Sadat remains firm on Israel's withdrawal

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt (AP)

— President Anwar Sadat rejected Israel's compromise offer at the Leeds Castle conference and ruled out further peace talks between the countries until Israel recognizes Egypt will not negotiate its demand for Israeli withdrawal from all occupied territory

Sadat's adamant stand at a news conference Sunday collided head-on with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem B gin's statement a week ago that Israel would give nothing back to the Arabs without getting something in return.

Sadat, who met for 21/2 hours Sunday with American mediator Alfred Atherton, in effect also called on the United States to put forward its own peace proposals. He said the United States should "act as full partner, not as mediator" in the Big Foot believed a joke by authorities

CAMERON, Texas (AP) -Milam County Sheriff Leroy Broadus thinks the Big Foot monster story is just somebody's idea of a big joke.

But Broadus doesn't think it's so funny and may file criminal charges if he finds the person or persons responsible. Broadus said Sunday he based his decision on a report made by the Big Foot Research Society of Dallas. The monster story started last Wednesday when 15-year-old Jeffry Gelner found a mysterious footprint that was 24 inches long and 9 inches wide near the Little River. The next day he said he saw a large, two-legged hairy creature in a densely wooded slough near the Broadus said he believes Gelner did see something in the woods and did not have any role in the hoax.

The sheriff said he got a telephone call from Mrs. Robert D. Thorneberry of Dallas, who said her husband was director of the Big Foot Research Society and was interested in the case. Broadus asked Thorneberry to come to Cam-

After Thorneberry and two associates made an investigation late Saturday they gave Broadus a statement. statement said in part that the society "has concluded that there is not now, nor has there been in recent times, a Big Foot creature in or near the reported sighting area. As a sop to supporters of that concept, the committee created a new "alternative tax" that will apply only to capital gains. But critics called that a purely cosmetic move that will do little for tax equity. It is conceivable that big chunks of the committee's tax package will be junked by the full House, the Senate Finance Committee and the Senate.

But even though the bill may be changed enough to win Carcer's support as it makes its way inrough Congress, it is unlikely that many of Carter's original recommendations will be revived.

Firearms fight vital

We hasten on the Orwellian 1984 police state in this country and as blithe spirits we look forward, oblivious of what an early tomorrow will bring to us under Big Brotherism, to what some nut will do on teevee tonight.

Why, only recently there was hardly a word said even at the Pampa police station or the post office steps about the action of the Supreme Court in giving the police the authority to bust into the nation's newsrooms and seize informational evidence. Nobody in the block hardly said goodbye to that one segment of a most important constitutional right in America, freedom of the press. Did anybody care? Does anybody care that tomorrow the big court or the Congress or even a halo-toting president may in some manner, through the back door, over the transom or with two-by-four assault, take away your pistol, your shotgun, your rifle? That would be taking away our firearms freedom, wouldn't it?

Well, you'd better believe somebody cares, about all the freedoms we have freedom of speech, freedom to vote, freedom to assemble, freedom of the prese, and our firearms freedom.

In fact, most people care. But most people won't say or do anything. And then comes a peanut-dealer or some other misdirected do-gooder in authority, or for that matter an elected evil-doer, who wants to take away your gun, and before you can say "scat" he's got it, and you're unarmed.

Take the U.S. Post Office. (The union has it, but take it anyway, if you can.) It has never issued a postage stamp commemorating the American's right to keep and bear arms. It has not commemorated the shooting sports or the nation's Olympic Rifle and Pistol Team. In its new "Roots of Democracy" stamp series, it commemorates all the freedoms except one, the freedom to keep and bear arms! And that is the basic root of Why doesn't the Post Office add that commemorative? To whom is it listening? Who.

told it to skip the commemoration of that basic freedom? Every national lawmaker should be taken to task for this "oversight." Every postmaster should be asked to get this freedom into the "Roots of Democracy." A postage stamp commemorating our freedom to keep and bear arms would help spread the word throughout America that this freedom is constitutionally ours, that our heritage of firearms-freedom is in the national interest. It would help stamp out the antigun movement which is dangerous to the nation's Teacher, educate thyself. I dare you!

