

Bill Childress in love with people

By PAMTUREK
Pampa Neas Staff
Bill Childress, manager of the Pampa Country Club, is generally seen smiling and rarely forgets a name.
When asked how he remembers many names, he answered, "It comes naturally... I love people... if you love people you have no problem."
Childress was born in Lampasas, not far from San Antonio. "It was a nice place. I played football, and baseball." Lampasas is a town of 6,000. Childress donated two and one-half years to Uncle Sam during World War II. He was in the Army-Air Force. He said, "while I was overseas I was driving the mess truck." He served in the Philippines and Manila; it was one of his first experiences with organizing food.

In 1946, after getting out of the service Childress returned home. He explained, "I went back home and took a course in milk processing. Lampasas is a goat and sheep town. "At that time I wasn't thinking about leaving Lampasas." He left in 18 months.

By word of mouth, Childress learned that jobs and wages were better in San Antonio. So off he went.
He passed his Civil Service Exam and went to work at Kelly Air Force Base, beginning as an electrician's helper. Childress stayed there for 11 years, but did other jobs on the side.

After six weeks at Kelly, a buddy told him about a bus boy job at a local hotel. So Childress moonlighted and was soon promoted to waiter. "After they promoted me to waiter, I worked three to five days a week," he said.
Childress was with the Plaza Hotel for three years, then moved on to Seven Oaks Country Club as "an extra captain. Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday, when they had big parties come in," he said.

In 1968, at the age of 32, the young man tried his hand at owning his own club. First the "Top Hat" and then the "Onyx Club." "I sold it out," he said when asked what happened with the business.
Childress also worked for the Oak Hills Motor Inn, from there he came to Pampa. In 1974 a friend of his came to Pampa as manager of the Pampa Country Club. Childress followed in 1976 as assistant manager.

Last year he was made manager of the Club. For some individuals getting along with people day in and day out would be difficult. But not for Bill Childress. "It's easy to get along with the world if you like people... I've always like people," he said.
"We like Pampa," is how Childress described his and his wife's feelings toward the city. Rosa, his wife, works for Cabot Corp. Childress has two daughters and one son.

"Anger is the most impotent of passions. It effects nothing it goes about, and hurts the one who is possessed by it more than the one against whom it is directed."

Postal workers set for walkout

Good afternoon
News in brief

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a nationwide mail strike possible at midnight tonight, the Postal Service and its unions are hardened into positions that appear to make a surrender by one side the only alternative to a strike.
Postmaster General William F. Bolger repeated on national television Sunday that he would not return to the bargaining table for further talks with his unions.
Meanwhile, one union president is mandated by his members to call a strike by midnight tonight if there is no resumption of bargaining. Another union president, under similar mandate, has a midnight Wednesday deadline.

"We have completed our negotiations as far as I'm concerned... I still am not going back to the bargaining table," Bolger said.
He was interviewed on CBS' "Face the Nation."
Bolger continued to press for the processes provided by law for instances where union members, as they have in this case, refuse to accept a tentative agreement. Those processes are fact-finding under the supervision of federal mediators and, if a settlement is still not reached, binding arbitration.
The unions, however, have rejected this course, saying the choice for Bolger is to renegotiate or face a strike.
Despite the seemingly dug-in positions on both sides, Bolger continued to predict there would be no strike. "I think most of the postal employees are law-abiding people. They will certainly carry out the intent of the law, and not strike, in my opinion," he said.

There was no sign Sunday of any give in the union positions. Union leaders met on and off with federal mediators and for a time informally with Bolger. A source close to the situation said, "Of substance, nothing really has changed."
The Postal Service, citing the law against mail strikes, got a court restraining order Saturday forbidding strikes by the two largest postal unions. However, neither the law nor a court order prevented widespread local walkouts in 1970.
Members of three unions have voted down a tentative contract reached July 21. They are the 299,000-member American Postal Workers Union, the 181,000-member National Association of Letter Carriers and the 36,000-member mailhandlers division of the Laborers International Union.

The APWU has mandated President Emmet Andrews to get the Postal Service back to the bargaining table by midnight Wednesday or call a strike. For the letter carriers union, the deadline is tonight. The mailhandlers union has no such mandate.
The rejected agreement called for 19.5 percent increases in wages and cost-of-living payments over three years. This would boost average postal salaries from the present $15,877 to around $19,200 by 1981.

with a chance of thunderstorms. The weather will be cooler today and Tuesday. The temperature will be in the upper 80s today, near 60 tonight, and in the upper 70s Tuesday. There is a 20 percent chance of showers today and 30 percent chance tonight and Tuesday.

Couple win portion of title

Bill and Susie Morehead both won a portion of their division championships in a weekend tennis tournament benefiting the American Cancer Society.
Susie teamed with Dot Stowers to win the women's doubles crown, while her husband teamed with Dan Pendleton to take the men's title.

Runners-up were Diane Saied and Beverly Brown in the women's division and John Enloe and Keith Barker in the men's loop.
Consolation round winners were Sharon Brock and Jane Martin and Djvid Martin and Bill Skoog. Twenty men and 16 women participated in the tournament.

Dollar to get help

WASHINGTON (AP)—In another action to help support the dollar, the Federal Reserve Board took steps today to encourage borrowing of foreign-held dollars by American banks.
About $500 billion in U.S. dollars are held overseas. They are called "Eurodollars" because they are outside the control of U.S. banking authorities.
The amount of foreign-held dollars has grown sharply in recent years, in part because of the U.S. trade deficit that sends dollars abroad, and they have frequently been used by speculators to drive down the overall value of the dollar.
To encourage use of the so-called Eurodollars by American banks, the Federal Reserve Board today removed the requirement that U.S. banks must maintain reserves equal to 4 percent of what they borrow abroad.

"The effect of the reserve reduction is intended to encourage member banks to substitute Eurodollar borrowings for domestic borrowings as a source of funds," the board said in a statement.
If the action has the intended effect, it would mean some of the foreign-held dollars would be returned to this country for use in domestic lending. This would reduce the amount of dollars held abroad, contributing to overall strength of the American currency.

Commission to conduct hearing

The city commission will conduct a public hearing on the proposed 1978-79 budget at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday in the commission chambers at City Hall.
The $3,939,309 budget, which includes a $100,000 street maintenance program, a 10 percent raise for all full-time city employees and increased city contributions to employee benefits, show a $385,326 increase over the present budget.
An anticipated ad valorem tax growth increase and an increase in gross receipts and sales tax leave approximately $180,000 in excess of current city revenue.

The city plans to offset the increase by raising city water, sewer and solid waste collection rates 11 percent, and by increasing health permit fees from $3 to $10 a year.
The proposed budget also includes a 10 percent increase in tax service contracts with schools, from $5,800 to $6,400 per year. In addition, the city plans to raise the cost of fire department service to Gray, Roberts and Carson Counties roughly 16 percent, from $260 to $301 per run. The 16 percent raise is directly proportional to the fire department's proposed budget increase.

Davis to return to courtroom

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A millionaire industrialist, a Houston attorney with a flair for courtroom dramatics, a determined prosecutor and a frightened police informant were due in a Fort Worth courtroom again today to resume a sensational bond hearing that began last Tuesday and has uncovered a bizarre murder-for-hire plot allegedly authored by Cullen Davis.
Fort Worth district attorney Tim Curry says his office has "some additional evidence" but "nothing big" to introduce in an attempt to keep Davis in jail without bond.
"We're just about through," he said. "I think we've put on enough evidence. Maybe too much."
Defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes is expected to continue his cross-examination of the state's star witness against Davis, who is accused of plotting the murder of the judge presiding in his four-year-old divorce case.

Visiting District Judge Arthur Tipps of Wichita Falls signed a temporary bond denial order Thursday and recessed the proceedings until this morning. Texas law requires that a decision to deny bond must be made within seven days of a suspect's arrest.
Davis, 44, was arrested Aug. 20 after a meeting with David McCrory, a former employee of a Davis-controlled company who became an FBI informant two weeks ago, claiming Davis had approached him to hire a professional gunman to kill Judge Joe Eidson.
During three days of testimony last week, prosecutors introduced into evidence tape recordings of conversations that allegedly took place between Davis and McCrory after the informant had been wired for sound by FBI agents.

Governors to work on economics

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer
BOSTON (AP) — The country's governors are vowing to work together on a 50-state approach to the economic distress now sparking the taxpayers' revolt but admit they cannot agree on a national health policy.
The quest for a national health policy was at the top of the program today for the National Governors' Association annual meeting, with Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., as the featured speaker.
Kennedy is one of the chief congressional advocates of a strong national health program and has attacked a plan proposed by President Carter as inadequate.

In an opening news conference Sunday, Gov. William Milliken of Michigan, chairman of the group, and host Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts agreed there was no agreement among the governors either.
Dukakis said there is "clearly a division of opinion within the association" on health care and that is why a major portion of the agenda was given to the issue.
"It is very true that we have not been able to reach general agreement across the whole association," Milliken said, "and I strongly suspect that we will not reach that at least until after the elections, until there are a number of new governors and we have had an updating on the problem across the country."

