoined from going farther into debt and that it be forced to reduce the national debt by 10 percent per year. Then tight restrictions must be placed on the issuance of unbacked currency. Or better yet, take the government out of the business of furnishing the means for exchange.

The government track record for providing money used in exchange is about as bad as most of its major endeavors. Money should be readily acceptable and be able to retain a store of value. It is failing on the first count and has utterly failed on the second.

There was a time when the phrase, "As sound as a dollar" meant that the dollar could be used as an example of complete soundness. Today, if a doctor told a patient he was as sound as a dollar, the poor guy would expect he was on the road out.

To some it is a bit like heresy to advocate that the marketplace and private enterprise could handle our monetary system. That is where the use of money started and governments got into the act usually as a means for easy extraction of part of the value of the precious metal in coins which were in circulation.

The idea that only the government can be trusted to provide the means of exchange has been promulgated by those in government. In the light of what has happened to money, controlled by the political sector, in most every nation in every period of time, it is strange that anyone would be willing to place such trust in the hands of politicians.

It would seem that citizens would take a strong opposing point of view and insist that government cannot be trusted with control of our medium of exchange.

Until our money can again retain a store of value there will be no end to inflation. And, as long as inflation continues there will be no end to this, the most devastating tax of all. Its ramifications are so numerous and complex that most of its effect is hidden from view until long after anything can be done to counteract the economic damage.

Not long ago families could budget and plan for years for insurance, college, home and other living expenses. Now it is almost a day to day battle to revise their plans to meet inflation as it hits on all fronts.

Business and industry find the problems far more complicated and are hard pressed to keep up, much less be able to make the kind of plans to insure their economic growth.

The tax revolt now being expressed in meat-ax attacks on the local level will not solve the American citizen's basic problem with taxes. Just consider Proposition 13 among all other things, will give the federal government an estimated windfall in extra income tax of near $2 billion. Smaller property tax deductions will produce this paradoxical effect.

A "Proposition Number One" must address the root of our tax problems if we are ever to get a real handle on the cancer of government eating away at our incomes and our ability to produce our needs for a continued good level of living.

The budget deficit

Less than four months ago the Carter administration expected the budget deficit for the current fiscal year to be $3 billion. Now it appears that it will be three billion dollars less than that expectation.

Before we jump with joy over this seeming welcome news coming out of Washington we best take more than a short look. There is no evidence that the bureaucracy has suddenly become thrifty. Nor can the White House claim credit for any act aimed at reducing profligate spending.

The bureaucracy has not, at long last, become more efficient. In fact, just the opposite will account for a goodly part of the small percentage of drop in the $450.5 billion budgeted plus the expected $3 billion deficit first expected. Thus in the $503.5 expected spending 10.5 percent failed to get spent due almost entirely to government's inability to spend all the money it had planned.

The spending plans were just a mite too vast for even the top experts in the field of tax-spending.

In order to give this peculiar situation a palatable name, bureaucrats have coined the term "short-fall" to explain the fact that they have failed to move the funds out fast enough.

Officials explain their embarrassing plight by saying it was caused by failure to get new programs started soon enough.

What is not mentioned is the fact that bureaucrats have a long record of over-estimating their spending "needs" at budget making time. They always ask for more in order to get what they want.

As we consider the spending lags, there is an over-riding fear that Carter's crusade to improve efficiency might wind up in the wrong direction. If it only achieves efficiency related to the speed of spending money or to step up regulatory intrusions against private enterprise, then we lose again.

So, if the bane of federal officials — the short-fall — is eliminated by efficient spending, it will bode no good for any remaining financial stability left in the Washington menage.

Why not settle for nothing less than an economy budget designed to remove a good deal of the fat out of the bureaucracy, and an honest effort to reduce total spending to an amount which will start a drastic reduction in the federal debt?

While this fat is being cut, it would be well to concentrate on the elimination of much of the burdensome regulation and red tape which now is putting a terrific drag on industry and increasing costs for the consumer?

We realize that our suggestions amount to self-inflicted political genocide and it is not likely that politicians will become the tool of their own economic suicide. But, if the source of their political strength is strangled by tax revolts and the market for political action starts to dry up through a rebirth of individual self-reliance, the alternative might spur them to alter their course.

Suggested reading this week for all public officials, elected and appointed: The Declaration of Independence. Who knows, perhaps our latter-day political masters might yet be persuaded to give up a good deal of accumulated power rather than have all of it wrested from their grasp.

If that trend developed, we could again call ourselves a nation of free men which means a great deal more than the present usual term of just a "free nation."

Big winner

Elsewhere, gambling is turning out to be a winning proposition — for the house.

Adding up the take from its first six days of operation, the first casino to open up in Atlantic City, N.J., reported a net win of $2.6 million. That was the sum total of the 20 cents out of every dollar wagered which went to the house, which would put total cash flow across the tables and into the slot machines at better than $10 million for the opening week.

Some of us obviously can be parted from some of our money without protest providing the process includes the roll of dice and the exercise of a slot machine handle.

Taxing authorities might take note.

By ROBERT LEFEVRE

The loss of income through taxation is one of the most serious burdens all of us face. But it does not compare in seriousness to another loss which goes almost unnoticed. Thanks to government pervasiveness, those of us under the American system are losing our belief in ourselves.

Whenever a person loses money or any other property for which he has worked, the loss is a serious setback in time, energy and ultimate attainment. Yet, in most cases it can be replaced. The loss may be only temporary. When a person loses belief in himself the likelihood for permanent loss is enormously greater. Even such a loss can be overcome but the primary difficulty is that few detect this loss. It is hardly surprising, if a person does not notice a loss, that he will do nothing to restore what is missing.

When young people are growing up under the care and financial support of parents there is an almost insensible tendency for them to submit to parental decisions or to rebel openly. Clearly, the children do not have enough experience to make wise decisions and parental decision-making must occur for a number of years. This is right and proper, of course.

Losing faith in ourselves

It is also right and proper that the maturing child will come to a place in his experience where he resents his parents' dominance and, however immature his own judgments may be, he will insist on making them. Friction ensues almost always, but it will be, in the course of nature, resolved.

However, in the parent-child relationship, sometimes a tragedy does ensue. The child, for some reason and despite the fact that he is now mature, does not strike out on his own. His constant reliance upon parental decision-making creates a permanent loss. He now becomes a parasite, sometimes of course to his parents' delight. He utterly refuses to complete his transition to adulthood, and reverts to a state of perpetual dependence. He feels forever inadequate to the adult world.

As some scholars have noted, the government in many ways takes on the role of the parent. Like a worried mother, it frets over the risks run by the populace at large. But instead of urging the wearing of rubbers, the washing of hands, the making of beds, and so on, the government passes legislation to compel the citizen to behave as the government thinks he should. This should be instantly and totally resented and rejected out of hand. It isn't. The government is nothing but a group of people, not one with more mature or wise than the adults for whom it presumes to make decisions. But because the populace at large has accepted that government has either mystical or divine attributes. The assumption is that "government knows best" and submission is obtained.

In a correctly educated and mature populace, any attempt by one group of people to make decisions and impose them on others would be stifled and choked off at the outset. What happens, of course, is easy to see. The average American, who well knows that he can and should be making his own decisions, concludes that there are others in the population incapable of making theirs. Thus, while he resents the decisions imposed upon him, he presumes those decisions are needed by others. Hence, he submits in order to set an example for others.

But here we have, not a set of parents, endowed by nature with concern for their offspring. Rather, we have professional career men who make their livelihood out of convincing others they haven't enough sense to manage their own affairs. And presently, through long habit, the public at large accepts the government's position as being superior to their own. This creates a colossal psychological deficit. Presently they begin to believe that they cannot have a business without a permit; cannot conduct their affairs without a license; and don't know enough to clean up after themselves unless the parental surrogate called government first gives approval.

The human mind is a strange and wonderful device. It believes what it will. And after long exposure to government decision-making the fact is that private persons begin to lose the ability to think for themselves. The people revert to a continuation of their childhood. They can no longer strike out for themselves. Their principal gains come from obedience to Big Daddy Democracy.

So there is produced in the nation a host of willing and compliant adolescents who find comfort and ease by never having to make responsible decisions for themselves. The feeling of ineptitude and incapacity grows. The schools cooperate. They begin to offer courses in everything from basket-weaving to street-crossing. And in the end, what was once a free society becomes a group of tranquilized zombies, lock-stepping to their tax-paid dungeons, under the domination of arrogant, self-proclaimed experts.

When parents make decisions for their young children, the acknowledgement can be made that the parents at least have an advantage in age and experience. But when politicians begin to act as though they had sired the entire population, they are in a false position. In most cases, the private citizens know more and have had far broader and better experience than those who now arrogate to themselves a position of mastery over adults who are not children.

This is the loss and it is a disaster. But until the average person begins to realize what has happened to him we will go on seeing the strange, unnatural relationship of human to politician, in which the former bows to the latter and waits for permission before he dares strike out on his own.

Supreme court justices-to your good health!

The most significant impact any U.S. President makes on history is in his appointments to the Supreme Court.

We will be affected by decisions of the "Earl Warren Court" for generations.

Few recognize the immense consequence of Supreme Court appointments and those who are aware try to keep it quiet while they work tirelessly in a behind-the-scenes effort to influence the next choice.

Campaigning for a Supreme Court nominee is done subtly with "suggestions" in the right places. Presently in Washington — in cloakrooms, committee rooms and on the cocktail circuit — the "big sell" is on for a woman jurist in California — Shirley Hufstедler.

Let me say that there is presently no prospect of a Supreme Court vacancy. Blackman and Brennan are both recovered from recent surgery. Nonetheless, an objective computer would indicate that there will be a vacancy to fill at some point during this Carter term.

Should it come after next November's election, the President's choice might well be Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell.

Should a choice have to be made before the next election, a more likely choice would be our black Solicitor General Wade McCree.

Both of these individuals have a reputation and record indicating that either would be a credit to the court.

As former President Nixon learned, competent-appearing nominees cannot always survive X-ray examinations by the news media. And front-runners can stumble.

Sen. Ed Brooke, for example, might have been a Gerald Ford choice for the High Court. Now, sullied by a divorce scandal and subsequent financial embarrassment, he may not even survive reelection to the Senate.

Ford also had in the back of his mind a Michigan woman jurist whose credentials the judiciary committees would have found difficult to fault.

presently more "in balance" than it has been since the court-packing days of F.D.R.

The eight years of Chief Justice Warren Burger have demonstrated a degree of equanimity which appears — by comparison with the past — to be a conservative tendency. Not yet.

On balance, the last two sessions' decisions have favored law men as often as they have favored lawbreakers.

So precarious is the balance, however, that the next appointee will be highly critical.

And the Kennedy liberals have launched a hard-sell campaign for the nomination of Judge Shirley Hufstедler of California's Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals.

She is experienced, smart, a workaholic — and somewhere to the left of you — whoever you are.

Incumbent justices — here's to your good health!

Your money's worth

Did you know that Florida oranges are dyed orange during certain fall months of the year?

That there is so much fat in most processed meats that you have to eat ten slices of bacon or six slices of bologna to get the same amount of protein found in one three-ounce hamburger?

That if the label on a loaf of brown bread lists such ingredients as "wheat flour," "enriched flour" or "white flour," the bread is not 100 per cent whole grain?

That ingredients are listed on food items in order of predominance, so if water or wheat (white) flour are listed first, there is more water or flour in the product than anything else?

In a practical, level-headed approach to food — both buying and cooking — the above is merely the sampling of vital guides Marian Burros, a newspaper and TV reporter, wife and mother, gives you in a new book, "Pure and Simple, Delicious Recipes for Additive Free Cooking" (William Morrow & Co., $9.95). Sensitive to the skepticism with which many consumers now view this flood of warnings about how harmful certain chemicals are, Burros says at the outset, "You get rid of as many hazards as you do not care to live with. You make some compromises."

One of the compromises she is not making is on convenience foods, which she says are almost without exception more expensive (hardly news), often short on nutrition, maybe unsafe, and finally not very convenient to her.

For instance, vegetables in butter sauce and packaged in plastic pouches cost 20 cents more than the ingredients by themselves.

The artificially red color and flavor in strawberry ice cream permit the manufacturer to cut down on the number of strawberries included. The ice cream is cheaper, she admits, but it tastes that way and often contains as much beaten air that you are getting very little substance for your money anyway.

Additive-free cooking

Adding the additive BHT to cereal to prevent oils from turning rancid can give the box of cereal a shelf life of two years and can help the cereal maker, but who keeps cereal at home for that long?

And processed, pre-mixed salad dressings, flavored rice, pancake mixes and pre-sliced cheeses don't really save you much, if any, time, insists Burros — especially considered against the additional expense to your food budget.

All of this may be common sense, but wanting to eat — even if neither wisely nor well — while holding down a job and/or caring for a family takes time, argues my Washington associate, Brooke Shearer (herself a newspaper reporter, wife and mother of an infant). Burros answers that one by submitting a chapter of recipes for "ready-when-you-need-them" foods, which are all but free of additives and cost less than manufactured, supermarket versions.

As illustrations, she gives recipes for frozen yogurt, shake-it-and-bake-it coating for chicken by the jarful, cheese souffles which can be frozen, pudding and pie filling, seasoned salt, hot mocha mix, meat sauce, pancakes, oatmeal cookies and biscuit mixes by the dozens.

All of these foods you can make when you have the time and then store in the freezer or other appropriate place until you need to turn to such homemade conveniences in a rush.

"These of venience recipes are the most popular that I have written," says Burros. "Nothing comes even a close second, except maybe chocolate chip cookies. I usually make up these foods at night or on weekends, at odd hours. My children especially like using them."

The book also contains brief discussions of food label languages (such terms as flavor enhancers, preservatives and anti-oxidants, meat substitutes), the cost and safety of processed foods, and a chapter of recipes for meatless main dishes (which could soar in popularity as meat prices continue their relentless climb toward all-time peaks in this phase of the eatable cycle).

Recipes come from Washington celebrities, friends, a few memorable restaurants Burros has visited.