By KATHERINE BEHRENDT (Council for Basic Education Bulletin)

News item: From now on, education majors at Towson State University will have to demonstrate that they can read and write at average levels and they will have to show they know something about the craft of teaching.

It's about time! Towson State University, I am encouraged by your decision to start making it tougher to become a teacher. But I'll be watching to see if you keep your word. If you can do as you propose, you will be making a bigger contribution to the teaching profession than anyone has made in a long time

Teaching was the last thing in the world I wanted to do when I graduated from college with a degree in political science. In fact. I wouldn't have taken an education course in college if you had paid me. However, with the condition of the job market at the time. I considered myself lucky to obtain the teaching position I was offered by the Catholic school system. Today, after six years of teaching junior high school students. I still wouldn't take those courses if I could help it. It was only with the greatest resentment that I spent money, after college, to take the courses that would certify me as a social studies teacher in Maryland.

For those courses. I attended Loyola College, the Johns Hopkins University and Towson State University, each time walking away from the course with two questions: 1) Aren't these education professors embarrassed to teach courses so devoid of content? and. 2) Why does my intelligence have to be insulted for $180? Surely that money and manpower could have been better spent

Why is it so easy to become a teacher? Doesn't the profession realize its own potential — the effect it can have on the country as a whole? Next to the news media, we must certainly rate as the most influential force on the American public. And yet, we are wallowing in our own mediocrity.

The fault lies within the profession itself. Poor teacher education in the colleges and universities, inconsistent and superficial teacher observation and evaluation by principals, and nebulous hiring standards are several major factors contributing to the substandard character of the profession.

How about "accountability," that word with which educators are being bombarded constantly? It has become just another farcical addition to educational jargon. Unless the profession itself can work from within to raise its standards, we cannot hope to rise from the mediocre position that teaching holds in American society.

A great deal of weeding out needs to be done in our teaching personnel. The market is saturated and the standards are low. We must be more selective. The initial burden lies with the colleges and universities.

Administrators should take a good look at the courses they offer to education majors and the people teaching them should be re-evaluated. Do they know what is going on in the schools? When was the last time they dealt directly with grade-school or high-school students?

The second phase of the weeding out process ought to be a thorough and frequent follow-up on teachers. Principals should go into classrooms unannounced to observe. Is the teacher creative in the presentation of material? How do the students respond? Are teachers maintaining professional standards with their students as well as with the faculty? What about their personal appearance? Can you see consistency in their performance and fairness in the disciplinary measures?

The principal should let the teachers know what he has observed. Most important of all, the principal should be accessible

As a person teaching in a classroom, I am very happy. I love my seventh and eighth-graders. They are great people. But I am extremely discouraged by society's perception of our profession. "Boy, I have to hand it to you." parents say to me, "putting up with over a hundred seventh and eighth - graders all day! I wouldn't want your job for anything.

"That's not the point," I want to say. 'That's not what I'm doing." But, that is the ill-perceived status of a teacher — the florified babysitter! There is so little real understanding of our potential worth. But whose fault is it? We are, by our present standards, creating our own poor

Somebody, challenge us — those who are teaching and those who want to teach. Challenge me. Give me the incentives to want to be the best, so that I can give the best to the boys and girls who sit in my classroom. Universities and colleges, challenge yourselves. Quality teachers can mean quality education. Do you realize your potential? You can begin the whole process.

Much too casual consent

By MARTHA ANGLE and ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) - Even the dumbest alley cat knows better than to sit on a hot stove twice, but not the United States Senate.

Less than a year after singeing its credibility in the Bert Lance affair, the Senate hopped right back on the griddle when it confirmed - with a wink and a nod President Carter's nomination of David G. Gartner as a member of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

Carter showed rotten judgment in naming the former Hubert H. Humphrey aide to the $50,000-a-year post since the White House knew Gartner had accepted $72,000 in stock as a gift for his four children from a friend, Dwayne O.

