Good afternoon

News in brief

STORMY

There is a slight chance of thunderstorms this afternoon and tonight. It will be partly cloudy and cooler Saturday. The high today will be in the mid 90s, tonight in the mid 60s, and Saturday in the mid 80s. Winds will be northerly 10-20 mph. The chance of rain is 20 percent this afternoon and 20 percent tonight.

Bids accepted for highway construction

ALANREED — A joint bid by Amarillo and San Antonio firms was the lowest of three submitted to the State Highway and Public Transportation Commission in Austin for the third construction phase of Interstate Highway 40 from 1 mile west of Alanreed to east of Jericho.

The Gilvin-Terrill, Inc. and H.B. Zachry Co. low bid was $9,174,724.

According to A.L. McKee, State Department of Highways and Public Transportation (DHT) Amarillo District Engineer, the 9.6 mile section of IH 40 in Gray and Donley Counties is being built to a four-lane divided highway with control of access.

The first and second construction phases consisted of constructing two westbound lanes of concrete pavement with a rest area and portions of two interchanges. The third stage will include construction of the two eastbound lanes with concrete pavement, adding a rest area on the south side and completing the two interchanges.

During the third construction phase, both east and westbound traffic will be carried on the recently-built westbound lanes, McKee said.

A separate contract will be let for signing near the completion of this contract.

The district engineer said that when construction of IH 40 is completed from one mile west of Alanreed to east of Jericho, a gap of IH 40 in the Texas Panhandle will be filled, leaving only one major section uncompleted — from Alanreed to the Wheeler County line.

T.R. Kelley of Pampa, DHT Supervising Resident Engineer, who directed work on the first two construction phases, will supervise the third construction stage.

Oil discovered off New Jersey

NEW YORK (AP) — Texaco Inc. said today it had found a small amount of oil in its exploratory well in the Atlantic Ocean 100 miles off New Jersey.

The company also said it had located an additional source of natural gas in the well, which produced the first natural gas strike off the East Coast Sunday.

The company said the oil found in the well was not of a very high quality, but a spokesman said, "It's an indication there may be something else." "It's a bonus actually," he said. "We weren't expecting it."

The discovery was made just before midnight Thursday at a depth of 13,000 feet in the 15,000-foot deep well. The natural gas flowed at a rate of 9.4 million cubic feet per day. The earlier find is flowing at 7.5 million cubic feet per day.

Texaco said the two natural gas finds "confirm the presence of significant gas reserves at this location." But it added that further tests would have to be conducted to determine whether the area is worth putting into commercial production.

Request for gag order denied

Brunson arraigned on murder count

Donald Lee Brunson, accused in the shooting death of Jess Kerby Walker, was arraigned in 223rd District Court Thursday. Brunson entered a plea of innocent before Judge Don Cain. The defendant's trial has been set for Sept. 18.

Brunson, 28, was indicted for murder by the Gray County Grand Jury for allegedly shooting Walker, 19.

Brunson reportedly shot Walker while the victim was sitting in a parked car in the 500 block of W. Foster Ave., according to the indictment.

Defense attorneys Charles Fairweather and James Bowers entered two motions at the arraignment. One motion requested Cain to reduce the current bond set in the case. The other was a request to restrict publicity about the case.

The defense requested the bond be reduced from $50,000 to $10,000 stating Brunson was unable to pay the bond or the 10 percent of bond required by a surety bondsman.

The motion asked the court to consider that Brunson has been a Pampa resident for 20 years and is the sole support of his wife and two children.

Brunson would be able to return to work if he was released on bond, according to the motion.

According to the defense motion Brunson has no prior criminal record.

The defendant is in a good physical health, has never suffered from a mental illness and has never used narcotics, the motion continued.

The defense argued a $10,000 bond would be sufficient to insure the appearance of the defendant for trial. The defense motion also pointed out the defendant would have difficulty in paying legal fees if he remains in jail under $50,000 bond.

After hearing testimony from Brunson's wife about the financial circumstances of the family, Cain denied the motion to reduce bond.

The gag order was filed by the defense attorneys, because the defendant "intends to produce evidence during pretrial hearings which may impair the possibility of obtaining a fair and unprejudiced jury." The motion requested the court to restrain the news media from taking photographs of the defendant, witnesses or any persons connected with the proceedings.

The press should be restrained from reporting in detail any evidence presented in pretrial hearings other than reporting that certain persons testified at the hearings according to the gag order request.

The motion also requested that no person, police officer, witness, court attendant or counsel comment on any matter concerning the pretrial or trial, and prosecution and defense attorneys be restrained from discussing any facts of the case with the news media.

The state, represented by Harold Comer, district attorney, argued the news media has shown restraint in covering the case up to this point.

Cain denied the motion. Cain said lawyers are bound by the Canon of Ethics not to discuss the case. Cain also said he expected the news media to continue acting responsibly.

Mediator struggles for contract

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A mediator struggled today to plug holes in a new contract proposal and settle a strike by police and firefighters that has kept Tennessee's largest city clamped under curfew for a week.

Hope flickered late Thursday when some members of the firefighters' union executive board said a tentative agreement appeared to have been reached.

But smiles turned into haggard stares early today when it was apparent that union president Ed McMahon of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, also has been involved in negotiations.

The main stumbling block now may be the length of the contract Mayor Wyeth Chandler said earlier the city had made three separate offers to the unions, but he said any settlement would involve a two-year contract. Both union presidents have insisted on one-year pacts, saying they did not want to be locked into a wage package where inflation could erode their members' gains. The non-stop meetings marked the seventh night of the police walkout. Some 1,100 patrolmen and sergeants struck the night of Aug. 10 after rejecting the city's wage package.

The firefighters joined picket lines Monday morning, resuming a strike that was interrupted by a court's back-to-work order July 4. Both unions are under court orders to end the strikes, but neither order has worked. The city has asked Chancery Court to cite the unions and their leaders for contempt.

Chancellor George Lewis Jr., acting on a request Thursday by police union lawyer Russell X. Thompson, delayed until today a contempt hearing for Baker and other striking officers. Chancellor Robert Hoffman is to hear the city's complaint against the firemen today.

The unions turned down the same package 11 other city unions had accepted earlier. The proposal called for wage increases of 6 percent, $30 a month and 7.5 percent between now and Oct. 1, 1978.

Chandler later modified the package to call for increases of 6.65 percent, $22.50 and 7.5 percent. Although the offer would have given union members more money immediately, the scheduling of the raises would have left them with no more pay than the original package.

National Guardsmen with automatic rifles again accompanied non-striking police officers in patrol cars cruising the streets today. Guardsmen are also on duty at fire stations.

Carter scores breakthrough on energy plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter scored a breakthrough that has gotten his long-stalled energy plan moving in Congress again, Vice President Walter F. Mondale said today.

Carter and congressional leaders made a series of personal appeals to House members and senators Thursday in an attempt to get a natural gas compromise out of a conference committee for final consideration by the Senate and House.

They worked against the start of a 20-day Labor Day recess which complicates potential progress on the energy package, first sent to Congress by Carter 16 months ago.

The president met late Thursday night with two House Democratic energy conferees, Charles Rangel of New York and James Corman of California, in an attempt to obtain their signatures on the compromise gas report. Appearing on NBC's Today Show, Mondale said, "We had a breakthrough last night on the long overdue gas conference report."

The vice president predicted that the breakthrough would give momentum to the long-stalled energy program.

While Carter appeared to have obtained the necessary House and Senate signatures on the natural gas conference report, the bill must still get through the Senate where a filibuster has been threatened by liberal opponents, who say it is too costly to consumers.

To get the natural gas conference report to the Senate floor, Carter had to obtain the signatures of 13 House members and nine conferees. The last of the three Senate conferees signed on Thursday.

Ten House members were known to have signed by late Thursday, with Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Texas, counted No. 11. By Mondale's account, Carter found the final two House members late Thursday after his intensive day of lobbying.

The compromise, the product of several months of delicate negotiations, would lift price controls by 1985 with gradual increases for residential and industrial users of natural gas in the meantime.

Both chambers had approved versions of the natural gas bill and congressional conferees announced last May that they had reached agreement on a compromise.

Smokestack to signal new Pope

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

AP Special Correspondent

VATICAN CITY (AP) —

Vatican officials showed some 60 journalists the smokestack that will announce the election of the new pope and inadvertently locked them inside a courtyard of the conclave area when a key broke in a three-century-old lock.

"Se' rotto" — "It's broken," a policeman moaned, stroking his long mustache in great distress, as TV crews and photographers waited impatiently outside a massive grilled iron gate to be admitted to a lookout spot atop Bernini's huge columns embracing St. Peter's Square.

In the courtyard of the Marresciallo below, the workmen were unloading lumber and plywood partitions for the cubicles that will house the 111 cardinals who will be locked inside the Borgia apartments and the adjoining Sistine Chapel for the electoral conclave. It begins Aug. 25.

After 15 minutes or so, a fireman raced up the narrow alleys of Sixtus V's vast palace in his little car and delivered a new key, which worked when the remnants of the old one were extracted from the creaking lock.

Balloonists want to make trip around world

PARIS (AP) — Flushed with their conquest, the three Americans who made the first crossing of the Atlantic by balloon said today they want to balloon around the world in 30 days.

Ben Abruzzo told a news conference that a round-the-world balloon trip would be expensive, but it would be cheaper than climbing Mount Everest.

"With the right balloon, we could get to higher altitudes and go round the world in 30 days," he said.

Abruzzo, 48, Maxie Anderson, 44, and Larry Newman, 31, all of Albuquerque, N.M., dropped down to a tumultuous welcome in a wheat field 60 miles west of Paris Thursday evening, then celebrated late into the night in the French capital at a party given by Count de Saint Sauveur, secretary of the French balloon federation.

