

Courthouse 'impressive' to youngsters

The most impressive part of the Gray County Courthouse is the jail, according to the reactions of first, second and third grade students from the Lefors Baptist Church Vacation Bible School after touring the building.

"It was real nice," said Lesli Wadley, third grade. "I liked it." When asked what she liked about it, she said, "I guess going up to see the jail."

"I liked the jails," said Belinda Ferguson, third grade.

"They were scary. I wouldn't like to stay in jail."

Jason Wilson, third grade, said that he would like to stay in jail.

"I'd rather be in jail than in prison, he said. "Cause in prison they make you work. But that jail looked scary. Them weren't like in the old days when they just had bars going up and down. They had bars going across."

"I'd like to work in a courthouse," said Wayne Gifford, third grade. "I'd like to work in the jail and catch the bad guys. But I wouldn't like to stay in jail. You might not get out for years." After seeing the jail Wilson also decided that he would like to work in a jail. "I want to be a policeman," he said. "So I could get the bad guys. I'd like to wear a gun."

Some of the students were impressed by other parts of the courthouse.

"I liked the table where the judge sat, said Pat Keckler, third grade. "I wouldn't like to sit up there. It's too high."

Tracy Reeves, second grade, was impressed by the cleanliness of the courthouse. "I had never seen a courthouse... well, I've seen one before. This one was much nicer. The last one I saw had paper all over the floor." She said the other courthouse was in California.

The 25 students and six teachers toured the courthouse yesterday morning. The tours were directed by Paul Ortega, night jailer, and Bridget Vinson, sheriff's office secretary.

Carol Wadley, pastor's wife, arranged the tour by calling Sheriff Rufe Jordan.

"We're glad to have them come around," the sheriff said. "I'm sure it makes an impression on them."

Judges refuses to stop vote by union on postal contract

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge refused today to block the nation's largest postal union from proceeding with a rank-and-file contract ratification vote, saying balloting increases the chances for averting a mail strike.

U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker denied a request by a dissident local union leader to stop the vote by 300,000 postal workers on the grounds that the vote would be illegal and could lead to more labor strife.

"The public interest in having the mail undisturbed is obvious," Parker said. But he said it is preferable to hold a ratification vote "sooner rather than later."

Acceptance by the rank and file "increases chances for labor peace," he added. The American Postal Workers Union said after the decision that the union would begin mailing ballots today. The union estimates it will take about three weeks to complete the ratification process.

The suit for an injunction was brought by John Richards, president of the APWU's Pittsburgh-area local. Richards contended in the suit that union leaders should renegotiate the beleaguered contract with the U.S. Postal Service rather than seek rank-and-file approval.

But the Postal Service has indicated it would be unwilling to return to the bargaining table despite mounting calls by local union leaders for rejection of the pact.

Threats of a mail strike have continued since a tentative accord was reached on July 21 because of strong opposition within union ranks.

The three-year agreement has come under increasing attack from local leaders of the APWU and the National Association of Letter Carriers, which together represent 482,000 of 570,000 unionized postal workers.

Last week APWU members staged wildcat walkouts at postal centers in New Jersey and California to protest the settlement.

On Monday, leaders of the APWU's 23,000-member New York Area Postal Union called for the contract's rejection while delegates to the letter carriers' national convention in Chicago rejected the pact in a non-binding voice vote.

APWU President Emmet Andrews said the main objection to the pact centers on a proposed 19.5 percent wage increase, spread over three years, which dissidents say is not high enough. The typical postal worker now makes about $16,000 a year.

But Andrews said Tuesday that despite opposition to the contract from local leaders, he was receiving favorable mail indicating that the agreement would be ratified by his members.

Death toll mounts as deluge continues

Flood gathers new strength from rain

By GREG THOMPSON Associated Press Writer BANDERA, Texas (AP) — Raging floodwaters that have claimed the lives of at least eight persons in the Central Texas Hill Country gathered new strength today as rainfall refused to quit.

The waters of the Upper Guadalupe River reached new crests as authorities still worked to locate persons reported missing from Wednesday's rampaging rivers.

As much as fourteen inches of rain fell during the night on already heavily-saturated soil. The National Weather Service at San Antonio advised persons living in the flood plains of the Guadalupe from Kerrville to Spring Branch to evacuate. The 20-mile stretch included the town of Comfort, hard-hit Wednesday.

Some 200 persons in Kerrville and nearby Ingram were evacuated during the night.

Torrential rains from thunderstorms spawned by Tropical Storm Amelia caused rivers to storm from their banks into riverfront communities and campsites early Wednesday. Floodwaters began subsiding later in the day, but the night's additional rainfall posed new problems.

A spokesman for the Texas

Department of Public Safety said the list of confirmed dead includes two women at Bandera, two men at Comfort, and three adults and a 12-year-old boy at Center Point, between Comfort and Kerrville.

The spokesman said officials in Bandera, Kerr and Kendall counties were unable to confirm other reports of deaths though they have still failed to account for several persons.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe has asked that all three counties be declared disaster areas and made eligible for emergency assistance funds and programs. Ironically, the area has recently been plagued by drought.

Two persons were hospitalized after receiving "major injuries" in the Bandera County flooding along the Medina River, deputies said.

Entrances to the LBJ Ranch near Stonewall, Texas, were blocked by the raging floodwaters of the Pedernales River. Rising waters failed to reach the house, but came within feet of the stone fence circling the family cemetery where the late President Lyndon B. Johnson is buried.

Heavy rains in the area Tuesday and Wednesday turned several normally placid rivers into surging death traps. In a 48-hour period ending late Wednesday night, Kerrville had received 22 inches of rain.

The Medina River reached a record flood stage, cresting at 45 feet. The previous record was 43 feet set in 1919. The usual level of the river is 10 feet. Weather forecasters said the crest on the spillway at the Medina Dam would likely reach five feet over the top.

Widespread flooding is expected from below the dam to the confluence with the San Antonio River, which was expected to crest near 44 feet where the normal level is 20 feet.

Kerrville, located on the Guadalupe River about 25 miles north of Bandera, resembled a war zone as National Guard troops, Army and state police helicopters and scores of police deposited stunned refugees at evacuation centers. Telephone communications were severely hampered in the stricken areas.

Jim Robinson, the DPS spokesman, said all youth camps along the rampaging Guadalupe River were warned at daybreak to evacuate or move to higher ground. He said all children at the Guadalupe River camps were believed safe and accounted for.

Robinson said camps along the swollen Medina River in Bandera County also had been evacuated, although deputies were unsure if everyone had been reached in time.

Children rescued from the Serendip Camp on the Medina River were taken to the Pipe Creek Volunteer Fire Department. Refugees from Camp Bandera were taken to a church in Bandera.

Late Wednesday night, National Guardsmen forded a stream late Wednesday night to rescue 156 girls from the isolated Herman-Scott camp. The girls were taken to a high school in Comfort where they were reunited with their families.

More than 150 evacuees cramped into the VA Hospital at Kerrville or into the city's municipal auditorium. A preliminary survey of the Kendall County area showed about 400 persons were left homeless and were being sheltered in emergency shelters.

In Medina, police reported the Medina River was flowing through downtown buildings. In Bandera, residents were calling it the worst flood since 1900. As floodwaters began receding, many residents returned to their homes to find they had lost everything.

In both communities, Army helicopters plucked people out of trees and off rooftops.

Jaworski withdraws from probe

By JIM ADAMS and MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN Associated Press Writers WASHINGTON (AP) — Leon Jaworski says he could not pry out the full story of South Korean influence-buying in Congress because he lacked the power of the U.S. court system which enabled him to expose President Richard M. Nixon's role in Watergate.

Congress applied all the pressure it could in an unsuccessful effort to get sworn testimony from former South Korean ambassador Kim Dong Jo about alleged payoffs to between six and 10 congressmen — some still in Congress, Jaworski said in an exclusive interview Wednesday.

Despite State Department opposition, Jaworski has won House approval of a $56 million cut in economic aid to South Korea. But he said Congress could not risk "having a bloodbath in South Korea" by cutting off U.S. military aid.

And he said the State Department, possibly with President Carter's tacit support, blunted Congress' pressure by publicly siding with Seoul.

Without the ambassador's testimony there is nothing more he can do and so he intends to withdraw, Jaworski told the House in a letter.

"I wish to emphasize that I am not resigning as special counsel," he told Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill. "The purpose of this letter is to make clear that my contract obligation... has been fulfilled."

Rep. John J. Flynt, D-Ga., chairman of the ethics committee which is conducting the Korean investigation, accepted Jaworski's decision to step aside and thanked him for his service.

In a 32-page report, Jaworski said the investigation is "now incomplete" because it has not proved or disproved information that former ambassador Kim Dong Jo paid off as many as 10 House members.

"If the efforts to learn the truth about Kim Dong Jo's activities were deficient, the responsibility is entirely mine," Jaworski said.

But he said that although incomplete, the investigation did expose South Korean influence efforts and possible misconduct by congressmen.

In the interview, Jaworski said there is no doubt in his mind that former Washington socialite Tongsun Park, who admits giving some $850,000 to congressmen, was an agent trying to buy influence for Seoul.

"He did their bidding," Jaworski said. "He was subject to their beck and call. There was just not the slightest question in my mind about that."

The 72-year-old, white-haired Houston lawyer did not flinch when asked why as special Watergate prosecutor he was able to nail Nixon but could not get the whole story on Korean efforts in Congress.

"In Watergate," he said, "I had at my disposal and available to me the powers of the legal and judicial process."

"I could go all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court and insist upon the president responding to what I wanted."

Nixon resigned Aug. 9, 1974, after Jaworski and his staff won from the Supreme Court release of White House tape recordings including one of the president agreeing to a coverup plan.

Jury returns no indictments in Perryton shooting death

PERRYTON — No indictments were returned by the Ochiltree County grand jury Wednesday evening in connection with the Tuesday morning shooting death of Pablo "Paul" Martinez, 25, of Canyon, by city police officers.

However, the possibility of civil action looms as leaders of Mexican-American groups demand state and federal investigation of what they termed an example of "an epidemic of killings of Mexican-Americans by Texas enforcement officers."

The grand jury deliberated for six hours Wednesday and questioned 12 witnesses in connection with Martinez' death.

After the grand jury returned its findings, District Attorney Bill Rivers identified the two officers involved in the scuffle with Martinez and the later shooting.

Rivers said that Gary Farr, 32, a three-year veteran of the police department, fired the shotgun blast which struck Martinez in the left calf and both feet, but failed to stop him, as he fled from two officers who attempted to arrest him.

The second officer, according to the district attorney, was Mike Vick, 26, who has been a city patrolman for six months.

Vick was reported to have fired three shots during the incidents which led to Martinez' death.

Rivers said Vick fired a warning shot as he was trying to stop Martinez at the drive-in where he first stopped the victim who had fled from an apartment house where police responded to a disturbance call.

The other two shots were fired about three hours later, the district attorney said, as Martinez fled following a scuffle with Vick and Farr when they tried to arrest him at a service station.

Vick, according to Rivers, fired the two shots from his .357

Magnum revolver after Farr discharged shotgun. The first shot reportedly struck Martinez in the left side of the back and exited in the heart area.

Martinez died about 20 minutes later in the Ochiltree General Hospital. The other bullet had not been located late Wednesday.

Investigation of the shooting was conducted by his office, Rivers said, and Texas Ranger Bill Baten of Pampa with assistance of the police department and Ochiltree County sheriff's office.

The district attorney said he depends upon the grand jury "as the conscience of the community" and carries out its wishes regarding incidents brought before the grand jury.

But, while any possible criminal action in connection with the death has ended, the possibility of civil charges was growing.

An officer of the Federal Bureau of investigation was in Perryton Wednesday in connection with Martinez' death.

Attorney General Griffin Bell had been sent a telegram by the League of United Latin American Citizens concerning the shooting.

Martinez reportedly had escaped from jails in Texas and Oklahoma six times in recent years.

Wednesday authorities here learned he and a woman companion were sought by Oklahoma authorities in connection with an armed robbery and auto theft last week at Sallisaw, Okla.

Perryton police had questioned a woman, reportedly with Martinez, following the Tuesday morning shooting. However, she was released following the questioning, police said.

Officers here believe the woman is responsible for theft of a Cadillac, reported missing shortly after her release.

Medina terrifies flood victims

BANDERA, Texas (AP) — Eighty-year-old Claribel Lovelace built her sturdy rock house in 1934, a respectful 700 yards from the sometimes stormy Medina River.

But 43 years later, the Medina paid a terrifying maiden visit — with eight feet of churning, muddy floodwaters that left her gasping for breath for two hours in the six inches between the water and her ceiling.

"My mouth was against the ceiling and my hair was in the water," said the frightened Mrs. Lovelace, who was plucked from the water by rescuers in an Army helicopter. "I only had six inches of air to breathe."

"I was there more than two hours. You'll never know how frightening it was," she added. "The river has never even gotten close to my house since I built it. The house is still standing, but everything inside is ruined."

Wednesday's record flooding in the Central Texas Hill Country devastated much of Bandera, Comfort and Medina, killing at least eight persons and leaving others missing in the swirling waters.

