By CARLA BARANAUCKAS
Pampa News Staff
Attorney General John Hill's campaign for governor swept through Pampa Tuesday when one of his nine caravans made a stop in the city.

"We're campaigning and we're letting people know that we're here. We're not taking it for granted just because we did well in Gray County," said Coleman.

Hill received 45 percent of the vote in Gray County in the Democratic primary.

Hill made extensive use of caravans in the Democratic primary race this spring in his defeat, incumbent Gov. Dolph Briscoe for the party nomination.

"Every poll done by the Houston Post and others indicated John Hill could not possibly win without a runoff," said Coleman. "He did win without a runoff getting 51.4 percent of the vote."

Coleman attributed the success of the primary campaign to the spring caravans.

"He (Hill) set up caravans composed of members of his family, close associates, state officials, members of the Senate and House, to go to the towns and take the word to the people what John Hill stood for," said Coleman. "Rather than saturating completely with radio and television as the only way to campaign, he set up these kinds of schedules for caravans to go around the state and stop at the courthouse. I think it's time that when you campaign you bring it down to the level of the people."

Hill is concentrating on the same issues he did in the primary, according to Coleman.

John Hill's stand on opposition to any new state taxes, property tax relief and development of agricultural, water and energy resources are paramount to the state," Coleman said. "He has not changed his stance on these issues. We think that's what he got elected on in May and will pull him through the election."

"Every reform, however necessary, will by minds be carried to an excess which will itself need reforming."

Local officials approve raise

A six percent pay increase for county employees was approved by the Gray County Commissioners' Court Wednesday.

The pay increase will effect elected officials and unelected county employees.

The pay raises will increase the budget $63,600 over the 1978 budget, according to Don Hinton, county judge. The figure also includes all benefits such as social security and retirement, Hinton said.

Approximately $13,300 of the $63,600 total will be for elected officials' raises, Hinton said.

In discussing the raises, Ted Simmons, county commissioner from Precinct 4, said he didn't have any preference about receiving a pay increase, but felt other elected officials deserved a pay increase.

Hinton and the other commissioners agreed with Simmons saying they did not personally want a pay increase, but they thought other officials in the county deserved raises.

It has been three years since elected officials in Gray County received pay increases, according to Hinton.

The commissioners decided to include the unelected county employees in the motion for a pay increase.

"I sure don't think we should give it (pay increase) to the elected officials unless we give it to all of them (unelected employees)," said Ronnie Rice, county commissioner from Precinct 2.

Dollar slips back on money markets

LONDON (AP) — The dollar slipped back on Europe's money markets but stayed above the record lows hit in trading Tuesday. It did somewhat better in Tokyo.

It looks as if that one-day dollar recovery is now over," a London trader said. He predicted the dollar would move lower during the day.

State, federal officials wind down desert search

FLORENCE, Ariz. (AP) — While some 200 law enforcement officials and civilian volunteers were winding down a desert search for escaped killer Gary Tison, the Pinal County grand jury was returning 19 felony indictments against members of his gang in connection with his and Randy Greenawalt's escape from Arizona State.

Greenawalt, 29; Raymond Tison, 19; and Ricky Tison, 18, were charged with 15 counts of assault with a deadly weapon for allegedly forcing 15 guards and visitors into a broom closet at gunpoint during the July 30 escape.

Greenawalt also is charged with escaping and possessing a firearm while a prisoner. The Tison boys are charged with helping Greenawalt and their father escape, and with bringing prohibited articles — sawed off shotguns — into the prison. Both Gary Tison and Greenawalt are convicted murderers.

Meanwhile, a federal complaint was filed Tuesday charging Gary Tison, who remains at large, with unlawful flight to avoid confinement.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Dale Danneman, who filed the charge, said it mainly was a legal maneuver designed to keep the FBI involved in the case. The action was requested by the Pinal County Attorney's office, he said.

Arrest warrants for the Tison boys and Greenawalt is scheduled for Monday. They also face murder and kidnap charges in Yuma County, and face a preliminary hearing Friday.

A five-day manhunt for Tison, 42, involving about 150 volunteers ended Tuesday in the Sawtooth Mountains south of Casa Grande. But Colorado authorities continued the search for two more possible victims of the escapees.

Search and rescue and communications volunteers paced the Arizona desert from dawn to noon, but found no trace of Tison.

Tison's oldest son, Donald, 20, died Aug. 11 when he tried to drive a van owned by a Texas couple honeymooning in Colorado through a roadblock near Casa Grande. Greenawalt and the other Tison boys were captured then, but authorities believe the elder Tison escaped into the abusive desert.

A small force of deputies continued to search the mines and patrol roads, but roadblocks were removed and volunteers were released. Before the volunteers began the search effort Tuesday, they received instructions from Pinal County Sheriff Frank Reyes.

Memphis now without power

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Vandals sabotaged a power substation early today, authorities said, knocking out power for this city of 650,000 people already hit by police and fire-fighter strikes that threaten to spread into a citywide general strike. Some looting was reported.

The blackout, which occurred shortly after midnight, affected all of the state's largest city and surrounding Shelby County, officials said. Power began coming back on 90 minutes later and was completely restored about 2 1/2 hours after the outage hit.

Police Director E. Winslow Chapman said at an early morning news conference that the blackout was "probably due to sabotage," but a spokeswoman for Memphis Light, Gas & Water Division said the substation "was entered and that switches were thrown" to break circuits and cut off power.

Chapman said the FBI was assisting local authorities in investigating the break-in at the substation about 15 miles east of downtown Memphis.

Paula Payne, a spokeswoman for the utility, said someone threw a series of switches at the big substation, cutting off a main electrical power link with the Tennessee Valley Authority. The TVA's Allen Steam Plant on Presidents Island could not carry the power demands alone and automatically shut down.

The blackout left some parts of Memphis without water pressure because electric-powered pumps were out. Memphis International Airport had to shift to standby power.

Chapman said one man was being questioned about the blackout but he was not considered a suspect. He said the man, who was not a striker, had requested a lawyer.

There were no immediate reports of arrests for looting.

More than 1,000 National Guardsmen are patrolling the city with 100 to 125 non-striking police officers and 75 sheriff's deputies, while 200 Fire Department officials and non-striking firemen have 23 of the city's 48 fire stations open.

Ray says he didn't shoot Martin Luther King

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — James Earl Ray took the witness stand before Congress today and swore, as expected, that "I did not shoot Dr. Martin Luther King."

Ray in his first public accounting under oath of the events surrounding the 1968 murder of the civil rights leader in Memphis, Tenn., told the House assassinations committee: "My testimony is the same that I would have given to a Memphis trial court if I had had that opportunity."

The 50-year-old Ray, accompanied by a phalanx of U.S. marshals, was brought into the committee's chamber under severe security provisions. Spectators, including photographers, were cautioned they would be expelled if they stood while Ray entered the room.

After his attorney, Mark Lane, engaged acting chairman Richardson Preyer in battle over Ray's treatment by federal authorities, Ray launched into a long and rambling preliminary statement.

Ray pleaded guilty to King's killing in 1969 but almost immediately recanted that confession after receiving a 99-year sentence in a Tennessee state prison.

"In respect to my guilty plea," Ray said, "it is not a difficult matter for an attorney to move his client to a guilty plea. I'm sure every member of this committee knows this." Ray's attorney at the time of his sentencing was Percy Foreman, a nationally known trial lawyer.

Then Ray returned to a story he has told in earlier interviews that he was a pawn in what he thought was a gun-running scheme by a man named "Raoul," and may have been set up by the FBI.

"I'm concerned about FBI informants coming up here to testify," he said. Ray repeated his claim that some FBI personnel are out to kill him, adding: "They have a license to kill."