President Carter congratulated them by telegram and invited them to the White House. The French Minister of Sports awarded them gold medals. Media representatives besieged them with offers, and they drew straws for an unofficial prize, spending the night in the single bed Charles A. Lindbergh occupied at the U.S. Embassy residence after he made the first solo flight across the Atlantic 51 years ago.

Newman and his wife of five months won.

Air France offered to fly the trio home on its Concorde, and the balloonists said they already had planned to travel on the supersonic jet.

"We came the slowest way and we're going out the fastest way," said Abruzzo.

But they said they would go to London first to buy dinner for British balloonists Don Cameron and Christopher Davey, who last month failed by 103 miles to take the trans-Atlantic crown.

"We had a bet with them," said Anderson.

Only shredded remnants remained of the Americans' balloon, the 112-foot-high, silver-colored Double Eagle II. It was ripped apart by hordes of souvenir seekers in the field where it landed near the village of Miserey.

Many were motorists traveling the nearby highway who saw the gigantic balloon drifting earthward and stopped in astonishment. Others were villagers who rushed to congratulate the adventurers as they jumped from the red and yellow gondola and sprayed the crowd with champagne.

Police guards saved the metal gondola from the crowd.

Crowds also gathered outside the embassy residence in Paris to hail the conquering heroes as they joined their tearful wives.

"My God, did we have a welcome," said the excited trio in unison.

They fell short of Le Bourget Airport, where Lindbergh landed a where they also dreamed of putting down because "Lindbergh has been an inspiration to many generations of Frenchmen and Americans," Anderson said.

Abruzzo said they were "slightly" disappointed at not reaching Paris by balloon, "but it was only 50 miles short of our goal, so we did cover 3.0 miles or so. We set the world record for endurance, the world record for distance, and we did cross the Atlantic so we can't be too disappointed."

The weather was sunny after weeks of rain and gloom as the Double Eagle approached France at 13,000 feet, and reaching Paris looked like a sure thing. But over the town of Evreux, they ran out of ballast and had nothing left to jettison to keep them up.

"There was no option but to land," said Abruzzo. They donned helmets, radioed their decision and dropped down to the riotous reception in the clear dusk.

They landed at Miserey at 7:50 p.m. (11:50 p.m. EDT), 137 hours and 18 minutes after taking off Friday night from Presque Isle, Maine, 3,233 miles to the west. Seventeen other teams had tried and failed to make the crossing since 1873, and six men and a woman were killed in earlier attempts.

"We ran into trouble four times on the flight," Anderson reported, but he described only one of the incidents, "when we iced up badly about halfway." The ice forced the balloon down toward the water, and "it cost us a lot of ballast" to get back up, he said.

For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

OPINION PAGE

Damnation

"The public be damned!" In American mythology the phrase is attributed to the infamous Robber Barons, those "greedy capitalists" who controlled (ostensibly) our destiny in those post-Civil War days before Presidents Taft and Roosevelt huffed and puffed and busted the trusts.

The mythology is overdue for revision. The capitalists now struggle at the mercy of the regulatory agencies and cover before leftist rhetoric. The new lads on top, in British journalist Peregrine Worsthorne's useful phrase, tend to be involved in the government: the regulators, the "civil servants," the tax-supported functionaries.

Recent headlines are filled with municipal employee strikes, with police officers turning their backs on public safety and firement letting our cities burn (some of them, incredibly enough, even being charged with arson). A nationwide postal strike was narrowly averted, but a few wildcat maneuvers nevertheless disrupted the mails; and who knows how much sub-surface sabotage has slowed the dispatch of letters and parcels?

We have come upon the historic point where "the public be damned" attitude has clearly become the exclusive property of the so-called "public officials." It is logical that this should be: these people sustain themselves by absorbing the taxes of other people who produce and serve and, accordingly, earn their income.

What's more, they do not have to compete for the public's favor. They've no incentive to improve their product or their performance; the people's money flows to them by force of law.

The concept of "public service" is anything but. To serve another means to please another; it means to exact a return that the other person would pay willingly, voluntarily. When that principle is turned inside out, a "public be damned" attitude becomes the shiny new cloak, a cloak now adorning those who put their hours in for the government.

You pick up the tab

THAT NEW CAR YOU are thinking of purchasing this year will cost $666 more than it should, thanks to federal government regulations.

This is from a report by the Joint Economic Committee of Congress. The study by Murray L. Weidenbaum, director of the Center for the Study of American Business at Washington University, St. Louis, also shows federal, state and local red tape adding between $1,500 and $2,500 to the cost of the typical new house.

Weidenbaum's study set the total cost to business and the public for complying with federal safety, environmental, financial and other regulations at $62.9 billion in 1976. This was 20 times the administrative cost of operating the myriad regulatory agencies. This year's tab? An estimated $96.7 billion.

Nation's Press

The year of the insects

(Wall Street Journal)

This summer of 1978 may well mark the first major success of the radical fringe of the environmental movement in giving the country back to the bugs.

Fire ants, which destroy cropland with their nests and attack livestock and even people, are rampant in Mississippi. EPA rules and a lawsuit by the Environmental Defense Fund have blocked the state from controlling the ants with a chemical containing mirex, which was an effective fire ant destroyer before an EPA ban.

The worst infestation of grasshoppers in 20 years is chewing up crops, forests and property in Western and Central states. "Persistent" or long-lasting pesticides such as dieldrin, aldrin and chlordane, which keep their potency long enough to break the breeding cycle, also are banned by the EPA. Another crop predator, chinch bugs, have joined the grasshoppers in their assault.

The gypsy moth is attacking forests in the Northeast. The USDA estimates that some 2 million acres of hardwood forests will be defoliated this year. The most effective control agent, DDT, was one of the first victims of the anti-insecticide movement.

This is only a partial list. The Japanese beetle, once controllable with dieldrin, is back in Ohio. An increase in Rocky Mountain spotted fever, spread by the common tick, worries health authorities in the East. Beetle infestation is on the upswing in Maine.

All that is the bad news, and it will no doubt be bad news indeed when all the damage - measured in felled trees, damaged property and higher food costs - is finally assessed. The good news is that the assault of the bugs has finally stirred a response from Congress in the form of amendments to the 1972 Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act (FIFRA), which has made possible most of the federal restriction of use of effective pesticides. The amendments, which have now cleared a conference committee and seem likely to become law soon, would sharply reduce the EPA's power over pesticides by transferring primary authority to the states. The American Farm Bureau Federation, one of the main lobbies on behalf of the amendments, feels that his will go a long way towards restoring some balance to the struggle that environmentalists tipped so heavily in favor of the bugs.

It has been a long struggle, and the most ardent environmentalists still are insisting that the real problem is that insects are becoming more resistant to insecticides. We seem to remember this as a major argument, with its visions of uncontrollable monster insects, when the whole antipesticide movement was getting up its head of steam more than a decade ago. The other was that DDT and other chemicals did enormous damage to bird and animal life. These issues have not yet been fully resolved in the minds of careful scientists and environmental moderates.

But the record, whether circumstantial or not, would suggest that the damage to be suffered through inadequate control of pests is likely to be far greater than the damage from pesticides. And there is nothing to say that use of the more effective and longer-lasting chemicals can't be under more judicious control than it was in the early sixties, and still be effective.

It was hardly necessary for Congress to fall prey to one of the favorite tactics of radical groups, which is the designing of laws that tie up the productive work of the world in endless proceduralism and litigation. The old FIFRA law required EPA clearance for each of some 45,000 potential specific uses for some 1,500 chemicals, which meant interminable debate. Some manufacturers found it simply uneconomic to seek clearance for chemicals with limited application, even though such specific chemicals might be far more desirable than broad-spectrum pesticides both in terms of environmental side effects and effectiveness.

The FIFRA amendments may well mark a turning of the tide against environmental radicals. But it may take a while longer before the amendments will permit a turning of the tide against the bugs. It has been an expensive lesson about the costs of overreaction.

Warning to Washington: You're flunking the inflation course

By LOUIS RUKYSEYER
In a well-run school, fairness requires that you give a kid a warning before you flunk him. And in that spirit, it seems time to send a serious probation notice to Washington on inflation: "Danger - you seem highly likely to fail this course."

The mixed month-to-month signals should not be allowed to deflect attention from the basic lack of remedial action. The Administration itself seems to be admitting failure on the installment plan: In January it talked of a 6 per cent increase in consumer prices this year. Now the forecast is for 7.3 per cent - and even it appears likely soon to be in the same ash heap as its predecessor. The rate actually has been running in double figures for four months. While some improvement is expected in the year's second half, there is growing acceptance of at least an 8 per cent overall increase for 1978.

There are two particularly scary aspects to this situation:

(1) While an 8 per cent rate is bad enough all by itself - suggesting that prices would double every nine years - the easy acceptance of such a rate in Washington is even more worrisome. One of the most indelible lessons of the last 15 years is that an inflation rate, once accepted as "tolerable," is certain to grow worse.

(2) Despite President Carter's surprised discovery that inflation really was his most pressing economic problem - only a year and a half late, but who's counting? - the fight against it has so far been purely (or impurely) rhetorical. Massive new budget deficits are still heading down the pike. The artificially high minimum wage requirement, which has the dubious distinction of contributing simultaneously to inflation and unemployment, is to be even higher next year. So is the Social Security tax. And so on down the dreary line.

Over at the Federal Reserve Board, where a greater degree of rigorously could counterbalance at least some of the politicians' excesses, chairman G. William Miller blithely emulates his predecessor, Arthur Burns: he talks a tough anti-inflation game but he plays a genial, relaxed one. In an effort to restrain the day-to-day escalation of interest rates, the Fed has been pouring out paper money at a truly horrifying rate (the 11.06-per-cent second-quarter growth in the money supply frightened even those responsible for it). In the short run, many-include Wall Street - applaud. But in the long run, such grotesquely inflationary actions assure that interest rates - and prices - must eventually go even higher.