The governors have been debating the issue for years, and there is felt to be a majority in support of comprehensive national health care. However, it takes a two-thirds vote to get a policy resolution passed by the association and a bipartisan bloc of political and fiscal conservatives has been able to prevent an agreement.
A resolution endorsing a universal coverage health care program was defeated at the governors' winter meeting in Washington early this year.

Milliken said it would be the main topic of the next winter meeting in February, however.
The governors were more positive on the taxpayer revolt, saying each state has individual problems but there is a common concern.
"I don't think any governor takes the issue of growing property taxes and the inequity of those taxes lightly," Milliken said.
"What we are attempting to do is put together a comprehensive 50-state approach on the problem of economic and community distress," Dukakis said.

Pope pledges to overcome problems

By EDWARD MAGRI
Associated Press Writer
VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul I, after pledging to overcome "internal tension" within the Roman Catholic Church and to continue the work of the two predecessors whose names he took, dug into the business of running the church with a heavy schedule of administrative meetings today.
All executive positions in the Vatican Curia, the church's central bureaucracy, expired automatically with the death of Pope Paul VI Aug. 6, and all major decisions were postponed, except for the election of the new pope.

The new pontiff must reinstate or replace scores of officials and papal aides ranging from the secretary of state, Cardinal Jean Villot of France, to the nuns who care for the pope's apartment and prepare his meals.
Many observers believe the 65-year-old pope will reappoint most of them, at least temporarily, while he becomes familiar with the intricate machinery of the Curia.
His only experience at the Vatican was as a member of the executive board of the Congregation for Sacraments and Divine Cult. He has spent nearly all his life in the Venice area, as a priest in his native diocese in the Alps, as bishop of Vittorio Veneto and for the past nine years as Cardinal Albino Luciani, patriarch of Venice.

Elected Saturday on the first day of voting by 111 cardinals locked in the Borgia Apartments of the Apostolic Palace, the new pope will be crowned Sunday. But the Vatican has not announced whether the coronation Mass will be in St. Peter's Basilica or in the square in front of it, where Pope Paul VI held his coronation in 1963.

A surprise choice who doesn't have an international reputation, John Paul is considered by some a conservative but was termed a "moderate" by Cardinal John Dearden of Detroit. And moderation was the keynote of his speech Sunday to the cardinals in which he pledged to carry on the reforms launched by the 1962-65 Vatican Council and the programs of Pope Paul.
He said the church's first duty is evangelization. He also pledged to go ahead with the movement for Christian reunification, "without doctrinal ceding but also without hesitation," to carry forward "with patience and firmness" the dialogue with non-Christians, and to help peace initiatives in "the turbulent world."

He made clear he gives high priority to obedience to the hierarchy. "We wish to preserve the integrity of the church in the life of priests and of the faithful," he said, and he called for "a strict response to our will."

This and his insistence on doctrinal continuity was interpreted as a clear indication that he would continue Pope Paul's controversial bans on artificial contraception, married priests and the ordination of women. But he made no direct reference to these issues dividing the church.
"He's taught theology, and he wants to keep the church true to solid theology," said Cardinal John Carberry of St. Louis.
"I don't see much change, but he will be very effective at continuity of program," said Cardinal John Cody of Chicago.

Conrail: an accelerated rip-off of taxpayers

As predicted, the Consolidated Rail Corp. (Conrail) is in an accelerated phase of a gigantic rip-off of the American taxpayer. Note the official name given this creature of government. Just to read the title, one might be led to believe that it was a legitimate private business.

It has only been two years ago that this project of big government was created out of seven bankrupt railroads in the Northeast. We hasten to add that the bulk of the reasons for the plight of these carriers can be traced right back to unyielding government regulations and unrealistic demands of labor unions.

The demands of the unions were also aided and abetted by government interference in the transportation marketplace. Railroad management was halted to the point where they could not react to changing conditions and maintain efficient operations.

Congress, dispensing largesse extracted from taxpayers, set up this con with $2 billion "seed fund." It was touted to be the means to improve service and put the system on a profitable basis.

There was little clamor from the victims of this fraud at the time of its inception. In the light of the track record for success in business ventures in the political arena, it is somewhat of a mystery as to why taxpayers stood still for the con of Conrail. It would seem that all failures and no successes would have alerted taxpayers.

But, Amtrak, TVA, the Postal Service and all other intrusions of government into the business area seemed not to put citizens on guard. Conrail started with little or no adverse reaction from those who would be victimized.

Right now Conrail is turning out to be an operating and financial disaster. Even with its seed money it is losing more than the railroads it replaced. Service is worse than ever and shippers are deserting the system as customers.

The government agency which did more to cause the demise of the seven railroads, the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) has just seven railroads, the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) has just fined Conrail $2.3 million for its inability to send empty rail cars back where they belong. Experts say Conrail is a prime cause of a freight car shortage which now plagues most all rail shippers.

Just how a transfer (fine) of $2.3 million from one government pocket to another will have any salutary effect on the federal agency operating Conrail, it is difficult to envision. None but the taxpayer is really penalized. And as the transfer is made it will not be a direct stand-off. There is ever the "house-take" for a skim-off depletes all such intergovernmental transactions.

Conrail is now asking Congress for an additional $1.3 billion and this is based on an over-optimistic assumption. It is far more likely that it will take $4 billion to bail the system out. It won't stay bailed out. Like the postal service, it will be ever more costly and ever more inefficient.

Last year the system lost $367 million. The first quarter of this year it lost $216 million, so the total loss for 1978 will probably reach more than $800 million. The loss might very well exceed a billion dollars for this year alone.

The interest, energy and drive which manifested itself in Proposition 13 and other efforts relating to tax revolt might well be turned in the direction of forcing government, at all levels, out of business enterprises. Such a move could be a most important first step in cutting governmental spending.

With nothing save failure, in every attempt government has made to intrude into the business area, why do we continue to let politicians con us into accepting such ripoffs? Isn't it time to push politicians out of the private sector?

Nation's press

Free the OSHA 1100

(Wall Street Journal)

From the National Journal, a weekly magazine that takes an uncommon interest in how our government actually works, we get the following dispatch from the health and safety wars. The idea has been circulating lately that the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, in its drive to become less of a pain in the neck to the citizenry, has already repealed some 1100 of its most nitpicking regulations. President Carter lent credence to the idea when he said of OSHA recently that "in one day last year, 1100 different regulations were wiped off the books." But you will not be surprised to hear that the truth of the matter is a little more complicated.

It was over eight months ago that Labor Secretary Ray Marshall held a press conference to announce that he planned to get rid of the offending regulations. At the time, he remarked that "the system makes it much easier for the government to promulgate new regulations than to get rid of out-moded or ineffective ones." Nevertheless OSHA began the deletion process. It started with the kind of rules — duplications, obsolete standards and such — that you'd think would be easiest to junk. It sent out a program directive to the field ordering inspectors to stop giving penalties for most violations of rules slated for destruction.

but to comply with the law it also had to publish its proposals in the Federal Register and allow comment. It got lots. In fact when time came for the comment period to close at the beginning of March, OSHA extended it for another two months. Now the agency is busy analyzing the comments. Objections may save a couple hundred of the endangered regulations, and the final version of the project seems due for publication in the Federal Register around mid-September. Along the way OSHA got wind of still other regulations that might safely be scrapped, and it's now deciding whether to crank up the whole process again for these new candidates.

So OSHA is going to have to keep plugging away, and we'll all be lucky to see a part of the 1100 rules wiped out within a year of Secretary Marshall's announcement. Which suggests the following things: First, that Mr. Carter and his administration deserve some congratulations for taking the problem seriously and persisting through all the complications that the rule-unmaking has produced. And second, if anyone had doubted it, government should be required to approach the adoption of new rules with at least the solemnity that attends a marriage, since a rule once adopted is so excruciatingly painful and difficult to get rid of.

By MARTHA ANGLE and ROBERT WALTERS
WASHINGTON (NEA) - It may look like flogging a dead horse, but at least one major conservative group is still trying to wring some fund-raising mileage from the Panama Canal treaties - and in a fashion bordering on outright deception.
Although the treaties were ratified months ago by the U.S. Senate and will not appear on any ballot in America this

Far cry from 'direct vote'

November, you'd never guess it from the "Dear Friend" appeal mailed out last month by the Council for Inter-American Security.

The fund-raising letter, signed by council chairman Ronald Docksal, an aide to Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, flatly asserts that "you will be able to vote 'yes' or 'no' on the Panama Canal treaty on November 7, 1978."

The Docksal letter insists that "you have that vote. It is indeed on your ballot... Only a conspiracy of silence in the major news media, and in the highest levels of government, can prevent the American people from using their vote on November 7 to cancel the Panama Canal treaty."

It requires an extremely careful reading of the four-page letter to discern that the reader's "opportunity to have a direct vote" on the treaty will come not on a ballot referendum question but rather in choosing members of the House of Representatives - who will vote next year on legislation implementing some aspects of the canal treaties.

On page four, Docksal finally gets around to saying that funds collected by the council will be used in an advertising campaign "to tell the American people: (1) here are the top five defense issues, including the Panama Canal treaty, and (2) here is how your congressman has voted on these five issues."

That is a pretty long stretch from the "direct vote" promised on page one of the fund-raising letter, to put it mildly. But then, as P.T. Barnum used to say, there's a sucker born every minute.