(A personal note: I'm devoted to convenience foods, which I, in contrast to Burros, do find time-savers, convenient, and when properly chosen, quite tasty. But knowing how fascinated this nation is today by cooking-from-scratch and how deeply concerned a family of you are by additives, above is my objective report.)

Prairie dog plague

The Texas Department of Health, Public Health, Region 1, located in Canyon, Texas, is carrying out a plague surveillance program in the Panhandle area on prairie dog towns.

In the past plague has been shown to infect prairie dog towns and cause noticeable die-offs in these towns. If anyone should notice a die-off in a prairie dog town, please notify the Gray County Extension Office.

Encephalitis alert
Also from the Texas Department of Health there is now a state wide alert for Western Equine Encephalitis. This disease is on a rampage, especially in horses. Horse owners are advised to get their horses vaccinated against all of the encephalitis — Eastern, Western, and Venezuelan.

Tomato problems
What causes the bottom of my tomatoes to turn brown? Most likely you have Blossom End Rot. Although the exact cause is unknown, it is related in our area generally to a shortage of water. Oftentimes too dry a soil will combine with hot, dry air resulting in stress within the plant which kills young cells at the base of the developing tomato fruit. The dead tissue darkens to form a black spot. A good mulch and close attention to frequent irrigation during fruit formation should help prevent Blossom End Rot.

Why do tomato blossoms fall off in hot weather? Tomato blossoms tend to fall off in hot weather because of interference with the natural pollinating and fertilization mechanism of the plant. Tomatoes are self-pollinated and in hot temperatures the style of the flower will elongate exposing itself to the drying action of the sun and wind. This can prevent pollen from reaching the stigmatic surface of the flower or prevent pollen germination after it has reached the stigmatic surface. In a nutshell, when day temperatures get above 93 or night temperatures get above 72 or so, the tomato blossoms generally will fail to fertilize and begin to fall.

Potato tomatoes
Several callers this year have wondered about the small tomatoes on their potatoes. The answer lies in the close kinship between the potato and tomato. Both are of the same botanical family and as a result have very similar growth characteristics. The fruit that you see on the potato is actually the fruiting structure of the potato plant itself. The potato flower looks very much like a tomato flower and is pollinated just as the tomato flower. The fruit will mature providing the plant is left long enough. Rest assured that the potato has not cross fertilized with some tomatoes.

Pink eye in cattle
Hot, dry weather means cattlemen should be on the look out for pink eye, an infectious eye disease of cattle of all ages and breeds.

The bacterial organism that is often found in eye secretions of infected cattle has been found living in face flies, so an outbreak of pink eye is often associated with a high face fly population. Also, a virus disease, infectious bovine rhinotracheitis (IBR), is sometimes associated with pink eye. Irritants that can lead to eye infection include intense sunlight, dust, pollen, seeds, awns and tall grass.

Cattle with uncolored skin around the eyes, or white faces, seem to be more frequently affected. After infection, animals generally have immunity for about a year; however, they serve as a source of infection to other animals. Pink eye can severely reduce weight gains in infected animals. This can be costly to producers. A 30-pound weight loss in 60-cent calves could mean a difference of $18 a head.

To help prevent the spread or severity of pink eye, cattlemen should practice fly control and pasture management, use Vitamin A when it is lacking, and promptly treat infected eyes with antibacterial preparations.

Flies should be controlled with sprays, rubber buckets, dust bags or by grub pour-ons. Pastures can be clipped to eliminate weeds and seed heads and the stubble should be below eye level to avoid eye irritation. Vitamin A may be deficient in dry pastures, which allows eye tissues to be more easily affected with pink eye.

Treat infected animals as soon as the first signs of pink eye appear. Antibiotic ointments and eye patches can be effective. Veterinarians can also inject antibiotics into the eye tissue. Keep infected animals in separate pastures will help minimize the spread of pink eye and make it easier for re-treatment.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — At least 14 suspected Mafia members and 68 associate members live in Texas, the Texas Organized Crime Prevention Council reported Friday.

The council's 1977 report to Gov. Dolph Briscoe estimated that organized crime cost Texans $3.3 billion, with the trafficking of narcotics and dangerous drugs the predominant form of organized crime in Texas.

"Members or associates of the Mafia are known to own or have ownership in businesses or commercial property, to have close associations with businessmen, and to have close associations with criminals in the state," the report said.

"Their activities include narcotics trafficking, gambling, real estate, and the infiltration of legitimate businesses," the report said.

It said, however, "It is believed that the main thrust of Mafia activity in Texas occurs through contacts and associates acting in the place of Mafia members who reside outside the state."

In addition to the Mafia, the report said, at least 218 members of a loose-knit organization of criminals known as the Dixie Mafia live in Texas. "Members associated with this group are principally involved in the commission of illegal acts against persons and property, as opposed to infiltration of legitimate businesses. These members are thought to have wide-spread connections."

Others identified as organized crime groups include motorcycle clubs and the "Mexican Connection" — a group primarily involved in the smuggling of narcotics, with an extensive network of persons in Mexico.

At least 832 members of six motorcycle clubs "are heavily engaged" in narcotics, burglary and theft rings, fencing operations and violent crimes, the report said.

"Because of the unique nature of organized crime, citizen awareness and involvement are critical for the suppression and prevention of organized crime activities," the report said.

It also said, "Because of the lack of a statewide organized crime intelligence system, criminal justice efforts are neither efficient nor effective in organized crime suppression."

The report said major emphasis should be placed on organized crime task forces, starting with metropolitan areas in South and West Texas.

Among the council's recommendations are laws authorizing electronic surveillance and state funding for the council, which has been supported since its creation in 1970 by federal money.

AUSTIN, Texas: federal money. The report said law officers should take the initiative in developing standards for the collection and dissemination of criminal intelligence.

The council said the Legislature also should consider spending money "to promote the cooperation of witnesses" and creating grand juries with broad jurisdiction. Criminal court judges should be encouraged to impose maximum sentences and fines against persons involved in organized crime.

The council noted in its report that there is not a sufficient amount of data to "measure either the amount or impact" of organized crime on Texas. It said it had utilized data from the Department of Public Safety, local and regional organized crime control unit, newspaper clippings, past council reports and a 1976 study by Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Co. (PMM&Co.).

Here are some of the comments by category of organized crime: —Illegal drug traffic: Texas is the major transportation and distribution center for heroin, cocaine and marijuana. Law officers reported 60,211 drug-related arrests in 1977.

—Gambling: There were 3,365 gambling arrests in Texas in 1977, with the Houston and Dallas areas reporting a large amount of gambling activities. The PMM&Co. study said as much as $975 million is wagered annually, with 93 percent bet on sports events.

—Prostitution: In 1977 there were 5,672 arrests for prostitution and other commercialized vice, with Dallas alone reporting 1,335. A significant number of "known pimps and prostitutes" were reported in the Houston, Corpus Christi, Austin and Killeen-Temple areas. An increasing amount of prostitution activities "has been connected with massage parlor operations." As much as $137 million a year is spent on prostitution, PMM&Co. estimates.

—Fencing of stolen merchandise: Arrests of persons buying, receiving or possessing stolen property in 1977 totaled 1,375, a 61 percent increase from 1976.

The total value of property stolen in 1977 exceeded $328 million, with only $9.3 million recovered.

—Pornography: PMM&Co. says the pornography industry grosses as much as $41.7 million a year, and pornography-related arrests are increasing, with Dallas alone reporting 2,017.

The data, the council said, "reflects only the tip of the iceberg" of a growing crime problem in Texas.

Officer charged in alien's death

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — Policeman Antonio L. Elizalde Jr., 30, was charged with murder Saturday in the shotgun slaying of a Mexican alien near the international border.

Another man was injured in the incident. Police Capt. Joe C. Davila said Elizalde, a five-year veteran on the city police force, was suspended from duty and held in the Webb County Jail without bond pending a hearing Monday.

Davila said the man killed, Juan Benito Martinez, 32, was traveling in a van with two other Mexican citizens about 3 a.m. Saturday when Elizalde pulled them over on a road near the Rio Grande.

Dollar decline to set milestone

TOKYO (AP) — This could be the week the U.S. dollar hits a psychological milestone in its steady decline against the Japanese yen: the 200-yen dollar, as the money-market men call it.

It means that Americans who got 360 yen for a dollar 10 years ago and 308 five years ago would be getting only 200 yen now.

At the close of trading on Friday, the dollar was quoted at 203.325 yen, up 1.10 yen from Thursday's closing and up 2.35 from Wednesday's closing of 200.975, a postwar record low.

For Americans the decline of the dollar against the yen has meant that television sets, automobiles, cameras and other goods imported from Japan are more and more expensive.

Finance Ministry sources said Saturday a European monetary stabilization scheme that Common Market leaders gave basic agreement to on Friday in Bremen, West Germany, is not likely to help things.

If the scheme is implemented, they said, the yen's exchange rate most likely will be determined solely by bilateral trade between Japan and the United States.

If Japan continues to chalk up a surplus in bilateral trade in the future, the yen may soar in value against the dollar, they said.

Sources in the Foreign Exchange Bank here expressed a similarly pessimistic outlook, while experts in Japan's Central Bank were more optimistic.

According to official statistics, the U.S. bilateral trade deficit with Japan this past

January to April widened to $4.3 billion from nearly $1.74 billion for the same period in 1977.

U.S. exports to Japan in the four-month period totaled nearly $3.6 billion, while imports from Japan amounted to $7.9 billion, according to U.S. Commerce Department figures.

Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda, who will meet with President Carter and other Western heads of state in West Germany next week, told reporters Thursday that he would ask the United States to take steps to stabilize the declining value of the dollar.

He said U.S. inflation, huge international payments deficits, and U.S. congressional opposition to Carter's energy program were to blame for the recent sharp decline of the dollar against the yen and other world currencies.

Deputy no billed by jury

PLAINVIEW, Texas (AP) — A Hale County grand jury listened to 19 witnesses over two days and weighed the evidence for an hour and a half. But the panel took no action against a reserve deputy sheriff whose gun discharged and killed a Mexican-American last month.

Mexican-American activists have planned a march for next Saturday in this West Texas town to protest the death of Timothy Rosales, 25, Gilbert Herrera, West Texas leader of the Brown Berets, said Saturday the march was planned before the grand jury handed down its decision Friday, and he said the plans for a nonviolent protest had not been changed.

White Deer council meets

WHITE DEER — City council will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday at City Hall to receive the audit of city books for the fiscal year ending March 31 from Auditor Wayne Brown.

Other items on the agenda include re-roofing the fire station, semi-public telephones, building codes, law enforcement and the dumpground.

Carl R. Jahnel

Hemphill man gets ag award

CANADIAN — Carl R. Jahnel, a Hemphill County farmer and rancher who has been a staunch supporter of Texas Agricultural Extension Service programs, has been named a "Man of the Year in Texas Agriculture" for 1978 by the Texas County Agricultural Agents Association.

He is one of seven Texans selected for the honor and was nominated by county agents in District 1 (Panhandle) of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The awards are presented annually to outstanding leaders in agriculture and related industries, according to Calhoun County Extension Agent Gilbert Heidemann, president of the state county agents association.

Jahnel will receive his award during the association annual meeting in Lufkin Aug. 6-9.

Jahnel has been participating in result demonstration work conducted by Hemphill County agents for several years. This has included new crops as well as management and performance records on beef cattle.

He has been interested in conservation and has given close attention to terracing, soil fertility and crop rotations in his diversified farming and ranching operations.

Jahnel is also active in many civic and religious activities, including the Gem Baptist Church, Hemphill County Hospital board, Abraham Memorial Home, Hemphill County Chamber of Commerce and Blue Ridge School board.

State has more funds to spend

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas legislators got an unexpected $126.1 million gift from State Comptroller Bob Bullock Friday.

Bullock said a new estimate of state revenue for the two-year period ending Aug. 31, 1979, showed the surplus available for spending by the special session to be $876.1 million. Earlier he estimated $750 million.

He urged the legislators to earmark a substantial portion of the surplus for property tax relief because "that's the heart of the problem, that's what people are mad about."

Bullock said Texas' economy has surpassed all expectations and was a primary factor in the surplus revenues.

"I've said many times that Texas has the best business climate in the nation, and that fact is born out by this surplus," said Bullock in a statement. "What's even better is that the legislature has the chance to make the kind of decisions that will keep us No. 1."

The estimates showed that oil and gas taxes declined slightly but here were major increases in other areas.

College guidelines proposed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Guidelines for faculty workloads at state-financed colleges and stricter standards for off-campus courses are on the agenda of the College Coordinating Board next Friday.

The board also will review 11 construction requests totaling $22 million, including a $10.4 million addition to the teaching hospital for the College of Veterinary Medicine at Texas A&M University and a $2 million student union at the University of Texas at Dallas.

The board may vote on a proposed revision of the 1967 board policy on academic freedom.

Correction

It was incorrectly reported in Thursday's paper that Dawn Romines failed to stop for a signal when a red light was on. The information on the police blotter should have read that Douglas Forrest Abernathy failed to stop for the light instead of Romines.

News watch

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Bandits killed 42 farmworkers in Brazil's remote Matto Grosso State 1,000 miles northwest of here, the A-JB news service reported. It said 20 of the 21 persons allegedly responsible were arrested after several gunbattles.

Police said the workers had refused bandits' orders to leave the cattle ranch where they worked. The killers' precise motives were not clear, but land disputes in the area frequently erupt into violence.

LONDON (AP) — A group of British lawmakers is trying again to persuade the Soviet Union to release 84-year-old Nazi war criminal Rudolph Hess from West Berlin's Spandau Prison.

Hess has been in jail since after he parachuted into Scotland on a self-appointed peace mission in 1941 and has been Spandau's only prisoner since 1966, sentenced to life imprisonment. He cannot be released without the consent of all four of the powers who rotate control of Spandau — the British, French, Americans and Russians.

The Russians refuse to agree to his release to a hospital ward. The plea for Soviet reconsideration came from Conservative, Liberal and Labor members of Parliament. But British Foreign Office officials said the Soviets show no sign of changing their position.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service says that because of changes enacted in 1976 to tighten tax loopholes, fewer wealthy Americans are getting away without paying income taxes.