As for the White House, its real addition to the President's theoretical new anti-inflation crusade would have to enlarge considerably, even to be visible to the naked eye. The Administration's "tax program," now apparently subject to semi-weekly revision, remains notably more pro-inflation - and anti-investment - even than what Congress has proposed. And when it comes to authentically restraining government spending, the tipoff came when Carter's chief economic adviser, Charles Schultz, told the Senate Budget Committee bluntly that absolutely nothing would be done to contain inflation that might "undo our progress" in pumping up the economy.

So we are left with words - and finger-pointing: at business, which occasionally can be pressured into token ceilings, and at labor, which has replied with scorn (wage agreements are running higher this year than last). As Barry P. Bosworth, director of Carter's optimistically named Council on Wage and Price Stability, confessed to me when I suggested that the Administration program was falling apart: "It's a little hard to disentangle a forecast from a prayer."

It's time, then, for Washington to get off its knees (and its soapbox) and get on the job of setting a credible anti-inflation example. For its continued failure on this one could keep the entire country from graduating to a better economy in the 1980s. Report card time is coming for us all.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Aug. 18, the 230th day of 1978. There are 135 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1887, Virginia Dare was born at Roanoke Island, in what is now North Carolina. She was the first child born in America of English parents.

On this date: In 1708, British forces captured the Mediterranean island of Sardinia. In 1870, Western Australia was granted representative government.

In 1914, President Woodrow Wilson proclaimed American neutrality in World War I.

In 1963, James Meredith became the first black to be graduated from the University of Mississippi.

In 1970, black activist Angela Davis was placed on the FBI list of 10 most-wanted fugitives.

In 1976, President Gerald Ford won the presidential nomination on the first ballot at the Republican National Convention in Kansas City, Mo.

Ten years ago: A United Arab Republic Airlines plane crashed in the Mediterranean off Cyprus, killing all 41 people aboard.

Five years ago: American archeologists in Greece uncovered evidence that man had gone to sea as early as 7,500 B.C.

One year ago: President Carter said a comptroller's report on Bert Lance had confirmed Carter's faith in the budget director's character and competence and that Lance would remain in office.

Your money's worth

Beware: home insulation rip-off's

If President Carter's National Energy Plan ever is translated into reality, among its key goals will be insulation of 90 percent of America's homes by 1980 - less than two years from now.

Positive though this objective is, what an enormous potential for consumer fraud this creates!

Sound though the achievement would be, what a tempting background this sets up for today's rip-off gypster!

In blunt summary, unless you, a consumer, are fully alert to the dangers inherent in your decisions about the type of insulation you need, the appropriate contractor and fair financing, and unless you vow to coax parishioner-shockingly, your losses from insulation errors could more than absorb any savings from conservation.

At an insulation workshop in Washington a while back, vital guides were prepared for you by Samuel A. Simon, program director for the Federal Trade Commission's energy program, and 17 other experts from eight U.S. agencies. Among the tips:

Before you, a homeowner, commit yourself to high-priced insulation plans, take such inexpensive and effective steps as caulking and weatherstripping doors and windows. The do-it-yourselfer in your household can handle this easily. Attic insulation is a significant energy-saving improvement that also can be an inexpensive do-it-yourself project. But expect proper insulation of a three-bedroom house to cost up to $1,000. Quality materials and good workmanship do not come cheap.

While acoustical tiling, carpeting and aluminum siding are all heralded energy-savers, insulation experts warned my Washington associate, Brooke Shearer, that they are only marginally useful.

Avoid over-insulating your home. Get two or three appraisals and compare them. Send for a Commerce Department booklet, "Making the Most of Your Energy Dollars in Home Heating and Cooling," available from the U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402 for 70 cents. In this booklet, you'll find climate maps, sample costs and worksheets you can use to calculate the amount of energy (and money) that can be saved, depending on where you live, your type of home, local fuel costs, etc. Your best insulation is that which gives you the largest, long-run net savings in heating and cooling costs for your investment - net savings being your total savings on fuel bills minus the purchase price of the insulation. Most of you would expect to recover your costs in savings on fuel bills within 10 years.

The effectiveness of insulation materials is measured in "R" value, a number indicating how much resistance the insulation presents to heat flowing through it. The higher the material's "R" value, the better its insulating quality.

The FTC has proposed a trade regulation rule requiring uniform disclosure of the "R" value of insulation. The rule also would restrict use of such dollar and energy-saving claims as "you can save up to 60 percent on your fuel bill."

The FTC hopes the rule will become effective by this fall, but in the meantime, beware of exaggerated claims for savings of energy or money and misrepresentation of "R" values.

Evaluate the flammability of the insulation materials. The American Society of Testing & Materials (ASTM) has set flammability standards for insulation products, but materials sold to consumers may not be required to meet these standards.

So, be certain the products you are considering meet the fire safety requirements of local building codes. Never install insulation near heat or exposed light fixtures.

To avoid poor installation, make sure your contractor is reputable - for instance, if he is licensed or bonded, if your state so requires. Have a specific contract written up for the job and sign it only when it lists in detail everything you want done. You might insist that you would make your final payment only after a city building inspector has approved the finished work.

Also insist of warranties that are of sufficient duration to permit you to examine your utility bills over a period of months and judge whether the insulation has truly cut your costs.

Get a short "Home Insulation Safety" fact sheet No. 91, available free from the Consumer Product Safety Commission, toll-free hotline (800) 638-2666 (Maryland residents only (800) 492-2937). Also "Insulation" fact sheet DOE-CS-0017, free, from the U.S. Department of Energy, Washington, D.C. 20585.

A special Arab talent

matter. One that does matter to the countries affected. Arab violence prompted Britain to expel 11 Iraqis. And while oil still argues powerful for speaking softly, the French attitude is also stiffening.

When it comes to damaging their cause, it's clear that the Arabs have no need for external enemies. With their talents for internal dissension, they can find enough within their own ranks to do the job.

Run for the money
Running is good business, so business thinks.

As masses of exercise and recreation-minded individuals have taken a fancy to footwork, so have business firms. But for a different reason.

For a relatively minor expenditure, noted The Physician and Sportsmedicine, a McGraw-Hill publication, companies can sponsor marathons and other events which attract considerable public participation and attention, yielding the firms considerable beneficial publicity.

It also works to the advantage of runners, who a few years ago ran for nothing more than love but today can find bankable rewards at the finish line.

There are drawbacks, however. Outside investment also means some outside control over events. This can involve selecting locations and times, such as in the midday sun, to the advantage of media exposure but not necessarily to that of the runners.

There's also the question of questionable sponsorship. Sporting goods and health-oriented businesses are natural. Cosmetics and even beer are into the act and considered acceptable. But, according to the Runners Club of America, the runners themselves draw the line at liquor and cigarettes.

That, it is considered, would represent a conflict of interest.

Cabler claims victory

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Conservative textbook critic Norma Gabler of Longview can claim at least one victory already in her annual review of proposed textbooks.

Addison-Wesley Publishing Co. has agreed to her demands for removal of an 18th Century British cartoon depicting a wounded American patriot from its eighth grade text, "An American History."

"This is disgraceful," she wrote in pre-filed testimony for the State Textbook Committee's annual hearings. "It is an enemy (at the time) caricature of our forefathers."

Addison-Wesley wrote the committee that it will remove the cartoon.

Mrs. Gabler's objections to the history book and several others fill 10 1/2 volumes of testimony filed in advance of her appearance today at the committee.

Since 1962, she's been a regular at the annual hearings. Mrs. Gabler and her husband Mel run a consultant firm, Educational Research Analysts, and receive 20-25 calls weekly from across the nation for help in textbook reviews.

Her past protests included a year's attack on an eighth grade reader that included Jonathan Swift's satire, "A Modest Proposal."

While poking fun at theorists who proposed wild solutions to Ireland's famine and over-population, Swift suggested, tongue-in-cheek, the breeding of Irish infants for food.

Now has heart to battle

DALLAS (AP) — Lindell Hill has wrestled with death for 11 years. And while the fight has been long and exhausting, the 38-year-old Denison, Texas resident says he has the heart to battle to the final bell.

Hill became the first American to receive a second heart in South Africa when surgeons trained by South African heart specialist Dr. Christian Barnard transplanted a second organ into Hill's chest a year ago this month.

"I'm feeling better now than I've felt in the last 11 years," Hill said in a telephone interview from his home in Denison. "I walk three to six miles a day. Last year I could barely walk from my chair to the bathroom."

Prior to the seven-hour "piggyback" transplant procedure last Aug. 5, doctors gave Hill just six months to live.

"Now doctors tell me I could live for five or 10 more years," said Hill.

The surgery promised a new lease on life, but two minor rejections underlined the fragile terms of that new contract.

Rejection is body's process, employing its immunological system, to repel foreign tissue.

Hill spent 17 days in a hospital last winter and three weeks this summer while doctors pumped high concentrations of anti-rejection drugs into his body. Because the drugs reduce the body's resistance to disease, Hill was forced to spend the time in semi-isolation.

"It's very depressing," said Hill. "Before the transplant, when they told me how much time I had left, I could be cold and calculating. I could accept it and deal with it. Now I get a little more scared when something goes wrong."

While fighting for his life, Hill lost the ability to make a living.

He has been unable to work since his first major coronary 11 years ago. Barnard's team performed the surgery at no charge.

Jarvis proposes new plan for cutting federal spending

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Tax activist Howard Jarvis, fresh from the successful passage of Proposition 13 in California, has proposed the abolishment of capital gains taxes on investments as part of his new plan to slash federal tax and spending.

Jarvis said Thursday night that over a four-year period, his five-point proposal would cut federal taxes by $50 billion and expenses by $100 billion, eliminating the national budget deficit.