Archer-Daniels-Midland Co. soybean and grain processing firm. But if the Senate had done its own job properly, the president would not now be stuck with an appointee who has blithely

Andreas, the chairman of the huge ignored Carter's public request that he Gartner told the Senate Agriculture Committee all about the stock gift when he appeared before the panel for confirmation hearings. Yet committee members, all of whom knew Gartner from his years as a

Humphrey assistant, didn't bat an eyelash. Indeed, the Agriculture Committee and the full Senate went right ahead and confirmed Gartner on the very same day that the perfunctory hearing was held. Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd later conceded that "a closer look should be" given" when presidential nominees come before the Senate for confirmation, but neither he nor other Senate leaders has shown any real inclination to tighten up the screening process.

After the Bert Lance flap, Sens. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., and Charles H. Percy, R-Ill. introduced a resolution to create an independent office within the Senate comprised of trained investigators who could conduct background and financial checks on presidential nominees and evaluate the material provided by the FBI and other executive agencies as well.

Ribicoff, chairman of the Governmental Affairs Committee, and Percy, the panel's ranking Republican, had been thoroughly embarrassed by the committee's failure to

Buying a new car—Part II

How to buy a car you can live with

If you're planning to buy one of the new 1979 economy cars coming to market in the weeks and months directly ahead, don't asssume automatically that the car with the most miles per gallon is the most economical. Your initial purchse price may be a far more significant factor in determining the economy of an economy

For you also must take into account sales taxes and finance charges, which multiply the differences between two cars.

Let's say, for instance, that the sales tax in your area is 6 percent and you intend to finance your car at 12 percent simple interest for three years, each additional $100 in the price of your car will cost you Thus, a $300 difference between two models is really a $381 difference; a $500 difference is $635; and a $1,000 difference is $1,267.

If the more expensive economy car gives you better gas mileage, can it pay for itself through lower fuel costs? Probably not, in the judgement of three auto editors who wrote "How to Buy the Best Economy Car in the World ... For You," available free from the Mazda Information Bureau, P.O. Box 36730, Los Angeles, Calif. 90036.

Take one car that gets 22 mpg and another, costing $300 more, that gets 30 mpg. At 15,000 miles a year and 65 cents a gallon for gas, you would have to drive the more expensive car for more than three years before you would break even.

The difference in cost of gas between 36 and 40 mpg, again at 15,000 miles a year and 65 cents a gallon, is $27. If you pay $300 more for the 40-mpg car, you would have to drive it more than 14 years to recover your extra investment

A second key rule is NOT to buy a new car on your first trip to a dealer - even though this may have been your procedure in the past, you like the current ads about the car, and it's a quick, easy way. Instead, make at least three trips to auto dealers: Trip One to become familiar with the car; Trip Two to test-drive the car seriously; and Trip Three, only after you already have made your choice at home, actually to buy the car.

Make a list of economy cars so you won't overlook any. Today, there are many more companies offering economy cars than just Consider only those cars whose dealers are convenient to your home or place of work. Service and parts are important, so eliminate any inconvenient dealers. (Also of course, avoid a dealer with a bad reputation for service or any other Decide just what kind of body configuration and equipment you want. Do you need a four-door model because you're in a car pool? Or do you need a two-door model because you have young children? Do you need a trunk because you carry valuables that must be kept out of sight? Or do you need a hatchback because you carry heavy loads? And do you need an automatic transmission because one of the drivers in your household can't operate a stick shift? Make your firm decisions on these points before you even visit a dealer.

The Mazda booklet strongly recommends: radial-ply tires, which give superior traction and last longer than conventional tires; a day-night inside mirror, which improves rear vision (and reduces driving fatigue) at night; reclining

Sylvia Porter seats, which enhance driver comfort; and a rear window defogger-defroster, which is a major safety aid in damp or freezing

Carefully weigh the options available to you - which while desireable are not essential - and their costs.

As an illustration, not essential are: body side moldings, cloth upholstery (but choose vinyl if you have small children). armrests, intermittent windshield wipers, clock, five-speed manual transmission, tinted window glass, rear window washer-wiper and opening rear side windows. Nearly all these are desirable, though, and are standard or available at extra cost on most economy cars.

too, the relative merits of the trunkback and the hatchback (or liftback) - and make your choice entirely on the basis of your needs. If it doesn't matter to you, you will have many more cars from which to choose. As for front-wheel-vs.-rear-wheel drive, decide that on your judgment of how the car rides and handles.