In Bandera, the frothing flood waters sheared a new $150,000 rock house from its foundation, leaving a slick concrete slab. Century-old cypress trees were snapped like matchsticks. Asphalt was easily stripped from highways.

The water ripped through Clint Dowell's automobile dealership about 150 yards from where the river normally flows, tossing dozens of new and used cars around like fishing corks and demolishing the building.

When the waters receded, Dowell's inventory was scattered up and down the Medina or stacked like cordwood in the mud-covered parking lot. He estimated the damage at more than $1 million.

Bandera's lucrative Medina River dude ranches were the hardest hit. Many vacationers were rescued from trees or rooftops by Army helicopters. The victims came out in black plastic body bags. Others were lost and feared dead in the churning waters.

More than 20 terrified Peaceful Valley vacationers, including 1977 Miss USA, Kim Tomes of Houston, were forced to cling to tree limbs while balancing for six hours on the roof of the camp headquarters. The water roared only a foot below the top of the roof, which is 20 feet high.

Houston businessman Steve Muller grasped an overhanging tree limb with one hand and held a fellow camper's 1-year-old infant with the other. The child slept through it all.

"Something woke me up about 4 a.m.," said Muller. "I found my foot out of bed and put out I was in six inches of water. I knew then that something was wrong because the water should have been 30 feet away. It rose about a foot in the next 30 seconds."

"The tree seemed as good a place as any," joked Muller. "Miss USA had the tree reserved next to me."

Muller and his two teen-aged sons escaped with only their swimming trunks. His wife, two young daughters and one of their friends had been sent to Bandera because of the high water. "If they hadn't left, I have no doubt they would have died."

School board to accept bids

James Trusty, assistant superintendent for the Pampa public schools, announced Wednesday the school board will be receiving bids August 7 for window repairs.

Trusty said the repairs have an estimated cost of $120,000 to $160,000, and will be done at Pampa High, Mann Elementary, Wilson Elementary and Baker Elementary.

He explained the elementary schools are approximately 50 years old, and in need of repairs.

Trusty said although many of the repairs have taken place this summer some of the routine work won't be completed until early fall, after school starts. He added the majority of the work was contracted to outsiders.

Inflation's toll

There appears to be a general acceptance that we can live with a certain amount of continuing inflation. This acceptance is more prevalent in the bureaucratic sector, but is highly noticeable among those operating in the private sector.

In the first place, to assume that inflation can remain at any set figure is fallacious. The very nature of the brute is such that once started its many ramifications insure that it will exert strong pressure to escalate.

And, even if it could be kept at the same rate from year to year, a long range projection should scare even the most complacent among us. An article in Grit, the national weekly newspaper, reported on some of the results of a long range projection study.

The study was made by Manplan Consultants, a Chicago company, and revealed that if the present rate of inflation continues through year 2001, a pound of coffee will cost $40,000.

Other estimates were: $8,786 for a pound of potatoes, eight ounces of cheese at $6,148, a bar of soap at $61.12, a compact car would bring $105,000 and an average home would go for $1.1 million.

The study stated that if wages increase at 6 percent per year a minimum wage would reach $20,618 and a plumber in San Francisco would earn $147,791 a year. If wages increased at an annual rate of 12 percent, the plumber would make $580,827.

Shades of 1923 Germany, when a pound of butter sold for 6 trillion marks! George Swope, a partner in the Chicago firm said, "The projections are what can happen under present trends. The figures are meant as a lesson more than anything else. I hope I am wrong."

Swope also said, "What we are pointing out is that we dare not let inflation get way from us. At some point in double digits, inflation becomes rampant. And nobody knows where that point is."

The unseen part of inflation is the acceleration of inequities which result in any continuing inflation and which become magnified greatly as time goes by. People on fixed incomes are the first casualties, but they do not stand alone for long.

Right now, thousands of people who are moving ahead in income are finding they cannot afford many things which were common to them in the recent past.

We do not know where the movement to higher tax brackets will take most of the productive people this year. It would be our guess that the added income taken by the IRS will be greater than any "tax relief" which will be voted by Congress.

If our guess is near correct, it becomes easy to understand why the political community so readily accepts inflation as a fact of our economic life.

However, government people have reason to beware. If a major recession or a monetary collapse ensues, they might just be the first to suffer the most.

Productive people usually have something of value in talents to barter with. But what would a government regulator have to trade for sustenance?

Nation's Press

Befogged by 'Mental Health'

By JOAN BECK
(Chicago Tribune)

I must be mentally ill, or whatever is the opposite of having "mental health." At least, I think so, after slogging and skimming through the 2,242 pages of the report of The President's Commission on Mental Health. That's the group of which Rosalynn Carter is honorary chairperson.

There's no doubt that I am now depressed - and depression for whatever cause seems to qualify me as a person in need of mental health care by the report's broad, loose standards. In fact, the report puts so many big, broad groups of people under its mentally unhealthy umbrella it's enough to depress everyone else.

The massive report tells in endless detail about legal and ethical issues, about the racial, ethnic, and family demographics of the United States, about health care delivery systems - and especially about the need for more federal money. But nowhere does it define specifically what mental health is.

The closest the report comes in 2,242 pages is to say that "opinions vary on how mental health and mental illness should be defined" and that "available data are often inadequate or misleading."

To back up its plea for more federal money, the commission apparently throws everyone it possibly can into the mentally unhealthy category.

About 15 percent of all of us currently need some mental health services, the commission estimates. Twenty-five percent of us - about 55 million people - suffer from mild to moderate depression, anxiety, psychophysiological discomforts, insomnia, loneliness, and other indicators of emotional disorder" at any one time. Ten million are alcoholics. Millions more misuse drugs. Two million children have learning disabilities. Six million people are mentally retarded. An unknown number of parents abuse children.

If that isn't enough, the commission adds more categories of people who either are - or in the commission's view should be - in need of mental health care. Many of the 40 million physically handicapped Americans have emotional problems, it estimates. So do many of the 23 million people over age 65. And it says, we must also include "the damage to mental health" associated with poverty, unemployment, and discrimination based on race, sex, class, age and mental and physical handicaps.

What the report should have strongly recommended was more objective research to separate disorders and injuries of the brain from emotional problems caused by life stresses. A person whose depression is caused by a biochemical abnormality needs different treatment from one who is depressed because he has lost his job or his wife, for example.

But the report lumps both kinds of problems under "mental health." And aside from brief mention in the appendix, it gives only a few paragraphs to the urgent need for medically oriented research. It is entirely feasible we can discover biochemical and surgical ways to prevent and treat most organic brain disorders; it is a far different challenge to teach coping skills and emotional controls to deal with inevitable problems of living.

The commission also brushes off the question of the ineffectiveness of much current treatment for mental health problems. No matter how great the need for help, it is foolish to recommend a great expansion of mental health services until they can be proved to be effective by objective, scientific criteria.

No matter. The commission plunges ahead, calling for more money to throw at "mental health." It is full of all the bureaucratic buzz words, all the current kowtows to minorities, and all the tricks for estimating low initial price tags for programs whose costs will quickly escalate out of control.

The report recommends, for example, "networks of high quality, comprehensive mental health services throughout the country which are sufficiently flexible to respond to changing circumstances and to the diverse racial and cultural backgrounds of individuals."

But before I buy that and all the other recommendations in this massive report - or rather, before I am taxed to help pay for them - I'd still like to know precisely what "mental health" is and exactly how those mental health services propose to bring it to those who don't have it.

By RUSSELL BAKER
NEW YORK - My policy on fashion is to sit tight. When a garment goes out of style, I do not discard it and rush to buy the season's latest look. I hang the unfashionable threads in the attic and sit tight.

Sooner or later, if you sit tight long enough and refuse to panic, fashion will travel full circle and bring your old wardrobe back into high style. Or so I have always believed. For this reason, I have always sat tight and bided my time.

The problem, of course, is that fashion can be devilishly slow in getting back around to the treasures waiting in the attic.

As a result, one is sometimes hard pressed for something suitable for self-adornment when the occasion calls for looking like a peacock.

Caught in this social quagmire one day, I was near tears at the humiliating prospect of having to step out in my all-purpose bank teller's pinstripes and paisley necktie when I remembered my oatmeal suit.

The fashion trend seemed propitious for the oatmeal suit. I recalled it as being very tight, and tightness had become decidedly chic. Most of the fancier men had taken to having their clothes molded to their forms, a fashion on which I had decided to sit tight, not because body-molded clothes seemed like a poor long-term investment, but because my form is not at its most fetching when every ounce of flab can be seen rippling dazingly under the fabric.

The oatmeal suit had always been tight, even in the Stone Age of men's fashion from which it dated. I well remembered the astonishment produced when, taut in its hard, lean contours, I appeared among men wearing suits which, in the style of that day, flapped about them like sheets in a gale.

The oatmeal suit was not made, of oatmeal, of course. It was simply the color of oatmeal, before cooking. I had paid perhaps $49 for it at the time of purchase, which would be about $200 in present-day American currency. As for its age, I remembered wearing it at the Democratic National Convention that nominated Estes Kefauver rather than John Kennedy for Vice Presidency.

With the oatmeal suit and a pair of stiletto-toed black shoes stored in the attic since an Atlantic crossing on the Mauretania, a social triumph seemed possible.

And there it was! Hung away between a double-breasted blue flannel with pegged cuffs and shoulders broad enough to conceal a matching-gun holster - an investment last used for a marriage, but still ready to go the instant the zoot suit returns to fashion - and my indestructible Scottish thorn-proof suit.

The Scottish thorn-proof was already out of style when purchased in 1953, being cut with voluminously flaring trousers and pinch-waisted narrow jacket in the fashion reminiscent of Jazz Age cakewalkers. At $25 off the rack in Edinburgh, however, it seemed an irresistible bargain which would turn other men puce with envy once the cakewalker style made its comeback.

After some miserly cracking over my horde, I extracted the oatmeal suit and let it contain me. The lapels curled outward. Flaps on the jacket pockets curled this way and that, in the frizzled style now so popular in female hair.

The suit was no longer pencil slim. In fact, the trousers were wide enough to shelter a tete-a-tete. The seat ballooned and the jacket hung in festoons from the shoulders.

No, the oatmeal suit had not fattened and grown with age, nor had I shrunk. Fashion had simply played another of its vile jokes. What had seemed slim compared with the tent-stylings popular at its creation now seemed flowing compared to the form-molded styles of its maturity. The slim look had come back, sure enough, but the pirates in the garment business had made sure it bore so little resemblance to the original that anyone who tried to get away without buying a new suit would pay a high price in humiliation.

They're not going to crush me that easily. I have cancelled all my engagements and decided to sit tight. The oatmeal suit is back in the attic. One of these days, the garment business will slip up and a man wandering through the attic will thank his lucky stars he had a great-granddaddy who was ages ahead of the trend.

The lost art of barbecuing

My eyes, my nose and my palate keep remembering barbecue the way it used to be.

Some future generation surviving on nutritious but sterile pills may not mind. But if some scholar of the future researching us should wonder about the lost art of barbecuing - may I leave this message for him.

Succulent, aromatic, juicy and beautiful barbecue is remembered from my childhood in Tulsa, Okla.

Black men, seeking to make cheap cuts of meat palatable, created this art form. It involved swamp hickory smoke and a sauce made of tomatoes, peppers, condiments and magic.

Also, the first fast-food place in Salina, Kan., was a semi-outdoor shack where chicken was slow-cooked over charcoal.

Ralph Foster had a place staked out near Springfield, Mo., where the open-pit barbecue was classic.

And I recall a luau in Hawaii where the roast pig came close to tasting like barbecue should.

But there has been none since. Now they take cheap meat and shred it or marinate it or roast it over hot rocks - and they drown it with catsup.

Much of the problem relates to government restrictions on "open burning." The Environmental Protection Agency has decided there is something evil and dangerous about the wonderful wood smoke which caressed our lungs for generations.

Used to be I could jog past Russell's Barbecue on the edge of Thatcher Woods and inhale that deliciousness with such happy anticipation. Any more, the chimney is throttled. Russell's still calls it "barbecue" but smokeless barbecue is like a kiss on the forehead.

Memorial Day we have our traditional backyard outing at the Elmer Stamms, whatever is broiled is broiled over gas! And gas barbecue is like a belch in church!

I'm told that some Southerners surreptitiously manage to gather and soak swamp hickory and that they bootleg real barbecue sauce and thus cook and baste brisket or ribs the way we used to. But they'll have to show me.

I've attended big shindigs in West Texas where they bury tons of meat wrapped in wet burlap over coals and underground overnight, but that's only because there are no ovens adequate for such large portions. It does not taste like the barbecue of my youth.

Perhaps after our taxpayers reassert their rights, our country boys will seek liberation from thawed and microwaved stuff and rediscover the lost art of barbecuing.

Until we do, the future will be that much less than the past.

Postal holding operation

By DON GRAFF

As a crisis, it turned out to be one of the non-events of the year so far.

And that is good news. Very bad news would have been any of a number of alternative outcomes - another potent upward twist to the inflationary spiral, a nationwide walkout, a long-term setback or reform, a collapse of already shaky public confidence in the postal system's ability to shape itself up.