"The Peoples Plan to Limit Taxes will reduce the tax burden for all taxpayers, stimulate economic growth and most importantly, it will virtually wipe out inflation," the 75-year-old Californian told a crowd of about 2,000 at a local convention center.

The tax activist said his new proposal to eliminate the capital gains tax would be seen as "a scheme to help the rich."

However, he said he was concerned about creating jobs. "The capital gains tax hampers investment and productivity and stifles the job-creating ability of our economy."

With the capital gains tax eliminated, the private economy would be stimulated to produce about three million new jobs in four years, Jarvis claimed.

The plan also proposes: —Cutting the personal income tax by 20 percent over four years;

—Allocating 2 percent of each year's federal budget to reduce the national debt, lowering interest costs the United States pays;

—Indexing all taxes so they would not increase for anyone whose pay raise was not greater than the inflation rate; and —Placing an unspecified absolute limit on the percentage of the gross national product which can be collected in federal taxes.

The national campaign has been dubbed the American Tax Reduction Movement, and Jarvis said its strategy is simple. "We are going to ask every Congressman and Senator and every candidate for Congress and Senate to take a position 'yes' or 'no' on the people's plan to limit taxes. If they are for the plan, we will support them. If they oppose the plan, we will work to defeat them," he said.

A nine-city tour was planned to publicize the campaign, and a national television program called "Howard Jarvis' National Tax Revolt" was tentatively scheduled in September.

Proposition 13 passed in California by a 2-1 margin. The state constitutional amendment put a ceiling on property taxes and limited the amount by which they can be raised.

Slander charges dropped

By SETH MYDANS
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet judge dropped the civil slander suit against two American reporters today, saying the wide-spread publicity given the case made the extraction their papers refused to print unnecessary.

However, Judge Lev Almazov said he would inform the Foreign Ministry that Craig R. Whitney of The New York Times and Harold D. Piper of The Baltimore Sun had not attended any of the legal proceedings and that he considered their behavior disrespectful to the court.

During earlier court sessions, a prosecutor asked that the Foreign Ministry remove the correspondents' press accreditation, in effect expelling them from the country.

Whitney and Piper were found guilty July 18 of slandering Soviet television because they reported relatives of Georgian dissident Zviad Gamsakhurdia said his videotaped confession appeared to have been fabricated.

Gamsakhurdia was brought to Moscow for the hearing and testified his confession was authentic. The judge ordered Whitney and Piper to retract their stories and pay court costs totalling $3,424.

After they and their papers refused to publish retractions, the two men were fined $73 each on Aug. 3 and were warned "if they faced further fines or 'different measures' if their newspapers did not publish the retractions. The fines and the costs were paid, but the papers still refused to print the retractions.

Almazov said he was discontinuing the case because the plaintiff, the Soviet Committee on Radio and Television, wrote him it was no longer demanding the retraction. The letter said:

"As you are aware the case has been widely publicized by the Soviet and American press, including The New York Times and Baltimore Sun. The world public has had an opportunity to see for itself that the articles of Piper and Whitney were libelous and that Gamsakhurdia's confession was genuine and voluntary."

Piper told other Western reporters he doubted similar action would be taken against other correspondents "too often."

"If every time a correspondent writes something that the authorities do not like he is brought into court, it would end up making the Soviet Union look ridiculous," he said.

Whitney said it was important "that a Soviet court has failed to dictate to American newspapers what they may print in the U.S."

Pampa High School Band will have a car wash Saturday from 8 a.m.-7 p.m. at the Advanced Car Wash in the 1800 block of North Hobart. There will be no pick-up and delivery this year.

Manpower trial dates scheduled

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Four men accused of misusing federal manpower funds will be tried in federal court here in September and October.

U.S. District Judge Reynaldo Garza Thursday set trial dates for Nick Ramirez, former director of the Hidalgo County manpower program; Ed Romero, former auditor for an Edinburg anti-poverty agency; A.M. Fernandez, director of South Texas Enterprises at Hebbronville; and Fernando Anthony Salinas, director of the Greater South Texas Economic Program of Jim Hogg County.

All were indicted for alleged conspiracy to misuse federal funds and misapplication of federal funds.

Ramirez, 33, will be tried here Sept. 25 on charges of misusing about $2,500 in federal funds.

Correction

Tuesday's News, in a story concerning the annexation dispute, published an incorrect quote attributed to City Manager Mack Wofford, stating "The acreage being annexed is included in the original advertisement, but we're not taking all that is annexed."

Wofford's actual statement was "The acreage being annexed is included in the original advertisement, but we're not taking all that is advertised."

Ten years ago Prague died

Associated Press Writer
In Czechoslovakia, 10 years ago, the crisis seemed over.

True, there had been jeers at East Germany's Walter Ulbricht, a key opponent of Prague's concept of "socialism with a human face."

But at the end of the all-day summit meeting at Bratislava on Aug. 3, 1968, Leonid Brezhnev had bearded Alexander Dubcek, the reformist Czech Communist Party chief, as "Dear Comrade Sasha."

And the joint communique spoke no longer of a counter-revolutionary threat in Czechoslovakia. It pledged signers to respect "equality, sovereignty, national independence and territorial integrity."

It also, however, spoke of a "joint international duty" to protect socialist achievements — a phrase not clearly appreciated then.

"You can now calmly leave for Switzerland," Foreign Minister Jiri Hajek told me. He, too, left on a holiday. It ended brutally.

Moscow, as it turned out later, had prepared months before to use force, if necessary, against the Prague reformers whose liberal ideas had struck a responsive chord among the "New Left" in the West but also threatened to stir new restiveness in the Soviet bloc.

Logistics had been prepared as early as June by thousands of Soviet signal troops and other expert units, who were in Czechoslovakia for Warsaw Pact "staff maneuvers" that went three weeks over schedule.

New Soviet "maneuvers" began on the border Aug. 11, but few Czechs worried. Two days earlier, they had welcomed Yugoslavia's President Josip Broz Tito, the maverick Communist, on a euphoric-filled visit.

On Aug. 17, civilian-clad specialists of the Soviet military intelligence arrived in Prague aboard a special Aeroflot airliner to make contact with pro-Moscow Czech agents.

In Moscow, the party central committee had given the order to march.

Then, shortly before 11 p.m., Tuesday, Aug. 20, some 200,000 Soviet, East German, Bulgarian, Polish and Hungarian soldiers supported by massive armor crossed into Czechoslovakia at almost 20 border points.

An Antonov-24 pathfinder plane had landed at Prague's Ruzyně Airport with electronic gear to direct transports. They arrived regularly after midnight, spilling out light armor and elite airborne units.

The Czechoslovak party presidium, meeting with Dubcek in Communist headquarters, received the first word shortly before midnight through a telephone call from Defense Minister Martin Dzur.

"So they have done it and they could do this to me," said Dubcek, according to a close adviser.

Prague residents, jolted awake by the transports' roar, were stunned listeners. At the CTK, the Czechoslovak news agency, CTK Director General Miroslav Sulek tried in vain to have his staff move a statement that the armies were answering a request from a "revolutionary workers and peasants government" that purportedly had just replaced the reformist regime.

Meanwhile, the streets had begun to come alive with flag-waving people, and police cars, their sirens shrieking.

Shortly before dawn, red-bereted paratroops of the Red Army's "Tamansker" elite division drove up in three armored vehicles at party headquarters, surrounded the building and rushed upstairs, guns ready. A black Soviet Embassy Volga sedan had shown them the way.

"Suddenly, the door of Dubcek's office was thrust open," Mlynar relates. "About eight soldiers and officers burst into the room and took position around the large table. All were armed with submachine guns which they pointed at our necks. Behind them came two senior officers, one of them a colonel, so short that he seemed almost a midget. But he had a lot of medals."

"He announced that we were under his 'protection.' Someone, I believe Dubcek, wanted to say something. But the dwarfish colonel shouted, 'Sit still, do not speak Czech.'"

For almost five hours, Dubcek and other party leaders were held at gunpoint before being hauled off by plainclothes security agents.

In the hillside presidential palace, also surrounded by Soviet troops, another group of Moscow emissaries tried in vain to talk President Ludvik Svoboda, a 73-year-old "Hero of the Soviet Union," into signing a prepared document listing a Kremlin-backed government.

So the plan to legalize the invasion by claiming it followed a request from government leaders — a version also maintained by Moscow at the United Nations Security Council — had blatantly misfired.

Ten years later, there was no full explanation why the Soviets had so misread the situation they would find in Prague.

The Soviets also seemed unprepared for the welcome they got from a people united in cold fury and despair. Clandestine television and radio transmitters took the place of silenced stations. Seas of humanity engulfed Soviet tanks that youths painted with swastikas.

But except for a few cases of soldiers losing their cool in the face of hostile crowds, outbursts of violence were rare.

"Don't provide the occupiers with pretexts," police loudspeaker cars warned. The total death toll was estimated at 50 below 100.

Passive resistance made the country a labyrinth in which Soviets lost their way. Road signs were ripped off, street and house number plates removed. Soldiers could not find food, cigarettes or water.

Hundreds of young men and women practiced the Russian and Marxist dialectic they had learned in school on wide-eyed Red Army men — who were prepared for combat but not for explaining why they came. With demoralization widespread, several units were exchanged overnight.

Svoboda, meanwhile, got soviets agreement on a top level meeting in the Kremlin. But when Dubcek and other party leaders joined him, they were told the alternative to "compromise" was a bloodbath.

National briefs

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jury selection is under way in the Golden Dragon murder trial of Curtis Tam. 18, the first of nine men charged in the Chinatown bloodbath that left five dead and 11 wounded last fall.

Before the selection began Thursday, Superior Court Judge Walter Calcagno denied pre-trial defense motions to sequester the jury and ban the press from the trial.

OTIS, Mass. (AP) — Already without a local police force for more than six weeks, Otis residents have voted to keep it that way or the rest of the year and depend on state police as needed.