Strange bedfellows, indeed

It's hard to beat the Illinois Senate race this year in the politics - makes - strange - bedfellows sweepstakes.

Democratic candidate Alex Seith, a Cook County lawyer and leader in the Council of Foreign Affairs in Chicago, is being heavily touted in his race against GOP Sen. Charles H. Percy by none other than M. Stanton Evans, a big conservative honcho.

Evans, former chairman of the American Conservative Union and contributing editor of the right-wing "Human Events" weekly, is beating the drums for Seith both in the magazine and in fund-raising letters to conservatives across the country.

Seith and Evans are old college chums from Yale, but there's more to it than that. Conservatives loathe Percy, one of the few relatively liberal Republicans left in the Senate, and Seith is hoping Evans can help him woo GOP voters in Illinois who share that disenchantment with the incumbent.

Seith is apparently gambling that machine Democrats in Chicago will pull the lever for anyone running on the Democratic ticket, never mind his view points or allies, and that enough conservatives can be lured over to give him the edge over Percy.

Seith's effort to position himself to the right of Percy has already irked many Illinois liberals, and his rather difficult personality has offended other potential supporters. His original advertising consultants, the Washington firm of Rothstein - Buckley, pulled out after the primary election this year - reportedly because they found Seith too temperamental to work with comfortably.

Percy held only a 42-30 edge over Seith in one Gannett newspapers poll published in the spring, not a strong showing against a little-known challenger, but the senator's campaign workers insist he is in better shape than that survey would indicate. They are expecting returns any day now from their own statewide survey by national GOP pollster Robert Teeter.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, Aug. 28, the 240th day of 1978. There are 125 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On this date in 1833, the British Parliament banned slavery throughout the British Empire.

On this date:
In 1609, English navigator Henry Hudson discovered Delaware Bay.

In 1828, Russian novelist Leo Tolstoy was born in the province of Tula.

In 1916, Germany declared war on Romania.

In 1917, 10 suffragettes were arrested as they picketed the White House in Washington.

In 1963, about 200,000 people — blacks and whites — joined in a peaceful civil rights rally in Washington.

Another Soviet enigma

By DON GRAFF

Anatoly Shcharansky, Aleksandr Ginzburg, Vladimir Slepak — these are the names and stories in the headlines.

Jewish dissidents denied permission to emigrate, defendants in current Soviet show trials, sentenced to labor camps or internal exile. And issues in a diplomatic and propaganda duel between Washington and Moscow.

But there is also another story that does not make headlines.

From January through July of this year, more than 13,000 emigrants left the Soviet Union. Almost all Jews, they are the latest in a continuing exodus that in this decade already numbers more than 150,000. Israel is the final destination of about half. The others scatter from Vienna, the point of entry into the noncommunist world, primarily to the English-speaking countries.

No one — the emigrants themselves, the various agencies which assist their resettlement — knows for certain why the Soviets permit the emigration. Detente, as promoted during the Nixon administration, would appear to have been a factor initially. But this does not explain continuation during recent, less diplomatically relaxed years.

For the entire decade of the Sixties, authorized emigrants number only some 10,000. But beginning in 1971 with more than 12,000, there has been a sharp increase. The approximate figures for succeeding years are 31,000 in 1972, 34,000 in 1973, 20,000 in 1974, 13,000 in 1975, 14,000 in 1976 and 17,000 in 1977.

Compared to the vast numbers who would like to leave the Soviet Union, the flow is a trickle rather than a stream. But it exists, and that is enough for those lucky enough to be included.

It fluctuates from year to year and week to week for reasons, if any, that are a mystery to the refugee agencies. A slight fall off was noticed during the Shcharansky trial. But even with the current headlines, 1978 emigration only halfway through the year is approaching the 1977 total.

The headlined show trials are real, and so is the unheadlined emigration. What they add up to is another of Winston Churchill's Russian mysteries wrapped within enigmas, evidence again that occurrences in the Soviet Union rarely have a simple explanation, or are quite what surface appearance might suggest.

Bringing Confucius up to date

We do know what was behind a recent mystery in another Communist country — the vehement campaign against China's greatest philosopher, Confucius.

The official press now blames it all on the disgraced "Gang of Four" and is energetically rehabilitating a thinker of such lasting influence that 2,500 years after his death he could be a live political issue among his people. The People's Daily, which once characterized Confucius as "an archreactionary spokesman for the stinking aristocracy," now notes that none other than the late Chairman Mao often quoted the philosopher and found particular merit in his attitude of inquiring into everything.

The new line confirms earlier Western speculation that the campaign was actually an attack by radical leaders, who included Mao's wife, Chiang Ching, against the late Premier Chou En-lai, a Mandarin who personified the Confucian ideal of an educated, aristocratic ruler.

It is no coincidence that the dusting off of Confucius coincides with the People's Republic's sudden interest in education.

Peking is modernizing its own education system and wants to send thousands of young Chinese abroad for advanced study in the United States and Western Europe.

The great contribution of Confucius to Chinese culture was the inculcation of respect for learning and the creation of an educated elite from which China's administrators, the world's first bureaucracy, have been drawn for more than two millennia.

What it amounts to is recognition again that a little knowledge is by no means as dangerous a thing as too little.

Your money's worth

The higher your income, the more personal documents you are likely to possess. Your collection of documents — from a baptismal certificate to a check-cashing card — hits a maximum of about 23 between the ages of 30 and 60, then drops slightly.

If, for instance, your income is under $5,000 a year, you have an average of about 16 documents; if you earn $30,000 or more, your average is 30.

Nearly all of you have a Social Security card, most of you have a driver's license, birth certificate, marriage license and credit card. A full two-thirds of you have a baptismal certificate and half have association membership cards.

This is merely a sampling of the preliminary findings of a still uncompleted study on the importance of personal papers in the lives of U.S. citizens, being conducted by James B. Rule, a sociologist at the State University of New York at Stony Brook, and three colleagues.

The study is divided into two parts. The first, from which these findings are drawn, focuses on the impact of the growing use of records on people's lives. It is based on interviews with a cross-section of adults in a Long Island suburban area.

The second part of Rule's research, still underway, is based on interviews with data collectors themselves (in credit bureaus, the IRS, insurance companies, motor vehicles, etc.).

"We hope to draw a portrait of how personal information flows through people and bureaucracies," Rule explained to my Washington associate, Brooke Shearer. The full report will be completed in about two years from now.

There are a few shockers (at least to me) in some of the preliminary findings.

The worst shocker of all is that only one out of every six of you has a will — among the "important single documents you will own in your lifetime." That is the same proportion possessing a resume, divorce papers, transcript, diploma — and it shouts a warning to you, whoever and wherever you are, married, single, man or woman. Make a will and do it now!

A full one-fourth of you has a check-cashing card, union and military discharge papers.

Your documents

But Americans still are not worldwide travelers — an Long Island residents would be as likely as most Americans to travel overseas. Only 17 percent hold a passport. Not tally has included such documents as stock certificates, real estate title and auto registration, because these papers belong more to the household than to the individual. It did, however, include questions to reveal how you feel about the records kept on you by government and private organizations.

And the answer is: a full eight out of 10 of you think that "more" records are being kept today than 20 years ago and almost half disapprove this trend. To the question: "Do you feel that the use of computers has affected personal privacy in America?" two-thirds of you would say "yes," only 28.5 percent would say "no" — assuming this report is fairly typical of the nation's attitudes toward personal documents and privacy.

As for computers, the widespread disapproval also cannot be mistaken. Another eight out of 10 feel the impact of computers on your privacy is negative, only 5 percent find it positive, and 11 percent feel the impact of computers on privacy is neutral or mixed.

Most of you (seven out of 10) also believe that banks generally allow the Internal Revenue Service to check your bank accounts. (The fact is that when the IRS wants to see a taxpayer's bank records and the taxpayer refuses, the IRS sends an agent to the bank. He serves an official summons — a notice that he is working on an official tax matter and wants specific information. The bank has 14 days in which to comply. The IRS must notify you that it has served the summons and if you direct the bank not to comply, the IRS must then get a court order before it can proceed.)

But while you're off-base a bit on the power of the IRS, you are even more off-base on the power of a bank to find out whether you have been divorced when you apply for a bank credit. While almost seven out of 10 of you think this, the Equal Credit Opportunity Act forbids a bank to ask if you are married, unmarried or separated when you apply for credit, with a few exceptions.

It's invasion of privacy, yes, but not "1984," not yet!

DALLAS (AP) — Five persons claim they met men who identified themselves as Secret Service agents in Dealey Plaza just before the assassination of President John Kennedy, though the Warren Commission claims none of the 28 agents protecting Kennedy were on foot at that time.

In a copyright story in Sunday editions, the Dallas Morning News said all but one of the encounters were in the parking lot of the Texas School Book Depository, from which the commission concluded Lee Harvey Oswald alone fired on the motorcade.

Gordon L. Arnold said he was moving toward a railroad bridge over the nearby triple underpass to shoot movies of the motorcade when he was approached by a man who flashed a badge and claimed to be a Secret Service agent.

After taking up a position on the grassy knoll adjacent to the depository, Arnold said he "felt" a shot come from behind him.