Before Ray began his presentation, Lane protested that "Mr. Ray was beaten by federal prison official on Monday and held in solitary confinement with the lights on for 24 hours."

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coving Commandment.

The Office of Civil Rights in the Department of Health Education and Welfare (HEW) is always on the prowl to uncover cases of discrimination. Statistics are constantly used to uncover and determine where power is to be used against business and institutions.

Colleges and universities are prime targets for the members of this active government agency. Their eyes are constantly focused to find evidence of bias in any and all schools.

If the salaries of black females are lower than white females, HEW bureaucrats immediately assume there is discrimination. The school will then be threatened with loss of federal funds if changes are not made.

George J. Borjas, an economist at the University of California at Santa Barbara, decided to see how HEW would stack up against its own statistical tests.

It flunked. Using figures supplied by Civil Service Commission, Borjas found that at HEW the average salary for white males was $20,897. For black males the annual figure was $15,333.

White females were receiving $13,395, but black females got only $11,642. According to the statistics, here was gross discrimination, not only between whites and blacks but between males and females.

Such wage discrepancies at any institution would cause HEW to file a discrimination complaint. Borjas does not claim that HEW is actually discriminating. He says that other factors such as age, experience, time on the job, can explain the differences in salary.

Borjas was amused to find that HEW, the civil rights authority, is guilty by the standards it uses against others. He slyly suggests that federal funds be denied to HEW until it shapes up to the goals it sets for institutions of learning.

We do not believe that this learned economist was a bit surprised by his findings.

It is our observation that most, if not all, governmental agencies could not meet the demands they place on people, institutions and industry. The bureaucracy is not alone in this, elected officials and their offices could not stand much of an investigation into their activities based on regulations. They too are part and parcel of the formation of over-abundant government controls.

Why should rulers subject themselves to the rules laid down for their subjects? Are they not a cut above the serfs in the kingdom?

ABC's '20/20'

and the super germ

By REED IRVINE
(Accuracy in Media)

ABC's entertainment television shows have shot to the top in the ratings war in recent years, but ABC News has languished in third place. In an effort to make a better record, ABC News has recently introduced a new program called "20/20," which is an imitation of "60 Minutes," the highly successful "magazine" program of CBS News.

ABC's "20/20" has gotten off to a very shaky start. The first program was planned by the critics, and the June 20 program contained a segment which caused a large corporation, American Cyanamid, to take full-page ads in The New York Times and The Washington Post questioning the journalistic integrity of ABC News.

The story in question concerned a debate that is taking place over the use of antibiotics in cattle and poultry feed. That might seem to be a pretty dull subject, but the outcome of the debate could have a lot to do with the price you have to pay for meat and poultry products. American Cyanamid claims that if the use of antibiotic feed is banned or restricted, as much as $2.5 billion a year could be added to the bill that consumers have to pay for beef, pork and poultry. The reason is that the antibiotic feed speeds the growth of the animals and reduces the cost of production.

On the other hand, ABC used its program to spread the idea that feeding antibiotics was dangerous to public health, because it might result in the development of disease-producing bacteria that were immune to antibiotics. If this happened, we would lose the benefit of antibiotics in fighting diseases. ABC used frightening terminology, such as "super-germs" and the "antibiotic bomb."

Since the Food and Drug Administration is considering restricting the use of antibiotic feeds, the subject is a timely one, and the public should be informed about the arguments pro and con.

That is not what ABC News set out to do. They produced a program that sought to convince the viewer that there is real danger that the use of antibiotic feeds will produce strains of "super-germs" resistant to penicillin and other similar drugs. This is a theory that is held by some bacteriologists. It is based on the fact that resistant strains of bacteria have developed as a result of the medical use of certain antibiotics in treating diseases. Laboratory studies have revealed the mechanism by which this resistance is developed in bacteria.

What ABC neglected to tell its audience is that the scientist who has studied the large-scale "experiment" carried out by those who have used antibiotics in animal feed for over a quarter of a century, have concluded that there is not one iota of evidence that the use of such feeds has produced antibiotic-resistant, disease-producing bacteria. These scientists argue that this deserves to be given far more weight than the theories of bacteriologists who have tried but failed to duplicate their laboratory results under actual field conditions.

These scientist point out that if it were true that antibiotic feeds tended to develop bacteria resistant to antibiotics this would show up first in the poultry, pigs and cattle. The antibiotics fed to them would cease to be effective. The fact is that these feeds are just as effective in producing beneficial results today as they were when the practice was begun a quarter of a century ago.

ABC News was advised in advance that there were two sides to this story and that they had an obligation to air both sides. Their only recognition of this obligation came in a statement at the tag-end of the program that there were some respected scientists who disagreed with the view that they had presented. They summarized the position of these scientists in one-sentence, which was inaccurate, and then proceeded to rebut it. ABC claimed on the air that they had invited the producers of antibiotics to be interviewed for the program but that they had refused. The following week ABC admitted that they had rejected Cyanamid's offer to have one of their scientists tell the other side of the story.

They had wanted a sensational story. To permit the other side to have been told would have spoiled it. But they spoiled their own reputation.

Inflation is rooted in taxation

By OSCAR W. COOLEY

If the financing of government were made voluntary — that is, if all taxation were ended — one blessed result would be that the key source and cause of inflation would disappear.

Inflation is excessive money in circulation. It becomes excessive because of too much bank borrowing by the U.S. Treasury. Such borrowing is possible because of the Treasury's high credit rating, and that in turn is due to the fact that the Treasury's power to take money from people by force — to tax, that is — is unlimited.

U.S. government bonds have the name of being the world's safest security. This is because the U.S. government has at its disposal the richest economy in the world.

Thus, it is the privilege of taxing the American people that empowers that government to sell huge amounts of bonds, notes and Treasury bills. Many of these are monetized, that is, bought by commercial banks and Federal Reserve banks, which pay for them by merely crediting the Treasury's deposit account. This is the engine of inflation.

If its power to tax were taken away, the government could no longer raise cash by merely taking it from our pockets. Hence, its credit would no longer be gilded. Investors, including banks, would think twice before buying its bonds, as they do now before buying a corporation's bonds. Fewer Treasury IOUs would be monetized, less money created, less inflation generated.

But, one may ask, since government has the power to tax, why need it borrow, causing inflation? Since the Treasury can commandeer money, why does it issue paper on which it has to pay interest? (Next to national defense, interest is the highest single expense the government has.)

There are two answers: 1. Borrowing does not seem to cost the people as taxing does. It's a way by which the government can rob the hen roost in the dark. 2. Washington's appetite for money is insatiable. It wants all it can tax without arousing a revolt like that triggered by the Jarvis-Gann amendment, plus heavy borrowing. It wants these billions to finance the many expensive projects dreamed up by bureaucrats, legislators and citizens who have various axes to grind.

Consider one group, the 15 million or so people who work for government. They want more pay. Nearly half of all federal government spending, and more than half of all spending by state and local governments, are wages.

In the last decade or so, government workers have upped their pay substantially. They are now receiving higher wages, on the average, than people doing similar work in private employment. Stephen Perloff, comparing nine occupations in eleven states, found that in nine of the cities surveyed wages in government jobs exceeded those in private employment. Both union and non-union workers were included in Perloff's study.

That unions have in recent years expanded in public employment more rapidly than in industry is well known. Fifty-nine percent of all federal workers, not including the U.S. Postal Service, now belong to unions. So do 51 percent of state and local government employees. Compare these figures with the minus 25 percent of industrial workers that unions have been able to corral since their beginning.

Public employees find it easier, on the whole, to get wage increases than do private employees, according to Seymour Lipset, in "Public Employee Unionism" (Institute for Contemporary Studies, San Francisco). The main reason, I think, is that in public employment the administrators do not stand to lose money by a wage increase, as those in private employment will. Therefore, the public employer does not resist wage demands so strenuously. Indeed, he may favor such a demand for it may boost his own earnings.