Police Chief Wendell Ring and his five-man force were left without jobs July 1 when money ran out. At two town meetings held before the money ran out, residents refused to vote more money and reaffirmed that Wednesday night at a town meeting attended by 210 voters.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Mayor Dennis J. Kucinich's slim margin of victory over a recall drive has slipped to 303 votes after the first day of a recount, an election official reported.

Virgil Brown, director of the Cuyahoga County Board of Elections, said recall forces compiled a net gain of 88 votes Thursday in a recount of the first 249 of Cleveland's 645 voting precincts. The recount is expected to be completed Saturday.

DENVER (AP) — A preliminary diagnosis by a Colorado Springs hospital indicates a 15-year-old girl died of plague, the state Department of Health said. The state Center for Disease Control at Fort Collins is expected to report on the preliminary diagnosis early next week.

If confirmed, it would be Colorado's 10th recorded human plague case, four of them fatal. The girl became ill last Friday with fever and swollen lymph nodes. She died Tuesday.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The National Organization for Women has lost a preliminary round in its battle with the Missouri attorney general over whether NOW's boycott of states that have not ratified the Equal Rights Amendment violates anti-trust laws.

U.S. District Judge Elmo B. Hunter threw out a NOW countersuit claiming harassment, saying it was filed too late. The state of Nevada and a Louisiana tourism group have joined Missouri in seeking $60 million in damages because of the boycott.

DALLAS (AP) — Zale Corp. announced Thursday it has extended its Skillern drug division outside Texas by purchasing a drug store chain with outlets in New Mexico.

Zale said it signed agreements Wednesday to acquire Gunning-Casteel, Inc., an El Paso-based chain of 22 drug stores, for an undisclosed amount of Zale stock. Stockholders of both companies must approve the acquisition.

Indictments returned against Arizona murders

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) — Sealed indictments were returned Thursday by a Yuma County Grand Jury against convicted killers Gary Tison and Randy Greenawalt and Tison's sons Ricky and Raymond.

County Attorney Mike Irwin told reporters the indictments would not be made public until defense attorneys are informed, presumably sometime today.

The indictments are believed to be charges in connection with the slaying 2 1/2 weeks ago of Marine Sgt. John Lyons, his wife, infant son and 15-year-old niece.

The three Tisons and Greenawalt were charged last week with first degree murder in the slaying of Lyons, his wife and son. Those charges were filed in Justice of Peace court.

Meanwhile, in Colorado, an air and ground search was called off near the western Colorado town of Bedrock for a pickup truck believed driven by Gary Tison.

Montrose County Deputy Sheriff Bill Chadd said the search was canceled after authorities searched Colorado 90 west of Bedrock to the Utah border and side roads leading off ink.026.n67 and did not find the pickup.

"But I don't really know where the idea of Tison came from," Chadd said after the search was cancelled.

Utah law enforcement officials also said they had cancelled the search for the truck.

Tison, 42, of Casa Grande, Ariz., was serving a life sentence at the Arizona State Prison for killing a prison guard in a 1967 escape.

On July 30, he and Greenawalt, 29, of Thornton, Colo., broke out of the Arizona State Prison at Florence, allegedly aided by Tison's three sons.

One of the Tison boys was shot to death and Greenawalt and Tison's two other sons were captured when a stolen van crashed through a road-block south of Casa Grande.

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am married with three children whose ages are 2, 4 and 6. I work because of necessity not choice. My problem began last year when my father-in-law died. "Mom" wanted to keep busy, so she asked if she could be our daytime baby-sitter. We thought it was a great idea to have "Grammy" looking after our children instead of some stranger. What a mistake! We learned too late that Grammy is hypnotized by television! She turns it on the minute she walks into our house, and it stays on until I return from work. Meanwhile, the kids tear the house apart and it's apparent that they have no supervision whatsoever from Grammy. She lets them do anything they please, just so they don't bother her while she's watching television. My husband and I would like to get someone else to look after our children, but we don't know how to break the news to Grammy. We hate to hurt her feelings. How do we do it? NO WAY OUT

DEAR NO WAY: Be honest. Tell Grammy in a very kind and gentle way that your children need more supervision and attention than she has been giving them, so you've decided to make a change.

DEAR ABBY: This letter is addressed to my new mother-in-law: I just want to say thanks for treating your son like a baby all his life. I really enjoy picking up after him. You see, according to him, his mother has done it for him all his life. I am the only one who can make the bed, because his mother always did it for him. I have to mow the lawn, because he never had to do it at home; his father always did it. I have to make sure I fix what he likes for dinner or he won't eat it, because when he was at home if he didn't like something, his mother would always fix him something else to eat. Mom, maybe you thought you were being a perfect mother, but you have created a lazy son, and you certainly haven't made my marriage any easier. Thanks for nothing. YOUR DAUGHTER-IN-LAW

DEAR DAUGHTER-IN-LAW: Your complaints about a spoiled son may be justified, but be fair. Your mother-in-law must have done something right to have raised the man you chose to marry.

DEAR ABBY: If I hear it once more, I'll be sick! I am referring to the expression, "Have a nice day!" It has become so trite and meaningless as to be absurd. This phrase is used by every waitress, salesperson, telephone operator and cashier in San Francisco, and perhaps the whole population of the North American continent. I even heard a cop tell a drunk whom he had just arrested to "Have a nice day" — and it was midnight! Please ask your readers to come up with something a little more original and sincere. I offer, "Take it easy" or "Be cool" or, as we used to say in West Texas, "Y'awl come back now — ya' hear?" Have a nice day, Abby. WALNUT CREEK, CALIF.

Ask Dr. Lamb

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have read articles by Dr. Linus Pauling which extol the value of massive doses of vitamin C to prevent many diseases including cancer by building up the body's immune system. I realize there is a controversy about the value of this but I would like to know if there is any danger in taking such large doses of vitamin C — on the order of 10 grams per day.

DEAR READER — Reputable scientists have evaluated the use of vitamin C in preventing colds and viral diseases and have not been able to demonstrate that it is effective in any way. Certainly large doses of vitamin C do not prevent cancer. There have been some studies which suggest there may be some improvement in the immune system's function, but we don't really understand yet whether such improved function has any real biological benefits or not. At this writing, it's fair to say that there is no really good evidence that excess doses of vitamin C are helpful.

Yes, large doses of vitamin C can be harmful. Large amounts in some people irritate the bowel and cause diarrhea. That's not too comfortable. Besides that, vitamin C is converted to oxalate which is eliminated through the kidneys. Oxalate is the main problem in causing calcium oxalate kidney stones, so very large doses of vitamin C may increase your tendency to kidney stone formation. You should know that old vitamin C often has a larger amount of oxalate in it and is more likely to cause this problem than fresh vitamin C. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

DEAR POLLY — My husband is a painter and he comes home looking like he fell into the paint can. How can I get oil-based paint and stains out of his white painter's pants? None of the different solutions I have soaked them in has helped much. If you have any suggestions I would like to hear about them. — JEAN from Wisconsin.

DEAR JEAN — The old spots may be "set" and nothing much will help them. But hereafter try soaking the paint stains in turpentine. Rinse it out before putting them in the washing machine and laundering as usual. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — The condition of my outside grill gave me a sick feeling. Then I thought that since my self-cleaning oven cleans the oven grill perhaps it would do this one, too. It was hard to get the grill into the oven until we tilted it a bit but it came out looking like new. — MRS. R.A.M.

At wit's end

In cleaning out one of the boys' closets the other day I was knocked senseless by a coconut with an Indian face painted on it. This was followed by an avalanche which included an alligator dressed up like a grand parade marshal, a human skull with a raven perched on top that said, "Have a Good Day," a snow and water paperweight showing the New York skyline in which the water had evaporated, a beer stein the played "White Christmas" when you lifted the lid, and a funky light that flickered on and off and said "Lite Up Las Vegas."

As I sifted through the rest — backscratchers, totem poles, key rings and a blowfish (that brought me into my first contact with acupuncture) — I tried to imagine how many man hours went into acquiring, transporting, and maintaining all of these souvenirs. Then I saw it: the Robin Hood hat with a feather from the Ionia State Fair.

It was 10 years ago. The family was en route to a camping trip when we were attracted by the Ionia State Fair. As we started to leave the grounds, my son said, "Could I buy this hat where they sew you name on it?" I shrugged. "Why not?" My husband said, "You don't need it." I said it was only $1.39. My husband said it was logic like mine that drove the European nations into bankruptcy and besides the kid would forget about the dumb hat in 10 minutes.

The kid cried all night long keeping everyone awake. I awoke the next morning with enough wrinkles to plant crops. The kids were surly and my husband had a flat tire (I told him he'd be punished for his cheapness). Finally, he gave in and said, "Okay, we'll go back and get the hat."

The first officer cited us for an illegal left turn into the Fairgrounds. The next officer at the gate said the fair wasn't open until noon and suggested we turn around and go out the same way we had come in. In turning the trailer, my husband scraped a tree that punctured our water tank in the trailer and eventually cost $33 to weld.

We were forced to go into a nearby trailer camp, pay the fees, wait until 11, pay admittance for the family to the grounds, have lunch and get the hat. The other kids complained that since he got the hat, they should get the cane with the bird on the end that chirped when you waved it around the car. The $1.39 hat cost a total of $112.00. They misspelled his name.

Techniques in applying lacquer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Lacquer is not the most popular of finishing materials with do-it-yourselfers, even though a large percentage of the furniture sold these days has several coats of it.

That's mainly because the lacquer used by professionals is put on with spraying equipment, whereas most of that used at home is applied with a brush.

It is difficult to brush on lacquer formulated for spraying, so the first warning to the potential user of lacquer is to be certain he has bought the proper kind.

Unfortunately, many containers of lacquer do not specify which is which. When making a purchase, therefore, ask the dealer whether the product is for spraying or brushing. If he doesn't know, be wary.