As it did turn out, the postal workers settlement is a draw with a time limit. No one is really satisfied, particularly some union members who have their point with sporadic work stoppages. But it could have been worse for everyone.

The unions are getting much less than the 14 percent annual increases originally demanded, but they do have a three-year guarantee against mass staff reductions resulting from automation.

Postal Service management, dedicated to trimming personnel, yielded on the no-layoff issue this time. But it has held the settlement within limits which it says will not necessitate a postage rate increase for the duration of the contract.

The wage package working out to an average 6.5 percent a year may not have been a victory for the administration, but it avoided another damaging defeat in the anti-inflation battle. It exceeds the standard of 5.5 percent set for federal employees in general, but it's considerably less painful than big increases won by coal miners and railroad unions earlier in the year. It can serve as a reasonably good example for major contract negotiations coming up next year.

But the real achievement of the settlement may be in having bought time, three crisis-free years in which to reorganize the postal structure and operations.

Congress and the administration are already well along toward reforming the reforms of 1970, which sought to isolate the service from politics and turn it into a profit-making government corporation run along the lines of a private business. It hasn't worked. Politics are being put back in, with the postmaster general again becoming a presidential appointee and the inevitable Treasury subsidies removed from the emergency category.

Technological innovation should begin to yield some dividends. The service is beginning experiments with electronic message transmission, including use of satellites in international communication.

Such innovations, and increased use by private business of telephone-line facsimile systems, may have some effect in decreasing the cumbersome and costly physical moving about of mass quantities of paper.

Postal managers, however, believe the greatest improvements in both efficiency and cost effectiveness will come from increased mechanization and automation in mail handling.

Personnel costs account for 85 percent of the Postal Service's current $17 billion budget, almost 1 percent of the gross national product. Some 90 thousand jobs have been trimmed, largely through attrition, during the past several years. In coming years, the service wants to be in position to make further deep cuts in the present 700 thousand staff as technological advances make this possible. Which means the non-layoff clause, which union leaders see as their real victory in this contract, could be the do-or-die issue for both sides next time.

The real crisis for the Postal Service, and the public, may come three years from now.

Consumers may save with 'lifeline' rates

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Fewer local calls could mean more dollars saved for roughly 1.4 million residential customers of Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. under the company's newest rate order.

In an "experiment" involving 15 cities, the Texas Public Utility Commission Wednesday ordered Bell to provide optional "lifeline" rates at approximately 40 percent less than standard monthly charges.

"The utility consumers of Texas have had a pretty rough going in the last few years," Commissioner Alan Erwin said, "and I really believe this order is the first real, true hope for substantive relief on utility bills that they've ever had."

The commission granted an overall $124.5 million annual rate increase, compared to Bell's requested $214.3 million.

"We're sorry the commission did not see fit to agree with our request," said Bell attorney Jon Dee Lawrence.

"I'm a little surprised to see that (lifeline rates). It's an opportunity to see if there's a demand for this that's broad enough to justify its implementation," he said. "It was good to make it on a trial basis on a limited number of exchanges."

Lawrence said the company would probably decide next week whether to appeal the rate order in court. Bell recently lost a Texas Supreme Court appeal of its first, $57.8 million rate increase granted by the commission.

Only the 15 cities involved are equipped to record the number of outgoing calls from a single phone number. Bell will be given six months to implement the new measured service rates in these areas with customers having the alternative to remain under the standard monthly service charge.

Here's how the lifeline rate would work:

Customers could make 25 local calls for a flat fee and any additional calls would cost eight cents each.

The lifeline flat rate would vary according to size of the city, ranging from $5.00 in Houston to $3.70 in San Benito. Other areas slated for the new rates are Amarillo, Corpus Christi, Dallas, Galveston, Fort Worth, Harlingen, Lubbock, San Antonio, Wichita Falls, Tyler, Midland and Beaumont.

A measured rate customer could return to a standard monthly fee if he found his bills were actually higher. However, any change in rates would be subject to a service charge order fee, similar to charges for changing phone equipment.

Commission chairman George Cowden said the regulatory agency avoided calling the new rate structure "lifeline" because he said that term implies a subsidized service.

"Lifeline has so many connotations and it's considered not cost-based," Cowden said. "We don't want to mislead people that this is a service supported by other services as opposed to being cost-based."

The new rate method is the first such experiment in Texas, although experimental rate orders govern smaller parts of Southwestern Bell's operation in other states.

Among the largest discrepancies between Bell's request and the increase granted by the commissions was in basic local service charges, which Bell wanted to increase by $76.4 million. The commission granted no increase in standard local charges.

However, customers will pay $31.7 million more in gross receipts charge in the new order. The charge formerly was included in the basic local service charge, but will be broken down as a separate billing item.

Services which will have increased costs include service connection charges, Centrex phone systems and private lines. Touchtone, or pushbutton, rates will decrease by $647,000.

The order ends a rate case that began March 9. Last month, Bell asked the commission to delay its final order after the company learned one of its former employees was under criminal investigation by the U.S. attorney in Dallas.

The company later deleted $174,160 from its rate request after learning federal prosecutors had linked the amount to alleged improper equipment leases and purchases. The commission granted the deletion request.

Carter aide assaulted by 'mousse'

By JURATE KAZICKAS Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — It wasn't pie — or even mud — in the eye for top presidential assistant Hamilton Jordan on Tuesday night. It was chocolate mousse in the face.

To hear his friends tell it, Jordan was "minding his own business" at a private Georgetown party when an unidentified man appeared suddenly and hurled a handful of the gourmet chocolate pudding at a stunned Jordan.

"He certainly wasn't happy about it," said Gerald Rafshoon, who is in charge of re-making President Carter's image. Rafshoon, who also attended the party, said Jordan "was very mad. The mousse was all over his suit and face."

Rafshoon, a close friend of Jordan, said he didn't see the incident but heard about it later from Jordan.

"We haven't the slightest idea who it was or why he did it," Rafshoon said. "He could have wandered in off the street. But the guy ran away pretty fast."

Rafshoon said Jordan was "minding his own business, as usual" and did nothing to provoke the attack. "He was strictly innocent," said Rafshoon.

Jordan is no stranger to publicity about his private life. Last winter the top Carter aide was involved in an incident at a local bar where he reportedly spit Amaretto and cream, a sticky drink made with almond liqueur, at a young woman. Jordan denied it, and the White House issued a 33-page defense of him.

The latest flap occurred at a party given for the popular rock group Fleetwood Mac, in town for a concert. The party was attended by about 200 guests, including President Carter's son, Chip. White House aides Tim Kraft and Rick Hutcheson and a handful of senators and congressmen and record company executives.

Tax cut proposals unacceptable to Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, trying to reshape a $18.2 billion House tax cut bill, is off to an unpromising start with its last-minute efforts to shift tax relief back to lower-income brackets and decrease planned cuts in capital gains taxation.

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, President Carter's tax envoy, took the proposed changes to Capitol Hill on Tuesday where Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, called the proposals unacceptable. Ullman's panel has written the tax plan now being considered in the House.

But the chairman said discussions were continuing on a possible Treasury Department-Ways and Means Committee compromise to permit consideration, at least, of the amendments in the House.

That procedure is considered unusual because the House traditionally, when considering tax measures, takes up only proposed floor amendments already considered and rejected by the Ways and Means Committee.

Up to now, Ullman said, he has no plans to ease pressure for passage of his committee's bill with no provisions for the Carter amendments.

Although exact details of the administration plan have not been worked out, Blumenthal's discussions showed concern for:

—Directing individual tax relief to families with incomes below $40,000.

—Cutting back capital gains reductions by boosting from 10 percent to 15 percent the committee's proposed "alternative minimum tax."

That proposal would replace the current 15 percent minimum tax on one-half of the capital gain, which is not normally taxed. The minimum tax is imposed upon those who would otherwise escape taxes altogether.

The principal author of the committee bill, Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., said he doubted the administration amendments would receive the support sought. But he insisted he was open-minded and would discuss possibilities with other members.

Jones said that if the bill were reshaped to Carter's liking, it would lose all or nearly all the Republican support he said it now enjoys.

Dollar rallies sharply on marts

By JAMES R. PEIPERT Associated Press Writer LONDON (AP) — The dollar recovered strongly on the world's money markets today, reversing at least temporarily the steady slide that took the U.S. currency to record lows against the Japanese yen and Swiss franc.

The dollar rallied in Tokyo to close at 188.85 Japanese yen, a gain of more than two percent in 24 hours.

The dollar closed Wednesday at 184.65 yen. That was the eighth consecutive record closing low for the U.S. currency since it slid below the 200-yen mark July 24.

The upward trend continued when European foreign exchange opened. The dollar was higher against all major currencies, including the Swiss franc, which drove the dollar to a record low of 1.7125 Swiss francs at the end of the business day Wednesday.

The price of gold was "fixed" this morning at $201.75 a Troy ounce, down $2 from Wednesday's close of $203.75. The "fixing" is the price agreed to for the trading session by London's five major bullion dealers after conferring on market conditions.

The metal was unchanged at $203.375 in early trading in Zurich, Europe's other major bullion market.

The price of gold, which investors turn to in times of monetary instability, was spurred by the decline of the dollar. It breached the psychologically important $200 barrier last Friday and reached an all-time high of $207.50 during trading Tuesday.

Dealers said the dollar's newly found strength was dampening enthusiasm for the metal. Morning dollar quotes in major European financial centers: Frankfurt—2.04575 West German marks, compared to 2.0410 Wednesday.

Zurich—1.7295 Swiss francs, compared to 1.7125 Wednesday.

Paris—4.3805 French francs, compared to 4.375 Wednesday.

Amsterdam—2.2085 Dutch guilders, compared to 2.2025 Wednesday.

Milan—843.00 Italian lire, compared to 842.10 Wednesday.

Travelers take flight again

By The Associated Press Air travelers took hope — and, even better, flight — in Europe Wednesday as French air controllers suspended their holiday-wrecking work slowdown.

"It is beautiful news," said a British Airways spokesman (BAA) at Gatwick Airport, a major charter center south of London, where Britons board August vacation flights to the sunny Mediterranean.

Wesnesday's overnight crowd was down to a grumbling 1,500 — still about twice normal. It followed a day of gradual recovery from a weekend backlog in which delays reached up to three days.

After the worst weekend in memory for European airport officials, the situation improved markedly Wednesday after the French controllers, demanding higher pay and better equipment, lifted the tight limits on the number of planes in their air space.

Planeloads of angry vacationers took off from dozens of European airports Wednesday, while thousands of equally angry travelers forced to return to their points of departure caught other flights.

Palma de Majorca, where the queue for takeoff reached nearly 70 planes Sunday, and other major Spanish airports were back to normal Wednesday, according to the Spanish Transport Ministry. German aviation authorities reported all in order.

"It has come in the nick of time," the BAA spokesman added. "The staff was beginning to crack up. They were working 16 hours a day and the signs were showing."

Detroit mayor issues ultimatum to striking city workers

DETROIT (AP) — Mayor Coleman Young Wednesday issued an ultimatum to striking city workers, warning that they would be fired unless they end a walkout that has disrupted city government, curtailed garbage pickups and paralyzed transportation in the nation's sixth largest city.

"The union is engaged in an illegal work stoppage which the court ruled yesterday is causing the city irreparable damage," Young said in a statement issued through his press secretary, Jim Graham.

Graham said the city's ultimatum was being delivered to union local leaders "at the same time department heads are preparing dismissal notices, which will be issued either today or tomorrow."

Union spokesmen could not be reached for comment. The ultimatum was directed at 3,500 municipal employees who began a wildcat strike early Monday in support of disgruntled garbage collectors.

Emergency police and fire telephone operators and about 25 election workers, who had walked off their jobs in sympathy with the other protesters, returned to their jobs Wednesday.

The city bus system carries 250,000 riders each day, including 140,000 commuters, said Conrad Mallett, director of the city's Department of Transportation. Buses are the only means of transportation for more than 80 percent of the riders, he added.

Bus routes to and from the suburbs were not affected.

About 3,500 workers, including 650 garbage collectors, walked off their jobs Tuesday. About 1,000 employees, mostly bus drivers, reported for work, but were sent home because the bus system cannot operate without mechanics, Mallett said.

The document presented by the committee, said Prensa Latina, also followed the activities of Lee Harvey Oswald and his association with the CIA.

The document alleged that Oswald was told to make contact with Cuban groups and then ask for a visa to Cuba, so he could visit there. It said Oswald's activities were part of a plan to make him appear to be a Cuban agent.

The document charged that Oswald was eliminated shortly after the assassination because that was the only way the plan to indict Cuba would work.

Assassination part of plot to destroy image Cuba says

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The assassination of President John F. Kennedy in November 1963 was part of a conspiracy to destroy the image of the Cuban revolution, Cuba's national news agency reported Wednesday from Havana.

The forces that planned, financed and ordered the killing of Kennedy believed they could turn world opinion against Cuba and create a pretext to launch an attack against it, the agency said.

The national planning committee for 11th World Festival of Youth and Students presented a document containing the allegations to the international tribunal Youth against Imperialism. The tribunal is meeting during the festival, which has attracted more than 20,000 persons from 145 nations.