Public wage rates have forged ahead of private because the source of public wages, that is, tax revenue, is more certain than is income that depends on voluntary sales at competitive prices. Just as the power to tax increases borrowing ability, so it increases wage-paying ability. Unions of public employees know this and raise their wage demands accordingly.

Leaders of public employee unions are opposed to tax limitation proposals. They know which side their bread is buttered on and they want none of that butter scraped off. As for the idea of ending taxation and devising voluntary means of financing services now paid for through taxes, this would give them the cold shivers.

Not only does taxation make the government's demand for labor inelastic (insensitive to a rise in wage rates) but it also tends to make the government's demand for everything it buys inelastic. For example, the sellers of goods to the government encounter less sales resistance than when selling to private buyers. This, too, aids and abets inflation.

Taxation does not directly cause inflation. A dollar of tax revenue is not a dollar added to the money supply but is a dollar less spent by the taxpayer and a dollar more spent by government. But to the extent that the power to tax facilitates government borrowing it paves that way for inflation.

The odds on ERA

By DON GRAFF

It had all the marks of a sure winner on a fast track, back there in 1972.

Behind it was a decade of rights-expanding, consciousness-raising momentum. In the first year of submission to state legislatures, it picked up a quick 30 of the 38 approvals needed for ratification.

But here it is 1978 and the Equal Rights Amendment is still three states short of ratification, plagued with defections among those already lined up and with prospects of making it to the finish line at all riding on.

It has been a discouraging six years for the cause of sexual equality before the law, the consequence in part of initial overconfidence on the part of supporters and possibly some overselling of the necessity of and the benefits to be derived from ERA. There is a considerable body of sympathetic thought which nevertheless believes adequate protection against sexual protection already can be found in the 14th Amendment.

Add to this under-estimation of the extent of opposition and the frequently irrational extremes to which it has been willing to carry the fight against the amendment.

The original seven-year mandate for ERA ratification expires in March. The House Judiciary Committee has recommended a 39-month extension which, once it gets through the full House, could run into real trouble in the Senate in the form of a filibuster.

Nevertheless, the extension recommendation is the best news for ERA is some time. It would-mean time to rally public support which soundings show is still there. The latest Gallup Poll favors ERA by 58 percent to 31 percent opposed, with male support at 62 percent actually exceeding that among women, 55 percent.

Whatever the outcome, ERA is evidence again that sure things can be as undependable in politics and social evolution as they usually are in horse races.

The way 'things are going, the Moscow Olympics may well lose out to worsening East-West relations.

But the U.S. network which purchased broadcast rights to the 1980 games is making sure that it does not lose out on its investment as a result.

NBC has taken out a $40 million insurance policy with Lloyd's of London to cover it in case disagreements over human rights and other issues cause the United States and possibly other Western nations to pull out. Even if the games should not be cancelled as a result, the resultant mini-events would scarcely be worth the coverage. Not to mention the cost.

Do you suppose the Greeks, who started the whole business back in 776 B.C. in celebration of human achievements transcending such mundane considerations as politics and commerce, had a word for this?

Your money's worth

'Jewelry gold rush'

When the price of gold smashed through the $200-an-ounce barrier earlier this month, it heralded an accelerating gold rush in the world money markets — based primarily on widespread mistrust of the swindling dollar, confidence that gold will not be banished from the international monetary system no matter what the once-powerful U.S. says, and the centuries-old tradition that gold is a haven for resources in times of great uncertainty.

But you, an average American, need not even bother to try to participate in the awesomely complex international currency and metal markets, unless you're a sturdy speculator and truly shrewd gambler. You can get a sense of the glitter of gold these days merely by shopping at your local jewelry store to buy gold jewelry. And that you obviously are doing on a mounting scale.

Sales of gold jewelry are estimated at 50 to 60 percent ahead of 1977, to peaks never before even approached.

In the greatest boom ever is gold jewelry for men — attributed not only to the appeal of gold but also to the return of an era of elegance in men's attire and romanticism.

During the two-week July jewelry show in New York City, thousands of the nation's jewelers stocked up on gold jewelry inventory for the Christmas season — signaling their faith that Christmas purchases in 1978 will be great-to-spectacular.

But you, a would-be buyer, cannot go safely into the gold jewelry market without some basic knowledge of what you're buying in terms of karats, finishings, alloy, etc.

(1) For instance, the karat mark identifies the percentage of gold in an item. (Carat, though, spells out the stone weight in figuring the weight of diamonds.)

If an item is marked 24 K, it means it is made of 100 percent pure gold, with each karat representing 1-24 parts gold. Pure, solid gold is 24 karats — too soft to be used by itself in jewelry. It must be alloyed with other metals for strength and hardness.

If a piece of jewelry is marked 14 karat, or "14 K," it has 14 parts of pure gold to 10 parts of alloy. If the jewelry is 18 karat gold, it contains 18 parts of pure gold to 6 parts of alloy. Nothing less than 10 karats can be called "gold," or "karat gold," under U.S. government regulations. England allows that sale of 9 K "gold" jewelry.

(2) An alloy is a metal composed of two or more metallic elements and it is used to improve its properties. Most alloys are obtained by fusing a mixture of metals.

Gold is an exceedingly versatile metal, and many shades can be made by alloying it with special metals. Karat golds are available in yellow, red, pink, green and white — with the color variations made by varying the proportions of copper, nickel, zinc and silver in the alloy. The proportion of pure gold is unchanged.

(3) Fashion jewelry may be gold plated, gold electroplated or gold washed. These items are defined by law, according to the percentage of real gold in the jewelry — and if you are not familiar with the terms, you could wind up beguiled into paying "karat gold" prices for gold plated jewelry.

(4) Gold filled jewelry, also known as "gold overlay" is rated between karat and costume jewelry and is made by mechanically bonding a gold layer or layers to a base metal such as copper.

It must have a fineness of 10 karats or better; the outer layer must be at least 1-20th of the total weight. Thus, if a 14-karat layer has been used, the jewelry should be marked "14 K gold filled," or "14 K G.F."

(5) Rolled gold plate describes high quality costume jewelry. Manufactured by the same method as gold filled jewelry, the gold layer is less than 1-20th of the total weight. Look for the markings that tell you the ratio of gold to the metals used: "1-40th 12 layer is less than 1-20th of the total weight. Look for the markings that tell you the ratio of gold to the metals used: "1-40th 12 layer K Rolled Gold Plate," or "1-40th 14 K R. G. P."

(6) Gold electroplate is jewelry that has been electrochemically coated with at least seven millionths of an inch of karat gold. If the gold coating is thinner, the jewelry should be labeled "gold washed" or "gold flashed." If it is a thicker karat gold label — at least 100 millionths of an inch — the manufacturer can mark the product "heavy gold electroplate."

Preferred in our country in fine jewelry is 18-karat gold, representing 75 percent pure gold. As for durability, the more karat gold in a piece of jewelry, the longer it will last. Jewelry with a very thin layer of gold is designed to have a short life span.

Junk-money in the bank

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — Charles Fitzpatrick's 23-room house and 20 acres of land look as though they have not been cleaned up for five years.

Not so, says the 74-year-old entrepreneur.

"It's been about seven years since the house was swept out — since my mother died," he said.

But what looks like a hopeless maze of junk to an outsider looks like money in the bank to Fitzpatrick.

Woven into the tangle is Fitzpatrick's money crop — cactus.

"I've advertised as the largest cactus garden in the world for 20 years. No one ever called my hand. I must be right," he said.

For 35 years the Georgia native has specialized in cactus — about 2,000 varieties. He has sold untold millions of the thorny plants throughout the nation.