Professionals are inclined to scoff at the possibility of getting good results with brushing lacquer, but if certain precautions are observed, beautiful finishes can be obtained. Lacquer must be brushed on with a flowing stroke, covering small areas at a time and working swiftly. Do not rebrush; that is, don't go over any brushed portion a second time. This is probably the most common cause of a poor result. Quickly brush a small section, dip the bristles into the lacquer and start another section, blending the second covering into the wet edges of the first. If the edges of the first section are allowed to dry a bit — and it takes only a few seconds — then the new lacquer will disturb the smooth surface of what has already been applied.

You are not likely to get the knack of this "work fast, don't rebrush" method the first or second time you use lacquer. Therefore, practice on scrap wood before you attempt to use the finishing material on a project.

Regular lacquer, as distinguished from some lacquer-type products, requires thinning before use. For the beginner, the best combination is 50 percent lacquer, 50 percent lacquer thinner, although if the container gives specific instructions on the mixture percentages, follow them.

Like nearly all finishing materials which provide hard, clear surfaces, several thin coats are better than one thick coat. Sand very lightly between coats, a procedure some persons skip if the preceding coat is without imperfections. If you do sand, be sure to wipe off all grit before the next coat is applied.

The perfectionist may want to rub down the final coat with pumice powder and oil, followed by a similar operation with rottenstone powder and oil. It depends on how the final coat looks and how fussy you are. Most times, these steps are not necessary, but if you aren't satisfied with the result, they may turn a fair job into an excellent one.

After brass and other bright metals are cleaned thoroughly, lacquer will prevent them from corroding.

Joseph Smith, founder of the Mormon church, was killed in 1844.

Religion today

In the native religion of American Indians, the great, all-pervasive spirit of Wakan Tanka — the "big holy" — is regarded as animating and binding together in brotherhood all the creatures and elements of the universe.

Belief in this kinship of all beings — the people, the animals, birds and insects, the moon, stars, rocks, rivers, wind and thunder — gives the Indian faith a special reverence for the earth.

That quality has a particular relevance in the present-day concern for safeguarding nature from industrial ravages, conserving its resources and maintaining the delicate ecological balance of forces.

"Helpers," Indians call the mutually inter-acting orders of nature, communing with them as counterparts of human existence, assuming they, too, share in the mystery of knowing bestowed by the Great Spirit on all life.

"The Indian has something to contribute to our society in teaching us about the sanctity of nature," says artist Martha Eagle of Oklahoma City, a Caucasian painter of Indian life and student of it.

"Our age is being compelled to come to terms with our close relationship to the natural world, and our need to respect both its vulnerability and its bounty — something the Indian has always realized."

However, some Indian religious practices in recent times have encountered government restrictions and interferences — obstacles that a newly adopted Congressional resolution seeks to eliminate.

Passed both by the House and the Senate, it directs that U.S. policy and procedures of all federal agencies be shaped to "protect and preserve" traditional Indian customs.

"There have been increasing incidents of abrogation of the religious rights of American Indians," says Sen James Abourezk, D-S.D., head of the Senate Select Committee on Indian Affairs and sponsor of the measure.

It got final approval in mid-July at the same time that hundreds of Indians gathered in Washington at the end of a 3,000-mile "longest walk" across the country to plead for defeat of 11 other bills pending in Congress.

The civilized world wants to destroy us," said Sioux Chief Ojon-Jon-Wakon (Ernie Peters), 52, a medicine man and spiritual leader from a reservation near Morton, Minn.

...ATTEND CHURCH

"For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also"

"YOU TOOK MY PICTURE... AND I WASN'T READY!"

How concerned we are with the image we present to others! And it is right that we should be. How mightily we influence others. It is so important that the self we present is one that will influence others for good.

With guidance from God we will be ready to present ourselves to the world in such a manner as to sway others toward God and all that is worthwhile and good.

"That ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God," come to His Church.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

EDD BYRNES: "In the days when I was the big hero, the money wasn't much."

'Grease' is part of his success story

By Dick Kleiner
HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Millions went to see "Saturday Night Fever" and are standing in line now to see "Grease," and they are shrieking their little heads off for John Travolta.

In "Grease," there is another fine performance by an actor who can sit back and smile at all the adulation coming Travolta's way. His name is Edd Byrnes. He's been there.

It is curious, that casting of Byrnes as the host of the make-believe "National Bandstand" in "Grease." From 1959 to 1964, when there was a series called "77 Sunset Strip" on the air, Edd Byrnes was the youth of the hour.

He was Kookie, Efram Zimbalist's assistant on that set-in-Hollywood detective show. His provocative way of combing his hair had the girls squealing all over the world. He was the first of the TV-bred teen-age idols, preceding all the others — David Cassidy, Henry Winkler and Travolta.

The idol days are over for Byrnes. But he doesn't seem to mind their passing. He smiles about it all today, and, in an extremely well-adjusted way, shrugs off yesterday and is more concerned with today and tomorrow.

It's been a long career for the kid from New York. He got out of high school and took off for Hollywood and fame and fortune. Unlike most kids who try that route, he made it.

But it wasn't easy. It never is. Byrnes remembers playing a bit role on the old Western series, "Cheyenne," and, the night his episode was telecast, he and some friends sat up for hours. They had bought postcards and stationery and pens, with different colored ink, and then wrote hundreds of fan letters to the head of Warner Bros., saying how great that young actor, Edd Byrnes, was in that episode of "Cheyenne."

"I don't know if it did any good or not," Byrnes says, "but pretty soon after that I got the part in '77 Sunset Strip.'"

For a while there, Edd Byrnes was king of television. There were posters and magazine covers and they even had him record an album of songs, even though he'd be the first one to say he can't sing particularly well.

He quit the show with a year to go, figuring he'd had enough of Kookie and his juvenile mannerisms.

"I went to Yugoslavia to make a movie," Byrnes says. "People saw me there and asked me to do a movie in Germany. And that led to a movie in Italy. Before I knew it, I was in Europe for most of the next 10 years."

It got so, he says, people in California thought he had moved to Europe permanently. He hadn't. He had apartments in London and Rome, for a while, but his home was always California. But he loved living in Europe and working in Europe, and some of Europe still clings to him — he's become a wine expert, for example, and orders wine like a French nobleman.

Unlike today's Kookie counterparts, Winkler and Travolta, Edd Byrnes didn't become rich as a result of his huge TV fame.

"In the days when I was the big hero," he says, "the money wasn't much. Nobody made anything on television in those days. I remember we would get young, aspiring actors to come on '77 Sunset Strip' — I remember George Kennedy was one of those — and they would do a big guest-star part, a lead, and they'd be paid maybe $850."

And the residuals were nothing, either. So all Edd Byrnes got out of his five years of screaming fame was some pleasant memories. Some not-so-pleasant ones, too, but he never thinks about them any more.

When he did "Grease" with Travolta, he says they met and were friendly, but really had no chance to sit down and get acquainted and talk seriously. He would have liked to talk to Travolta and tell him about his experiences, and perhaps that might have helped the younger actor.

"I did talk to Winkler about it once," he says. "We had a very good talk. Henry's okay. He has no problems. But, don't forget, he is actually older than most of the young idols — he's older than I was in the '77 Sunset Strip' time, he's older than Travolta is. He's in his early 30s, and he can handle it."

If he had the chance, Byrnes says, he would like to tell John Travolta that he should keep a sense of humor. That, he says, is the best protection against all the foolishness of being a teen-age idol.

Byrnes says that, after the success last season of the TV reunion of Robert Young's "Father Knows Best" family, he had the idea of a "77 Sunset Strip" reunion. His ex-wife, Asa Maynor, would produce it, and all the show's regulars would be on it. He says there was definite network interest in the project.

"But it all fell apart because Efram Zimbalist refused to go along. They offered him $100,000, too, but he wouldn't do it. I don't know why. It would have been the three of us, 10 years later. It might have been fun."

But Byrnes doesn't brood about that, any more than he broods about what else has gone. He'd rather talk about "Grease" and what he's doing today.

Tube talk and Alan Bates

By JAY SHARBUTT
LOS ANGELES AP — A sozzled laborer auctions off his wife and baby daughter at a county fair. Eighteen years later, he's the rich, feared mayor of an English town — until the seltees come calling.

"It's one of the best stories I ever read and one of the best parts I ever had," says Alan Bates, the British actor who won Jill Clayburgh's heart in the recent film "An Unmarried Woman."

In the family-sale matter, Bates was referring not his role as the laborer-turned-mayor in a seven-part TV version of Thomas Hardy's "The Mayor of Casterbridge."

The show, a co-production of Time-Life Television and the BBC, will start Sunday, Sept. 3, as the lead-off piece in the new season of public TV's "Masterpiece Theater" series.

It's not Bates' first job as a Hardy character. In 1967, he starred in the movie version of the writer's "Far From the Madding Crowd."

Bates, 44, was praised by critics for that, also for "The Fixer," "Georgy Girl," "Women In Love," and his stage work in such plays as "Butley" and John Osborne's "Look Back in Anger."

It's happening again because of "Unmarried Woman," even though he, as a pixy-humor painter romancing a freshly divorced lady in New York, isn't seen in the film until it's half over.

Yet Bates seems unaccustomed to all the goodies of success. When interviewed in the luxurious, fern-bedecked dining room of the Bel Air Hotel here, he cased the joint in the marvelling manner of a tyke visiting the Garden of Eden for the first time.

A short, gentle man with a soft voice, he hails from Derbyshire, 200 miles north London. His father was a cellist, his mother a pianist, he said. He decided to be an actor at age 11.

"Don't know why," he said. "I'd always been almost paranoid about not wanting to stand out, of avoiding any kind of spotlight at all. But one day, I just thought, 'I want to be an actor.'"