The news agency said the assassination in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963, resulted from a power struggle at the highest echelons in the United States.

The document presented by the committee, said Prensa Latina, also followed the activities of Lee Harvey Oswald and his association with the CIA.

Burglars strike again

CANADIAN — The second burglary to occur within a week here was at Moran Brothers' Office Friday night.

The intruders reportedly broke the glass, unlocked the door, and entered the building.

The office is located across the Canadian River Bridge of Highways 60-83.

The Sheriff's office said five selective payroll checks were taken from a stack of many others. Since the burglary was reported Monday morning no arrest has been made.

The first break-in was July 25 at Canadian Shamrock Wholesale. According to sheriff's officers five thousand dollars was taken from the office. Mrs. Belva Robinette, owner of the Shamrock business, is offering a $1000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons responsible for the crime. Officers report there are no new leads in the case.

Fire report

The Pampa Fire Department answered three calls Thursday. At 11:28 a.m. brake and wheel damage was sustained by a 1976 Oldsmobile on the corner of Brown and West streets.

At 8:55 a.m. at 2500 Beech, a 1976 Ford station wagon belonging to Welex Company had heavy damage under the hood.

An alarm was answered at 4:15 p.m. at the Frank Carter Ranch where 30 acres of grass burned. Lightning was the cause.

Vandalism increases in city

The number of vandalism cases reported to the Pampa Police Department through the month of July has risen 5.36 percent over the number of cases reported during the same period in 1977.

According to J.J. Ryzman, 177 cases of vandalism were reported in 1978 through the month of July. For the same period in 1977, he said, 168 cases were reported.

Vandalism cases are those only involving property damage, according to Ryzman. Recent CB antenna thefts, were classified as theft cases by the police department even though damage may have been done to cars when the antennas were stolen.

"It is one of the hardest crimes to solve unless someone confesses," Police Chief Richard Mills said.

"Because there is little reason for it. There is no motive for it, and there is very little evidence."

The best way to prevent vandalism, according to Ryzman, is to encourage neighborhood watches. People should report anything suspicious that they see to the police, he said. "The best way to prevent vandalism is if everyone watches out for each other," he said.

Candidate dies in crash
 RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — An aircraft believed to have been carrying Richard Obenshain, the Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate in Virginia, crashed near here late Wednesday night. Police said all three persons aboard were killed.

Police said the bodies on the twin-engine Piper Seneca plane were badly burned, making identification difficult.

But an aide to Obenshain, John Marshall, said "I'm afraid it's pretty well confirmed" that Obenshain was one of those killed.

Marshall said the identification numbers on the plane matched those of the aircraft in which Obenshain was returning to Richmond from Winchester, where he had made a campaign appearance Wednesday.

The plane was due to land at the Chesterfield County airport outside Richmond at 10 p.m., and crashed in a wooded area at 11:10 p.m. about 1 1/2 miles southwest of the airport, police said.

Others believed to have been on the plane were not immediately identified.

Police report
 Jack W. White, 2364 Aspen, reported the theft of two gas caps valued at $5 from his Dodge pickup parked in his driveway. The person or persons who stole the gas caps also smeared the front door and front wall of the residence with brown shoe polish, and wrote obscene words on the walkway. A large green cement frog was thrown into the bushes at the edge of the yard. An outdoor carpet at the house entrance appeared as if someone had attempted to set it on fire.

A 1971 Renault was backing west out of a parking space in the 500 block of S. Barnes when it struck a northbound 1975 Chevrolet driven by Isaac E. Wyant, 827 E. Denver.

Jean K. Browning, 412 W. 17th St., reported the theft of a 10-foot citizen's band antenna from her car parked in her driveway.

A vehicle failed to yield in the 400 block of W. Atchinson and hit another vehicle driven by Harvey Ray Brown, 802 E. Campbell.

Robert Chambers of the Alco Discount Store in Coronado Center reported that a female shoplifted two packages of infant pillow cases, one fitted crib sheet and one crib pad. The female was arrested and brought before a judge.

A Lefors man made an improper lane usage and hit a properly parked vehicle in the 300 block of S. Finley.

Threat to women, children
 Residents urged to leave contaminated area

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Pregnant women and families with small children have been urged to leave a 16-acre area so contaminated by chemicals leaking from an old dumping ground that the state declared a health emergency.

State Health Commissioner Robert Whalen declared the emergency and recommended the evacuation Wednesday after studies revealed that the number of miscarriages in the Love Canal area is about 50 percent higher than the national average.

The department said it found five children with birth defects in the area, but it did not say whether the rate was higher than the national average.

Whalen said an investigation showed that more than 80 chemicals — many toxic and 11 linked to cancer — have been leaking from the abandoned dump in the bed of the old Love Canal in the southeast corner of this city. The chemicals include benzene and chloroform.

Terrorist captured after chase
 EUTAW, Ala. (AP) — Police say a man who terrorized an apartment complex in Houston for three hours Tuesday night, took 10 persons hostage at various times and escaped by abducting three people was captured after a police chase here Wednesday.

Green County Investigator Edd Billingsley said the 28-year-old man was arrested after a 10-minute chase following the robbery of a service station and the attempted kidnapping of the attendants.

Found safe in the man's car was Dana Barstow, 23, of Houston, identified as one of the three people abducted at the apartment complex, Billingsley said.

He said officers in Houston said the man also is suspected of robbing a service station and taking the attendant hostage in Winnie, Texas, and robbing a service station in Louisiana.

Eutaw is in west-central Alabama, about 35 miles southwest of Tuscaloosa.

Billingsley said the man allegedly tried to take employees of a service station hostage at Boligee, a few miles east of Eutaw and take the cars, later abandoning them, the abductees said. Eleven were released unharmed.

The unidentified man released two of his last three hostages early Wednesday at an Anahuac gasoline station, but kept a woman hostage, police said.

The spree began when the gunman forced two women into their apartment at gunpoint around 10 p.m. Tuesday. Police said he told the women he needed to get out of town. When the man's back was turned, the women jumped off the second-story balcony and ran.

Police said the gunman fired several shots at the women as they fled.

Shortly after that incident, the man walked up to several persons sitting by a swimming pool, pulled his gun on them and ordered them to take him to a car, police said. The group scattered when they got to the car, leaving him with one woman hostage.

Health Department investigators said chemicals have contaminated the water and released vapors which have polluted the air.

Residents, whose houses were built along the old canal's banks after the dump was filled in, said the chemicals first began surfacing two years ago after several seasons of abnormally heavy rains.

They said chemicals have seeped through basement walls. Air monitors placed in homes by the Environmental Protection Agency registered some chemicals at 250-to-5,000 times the level considered safe.

The governor issued a statement promising residents "the full support of my administration in restoring normalcy to their lives" and announcing formation of a task force to study the problem.

The dump was used principally from 1930 to 1953 by the Hooker Chemical Corp., but other users included the city of Niagara Falls and, according to Hooker and residents, the Army, which reportedly dumped wastes from a former chemical warfare plant here.

In a statement released Wednesday, Hooker said it "does not believe it has any legal obligation or responsibility for the situation that has evolved completely outside its control."

The statement noted that such dumping was a common practice during the 1950s. It also noted that when it deeded the property to the Board of Education in 1952, it warned the board that the area had been a dumping site for chemical wastes.

House to wipe out aid to Syria

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
 Associated Press Writer
 WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted to wipe out U.S. economic aid to Syria in the next fiscal year to protest what one congressman calls massive shelling of defenseless civilians in Lebanon.

Lawmakers voted 280-103 Wednesday night to eliminate the $90 million aid program for Syria after rejecting an earlier call for a $45 million cut and pleas by others in the House to withhold punitive action altogether.

In other key votes involving U.S. foreign policy, the House: —Approved 229-180 a move to end this country's participation in a United Nations trade embargo against Rhodesia. To ensure the embargo is lifted, the Rhodesian interim government must keep a promise to hold free elections by year's end. —Voted initially to halt U.S. arms shipments to Chile, and then reversed itself after strenuous objections from the Justice Department. The proposed cutoff was designed to force Chile to extradite three men indicted here for the murder of Orlando Letelier, a former Chilean ambassador to the United States.

The vote on Syrian aid was part of a $7.3 billion foreign assistance bill, while the Rhodesian and Chilean amendments were attached to a $1 billion foreign military aid authorization. Both measures are headed for House-Senate conference committees.

Rep. Edward Derwinski, R-Ill., sponsor of the Syrian cutoff for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, charged, "Syria has been waging a massive, indiscriminate shelling of a defenseless population resulting in hundreds of civilian deaths and thousands of wounded and homeless."

Rep. Jonathan Bingham, D-N.Y., failed to round up support for a substitute amendment that would have slashed the aid by $45 million — enough, he said, to "send Syria a message."

But others felt the cutoff was the wrong action. Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., noting the new U.S. ambassador to Lebanon would be holding talks with Syria's foreign minister, said: "The stakes are too high for 435 members of the House at 9:15 at night to play secretary of state."

About 25,000 Syrian troops comprise the bulk of an Arab peacekeeping force in Lebanon that arrived in 1976 after a bloody civil war. For several months, however, the Syrians have been fighting Christian forces mainly in the Beirut area and have killed several hundred.

The House vote to end participation in the Rhodesian embargo follows Senate approval of a similar bill last week. But senators added a requirement that the embargo end only after the president certified that Rhodesia had made a good-faith effort to negotiate with all parties including the Patriotic Front guerrillas.

Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., and other House members argued that forcing Rhodesia into all-party talks would give undue recognition to communist groups and undermine the internal settlement that has brought moderate black leaders into the Rhodesian government.

The aid cutoff for Chile was proposed by Rep. Thomas R. Harkin, D-Iowa, who wanted to halt all $28 million in military materiel in the pipeline until the three Chileans are sent to this country. The plan was adopted by voice vote.

But shortly afterwards, Justice Department liaison officers began contacting House members to raise objections. They argued that the formal request for extradition hasn't been made yet, and the Chilean judicial process hasn't had a chance to consider the case.

Later, Rep. Charles E. Wiggins, R-Calif., moved to reconsider the Harkin amendment and it was overturned on a roll call vote of 243-166.

A federal grand jury on Tuesday indicted eight persons in connection with the 1975 murder of Letelier, whose car was blown up on a Washington street. Among the eight were the three Chileans: Gen. Juan Manuel Contreras Sepulveda, former head of the Chilean secret police; and two secret police employees, Pedro Espinoza Bravo and Armando Fernandez Larrios.

Advice

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: When I married Herb I knocked four years off my age because he was two years younger than I. We've been married 21 years, and Herb still doesn't know my real age.

We're planning our first trip abroad, and in order to get passports, I sent away for our birth certificates—mine to be sent to a post office box that I got especially for this purpose. My husband frequently sees the mail before I do, and I don't want him to see the year of birth on my birth certificate.

I suppose I am acting childish about this, but Herb is the kind of person who would rib me the rest of my life if he found out.

Is there some way I can doctor up my birth certificate (or the passport) so my husband won't find out how old I am?

FORT SMITH, ARK.

DEAR ARK: Don't "doctor" up anything. Be cool. Herb may not even notice the year of birth on your passport. Or tell him in advance. If he ribs you, he ribs you. Women have been getting the rib ever since Eve.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 15 and my boyfriend is 18, and we've been going together for four months. For my birthday last week, he bought me a really sharp black lace bikini bathing suit with a shorty beach coat to match.

He knew I wanted it because we saw it in a window when we were walking together. I thought it was real neat of him, but my mom hit the roof when she saw it. She said it was not a proper gift for a guy to give a girl unless they are engaged.

What's wrong with it?

PAM

DEAR PAM: Among proper people, "intimate apparel" is considered an improper gift for teens who are just "going together."

DEAR ABBY: Our son is a professional photographer and one of the best in town. He snaps everything and everybody but his own mother and father.

From the time he was a small boy, he was interested in photography as a hobby, so his dad and I always saw to it that he had the best equipment.

Now that he is a professional with a fine studio, you would think he would offer to take our pictures, but he never has. Even at family gatherings when he's busy taking candid shots, if we don't stick our faces in a couple of pictures we'd be left out entirely.

We are average-looking people and wouldn't break his camera. It would be nice to have some good studio pictures of ourselves before we get old and gray. We haven't had a decent picture taken in 10 years!

What do you suppose is the matter with him? Any suggestions?

MA AND PA

DEAR MA AND PA: He's thoughtless. Call his studio and ask for an "appointment." (P.S. And if he sends you a bill, frame it.)

DEAR ABBY: I would like to demand equal rights—for MEN! To cite one example of the injustice to males:

If a WOMAN undresses in front of a window with the shade up, and a man stops to look at her, HE is arrested for peeping Tom. But if a MAN undresses in front of a window with the shade up, and a WOMAN stops to look at HIM, HE is arrested for indecent exposure.

Ask Dr. Lamb

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I am a guy 16 who has a consistent bad breath problem. In the back of my mouth (I believe it's my tonsils) there are those big pits that have a little white pus coming out. Also the back of my tongue is always a milky color.

Not only does my breath smell very bad but my mouth tastes bad, too. I have tried a number of different mouth washes and breath gums but still have this disgusting problem. The odor and taste seems to be coming from the back of my mouth to the front. Please help me.