The IRS said 57 individuals with adjusted gross incomes higher than $200,000 paid no federal income tax for 1976 compared for 230 such people in 1975 and 244 in 1974.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forty-five of the 49 reporting U.S. toll roads recorded fatality-free weekends over the four-day July 4 holiday period, the International Bridge, Tunnel and Turnpike Association said Saturday.

Single fatalities occurred on Florida's Airport Expressway.

New Hampshire's Spaulding Turnpike and the New York State Thruway, while a double fatality occurred on the Maine Turnpike.

The association said more than 19 million vehicles drove 498 million miles on toll roads during the holiday period.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A strike by this city's 580 firefighters was averted for the time being Saturday as negotiators for the city and firefighters agreed to return to the bargaining table Sunday. City negotiator Tom Forgy said there still is some basis for a possible settlement of the pay dispute.

The firefighters had voted to strike Friday after completing two days of balloting on the city's latest contract offer which calls for a 5.5 percent pay raise. They said last week that Mayor William Stansbury's 5.5 percent pay raise offer for all city employees shows a failure to bargain in good faith.

HONOLULU (AP) — A Pan American World Airways 747 made an unscheduled landing early Saturday at Honolulu International Airport after it developed engine trouble. No injuries were reported, and passengers were taken to hotels for the night.

Area more painful to shopper than meat county's fruit bin

WASHINGTON (AP) — If there's any section of the grocery store more painful for shoppers these days than the meat counter, it has to be the fruit bins.

And, while the Agriculture Department says the situation will get better this year for producers, there's no improvement predicted for consumers.

Growers have been getting record prices this year because of weather-reduced supplies and strong demand.

"With higher prices for apples and citrus and smaller soft-fruit production in prospect, grower, wholesale and retail fruit prices are expected to remain substantially higher this summer than a year ago," the department says in its current assessment of the fruit situation.

Only the prices of frozen strawberries are expected to slip to "moderate levels in view of the large stocks on hand," it said.

The cool, wet spring delayed the maturity of the fruit this spring in most areas.

In California, a mild winter and heavy rains trimmed the yields of most fruits, except citrus crops, to a point where the summer deciduous crop is now expected to be 12 percent smaller than either last season or 1976, that report said.

A separate report Thursday by the Crop Reporting Board gave preliminary figures on the 1977 crops coming into this growing season of more than 11.54 million tons of noncitrus fruits harvested with a value above $2.4 billion, compared to $2.03 billion for the 11.1 million tons of 1976.

Of the 1977 crops, 3.9 million tons went to the fresh market, about 2 million tons to canned products, 1.85 million tons to dried products, 835,700 tons to juices, 220,800 tons were frozen and 2.4 million tons went to wine, the board said.

For this year, the situation report said, smaller crops of apricots, cherries, peaches, pears and plums are expected in all major western producing areas.

At the same time, the 1977-78 citrus-fruit crop was estimated June 1 at 12.9 million metric tons, 7 percent below last season. Remaining supplies of the smaller crop of oranges are greater than a year ago, the report said, but smaller quantities of lemons and grapefruit were available for harvest.

The only thing tempering price gains for noncitrus fruits so far, the report said, is the adequate supply most major canners had April 1 because of last year's large pack, especially for peaches and pears.

But those two crops and plums are expected to be markedly down from 1977 and processor prices should be negotiated at "substantially higher" levels nonetheless, it said.

Consumer switching from frozen concentrated orange juice to other juices and other forms of orange juice, it added, has prevented canner list prices for that major element of the citrus market from going even higher than the steady $3.30-$3.35 per dozen six-ounce cans of this season.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department paid out more than $142.3 million to livestock producers in the first eight months of an emergency feed-subsidizing program for those hit by drought or other natural disaster.

The figures released Thursday for the October-May period also showed payments had not yet been made on 16,270 approved applications for the aid, covering more than 3.8 billion pounds of feed.

Payments had been made on 84,572 applications for almost 7.5 billion pounds.

Under the program, applicants are reimbursed for up to half the cost of feed purchased during the emergency period but not more than 2 cents a pound when the hay or other feed bought is converted to the equivalent value of grain. For example, approved applications through May 31 covered 11.34 billion pounds, which is equal to 202.5 million bushels of corn.

About $3.1 million, or almost one-fourth of the funds, had gone to Texas producers, with more than $10 million paid to those in California and Georgia.

No payments had gone to Kansas, the report showed, while one Connecticut farmer received $2,499 and one Kentuckian, $1,126.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Egg-producer organizations, associations and cooperatives that aren't now certified by the Agriculture Department are being urged to seek that recognition so they will be eligible to nominate candidates for the American Egg Board.

The terms of nine board members and their alternates, half of the board, will soon be over, the Agricultural Marketing Service said Thursday, and it wants to add to the list of 59 certified groups by Aug. 15 before seeking nominees for replacements.

TWO TECHNICIANS are reflected on the face of this 400-square foot heliostat — or sun-tracking mirror — at an experimental solar-heated electric power generating station in California. A massed field of such heliostats could provide enough super-heated steam to run a 100,000-kilowatt power plant, predict designers of the system. That could save about 600,000 barrels of fuel oil a year.

Peanuts and Carter slip in popularity

By SAM HARTZ
 WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is slipping in the popularity polls and peanuts aren't doing so well, either.

You remember peanuts. They were on all tongues in 1976 as dark horse Carter vaulted to the presidency amid a hail of peanut jokes, cartoons and hoopla that made goobers a national byword.

On Inauguration Day, a French restaurant near the White House sold peanut butter sandwiches for $10 with parsley or $7.50 without.

But now, the bloom is off the legume. Carter's peanut business is run by a trust. His mother, Miss Lillian, recently told some Denver school children she doesn't eat them. And at capital cocktail fests, they're down the table with the potato chips.

Peanuts are being doctored to taste like almonds, pecans and walnuts.

Economically, the industry was hurting even in 1976, after leveling-off meat prices caused consumers to switch back from protein-rich peanut butter to steaks and chops.

Meat prices are up again, but so is peanut butter. And other sticky problems have emerged to help cause a production drop of 29 million pounds in 1977, and the trend continues.

The problems:
 —More Americans are dining out, with few searching menus for peanut butter sandwiches.
 —Peanut butter is about 40 percent fat, causing calorie-conscious dieters to link it with chunkiness and middle-age spread.

America's longest legal fight-Indian rights

EDITOR'S NOTE — When the white man came to America, he claimed the land as his own, settling from time to time to give the Indians rights to certain land, certain water, certain minerals. Now, politically aware Indians are claiming those rights and whites in Maine, in Arizona, in Washington state, in South Dakota, are seeing their own interests undermined. It's up to the federal government to settle the hassles equitably.

By JAMES PHILLIPS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The dispute has been going on since the white man first stepped ashore and claimed land inhabited only by Indians.

It intensified into bloodshed as the white man moved across the country. From the Plains to the desert to the Pacific Northwest, tribal lands were seized, water rights appropriated, and restrictions placed on harvesting the natural bounty of an unspoiled continent. The continent was settled and the dispute died down, only to rise again in the social consciousness of the 20th century.

Indian claims to land and rights long ago expropriated by the white man represent America's longest continuous legal saga — and its most complex. Tribes are seeking land in the East, water in the West, fishing rights in the Upper Great Lakes and Puget Sound. And they want additional compensation for lands across the country that were sold decades or centuries ago.

So complex are the disputes that the Interior Department is concentrating on negotiating settlements in three cases — land claims to much of the state of Maine, water rights in central Arizona and fishing rights in the state of Washington. The assumption is that agreements there will provide models that will avoid long court battles in the many other cases across the country.

But there is another case pending that may set precedents.

ST. REGIS MOHAWK tribe members display a 1796 treaty at the New York state capitol in Albany in 1971. The treaty gives the tribe rights to certain lands in New York state and the tribe is bringing claim for 12,500 acres — one of many such Indian claims which form America's longest continuous legal saga.

The U.S. Court of Claims is now considering whether the United States in the 1870s unconstitutionally acquired more than 7 million acres of land from the Sioux in South Dakota's Black Hills. If the court rules in favor of the Indians, the government would owe them about $105 million in land costs and interest.

Some Indians feel that whatever the outcome, the disputes have been good for the tribe. "It has given rise to a new social consciousness — that Indians can challenge the world out there," says a Penobscot woman in Maine. "Even if the land case doesn't give them anything, it will give them consciousness of an ethnic identity."

Others think the court fights aren't enough. To dramatize their claims, about 500 Indians are marching from California to Washington to protest pieces of federal legislation that they say would strip them of the land, mineral and wildlife claims they say they hold under previous treaties.

Those bills are part of a backlash in Congress against what some members feel are outlandish claims by Indians. "We had a very favorable climate in Congress several years ago," says Forrest Girard, assistant secretary of Interior for Indian Affairs. "It's fairly hostile now."

The Maine dispute appears closest to settlement. It involves claims by the Penobscot and Passamaquoddy tribes to 12.5 million acres, two-thirds of the state.

The Indians' legal argument is similar to arguments in other eastern land cases. It rests on a 1790 law prohibiting individuals or local governments from taking or buying tribal land without the express approval of Congress. In the Maine case, there was no such Congressional approval.

Both tribes have voted overwhelmingly to accept an administration-negotiated settlement that would give them $25 million in federal funds and $1.7 million a year over 15 years from the state. Large landholders, primarily timber companies, would have to give the tribes 300,000 acres of choice timberland and an option to buy an additional 200,000 acres at the fair market value of about $112 an acre.

Neither the state nor the timber companies has agreed to the proposal, but both have left the door open for future negotiation. The Indians intend to press their suit if no agreement is reached. The Carter administration, meanwhile, is planning to introduce legislation asking for $25 million to partially reimburse small property owners who lose land.

Interior Department Solicitor Leo Krullitz says the legislation would end claims on almost all of Maine's inhabited acres. But what the settlement would mean to each of the 4,000 Indians is uncertain.

In addition to the Maine dispute, major suits east of the Mississippi have been brought by the Oneida Nation, which seeks 200,000 acres in central New York; the St. Regis Mohawk tribe, 12,500 acres in New York, including some land within the city limits of Fort Covington and Massena; the Cayuga tribe, 62,000 acres around Cayuga Lake in upstate New York; the Catawba tribe, 140,000 acres in South Carolina; Narragansett tribe, 3,200 acres in Rhode Island, and the Chittima tribe, 4,000 acres in Louisiana.

In the West, the dispute centers on water, precious and in short supply. The complex Arizona dispute involves Indians on five reservations and the city of Tucson, largest city in the world that's wholly dependent on ground water from wells. The Indians argue that the increasing use by Tucson of water from their reservations is drastically lowering their own water table.

The Washington fishing controversy stems from a decision by U.S. District Judge George Boldt, giving 22 tribes the right to half the harvestable catch of fish in rivers that empty into Puget Sound.

Commercial salmon fishermen maintain that the ruling, based on treaties signed with 22 tribes in the 1850s, deprived them of their rightful catch and threatens their livelihood. Sport anglers complain that Indians are catching and selling steelhead trout. They claim these should be caught only for sport.

A task force of federal and state officials and commercial fishermen has been meeting almost daily for a year in an attempt to resolve the impasse.

U.S. wins overall against Soviets

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — The United States, sparked by sprinters Evelyn Ashford and Steve Williams, won for only the third time overall at the 16th United States-Soviet Union Track and Field Meet Saturday, 190-177.

The U.S. men's team outscored their Russian counterparts 119-102, while the Soviet women edged the Americans 75-71.

It was the first overall American victory since 1969. Their other triumph was in 1964. The U.S. men have won 13 times, but the U.S. women have beaten the Soviets only once.

The U.S. men's team won seven events to five for the Soviet men Saturday while the women's team split 3-3 with the Russians.

The meet, which drew 17,500 Friday and 20,500 Saturday at the University of California's Edwards Stadium, saw five meet records broken and one tied, but no world marks.

In the final event, Essie Kelly of Spur, Texas, lost an early lead but regained it and beat Maria Kulchinova on the anchor leg in winning the 1,600-meter relay for the United States in 3:28.2, four-tenths of a second under the previous meet mark set by the Soviets in 1977.

The diminutive Ashford set a meet record and Williams, an alternate, won the 200-meter dashes, enabling the Americans to increase their lead from the 90-88 advantage they held after Friday's events.

Ashford, 21, of Los Angeles, grabbed a quick lead and cut .12 of a second off the meet mark with a time of 22.69. She finished ahead of the Soviet's Lyudmila Konratyeva.

Russia's Vladimir Yaschenko, world record holder in the high jump, cleared 7 feet, 5 1/4 inches in beating Franklin Jacobs of Fairleigh Dickinson University, who also went 7-5 1/4 but had more misses.

World record holder Mac Wilkins of Los Gatos, Calif., won the discus with a throw of 216-6, short of his best by 16 feet.

Williams, of San Diego, substituting for Clancy Edwards who suffered a pulled muscle Friday, made a late bid and overtook teammate Tony Darden in winning the 200 in 20.67.

The Soviets finished 1-2 in the men's hammer throw with tosses of 246-8 by Yuri Syedikh and 239-3 by Aleksei Seiridonov.

In the women's 3,000-meter race, Svetlana Ulmasova stayed close to Jan Merrill of New London, Conn., then overtook her on the fifth lap and went on to win in 8:42.6.

James Walker, 20, of Auburn University took a quick lead over the Soviets' Vasily Arkhitenko and held it in winning the 400-meter hurdles in 48.91.

In the 20-kilometer walk, Nikolai Polozov of the Soviet Union beat American Todd Scully of Blacksburg, Va. Russia's Nikolai Vinichenko was disqualified after finishing second.

Tie for GMO lead

By MIKE O'BRIEN
AP Sports Writer
MILWAUKEE (AP) — Bob Lunn, winless on the tour for more than six years, birdied five holes on the back nine and finished with a five-under-par 67 Saturday, tying Lee Elder for the third-round lead in the $150,000 Greater Milwaukee Open Golf Tournament.