"I had just gotten out of basic training," he said. "In my mind live ammunition was being fired. It was being fired over my head. I hit the dirt."

He said the first two shots came from behind a fence behind the knoll.

During a re-enactment for acoustic analysis recently, the Assassinations Committee ordered rifles and pistols shot from that position as well as the depository.

Arnold said he turned his film over to a policeman but never reported his story because "I heard after that there were a lot of people making claims about pictures and stuff and they were dying sort of peculiarly."

Two Dallas policemen were assigned to guard the railroad bridge, keeping unauthorized persons off the structure, but were not assisted by federal agents, according to the Warren Report.

"If there was one (Secret Service agent) up there, we didn't know it," said officer James C. White. "He wasn't on that bridge. I know that."

But, a railroad signal supervisor, who aided the officers in identifying railroad personnel on the bridge, said he thought "a plainclothes detective or FBI agent or something like that" was helping the officers guard the bridge.

About 9:30 or 10 a.m., Julius Hardie of Dallas was driving a truck on Commerce Street when he noticed three men on the bridge.

"I looked over on the railroad bridge and I saw three men," Hardie told The News. "And I thought I saw two of them carrying guns, long guns. I glanced to my left to check for traffic and then looked back because even in Texas it's unusual to see people carrying long guns."

"Now I can't tell you whether it was rifles, shotguns or what. But two of them had long guns."

Minutes after Arnold's encounter with the "agent" on his way to the bridge, Mrs. Jean Hill witnessed the assassination from a few feet away from the presidential limousine.

She saw a man dashing into the parking lot adjacent to the depository before other stunned spectators began to rush up the knoll past Arnold, she said.

She ran after the man and was met in the parking lot by a "tall and slender" man in a business suit who "whipped out" identification claiming he was a Secret Service agent, Mrs. Hill said.

"I thought he was trying to get away," she said, "but evidently he wanted me to keep from getting away (and pursuing the fleeing man). He identified himself, supposedly, and I took it that he was. I just figured they (Secret Service) were shooting back."

Mrs. Hill, now remarried, said agents from the CIA, FBI and Secret Service interviewed her in the following year and told her the man she met in the parking lot with the Secret Service identification did not exist under the name she recalled he gave her.

She said a man once showed up at her door, claiming to be a Secret Service agent and "threatened" her to stop talking about the parking lot incident.

Computerized system collects money for state

A new computerized payee system in the comptroller of public accounts office has collected $180,000 owed the state in its first two months of operation, comptroller Bob Bullock said Wednesday.

The payee system, implemented June 1, provides strict enforcement of a new law prohibiting the comptroller's office from issuing a warrant (pay-check) to anyone owing the state money.

"Simply stated, our computer kicks out warrants written to people or businesses who owe the state money," Bullock said. "We then hold the warrant until the debt or delinquency is cleared up."

Bullock said his office is now holding 1,253 warrants totaling $605,408. The payees appearing on the warrants are notified automatically.

State payees include employees, taxpayers due refunds, aid recipients and persons and businesses selling goods and services to the state.

Pampa man charged in theft

C.J. Phelps, 1005 Twiford, was arrested Friday night on charges of auto theft and robbery.

Later in the evening it was reported to the department

BULLET

BANGOR, Maine (AP) — What? A bullet from a pullet? After she cracked an egg into her frying pan, Althea Lyshon found a .22 caliber bullet lodged in the egg white.

Just how the live round of ammunition got into the pan is anybody's guess. Mrs. Lyshon is sure it wasn't stuck to the outside of the egg.

Someone at the Maine Department of Agriculture told her it could have been ingested by the chicken when it got mixed up with a load of grain.

At any rate, Mrs. Lyshon is happy that the shell-inside-a-shell story didn't end with a bang.

Without heat from commissioners Officials get pay raises

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A strange thing happened in several Texas counties after the primary elections were held this spring. Numerous county officials suddenly discovered they were "aggrieved" at their salaries.

They invoked a seldom used procedure, designed to protect maverick officials from vindictive county commissioners.

What they got in most instances were pay raises, with a minimum of heat on commissioners courts.

House Speaker Bill Clayton says this summer's "grievance committee" actions indicate to him the procedure is misused and needs attention from the 1979 Legislature.

"We might have to take a look at that, because that was not the intent. It seems to me like what they were doing was the commissioners court didn't want to face up to the heat of salary increases," Clayton said.

He also said legislators should remove any doubt that county salary grievance committees are covered by the Texas Open Meetings Law.

Grievance committees were built into a 1971 law that made commissioners courts responsible for setting salaries of county officials.

A committee consists of three former grand jury members and the sheriff, county tax-assessor collector, county treasurer, county clerk, district clerk and county attorney or criminal district attorney. The county judge presides but has no vote. If all nine members vote to raise a salary, the increase is automatic. A recommendation signed by at least six but less than nine members must be considered by the commissioners court at its next meeting.

Some county attorneys believe grievance committees are not required to post notice and meet publicly.

The Henderson County (Athens) grievance committee met in private on May 22 and voted 9-0 to raise salaries of the officials serving on the committee by $3,000 each.

They had received 7 percent raises on Jan. 1.

In Gregg County (Longview), the grievance committee voted 9-0 on July 18 to grant 15 percent raises to the district clerk, county clerk, tax assessor-collector, treasurer, sheriff, two justices of the peace and two constables.

But after a local furor, the officials agreed to wait until Oct. 1 — the effective date of the next budget — for their raises. The notice for September's budget hearings includes a 15 percent raise for all county officials and employees.

"I don't know why they went this route. My feeling was that you are not going to get this raise ordinarily but by going this route you might be successful," said County Attorney Otis Hill.

National briefs

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) - California Gov. Jerry Brown came East to campaign at an elegant Long Island estate, explaining he was acting "in self defense" because candidates from all over the country come to California.
The $100-a-couple fundraiser Sunday was attended by about 200 people, including singer-composer Paul Simon, actress Gilda Radner of "Saturday Night Live," television commentator and author Shana Alexander and local resident Lee Radziwill, sister of Jacqueline Onassis.
The event, arranged by Manhattan Borough President Andrew Stein, was held on the lawn at the home of Stein's father, Jerry Finkelstein, a local Democratic figure and publisher of the New York Law Journal.
Brown, who was en route to the National Governors Conference in Boston, insisted, "I'm not running for president. No, no."

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) - Fried chicken, baked beans and actress Elizabeth Taylor were the drawing cards at a "Sizzling '70's Picnic" to raise money for the U.S. Senate campaign of Miss Taylor's husband, John Warner.
Warner was nominated two weeks ago to replace Richard Obenshain, killed in an airplane crash Aug. 8, and his wife filled in for him at the Sunday event while he campaigned in Dinwiddie County.
Nearly 700 people showed up and Miss Taylor spent about an hour shaking hands and chatting with the crowd in Fort Ward Park. The informal event was sponsored by the city's Republican committee.
NEW YORK (AP) - Former President Richard Nixon, who five months ago proclaimed his love of New York City, reportedly plans a return visit to the Big Apple.
Newsweek magazine says in this week's edition that Nixon is expected to deliver a eulogy at a Sept. 13 memorial service for Elmer Bobst, a pharmaceutical executive, philanthropist and Nixon backer who died recently at the age of 93.
The magazine said the two men knew one another for 25 years and grew so close that Nixon viewed Bobst as "a father figure."

Farmers profits dwindle

WASHINGTON (AP) - Some farmers and feedlot operators who bought high-priced feeder steers this summer may see part of their prospective profits dwindle by the time they're ready for market next winter, according to some analysts.
A breakdown by the Agriculture Department shows that if a feeder steer bought in July is fed through the remainder of this year it will have to bring the owner almost $600 to break even.
That means, according to the latest livestock and meat situation report, that a choice-grade steer will have to bring about $57 per 100 pounds when sold next January to cover all the costs of raising it for market.
Currently, department livestock economists say that steer prices - recently around $50 or so per hundredweight - may average in the range of $53 to $55 in the final quarter of this year.
The longer-range outlook for cattle producers remains bright, simply because they have drastically reduced inventories so much that it will be several years before the supply is restored enough to have much effect on market prices.
But in the meantime a smaller supply of lighter weight feeder cattle - a major cost in the business of producing finished beef animals for slaughter - has helped temper any notion that fat profits are a sure thing.
The analysis showed that if a 600-pound steer was bought last January, fed for six months and sold in July as a 1,050-pounder ready for slaughter, its owner would have invested about $487 in it.
That included a purchase price of about $264 for the original feeder steer, the feed and other expenses it took to raise the steer for market.
A similar steer bought in the Corn Belt in July would have cost more than $363 at the beginning of the six-month feeding period. All told, the owner will have $598.77 invested in the steer by the time it is ready for sale next January.
The figures include allowances for all expenses, from transportation, feed and veterinary services to labor expenses and charges for management.

Area man drowns near Canadian

CANADIAN - A 48-year-old Brainerd Ranch employee, Gordon (Duke) Coyn, died Sunday afternoon while on a swimming outing in the Canadian River with three other persons.
Coyn and his companions had ventured to the north side of the Canadian river, near here, about 5:30 p.m. Sunday, authorities said.
They were swimming in a hole, which authorities described as between eight and 10 feet in depth, when Coyn reportedly went under the water and did not surface. He died before his companions could rescue him.
Justice of the Peace Bob Gober pronounced Coyn dead at the scene and ordered an autopsy since Coyn reportedly had a history of heart trouble.