The former traveling salesman's business philosophy is simple and indisputable. "If it don't make money we don't do it," he said.

Hence, the mess. "The money's laying in the bank that I would've used to clean up. I'm a cheapskate," he said.

The cactus is everywhere on his land. But, from looking, you'd never guess it had been intentionally planted. There does not appear to be any rhyme or reason to the planting method.

"I got one friend that drives me crazy. He wants me to bulldoze it up and plant it in straight rows. I'm too tight to have them dig it up and replant it," the cactus king complained.

The cactus business is good these days. Northern dealers grab it by the truck full. For 15 years, a Michigan man bought 40,000 plants every two weeks at 50 cents each.

Fitzpatrick, otherwise glib, is tight-lipped about his profits. But he is proud of his ability to beat the taxman.

"This is the best business in the world. Ain't nobody gonna take inventory here," he boasted.

Fitzpatrick started out with one-tenth of a city lot 35 years ago. He was looking for something "the oil companies couldn't put me out of business with." Of all his money-making schemes, none hit like cactus.

"I don't have to do anything with them. They grow better if you water them, a little, but that's all," he said. "Some of them you just lean up against a tree. See those, that's five bucks each."

His advertisements appear in magazines across the nation. The semi-defunct retail store is called Cactus Land. The wholesale business is The Cactus Garden. But the place has gone by a few other monikers.

"I advertised in 35 different magazines and used a different name in each one. Everyone thought I was as crooked as a rattlesnake. I used Cactus Pat, Cactus Jack...Anything with cactus in it," he said with a cunning grin.

His plants are imported from throughout the Southwest (and some from as far as Japan). He said he has about 100 people "out in the woods looking for plants." Some of the plants, he guessed, may have been collected by means that are a shade beyond the color of the law.

"Don't tell me where you got them," he said he tells crews that scour the Big Bend area.

Many of the plants are native to Mexico.

"If they ever close that bridge (to Mexico) I'll be in the boat with the Arabs. I'd get anything I want for them," he said.

Perhaps the biggest mess is the old retail store. It's closed now and a thick layer of dust coats the post cards, mannequins and other assorted junk.

"I haven't got time to clean it up and double the prices. See that box of tomyhawks over there? I'd have to start up an Indian war to sell them all," he said.

Despite the mess, no one complains. His only neighbor is an employee who lives in a house Fitzpatrick fixed up.

"She better not complain. Anyway, her house is probably as nasty as mine."

Houston attorney thinks limit on taxes is illegal

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston city attorney thinks the Tax Board of Appraisement's 10 percent limit on 1978 property tax increases is illegal.

Bob Collie said Tuesday he would tell the City Council today why he came to that conclusion. He added, however, that his opinion would not affect tax rollbacks in seven northwest Houston subdivisions revalued twice in four years.

The limit would mean a large tax savings to residents of 250 subdivisions where this year's revaluations increased taxes as much as 400 percent.

Mayor Jim McConn and Councilmen Homer Ford and

Jim Westmoreland agreed the limitation might be arbitrary and illegal, and should be changed.

But Councilmen Frank Mann and Louis Macey, both members of the board, said they plan to go ahead with the limitation if it means fairer and more equal taxation.

Mann said Collie's opinion is "irrelevant" and has no effect on board actions to decide what is equal and fair taxation.

He said the board, which hears final appeals of high revaluations, needs no motions or ordinances to make decisions using the limitation scale devised by Mann and unanimously approved by the board on Monday.

But McConn said Mann's motion was passed with the stipulation that it would be void if Collie found it to be illegal. The mayor, who said he hasn't analyzed the effect the limit would have on city tax revenues, said he thinks it could be devastating to the Houston Independent School District.

HISD official Linus Wright said earlier the tax reduction would cost the district $8 million in 1978-79.

Westmoreland said he would like to see a city tax department analysis of the effect Mann's plan would have on city revenues, and Ford suggested a plan of his own that he said would clarify the "clouded issue."

His proposal calls for a city-wide revaluation with a freeze at 1977 market values. Areas not revalued since 1970 would be immediately revalued and placed on the tax rolls to provide revenue for the city. Those revalued within the past eight years would then be reassessed and placed on the rolls.

But HISD officials have said Ford's plan could lead the district to bankruptcy by they 1981-82 school year.

The appraisal board put the 10 percent limit on property taxes as a citizens group representing civic clubs in many subdivisions circulated petitions seeking a tax rollback to 1977 valuations and a 1 percent limit on tax increases.

The group also said it would consider circulation of petitions seeking a recall election if the mayor and city council failed to act on or rejected the petitions.

Firefighters battle blaze

TERRELL, Texas (AP) — Volunteer firefighters in Terrell fought for two hours Tuesday night to contain a blaze that gutted three downtown buildings and threatened to engulf a wider area of the central business district.

Terrell police Sgt. Roy Woolridge says authorities feared four to six barrels of naphtha in a burning cleaning business might explode, spreading the fire to other downtown buildings.

Police struggled to control a crowd of 700 to 1,000 spectators that flooded into the downtown section of this North Texas town of about 15,000.

Volunteer fire department Chief John Briggs said his entire 25 man force and all the city's five fire units were at the scene. There are no reports of injuries.

Late Tuesday night firefighters were pouring water on the back of the cleaning business where the naphtha was stored in an effort to keep it from exploding. However, firefighters feared if the roof collapsed the naphtha would explode.

The first alarm was turned in at 9:37 p.m. and firefighters reported the blaze under control shortly before midnight.

High school textbooks catch criticism

By SUSAN STOLER
 Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Can a high school literature textbook be guilty of both "tearing down family and country" and overemphasizing "traditional family roles?"

A least one text proposed for use in Texas public schools has caught criticism from both ends of the spectrum in materials pre-filed for the annual State Textbook Committee hearings beginning today.

Two simultaneous hearings on the more than 40 texts will last through Tuesday. Critics' objections and the publishers' responses have been pre-filed.

The State Textbook Committee meets Sept. 11 to recommend selections to the State Board of Education, which votes on final textbook adoption Nov. 11.

As in previous years, American history, biology and literature books generated vigorous objections from reviewers.

A Russian short story in a 12th grade literature book elicited disapproval from Mrs. Thomas Snow of Mansfield.

"I do not feel it is wise to encourage sympathy towards our avowed enemies," she wrote of the author's nationality.

Publisher Scott, Foresman & Co. replied:

"The story about a young man soon to enter the army and his last night with his girl friend has universal appeal and does not in any way encourage sympathy for the Russian government."

Other literature selections under attack by various reviewers are works by Ray Bradbury, J.R.R. Tolkien, Edna St. Vincent Millay, Stephen Crane, Anton Chekhov, Carl Sandburg, Sara Teasdale and the Beatles.

The Texas chapter of the National Organization for Women objected to use of a New York Times 1938 cartoon that used a woman to depict government appropriations for the New Deal.

NOW also charged that a high school industrial arts text was "sexist" because 93 women were included in photos, compared to 642 men.

"Each industry that these textbooks provide information on has been and is primarily male-dominated due to the type of work involved," the publisher responded, adding that faked photos would be among the only solutions.

WHO CARES IF YOUR ELECTRIC BILL IS HIGHER THIS SUMMER? YOU DO AND . . .

WE DO!

If your electric bill has jumped this summer, take a good look at that summer sun. Sure, we all like sunny days, but our friend the sun can be a villain in disguise. On these summer scorches, you'll need your air conditioning to run more, sometimes running day . . . and night . . . all night. Well, that runs up your electric bill. Just when vacation and school expenses are here.