It's generally agreed among actors that their careers tend to resemble a roller-coaster ride — ups and downs and ascents again.

Bates agrees the ride is pretty good now, what with "Unmarried Woman," the "Mayor" miniseries of PBS, and a just finished new film, "The Rose," in which he co-stars with singer Bette Midler.

Inquiries were made as to how Bates keeps success, fame and all that in perspective, knowing that failure, no fame and worst, no work, are part of the actor's life, too.

"I think it's because I've never really made the absolute pitch for that type of fame," he mused after a moment of thought. He had no reference to being what fan magazines call a superstar.

Susie Allanson makes it back

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Considering that Susie Allanson was almost paralyzed two years ago, it's amazing that her singing career is six months ahead of schedule.

Miss Allanson, 26, whose style projects the soft sexiness of Olivia Newton-John and the intensity of Linda Ronstadt, had a song near the top of the country music charts. "We Belong Together."

But in May 1976, she was hurled from a quarter horse at her home in Sepulveda, Calif., and broke her neck.

"The doctor told me if it had been 1-16th of an inch lower, I'd have been paralyzed," she said in an interview at a Music Row hotel. As it was, she was hospitalized four weeks and wore a neck brace nine more.

But she pursued a singing career and had three moderate country hits during the past year before "We Belong Together" became one of the top songs this summer, ahead of competing tunes by better known artists like Loretta Lynn and Tammy Wynette.

"We had the plan laid out," she said, referring to herself and her producer-husband, Ray Ruff. "We wanted to go up the charts from 30 to 20 to 10. We're six months ahead of ourselves."

"It's scary. It's not real to me yet. It's all sort of gone by me, but I'm excited. It's all given me a chance to learn, and you learn from the bottom up."

Her current hit first appeared on the 100-song Billboard magazine country charts at No. 32.

THE SPIDER

During Mark Twain's days as a newspaperman, he was editor of a small Missouri paper. One day he received a letter from a subscriber, stating that he had found a spider in his paper, and asked if this was an omen of good or bad luck. Twain replied: "Finding a spider in your paper is neither good nor bad luck. The spider was merely looking over our paper to see which merchant was not advertising so that he could go to that store, spin his web across the door, and lead a life of undisturbed peace ever afterward."

Astro-Graph

By Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday
 Aug. 19, 1978
 This coming year you could find yourself involved in a very rewarding joint venture. There's a strong likelihood that another relative or friend of the family will be in it as well.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't take chances today with things you're managing for others. Treat their concerns just as prudently as if they were your own. Find out more of what lies ahead for you by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter by mailing 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're better off acting quickly than you're likely to give your self credit for today. When making snap decisions, don't let self-doubts enter in.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Occasionally we find ourselves in situations calling for a calculated risk. If you think you know the answers today, act on them.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Even though you feel lucky today (and you will be, in most instances), it's not likely to extend to gambling, especially if large stakes are involved.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today your sins are likely to be those of omission rather than commission. Your intentions are noble, but your follow-through is nil.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be forthright today where friends are concerned. If there's something important you would like to discuss, don't skirt the issue.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your material prospects look interesting today, so be alert for something unusual that could spell gain for you. It appears and goes in a flash.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) The only things required to make today a success are clear-cut objectives. Decide where you want to go and you'll figure out how to get there.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) A profitable opportunity might pop up today requiring tactics beneath your standards. If you have to choose between honor or gain, choose honor.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Normally you're generous with friends, but today you may pretend you can't do something for another. You'll collect guilt later.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't try to divide your time equally today between fun and serious matters. Get the job done first. Play later.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Do something physically active today even though you may feel a trifle lazy. Once you're out of the hammock you'll be glad you got the blood circulating.

Minor league life hard but worth it

By JOE BLOBAUM
Pampa News Sports Editor

Traveling all night to play an afternoon baseball game may sound like a thrill to a Little Leaguer aspiring to follow in Johnny Bench's footsteps, but it was Sam Heasley's way of life for three years when he was pitching in the Cincinnati Reds minor league organization.

"It's not much when you're married, because sometimes you'd make two-week road trips," he said. "It was a lot of fun, though, and it's different from what most people think."

Life in the minor leagues is not at all like the majors, he said, but one thing holds true in all levels of the game.

"It's very professional, and that takes the fun out of it in a sense," Heasley said. "If you had a bad day in high school or college it wasn't that big a deal. But in the professionals you've got to do your best, especially when you're on the bottom."

A 1970 graduate of Pampa High School, Heasley attended West Texas State for one year before the school dropped baseball. From there he went to Lamar (Colo.) Junior College, where he set a record—and attracted the eyes of baseball scouts—by striking out 17 batters in a seven-inning game.

He came up through the Little League and Babe Ruth ranks in Pampa, but didn't reach his full pitching potential until he got out of high school.

He graduated from PHS when he was 17, and Heasley said an additional year's growth "made a big difference" in his pitching. Still, he was selected for the

All-District team his senior year, and a career in baseball was already in his blood.

His grandfather had been a ball player and his father Herbert was signed into the Pittsburgh organization by Hall-of-Famer Honus Wagner.

Heasley played from 1974-76 in the Reds minor league system, pitching A and AA ball in the Florida Rookie, Florida State, Northwest and Eastern Leagues along the way. He was married in 1975 and had an offer from the Cleveland Indians before he quit, but said his marriage and the wealth of talent in baseball convinced him to retire.

"When you get players from all over the country and places like Puerto Rico as well, it gets kind of tough."

Heasley was paid $2,000 to sign when he got out of college, but said he doesn't begrudge the major league players whose paychecks rank in the astronomical bracket.

"A lot of people think there's no work involved, but there is," he said. "It's not like working in an oil field or something like that, but they run your legs off in spring training. It's better than a lot of things, though," he added with a grin.

Spring training ran something like this for Heasley and his fellow players: Up at 7, eat breakfast, be at the field at 8 and work until 6.

"You'd run most of that time, because a pitcher's legs have to be in shape. If you pitched a spring game you'd get off earlier sometimes."

But spring training also gave younger pitchers a chance to throw hitting practice for the likes of Pete Rose, Bench, Joe Morgan and George Foster. Heasley even had Bench catch for him once.

"That was a thrill," he said with the enthusiasm one must have to travel on all-night buses and live on $7.50 a day meal money.

Now an assistant manager at Furr's Family Center and the father of a two-year-old daughter, Heasley said he's "had a couple chances" to coach Little League teams.

"I'd like to do something like that," he said, but his job won't allow it.

Life in the minors is a tough life, but Heasley said he'd do it all again if he had the chance.

"I got to go over most of the country and got to meet a lot of different people," he said. "It's not easy, but it was worth it."

Paterno's record tops list

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Penn State's Joe Paterno has the best record among the nation's major college football coaches, while Alabama's Bear Bryant, who tops his victory list with 273, ranks only third in winning percentage.

The figures were released today by Elmore Hudgins, public relations director of the Southeastern Conference, who originated the "Top Twenty Coaches" list in 1958.

In 12 seasons at Penn State, Paterno has a record of 112-24-1 for a winning percentage of .821. He is followed by Michigan's Bo Schembechler (126-30-6, .796) and Bryant (273-76-16, .770).

The list is based on the following formula: The records of the NCAA Division I-A head coaches are researched for the 20 who have won the most games at four-year colleges, with at least five years on the major-college level.

The coaches then are listed in order of winning percentage, with ties counting as a half-game won and a half-game lost. To qualify for the 1978 list a coach must have 68 or more victories for his career.

Rounding out the top 10 behind Paterno, Schembechler and Bryant are Frank Kush of Arizona State, 164-49-1, .769; Woody Hayes of Ohio State, 231-68-9, .765; Dan Evine of Notre Dame, 147-48-8, .744; Carmen Cozza of Yale, 84-32-1, .722; Bill Mallory of Colorado, 68-28-1, .706; Charlie McClendon of Louisiana State, 120-52-7,

.690, and Bobby Bowden of Florida State, 88-40-0, .688.

The second 10 consists of Vince Dooley, Georgia, 103-49-5, .672; Doug Dickey, Florida, 100-51-6, .655; Jerry Claiborne, Maryland, 110-59-4, .647; Wayne Hardin, Temple, 88-50-4, .634; Bill Yeoman, Houston, 105-61-6, .630; Bob Blackman, Cornell, 146-87-6, .623; Joe Yukica, Dartmouth, 75-46-0, .620; Jim Carlen, South Carolina, 80-49-5, .616; Sark Arslanian, Colorado State, 80-50-3, .613, and Darryl Rogers, Michigan State, 79-57-6, .578.

Tech lacking experience on offense and defense

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — When he was offensive coordinator, Texas Tech Coach Rex Dockery quickly established himself as something of an offensive genius.

The Red Raiders, averaging 400 yards a game, set a school record for total offense in 1975.

In 1976, they averaged 379 yards per contest and shared in their very first Southwest Conference football title.

Tech averaged 310 yards per game last year and went to another post-season bowl.

Now he's head football coach, replacing Steve Sloan, and all kinds of high-scoring miracles can be expected. Or can they?

First of all, Dockery has a quarterback who can pass, Tres Adams, but isn't an impressive runner. Mark Johnson is a good runner, but needs to improve on his passing.

You can see the problem. Three of last fall's backfield starters are gone and flanker Brian Nelson has been moved to split end.

Now, you really see the problem.

Even a genius needs experienced talent.

However, Dockery is optimistic.

"We have some young players who we think have potential to become good football players," he said. "Of course, that lack of experience will show early in the season where we have an extremely tough schedule."

Defensively, the Red Raiders are again riding the inexperienced train.

Larry Flowers, a tough defensive back, linebacker Don Kelly and tackle Curtis Reed are the only wise old heads coming back from a 7-5 team.

This unit must face one of the premier offensive teams in the country Sept. 9 in Southern California. The Trojans are followed in rapid order by Arizona, Texas and Texas A&M.