Cuts vacation short trouble on Capitol Hill - "as difficult as any that we have faced in Congress." He vowed, "We don't intend to lose."

But he said the administration also is concerned about a Sept. 7 House vote on over-riding Carter's Aug. 17 veto of a $37 billion defense appropriation bill.
Powell said the administration expects to sustain the veto and then help rewrite the bill "to reflect the president's views more completely than before."
Carter objects to the bill's provision of $2 billion for a nuclear-powered aircraft carrier. He maintains that Congress cut too much money from other defense areas to authorize the carrier.
As Carter was fishing for trout, Powell told reporters there was no point in continuing the vacation if the president had to spend "all day and a good portion of the night working on these domestic concerns."
But, when asked if Carter has spent most of his time since he arrived here Thursday working, Powell replied: "No. He hasn't been doing that. That is the whole point. We have decided - or the president decided - he wants to go back."
Although the president will find Congress out of town when he returns, Powell said Carter will be busy all next week with a Mideast summit at Camp David, Md., and needed Thursday and Friday to work on domestic legislation that Congress will consider shortly after it returns from a Labor Day recess Sept. 6.
The three-way summit among Carter, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat begins Sept. 5 and will last indefinitely in an effort to find a formula for peace in that region.
"The president will be talking by telephone and perhaps meeting personally with members of the Congress on these (domestic) matters, particularly energy," Powell said.
Carter's natural gas legislation became endangered when a group of Democrats and Republicans, led by Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., withdrew support for the compromise measure.
The president said Friday he expects a showdown vote on the bill soon after Sept. 11.
The measure to lift federal price controls from newly discovered natural gas by 1985 is opposed by some liberals who claim it would drive up gas bills and by conservatives from natural gas-producing states who want immediate deregulation.

Tropical depression to hit Texas tonight

MIAMI (AP) - A sprawling, loosely organized tropical depression drifted across the Gulf of Mexico today and forecasters said it would bring high tides and heavy rain to Texas and Louisiana coastal areas tonight.
The storm system was centered about 100 miles south of Brownsville, Texas at mid-morning and drifting north northwest about 10 mph with sustained winds of 35 mph, said the National Hurricane Center.
Forecasters said the depression showed no signs of growing into a tropical storm.
"It's sprawling over a big area, so it's not likely to gain strength," he said. "But over water like this it's always dangerous. It can gain strength quickly."
He said the heaviest storm activity was north and east of the storm center. "This is what's going to spread into Louisiana and Texas."
Forecasters said tides along the upper Texas and southwest Louisiana coasts would run two to four feet above normal. The center said heavy rains might produce flash flooding.

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Since statistics show that 98.3 percent of all child molesters are heterosexual, I'm organizing a crusade to prohibit heterosexual teachers from instructing children of the opposite sex.

I don't want my daughter molested by a heterosexual male teacher, or my son seduced by a heterosexual female teacher. I'd appreciate your comments.

CONCERNED PARENT

DEAR PARENT: Your statistics are correct, but banning all heterosexual teachers on the chance that one might molest a child is unfair. However, if you proceed with your crusade, be sure to enlist the help of Anita Bryant—since she wants so desperately to "save" our children.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for 38 years and my problem is my mother-in-law. Mums has been a widow for 10 years. She lives 400 miles from here, and spends most of her time and money just traveling around visiting relatives.

We have a guest room, but Mums prefers to sleep on the living room sofa where she can see and hear everything. And she snores so loud we can't hear the TV.

She complains about my coffee, my cooking, our children and our grandchildren. She soaks her false teeth in one of my best china cups, and when she leaves I have to throw the cup out.

We never know when she's coming. She just calls us from the bus depot and tells us to come and get her. If we had plans to go out of town ourselves, it's too bad. We can't leave her in our home alone because she never locks a door. She's not forgetful—just trusting.

I have a strange feeling she's headed this way and I don't think I can stand another one of her visits. When she comes she stays anywhere from three days to three months. Help!

HAD IT WITH MUMS

DEAR HAD IT: A telephone call to Mums would put you at ease. Call her and find out what her plans are.

Next time she comes, tell her where you want her to sleep and where to soak her false teeth, and also set a time limit on her visit. And while she's in your home, be firm with the crusty old girl. She sounds like she'd rather enjoy going a few rounds with her family.

DEAR ABBY: Timmy and I have been married for six years and have two cute kids. We've had our fights, but nothing serious.

Timmy's mom has never really liked me because before I met Timmy he was serious about a girl named Doris, and his mother wanted him to marry HER.

Well, last week Doris came to town. She's divorced (no kids), and I heard (from one of Timmy's sisters) that his mom arranged for him to meet Doris at her house twice! I don't know the purpose of those meetings, but if Timmy had told me he wanted to see Doris, I'd have been happy to invite her over here.

I am boiling mad at Timmy's mother for that sneaky trick. When I told Timmy what I thought of the whole business, he said I was making a mountain out of a molehill. Am I?

FUMING IN NEW ORLEANS

DEAR FUMING: No. If you think Timmy's mother is deliberately trying to undermine your marriage, you have a right to complain. But Timmy's not entirely blameless. He cooperated (twice), if that you heard was true. Take it up with Timmy.

Ask Dr. Lamb

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you please write something about hemorrhoids. I never knew when I got pregnant that I was going to have a life of pain. After 26 years of pain, all the doctor says is, "How are the hemorrhoids today?" And when I would ask what I can do for them he says, "Oh, sitz baths, watch your diet and use this ointment."

For years doctors would say, "Oh, they aren't too bad. Wait until they get worse and you can have this operation." It just feels like glass. Then I would talk to other people and their doctor just made an injection and they no longer had any trouble.

Now my obstetrician is deceased and I will not go to a hospital. I have a phobia of heights after having four babies, two almost 11 pounds. Why didn't someone do something while they help me. After all these years why isn't there something that can be done that's simple and why aren't more girls warned of this before pregnancy?

DEAR READER — You may have to go to the hospital if you are going to get any satisfactory treatment of your hemorrhoid condition. Remember that hemorrhoids are nothing more than varicose veins of the rectum no matter how irritating and uncomfortable they may be.

These large dilated veins in this area can be either external where all the little sensitive nerves are or they can be internal and not cause any pain at all. The internal type are the ones that are apt to cause bleeding.

The hemorrhoid veins pop out because of excessive pressure that prevents the veins from draining. Women do develop hemorrhoids in association with pregnancy. The pregnant uterus presses against the veins that drain that area.

The treatment depends a lot on the kind of hemorrhoids a person has. The internal type can sometimes be injected, but injection does not work for external hemorrhoids that cause symptoms. Some hemorrhoids involve both internal and external areas. These variations explain why treatment for one patient may be entirely different from the best treatment for still another patient.

In general, hemorrhoids aren't cured unless they are either injected or surgically removed. It is also true that good bowel habits tend to prevent hemorrhoids because that, in turn, prevents excessive straining at the stool.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-1, Spastic or Irritable Colon and Constipation to give you some information on proper bowel habits. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

It's important for my readers to realize that bleeding often comes from hemorrhoids, but there is no way you can be certain of this on your own. Anyone who has rectal bleeding must see a physician because it may be an early sign of rectal cancer which can be cured if detected early enough. Moreover, a tumor in the lower bowel area can cause pressure to create hemorrhoids.

No one, regardless of how young he is or how old he may be, should neglect the symptom of rectal bleeding and simply conclude that it's "just my hemorrhoids causing a little trouble." To do so is to court disaster and possibly to miss the chance to cure a serious or fatal disease.

Polly's pointers

by Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — Floral arrangements have become so expensive many of us can no longer afford to send them to relatives and friends who are hospitalized or in nursing homes. I solved the problem by buying several small, inexpensive wicker baskets at a sidewalk sale. I fill one with a variety of fruits, gums, mints, etc and take these to friends. I never spend more than $3.50, including the basket, for such a gift while $10 is the average for any sort of floral arrangement I could send. How does this benefit someone else in the same position. — GWENDOLYN

DEAR POLLY — I use a polyurethane spray on my patio macrame plant holders where the bottom of the potted plant rests. Two to three coats are sufficient to keep the macrame from rotting when the plant is watered. — TOM

The creation of polyester

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK (NEA) - The story of polyester and acrylic and how they grew: a liberal, possibly garbled interpretation.

Once upon a time, two men sat around the fire. It being a slow day and the new television season not yet begun, they decided to invent some man-made fiber. "Get me a pot of oil," Tom said to Howard, the more sloppily dressed of the two. So Howard got a pot of oil which they heated over the fire until it turned into plastic.

"Now get me a gizmack," Tom said.

"What's a gizmack?" Howard said.

"You remember," Tom said. "We invented it last March when we were snowed in. It's that thing with millions of holes in it like the spigot of a watering can."

"Oh, yeah, I forgot," Howard said.

When he came back with the gizmack, Tom took the plastic from the pot and forced it through the gizmack so it came out in very fine filaments.