Elder, the sole leader after each of the first two rounds, shot a second successive 70 to go 10-under, along with Lunn, at 206 after 54 holes on the 7,010-yard Tuckaway Country Club course.

Lee Trevino, enjoying one of the best seasons in his 21-victory career, was a stroke behind after a 68 Saturday. Tied with Trevino after the third round were Artie McNickle and John Mahaffey, who shot 67 and 69, respectively.

Rookie Dave Barr eagled two of the four par 5 holes, but bogeyed the last two holes for a 70. Barr was two strokes back at 208, along with Marty Fleckman, Tim Simpson, Homero Blancas and former U.S. Open winner Lou Graham.

First prize in this tournament — skipped by most of the top pros because of the British Open starting Wednesday — is $30,000.

Lunn, 33, won his sixth and last tournament at Atlanta in 1972. He earned just over $6,000 last year, but a 15th-place tie in the Canadian Open two weeks ago showed that his decline that coincided with a voluntary three-month weight loss of 70 pounds in 1970, might be over.

"I got all the way down to 170, and it scared me," Lunn said. "When you lose that much that fast it affects your nervous system, and it's been a long time. I don't know if I've had a better round this year — or in many years."

Win 1, lose 2

The Pampa All-Stars, contenders in the 13-year-old Babe Ruth League, recently completed play in the Dumas District Babe Ruth Tournament by winning one out of three games.

The All-Stars defeated the Eastern Panhandle 11-4 July 3. On Independence Day they lost to Top O' Texas, 8-6. The following day the All-Stars were defeated 8-7 by the Panhandle Okies.

Borg's triumph "awesome"

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — It was a monumental victory for Sweden's Bjorn Borg — "a dream I never think possible," he said — but there was no remorse for the battered, almost dazed Jimmy Connors.

"Disappointment? Who said I'm disappointed?" the scrappy, never-say-die Connors snapped after being virtually blown off Wimbledon's center court 6-2, 6-2, 6-3 Saturday.

"It is history now. I don't intend to sit around and brood. In two weeks I'll be playing again and, as for Borg, I may follow him to the end of the earth."

The normally phlegmatic Borg, only 22 but already firmly established as the No. 1 player in the world, could not hide his delight at becoming the first player since England's Fred Perry in the 1930s to string a necklace of three Wimbledon titles.

"At the start of this year, there is no way I can dream that I will win the Italian, French and the Wimbledon championships," he said. "Now the Grand Slam — it does not seem so far out of reach."

"I hope to get in great shape for the U.S. Open (in late August, early September). The pressure there will not be as great as here. If I win, I then would go to Australia in December."

Only two men — Don Budge in 1938 and Rod Laver in 1962 and 1969 — have made a sweep of the Australian, French, Wimbledon and U.S. titles in a single year, and now Borg has a leg up on two of the jewels.

A schedule change puts the Australian championships this year in December instead of the following January, as has been traditional.

Borg's triumph over Connors was awesome.

The bearded, long-haired Swede served thunderbolts and unleashed such a dazzling, whirlwind attack that the Wimbledon center court gallery was left in a state of shock — and Connors, his victim, was little short of that state.

"I never got into the match," the 25-year-old American said. "It wasn't exactly that I was in a daze. I never felt at any time I put pressure on him."

"Physically, I felt all right. I thought I hit the ball well. I hit it solid. But everything was going for him. He had the momentum. Mentally, I was never in it."

Fred Perry, the English stylist who last won three Wimbledon titles in succession back in the mid-1930s, said Borg's power made a travesty of what every other thought would be a tough, hard-played match.

"He's a hell of a player," Perry said of Borg. "He has to be ranked with the greats."

The young Swede's performance was crushing and almost flawless.

"I was never scared when Jimmy was serving," Bjorn said afterward. "I feel I can break him any time. When I win the first set, I feel very confident."

Oilers have more depth

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers Coach Bum Phillips says the shorter National Football League training camps and longer regular seasons will hurt the weak teams and help the strong ones.

"And he doesn't think the Oilers will be hurting."

"We are no longer one of the have-nots," Phillips said as he prepared to greet his rookie corps on the Angelo State University campus. Houston's veterans report July 22. "I don't know if we're 'haves' yet but we have more depth this year than ever before."

"The weaker teams need more time to try players out to see what they can do. The stronger teams need to make only minor adjustments." The NFL has gone from six exhibitions and 14 regular-season games to four exhibitions and 16 regular-season games.

Running back Earl Campbell, who won the Heisman Trophy after leading Texas to the Cotton Bowl last year and was Houston's No. 1 draft choice, inevitably will be compared to fellow running back Tony Dorsett of the Dallas Cowboys, who won the Heisman and was the No. 1 pick in the NFL draft in 1977.

Offer accepted

DALLAS (AP) — Todd Christensen, the former Brigham Young University running back who was the Dallas Cowboys' No. 2 draft pick, agreed to terms of a multi-year contract Saturday, Cowboy officials said.

A Cowboy spokesman said Christensen acknowledged through his agent that he would accept the Dallas offer and would report Sunday to the Cowboys' training camp in Thousand Oaks, Calif.

Howard Baker In The Open

by John F. McManus
Belmont, Massachusetts — A sleeper is a person who travels under false pretenses. In politics, he carefully hides his real goals and ambitions while cultivating popular favor. He lives a lie, and his whole existence is a charade. What he wants least of all is to be forced to tip his hand.

The people of the United States are becoming more conservative every day. In many areas of this nation, scalding attacks on big government and hawkish rhetoric about foreign policy failures are essential ingredients in a successful campaign. Especially is this true in the South where practically everyone mouths the conservative line. Jimmy Carter's promise to bring new faces and new ideas to Washington supplies the classic example.

Rockefeller's Tennessee
Another Southerner fashioned from the sleeper mold is Senator Howard Baker (R-Tenn.). His non-publicized membership in both of David Rockefeller's New York-based insider groups — the Council on Foreign Relations and the Trilateral Commission — is proof enough to careful observers that he is a sleeper. But connections such as these mean little to most Americans. Even fewer take the time to scrutinize the voting records of politicians like Baker, another good way to unmask a faker.

Every once in a while, however, an issue receives so much attention that it helps to force a sleeper into the open. The Panama Canal treaty vote turned out to be so close that some Senators were forced to unmask themselves. One who found himself in that fix, of course, was Howard Baker. At one point during the treaty deliberations, he admitted that he had received 1,400 messages against the giveaway and only eight for it.

Yet, Howard Baker turned out to be the prime mover in the Senate for the delivery of the most strategic waterway on earth to Panama's Reds. As Senate Republican leader, he could have led the opposition, but he certainly did not. His role in this incredible betrayal of America's interests has the folks in Tennessee pretty upset. And, because the Baker name is frequently mentioned by presidential king-makers, Americans from coast to coast are taking a harder look at the ambitious Senator.

Compounding the Crime
When dictator Torrijos boldly announced the day following the Senate vote that he had planned to destroy the Canal if the Senate had rejected the treaty, Howard Baker stated that, had he known of such plans, he "might have voted differently." That admission, as columnist Charley Reese put it, makes him either a fool or a barefaced liar.

It is no secret that American military forces have been notified of the Torrijos plans by our intelligence people a full week before the vote. President Carter obviously knew of such plans, therefore, and he either kept them from the Senators, which means he played Baker and the pro-treaty Senators for fools, or he told them, which makes Baker and others colossal liars.

So, Howard Baker is finally out in the open — another closet liberal, another Rockefeller internationalist.

Enter Henry Kissinger
There's more to this story, too, if you need more convincing. Remember Henry Kissinger? He's the man who put the final nails in the coffins of Cambodia, Laos, and Vietnam; who led the disgraceful parade to the murderous Red Chinese, who went to Panama in 1974 to begin the Canal sellout, who, as a leader of the Council on Foreign Relations and the Trilateral Commission, is another Rockefeller insider, and who never speaks at political fund-raising dinners. On March 27, Kissinger broke his long-standing rule when he spoke at a $250-a-plate dinner in Nashville for Howard Baker. Does anyone seriously believe that Henry Kissinger hasn't got Howard Baker figured out?

Borg wins third Wimbledon title

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Bjorn Borg destroyed Jimmy Connors 6-2, 6-2, 6-3 in a one-sided Wimbledon final Saturday and won the world's most coveted tennis title for the first time in a row — the first man to achieve the feat since Fred Perry did it in 1936.

The amazing 22-year-old Swedish star collared Connors' service, which was below par, and hit a stream of winners with his double-grip backhand. He finished the American off in 1 hour 47 minutes.

It was a different story from last year's final, when the two men battled for more than three hours and Borg won in five closely contested sets.

Perry, now 69 and a British radio commentator, went straight on to the center court at the end of the match and shook Borg's hand.

The graying Englishman said later: "Borg is one of the all-time greats. Think of him in the same breath as Bill Tilden, Don Budge, Pancho Gonzales, Jack Kramer and Rod Laver."

Borg joins Martina Navratilova among this year's champions. In her first final here, she beat two-time champion Chris Evert 2-6, 6-4, 7-5 Friday. She said her victory was for Czechoslovakia, the land she left to seek asylum in the United States nearly three years ago.

Among the crowd of 14,000 Saturday were some fans who had slept four cold, wet nights on the sidewalks outside the All-England club, queuing for standing places at the match.

Some observers had predicted the men's final would be one of the matches of the century; but it wasn't. Connors could not get his first service working, while Borg hit the ball with increasing power and confidence as the duel went on.

"It was one of the best matches I have ever played," Borg said.

Serving statistics told the basic story of the match. Borg served five aces and 19 outright winners. Connors hit no aces and only six service winners.

On the soft grass court, where the ball was apt to bounce low and die, Borg also made prolific use of a sliced backhand which caused Connors all kinds of trouble.

"That is a shot I normally don't use much in matches," Borg said. "But I aimed one or two at Connors' forehand, and the ball kept low and he was in difficulty. So I kept on making the same stroke."

Connors won the first two games and then Borg stacked up six in a row. In the second set Borg broke service for a 2-1 lead, but Connors, lobbing and volleying well, led 4-0 against service in the next game.

"That was probably the most important game of the whole match," Borg said. "I knew that if he won that game it might put him back in contention, so I was determined not to let him win it."

Borg's backhand brought him out of the temporary trouble, and he won the game and raced on towards his target. Whenever Connors threatened to take control, Borg produced rocket-like cross-court backhands and stopped him.

From 2-3, Borg won four straight games to close out the match.

The Swede said his next goal is the U.S. Open title at Flushing Meadow, N.Y., in late August. And he hopes to become the third man in history to do the Grand Slam. He has already won the French title, and now needs the U.S. and Australian crowns.

"I'm now going for the Grand Slam," Borg said. "I have to do that."

When Don Budge and Rod Laver won Grand Slams the Australian championships constituted the first leg. Now the Australian Open has been moved to late December, so Borg could technically claim the Grand Slam by winning all four titles in 1978.

In the mixed doubles final, Billie Jean King missed her third and last chance this year to win a record 20th Wimbledon title when she and Ray Ruffels lost to McMillan and Betty Stove of the Netherlands, 6-2, 6-2.

Beard may go

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Bjorn Borg was to shave off his stubby beard and buy Fred Perry dinner to celebrate his victory over Jimmy Connors Saturday for the Wimbledon men's tennis championship — his third in a row.

"We made the agreement after Bjorn won at Paris," said Perry, the last man to win three successive Wimbledon titles. "I told him if he matched my record at Wimbledon he'd have to shave off his beard and we'd have dinner together."

"He agreed. I stipulated it would have to be a private affair with no Lennart Bergelin (Borg's coach) or Mariana Simionescu (his fiancée)."

"Bjorn has to run off to play Davis Cup matches and I have to travel myself. So maybe it'll be at next year's Wimbledon."

Perry, an Englishman, called Borg "one hell of a tennis player" and said he should be bracketed with such greats as Bill Tilden, Don Budge, Pancho Gonzales, Jack Kramer and Rod Laver.

Johns gets NL pitching spot

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Tommy John, the man with the rebuilt pitching arm, makes his return to the All-Star game Tuesday on the National League side, a spot he thought he'd earned in 1974 before misfortune struck.

John pitched for the American League in 1968 when the Nationals won 1-0 and in 1972 was traded by the Chicago White Sox to the Los Angeles Dodgers.

So he now pitches for the NL, which has won 19 of the last 23 All-Star games and 14 of the last 15.

In 1974, Tommy was 13-3 by midseason with the Dodgers but was bypassed by Yogi Berra, the manager of the NL All-Star team. On the following July 17, John ruptured a ligament in his pitching elbow and needed unusual surgery for the repair. Tendons from his right arm were surgically transferred to the left elbow.

He missed the rest of 1974 and all of 1975.

In 1976 John was 10-10 and last year posted 20-7, but even so wasn't selected for the National League All-Stars. This time Tommy Lasorda, skipper of the NL champion Dodgers of 1977, selected the 35-year-old left-hander although he was only 9-6 this campaign.

"Tommy's been pitching in tough luck," commented Lasorda whose Dodger club won the pennant in his rookie managerial season with the big help from the southpaw. He's been much better than his record indicates.

An appreciative pitcher commented, "It's very meaningful. Very few players have made it

Scott competes in Albuquerque

Scott Barrett of Pampa will be among 313 Junior golfers competing in the 61st Western Junior Golf Championship July 11-15 at the University of New Mexico Golf Course in Albuquerque.

The event will begin with two days of qualifying at both the University Course and the Arroyo Eel Oso Municipal Course in Albuquerque. The low 64 after 36 holes will proceed to match play on the University Course July 13-15, after which the new Western Junior Champion will be crowned.

Amateurs tee off Monday

DALLAS (AP) — Collegiate stars Lindy Miller and Doug Clarke are expected to give Brook Hollow Golf Club its stiffest test in the 76th Trans-Mississippi golf championship, which draws 400 of the nation's best amateurs here this week.

The course is fairly short, at 6,550 yards, but its fairways are narrow, its bent-grass greens small and the roughs devastating. To prepare for the Trans-Miss, the Bermuda grass in the rough has been allowed to grow to 2 1/4 inches tall instead of the customary 1 inch.