We know you care about higher electric bills. And we want you to know that we care, too. We can't cool off the sun, but there are still time and ways to keep your bill from going much higher. Here are just a few:

- Turn the thermostat to at least 78, or until you find the highest possible setting that feels reasonably comfortable to you. If you have window air conditioning units, run them only as much as is absolutely necessary.
- Check your insulation.
- When you buy major appliances, including air conditioners, be sure to check the EER (Energy Efficiency Rating). The higher the EER, the more energy and money you'll save.
- Clean and replace the filters regularly.
- Keep your drapes closed to block out direct sunlight.
- Weatherstrip around doors and windows.

At Southwestern Public Service, we care about you getting the most for your energy dollar. Call us for suggestions to help you change the size of your electric bill for the better.

Wright named to position

DALLAS (AP) — Linus Wright of Houston has been selected to succeed Dr. Nolan Estes as superintendent of the Dallas Independent School District.

Wright, 51, is currently serving as superintendent for administration and support services in the Houston Independent School District.
 The decision, announced late Tuesday after a five-hour closed-door meeting of the DISD board, was made on a 6-3 vote split along racial lines.
 Board chairman Bill Hunter had asked for a unanimous vote following Wright's nomination. The three minority board members who voted against confirmation announced after the vote that they favored Manford Byrd, deputy superintendent of the Chicago Public Schools.

Other candidates still being considered by Tuesday night were Dr. James Adams, superintendent of Winston-Salem-Forsyth County, N.C. and Ramon C. Cortines, former superintendent of the Pasadena, Calif., Unified School District.
 Wright will replace Estes, who resigned effective Jan. 1, 1979, to accept a professorship at the University of Texas at Austin. Estes will remain on the payroll of the DISD as a $13,000-per-year consultant.
 Wright's salary and length of contract have not been announced, but Hunter said he expects to have Wright under contract "as soon as we can." He said salary and length of contract will be finalized in a formal contract to be presented later to the school board.

Discussion of the contract details are expected to begin today, according to Wright.
 Though terms of that contract are not yet complete, board member Robert Medrano quoted Wright as saying he would not accept the job unless he was assured of at least $60,000 a year plus another $8,000 to $9,000 in fringe benefits, conditions the board accepted.
 Wright's Houston salary is $52,500. Estes' salary has been $50,500.

Medrano said all four final candidates had insisted on five-year contracts.
 In Houston, Wright is responsible for the operation of 235 schools, 70,000 employees, hundreds of instructional programs and a $272 million budget.
 The DISD's proposed budget for 1978-79 is $200.9 million.
 Wright's selection by the board followed a six-month nationwide search that involved 180 nominees. Earlier this summer, the field was narrowed to six candidates.
 Board members visited the hometowns and school districts of the candidates in July, but two of the six finalists recently withdrew.

Wright, who has been in Houston since 1971, has also worked in school districts in San Angelo, Lubbock, Sherman and Denison.
Investigators to shake up state agency
 AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — House investigators have been told the State Insurance Department needs a shakeup that would separate the rate-making board from the agency that looks over thousands of Texas insurance companies.
 "I think it would be best to let the governor appoint the state commissioner of insurance instead of the board," former State Insurance Board chairman Hugh Yantis told the House Investigating Committee Tuesday.
 "I don't think the board has the time to be a truly rate-making body and at the same time be as close to the agency as it has been in the past. There needs to be a further separation of the board and the agency. This means the role of the commissioner would be far more important than it has been."

Yantis was recently turned down by the Texas Senate as Gov. Dolph Briscoe's appointee. A new State Insurance Board chairman has not been named.
 Yantis said the Hurlburt-Hovater incident happened during the time that Joe Christie was state insurance board chairman. Christie resigned in September, 1977, to make an unsuccessful race for U.S. Senate and Yantis took his place.
 "In summary, everything that Hurlburt wrote to the board while I was there was turned over to the Travis County district attorney for use as he saw fit," Yantis said.

Two 'willful', five 'serious' violations

OSHA issues citations for death

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Charging two "willful" and five "serious" violations of federal safety rules, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration has issued citations to a Tennessee construction firm in connection with a June 2 accident here that killed one man and injured five others.

The OSHA citations allege the Florida Construction Co. of Chattanooga, Tenn., willfully allowed workers to overload a ladder at a street interchange under construction, causing the ladder to collapse. OSHA officials also claim the ladder design and construction were not inspected by a "competent" person.

The federal agency has proposed fines totaling $15,840 for the alleged violations.
 Gerald Baty, OSHA area director, said the citations were issued Aug. 1. The firm reportedly received them Aug. 4 and notified Baty's Houston office immediately of plans to appeal the charges.
 However, Haze Latham, superintendent of the company, said Tuesday that he had no comment on the citations because "I have not been made aware of any citations."

Baty claimed he "contacted Mr. Latham myself about the citations at the first of August, so I know he received those citations."
 Those injured have all been released from local hospitals.
 Other serious violations include OSHA allegations that the company failed to construct a barricade in accessible areas within the swing radius of a crawler crane at the construction site, which would prevent employees from being crushed by the machinery.
 Baty said the crane operator reportedly was allowed to leave the machine with a load suspended. And he said employees were allowed to pass or stand under a load on the hood of the crane.

"I must say that I do not know anything about any of this. But I will say that even though I'm not familiar with the details, I know that we will certainly appeal any charges made against this company of a willful violation," said Robert Kenzie, executive vice president of Florida, from his Chattanooga office.
 A willful violation means an employer either intentionally violated a safety rule or was aware of a life-threatening hazard, but made no reasonable effort to correct it.

Euel Bazemore, 54, a native of Lyons, Ga., was killed in the accident after he and five other workers fell from the ladder.

Baty said the crane operator reportedly was allowed to leave the machine with a load suspended. And he said employees were allowed to pass or stand under a load on the hood of the crane.

Equal rights gets house approval

By W. DALE NELSON
 Associated Press Writer
 WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of a 39-month extension for ratifying the proposed Equal Rights Amendment hope the momentum of an unexpectedly large House victory will hold up when the measure reaches the Senate and a threatened filibuster.

The House voted 233-189 Tuesday to extend the ERA ratification time limit to June 30, 1982. The current deadline is March 22.
 Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., principal sponsor of the extension, said the 44-vote margin was "larger than any of us anticipated."
 "The size of the House vote will give tremendous momentum to the effort in the Senate," said Ms. Holtzman, who is scheduled to meet with pro-extension senators on Thursday.
 Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., floor leader of the pro-extension forces, said, "We thought we were going to win by 25 or 30 votes."

In the Senate, a version of the extension measure — pushing back the ratification deadline by seven years — has become stuck in a subcommittee that is divided 3-3 on the bill. That means the Senate likely will ignore its measure and deal directly with the House-approved 39-month extension when returning from the Labor Day recess early next month.
 Had the Senate been able to decide on its own version, the ERA question now would have been headed for a Senate-House conference committee to iron out differences in the two versions.

However, Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, who helped stall the Senate extension measure in the subcommittee, predicted a filibuster he said he would not lead but would support.
 "I suspect there is going to be an awfully extended debate," Hatch said.
 Leading anti-ERA lobbyist Phyllis Schlafly, who had an appointment in Hatch's office after the House vote, said she did not think the extension would pass the Senate and that opponents would challenge it in court if it did.
 An aide to Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., chief Senate champion of the extension, said he was not sure if there was the required three-fifths majority for cutting off a filibuster.

The House vote marked the first time either house of Congress had approved extension of a time limit for ratifying a constitutional amendment. Until the prohibition amendment in 1917, Congress did not impose any time limits. The Constitution does not require a limit.