COMMENTARY

Donald F. Graff

By DON GRAFF

"Air Force says new missiles may need area the size of Connecticut."

So The New York Times informs us, putting in a headline nutshell the scope of a proposed weapon's system now on Pentagon drawing boards. It does make one think - even worry about what we could be coming to.

Briefly, the new system would replace the present Minuteman network, which, with its fixed launching sites, is regarded as increasingly vulnerable to a Soviet first strike. The plan calls for a new generation of mobile missiles, christened MXs. Two hundred would be trucked around at random among 4,000 launching sites in a strategic shell game. Theoretically, the Soviets would be kept guessing as to which silos were empty at any time and which held missiles, and thus were valid targets.

It would be in several respects the largest weapon's program ever undertaken by the United States — and how many times have we heard that before? Total cost estimates range up to $27 billion, and the large number of launching sites would be dispersed over an area of from 4,000 to 8,000 square miles.

That, as the Times notes, would be the equivalent of the Constitution State and possibly then some.

Now, Connecticut may not be one of our larger states. Elsewhere, say in Nevada or Montana, that amount of territory can go be dropped into one good-sized county. And the state itself is in no danger of being sealed off behind a missile curtain. The projected site would be selected from several "geotechnically suitable" areas in the West and Southwest - wide open spaces on the order of the Central Nevada Great Basin, California's Mojave Desert or the South Platte Plains spilling over into Kansas, Nebraska and Colorado.

Still, it does raise a question as to what we may be committing ourselves in the allocation of resources, including real estate, to defense. Will the next generation of missiles require an Ohio or a Missouri? And what about the Navy? The admirals have just been granted another multi-billion-dollar monster and lust for more, suggesting a possibility for a future Times headline: "Navy says new nuclear supercarrier requires berth the size of Lake Michigan." Revolutions, it's been said, devour their children. Are we perhaps entering an era in which defense of our land devours the land - literally?

As noted back there a bit, it does make one think. And thinking hard enough produces one possibly hopeful point. In the end we may be glad it all started with Connecticut, skipping right over Rhode Island and Delaware.

Should the escalation be carried to the extreme, those two smallest states may be all the territory left to 200 - plus million civilian Americans lacking security clearance uncover some of Bert Lance's banking shenanigans af the time he was up for confirmation as director of the Office of Management and Budget

But when they proposed steps to tighten up the confirmation process, not only in their own committee but throughout the Senate, they encountered massive covert opposition from other committee chairmen.

As a result, their resolution has been resting quietly in a desk drawer and is likely to remain there. Ribicoff, according to aides, is convinced that pushing meaningful reform of the Senate confirmation process is strictly a "man of La Mancha role, and we don't especially enjoy tilting at windmills.

What is disturbing is the near - certainty that David Gartner won't be the last ill-advised nomination to slip through the Senate's sieve-like confirmation screen. A Common Cause study last year, entitled "The Senate Rubberstamp Machine," documented the incredibly casual attitude the Senate has traditionally taken to its constitutional responsibility to give the president "advice and consent" upon his appointments. The cursory clearance given Gartner was no aberration. Of 50 major appointments made by Carter during his first six months in office, only 10 were subjected to more than a single day of hearings and only 2 - Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell and disarmament chief Paul C. Warnke - stretched beyond two days.

Although the 50 nominations studied by Common Cause were all major appointments, the Senate took roll call votes on only six of them. For 18 of the nominees, committee approval came the same day as the hearing - as it did in Gartner's case.

The bottom line, as Common Cause concluded, is that the Senate confirmation process is a "national disaster waiting to happen." The Gartner case merely proves that senators, unlike alley cats, learn nothing from experience.