"This is a thinking man's course. The players will have to be cautious and hit the ball straight. If they don't, they can get 9s and 10s very easily. You can get in jail!" said Pat Buell, a Trans-Miss director and a member of the plush Brook Hollow club.

One-hundred foursomes tee off at 7 a.m. Monday — half at Brook Hollow and half at Las Colinas Country Club in nearby Irving, Texas — in two days of medal play to select the low 64 qualifiers.

The best 64 switch to 18-hole match play Wednesday at Brook Hollow. The 32 who survive Wednesday will advance to Thursday's play. The 16 who emerge from that will be cut to eight and then to four in a double round Friday and then to two finalists Saturday.

A 36-hole head-to-head battle Sunday will decide the 1978 Trans-Miss championship.

Miller, one of the longest hitters in the field, is considered the best bet in the tournament. The Oklahoma State University golfer was the low amateur in the Master's this year and also was low amateur in the 1977 U.S. Open.

Clarke, top member of Stanford's golf team, won the Trans-Miss year before last when it was played at Spyglass Golf Course in Pebble Beach, Calif. He was only 17 at the time and edged Dr. Ed Updegraff 2-up.

The field has several entrants who have won titles in state or regional amateur tournaments.

Taxidermy a backwoods art

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Like woodcarving, taxidermy requires a steady hand, long hours and years of practice. It's Jim Sharber's hobby and he says that it, like whittling, is a backwoods art on the wane.

"Growing up on a farm, there weren't a lot of social things to do," said Sharber, a state environmental planner. "I started reading books and began with pigeons. It's been a satisfying hobby ever since."

It only costs about $10 to get started, Sharber said, adding that the real investment is in

Football rated as most hazardous sport

WASHINGTON (AP) — Football remains the most hazardous organized sport, with baseball second, according to the new danger list compiled by the National Injury Information Clearinghouse.

The annual report on the hazards of consumer products and activities ranks football activity, equipment and apparel as third on the overall danger list. As usual, bicycles ranked No. 1 as items likely to be associated with injuries. Stairs were second.

Football's No. 3 ranking for fiscal 1977 was the same as in the previous year although the "hazard index" for the sport dropped slightly, from 13.766 to 13.682.

The index numbers, used only to compare one product with another, are based on both the number of injuries reported to hospital emergency rooms and the severity of those injuries. Extra weight is given for injuries to people under the age of 15.

The hazard rating for bicycles was 40.608 and that for stairs, 23.506.

Baseball activity and equipment maintained its fourth-place ranking on the hazard list — second among sports — in 1977, with an index of 12.908, up slightly from 11.960 the previous year.

In the 1977 ranking, basketball, the third most dangerous sport, went from 11th to 12th place on the list, although its hazard index rose from 7.140 to 7.488.

Although not a team effort — usually — fishing was the next sport to appear on the list, ranking 29th with an index of 2.930. For the previous year, fishing had been 28th.

Snow skiing ranked 40th on this year's list with an index of 2.117, down from a ranking of 37th. And gymnastics was rated 44th with a 1.902 danger index, down from 41st.

Other sports or sporting equipment in order of appearance on the hazard list, and the index ratings, were:

Ice skates, 1.713; wrestling, 1.701; soccer, 1.566; tennis and badminton, 1.433; ice and field hockey, 1.433; volleyball, 1.214; golf, 1.203; horseback riding, 1.032; trampolines, 0.929;

Water skiing and surfing, 0.768; exercise and weight equipment, 0.584; track and field, 0.442; bleachers, 0.429; bowling, 0.292; darts, 0.252; camping, 0.204; boxing, 0.135; Lacrosse, 0.128; hang gliding, 0.107; handball, 0.086; archery, 0.081; croquet, 0.060; kung-fu and related activity, 0.044; sky diving, 0.042; mountain climbing equipment, 0.029.

patience and time.

"I think it was a more popular hobby at one time," he said. "But it appears we live in a faster-paced life and there's not a long stretch of time between things we have to do and things we want to do. And there aren't many stopping places once you get started."

Mounting a wood duck takes Sharber about eight hours, non-stop.

The skin is removed intact. Feathers are washed with a light detergent for separation. Legs and tail are cut and wings clipped, remaining with the skin, which is worked down the body. The skull is detached.

"What you have is the body of the bird with the appendages detached. You can still cook the meat and corn meal absorbs the blood and juices," Sharber said. "But if you want the mount to last, you have to remove all the fatty tissue from the skin."

Muscles are cut from the legs and tail, and skin is washed in borax to protect it from bugs.

Then, from drawings or study of the carcass, Sharber molds an artificial body with a fiberglass material. Muscles are replaced with wax and clays, the head is cleaned out and glass eyes are inserted. Wires are run along the wing bones in the skin, through the legs and in the neck. The neck wire is wrapped in cotton and the body incision is sewn up.

"What you have looks like a big mess," he said. "You have to preen the feathers with forceps and shape the bird until you get it in a natural pose. That's what takes all the time."

Sharber has been mounting small game and waterfowl for more than 20 years, but success came with time.

Be prepared, kids

NEW YORK (AP) — For a successful experience at summer camp, make sure that your child's clothing and equipment will meet his or her needs, suggests the Fiber Information Center.

To make sure that the camper will follow the Scout motto and "Be Prepared" with supplies that will be a source of pleasure rather than frustration, the center offers some basic rules.

—Some camps, such as the Scouts, specify a maximum size for a camp trunk or locker. The wise parent packs accordingly.

—Many camps expect you to provide sheets, blankets and towels, so give your child an ample supply. Two lightweight blankets are more versatile than one heavy one, for piling up on cold, damp nights or being comfortable on warmer ones.

—Proper footwear is important. For most camping experiences sneakers are a must. For those inevitable rainy days, lace-up moccasins with sturdy composite soles will give more protection. Open sandals, which do not protect feet against sharp objects nor provide enough support for long hikes, have no place at rugged campsites. Do include a pair of slippers or rubber thongs, since small feet tend to attract splinters.

—Adequate rain gear is vital. Best of all is a hooded poncho made of a sturdy waterproof material that allows for easy movement. Lightweight rubber or plastic boots that can slip over sneakers also provide excellent protection against muddy ground, can be quickly rinsed off and allow junior pioneers to puddle-slosh to their hearts' content.

—Find out beforehand about camp laundry facilities. Camps where a child will stay for the entire summer usually send laundry to a commercial shop or provide facilities for "drop off" service at the camp site. For short stays, most camps have simple facilities, perhaps only a sink or washbasin.

—Keep in mind that your child's clothing will not receive the same pampering you give it at home. The Fiber Information Center suggests that everything you pack should be made of reliably durable, easy-care fabrics that can withstand abuse from both the camper and a laundry that's geared to deal with duffel bags and dirty clothes.

—For chilly weather, provide your youngster with a lightweight jacket and several sweaters and sweatshirts. Garments containing man-made fibers will dry quickly and not be damaged if caught in a downpour.

—With overnight sleepouts an essential part of camping, your choice of a sleeping bag is important. A polyester fiber-filled bag will be lightweight, yet warm.

—Pack the youngster a surprise or two. In a small knapsack or backpack, include both toiletries and a few unexpected treats — a favorite scented soap, a new board game — plus necessities such as comb and brush, shampoo, collapsible cup, insect repellent and a reliable flashlight.

SUNDAY

CUTE QUARRY

Trish Van Devere guest-stars as a ruthless television network executive who is a suspect in the slaying of her lover-boss in "Make Me a Perfect Murder," a "Columbo" episode being repeated on "The Big Event," Sunday, July 9 on NBC.

Van Devere had some trouble earlier in her career to get recognized as an actress in her own right, and not simply as the wife of actor George C. Scott. Now with numerous roles in TV, films and in the theatre, she has earned her stripes, and wears them quite well.

Also starring are George Chakiris as Bernardo, the leader of the Sharks; Russ Tamblyn as Riff, the leader of the Jets, and Rita Moreno as Chakiris's girlfriend. Both Moreno and Chakiris won Oscars for their performances.

TV Star Scene

Perpetually bloodthirsty Dracula is proving half a dozen times over this year that a scary legend is hard to kill off. The Bela Lugosi movie re-runs from New York talk show host Bill Boggus. (Bill, remember, got an exclusive with Frank Sinatra back when Ole Blue Eyes froze out all others would-be inquisitors.)

Anyhow, Alex flew the ocean for an in-person look at a sort of super roller coaster called The Loch Ness Monster down in the Busch Gardens Theme Park in Williamsburg, Va. The namesake ride is no look-alike. It's yellow. Alex says the real Nessie is grey, lives in grey water and is more apt to appear on grey days.

It happens just about every year: the re-discovery of talented Stockard Channing. She held her own co-starring as a madcap heiress in "The Fortune," Mike Nichols' unsuccessful film starring Warren Beatty and Jack Nicholson, she starred as a madcap murderess in an ABC-TV movie ... but it may be her current vehicle, "Grease," with John Travolta and Olivia Newton-John that makes the big difference that leads to a television series. Discussion is already underway.

Does art follow life? Does life follow art? Maybe it's either ... or neither. Anyhow, the television script writers were "acting affirmatively" and consistently coming up with prestigious careers for female characters. A series proposed for the future would cast Brenda Vaccaro as a brain surgeon. Women lawyers will be an abundant breed with Barbara Parkins leading the list as a specialist in malpractice cases in the mini-series, "The Critical List." It's due on NBC in the fall.

The "Dain Curse" mini-series is turning into such a blessing for Nancy Addison that friends fear she may permanently exit the ABC soap, "Ryan's Hope." Holding her own as the drug-addicted Gabrielle in scene after scene with superstar James Coburn has brought Nancy some movie offers, say her chums ... but so far she hasn't signed anything with anybody.

Alex Campbell, the darlin' 76-year-old Scotsman who is an authority on the Loch Ness Monster (first saw the critter of critters in 1934) did a Frank Sin-

TV Dialogue

WONDER-FUL — I've written about 20 times with my question — I hope this one will get through. Could you please tell me the address of Lynda Carter? Could you also tell me how the ratings are going for "Wonder Woman," and if she'll be back next year? Lynda Carter fan, Fargo, N.D.

Time flies, especially in the never-never world of TV. The series, based on James Thurber's work, aired briefly in 1969. And the daughter was played by Lisa Gerritsen, who grew up and became the daughter of Cloris Leachman, first on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," then on "Phyllis."

Americans about to receive relief for major headache of inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans are about to get a dose of aspirin for their biggest headache of the year — inflation.

According to the administration, the aspirin will be a sharp slowdown in food price increases, which soared at an annual rate of 18.1 percent in the first five months of this year. Result: a cooling down of the inflationary fires in the second half of 1978.

Charles Schultze, chairman of President Carter's Council of Economic Advisers, says he expects the inflation rate to brake to about 5 percent for the rest of the year, after climbing at an annual rate of 10.2 percent from January to May.

Economists are getting a better view of the inflation outlook with the release today of wholesale price figures for June, which usually are a harbinger of retail prices in coming months. Unemployment figures for June also are due.

Schultze had some good news on this point, too. The government now expects unemployment, currently running at 6.1 percent, to drop to an average of 5.9 percent in the final three months of 1978 and to 5.6 percent next year. Both averages are lower than government forecasts published in January.

Unemployment had been as high as 9.1 percent in May 1975 before dropping to as low as 6 percent in April.

At a news conference Thursday, Schultze said government's latest estimate of 7.2 percent as the expected inflation rate for 1978 is based on the expectation that inflation will run at a rate of 5 percent from May to December.

If the 7.2 percent forecast holds true, it would be the worst inflation since 1974, when prices rose 12.2 percent.

The administration in January had predicted growth in economic output for 1978 of about 4.7 percent but now expects it to be closer to 4 percent, Schultze said. That is important because it takes an economic growth rate of more than 4 percent to improve the job picture.

"What's happened is that the rate of unemployment has fallen significantly more than we had expected. Similarly inflation is higher than we had expected," he said. Growth that is too rapid can be inflationary, he said.

"In light of his, we think the lower 4 percent rate is desirable," Schultze said. "It means economic recovery but at a more moderate pace."

The Congressional Budget Office reported, meanwhile, that the rippling effect of the Proposition 13 decision by California voters in rolling back property taxes could produce an actual reduction in the national cost of living by next year.

In a study conducted at the request of Rep. Robert N. Giaimo, D-Conn., chairman of the Hous Budget Committee, the budget office said it expects a reduction in the inflation rate of 0.2 percentage points in 1979 and 0.4 percentage points in 1980.

Unemployment rate shows dramatic decline in June

WASHINGTON (AP) — The unemployment rate dropped dramatically from 6.1 percent to 5.7 percent of the nation's workforce in June, the lowest rate in nearly four years, the Labor Department said today.

Teen-agers accounted for about half of the 400,000 decline in the number of unemployed persons during June, as their jobless rate dropped from 16.5 percent to 14.2 percent.

Nearly all of this gain was among white teen-agers, the department said.

A booming economy produced 710,000 new jobs last month, the biggest increase since 800,000 positions were created in November 1977.

rate if they continue throughout the year.

Wholesale prices for food rose 1.1 percent in June, a sharp jump from the 0.5 percent gain the month before.

The 5.7 percent jobless rate last month marked the first time that unemployment has fallen below the 6 percent barrier since October 1974, when it was 5.9 percent. And the June level was the lowest since the 5.4 percent rate in August 1974.

Unemployment peaked at 9.1 percent in May 1975 before dropping to 7.1 percent in April and 6.1 percent in February of this year.

The Labor Department said the unemployment rate among black teen-agers, a major concern to the Carter administration, declined only slightly, from 38.4 percent to 37.1 percent.

A department analyst, Jack Bregger, said much of the gain for white teen-agers last month could be attributed to the opening up of summer jobs.

The unemployment rate for adult men dropped from 4.2 percent to 3.9 percent in June, while joblessness among adult women declined from 6.3 percent to 6.1 percent.

Blacks and other minorities had slightly better luck finding jobs as their unemployment rate dipped from 12.3 percent to 11.9 percent.