DEAR READER - There are many causes for bad breath. In some instances it is caused by dental problems and in that case the dentist is the best answer. This can be true even though a person may be diligently cleaning his teeth twice a day.

You can develop infected pockets around the roots of the teeth that require more than simple brushing. That's when you need the help of a dentist not only to control your bad breath but to correct the infected pockets. They can cause serious dental problems if they are neglected.

Another common source of bad breath is sinus infection and infections in the throat. The sinus infections are more common.

It's true that if you really have diseased tonsils with chronic infection and old necrotic material in them, they can cause bad breath. However, in most instances of bad breath the tonsils are not the reason.

I would think that you should see a specialist in ear, nose and throat and let him look at your tonsils and if they are diseased and the source of the bad odor coming from the back of your throat it may be well to have them removed.

You can't cover up the bad odor of an infection with mouth washes or other mouth hygienic measures. The source of the odor is still there; while you may mask it by another scent momentarily it's not very successful.

The other major source of bad breath is from the lungs. That's where the garlic odors come out of the blood stream and into the air that you exhale. That is the way you have the smell of alcohol on your breath. It's absorbed into the blood stream and then released from the blood into the air that you exhale out of the lungs.

Upsets in body chemistry or anything else that's related to abnormal chemicals that have odors impart their odor to your breath in this way. So it is that bad breath is a symptom and it's necessary to find out what causes it before you can find out how to treat it.

Mouth wash isn't going to cure sinus infection, infected tonsils or cover up the foul odors coming from the lungs if a person has eaten garlic or been on an alcoholic binge.

To give you a better appreciation of the causes of bad breath and what can be done about it I am sending you The Health Letter number 9-4, Halitosis: The Breath Problem and What To Do About It. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 326, San Antonio, TX 78292.

Polly's pointers
Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY - My blue calf shoes scuff easily and not wanting to use scuff cover polish I put blue food coloring on a cotton swab and touched up the scuffed places. Then I polished the shoes with neutral paste polish. This works beautifully and shoes of any color could be treated the same way as the coloring can be mixed to produce any desired color. - VERA.

At wit's end

BY ERMA BOMBCEK

According to statistics, my children had a 50-50 chance of inheriting Tardy Syndrome.

Their father has it. It's a recessive gene that renders it's victims helpless to be on time for anything.

I've told you before how in my husband's lifetime he has never heard the Star-Spangled Banner, has never seen the lights dim at a concert, has never seen a football team with clean uniforms, and has never seen a bride coming DOWN the aisle. (Come to think of it we met over a Belated Birthday Card display.)

The other morning as I put his 44-minute egg in front of him I said, "What time do you have to be at work?"

He said, "Eight o'clock."

"It's eight o'clock now."

"Terrific," he said, "I've only got time for one more cup of coffee, then I'll have to dash."

I slumped down into a chair. "I don't know how to tell you this, but you have passed Tardy Syndrome down to your son. It's true. The director at Bruce's camp called last week and said he is very disturbed with Bruce."

"Not once since he arrived has he gotten up early enough to salute the flag. He has never been the first in line for anything and for him roll call starts with the letter H. I mean, you have to wonder about a child who has never boarded a bus while it is standing still."

"Why don't you talk with the doctor?" asked my husband.

"I have. He said last week that Bruce has all the traits of Tardy Syndrome. He was an eleven-month baby, never showed up on time for birthdays, was 12 before he lost his baby teeth and didn't go through the terrible two's until he was three and a half."

"What did Bruce say to that?"

"He wasn't there. He was late for the appointment."

"What do you want me to do?"

"Set an example and talk to him."

"I'll do it tonight," he said, then added, "I'll call you if I'm going to be on time."

Sexual harassment at work

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK (NEA) - "Dear Boss - I'm writing to you because what happened yesterday really upset me. I'm sure you'll understand and there won't be a repeat, and I hope this won't interfere with our future working relationship. I simply can't work and socialize at the same time."

That's one way Susan Meyer recommends the woman who is being sexually harassed on the job deal with the situation. In writing, to the harasser. Ignoring the problem, which many women do because they don't know what else to do, won't help.

Writing the letter may not either, but says the executive director of Working Women United Institute, a national organization dealing with sexual harassment, "If the man doesn't cool off or if he takes steps of retribution, you can take a copy of that letter to personnel or the president of the company."

Or to the human rights commission if he fires you, or to the unemployment office if you quit because personnel and the president smirked and said you were imagining things.

Of course, the people at unemployment may do that, too, even though some states (New York, for one) now recognize sexual harassment as an intolerable job condition. And California, Illinois, Massachusetts and Kentucky, among others, accept it as a form of sex discrimination. All you have to do is prove it, which is something else again.

You say he touched you unnecessarily, he says he brushed past you once or twice. You say he leered and made insinuating remarks, even propositioned you outright; he says you have no sense of humor. That's sexual harassment - tenuous and ethereal.

Anchor it in documentation, Ms. Meyer urges. "You need proof that the situation exists or existed," she says, "because you're putting yourself out on a limb to be called a loose woman or hysterical or crazy. So write everything down: the date, what was said - verbatim, if you can - so and so was standing here and at two o'clock, he did such and such, etc. "Get witnesses, if possible, and try also to get examples of your work or progress reports in case things go bad and the company wants to get rid of you. Companies have been known to doctor things, so protect yourself. And don't give them any reason to fire you, like coming in late, etc."

And if you suffer physically, as in the case of one woman who was so distressed by her boss' advances, she developed severe tension symptoms and ended up in traction, tell your doctor why so he can put that in writing for you. Still, logs and letters aren't enough. "You should tell people in the company about the problem," she says. "In one case, an unemployment bureau denied a woman benefits because it said she hadn't complained through company channels."

If those channels lead out to sea, then file simultaneous complaints with the fair employment practices agency, the Equal Opportunity Commission; human rights; your union, if you belong to one.

Just remember, without good documentation, you haven't a case. With it, you may win one. Recently, for instance, Monsanto paid $10,000 in an out of court settlement in New York to a former secretary who charged she'd been fired for refusing to have sexual relations with her boss.

That probably would have been inconceivable three years ago when Ms. Meyer and two colleagues formed their voluntary, nonprofit organization because there was a need for it.

"There had never been any discussion or advice about sexual harassment, which was why women always buried the issue. Yet it's an enormous and invisible barrier to equal employment opportunity for women."

So we formed the organization to educate the public, and employers, about it, and to work for legislation on the subject."

Since then, more than 4,000 women from all over the country have written or called the Institute, which operates from a pleasant church basement on Park Avenue and, she says, "I think that number is just the tip of the iceberg. By the time a woman contacts us, she's terribly distressed. Part of our function is to reassure her it isn't just her problem and that she's not crazy and shouldn't feel guilty. It's a social problem that has to be changed."

What it is, too, is a debilitating hangover from "the old sex rules," she says. "Men have always taken the sexual initiative and women are supposed to be flattered. But that creates a problem in the work force. Unfortunately, too often it's also used as a weapon. We find a lot of occurrence in fields like construction, engineering, the nontraditional fields women are entering. And often it's simply the only way some men know how to deal with women."

So in the name of reform, Ms. Meyer and her 10 volunteers, who can't handle all the phone calls and just barely get through the mail, "hustle" office supplies and donations to get their programs off the ground.

"We're trying to build a national legal referral network of lawyers interested in taking sexual harassment cases. We probably have 200 now affiliated with us, and we're developing a legal brief bank for them."

"So far several federal courts have found sexual harassment to be a form of sex discrimination in violation of the '64 Civil Rights Act. But this is a very new area of the law, so we try to get copies of what's been filed to send to other attorneys working on cases to see what's been argued."

And, come fall, she says, "We hope to initiate educational workshops and speaking engagements around the country on a regular basis."

Then, maybe, the mail will drop off a bit, although the Institute prefers written to phone queries, and answers every one, she says - with relief, when a stamped, self-addressed envelope is included.

• With youngsters back in school, thoughts turn to the ritual of fall cleaning. Don't despair; it's easier than moving, especially if you follow these suggestions: Set aside some time for the project, and stick to your schedule. Recruit your kids - after school hours, of course, or on weekends - and your husband. Make sure you have an adequate supply of cleaning products on hand, including extra vacuum bags to accommodate those layers of ground-in dirt you'll uncover.

• If you've got one of the new E.S.P. (Extra Suction Power) upright vacs, take advantage of its high-speed motor to clean the backs of your area rugs and rug pads. These areas get loaded with dirt, even though your carpet may look clean on the surface.

• Has your once trusty showerhead been giving you an ever-dwindling flow of water? Don't wait for the plumber to remedy the situation. Remove the showerhead and boil it in vinegar until the mineral deposits can be wiped off. Voilà! The showerhead is clean, and the water will flow freely again.

Large man is a walking legal advertisement

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Ken Hur is a mountain of a man, 300 pounds in awning-sized denim and a white T-shirt emblazoned with the message "Need a Lawyer? Call The Legal Clinic." Hur brags that he is "the advertisin'est lawyer in the country." Since the 1976 U.S. Supreme Court ruling that allowed lawyers to advertise, Hur has been beating his own drum in newspaper, television, radio, billboard and even airplane ads.

"I was the first lawyer in the country to do my own television commercial," boasts the 54-year-old lawyer.

The Supreme Court ruling reinforced two First Amendment rights, Hur says: the free speech right of an attorney to advertise and the public's right to know.

"There's an insatiable appetite among the American people to learn about lawyers," Hur says. "They have not had access to the legal system. Who's better to show them the way than a guy like me who has a big mouth, is overweight, isn't very smart and loves his wife?"

Hur has tried big things like renting a plane to carry a "Call Ken Hur" banner over 77,000 football fans. And he has tried little things like painting "Sideswiped? Call Ken Hur" on bashed-in cars.

His daughter-in-law wears a neck brace as she cruises around town in a truck bearing the "Sideswiped?" message.

In his most recent effort, Hur parodies a local jewelry store commercial in which a seemingly unclad woman gracefully surfaces in a pool of water, laden with necklaces, rings and bracelets.

In his version, Hur rises out of the water snorting and puffing like a Moby Dick in scuba gear.

"Talk to a lawyer for $10," he bellows to the camera.

"There's too much celluloid-collar dignity among lawyers," Hur says. "That's what's been wrong with the profession for 100 years."

Hur — who wears a neck

brace for a pinched nerve he says is unrelated to auto accidents or lawsuits — insists that none of his ads goes beyond the Wisconsin Supreme Court guidelines permitting all lawyer advertising unless deceitful, fraudulent or misrepresentative.

There has been no formal criticism from other lawyers, although some privately condemn the ads as unprofessional. Hur claims he has received hundreds of compliments from the public.

"I'm tweaking the nose of the bar and getting patted on the back by the people," he says. "I guess that's the only way we'll find out what the parameters are."

Hur says he had enough business even before he started advertising, and now does most of his ads on behalf of The Legal Clinic, a kind of poor man's law firm he started with four young lawyers.

Hur says he is surprised few attorneys advertise, but he believes more young lawyers just getting started will eventually make ads commonplace and lead more people to use lawyers.

Rate claims blocked by city

PEARSALL, Texas (AP) — Officials of this small South Texas town announced late Tuesday that they have obtained a hearing on an injunction aimed at blocking the settlement of more than $1.6 billion in customer claims against Coastal States Gas Corp.

City Attorney Jose Fernandez said a preliminary hearing has been set for Wednesday afternoon in Austin before State District Judge Herman Jones.

Pearsall officials, who want to negotiate their own settlement with the South Texas gas supplier, earlier announced they would ask for a rehearing before the Tex. Railroad Commission after the commission approved settlement terms Friday.

The officials claim they were never allowed to participate in the lengthy settlement negotiations between Coastal States, parent company of Lo-Vaca Gathering Co., and San Antonio and other contract customers.

SHOP IDEAL WHERE YOU GET GUNN BROS.

This feisty lady just wants her home

KITTERY, Maine (AP) — A feisty, 65-year-old woman who vowed to use a BB gun to protect her farmhouse from a wrecking crew has been offered money, a new home and more BBs from sympathizers across the nation.

But Mary Kozlowski is still angry over the loss of her ramshackle home to an arsonist.

Miss Kozlowski, who supplements her Social Security income by picking blueberries, was in the national limelight earlier this year when she vowed to fight a state Department of Transportation decision to demolish her house to make way for a new highway bridge.

On June 19, the day the bulldozers were to arrive, Miss Kozlowski told reporters she would use a BB gun to defend the 80-year-old, two-story farmhouse where she was born and lived with her parents until they died.

Seven months ago, the state gave her and her 67-year-old brother new trailers to live in and money for the house and their blueberry field.

But Miss Kozlowski claimed the trailer was cold and dangerous. She asked the state to move her house across the road to a field.

Transportation department commissioner Roger Mallar says the woman has known for a decade that the state had the right of way to build a new Cuts Road bridge on her land, but did not react until June 19.

Then, on June 21, at the height of the dispute, the dilapidated building burned down.