Today in history

Tropical storm leaves southern Texas soggy

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) Soggy Tropical Storm Amelia dumped heavy rainfall on the southern tip of Texas early today as it moved inland only hours after developing from a tropical depression to a tropical storm. Although portions of the storm remained over the Gulf of Mexico, forecasters said it was doubtful Amelia, the first tropical storm of the season, would ever reach hurricane strength.

No injuries were reported, but three shrimp boats sank Matador, Mrs. Buck Smelser of just offshore from this Lower Brawley, Calif., and Mrs. J.W. Rio Grande Valley city.

The main portion of the storm moved inland about 40 miles north of here late Sunday night and pounded the Texas Coast with 50-mile-an-hour winds and a deluge of rain. South Padre Island reported rainfall up to four inches Sunday night and the Queen Isaabella Causeway was nearly impassable due to heavy rainfall. Some residents reported power outages Two U.S. Coast Guard helicopters fought heavy rain and 30-mile-an-hour winds for several hours Sunday night, hovering over the crews of sinking shrimpers in an attempt to pluck them from the 10-to 12foot seas.

One of the shrimpers broke up and sank near the jetties off South Padre Island when a "big wave" swamped the vessel, according to the captain. The crew of the shrimper, the Margaret Webster of Brownsville, was pulled from the churning waters by the crew of another shrimp boat, the Betty Margaret. No one was reported injured. The crews of two other shrimpers, the Mermaid of the Sea and the Frankie E., were rescued from the water by Coast Guard rescue helicopters

Court order halts permits in Abilene

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - An attorney for the dry forces in Abilene's controversial local op- was $201.125, unchanged from tion election last month says a temporary restraining order has been issued by a state district judge here prohibiting the Alcholic Beverage Commission from granting beverage permits in the West Texas city.

Buck Wood said Sunday the order was obtained Friday from State District Court Judge Charles Mathews.

Wood said the action was brought on behalf of two Abiline residents who are challenging the legality of a second canvass of the June 17 election. According to Wood, the order will remain in effect until an Aug. 7 hearing on the suit in Austin. The results of the June election found the wets with 11,591 votes and the drys with 11.160. However, the Taylor County commissioners canvassed the vote on July 10 and refused to count the votes from one box. This action gave the drys a 35-vote victory. Then State District Judge Don Lane ordered the commissioners to canvass all votes. The commissioners followed his orders and on July 20 reported the canvass left the wets with a 122-vote margin.

Forecaster Gil Clark, at the National Hurricane Center in Miami, had said Amelia "was not a particularly strong storm," and was not likely to gain more intensity unless it moves back out over the water. Al Druemont, a Brownsville meteorologist, said that the coast was doubly blessed by the storm. Because it arrived but wasn't too serious, he said, 'this is a darn good excuse for people to practice their preparedness plans.

Druemont said residents along the Lower Texas Coast could expect heavy rains in the wake of the storm.

"We named it to be on the safe side," Clark said. "It's probably not going to do much damage. It's just too close to shore to develop into anything

The storm was detected as a tropical depression earlier in the day and reonnaissance planes were dispatched. Radar and satellite photos indicated that the disturbance reached tropical storm strength about 6 p.m. CDT, the center said in a bulletin Winds near Amelia's center reached sustained force of 50 mph and gales extended 100 miles to the east and 50 miles to he west, the center said. A depression is classed a tropical storm and named when sustained winds reach 38 mph. It becomes a hurricane when winds reach 73 mph.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., sponsor of a bill to cut income taxes, says lower tax rates are needed to restore incentive to American workers. He said Americans now have little reason to invest or achieve because so much of their earnings go for taxes.

Kemp speaking on a television interview show Sunday. said his proposal to cut tax rates by 30 percent over three years was not undercut by a plan approved by the House Ways and Means Committee. He said the panel's $16.2 billion cut includes "some very progressive steps" but does not go far enough.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House assassinations committee wants to question five persons about the killings of Martin Luther King and President John F. Kennedy

The committee on Sunday released photographs and composite drawings of the men "in the hope that citizen recognition of them might shed additional light" on the assassinations. The committee said it should not be assumed that the panel believes the men were involved in the murders.