The biggest gain in June was in the construction industry, where 85,000 jobs were created. In the past year, about 500,000 persons have found new building jobs, but most economists expect the housing boom to level off later in the year.

Other industries enlarging their payrolls were state and local government, service industries, retail stores and finance, insurance and real estate companies.

However, factories did little new hiring after employing 645,000 new workers over the past year, the department said.

Meanwhile, the Labor Department reported that rising food costs again contributed to a 0.7 percent increase in wholesale prices last month, the same increase as in May. The rises were smaller than during last winter, but could still keep inflation going at an 8.4 percent

No room at inn for lawmakers

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas legislators summoned to Austin for a special session beginning Monday have a problem.

There may not be room at the inn.

More than 4,200 nurses and 100 members of the Texas Mental Health Association are expected next week in addition to the several hundred officials and contractors who normally come to Austin the second week of the month for highway department bid lettings.

"It's tight," said Chamber of Commerce executive director Vic Mathias. "Any time you have 4,200 people come to town, there just isn't any hotel space left."

The timing of the special session could not have been worse for the hotel business in Austin," said John Bogardus, manager of the Driskill Hotel.

TRAFFIC DEATHS

WASHINGTON (AP) — A total of 49,200 persons died in traffic accidents in the United States in 1977, an increase of 2,500 over 1976, according to the Highway Users Federation.

In addition, the federation says, "the number of deaths per mile driven also edged upward, reversing an historic downward trend in the fatality rate, measured in deaths per 100 million miles driven. The death rate increased from 3.31 fatalities in 1976 to 3.36 in 1977."

Rodeo, Pony Show, dance are traditions

The "Top O' Texas Rodeo, Horse Show, and Fair Association" was officially chartered under the laws of the State of Texas on July 20, 1945. Officers for that first year were Wade Thomasson, president; Crawford Atkinson, vice-president; Floyd Imel, treasurer; and E.O. (Red)

Wedgeworth, secretary (a post he held until his retirement this year).

The show started on a shoestring, with the directors signing a note for $3,000. The first performances were held August 17-19, 1945, and for every year except two, a show has been held.

The Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association joined the show in 1962. Tragedy struck in May 1970 when a tornado hit the rodeo arena, destroying part of the stands on the east side. It was decided not to hold a performance that year or the next, when an outbreak of Venezuelan Equine Encephalomyelitis quarantined the Panhandle livestock. The show resumed in 1972. The current president is Tom Coffee.

The Kid Pony Show was started the same year as the main show, to give younger cowboys and cowgirls a chance to develop their rodeo skills. This year a new attraction was added — a Pony Express Tournament.

The annual dance is another rodeo tradition. It began in 1945 with music by the Amarillo Playboys.

Rodeo events — what they are

King of rodeo

Larry Mahan is an all-around rodeo cowboy who is referred to as the "King of rodeo." He says, "I think there are two things that run my life: competing and winning. There is no such thing for me as just going from one day to the next." In addition to competing in the Top o' Texas Rodeo, he and his band will provide entertainment.

Mahan a rodeo success story

Larry Mahan is known as one of the most winning cowboys around. He has captured six All-Around World Champion Cowboy titles, and stays in contact with the world of rodeo by performing in the arena and singing about the life of a cowboy.

Mahan decided to change his life after he had participated in over twelve hundred rodeos, ridden over 6,000 animals and earned over half a million dollars during a ten year career.

In the summer of 1976 Warner Bros. released Mahan's first record album, "King of the Rodeo." Mahan now has his own band and entertains at rodeos, fairs and night spots.

Billy Bob Harris and Randy Spears, friends of Mahan, have joined him in forming Larry Mahan Productions, which operates out of Dallas. The company coordinates Mahan's schedule and engagements.

The products division of the firm markets Mahan's recordings and posters to western stores.

Among his other achievements Mahan has written a book called, "Fundamentals of Rodeo Riding, A Mental and Physical Approach to Success." Mahan also teaches classes for those starting out in the business.

Part of his financial success can be attributed to the Larry Mahan Boot Collection, El Paso and the Larry Mahan Fashions, Denver.

He starred in the film "The Great American Cowboy," and was the guest of honor at the U. S. Embassy in Moscow in 1975 where the film was presented.

He also co-starred in two motion pictures, "Six Pack Annie," and "Mackintosh & T. J." Mahan has also guest starred in television movies, sports presentations and variety talk shows.

What does the future hold for Mahan? It seems to be even brighter. Mahan looks at his varied interests as an opportunity to introduce the world of rodeo to more people through his singing throughout the country.

"I'm really happy to tie into the world of singing and entertaining," Mahan said recently. "Many of the songs which I sing are tied to the life and travels of the rodeo cowboy and his freedom and independence."

Success has not changed Mahan's attitude or his warm, outgoing personality. Mahan is accustomed to life as a balancing act, as a matter of knowing his own limits, neither falling below nor reaching too far beyond the maximum of a perfect performance.

home. This following event marked history in the sport of rodeo. The cowboys went on strike for higher prize money. They were successful and formed an organization called the Cowboy's Turtle Association, so named, according to one hand, "because we were slow as turtles doin' somethin' like this."

The CTA reorganized and was renamed the Rodeo Cowboys Association in 1945. In 1975 it changed its name to the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association. Last year the PRCA paid a record $6.9 million in prize money.

"Rodeo is gaining in popularity because people are finding out that it's one of the best forms of family entertainment in the nation," said Dale Smith, president of the PRCA, and a contestant and Professional and local contestants will have an opportunity to compete in a variety of events at the Top O' Texas Rodeo.

Bareback bronc riding is one of the events that the cowboys will be competing in. Bareback bronc riding is an event for cowboys with strong arms and a keen sense of balance. They use one hand to hold onto the "riggin'", and the other must remain free from the bronc and the other equipment. The riggin' is a piece of leather that fits over the horses withers.

When the horses leave the chute they are free to jump, kick, and even spin. The cowboy tries to lean back and spur the animal along the neck and shoulders. Bronc riding is an eight second event. In these short eight seconds the cowboy must demonstrate his ability to ride.

Two judges position themselves on each side of the arena to see how well the cowboy rides, and how well the animal bucks. Both the animal and the rider are worth 25 points apiece, 50 points per judge. Generally a rider that scores in the seventies and eighties is considered good.

Saddle bronc riding is another type of event that will be seen at the rodeo. It requires a special saddle that must conform to the standards set by the PRCA.

Saddle bronc riding is considered the cornerstone of rodeo and usually you can assume that men who compete well in this event, have broke quite a few colts. This is an event that requires balance and timing rather than strength. A cowboy spurs the animal from the neck to the back of the saddle. Cowboys will lose points by "getting out of shape," touching the animal with a free hand or being bucked off before the eight second whistle blows. They can also be disqualified if they let one foot slip out of the stirrup.

Another bucking event is the bull riding. This event is often considered the most exciting and the most dangerous. It is scored the same way as bareback and saddle bronc riding, except that a cowboy doesn't lose points by not spurring. All they have to do is hang on for eight seconds — and that's enough.

There are two timed events that the cowboys will have a chance to participate in. The object of both is simple — to get the fastest time and win the first place money. The events are calf roping and steer wrestling.

The cowboy will be disqualified if he misses the calf, but he does have a chance to throw a second rope if he has it with him. Disqualification will also come if the calf comes untied within six seconds after the roper remounts. A ten second penalty is added if the cowboy starts out of the box too soon and breaks a barrier.

The horse also plays a big part in the success or failure of a good steer wrestler. The horse is trained to run up next to the steer after both have been released from the box. This enables the cowboy to make the jump from the horse to the steer, pulling the steer to the ground.

Another event that will be seen at the rodeo is barrel racing. This event is known as the womens sport, and is open to women only. This time the cowgirl teams up with a well trained horse, and competes against the other cowgirls in turning in the top time. The object of the event is to run a cloverleaf barrel pattern in the fastest time possible without knocking over a barrel. If the cowgirl turns in a time around seventeen seconds, she's doing good.

A new event has been added to this years rodeo. This year cowboys will have a chance to compete in the wild cow milking contest.

This is a team event that consists of three members, each with his own specific task. One member of the team will rope the cow, a second will hold the cow and the third will do the milking.

In this event there are a variety of rules that must apply, and all must be observed within the two minute time limit.

There is a $30 entry fee that will be refunded in the jackpot, with an additional purse of $600. Entries are being taken at the rodeo office.

Will Rogers was first rodeo clown

The rodeo clown has been aptly described as "the protector of the cowboy, the entertainer of the crowd." Rodeo clowns come in all shapes and sizes and have to be agile, quick, fearless and have an encyclopedic knowledge of bulls.

Rodeo clowns have been known as far back as 1904 when Will Rogers appeared at the St. Louis World's Fair as a rodeo clown. Today they are contract members of the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association, and are hired by stock contractors and rodeo committees. The clowns are paid a salary, but they pay their own expenses. They criss-cross the country by truck and trailer rather than plane because of the props they carry.

There are basically two types of clowns, the bullfighter and the barrelman. Both have serious jobs to do with a little flair of comedy thrown in.

Bullfighting clowns are out in the arena to distract unpredictable bulls from downfallen cowboys. (Pick-up men on horses can't be used around the ill-tempered animals.) The bullfighter will get down on his knees, pawing the ground like an angry toro while staring the beast in the face. He will grab the bull by the tail or the horns, or even jump over him. The clown may play a game of ring-toss, using an oversized inertube as his ring and the horns and head as he target.

Sometimes bull riders get "hung up" — their hands become caught in the rope and they are dragged helplessly; virtually a prisoner of the bull. The clown moves in to free the cowboy's hand and focus the attention of the bull on himself.

The other type of rodeo clown, the barrelman, uses himself and his barrel as a diversionary obstacle. He hauls a heavy, battered, reinforced metal barrel around, and folds himself up inside like an accordion. Once outside the barrel, he awaits the blows of the irate bull and sometimes receives an unwelcome horn or hoof inside the barrel.

It's gaining popularity

Rodeo is an original American sport that is gaining popularity each year. Last season the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association, headquartered in Denver, Colo., sanctioned 580 rodeos in 37 states and four Canadian provinces. An estimated 14 million spectators paid to see the sport, and in the last several years more and more rodeos have been aired for national television. Rodeo is a sport that began with the great cattle drives. Impromptu bronc riding or roping contests were the only form of entertainment on those drives. It remained unorganized for approximately 40 years after the cattle drives had died out. In fact, it was not until October of 1936 that rodeo became an organized sport.

Cowboys at the old Boston Garden rodeo in Massachusetts figured out that the top winners would only receive enough money to pay their expenses

Rodeo just a way of life

By PAMTUREK
Pampa News Staff

June and Buster Ivory... just plain home town folks, not quite. Buster has been on the rodeo circuit for 41 years and June is not unknown in and around the arena.

Ivory was raised in a rodeo family. He was the third generation of showmen. Perry Ivory, his uncle, helped organize the Cowboy's Turtle Association which later became the Professional Rodeo Cowboy's Association. "Uncle Perry was a champion saddle bronc rider.

On the northern California ranch where Ivory grew up, the family ran 2,000 head of cattle, 3,000 horses, and 2,500 mother cows. When the future rodeo star was 14 he left home to "boss" a larger cow outfit. That was 1938, the year he rode his first rodeo (Ivory won the bull ride event and all around cowboy at McArthur, Calif.)

Ranch hands at that time were making one dollar a day plus board. Cowboys could pick up $200 for a 10 second ride in the arena. It was no wonder Ivory succumbed to the lure of the circuit.

Ivory's special events were saddle bronc riding and bare back riding. In 1948 the bronc rider was seriously injured. "He was paralyzed, he couldn't move anything for six months. He lost his speech for a week," explained his wife, June. But in 18 months he was coming out the same chutes in Salinas, Calif.

The young man went on to compete and win every major rodeo in the U.S., except one. That loss was in Madison Square Garden in New York. Ivory competed in bare back riding, team roping, bull riding, and steer roping. He was three times runner-up for world champ saddle bronc rider.

In 1953, Buster Ivory was employed by the Professional Rodeo Cowboy's Association. He has judged and produced most major rodeos in the U.S. He is the only person who has been with the National Finals since its inception in 1959.

During Cheyenne Rodeo Days in Wyoming in 1954, Buster married June Bull. There were 250 rodeo followers at their wedding. The Denver Post covered the wedding with a page one story.

June Bull Ivory describes herself as a "Gray County girl." The vivacious blonde grew up in Pampa and Lefors. She was named Champion Cowgirl at Pampa's Top O' Texas Rodeo in 1953.

The following year she went to work for the World's Championship Rodeo Company. The company was owned by Gene Autry, the movie star, and Everett Colburn, a Texas Ranger. The cowgirl carried the colors during opening ceremonies and the finales and ran barrels at Madison Square Garden.

For 25 years June Ivory was secretary of the Professional Rodeo Cowboy's Association. She took entries from contestants, kept records, and sent all results to the office in Denver. For every dollar a cowboy wins he is given a point toward winning the World's Championship.

While rodeo secretary, Mrs. Ivory designed the forms that all rodeo secretaries now use. She also started a school to train rodeo secretaries and designed the "pay-off" systems for rodeo participants.

June Ivory is one of those people who never meets a stranger and is ready to try something new and different.

Mrs. Ivory has even given the movies a whirl. She was in "Bus Stop" which starred Marilyn Monroe. She was also in "Misfits" with Clark Gable when it was filmed during a Reno, Nevada rodeo.

Jim Shoulders, who was 16 times World Champion Cowboy, gave a representative description of June Ivory. She can run a rodeo, do book work, polish her nails, and carry on four conversations without batting an eye.

She was voted Secretary of the Year in 1975 by the Rodeo Superstars.

Together the Ivories have taken rodeos to the Brussels and Montreal World Fairs.

In 1967, the couple started promotions for a rodeo and wild west show to take to Europe. For three years they co-ordinated everything from ticket sales to coliseums. The entourage included 302 head of livestock, 100 people (including cowboys and Indians) and 10 tons of equipment.