"This is a fiber called, uh, polyester. Take it to Harry and tell him to make some yarn from it," he told Howard.

"Tell him we're going to make a million from this because I can tell just by looking that polyester can be heat-set. You can put a crease in a pair of pants made from polyester under very high heat and that crease will stay forever. Tell him we'll call that 'permanent press.'"

When Howard got back, he said Harry thought polyester was terrific. He could mix it with other fibers and get all kinds of things, but it didn't work that well if you wanted to make a sweater that looked like mohair or something.

So Tom got another pot of oil. This time, after the oil got hot and turned into plastic and came out of the gizmack, he took all the filaments and rolled them together like a rope. Then he ran it through the chopper until he had different lengths.

"Here," he said, handing a bunch of them to Howard. "Tell Harry he can mix these with wool and such and make sweaters that look like the real thing, only you can throw them in the washing machine. That's called 'easy care,'" he said.

"What's this called?" Howard said, meaning the fibers in his hand.

"Call it whatever you want," Tom said. "I'm going to take a nap."

So Howard called it acrylic and it became a big hit all over the country, along with polyester, and everybody got rich and retired to Nice except Howard, who liked the hot dogs he could buy from the guy on the corner.

Bold plaids don't mix

By Charles Hix

Everyone knows that an extremely stout man shouldn't wear blaringly bold plaids unless he wants to look like a circus clown. But should any man wear blaring plaids?

"I like to classify 'bold' as a four-letter word," quips Alexander Julian, Coty Award winner for his men's clothing designs.

Well, bold is in the eye of the beholder. Or on the body of the wearer. Aesthetically, a tall slim man can wear a suit of a big checkerboard fabric... and he'll stand out in the crowd even more. Okay, if that's what he wants. A short slender male can also wear a suit of the same fabric and won't be quite so attention-grabbing... unless the scale of the pattern dwarfs him.

How does a man determine whether or not a particular pattern works for him? First, by visualizing his overall physique as a geometric shape.

For example, a fellow with very wide shoulders and chest, tapering to a slender waist and slim hips can view himself as an inverted triangle. The guy with narrow shoulders and chest but an expansive waist and even broader hips can designate himself as pear-shaped. Short and squat? A square. Very overweight? A circle. The person with a classical, athletic build can excuse himself from the exercise entirely, since he can wear just about any sane pattern and even some that aren't.

Having decided what geometric shape (loosely) he is, the fellow continues using his visual imagination. Say he's thinking about buying a houndstooth suit. Being basically pear-shaped, he superimposes a houndstooth check over the surface of an imaginary pear. Does that relatively bold pattern of broken checks, each one thought to resemble a canine tooth, make the pear look more bottom-heavy? Yes. Not wanting to accentuate his hipness, he'll reject houndstooth check suits.

This pear-shaped guy isn't through yet, though. Mentally he draws a horizontal line across the pear about a third of its depth from the bottom, roughly corresponding to what would be his waist. He colors the top black and places the houndstooth only on the lower third. Wrong again. Now the focus is absolutely on the patterned bottom. He reverses the pattern to the lower third of the pear and fills out the pear's upper portion with the houndstooth design. And that's exactly what happens—the top looks more filled out, de-emphasizing the width of the pear's bottom. And he realizes that he might choose a houndstooth jacket with dark trousers, but that houndstooth trousers with a dark jacket won't work on his body.

Now, he repeats the visualizations with other patterns. A pin check—the smallest check around—does little one way or another to the overall proportions of the pear shape. Now he knows he can wear pin checked suits if he wants. They won't help, but they won't hurt.

Whatever the shape of his physique, a man can abstractly test out patterns in this way without bothering to try on one article of clothing.

Two other important considerations, though. First, the scale of the pattern. As remarked, pin checks, being small in scale, are always safer than larger-scaled patterns like the houndstooth. Guideline number two relates to the degree of contrast within a pattern. A glen plaid, for example, which usually consists of squares of small woven checks alternating with same-sized squares of larger checks, can be either subtle or brash, depending upon the colors used. Harmonious colors tend to blend together, so they aren't dangerous. Boldly contrasting ones are more attention-grabbing and are more difficult for difficult physiques.

The whole premise that only certain body types can wear certain patterns is based on a somewhat conservative approach to menswear that originated in Britain and was transplanted here.

"In English tailoring," notes Alan Flusser, a behind-the-scenes men's designer who emerged into the spotlight this year, "to be able to spot someone's suit down the street is anathema. Really standing out in the crowd vulgarizes the concept of dressing well."

Since American men have lately shown themselves willing to draw more attention to themselves, if only to stand out a little from the crowd, maybe the aristocratic English point of view will crumble. One influential designer, Sal Cesariani, thinks the crumbling has already begun. "Subtle style was and is a reflection of the early '70s, when the best dressed men dressed conservatively," he says. "But clothes reflect the times. In the latter '70s, to secure their place in America's changing atmosphere, many men are refusing to be confined to what has been tradition. The ideas of classics and tradition are still involved, but the classics are being re-classified. I call the approach freedom classics." (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Sweaters and comfort

By Judy Love

When it comes to fashion, most men choose comfort over style, much to their ladies' chagrin. Have it his way, and yours, with a handsome sweater you knit yourself.

Casual is the name of the male fashion game this season. The top designers are showing neat, loosely constructed clothing inspired by a carefree attitude toward dressing. This pullover sweater with a button front captures that look and feeling and appeals to any man, Beau Brummel or not.

Designed to be worn with or without a shirt or turtleneck, this sweater suits any activity or occasion. It's just the thing for early football games, autumn garden work, on-the-job and at-home warmth. Warning: he may never take it off!

Plan ahead so you'll have plenty of time to knit a sweater for every man on your Christmas gift list, too. Stock up on 1 and three-quarter ounce balls of Buccilla Spice-Sport yarn, and size 4 and size 2 needles. That's all you'll need to make your men candidates for the best dressed list.

To receive instructions for the sweater, send 50 cents to Stitchin' Time, Box 503, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. Ask for booklet S507, and don't forget to include your name, address and zip code.

Pat tribute to quick lunch 'temples'

By Norman Nadel

NEW YORK (NEA) - Scoff not at John Baeder for painting only diners. Edgar Degas captured ballet dancers. George Albers immortalized squares. And Claude Monet, who for a period was obsessed with haystacks, devoted his late years to his garden at Giverny.

So Baeder is in distinguished company. And for a man who began painting only six years ago, he's come right along. His quick lunch images already hang in museums and a number of private collections. His large oils sell for about $7,500, with one having gone for $10,000; and a watercolor such as one showing the interior of Curley's Diner in Stamford, Conn., is priced at $1,800.

Now his first book, "Diners" (Abrams, $7.95) is being delivered to the stores. Like "Gnomes" (also from Abrams) which became and stayed a best-seller, this could be one of those rare art books which everybody vastly enjoys. In addition to 117 illustrations, 50 of which are in full color, "Diners" gains much from Baeder's breezily informal, anecdotal and exuberant text. He might be no literary giant, but his enthusiasm comes through engagingly.

Yet neither price nor popularity provides more positive proof of his artistry than the truth so strong in his work. This transplanted native Georgian, struck with the wonder of diners ever since he ate at the Majestic in Atlanta when he was five, has the gift of total honesty with his subjects and with himself.

The first kind of honesty reveals itself in flawless details, such as the parking-lot puddle reflecting the Coca-Cola sign on the Chateau Diner in Lowell, Mass.; the weeds growing through the sidewalk in front of The Little Nell in Jefferson, Mo.; the utility wires garlanded about The White Castle in Elizabeth, N.J.

In fact, Baeder's explicit pictorialism has earned him the description of "photo-realist" from critics, though he vigorously denies the title. "I can't stand all those labels," he mutters. He does in fact work from color photographs, and he was taking pictures of diners long before he started painting them.

The camera, like the brushes and oils, helps him to articulate his honesty with himself, which comes through as an unabashed love for whichever diner or obscure sandwich shop he happens to be involved with. The total effect is one to make you exclaim: "Yes, it's exactly right!" even when it's a diner you'd never seen. But you'd seen others like it, and you sense, the essential truth of what he has depicted.

No kid (he'll turn 40 come Christmas Eve), John Baeder had been an advertising art director before he quit his job and started painting in April, 1972. It was an upheaval in more ways than one. Six weeks later his wife left him.

Some time earlier he'd started collecting old postcards, buying them at flea markets. "I began to think 'Gee, these would make interesting paintings,'" he relates. "I was getting involved with the roadside gas stations, diners and hotels. I found sort of a relic quality about them, and started doing postcard paintings.

"From postcards I went to live diners about 1973. In the early days I'd go off on a quest every weekend; a total quest for diners, just looking at them. Although I knew where some were, what I liked best was going off into the unknown — just driving along — and not asking any questions and letting them come to me. I felt as if I were a true archeologist; I felt like I was digging, and when one would come to me, I felt very happy, very high.

"Then I'd start taking pictures of it, get acquainted, and if it was open I'd go in. If the light wasn't right I'd go back on other occasions. I became friends with a couple of other diner maniacs. Their passion was involved in another area of the diner; usually historical and architectural. I was looking at them as temples. I still go looking for them. I think of my work as an act of preservation, and I feel I have to preserve more."