Not only would most men feel flattered, it would save a lot of time and eliminate a lot of

DEAR ABBY: I'm 26, single (by choice) and not a badlooking woman. There's a man (also single) who works where I work. Solly and I kid around a lot, but he's more of a friend than a boyfriend.

At an office party last Christmas, I told Solly if he lost 30 pounds he'd be terrific looking. He said If I gave him an "incentive"—like spending the night with him—he'd lose 30 pounds.

Well, I couldn't see Solly losing 30 pounds, so I said it

Much to my surprise, Solly went on a diet, and so far he's lost 26 pounds, and I know he'll lose the other four soon. I never planned on paying off. Now what do I do?

DEAR NERVOUS: Pay off. And spend the night reading the Bible to Solly.

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow, attempting to run a small motel. I must pay the mortgage, taxes, insurance, etc., and live on what's left.

I have no hired help and must do most of the repairs my-I keep my rates low to compete with the luxury credit-

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB - For the past two years I have been giving my children, ages 11 and 7, low-fat and skim milk. I asked the doctor if they were getting enough calcium and he said they were. Recently I heard a nutritionist claim that children should have whole milk to get the calcium they need. Who do I believe? Are there other foods that supply calci-

DEAR READER - I would suggest you place your trust in the food analysis of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. There is no calcium whatsoever in the fat in milk. It is the fat that's removed from low-fat and skim milk.

In fact, if you were to check the agricultural handbooks for food values you would find that fortified skim milk and fortified lowfat milk, which is what most people use in these instances, contain considerably more protein and cal-cium per glass than ordi-nary whole milk. Perhaps you misunderstood the nutritionist. She may just have been talking about milk in general and cited whole milk as it is commonly used, rather than implying that if the milk wasn't whole you wouldn't get the calcium you

To give you more informa-tion about milk and the calcium and protein content of whole milk, low-fat milk and skim milk I am sending you The Health Letter number 7-2. are our best sources of calcium in the diet. One of my favorites in this group from a health point of view is lowfat cottage cheese, sometimes referred to as slim cheese or low calorie cheese You can also use low-fat yogurt provided you don't have a problem of intolerance for milk sugar. In that instance some of the yogurts may not be satisfactory.

Mature beans contain an appreciable amount of calcium, considerable amounts of protein and are a low-fat food. Canned salmon or sardines, if you eat the bones, also supply an appreciable amount of calcium. There is a certain amount of calcium in the leafy vegetables but very often this calcium is not readily absorbed from the digestive tract. It isn't always available to the body. DEAR DR. LAMB - I have a friend in college who studies many hours a day and gets very little physical activity. She eats quite a bit but she doesn't get fat. Does studying use a lot of calories? Would you use more calories studying for three hours than you would just sitting for three hours?

DEAR READER - I hate to disappoint you but the brain uses very little energy even when one is concentrating on extremely difficult tasks. It has been said that you can run the brain on less calories than you find in one peanut, which I guess means that all of us have peanut

This is one of the main reasons that office workers and people who use their brains tend to get fat. Desk work of any type in a person who does very little exercise means that the person doesn't use very many calo-

Knits for trim look

Maybe you have taken off pounds this summer, and maybe you haven't. If you have, keep them off. If you haven't, try harder! You know how important it is to look trim all year round, but if you need incentive for the fall, imagine yourself in a figure-flattering knit dress you can work yourself. Dresses are still a must for the active woman who constantly needs to look her best. A dress can be worn on more occasions than any other garment and especially one that looks sporty or elegant on demand. Highlight it with a jacket I'll feature in my next column.

Take your fashion a la mode instead of your pie, and you'll win the battle of the waistline. The blouson effect and the bell sleeves make this dress in vogue and drawstring dieter's dream.

Keep your fingers busy with needles instead of forks and start knitting! You'll need 1 ounce skeins of Bear Brand or Fleisher's Machine Washable Fingering Yarn and a size 1 crochet hook.

To receive directions for this attractive dress send 50 cents to Stitchin' Time, P.O. Box 503, Radio City Station. New York, N.Y.10019. Ask for leaflet S505, and don't forget to include your name, address and zip code.