The Mistral, a ship flying Panamanian colors, was chartered to transport all the trappings, along with three cowboys and a crew of 23. Only four crew members spoke English. The other participants flew to Europe for their nine month tour.

The Ivories have "rodeoed" in Hawaii, Mexico, and had quite an interesting tour in Havana, Cuba in 1958.

They were in Havana at the time of the Castro take over. Mrs. Ivory described the trip: "...our hotel was sand bagged for protection. They (the Cubans) searched us every day as we went in and out of the coliseum. The FBI booked our flight out...other flights were being cancelled."

Buster Ivory hung up his saddle in 1969. He ended his career by winning a saddle bronc event against 72 other riders in Alberta, Canada.

He then went to work for Harry Knight Rodeo Co. out of Fowler, Colo.

Next the retired bronc rider hooked up with Beuter Brothers and Cervi Co. for five and one-half years. When Ivory left, Mike Cervi's comment was, "...every great team has a great captain and I had the greatest with Buster Ivory."

Last January, the Ivories moved back home to Pampa. They opened the Booze and Brew Liquor Store on Hobart Street and opted for a calmer life.

"Until this year we were gone 300 days a year. We got tired of the road...it was an interesting life and we miss the people very, very much," said Mrs. Ivory.

Buster Ivory can not quite get rodeo out of his veins. For three and one-half months every summer, he and his nephew, Jim, run the Cody Night Rodeo in Cody, Wyo. The rodeo runs six nights a week.

"Just recently, Buster bought three loads of stock in Canada, and backing bulls from Howard Harris in Newtown, N.J.," explained Mrs. Ivory. They keep the stock on a ranch outside of Cody.

Buster Ivory also does Marlboro promotions for Argentina, Mexico, and Europe.

June and Buster Ivory's home is full of "rodeo"... a closet full of Justin boots, boxes of Wrangler shirts, pictures, a door knocker in the shape of a Texas Longhorn, a gold and silver belt buckle with diamonds presented to Buster by the Oklahoma City Chamber of Commerce at the National Finals.

The family rodeo tradition lives on with two nephews who have qualified five times for National Finals in bare back riding, and two daughters who are married to professional cowboys.

June and Buster Ivory are interesting home town folks.

Statistics show married people live several years longer than individuals without mates, according to the American Council of Life Insurance.

One of the many things that can be attributed to Busters past history is the production of the rodeo at the Cow Palace in San Francisco.

In 1966 June attended the National Finals in Oklahoma City.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Retired Chief Petty Officer Norman Montgomery took his 17-year-old son, Kevin, to the St. Louis recruiting office and wound up back in the Navy himself. The 43-year-old man resumes his 20-year career, interrupted by a four-year retirement, at his old rank of CPO at the San Diego Navy Base. "I told the recruiter I envied my son because I knew what he was going to be seeing. He said, 'Why don't you join him?' It took me about 30 seconds to make up my mind," he said. Montgomery served on aircraft carriers during the Korean war.

Hard working cowboy from Oklahoma top money winner

Tom Ferguson, a 27-year-old out of Miami, Okla. is the only rodeo cowboy ever to climb above the $100,000 mark in a single season — and he's done it twice.

And it looks like he is not going to stop being one of the winningest cowboys the sport of rodeo has ever seen.

Late in 1972, Ferguson came on the pro-rodeo scene like a shot out of a cannon, and he hasn't stopped flying since.

For the second year in a row Ferguson cracked the $100,000 mark in a single season. He first set his name against a $114,110 earnings column on his way to the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association and World All-Around Championships in 1976. Last year, with arena earnings and bonus money, he won $100,080.

Ira Ferguson, the patriarch of the Ferguson family and former timed-events hand, got his sons started in rodeo when the family lived in San Martin, Calif., and always kept them well supplied with stock and horses.

It's still a family affair, of sorts. Tom Ferguson's wife, Debbie, sometimes travels with him, hauling the horses while her spouse grabs some sleep.

Ferguson's older brother Larry, took the PRCA steer wrestling championship last year.

Ferguson donned his first world all-around buckle, the calf roping title and came within a hair of taking the steer wrestling crown in 1974.

His dream, he says, is to take all three championships in one year. Only one cowboy, the late Everett Bowman, has accomplished this feat which came in 1935.

In 1975 and 1976 Ferguson nailed down two more all-around crowns. Leo Camarillo shared the 1975 crown. Ferguson banked $60,000 each year.

But, in 1976 the cowboy was sizzling hot. He took money out of almost 100 rodeos, going on to the National Finals Rodeo where he claimed $9,005 and the world all-around buckle.

Ferguson, who also competes in team roping and steer roping, was hot again at the start of 1977, crossing the $20,000 mark by mid-March. Then at a rodeo school he was holding a chute gate that malfunctioned, crushing his leg.

The bone didn't break, but a metal piece penetrated the muscle about two inches deep. The first major injury of Ferguson's rodeo career kept him sidelined for almost six weeks.

But the five foot, 11 inch, 175 pound cowboy does everything but quit. He came back in May and ended up seesawing the calf roping lead between himself and defending World Champion Roy Copper until late September.

Ferguson wound up the season second in calf roping and third in steer wrestling, placing 85 times. His checks totaled $65,982 and he copped another $8,350 in bonus money along the way.

At the '77 finals, Ferguson won a total of $10,749 in calf roping and steer wrestling, plus another $15,000 in bonus payoffs. He left Oklahoma City with the World All-Around title, the world steer wrestling championship and a new pickup truck.

Here are the rodeo record-setters

The following is a list of rodeo records set by members of and compiled by the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association.

Most all-around championships, Larry Mahan, six; most world championships, Jim Shoulders, 16; most total money won, Dean Oliver, $527,000 (through 1977); most money won in one year, Tom Ferguson, $96,913 in 1976; most money won in one rodeo, Larry Ferguson, $13,083 at Houston, Texas, in 1976.

Most money won in a single event for one year, Tom Ferguson in steer wrestling, $52,889 in 1976; most bareback riding championships, Joe Alexander, five; most saddle bronc championships, Casey Tibbs, six; most bull riding championships, Jim Shoulders, seven; most calf roping championships, Dean Oliver, eight; most steer wrestling championships, Homer Pettrigres, six.

Most team roping championships, Jim Rodriguez

Jr., four; most steer roping championships, Everett Shaw, six; youngest world champion, Jim Rodriguez Jr., at age 18, team roping, 1959; oldest world champion, Ike Rude, at age 59, steer roping, 1953; and highest scored ride, Don Gay, 97 points at San Francisco, Calif., in bull riding on "Oscar" in 1977.

First-aid kit should be kept in home

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

A first-aid emergency kit should be in every home workshop.

There are many ways to avoid having to make use of it. All of them involve certain principles of safety which we are inclined to neglect when working on a project.

It is difficult to avoid spilling something on the workshop floor every once in a while. That doesn't necessarily mean a large quantity of liquid; a drop can bring about the same disastrous result if you slip on it. An important safety rule for the workshop, therefore, is to stop whatever you are doing instantly whenever anything, even a non-liquid, is dropped on the floor. That especially includes nails, screws and other small objects. Even a piece of paper on the floor can cause you to slip.

Another time to stop whatever you are doing at once is when somebody comes into the workshop while you are operating a power tool, especially an electric saw. Turn off the motor before you engage in conversation. It is a matter of record that accidents with power tools are more likely to occur when you are familiar with the machines and begin to work casually and carelessly. Be sure the electric plug on any power tool is disconnected before you make any adjustment on it.

Halt work on a project when you get fatigued or bored. If you are tired, rest. If you are bored, vary the type of task you are doing every so often.

Not following the directions on the label of a container is one way to suffer illness or injury. If the label says the product should be used only in a well-ventilated area, pay attention to the advice even if you have used the same product 20 times in a closed room without trouble. This might be the time for the trouble. Many products, such as paint removers and contact cements, were once available only in flammable and volatile formulas but can now be obtained without those hazards. Read the labels to find out which type you are buying.

Other safety tips include not smoking while using a sprayer (and many other items); not using dull tools; sanding wooden handles that might cause splinters; being certain outside ladders are firmly secured at the top and well-based at the bottom; wearing goggles when grinding or performing any task where particles might fly; not using a file without a handle; being sure the hammer head is tight; and keeping paints, acids, solvents, etc., locked in cabinets where they are not accessible to children.

Flying high on a bronc

Bobby Berger of Norman, Okla., the 1977 Professional Rodeo Cowboy Association champion in saddle bronc riding, stays in the saddle as "Old Shep" goes through his "bag of tricks" at Cheyenne, Wyo.

Former rodeo contestant stays busy as announcer and television producer

Don L. Endsley

Announcing this year's rodeo is Don L. Endsley PRCA Rodeo Announcer. Although he is no longer active in the arena, he is one of the busiest men in pro-rodeo. His rodeo career began at the age of 14 while competing in high school and later college rodeo as a bull rider. He qualified for two national high school rodeo finals in the mid 60's. Endsley has worked for both television and radio stations around the country. This experience combined with his experience as a rodeo contestant makes him one of the most sought after announcers in pro-rodeo today. One of Endsley's projects is the production and filming of rodeo for educational television network. Endsley is presently putting together a nationwide radio show featuring rodeo news, results and interviews with rodeo champions.

Rodeo life is hectic

Each winter a race for the fun, the money and the awards opens on the pro-rodeo circuit.

Mad dashes between contests begin. Sometimes competitors try to cram four rodeos into a single day during the height of the season.

Professional cowboys who pocket the most money during the rodeo year earn themselves monetary bonuses, prizes, saddle and buckle proclaiming them Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association champions.

The rodeo season runs from early November to the end of the next October and includes more than 578 PRCA sanctioned contests in the United States and Canada.

The cowboys who win these titles in each of the seven categories — saddle bronc, bareback and bull riding, calf roping, steer wrestling, team roping and steer roping — usually have traveled the hardest and rodeoed the most consistently throughout the year.

Although some cowboys win their titles by copping big checks at 40 major rodeos, most travel to more than 100 contests in eleven months.

It is not uncommon for a cowboy to put 90,000 miles on his car — and log an additional 50,000 miles in the air.

And, since they pay their own entry fees and take their chances on what they might win in the arena, depending on their planning and spending skills, from 30 to 75 percent of their earnings will go for expenses.

Tom Ferrugson, all-around champion for the fourth time, collected checks and bonuses for more than $114,000 in 1976 and wound up with $100,800 in 1977.

But, Ferrugson had to place at almost 100 rodeos from California to Canada to Kentucky and most of the time he hauled a horse.

Entry fees for calf roping and steer wrestling, and sometimes team and steer roping took almost $29,000 out of his winnings. Add to that gasoline, food for his family and horse, automobile repairs, vet bills and it seems impossible that Ferrugson could keep up such a pace for so long.

Texan set bull record

Rodeo history was made at the last contest of the 1977 regular season when Don Gay of Mesquite, Texas, set a new bull riding record. The 24-year-old, who has dominated bull riding for the last four years, topped RSC's bull "Oscar" for a record 97 points at the San Francisco rodeo.

The ride broke the old mark of 96 points set in 1974 by John Quintana. It also broke a near deadlock in the season-end Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association bull riding championship. The ride earned Gay first place money — $2,414 — and his fourth consecutive year-end title. He wound up placing at 67 different rodeos for a total of $35,053.

Gay also made his mark last year when the world championship was decided at the National Finals Rodeo. After ten regular rounds of competition, he and Randy Magers of Comanche, Texas, were deadlocked with $6,521 each toward the title. In the ride-off, Magers bucked off his bull. Gay hung on for 77 points and his second consecutive world crown.

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 16-year-old girl who has been in trouble ever since I can remember. In the last two years I have been kicked out of seven schools. My trouble started when I began to skip school, make up lies, etc. I lost my temper and hit a teacher and had to face an assault charge last month.

My parents have disowned me, and I will probably spend the remainder of my teen years in institutions and group homes. (Right now I'm in Booth Brown Hall in St. Paul, Minn.)

Even though I want terribly to finish high school and go to college, I don't have any high school credits.

I hope there will be room in your column to print this message to teenagers who are on their way to having the same kind of problems I am now facing.

If any of you teenagers want to make something of your lives, please stay in school and make the best of it. Going to school is much easier than sitting behind locked doors watching the rest of the world live and learn, and wishing you could.

FINISHED AT 16

DEAR 16: Your letter bears an important message for other teens. But don't abandon your hopes for college. If you really want to go, you can get those credits by working hard, and with determination you can also work your way through college. Nobody is "finished" unless she quits trying.

DEAR ABBY: I agree with the advice you gave to that woman who said her husband kept all his money in the refrigerator. It's not a very good idea to keep too much cold cash on hand. However, I think you should have told her husband that she should keep his money in the freezer, so if anybody hid him up for a loan, he could truthfully say, "Sorry, but all my assets are frozen."

J.V.G. IN SUN CITY, ARIZ.

DEAR J.V.G.: If it's not a good idea to keep too much cold cash on hand, it's a worse idea to keep one's assets frozen. And with inflation climbing, it could be painful to sit too long on a frozen asset.

DEAR ABBY: When my husband died six months ago, a very nice-looking man attended the funeral. He said he had been a very good friend of my husband's. I never saw the man before, but he couldn't have been nicer to me. He kept calling on me to keep me company in my sorrow, and I invited him over for Sunday meals and so on. I will leave out a lot of details because they are rather personal, but here is what I want to get across:

It turned out that this man had never known my husband! He makes a practice of reading the newspapers to find out where funerals are, how old the deceased was, where he lived, the number of children, some of the lodges he belonged to, etc. Then he calls on the widow to get acquainted, saying he had been a good friend of her husband's.

If I hadn't accidentally found out that he did this to other widows, I might have gotten even more seriously involved than I did. And it would have cost me a lot of money, too. Please print this as a warning to other unsuspecting widows.

HOUSTON READER

DEAR READER: Forewarned is forearmed. Thanks for writing.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have already read your Health Letter on arthritis and I take 12 aspirins daily which has been recommended for my case. They help a lot and have not upset my stomach. I use the aspirin with buffering.