Former chief executive to attend fund-raiser today

Mary Lou Grier, a spokeswoman for Loeffler's San Antonio headquarters, said any media persons at any level contacted Tuesday who refused to agree to the no-reporting guidelines would not be allowed to attend the reception.
 Howard Adkins, a staff member of the Austin public relations firm directing Loeffler's campaign, said invitations issued to some news executives would be unaffected since it was his view that they would "act on the managerial level" rather than as reporters.
 Adkins said the reception will be closed to the press because "it's a fund-raising reception and indicates support for Loeffler by people who may or may not want to be identified with him or with Ford."

Current campaign finance regulation require that persons contributing more than $50 to a political campaign be identified on campaign finance reporting forms.
 Adkins told the Standard-Times he wanted to make clear there was "nothing to hide" and his chief concern was that with 50 or more reporters and photographers expected for the Ford visit there would be too many people milling about the reception room if all were allowed in.
 But after Ford's Vail, Colo., headquarters rejected the idea of a pool reporter being allowed to attend, Adkins said "it is President Ford's wish" that no press be allowed.

 Adkins said the reception will be closed to the press because "it's a fund-raising reception and indicates support for Loeffler by people who may or may not want to be identified with him or with Ford."

Current campaign finance regulation require that persons contributing more than $50 to a political campaign be identified on campaign finance reporting forms.
 Adkins told the Standard-Times he wanted to make clear there was "nothing to hide" and his chief concern was that with 50 or more reporters and photographers expected for the Ford visit there would be too many people milling about the reception room if all were allowed in.
 But after Ford's Vail, Colo., headquarters rejected the idea of a pool reporter being allowed to attend, Adkins said "it is President Ford's wish" that no press be allowed.
 Asked why Ford objected,

Mary Lou Grier, a spokeswoman for Loeffler's San Antonio headquarters, said any media persons at any level contacted Tuesday who refused to agree to the no-reporting guidelines would not be allowed to attend the reception.
 Howard Adkins, a staff member of the Austin public relations firm directing Loeffler's campaign, said invitations issued to some news executives would be unaffected since it was his view that they would "act on the managerial level" rather than as reporters.

Cowboys trim roster to 60

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas Cowboy coaches have waived one rookie and placed another on the injured reserve list to trim the roster to 60 and meet the National Football League's first cutdown date.

Frank Dudley, a rookie free agent tight end, was waived Tuesday and third-round draft choice David Hudgens was placed on the injured reserve list after the offensive guard went down hard Monday on an already troublesome knee.

But while Coach Tom Landry bid farewell to the rookies, he also welcomed back veterans Larry Cole and Golden Richards to Tuesday's workouts.

Cole had not worked out for more than a week because of a twisted knee and Richards missed Monday's practices with a knee sprain. Both are probable starters for the Cowboy's third pre-season game Saturday against Houston.

In preparation for that contest Landry sent his team through extensive pass protection, team offense and punt return work Tuesday. He also shifted number two draft pick Todd Christensen from fullback to tight end.

Landry said he moved Christensen to give the rookie some work at a position he appears capable of filling. Christensen caught 50 passes last fall at Brigham Young.

Veterans Thomas Henderson and Randy Hughes sat out Tuesday's workouts. Henderson is suffering from a tight hamstring and Hughes from an injured foot. But team doctors say both are probable starters for Saturday.

Rookie Dave Kraayeveld, who scored on a 51-yard interception return in the pre-season opener against San Francisco, was excused from afternoon drills because of illness. Veteran defensive tackle Bill Gregory, recovering from an off-season knee injury, also was held out of afternoon workouts.

The Super Bowl champions will break training camp Friday morning when they leave the California Lutheran College campus for Dallas.

"Took them like candy" at LSU

Casanova: Pill distribution down

CINCINNATI (AP) — Former All-Pro safety Tommy Casanova, who recently retired after six National Football League seasons with the Cincinnati Bengals, says players ate amphetamines like candy during his college days at Louisiana State University.

Casanova, 10 months from graduating from medical school, made the remarks Tuesday in a copyrighted interview with Tom Callahan, a columnist for Combined News Service.

He later told The Associated Press that the practice of distributing pep pills in pro football and college ranks is not as widespread now as it was a few years ago.

"We were given little pills. Evidently, everyone in the NCAA was doing that. I didn't know what they were. Here, good luck, they'd say. We took them like candy," he said in the article.

Casanova, who played at LSU between 1968 and 1971, said "football is a game where, if you can't take the pain, you can't play."

He said he stopped taking the pep pills when his father, a physician, discovered they were being used.

"He blew the roof off when he found out they were amphetamines, stimulants for the central nervous system, supposedly to make us run faster and jump higher."

Casanova, 28, said he retired this summer because "I couldn't stand the pain anymore and I was scared what it would be like 15 years from now."

"Through the awareness and intelligence of football players — and physicians — they found they don't need that stuff."

"It's a very useful drug when used properly. But it doesn't have any place in athletics," said Casanova, who now attends the University of Cincinnati's medical school. He was Cincinnati's No. 2 draft choice in 1972.

"I took 'em, but so did everybody else. I'm not saying LSU was the only school handing them out. All schools did. We were told they were diet pills," he told the AP.

He said he stopped taking the pills after "a half dozen games." Casanova said he was never offered any amphetamines during his pro football career. "I'm sure you could get them if you wanted them. But I don't know of anyone at Cincinnati who uses them."

But, he added, "It's fair to say a large majority of professional and college players have knowingly used them."

He said his younger brother who recently played at LSU, "said he never heard of anyone using them."

Zisk homer wrecks Stone's gem

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — A single mistake, against a player he has handcuffed in the past, caused Steve Stone to lose one of the best games he's ever pitched, he says.

The Chicago White Sox right-hander hung a curve ball against Richie Zisk in the seventh inning of Tuesday night's game with Texas, and Zisk

"jumped on it" for a home run and a 1-0 Ranger victory, despite Stone's two-hitter.

"That's the first hit I ever remember Richie getting off me. I faced him for years in the National League with very good success, but he's a good hitter, and if you make a mistake against him, he's going to hurt you," Stone said.

Jon Matlack, 11-9, took the victory as Texas won its sixth straight game and 10th in the past 11, staying 5 games off Kansas City's division-leading pace. The loss was Chicago's 10th in 13 games.

Matlack struck out seven, walked only one, scattered seven hits and pitched out of jams in the third, fifth and seventh innings, when Chicago got runners to third but couldn't score.

"I threw a very good game, an exceptional game, but Matlack just threw a better one," Stone said. Stone, 9-9, struck out four and walked seven, which let Texas threaten several times. But the walks never hurt him.

Zisk struck out in the second with Bobby Bonds at second and hit a fly to center in the fourth after Jim Sundberg had doubled and moved to third on a wild pitch. Stone quickly ran the count to 0-and-2 on Zisk his next time up in the seventh before hanging a curve over the heart of the plate.

"He always seems to make good pitches against me, but he made a mistake and I was able to capitalize on it," Zisk said of his homer over the left field fence, his first homer in six weeks.

Matlack got stellar defensive play from Bump Wills at second base and Toby Harrah at shortstop. In the seventh, Ralph Garr came up with an infield hit and moved to second on Mike Squires' sacrifice bunt. But Wills stopped pinch hitter Eric Soderholm's shot before it could go into the outfield, making Garr hold up at third.

Tingelhoff's string to snap on Friday

BY TOM CANAVAN

AP Sports Writer

Mick Tingelhoff didn't lose his job Tuesday like a lot of other National Football League players, but he did learn that something he has built for 17 years will come crumbling down Friday.

After 17 years in the NFL, Tingelhoff will miss a game. The 38-year-old center was hospitalized Monday with an infection in his leg. He was kicked two weeks ago in the Vikings' pre-season opener against Washington.

Tingelhoff reportedly is responding to antibiotics, but is definitely out of the Dolphin contest Friday, which will snap a string of 328 consecutive pre-season, regular season and post-season games in which he has played.