Diners date from 1872, when Walter Scott in Providence, R.I., put food-serving equipment aboard a horse-drawn freight wagon. Sam Jones, one of Scott's customers, liked the idea and built a few lunch wagons himself, as Baeder relates in his book. Thomas Buckley of Worcester, Mass., went to marble counters, mirrors and etched windows. From wagons, the next step was discarded trolley cars and railroad diners. Charlie Gemme, who ran The Worcester Lunch Car Company for 55 years, pioneered the classic diner design.

Baeder has been compared to Edward Hopper, probably because Hopper's "Nighthawks" (1942), a lunch counter at night as seen from the street, is a similar subject. However, they are worlds apart, especially with that example. Hopper was painting loneliness. Baeder, the painterly archeologist, sees his diners through affectionate eyes. He perceives their dignity. The artist knows that for each of the 100-plus he has painted, there are many more waiting to be "preserved." If you see Baeder's new book, or even if you don't, you might start looking afresh at diners, sandwich spots and other natively American "temples," as he calls them.

So if you see one that you like, drop him a line or send him a picture (John Baeder, P.O. Box 5174, FDR Station, New York City, 10022). He'll want to know about it, and maybe paint it.

Increase granted

The Public Utility Commission, Austin, recently granted a $124.5 million increase to Southwestern Bell Telephone Company.

The commission reports that the latest increase will not effect residential and basic business service rates. There will be no increase in long distance rates, directory assistance charges, pay telephones or WATS service.

The new rates will affect customers moves, connections and or changes in service. The new rates became effective on August 14.

JOHN BAEDER CALLS America's vanishing diners "temples," and sees each of his more than 100 diner paintings as an act of preservation. Above, the Pullman Diner in Arlington, Mass.

Florida may soon have new crown

By THOMAS E. SLAUGHTER

Associated Press Writer
TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Florida, renowned for its beautiful beaches and temperate climate, soon may hold a new distinction — execution capital of the nation.

More than one-fourth of all death row inmates in the United States are awaiting execution in Florida. The NAACP Legal Defense Fund says of 408 people under the death sentence 115 are in Florida; 79 are in Texas; 72 in Georgia and 36 in Alabama. The numbers drop off sharply after these four Southern states.

turned its landmark decision that ruled nearly every death penalty statute in the U.S. as unconstitutional.

In 1976, the U.S. Supreme Court let stand Florida's new law because it allowed judges to deviate from jury sentences in murder trials.

Death penalty opponents also claim the statute is a form of class punishment, inflicted mostly on blacks and the poor, particularly when murder victims are white. They cite these statistics:

— About 42 percent of Florida's death row inmates are black, although blacks comprise only 15.8 percent of the state's population.

— The murder victim was white in 133 of 143 death-sentence cases since 1972, although about half of all homicides recorded each year in Florida involve black victims.

— The state executed 132 blacks since 1924 and only 64 whites.

— Florida never has executed a white man for killing a black man.

Spenkelnik, who is white, was convicted of killing a white man.

Attorney General Robert Shevin, a Democratic gubernatorial candidate and vocal death-sentence supporter, dismisses these statistics, saying they only prove that blacks commit more crimes than whites.

Classic strike develops against papers

By CRAIG AMMERMAN

Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Management's insistence on cost-cutting and a union's unwillingness to surrender jobs has developed into a classic and protracted strike against three of the country's largest newspapers.

The strike began 18 days ago when the men who operate the newspapers' presses walked out after the publishers posted new working conditions which ultimately would have meant the loss of jobs for nearly half the 1,550 members of the union local.

Police report

An accident occurred at the corner of Texas and Frost. Teresa F. Story, 608 Deanne Drive, was in collision with a vehicle registered to John Sanchez, 628 N. Frost. No injuries were reported.

While on routine patrol officers observed subjects in a vehicle parked at a service station on West Brown Street. The subjects were found to be juveniles in possession of marijuana. Several cans of beer were also present in the car. They were arrested and charged with possession of marijuana and minor in possession. They were brought to the police station, their parents were called and they were released to their parents.

Ronnie Jenkins, 312 N. Wells, reported that someone stole his bicycle in front of Sambos Restaurant.

Rudolph Taylor, 621 N. Dwight, was in collision with Steven Deathrage, 728 N. Dwight. No citations were issued.

Derrell Winegar, assistant manager of the Alco store, 1227 N. Hobart, reported that someone removed a shopping cart from the parking lot.

Steve K. Gowdy, 1313 N. Hobart reported that someone broke out the left rear window of a 1978 Chevrolet. A pair of wire cutters were used to cut the cable to a one channel roller radio. The estimated value was $265.

Joseph A. Gonnell, 812 S. Cuyler, reported someone used a coat hanger to gain entry into his 1977 Chevrolet. Missing was a company magnetic computer, plastic igloo ice chest, a set of car keys and personal items.

Barry C. Camper, 1131 N. Sumner, apt. 220, reported someone probably used a coat hanger to gain entry into his 1973 Ford. Missing was a 23 channel citizens band radio. The estimated value was $125.

There was an accident with injuries at 1900 N. Lynn. Jack Edward Hilton, 2109 Lynn, collided with Ruby Davis, 1912 Lea. Both were taken to private doctors.

An officer was dispatched to 601 S. Cuyler where Alvin King reported someone had taken a 20 inch chain from the company truck.

Criminal mischief took place in the 500 and 700 block of Kingsmill. Someone turned off the fuse boxes and removed the fuses. This also occurred at the Fellowship Baptist Church. In addition to the tampering with the fuse boxes at the church, five windows had been broken with rocks.

In a 24 hour period the police department responded to 55 calls.

Since then, no progress has been made in sporadic talks between the publishers and the pressmen — indeed, the key issues have hardly been discussed — and four other unions have officially joined the strike.

No negotiations are scheduled. And although it is likely that talks will be held in the coming week, some of the key participants say privately that they doubt any serious discussions will take place until after Labor Day.

The void created by the missing 3.3 million daily copies of the New York Times, Daily News and New York Post has spawned three strike dailies, with a fourth scheduled to debut Monday. None of them is expected to survive beyond the strike.

But the three established dailies may have trouble recapturing business now going elsewhere. Some suburban dailies have increased circulation and picked up additional advertising, and existing weekly publications in the city have shown dramatic increases. In previous strikes, these publications have held onto some of their gains.

In 1962, there was a 114-day strike against nine daily newspapers. Today, there are only three established dailies and none is an investor's dream.

The afternoon New York Post, owned by Australian Rupert Murdoch, reported it lost $10 million in 1977 despite a circulation of 620,000.

The morning Daily News, the nation's largest circulation newspaper with more than 1.8 million copies, reportedly made less than 1 percent profit after taxes last year and has been cutting costs.

The New York Times, the country's third largest newspaper with daily sales of almost 900,000, had one of its better years in recent times in 1977, yet made a profit of less than 6 percent of its revenues.

Davis back behind bars

By DON HARRISON

Associated Press Writer
FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — It began about 8:30 last Sunday morning. A blue Cadillac eased into a restaurant parking lot and a small, wiry man in checkered slacks and pullover climbed out and casually peered into the mirror-tinted rear window of a nearby van.

Satisfied, he returned to his car and drove to the other side of the parking lot where a large, powerfully-built companion waited anxiously; hoping, perhaps praying, his nervousness wouldn't show.

From the tiny tape recorder affixed to David McCrory's lower back would come most of the evidence prosecutors claim is sufficient to pack millionaire industrialist Cullen Davis off to prison for up to 99 years.

He is charged with plotting to have District Judge Joe Eidson murdered and carrying a prohibitive weapon, a .22-caliber pistol with a silencer. Eidson, who police said posed for a phony "dead" picture to convince Davis to pay McCrory $25,000, has been presiding over Davis' four-year-old divorce.

On Aug. 17, McCrory — hustler, karate expert, high school dropout — contacted the FBI and blurted out an almost unbelievable scheme allegedly masterminded by the unassuming oilman to hire the deaths of 15 people.

The so-called "hit list" included two district judges plus three witnesses who testified against Davis when he was found innocent of capital murder last November in Amarillo. However, he still faces one murder charge and two attempted murder charges.

Last Thursday, McCrory told District Judge Arthur Tipps, who is presiding over the hearing to determine whether Davis will be free on bond, that he contacted federal authorities through an unnamed source.

"I think the only reason he told anybody at all about this is because he was afraid he was on the list himself," said Tarrant County District Attorney

Astro-Graph

By Bernice Bede Osol

August 28, 1978

Several interesting new friends may enter your life through unusual circumstances this coming year. Initially you may not like one another, but the relationships will improve with time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) It behooves you to treat others generously today, but you may carry it to extremes and impulsively give away something you'll later wish you hadn't. Like to find out more of what lies ahead for you? Send for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter by mailing $5 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't give things a lick and a promise today concerning important career matters. Half measures could be worse than none at all.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't permit grudges to shadow your outlook in dealing with someone you're not fond of. Give today's happenings a fresh start.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Keep an eye out for a pal who's having trouble in business today. You may be able to help him, let his act together.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

Unless both parties aims are in complete harmony today, a serious misunderstanding could arise in a joint venture. Pull together, not apart.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) It's wise to carefully weigh and analyze important decisions today, but be wary of being too negative. Look for the sunny side, too.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Today you may uncharacteristically try to butter up someone you think can do you good at the expense of another. It could cost you an ally.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Someone quite different from your usual helper may offer to do something nice for you today. Be careful, however, you don't bring someone who's incapable into the act.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It's very likely you'll spend so much time tossing a clever idea about today that you'll never get around to acting. Overanalyzing causes paralysis.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You'll have a unique opportunity to add to your resources today. However, you're more apt to opt for a good time rather than for the opportunity.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Unfortunately, you're likely to put your interests above those of others today and thus create an abundance of ill will. Try not to be self-serving.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today you could be a trifle too communicative. Information you should keep to yourself you're likely to pass on to the wrong people.