A state fire inspector said the fire was "definitely suspicious." Bernard Emery of the fire marshal's office said an irregular burn pattern throughout the gutted house indicated the fire had been set.

No arrests have been made.

Since June, Miss Kozlowski has become a symbol to people who sympathized with her fight to save her home.

"I have nothing but respect for a person who has the guts to stand up for what is theirs," an Oakland taxi driver wrote to her.

A woman from Georgia said: "Us little people have been pushed around for too long. ...

If you need more BBs let me know."

A San Francisco correspondent sent her a check with a note saying, "Please apply the enclosed to either a fund for a shotgun to replace your BB gun or to a fund to move your farmhouse."

Another woman offered to let Miss Kozlowski move in with her, but she responded, "I've got land and I won't leave it for nobody."

Miss Kozlowski says her battle is not over. She now wants the state to build her a modular home on a knoll near her present trailer site. From there, she says, she could watch movies at a nearby drive-in theater.

Texas State Bar should be private

By SUSAN STOLER
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The State Bar of Texas operates like no other state agency and should become a private, voluntary group, the Sunset Advisory Commission has said.

"There is no overwhelming benefit in having the status of a professional organization raised to a state agency as opposed to voluntary membership," commission staff director Bill Wells told the panel Tuesday.

The staff report recommends that the bar become a private professional organization and that the Texas Supreme Court regulate lawyers.

In addition to the state bar report, the staff submitted reports to the commission on the Texas Real Estate Commission, the Texas Turnpike Authority and the State Board of Law Examiners.

Those agencies and 11 others will go out of existence Aug. 31, 1979, unless the 1979 Legislature extends them. The sunset commission will vote later on whether to recommend continuation, change or elimination of the agencies.

Giving all regulatory responsibility to the Supreme Court would eliminate overlapping functions, he added.

"If this is done in a careful manner, this would not violate the principle, which goes back a couple hundred years, that supreme courts are the courts that have inherent rights to regulate attorneys," he said.

Most state agencies operate under a single administrator, impose rules without their industry's prior approval and have governing boards appointed by the governor, Wells said.

In contrast, lawyers are regulated by the bar, the law examiners and the Supreme Court. The bar's rules are subject to membership approval, and officers are elected or appointed by the Supreme Court.

The staff has recommended a central grievance body, as most other states have, "to remove local bias."

Other staff recommendations include:

—An end to the bar's restrictions on lawyer advertising.

—Transfer of the bar's new building, the Texas Law Center, to the state for use by courts and judicial agencies.

—Less stringent requirements for allowing lawyers licensed in other states to practice in Texas.

Recommended changes for the real estate commission include a revised cash management system, staggered license renewals and public members on the commission.

Sen. A.R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, questioned the need to license real estate salesmen.

"Due to economic welfare of the many persons involved, there is a substantial reason for the state to exercise its police powers to protect the public in this area," Wells answered.

A showing of 57 paintings, watercolors, prints, drawings and sculpture entitled "Contemporary Art from Alaska," is on display through Sept. 17 at the National Collection of Fine Arts, Smithsonian Institution.

Sentiment against filibuster

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sentiment is growing on both sides of the natural gas pricing fight to avert a Senate filibuster and hold an early vote on the critical section of President Carter's national energy plan.

Supporters of a compromise on natural gas say they are confident they can break a filibuster planned by liberal Democrats. But they have doubts whether the bill itself will win Senate approval.

"We have the votes for cloture (ending debate), but I'm less sure about the bill," Sen. Henry M. Jackson, chairman of the Senate energy committee, said Tuesday.

Two Republicans active in the energy fight also agreed that the 60 votes needed to attain cloture would probably be gathered together by early next week.

They are Sens. John Tower of Texas, a firm opponent of compromise, and Pete Domenici of New Mexico, who is among the 10 Senate conferees backing the multibillion dollar legislation.

Liberal Democratic senators James Abourezk of South Dakota and Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio pledged repeated attempts to send the compromise back to a conference committee, thus averting a final vote.

Tower says the bill delays a lifting of federal controls for too long, while Abourezk says it will reward natural gas producers by overcharging residential consumers.

Consumers fight prices with homegrown food

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's 32 million home gardeners, faced with rising supermarket prices, harvested $14 billion worth of fruits and vegetables last year — 8 percent of what consumers spent on domestically grown food.

One of several indicators that the home gardening craze which began in 1973 is providing stiff competition for the food industry is a recent survey by the Gallup Organization Inc. showing that the value of home-grown food is up from $10 billion in 1976.

The privately financed survey based the homegrown food value on average supermarket prices for fruits and vegetables and an average garden size of 770 square feet.

Other indications of the competition were provided by the Agriculture Department's Evelyn Kaitz in a current issue of the department's Food Situation Report. She wrote:

—Available information indicates 11 percent of the processed fruits and vegetables consumed by Americans last year came from home gardens.

—Consumption of fresh, canned and frozen vegetables grown by farmers dropped from 157.7 pounds in 1973 to 155.8 pounds last year, a decline of 1.2 percent. Potatoes and sweet potatoes were not included.

—Fresh vegetable consumption, which had been declining before the boom in backyard plots, picked up in 1974, 1975 and 1976. The figures were down last year, however.

—Consumption of fresh fruit, 90 pounds per person in 1960 before beginning a decline, also experienced a comeback. Consumption went from 74 pounds to 82.1 pounds between 1973 and 1977.

Ms. Kaitz also cited figures showing that some 6 million acres were devoted to home gardens last year.

Ms. Kaitz said that three years of surveys by the department have found an increase of about 4 percent a year in the number of home gardens since 1973.

The department estimates that for every hour someone spends in a home garden, there's a net return of $3 to $5.

Home gardeners are bound to receive additional encouragement from food prices that are expected to increase 10 percent by year's end over 1977 prices.

Prices of fruits and vegetables have been rising faster than those of any other food group — at an annual rate through May of 36.7 percent.

Widow tries to clear name of her convicted husband

BAR HARBOR, Maine (NEA) - When Ronald E. Alley died at 55 years of age last January, the cause recorded was a heart attack. His widow, however, doesn't believe it. She says he died of a broken heart, not a falling one, and the U.S. military was responsible. "In effect, my husband was killed by the Army," Erna Alley says the killing took place over a period of two decades. Ron Alley was a one-time infantry captain, and prisoner of war, who became the only officer imprisoned for collaboration with the enemy during the Korean conflict. The widow says he was railroaded, and died trying to prove his innocence.

"Sometimes he would just lay on the couch and stare at the wall," she says. "He never gave up hope, but he never could forget the disgrace. He tried everything to clear his name, to make the truth known, but nobody would listen. So he died prematurely. It's as if the Army put a knife through the man." Mrs. Alley says she's not going to let the service get away with it. She has filed a $3 million suit against the Army, charging it sent Alley to an early grave and inflicted grievous distress on his survivors. She hopes the action will generate a new investigation of her husband's case, "right from its beginning."

The beginning for Alley was in December of 1950. That was when he was captured by Chinese troops near the Chosen Reservoir. Military records indicate he was taken to a Communist prison camp in Pyoktong, North Korea, nicknamed "Death Valley," where he was to stay for 33 months until his release in 1953.

Alley's internment was anything but comfortable. His widow says he contracted beriberi, tuberculosis, and his weight dropped from 185 to 120 pounds. When he was returned to American control, he underwent reparation surgery for the TB, and was so additionally ravished that he spent two years in the hospital.

Eventually, the Army charged that Alley had done more than just get sick in North Korea. In 1955 he was accused of having signed phony peace demands, and given the enemy classified information regarding U.S. artillery matters. He was court-martialed, found guilty, and sentenced to 10 years hard labor.

But was he guilty? Before he died Alley admitted that he had cooperated with the enemy to some small extent, but insisted that "everyone did." He said conditions were so bad in North Korea that senior officers and young enlisted men alike decided "to tell them anything," because the primary goal was survival.

Hence, Alley believed he was a scapegoat. After the war there was heavy criticism of the way POWs handled themselves in Korea, and Alley felt he was chosen as a sacrifice to the mob. Alley's military attorney, Col. Bill Logan, allegedly told him that he'd been found guilty months before he set foot in court.

This latter opinion has been repeated by others throughout the last 23 years. Most recently, retired Col. Charles Peckman, another Korean POW, has told Mrs. Alley that her husband's trial was "a circus." Peckman says he spoke in Alley's defense at the court martial, "and it was clear they wanted to hang Ronald."

Peckman, who was with Alley at the Pyoktong prison camp, says the man was innocent. "I sincerely question that he had any classified information to give the Chinese, even if he had wanted to." Besides, Peckman adds, if Alley had given data to the Communists, who could have known about it except the Communists?

Another POW from the Pyoktong camp, Capt. Frederick Smith, agrees with Peckman. Smith has told Mrs. Alley's attorney that charges against Alley were "nothing more than a bunch of crap." He says he saw U.S. artillery manuals "lying all over the hut where we were interrogated," so what more could Alley have told them?

Mrs. Alley says all of the evidence against her husband is similarly suspect. She says he was convicted on hearsay and fabrication: "Many men who testified against Ronald later told us they were ordered to lie." So Alley went to Fort Leavenworth for nearly four years, a time that he said was worse than his POW period.

Reportedly, Alley could have gotten out of Leavenworth sooner, on parole. But his widow says he did not want to owe the Army anything, even time, "because he wanted to be free to tell his story." He told it, often, until he died; in the end the only people who believed him were his friends and neighbors.

F.D.R. advises Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter has an adviser with the initials F.D.R. who got his start in government in Richard Nixon's White House.

Franklin Delano Baines first served Carter as an assistant to Stuart Eizenstat, the president's domestic policy adviser. More recently, he has been an associate director of the Office of Management and Budget and thus an important figure in the Executive Office of the President.

In 1969, the first year of the Nixon presidency, Baines was a White House intern. Then, in 1970-71, he was assistant to the chairman of a Nixon-sponsored White House Conference on Children and Youth.

Asked if he's a Democrat, Baines responded, "What else could I be with my initials?" In truth, the 30-year-old Seattle native was not named for Democratic President Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

"I was named for my father and my uncle," he reported. His parents, he said, simply added a syllable to his uncle's name, Frank. And whoever made out his birth certificate misspelled his father's name, Delno.

Of course, Baines added, his parents were admirers of the original F.D.R.

Robert Strauss, the president's ambassador for trade negotiations and chief anti-inflation jawboner, was nettled when a reporter suggested cattle prices would drop without being nudged by the federal government.

"You are talking to a fellow who used to play the commodity market pretty good," snapped the wealthy Strauss.

"I love to gamble. And all you fellows who know so much about those indications about what the market is going to do, I find out busted me about 12 or 14 times in my life."

Like some fellow Texans, the engaging Strauss only exaggerates occasionally. But you can always count on him for a rib-tickling story, which may even turn out to be true.

This being the baseball season, he recently recalled one about the late and great big league pitcher, "Dizzy" Dean, so named to distinguish him from his pitching brother, "Daffy" Dean.

Small businesses feeling better

By JOHN CUNIFF AP Business Analyst NEW YORK (AP) - Ever since World War II, when the growth of Big Business was spurred by the need for huge amounts of armaments, Small Business has felt neglected and even discriminated against.

Now it is beginning to feel better. As one small business advocate put it: "The time seems right for a compensatory period of growth of the entrepreneurial, independent small enterprise part of the economy."

In the past month the House Ways and Means Committee approved a tax bill that delights Small Business, the White House scheduled a Small Business Conference, and Congress approved a Small Business advocate.

Business Mirror

Milton Stewart is the advocate. Nothing new in that, say friends who have listened to him denounce the stranglehold of Big Government, Big Business and Big Labor. Those are his words quoted above.

What is different now is that the Small Business Administration has an executive, the first ever, who will argue before other government agencies the wisdom and justice of keeping Small Business in mind.

Why should they? Self-interest, for one thing. Small Business is the primary creator of jobs. Small Business is innovative and inventive, whereas Big Business sometimes turns sterile and bureaucratic.

Stewart, who once headed a venture capital firm and later the National Small Business Association, cites figures showing that between 1969 and 1976 about 9 million jobs were created in the United States.

"Three million of them were created by state and local government," he said, the remainder by small business. The one thousand largest industrial concerns began with 16 million and ended with that."

With a Small Business advocate only now being appointed, there is the suggestion that the Small Business fight is just beginning. But in fact it has considerable momentum. President Carter, for example, was enlisted as an ally while he was still a candidate.

Now that he is president, Small Business supporters will not let him forget. Nor are there indications he has. The president's letter to Cabinet heads regarding the White House conference made that clear. In the letter he told them to appoint "either" an assistant secretary or personal aide to deal directly with the Honorable A. Vernon Weaver," administrator of the Small Business Administration.

Carter was firm in what he desired, saying he wanted them to be able to tell not about plans but accomplishments in improving the climate between small business and the administration.

Weaver, a former Little Rock, Ark., insurance broker, and his deputy, Patricia Cloherly, a former financial executive, will conduct 12 regional forums to prepare for the conference, to be in January 1980.

"It represents probably the opportunity of a century for small business to express itself," said Stewart.