KNIT KNACKS Dear Judy Love: How do you block a garment? -

C.B., Chicago, Ill. Dear C.B.: Most manmade fibers (orlon, nylon, etc.) can be steamed lightly and don't require blocking. However, wool garments must always be blocked.

Smooth each piece of work out on a padded surface. Put rustproof pins along the top and bottom, measuring to the correct length. Then pin along the sides keeping the pattern straight and the measurement correct. For blocking flat surfaces (like garments using the stockinette stitch or flat rows of crocheting), cover with a damp cloth and lower iron gently, allowing steam to penetrate the item. Under no circumstances should you press down hard or hold iron in one place until the cloth is back and forth. For items made of fluffy wool or items where you've used raised stitches, hold the iron as close as possible to the piece but do not touch it. Slowly move the iron, making sure the steam is pene-

dry. Don't slide the iron trating the knitting or crocheting. Do not remove rustproof pins until the pieces are completely dry. Then, after garment is sewn together, steam press the seams flat using the same method. - Happy Knitting! (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Although its origin is controversial, the hamburger is thought to have been inspired by Tatar invaders inhabiting the Baltic region in the Middle Ages, according to National Geographic. Sailors from Hamburg, Germany, who saw the Tatars eating the raw, chopped meat took the idea home.

Mens wear at guessing stage

By Charles Hix

Men's wearables are entering a Guess-Where stage. Body awareness and health consciousness show no signs of abating, with running an ongoing national phenomenon and with more men than ever taking up a variety of sporting activi-

Men's designers, sniffing new profits, jumped into the arena with outfits created for specific games: They spawned racquetball outfits and sailing outfits and every type of outfit from tennis to soccer. A multi-faceted jock needed three or four closets to store his sporty ensembles if he wanted to keep pace with the sportswear onslaught.

Too much too soon. That's why a number of menswear companies this season recognized that a new genre of sportswear - the Guess-Where (alternately, the Guess-What) variety - was needed to straddle more than a few fences.

Active sports influences in menswear, such as true-blue baseball jackets and numeral football jerseys, though still around, are being replaced by more chameleonthese? It's all, and more. It's a warm-up outfit and it's athome loungewear. The hat can be a golf cap; the jacket can masquerade as a sweater; the pull-ons are exercise pants; the pac is a knapsack. The outfit is a Guess-Where one: Once you assemble the "neutral" pieces, guess where and under what circumstances the wearer can show up in all or part of

This transitional approach to sportswear reflects what is happening in casual attire on a larger scale. Paradoxically, what we consider the epitome of formalwear today - top hat and tails was once the sportswear of the equestrian set in England. Today's business suit, in fact, evolved from the 'lounge suit" that was spectator sportswear during the early years of this century. Sportswear, today, is not necessarily clothing worn only for sport. Many still consider sport jackets by their name and nature sportswear.

But the ties to the sporting world in general and to specific sports in particular are loosening. The Guess-Where attitude is infiltrating all men's clothing levels. For example, country clothes are part of an urban sprawl of new ensembles. That's easy to see. On the other hand, the origins of many other sportswear looks are no longer apparent. Another case in point is an outfit from Lobo, a division of PenWest. Supposedly the tan poplin big-top outershirt is Scandinavian-inspired. At least that's what the company says. But who can tell?

It's just a good-looking top that can be worn with the coordinating pin wale corduroy slacks or not. It can be worn over another shirt or not. It can be worn sailing or not. It, too, is sportswear without a Where destination dictated by the design. Hence, it's at home in a variety of settims.

As sportswear is freed from the associations of oneactivity-only design, it moves more fluidly into the American male's lifestyle. This direction-less course of design is a new direction. And a solid one. Guess where menswear is going? The wearables look as if they are heading toward greater flexibility and more responsiveness to the American male's true needs. away from the fanciful and limiting impositions of overly literal designers.

Trial outcome could change television programs

SAN_FRANCISCO (AP) -The outcome of an $11 million negligence suit, charging that an NBC television movie inspired the rape of a 9-year-old girl on a San Francisco beach, could pose a huge question for the future of TV programming.