At this rate I expect to take a total of 4,380 aspirin each year or a grand total of 43,800 over the next 10 years. I am 65, in fairly good health except for the arthritis and I have no stomach distress.

I am wondering what potential harm this will do to my system. I would like to balance the potential benefits against the potential harm and so far I have only one half of the equation. I have read that aspirin can reduce inflammation and that there are preliminary indications that it might reduce heart problems but it's hard to believe that 4,380 aspirins taken at the rate of 12 daily might not eventually cause problems as well.

DEAR READER — Everything is relative. If you happen to have a tendency toward bleeding or develop some other problem along the way, then the sustained use of aspirin might prove to be a problem. However, many arthritics have used aspirin for longer than 10 years without having any adverse effects. The amounts you are taking is not astronomical.

Moreover you should give your body credit. It's a biological system that's able to constantly correct the insults it sustains, so the dosage of aspirin that you're taking is well within its tolerance ability to readjust itself on a daily basis for a normal person. There are idiosyncrasies to every medicine and to most of the things we're exposed to in life. I suppose if you added up all the water that you're going to drink over the next 10 years and realized how many barrels it's going to be you might wonder if your body could withstand consuming that many barrels of water. But since it's on a daily basis your body is able to regulate how much water you should eliminate to maintain a relatively normal balance for you. So if you're not a person who has some idiosyncrasy to aspirin you should do all right.

It is correct that there is some evidence that regular use of aspirin may reduce heart problems. It may also eliminate some types of strokes or complications of strokes, particularly those referred to as small strokes. In fact its possible relationship to heart attacks was observed because of the lower rates of heart attacks in some arthritic patients who had been taking aspirin for many years.

Of the various medicines that you might take for control of your arthritis there is probably none any safer than the aspirin that you are taking in your case. Other readers who want the issue of The Health Letter that you've already read on osteoarthritis, number 4-10 can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Polly's pointers

By Polly Cramer

POLLY'S PROBLEM

DEAR POLLY — My daughter does her own laundry while she is away at school. Recently she brought home several 100 percent acrylic sweaters that are wrinkled and out of shape. She thinks someone left the washer set for hot water but I think the dryer was too hot. Do you know of any way we can salvage these sweaters? — R.R.

DEAR R.R. — My only suggestion would be to dampen a sweater just enough so it can be pulled into shape and then fasten it to a firm surface with rustproof pins or thumb tacks. Next I would press with a cloth wrung out of WHITE vinegar and water over the sweater. Leave on the board or whatever until completely dry. If that does not help take one to a dry cleaner for help. — POLLY

Services established to help elderly

By Lou Cottin

Here's a rare situation: Two magazines, as different as day is from night, recently have written of similar plans to help the elderly.

The usually conservative "Bulletin" of the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) tells us about the Useful Service Exchange (USE) in Reston, Va.

And "Mother Jones," a generally radical magazine, updates us on a work-exchange co-operative in Brasstown, N.C.

Both programs trade time, skills and labor without using money.

"Mother Jones" informs us that Brasstown's 30 co-op members represent an interesting alliance between Christendom and Freakdom.

"Somehow," writes the magazine's John Rothchild, "living in the country has put a human override on the cultural and political differences that might otherwise divide these people. It is a loving group."

In Brasstown, negotiating the exchange of skills takes place at "covered dish suppers." The skilled and the unskilled hustle around good naturedly while they eat.

What it amounts to is a direct exchange of time and sweat. A doctor offers physical exams in return for so many hours of manual labor. A yoga teacher gives lessons in return for needlepoint. A soapmaker swaps soap for a psychologist's expertise.

There's a dynamite expert among the members. He babysits for the certified accountant's children. The accountant does the babysitter's tax work.

Most of the people of Brasstown are farmers. The professionals are relocated urbanites.

The big idea behind the Brasstown cooperative is simple enough. People simply ignore the wage-tax-profit system. Farm people have always operated this way.

More systemized and sophisticated is the exchange project in Reston. Henry H. Ware, an economist with experience in marketing and bartering systems, runs USE with greater efficiency — but without sacrificing neighborliness.

The principle is the same. It's a neighbor-to-neighbor like USE can be started in communities throughout the country. The elderly should lead in this endeavor.

A project like USE can be started from the top, at county, township or village offices of senior affairs. Or it can begin at centers for the elderly. Multi-purpose centers, especially, should be interested.

There is no doubt that we

self-help exchange of services. No money changes hands.

The accounts of USE are not kept in dollars. Instead, credits and debits are calculated in hours of work.

No USE member can be too heavily overdrawn, but participants are encouraged to ask for needed services before they have accumulated the necessary credit hours.

USE provides members with a sign-up sheet and list of services offered and services needed. Offerings include almost every skill imaginable, from secretarial to home maintenance, from arts and crafts to cleaning and housekeeping.

Glenn Ellison, age 84, repairs lamps and household appliances on an exchange-of-time basis. Artist Prudence Herrick, 79, custom designs gourmet recipe cards with illustrations. In exchange, she receives free transportation from the neighbors for whom she paints the attractive cards.

Director Ware says he will publish a manual explaining how to start and operate this type of project if he can get the financing.

The thought here is that self-help swapping services seniors have varied talents and skills. When we swap them with younger people, we establish friendships that grow in the sharing. Everybody gains.

The project gets going as soon as a central clearing house of time-swaps is set up. Local community organizations will be glad to help in the effort's planning and organization.

But the program must begin somewhere. That's a job for seniors, working with professionals on aging in their communities.

Pear torte good summer dessert

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

BARTLETT PEAR TORTE
1 1/4 cups sifted all-purpose flour

1/4 cup sugar
1/2 cup butter
Raspberry preserves
8-ounce package cream cheese, at room temperature
Lemon juice, if desired
2 Bartlett pears (1 pound, scant)

In a medium bowl, stir together the flour and sugar; with a pastry blender cut in the butter until the particles are fine. Pat over the bottom of a 10-inch springform pan. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until lightly browned — about 20 minutes; cool completely. Remove springform band and place crust (still on bottom of pan) on a serving plate.

Force enough of the raspberry preserves (to remove seeds) through a fine-mesh strainer to make 3 tablespoons. Beat into the cream cheese until blended. Taste and, if you like, add a little lemon juice — perhaps a teaspoon. Spread over the cold pastry. (The mixture should be a pretty pink color.) Refrigerate.

Shortly before serving, remove the pastry and its topping from the refrigerator. Peel the pears and halve; remove seeds and stem structures. Cut each pear half into 4 equal lengthwise slices. Starting at the center of the pastry, arrange 8 of the pear slices in spoke fashion; arrange the remaining 8 slices around the edge. Serve at once.

Makes 6 to 8 servings.
NOTE: If you wish to serve a sauce with the torte, force a generous amount of raspberry preserves (to remove the seeds) through a fine-mesh strainer. Heat gently, adding a little orange juice, if necessary, to thin the sauce. Domestic or imported kirsch may be added to suit your own taste.

The flower girl for the ceremony was Erwin Nelson, Lefors. She wore an outfit similar to the bridesmaids, with flowers in her hair, and carried a basket of blue flowers.

-Fat can be complex problem for many people.

By Gaynor Maddox

A well-known researcher and clinician in obesity has come to some depressing conclusions about weight control. His findings will discourage those who think overweight is a simple problem.

"Obesity is very difficult to treat successfully," reports Dr. George Bray, professor of medicine at the University of California, Los Angeles School of Medicine. "Excess body weight is not a single disorder," he explains. "It's a variety of disorders and each requires a different treatment. But of all the contributing factors, our knowledge of them is far from complete."

Race has an impact on whether or not one is likely to become obese, says Bray. White men are more prone to obesity than black men. The situation is reversed for women, however.

Heredity, too, plays a role, Bray continues. A child born of two obese parents runs an 80 percent risk of becoming obese, too. But a child of normal-weight parents has only a slight chance — about 9 percent — of putting on too much fat.

"Age, believe it or not, enters into the list of factors," Bray asserts. "People who become obese before their 20th birthdays usually have more fat cells than people who become obese after their 20th birthdays."

A relationship also exists between weight and economic status. Members of the lower socio-economic classes run a 30 percent chance of being obese. But overweight afflicts only 10 percent of those in the upper-income bracket.

Everybody does not respond in the same way to a weight-loss program. Remember that fact when you read of a diet that guarantees to take off 10 or 20 pounds in a few weeks.

That just can't be true. The only reducing program capable of those results is simple starvation.

What about those hospital weight-loss programs that have enabled some patients to lose more than 100 excess pounds?

"In a controlled hospital environment, we can make anyone lose weight," says Bray. "But once they are released and return home, and the dietetic control is removed, most patients gain back or surpass the weight they had when they entered the hospital."

The doctor reports that only one person in five can maintain such a weight loss outside the hospital.

Bray also confirms a fact that struggling dieters have long suspected. "As a matter of fact," he notes, "the human body seems to fight against losing weight."

Weight loss will result if a dieter cuts food intake below the amount needed to maintain his or her current weight, says Bray. But the body will eventually adjust to the new level of consumption by slowing down its metabolism. That means less food is needed to maintain the new weight.

"To keep losing weight at a fixed rate," Bray concludes, "we have to eat less and less."

Charcoal used for cooking chicken

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
When I heard that my friend Lucy Wing had a miraculous way of cooking chicken over charcoal, I asked her whether I might watch her do so. Lucy, a home economist and food consultant, lives in a New York brownstone with a backyard in which it's easy to try outdoor recipes.

Based on an old Chinese method, Lucy worked out a technique suitable for an up-to-date outdoor charcoal cooker. By the time I got to her house late one afternoon she had the charcoal briquettes at the right stage — covered with a layer of gray ash. She placed the tarragon-seasoned chicken, tightly wrapped in foil, on the grill over the coals, covered the cooker and steamed the bird until it was tender.

Then came the spectacular step. That steamed bird was unwrapped and placed, looking plump but pale, on the grid of the cooker over a foil pan of sugar resting directly on the coals. The cooker was covered then once more and the chicken smoked.

When Lucy uncovered the cooker, the chicken had turned a gloriously even caramel color. It really seemed as though she had performed a miracle! And when we sat down to enjoy the chicken — along with a sauce, rice and a salad — it was utterly flavorful and juicy.

Later some epicurean French friends tasted Lucy's tarragon chicken at my house and they, too, were enthralled with it. High praise indeed for Lucy, because the French are famous for knowing how to use that lovely herb, tarragon, to bring out the best in a bird.

SMOKED TARRAGON CHICKEN

- 3½-pound (about) frying chicken
  - 1 tablespoon oil
  - 1 teaspoon salt
  - 2 tablespoons dried tarragon leaves
  - ¼ cup water
  - ½ cup sugar
- Pat chicken dry with paper towels. Twist wing tips to the back; tie legs and tail together. Rub the chicken with the oil and sprinkle with the salt. Put the tarragon in the center of a 24-inch length of 18-inch-wide,

Know How To Complain
You may lose hundreds of dollars a year if you fail to complain about faulty goods and service. Here are some tips from the Outdoor Power Equipment Institute for making your complaints heard.

1. If you have a complaint, return the item to the dealer where you bought it. Explain the difficulty you experienced and request that the dealer arrange for repair. Be polite but firm.

Most Complaints Go No Farther Than Your Local Dealer.

2. If you get no satisfaction, write directly to the manufacturer's customer complaint department. Provide all information (model number, etc.) and send a photocopy of your check. Describe your experience with the dealer.

3. If you speak to someone on the phone at the manufacturer's keep a record of that person's name so you can pursue the matter, if necessary.

4. If you still get no satisfaction, write directly to the manufacturer's customer complaint department.

SANCTUARY
FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Encouraged by initial success in helping wildlife, two California-based organizations have announced plans to establish a wildlife sanctuary in the southern Sierra.

When established it will represent the largest wildlife sanctuary in California funded by private sources, Lutz said.

New product brings relaxation

Picture this: you wake up on a cold, rainy morning, and your body aches from too much exercise.

Or, it has been a long, difficult day, and you can feel tension tying knots in the back of your neck.

Wouldn't a warm, relaxing sunbath feel good? Followed by a warm rain shower? Then, an invigorating steam bath... and a cool, refreshing shower? All taking place in a comfortable enclosure that lets you enjoy all these elements without dashing from sunlamps to shower to steam bath and back to the shower again?

If that's your idea of gracious living, there's a product on the market today that offers this whole new world of pleasure and relaxation.

It's called Habitat, and it's a new dimension in living, introduced by Kohler Co., a leading manufacturer of innovative plumbing products.

Essentially, Habitat is a moderately priced environmental enclosure that combines the most beneficial elements of nature — warm "sun", gentle "rain" and cleansing steam, the unit's most desirable option — in one personal, controllable private retreat.

With the touch of a finger, you select the elements you want to enjoy, and the length of time for each.

Then, let the controlled environment warm and refresh you as you stretch and relax on a cypress deck in an acrylic-lined enclosure that measures 78" long, 36" wide and 56" high.

Habitat's elements are programmed for 20 minutes each to provide full benefit. The controlled circuitry will automatically switch from one element to another. Or you can manually change the elements with the push of a button to match the time you have available.

To make the enclosure even more fascinating and personally enjoyable, two conditioning elements — "ambiance" and "warm breeze" — are also available. They can be used with "sun", steam or "rain" to change and enhance the atmosphere within the unit, or to warm and freshen the enclosure.

The entire control circuitry is operated by a low-voltage power source. The unit's working mechanism includes four sunlamps, four spray nozzles, a heater-blower, for "warm breeze", two amber reflector lamps for interior light and "ambiance", two outdoor speakers for use with stereo equipment, and a three-piece sliding door of clear safety glass.

A large recessed cabinet has heat lamps to keep towels toasty warm.

For more information about Habitat, write: Box HA, Kohler Co., Kohler, WI 53044.

STATENVILLE, Ga. (AP) — It took a long time and $80,000-worth of cable, but four families living near the edge of the Okefenokee Swamp in Georgia's Echols County now have telephones.

Continental Telephone Co. had to string 31 miles of cable south from Homerville to reach the new subscribers. The tiny community, between Fargo and Statenville, had been trying to get telephones for 10 years.