Home gardening has impact on farmers without complaints

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 1973 consumer boycott of beef may be one of the most bitter memories of many farmers from that topsy-turvy year for the agricultural economy.

But new research by the Agriculture Department indicates that another consumer phenomenon that got new vigor that year is having a significant impact on farmers' markets without so much as a mild curse across the fence.

That's home gardening. Last year, about 6 million acres were devoted to home gardens in cities, suburbs and rural areas, a survey by the Consumer and Food Economic Institute found.

That's "about the same used for growing the principal commercial fruits and vegetables" by fulltime farmers, said the agency's Evelyn Kaitz in a recent article.

True, she noted, "the commercial acreage is utilized more extensively. In all probability, some ornamental flowers were included in the home gardening space as borders or as aids in pest control."

But that acreage represents big money — an estimated $14 billion in produce, according to a survey for Gardens for All Inc. done by the Gallup organization.

The figure is based on average supermarket prices and an average garden size of 770 square feet for 32 million home gardens. It compares to $10 billion in 1976.

"The $14 billion would be equal to 8 percent of what consumers spent on domestically produced foods last year.

Ms. Kaitz said that available information indicates that 11 percent of the processed fruits and vegetables consumed last year by Americans came out of home gardens.

Her surveys showed that an average household froze 81 pounds of fruit and vegetables from gardens last year and canned an additional 132 pounds.

Other department statistics show that, not counting potatoes and sweet potatoes, consumption of fresh, canned and frozen vegetables grown by farmers went from 157.7 pounds in 1973 to 155.8 pounds last year — a drop of 1.2 percent.

Most of that's gone to farmers who had crops to market after bad weather. But it's bound to encourage home gardening.

Ms. Kaitz said that three years of surveys by the department have found an increase of about 4 percent a year in the number of home gardens since 1973. But, she said, the total each year has consistently represented about 44 percent of the households in the country.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department scientists working with cattle manure have come up with a protein supplement that might be as good for sheep and cattle feed as alfalfa.

The research team in Clay Center, Neb., has found that the fermenting manure that produces methane gas leaves behind what it nicely calls "ant solids ain effluent" — a mess that's 3 percent to 4 percent solids and about 60 percent crude protein. Ronald L. Prior, a department nutritionist, said that the residue is dried and its substances separated with a centrifuge. That produces a cake that's about 17 percent protein, he said.

Further work is being done on procedures and machines, the department said, but so far the process appears practical only at large feedlots.

Fermentation of manure occurs naturally in such oxygen-free places as a cow's rumen, pond sediment and some sewage systems. Two groups of bacteria successively break down the compounds in the manure to produce methane, carbon dioxide and the proteins in the residue.

The scientists have been using a closed, 200-cubic-foot vat to speed up fermentation by cooking the manure at 130 degrees. More methane is recovered that way, too, they said.

The first flying trapeze act was performed by Jules Leotard at the Cirque Napoleon in Paris in 1859. He was immortalized as "That Daring Young Man On His Flying Trapeze."

Astro-Graph

By Bernice Bede Osol

Aug. 4, 1978

Look for a sudden halt to all that confusion that has been in your life lately. This coming year promises to liberate you so that you'll once again have control.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You have a strong independent streak which normally serves you well. Today, however, this could turn into just plain, old-fashioned stubbornness. Like to find out more about yourself? Send for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter by mailing 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you fall heir to some unexpected additional tasks today, don't make them seem tougher than they really are. You can manage them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're far too sensible to believe you can get something for nothing, yet today you'll bank your hopes on that erroneous idea.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) More than most people, you should know that being too dictatorial provokes an unpleasant response that is difficult to contend with, so don't do it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Pay special attention to details today. You're apt to be in one of your absentminded moods and do something forgetful — like locking your keys in the car.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be prepared for the unexpected in commercial dealings today, especially if friends are involved, or a misunderstanding might result.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Using pressure tactics to get another to comply with your wishes won't work out at all. At the first opportunity, he or she will leave you high and dry.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) No matter how cleverly you try to disguise that neglected work, you'll be discovered. It takes less effort to do the task than to find a cover-up.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A relationship with a close friend is under more strain than you realize. Root out the underlying problem. Discuss it openly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You could behave like a jumping jack today in making decisions. Unless you settle down, you'll lose sight of your original objective.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If your projects are not well-thought-out, you could cause confusion for yourself and all your coworkers as well.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't get yourself involved in another's complicated affairs. Think twice before making loans, borrowing or advising.

PGA greens to be fast

By GARY MIHOSES
Associated Press Writer
OAKMONT, Pa. (AP) — The greens are groomed for speed in golf's 60th PGA Championship. Jack Nicklaus will drink to that. Lanny Wadkins won't.

"The faster the better. Anytime you have fast slick greens you eliminate an awful lot of fellows," said Nicklaus, who sipped cold orange juice after Wednesday's final practice round.

But Wadkins wasn't toasting the putting surfaces at Oakmont Country Club, where championship play begins today.

"I got here, saw the greens, and decided I wasn't going to have any drinks or coffee all week," said Wadkins, the defending PGA champ who's failed to make the cut in eight of 20 tournaments this year.

"It's just going to be a case of how good your nerves are, and I figure I'll need all the help I can get," added Wadkins, who was to play in a threesome with Nicklaus and U.S. Open titlist Andy North.

Nicklaus, coming off consecutive victories at the British Open and the Philadelphia Classic, is bidding for his fifth PGA title. That would tie him with Walter Hagen for the all-time lead.

After playing here two days last week, Nicklaus skipped all but the final practice round this week.

"I like fast greens, but I was hoping they weren't overreacting to a 63 shot here in 1973 and trying to make the golf course so nobody could play it."

Nicklaus referred to the final round 63 that Johnny Miller shot here to win the 1973 U.S. Open. The score, still a record for Oakmont and the Open, came on a day when the greens were slow and mushy due to heavy rainfall.

"I like the fast greens because the better players win on fast greens. I've had lots of times when I've had trouble with fast greens. But when I'm playing well, when I'm right, then I feel I'm usually right up there with this kind of course," Nicklaus said.

Arnold Palmer would agree with that. He remembers when he lost to Nicklaus here in the 1962 U.S. Open.

"Jack has a knack for putting these greens which is not common among most of the players," said Palmer.

"I recall in 1962 he 3-putted only once in 90 holes, and that in itself is a major accomplishment."

That's why Palmer regards Nicklaus as the obvious favorite here.

"I don't know that there is anybody who merits the favored position Nicklaus does," said Palmer, who has never won the PGA.

"You can talk about the other guys, Tom Watson and the guys that have played good recently, and you still have to come back to Jack."

Beyond fast greens, the PGA has a $50,000 top prize that will go to the winner. There's $30,000 for second place and $20,000 for third.

The leading PGA money winner so far this year is 6-foot-4, 210-pound Andy Bean, whose checks so far total $245,588.

Second on the money list is Nicklaus with $243,622, followed by Watson at $222,729 and Lee Trevino at $203,920.

Missing Herrera asks to be traded

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas placekicker Eren Herrera, who is being fined $500 each day he is absent from the Cowboys' training camp, has asked the team to trade him.

Herrera, who already owes the Super Bowl champion Cowboys $6,500 for his absence so far in camp, told reporters Wednesday the team has failed to offer him a salary commensurate with his standing as the top kicker in the National Football League.

"If they don't think as highly of me as I think of myself, it's time to move on."

"It's gone too far. I don't think they have any plans for me here. Maybe it's time to move to another team which appreciates me more than the Cowboys."

Grinfelds wins tournament easily

By TOM DeCOLA
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) — Women's pro bowling tournament finals last 24 games, but Vesma Grinfelds didn't need all of them.

The three-time All-American from San Francisco ran away from the field to take the top prize of $3,000 Wednesday night in the Metropex Open.

Grinfelds camped in the pocket throughout the tournament, but only began carrying the 10-pin Tuesday night. From that point on, it was a runaway.

"I was hoping I wouldn't fall apart," Grinfelds said.

In the fifth frame of the fifth game of Wednesday's finals, opponent Pat Costello left a split and gave Grinfelds a premonition. "Something hit me and I knew I was gonna win," Grinfelds said after picking up her seventh Women's Professional Bowling Association title. Grinfelds averaged 223 for the 42-game grind and finished 290 pins ahead of runner-up Virginia Norton, the tour's leading money winner this season.

The last game was a laugher, with Norton having no chance to catch Grinfelds, but struggling to hold onto second. Norton fired 247 the last game, but the extra-losse Grinfelds pumped a 259 to extend her mammoth lead.

Norton claimed the second spot. Donna Adamek charged into third place, with Martha McGowan coming in fourth and veteran Judy Soutar fifth.

Most of the successful shooters in the tournament played an extreme outside shot, and Norton said those who made the adjustment scored well.

"It seems more difficult to hit the pocket than an inside shot," Norton said, "but you can adjust to the lanes and do it."

Scores were exceptionally high, reminding spectators more of the men's tour, but Grinfelds shrugged off the comparison. "On a lane condition like this the men would be averaging 240," she said. "They have stamina and the physical strength to do more intricate things with the ball."

It was a special win for Grinfelds, whose father was in the crowd watching. "It's the second tournament he's seen me win," she said.

"I really kinda won it for him."

Montefusco stops Astros

HOUSTON (AP) — San Francisco right-hander John Montefusco knew he had his work cut out for him before he fired his first pitch.

"We really needed this one," said Montefusco, who scattered seven hits as the Giants snapped Houston's eight-game winning streak with a 4-2 triumph over the Astros Wednesday night.

"The last two games, the clubhouse had been kind of quiet," Montefusco said. "But tonight, everything was back to normal before the game and I think that made a difference."

"We have to stop and think that we're still on top and we're fighting for the playoffs. There are only two months left in the season and we're going to have to give it our best shot every game."

Montefusco, 34, picked up his first victory since June 25. He went the distance for only the third time in 25 starts this season as the Giants broke the Astros club record-tying home winning streak of 11.

Terry Whitfield's eighth home run of the season, a three-run blast off losing pitcher Tom Dixon, 5-8, proved to be the deciding blow as San Francisco managed to hang on to its slim one-half game lead over second-place Cincinnati in the National League West.

Whitfield, who sustained a head injury that required 20 stitches in Monday night's game, said being a starter this season has helped his mental outlook.

"It was tough on me last year to come to the ball park and not know whether I was going to start or sit on the bench," he said.

"It was frustrating to sit on the bench last night (because of the injury) and watch my teammates play hard, but still lose. I'm just glad I was able to contribute tonight."

The Giants took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on a leadoff double by Bill Madlock and Jim Dwyer's run producing single.

Houston came back to tie the score in the bottom half of the inning on a single and stolen base by Terry Puhl and Jose Cruz' RBI single to right.

A fourth-inning single by Cruz and Bob Watson's double to the left-field corner produced the Astros' only other run of the game.

Falcons cut three
GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — A pair of Missouri Valley Conference players from West Texas State and New Mexico State were among three players cut by the Atlanta Falcons Wednesday.

Getting the ax were defensive end Mike Lusane of WTSU, linebacker Kim Spears of NMSU and defensive back Henry Bradley of Virginia Tech. The release of the three rookie free agents trimmed the Falcons' roster to 72 players.

Atlanta has until Aug. 15 to cut its roster to the NFL limit of 60 players.

Clark regains all-around lead at National High School Rodeo

HURON, S.D. (AP) — The battle for all-around cowboy at the National High School Rodeo found J.R. Clark of Alliance, Neb. with an edge again.

With only one performance remaining before the end of the first go round, Clark regained the lead after losing it Tuesday.

Clark, a senior, was standing second in the bareback riding and third in bull riding with scores of 69 points in each event.

Continuing to lead the girls in all-around competition was Candy Thoreson of Gruver, Texas. She led the goat-tying with a time of 9.6 seconds.

Oklahoma was leading team standings. Montana and Texas followed in that competition. New leaders cropped up in three different events.

In break-away roping, Tamara Bushendorf of Eau Claire, Wis. caught her calf in 2.98 seconds. That was about .1 seconds better than Kristy McNeill of Vernal, Utah, who slipped back to second place.

The Montana roping team of Spike Guardipee of Browning and Dick Powell of Babb turned in a time of 8.88 seconds, trimming 8 seconds from the lead which had been held by the Fallon, Nev. team of Bruce Corkill and Joseph Debra.

Jeff Wheelis of Goliad, Texas, wrestled his steer in 3.7 seconds which boosted him in front of Jimmy Henson, Mounds, Okla., who had led with a time of 4.5 seconds.

Tax easing constitutional plan gets approval of Texas House

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — After two failures, the House finally has approved a package of constitutional amendments to ease property taxes, and Gov. Dolph Briscoe says a legislative consensus is developing.

The House approved the measure (HJR) 113-20 Wednesday night, and Senators could vote today on whether to accept it or send it to a conference committee.

It will take a two-thirds vote in each chamber to send the final product to the voters for a decision at the Nov. 7 election.

Speaker Bill Clayton said he hoped the House could vote today on another part of the compromise that won approval of the constitutional amendments — a $450 million promise by the state to reimburse school districts for revenue lost to property tax relief.