But Tingelhoff will return, which can't be said of a number of other NFL aspirants and veterans who were cut Tuesday as teams reached the mandatory 60-player limit.

Veterans Lydell Mitchell of the Baltimore Colts and Mike Kadish of the Buffalo Bills were among the familiar names who were at least temporarily dropped. Mitchell and Kadish, both involved in contract disputes, were placed on their clubs' reserve lists, an administrative category for players who have not reported to their training camps. Should either player settle his problem and show up, the clubs would have to drop another player.

Two other veterans were among the Colts and Bills cuts. Baltimore released six players, including kick return specialist Howard Satterwhite, while veteran defensive tackle Marvin Upshaw was among the eight players dropped by Buffalo.

The Bills also were active in the trade market, swapping veteran tight end Paul Seymour to Pittsburgh and sending running back Stan Winfrey to Detroit. In exchange, the Bills obtained wide receiver Frank Lewis from the Steelers and an undisclosed draft choice from the Lions.

Seymour was Buffalo's No. 1 draft choice in 1973. His best receiving season was 1976 when he caught 16 passes for 169 yards. Last year, he was used mostly in running situations and caught just two passes.

Lamar Full Gospel captured first place in the Pampa Church League softball tournament Tuesday night with a 16-1 conquest of the Pampa Chapel of Apostolic Faith. The playoff was forced when the teams won a game apiece before darkness set in Saturday night.

The Highland Pentecostal-Community Christian Center team was awarded the league's sportsmanship trophy. League representatives wished to thank all of the league's supporters as well as the Catholic Church, which furnished the fields.

Hogs have back surplus

By HARRY KING
Associated Press Writer
LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas has four running backs, each with ego-building credits, operating in a two-back offense.

And a problem keeping them happy.

"I was under the impression they were supposed to keep the coach happy," said Arkansas Coach Lou Holtz. Those four backs, proven performers at other skill positions on offense, and an experienced defense are among the reasons the Razorbacks are preseason favorites in the Southwest Conference.

Arkansas finished the 1977 season No. 3 in the country after an 11-1 season that included a 31-6 thrashing of heavily favored Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl.

Roland Sales, then a sophomore, established an Orange Bowl record against the Sooners by rushing for 205 yards on 22 carries. And, he had an excellent spring practice.

The other backs are Ben Cowins, Michael Forrest and Jerry Eckwood.

Ben Cowins is a two-time All-Southwest Conference selection, who averaged 6.3 yards per try while leading the SWC in rushing with 1,162 yards in 1976. He gained 1,192 yards and scored 14 touchdowns last year.

Forrest has averaged 4.7 yards per carry while gaining 888 yards during the past three years and had the best spring practice of his career.

Jerry Eckwood, redshirted last year, is back to 1975 form when he gained 792 yards in seven games before being injured.

At the end of spring practice, Sales and Forrest were listed on the first team, but that doesn't mean much.

"All four are interchangeable," Holtz said. "Last year, we had three starters Cowins, Sales and Forrest. This year we have four. The ones that will start are the ones that are healthy and do the little things. The ones that catch the ball, run the right routes and block for each other."

The question mark on offense is up front. Holtz is also concerned about the secondary and the kicking game, minus All-American Steve Little.

"Great running backs become average if they don't have any running room," Holtz said. "Unless our line does a better job of blocking than it did in the spring, no one will know we have good running backs."

He admits that the Razorbacks have talent in the offensive line.

Ron Calcagni, who completed 53 percent of his passes while throwing for 1,147 yards last year, is back to operate Arkansas' veer offense.

"From what I've seen of the quarterbacks around the country running our offense, he's as good as there is," Holtz said.

Calcagni was particularly effective as the Razorbacks swept their last six opponents in 1977. During that span, he completed 47 of 84 passes for 680 yards, rushed for 389 yards and never had a total offense production of less than 130 yards.

When Holtz talks about Calcagni, he uses words like leadership and awareness.

Calcagni has his top five receivers returning — Donny Bobo, Bobby Duckworth, Gary Stiggers, Robert Farrell and Bruce Hay. Bobo, Duckworth and Stiggers have great speed. Farrell and Calcagni hooked up on a 58-yard scoring pass that beat Texas A&M 26-20 with 1:41 left in the game. It was Calcagni to Duckworth for 59 yards and the touchdown that sunk Texas Tech 17-14 with 6:18 to play.

The defense has eight returning starters, including outstanding tackles Jimmy Walker and Dan Hampton and linebackers Larry Jackson and William Hampton.

Holtz is well aware that the Razorbacks are on the spot. "We're picked to win," he said. "I'd be more impressed if they'd give us seven points to start each game with."

MONTGOMERY WARD Car care values.

Anderson County official sent back to drawing board

PALESTINE, Texas (AP) — A state district judge has sent Anderson County commissioners back to the drawing board by ruling invalid their system of evaluating property for tax purposes.

Clarence Ferguson ruled Monday that the county's 1978 tax rolls could not be certified until changes were made.

Palestine lawyer Jerry Calhoun, acting as a concerned taxpayer, triggered the action by seeking an injunction against the certification.

Ferguson said it appeared that there was as much as a 32 percent variance in the way some real property was taxed in the 1978 rolls.

He called that "unconscionable discrimination" but said he believed it was through "lack of knowledge" the tax roll had been prepared the way it had.

"The tax laws of this state are not complicated," Ferguson said. "I do not believe your tax roll has been prepared the way the law says it should be."

Under the current method of taxation, most rural acreage in Anderson County is assessed by percentage on a value of $12 per acre while residential property is assessed on a percentage of its market value.

"All of these years I have disagreed with the state's system of taxation and I have been thinking all of these years that the Legislature will be courageous enough to do something about the ad valorem tax," Ferguson said.

"It is costing entirely too much to run government and people need tax relief, but that's not what we are here to decide today."

"I don't think the district court has the right to tell any commissioners court or board of equalization how it should go about this matter of equalizing taxes. The only authority this court has is to say the way you are doing it now is wrong and that the law clearly spells out how you are to do it. If you don't want to do what the law says, I believe your only remedy is in the legislature.

"I hope I'm being entirely objective — I have no interest one way or the other — but the court cannot tolerate a situation where one group of people is taxed so much more than another group."

Lawyer Melvin Whitaker, representing the defendants, had asked the court that if it was going to issue an order to restructure the tax that it be done beginning in 1979.

"We believe it would be chaotic to do so at this time," Whitaker said.

West Texas tea party

ODESSA, Texas (AP) — Angry Odessa taxpayers staged a West Texas version of the "Boston Tea Party" Monday night, burning a barrelful of tax notices to protest a recent property revaluation.

About 100 protesters got a telegram of support from Howard Jarvis, author of California's Proposition 13.

The protest was staged by Concerned Taxpayers of Ector County and aimed at city councilmen.

No city officials attended the burning, and a symbolic cup of tea set aside for mayor Dick McManigle remained untouched.

Members of the protest group placed a sign on the cup saying, "A Free Cup of Tea For the Mayor." McManigle had been quoted saying that the tea party was "an opportunity for Odessa to get a free cup of tea."

Members of the protest group charged the city council with "misuse of taxing power."

Jim Coonce, who attended the protest, said "If the council doesn't do something, we'll be getting rid of them. The people are sick and tired of taxes and that is the general attitude of our oil field, which is the backbone of this city."

Ray Britton, leader of the protest, said "The power to tax is the power to destroy and we are seeing this power badly misused."

The revaluation could add an extra $1.5 million to county tax rolls. Protests began last week when about 400 citizens said taxes increased from 50 to 500 percent for some property owners.

The production report from the Federal Reserve Board said there were increases last month in the output of equipment, construction supplies, durable goods materials and consumer goods.