The trial begins today in San Francisco Superior Court.

Seeking $1 million in compensatory damages and $10 million in punitive damages, Valeria Niemi of San Francisco claims in her suit against NBC-TV and its local affiliate, KRON, that the three girls who raped her 9-year-old daughter with a beer bottle were imitat-

and put on probation. Abrams said he would argue the film did not spawn the attack. He said a defeat-in the case could have wide-reaching effects on television by intimidating future portrayals of "life as-it-is "

Defense attorney Marvin Lewis said, "It's merely our contention that the particular scene, which was graphic and unnecessary for the telling of the plot, caused harm to an innocent victim."

Lewis contended that "there is no question that children and young people learn by imitation," saying that studies back him up.

The two-hour film, aired at 7:30 p.m. in some areas and 8 p.m. in others, helped force creation of "family-hour" programming, in which the FCC banned sex and violence in the early evening.

Last fall, 15-year-old Ronald Zamora was convicted in Miami of murdering an elderly woman neighbor, despite his lawver's argument of insanity brought on by violence on television.

The judge in that case refused to allow the defense to present expert testimony on the effect of TV violence. Zamora is serving a life sentence in a juvenile facility.

Mrs. Niemi's suit was initially dismissed in 1976 by a state trial judge who ruled the litigation was barred by constitutional guarantees of free speech and free press.

But the state Court of Appeals overturned that decision,

Government launches attack on carbon monoxide in cigarettes

By JEFFREY MILLS Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Opening another front in its war on smoking, the federal government plans to publicize a new peril - carbon monoxide - in hopes of prodding the tobacco industry to reduce that substance as it has tar and nico-

The Federal Trade Commission is currently developing a machine that tests the level of carbon monoxide smokers are inhaling. For a decade, the FTC has been providing figures on tar and nicotine levels.

FTC officials said the first test figures on carbon monoxide in each brand of cigarette are anticipated next year. Those figures are expected to be required in cigarette advertisements, just as tar and nicotine levels are now.

Researchers say carbon monoxide in cigarette smoke cuts down the amount of oxygen in the blood at the same time that the nicotine is increasing the heart's demand for oxygen.

FTC Chairman Michael Pertschuk said carbon monoxide had been singled out as another significant hazard in smoking by both the Public Health Service and the National Clearinghouse for Smoking and

"It is based on their urging that we add carbon monoxide to the items to be tested andd published." he said Federal officials have campaigned against smoking since the famous 1964 surgeon general's report linked it to major health problems. The tobacco industry insists that the scientific case showing smoking causes fatal diseases has not by midnight Aug. 8, and noth-AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - It ing on Briscoe's lengthy agenda had received final legislative approval as the special session went into the last full week. The Senate, perhaps in a mood of wishful thinking, voted to adjourn at 6 p.m. Tuesday. The House, however, has not set a time to guit.

Briscoe has the option of calling lawmakers back if their efforts do not satisfy him. A now-you-have-it, now-youdon't 100th vote escaped Speaker Bill Clayton on Friday, but he predicted that the House today will get the two-thirds majority it needs to approve a property tax relief package.

The House and Senate also scheduled debate on a bill to consolidate all property appraisals for tax purposes within a county in a single countywide appraisal office.

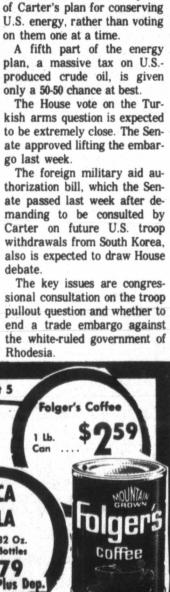

The bill, by Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, also would establish a board to set statewide appraisal standards and issue manuals and forms to guide local appraisal officials.

It appeared the House had concluded three days of debate Friday by adopting a broad tax relief proposal, but the disappearance of Rep. Betty Denton, D-Waco, dropped the vote to 99-42 on the recount.

The proposed constitutional amendment would:

-Ban a state personal or corporation income tax. -Allow local voters to repeal property tax increases.