Another key tax relief measure was on its way to a final vote. House-Senate conferees approved Wednesday a bill abolishing the 4 percent state sales tax on gas and electric bills and raising the inheritance exemption from $25,000 per heir to $200,000 per estate.

The tax-exempt portion of an estate would rise to $300,000 in 1985.

Clayton, who promoted the special session on tax relief after Californians cut their own taxes through Proposition 13, bargained and persuaded to salvage the constitutional amendments.

Some said his prestige was at stake after the House twice refused to produce the 100 votes needed to send the package to the Senate.

"I am confident that through the legislative process, which at times is slow and cumbersome, members of the Legislature will send to the people of Texas and to my desk a series of proposals in which they can take pride," Briscoe said in a statement after the House voted Wednesday night.

"It appears a consensus is building in the Legislature, and I am pleased to see such a consensus develop," he said.

Clayton gained some liberals and lost only a few conservatives in the compromising that brought success to his constitutional amendments package.

A major change added language requiring the Legislature to establish statewide standards for appraising real estate for taxation and creating county-wide appraisal offices.

The new provision embraces the essentials of Orange Rep. Wayne Peveto's thrice-defeated bill to bring about greater uniformity in property taxation throughout the state.

Rep. W. S. Healy, D-Paducah, objected strongly to putting the "Peveto language in the guts of the Constitution, where we'll never get rid of it and it will bankrupt every landowner in the state."

"I'll tell you, he (Peveto) is smarter than he looks," Healy said. Peveto just grinned.

"I suggest you look at it again and wipe off your glasses," said the constitutional amendment's sponsor, Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad.

Chief provisions of the House-approved constitutional amendments would:

- Drop the rarely obeyed mandate that intangible property, such as stocks and bonds, be taxed.
- Require the Legislature to exempt up to $10,000 of the assessed value of each homestead from school taxes, plus another $10,000 exemption for the elderly and disabled.
- The school district reimbursement fund would finance the $10,000 exemption for the elderly and disabled and a $3,500 exemption for other homeowners.
- Tax agricultural land on its income-producing ability, not its real estate value. The school district reimbursement fund would have $125 million for this purpose.
- Exempt one car per family from property taxes.
- Limit the growth of state spending every two years to the percentage by which Texans' total personal income has grown. Excluded from the limit would be spending to reimburse

Labor Department off guard when Senate changes rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor Department officials, caught off guard by a Senate vote to free many small businesses from safety and health regulations, say the move would deprive millions of workers of their "fundamental human rights."

But backers of the proposal, adopted Wednesday as the Senate voted to reauthorize Small Business Administration programs, say it will ease the regulatory burden small businesses must bear.

"I think it's very tragic and somewhat shortsighted," Occupational Safety and Health Administration spokesman Frank Greer said after the vote.

"It would seem it is a basic denial of fundamental human rights to deny workers protection because they work in small businesses."

But Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., who voted for the provision, said it was necessary because "very small businesses don't have... the wherewithal and the auditors and everything else to go along with these particular regulations."

The proposal, sponsored by Sen. Dewey Bartlett, R-Okla., would mean that businesses with 10 workers or less in a non-hazardous industry would no longer be subject to inspection by OSHA officials.

Labor Department officials said the change would affect about 10 million workers.

Precise figures on the number of businesses that would be exempt were unavailable. But Tom Wasinger, an aide to Bartlett, estimated that more than two million firms would no longer be subject to OSHA jurisdiction.

Wasinger said small whole-

Temple still a candidate

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Rep. Buddy Temple, D-Diboll, said Wednesday he remains a candidate for House speaker in 1979 and has no plans to withdraw.

He disputed a report he had sent word to a group of dissident House members that he no longer considers himself a viable candidate.

"The only circumstance I can see under which I might withdraw is if this group of people (the dissidents) who are meeting can get 76 votes for some other candidate. If I am not acceptable and somebody else is, I would withdraw and support that person."

He said he thinks he can count on support from 70 of the 150 House members.

Speaker Bill Clayton has released names of enough members or candidates to re-elect him next session for an unprecedented third consecutive term.

Temple said he feels Clayton's position has been damaged by problems he has encountered during the special legislative session, which convened July 10.

The three-button suit is making a comeback, reports Marvin A. Blumenfeld of April-Marcus, Inc., a merchandise consulting firm.

Dwelling 'in God's pocket'

Boat life is carefree-practically

For some, it's deliverance from lawn-mowing. For others, it's catching dinner from the front porch. For most, it's simply the peaceful spell of water all around.

That's why some people have abandoned urban congestion and suburban sprawl for houseboats.

According to Seattle houseboat aficionados Ben Dennis and Betsy Case, nobody is quite certain how many people live on the water. The continent's largest houseboat colonies — numbering several hundred floating homes each — are located in the waters around Sausalito, Calif.; Portland, Ore.; Seattle, and Vancouver, B.C.

But houseboats aren't only a West Coast phenomenon.

Case, a Louisiana native, estimates that as many as 200 "shantyboats" may be tucked into the bayous of the Mississippi River. A few houseboats have even been sighted off Manhattan in the shadow of the Statue of Liberty.

Floating homes are nothing new. In researching their new book, "Houseboats: Reflections of North America's Floating Homes," Dennis and Case learned that Americans and Canadians have been living in houseboats for nearly a century.

For instance, wealthy San Franciscans spent turn-of-the-century summers aboard their plush ark. Many of the boats became their owners' full-time homes in 1906, following the city's devastating earthquake and fire.

Meanwhile, more proletarian houseboat colonies were being founded by Pacific Northwest loggers. Some of their camps on water included floating hotels, general stores and "cook houses" as well as homes.

Originally all-male preserves, the communities soon imported female cooks, who eventually became wives and mothers. According to Dennis and Case, as many as 50 such outposts may still dot British Columbia inlets.

Farther east, fleets of shantyboats traveled down the Mississippi from St. Paul to New Orleans in the late 19th century. One of the

Laid-back lifestyle

The laid-back lifestyle of Lake Union houseboat dwellers seems far removed from the bustle of downtown Seattle. Yet, the city is only a block from their floating doorsteps.

voyagers was "Espanto, the Mexican-Indian Medicine Man" — actually a Michigan fellow named Billy — who once sold more than $1,000 in remedies for assorted human afflictions in a 10-day period. He didn't even have to leave his boat to do so.

"Used to be a lot of houseboats, but people went to something better," one Mississippi River resident told Dennis and Case. "Me, I wouldn't have anything else. I sleep so quiet every night."

But many houseboat dwellers are now spending their nights tossing and turning, thanks to local government efforts to upgrade floating communities. In many populated areas, a houseboat must pass official inspection and be moored at one of the limited number of approved berths with water, power and sewer hook-ups.

Houseboat residents have not always given in to these requirements without a fight, Case notes.

Seven years ago off Sausalito, the conflict erupted into the "Battle of Richardson Bay." After county officials began towing away artist Russell Grissom's "substandard" boat, a hastily formed convoy of Chinese junks, canoes, rowboats and tugs followed in Grissom's defense.

Case describes the outcome of the battle as a "standoff." Grissom regained his boat in the confusion, but civic leaders pressed ahead with their plan to upgrade Sausalito's "Haight-Ashbury-on-the-water."

Forced improvements such as these have brought a more affluent group of residents to the water. According to Dennis and Case, today's typical houseboat residents are professionals — doctors, lawyers and stockbrokers — ranging in age from their late 20s to early 40s. Some have young children, who are strapped into lifejackets day and night.

As one member of the Sausalito counterculture lamented, "It all started with a bunch of drunken plumbers during the war, then the artists moved in... now the rich people have discovered the lifestyle."

Despite their change in economic status, houseboat dwellers remain an independent lot. "Mavericks," Dennis calls them.

Case describes them as "a hard-working, free and easy group of people who have a live-for-today attitude and a love of the water." Most love the water so much that they have small sailboats tied to their floating homes, adds Dennis.

Houseboat living seems to bring out one's artistic tendencies. Owners are continually modifying their floating homes, adding a stained-glass window here or a redwood tub there.

"Houseboats reflect the spirit of their owners more than any other dwelling since man discovered caves," claims Case.

Houseboats visited by Dennis and Case range in price from the whimsical "Annie's Boat," built mainly of scavenged materials by an ex-schoolteacher who says she "took Peter Pan too seriously," to the $500,000 "Taj Mahal," complete with elevator and swimming pool.

"Anything that floated at one time or another has probably been made into a houseboat," says Case. Some are renovated sidewheelers, ferries, battle tugs and barges. And the authors discovered a

"houseboat," fashioned from recycled offset printing plates to resemble a high-topped shoe.

The size of North America's houseboat population has changed little in recent years, says Case. And she sees few prospects for expansion in the years just ahead.

But looking farther into the future, Dennis foresees a time when floating homes may be used to "take the pressure off highly populated areas." Until science learns to control the weather, however, houseboat colonies will probably be limited to sheltered areas with moderate climates.

Don't houseboat residents eventually tire of the run-ins with "marinelords" and city councils, the fears that each storm may turn into Hurricane Agnes, the "water, water everywhere"? Fat chance!

"We're captives of a joyous way of life," says Seattle octogenarian Terry Pettus, a houseboat resident for 33 years. "When you live on a houseboat dock, you're in God's pocket."

HEW bails out colleges

WASHINGTON (AP) — HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. has bailed out two financially troubled black colleges by releasing nearly $8 million in aid, but he handed out some stern advice with the funds.

Califano released the funds Tuesday but warned the colleges and other ailing institutions to tighten their spending practices.

He also announced he plans to propose legislation to bail out Meharry Medical College in Nashville, another deficit-ridden institution that, along with Howard University in Washington, has produced most of America's black doctors.

The secretary of health, education and welfare told the National Medical Association, a group of black doctors, he is freeing $3.5 million for Shaw University in Raleigh, N.C., and $4.4 million for Bishop College in Dallas for the coming academic year.

Both schools are in serious financial trouble, and both have had difficulties administering federal programs. Califano said neither can continue on its present course.

Bishop owes HEW more than $1 million, and other creditors are pressing for payments, Califano said. Shaw was seeking special advance federal funding to pay overdue debts.

Califano tied up federal funds for Bishop this spring and ordered audits of its finances.

He told reporters last month that he intended to re-examine the entire Title III program, which provides $120 million a year to 281 colleges to help them with financial troubles and improve their quality. Some 82 of these colleges are predominantly black, and they receive about 45 percent of the money.

Califano told the medical group many traditionally black institutions are currently facing, or will face in the near-term, serious financial problems.

He said the federal government would continue to play a major role in financing these schools. But federal assistance should help to foster independence, not dependence.

Nixon, Burger part of plot

CHICAGO (AP) — Then-Vice President President Richard M. Nixon, now-Chief Justice Warren Burger and one-time Howard Hughes aide Robert A. Maheu were part of a 1954 CIA plot to ruin the late Aristotle Onassis, according to the September issue of Playboy magazine.

An article by Jim Houghan excerpted from his forthcoming book, "Spooks," said the plot against Onassis came after the Greek shipping tycoon received permission from the late King Ibn Saud to carry Saudi Arabian oil in his ships.

Today's Washington Post quotes Maheu as confirming the basic elements of the article in a phone interview from Las Vegas, Nev. But he denied Houghan's allegation that his actions were part of an international conspiracy, adding, "that's a crock."

Burger, who worked for the Justice Department at the time of the alleged plot, denied through a spokesman that he received intelligence reports on the anti-Onassis campaign.

Nixon could not be reached for comment and the CIA refused comment.

"I wouldn't take the assignment (from Onassis) in-law and rival Stavros Niarchos, until I cleared it with the outfit," Maheu was quoted as saying. The "outfit," he said, was the Central Intelligence Agency, which at the time paid him a $500 monthly retainer.

He said he reported his anti-Onassis activities regularly to the CIA. The CIA also helped his operatives in Rome, where derogatory stories about Onassis were given to a newspaper, he said.

Maheu also acknowledged briefing Nixon.

Houghan contends that the Jidda Agreement between King Saud and Onassis broke the monopoly control of Saudi oil shipment by the Arabian-American Oil Co., angering many American oil company executives as well as Niarchos.

Quoting extensively from financial journalist John Gerrity, who said he was in on the plot, Houghan says Niarchos, the CIA, the FBI and various government officials began a calculated "dirty tricks" campaign against Onassis.

Houghan said the campaign involved wiretapping Onassis' New York headquarters, shadowing his top employees and spreading anti-Onassis smears throughout the world press by means of government leaks and bribed journalists.

Houghan said the campaign even involved the bombing and strafing of one of Onassis' whaling ships by a Peruvian fighter plane.

U.S. cutoff arms sales to Chile

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted Wednesday to cut off all U.S. arms shipments to Chile until the Santiago government turns over three former secret police officials indicted in the assassination here of one-time Chilean ambassador Orlando Letelier.

Letelier was killed in September 1976 when his car was shattered by a bomb as he drove along a Washington street in the Embassy Row section of the city.

The House acted on Wednesday by voice vote after a raucous debate in which Chile's intelligence service was accused of sending a "death squad" to Washington to arrange the bombing, which also killed Letelier's secretary, Ronni Moffitt, a U.S. citizen.