The board said production of consumer goods increased 0.3 percent during the month, reversing a decline in the previous two months. It said auto production was at an annual rate of 9.4 million units, up from 9.3 million in June.

Production of both durable consumer home goods, such as furniture and appliances, and non-durable goods, such as clothing, showed gains during the month. However, the board said the non-durable goods production still was below the April level.

The board made significant revisions for industrial production in the past several months. It listed the May and June production gains at 0.5 percent in each of the two months, a change from its report last month that production in June was up 0.3 percent and May production was ahead 1.5 percent.

Bond set in bomb scare

HOUSTON (AP) — Bond is set at $50,000 for a Houston man charged with attempting to extort $300,000 from Braniff International Airlines by threatening to blow up a jet bound Monday from Dallas to Honolulu, Hawaii.

U.S. Magistrate Norman Black set bail Tuesday for David C. Powell III, 32. He was arrested by FBI agents Monday night after he allegedly attempted to pick up a package supposedly containing the money that was dropped at a site in northwest Houston.

Homeowners get tax relief

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston homeowners whose property valuations had increased their taxes by as much as 400 percent got relief when taxes on their homes were rolled back to 1977 levels.

Mayor Jim McConn said the unanimous action by the city board of equalization was a "pretty reasonable way to solve the problem" of excessive tax burdens.

The board ruled valuations in the 250 subdivisions affected are not to be increased this year by more than 10 percent of the 1977 values.

Approximately 2,200 property owners had filed protests that were scheduled to be heard by the board. McConn and four of the eight city councilmen make up the board.

Those who had pressed their protests to the board level will be advised by mail of the effect of the new ruling.

As the board acted, a citizens group representing civic clubs in many of the affected subdivisions circulated petitions seeking a rollback to 1977 valuations and limiting tax increases to 1 percent of property valuations.

The group had said it would consider circulation of petitions seeking a recall election if the mayor and council failed to act on or rejected the petitions.

Under Monday's order, taxpayers whose property was re-valued in 1974 and again in 1978 would have their market value retained at the 1974 level.

Those revalued in 1973 and 1978 would have a 5 percent increase, those in 1972 and 1978 6 percent, and those in 1971 and 1978 7 percent.

For each year earlier than 1971 there would be a 1 percent increase up to a maximum of 10 percent.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Gladys Knight is facing a $75 million suit that charges she breached a contract she had with Arista Records Inc. when she signed with CBS last June.

The suit, filed Tuesday in state Supreme Court, also names CBS as a defendant.

Arista's suit seeks to enjoin CBS and Miss Knight "from engaging in recording, production, manufacture or commercial exploitation of phonograph records or tapes" of her performances.

It charges that CBS "unlawfully interfered with, counseled, aided and abetted" Miss Knight in signing a contract.

CBS is being sued for $50 million in punitive damages, and both CBS and Miss Knight are being sued for $25 million in compensatory damages.

Consumer goods output reason for July boost

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first rise in output of consumer goods in three months helped boost U.S. industrial production by 0.5 percent in July, the government reported today.

The moderate increase was the same as in both May and June and reflected the gradual slowing of the economy following much larger production gains earlier in the year. Output of the nation's mines, factories and utilities had increased

1.6 percent in April.

The Carter administration considers some slowing of the nation's economic growth rate as essential to help inflationary pressures in the economy. But the 0.5 gain in industrial output indicates the economy is still growing fast enough to create new jobs and help reduce unemployment.

Income tax credit clouded by fear

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The future of a federal income tax credit for parents of parochial school pupils is clouded by a 200-year-old fear of a state religion.

The vote was 69-21. The benefits, which would have cost about $1.5 billion a year, would have gone to all homeowners — not just those with children in public schools.

If the tax credit for elementary and secondary tuition is eliminated, the Senate could be expected to approve the aid for college students, as it has done on several occasions in recent years. If the effort to delete the elementary-secondary aid fails, it could jeopardize the rest of the bill.

The dispute dates back to the framing of the Constitution when, fearing entanglement of the state and church, the authors wrote into the First Amendment a prohibition against any law that respects the establishment of religion or that prohibits the free exercise of religion.

If the Senate votes some version of the House-approved measure, the credit would not go into effect until the Supreme Court decides whether such assistance conflicts with the Constitution's requirement for a strict separation of church and state.

The Senate was expected to decide late today whether to junk the provisions affecting parents of pupils in private elementary and secondary schools and vote tuition relief only for college students.

Both sides agreed the question would be decided by a margin of only one or two votes.

Before bogging down in the constitutional arguments Monday, the Senate rejected an

The Supreme Court has never decided whether it is a violation of that provision to provide to non-public school pupils federal tax benefits directly related to tuition costs.

But in a key 1971 ruling, the court held that to meet the constitutional test, federal aid must have a secular purpose, neither advance nor inhibit religion, and not prompt excessive government entanglement with religion.

About 9 percent of the nation's elementary and secondary pupils attend non-public schools, the vast majority of which are operated by the Roman Catholic Church.

Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., leading the fight against the elementary-secondary credit, contends such aid is tantamount to government assistance to churches.

He quotes Thomas Jefferson as viewing such aid as "sinful and tyrannical." No American "should be coerced into subsidizing the religious beliefs of others," Hollings says, and he views the tax-credit proposal as doing just that.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., a sponsor of the bill, repeatedly emphasizes that the high court has never ruled specifically on such aid. The only way to get such a test, he says, is to pass a bill.

Prosecutor to request death penalty

HOUSTON (AP) — Saying he wants "citizens' rights protected," a prosecutor revealed Monday he will seek the death penalty for David Allen Roeder, 21, charged with the capital murder of pawn shop owner Donald Fantich and two other persons.

The only reason we're here is to seek the death penalty with great vigor because three people are dead and they were executed," Assistant District Attorney Doug Shaver said.

Jury selection in the case began Monday in state district court. Shaver said he expects jury selection to take three to four weeks.

In a written statement, Roeder said he and two other men, gimped three guns into three crouched figures on a ranch near Shiner Jan. 24.

Fantich, 33, Dr. William Fitzpatrick, 31, and Georgina "Gina" Rose, 46, were killed.

Charged with Roeder in the case are Mark Cass, 22, Robert "Bobby" Avila, 23, and Mark Wilkerson, 23. Roeder's statement says Wilkerson masterminded the plan but did not take an active part in the slayings.

On the light side

WENATCHEE, Wash. (AP) — In the War of the Worms, the archvillain is played by Sandy, a 10-year-old cockpoo.

For the past eight years, Sandy has been waging a crusade against the green finger tomato worms that ravage the tomato plants in the garden of her masters, William and Dorothy Ray.

"She really saves us a lot of work out there with the tomatoes," said Mrs. Ray.

Dancing on her hind legs from plant to plant, the foot-tall dog searches out the large green worms with her nose.

When she finds them, Sandy barks, grabs the worms with her teeth and shakes them to death. She's a little hesitant about nipping their heads off, apparently because of the bad taste.

"I think that's the craziest thing I've ever seen a dog do," says Mrs. Ray.

Sandy tried to take care of the bugs on the potatoes, too, but they proved too small for her to handle.

—The Shopping Place of Ideas

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — Hoping to prove the superiority of capitalism over communism, Mayor Gordon J. Wiser is planning to lead members of a delegation to China on a tour of a supermarket.

Wiser, a West Point graduate who believes that Communist China should not be recognized at the expense of Nationalist China, said he would not greet the delegation at City Hall. The group is touring Midwest farming areas under the auspices of the State Department.

"Instead I will meet with them at Rusty Hurst's Green Hills supermarket," the mayor said. "I will show them that store as a typical example of the superiority of our economic system. Nowhere in China is there anything to equal our supermarkets."