Dallas, Houston to meet for Ralph Neely Trophy

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP)—The Dallas Cowboys did not capture every trophy under the National Football League sun last year.

The World Champions failed miserably in an August showing against the Houston Oilers thereby losing the Governor's Cup, known to some as the Ralph Neely Memorial Trophy, 23-14 in the Astrodome.

The Oilers could claim all year they were the best team in Texas. While that claim takes a stretch of the imagination, it's no secret that Saturday's Oiler-Cowboy preseason clash in Texas Stadium ranks several notches above your ordinary run-of-the-mill exhibition.

First of all, both Coach Bum Phillips of Houston and Coach Tom Landry of Dallas are hurrying to mold their teams for the Sept. 3-4 NFL openers as the season expands to 16 league games.

Secondly, the Cowboy and Oiler front offices still remember the squabble over the now-retired offensive tackle Neely, who signed with both clubs and eventually stayed with the Cowboys. Dallas had to pay compensation to Houston which included the promise to visit the Astrodome for annual exhibitions.

The games, which Dallas leads 8-3, have always been heated. The Cowboys are 2-0 in the regular season against the Oilers.

The "Texas Professional Championship" usually draws a sellout crowd and Saturday's 8 p.m. game is no exception. The 65,000 seats were sold out earlier this week.

Homegrown Earl Campbell, the Texas Heisman Trophy winner, is a big draw for the Oilers while the Cowboys have two Heisman winners, quarterback Roger Staubach and halfback Tony Dorsett.

Phillips and Landry plan to play their regulars at least three quarters.

Oiler quarterback Dan Pastorini, who suffered a thigh muscle pull last week, has made a rapid recovery and will play most of the game.

Phillips said he will make a check with doctors on Saturday, adding "I'm glad Dan feels better and I'm for whatever gets him well."

The Oiler coach downplays the rivalry, saying "We don't play for Denver or for Dallas. We try to play the best we're capable of playing and let the scoreboard take care of itself."

Dallas is 2-0 in exhibition play while Houston is 0-2.

Oilers acquire Richard Caster

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers have acquired veteran wide receiver Rich Caster from the New York Jets for undisclosed future draft choices.

The Thursday acquisition returned the Houston roster to 60 players, the current preseason limit.

In nine seasons with the Jets, Caster, from Jackson State, received 245 passes for 4,434 yards and 36 touchdowns, ranking sixth among New York's all-time leading scorers with 36 touchdowns.

Caster broke a hand in pre-season last year and had a season record for 10 games of 10 receptions for 205 yards and one touchdown.

Love across the Iron Curtain

By NIKKI FINKE
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — For a handful of Western-born women here, Christina Onassis' marriage to a Russian is nothing new. They, too, have crossed the Iron Curtain for love.

The journey usually meets with disapproval and shock from relatives, friends and public officials. Sometimes, the Soviet government's harassment can force even a devoted couple apart.

But the few who have succeeded at making the transition from West to East deny there are any regrets.

"One's homeland is where one's heart is," declared Jan Butler, 26, an English publishing assistant who married the Soviet Union's best-known living poet, Yevgeny Yevtushenko, five months ago.

"I knew when I married Zhenya (his nickname) that I was going to live here for the rest of my life," she told the Associated Press in her first interview since her marriage. "It was something natural. It seemed quite impossible to imagine life without him."

British-born Jennifer Louis married her Soviet husband Viktor, correspondent for the London Evening News, 18 years ago. She remembers terrible headaches and agonizing over the move to Moscow.

"It's a form of self-hypnosis," she recalled. "You just persuade yourself that what you're doing is the right thing."

She is not alone. About 30 or 40 American women who visited their embassy here last year for help and advice about marrying their Soviet boyfriends. Most were exchange students or mother's helpers under 30, fluent in Russian and fascinated by the country's culture.

But only three or four decided to live in Moscow. The vast majority used the marriages to help bring their husbands to the United States.

There is a reason. Jennifer's and Jan's lives are trouble-free partly because their husbands occupy privileged, almost unique positions in Soviet society. Yevtushenko can make tours abroad and collect royalties from works published in the West. Louis, one of the most traveled Soviet citizens, is permitted to work for a foreign organization — a rarity in a nation suspicious of all things Western.

The other side of the story is told by an American who married a more typical Soviet man.

"Unless your husband happens to be a hotshot with access to hard currency," she says, "life is pretty grim. Or unless you're a Christina Onassis with a ready source of cash."

She asked not to be identified because she is awaiting an exit visa so her husband can leave Russia. Russians with foreign spouses usually get such visas with little trouble, but there have been exceptions.

And there are some who never make it to the altar.

One young American woman was engaged to a Soviet who had held an important military job in Siberia before meeting her. Two days before the scheduled wedding, she received a letter that her future husband already was married and had abandoned a family in Siberia. He denied that, but officials held up the wedding pending an investigation.

Another marriage date was set. But then, with no reason given, her visa was not renewed. She returned home and has not seen him since.

Sometimes the Soviet husband-to-be backs out because he will almost certainly lose his job if he weds a foreigner. Other men become unemployed just months after the wedding, making them liable to the severe Soviet charge of "parasitism," or living off the state.

But for Jan, Jennifer and Christina, the road is easier. This is a country where, despite official statements, wealth and fame do count.

Jan, Yevtushenko's second wife, met her 45-year-old husband two days after arriving in Moscow to be a translator with Progress Publishing Co., a Soviet firm, in 1974. In a restaurant, Yevtushenko leaned over and invited her to a poetry reading. Four years later, he divorced his Russian wife and married the English beauty.

Her life is generally quiet but busy. They live in a town she works for Progress and does much of that work at home. She also does most of the cooking and stands in grocery lines with other housewives.

Though contact with other Westerners here is limited, Jan is first and foremost a British subject. "On no account will I ever break my roots with England," she declared. She has kept her British passport, enabling her to travel abroad with relative ease. But she misses the countryside and sounds of England — and her parents.

For Jennifer Louis, 45, a backyard English garden (complete with crocuses) evokes home. "I miss the birds in the winter, and I miss singing in the choir," she said. "But regrets? Heavens, no!"

She was 26 when she headed for Moscow to marry Louis, whom she met three years earlier in 1977 outside the Bolshoi theater. She had been in Moscow as a mother's helper to a British diplomat's family.

She was scared, but recalls, "I didn't care. I was in love."

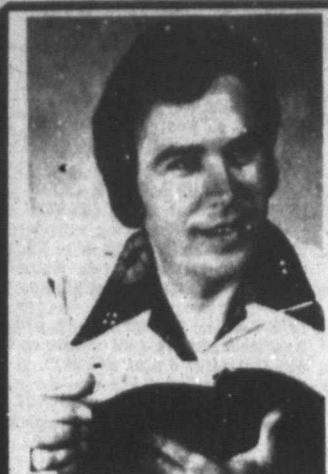

Her mother reluctantly gave her blessing. Her father blamed the match on her university education and offered a return ticket home.

Now the couple has three sons, 10 years old to 18, and lives in a five-bedroom house near the Yevtushenkos — with servants, a swimming pool, a tennis court. Jennifer writes for a London Times educational supplement and collaborates with her husband on Moscow guidebooks.

What advice would Jennifer and Jan give Christina about making a new life in Moscow? Learn Russian, keep busy, get to know Moscow.

Said Jan: "She's got to give up making comparisons between the Soviet Union and any other Western country. It's just so culturally different. But I hope she can be happy here, happy in love."

Where the Unexpected is Happening

Names in the news

LENOX, Mass. (AP) — Appearing at the summer grounds of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, rock singer Jackson Browne attracted the biggest crowd ever to hear a popular music concert at Tanglewood.

Official paid attendance at Browne's Tuesday evening's show was 21,370, eclipsing by 120 the attendance at a 1969 Jefferson Airplane appearance, said James Kiley, Tanglewood operations manager.

Overall attendance, including those entering on free passes and people who "jumped the fence," may have reached 25,000, officials said.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Former British Prime Minister Edward Heath says he's a frustrated musician who finds symphony orchestras much more logical than governments.

"At least the orchestra is trying to reach the same point at the same time," Heath told reporters Wednesday after arriving in Cleveland to guest conduct the Cleveland Orchestra on Friday.

The 62-year-old Heath said he came to Cleveland at the invitation of Lorin Maazel, the orchestra's music director. Heath will conduct Brahms' Academic Festival Overture and will narrate Copland's "A Lincoln Portrait."

While at Oxford University, Heath was an organ scholar and studied philosophy, politics and economics.

"It came to the point where I had to decide whether to become a musician or a politician," Heath said, "but then the war came and decided for me. By the time it was over, it was too late to be a musician, but it's never too late to become a politician."

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Actor-director Cliff Robertson says he is shocked by reports that a financially troubled film he has worked on features children in explicit sex scenes.

"The film was being shot to be a PG (parental guidance) film," said Robertson, who is directing "Morning, Winter and Night." "Anyone who knows my work and my reputation knows I would never have been involved with anything like pornography."

Robertson has refused to go back to work directing the movie until Xanadu Productions pays money it owes to actors and to merchants in the Greenfield, Mass., area, where parts of the film were shot earlier this year. Work on the film is suspended.

In the cast is 13-year-old Brooke Shields, who played a child prostitute in "Pretty Baby."

On the light side

CASHION, Okla. — City Marshal Dennis Anglin says he needs a new law to help control some pot-smoking, booze-guzzling carousers in this small north central Oklahoma town.

Most of the trouble has been caused by young people who drive their cars up and down Main Street and sometimes stop on private property.

Anglin said he counted between 40 and 50 revelers one night. "For a little town, that sure is a lot," he said.

The biggest problem, he said, is that the main city ordinance for controlling such goings-on has lost its effectiveness over the decades.