Porter ire spells doom for Rangers

By RICK SCOTT
Associated Press Writer
ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Maybe the baseball fans at Arlington Stadium will quit bothering Kansas City catcher Darrell Porter, who was at the center of melee that emptied both benches in a game here last year.

"One fan kept telling me tonight I was only a Double A league player," he said. "That made me mad. All the fans here really get me mad. I can hear them."

Porter responded Sunday night by belting two solo home runs and a double off Texas starter Doc Medich that keyed Kansas City to a 4-2 victory over the Rangers and boosted the Royals back into first place in the American League West.

The victory snapped a four-game Kansas City losing streak and ended a four-game winning streak for Texas, which had crawled to within 4½ games of first place in the AL West.

Kansas City also avoided a three-game sweep by the Rangers, who won the first two games.

Porter went six for 10 against Texas pitchers in the series, had three home runs and drove in six runs.

Porter's first homer Sunday led off the Royals' seventh inning and tied the score 1-1. Medich, 7-8, got the next batter out, but then Amos Otis put the Royals ahead to stay, 2-1, with his 16th homer of the season.

Porter ripped another Medich pitch over the fence with one out in the ninth for his 13th of the season. The Royals got their final run when Al Cowens singled with two out, stole second and scored on a single by Otis that chased Medich from the mound.

The Rangers took a 1-0 lead when Bobby Bonds led off the second with a triple and scored on Dennis Leonard's wild pitch. Al Oliver added a solo homer in the ninth when Leonard, 15-15, needed relief help from Al Hrabosky to get the final out.

"It was a big win for us," said Royals manager Whitey Herzog. "We got pitching, the long ball and baserunners, things we haven't had lately. If they (Texas) had won, it would have been a big win for them."

For Leonard, who allowed nine hits, watching the last out from the dugout, with two Texas runners on base, was the hardest part. "I pace up and down. It's hard to watch because I don't have any control over the outcome," Hrabosky got his 17th save.

Texas manager Billy Hunter said he was "encouraged" by the Rangers' ninth-inning rally that fell short. "Now we've got to play Toronto like they were Kansas City," he said of the Rangers' next foe.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Coach Bear Bryant and members of his Alabama football team agree that it's flattering to be picked No. 1, but it would be more important in January when the final poll is taken.

Alabama was picked in The Associated Press poll during the weekend as the team most likely to win the college championship this season.

Bryant said, "It's very flattering, but it doesn't mean a thing right now. When it matters in January, and sometimes it doesn't matter then."

The coach noted that the Crimson Tide started the season at the top of the poll in 1966, won all its games and bombed Nebraska 34-7 in the Sugar Bowl — and wound up third in the final ranking.

The Tide was No. 2 behind Notre Dame last January. The Fighting Irish were picked fifth in the AP's preseason poll.

Others on the list, in order following Alabama, were: Arkansas, Penn State, Oklahoma, Notre Dame, Michigan, Ohio State, Texas, Southern California and Nebraska.

Alabama opens the season against Nebraska in Birmingham in a Sept. 2 nationally televised game.

The second 10 teams on the list were: Washington, UCLA, Louisiana State, Pittsburgh, Kentucky, Texas A&M, Florida State, Clemson, North Carolina and Iowa State.

Alabama had 31 of 63 first-place votes and 1,215 of a possible 1,280 points in the nationwide poll of sports writers and broadcasters. Notre Dame Coach Dan Devine said that sometime during the season someone would have to take the title from the Irish on the field.

"Some of Bryant's players had these reactions to the No. 1 ranking: Quarterback Jeff Rutledge —

"It doesn't mean anything now. Although it's nice to be picked No. 1, it's what we do during the year that counts." Defensive tackle Marty Lyons — "I think it's good. It's a reflection on the entire team and that should give some of our younger players some extra confidence."

Wheeler out to defend crown

Second in a series
By JOE BLOBAUM
Pampa News Sports Editor
WHEELER — Joe Allen knew full well what he was stepping into when he decided to take the head football coaching job at Wheeler.

The Mustangs had won the 1977 Class B state crown and lost two All-Staters to graduation. But with three other All-State players returning for the '78 campaign, the Mustangs' fans had plenty of reason to expect another run at the title.

"There's a lot of pressure," Allen said, "but I knew people would be expecting us to have a good season."

"This town loves athletics," he added later. "It's a good situation and I'm glad to be here. The administration and townspeople back you and you can't ask for more than that."

With players like guard Mike Lee, quarterback Myron Jolly and tailback Marvin Grimes — all of whom made the '77 Class B All-State team — returning from last year's championship squad, Mustang backers should have many opportunities to exercise their cheering lungs.

"All three of them lead pretty well," Allen said of the trio. "But our senior bunch as a whole is our real strength."

Upperclassmen like safety and alternate back Kent Vise, strong guard Tom Christner, tight end-defensive end Sam Schaffer and center Miles Farnsworth will form the nucleus of the Mustangs, but Allen said several juniors and a few sophomores will be expected to fill some important gaps.

"I know they're going to do real well," the former Denton assistant coach said. "We could be real good if our young people come through."

Among the younger Wheeler players Allen is looking to for help are sophomore fullback Benny Baker (190 lbs.) and tackles Vic Bradford (junior) and Russell Gaines (sophomore).

Junior defensive end Russell Gibson (who "can move," according to his coach), could also see action as a utility lineman. At split end, juniors Kevin Andis and Mike Evans will share time and stocky 175-pounder Brett Mosley, also a junior, will start out as the Mustang wingback.

"We're gonna be a basic running team," Allen said. "We'll throw when we like to and hopefully not when we have to."

Quarterback Jolly, described as an "all-around good athlete" by Allen, is probably a better runner than passer, but the Mustang coach said his passing has been improving.

The rest of Wheeler's offense will consist of "a lot of play action passing. We plan to have a good running attack and throw off it. We'll use the basic I, but with more misdirection than they've used in the past."

"I hope we'll have a more well-balanced attack this year," Allen said. "We'll work more on a weak side attack."

Allen has installed an "easy-to-learn" split-4 defense. "It's good against the run and most teams run with the ball in Class B," he commented.

Most of his players will go both ways, but "We try to have good substitutes in each spot. Our defense has got to come along for us to be really good," Allen said.

"They're all good kids, all quality people," he said. "Optimism and enthusiasm are my strong points as a coach and this team was pretty well disciplined to start with."

As far as competition within the district goes, Allen said he expects a tough time from Groom, Booker and Miami — in that order.

"Everybody's got to beat Groom to win it and this year shouldn't be any different," he said.

Defense, then, seems to be the only question mark on the Mustang squad.

"If we can play the split-4 defense as well as I think we can, we'll be good," Allen said. "I think we have the horses on offense."

Wheeler's schedule:
Sept. 8—Shamrock
Sept. 15—at Chillicothe
Sept. 22—Phillips
Oct. 6—Texline
Oct. 13—at Miami

Weekend sports in brief

By The Associated Press
SOCCER
EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Dennis Tueart scored two goals and Giorgio Chinaglia scored one to carry the Cosmos to a 3-1 triumph over the Tampa Bay Rowdies for their second consecutive North American Soccer League championship.

BASEBALL
WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. — Taiwan won its seventh Little League World Series with an 11-1 victory over the American West representative from Danville, Calif.

GOLF
PINEHURST, N.C. — Tom Watson built a commanding lead and held on against a triple challenge for a 1-stroke victory in the Hall of Fame Golf Classic.

Watson secured his fourth triumph this year with a final round 71 for a 277 total. Hale Irwin, Tom Kite and Howard Twitty all finished 1 stroke behind golf's leading money winner this year. ST. PAUL, Minn. — Shelley Hamlin sank a six-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole for her first women's tour victory in the $75,000 Patty Berg Golf Classic at Keller Golf Course. Hamlin shot a 4-under-par 69 for a 54-hole total of 208 to edge Kathy Whitworth by 1 stroke.

SWIMMING
BERLIN — Tracy Caulkins raised her total of gold medals to five and world records to four as U.S. swimmers raised their gold medal total to 20 at the World Swimming Championships.

Caulkins, of Nashville, Tenn., tied the world mark of 2 minutes, 9.87 seconds in winning the women's 200-meter butterfly, then helped the American women establish a world mark of 3:43.43 in the 400-meter freestyle.

TENNIS
ATLANTA — Stan Smith won the Atlanta Journal-Constitution Open International Tennis Tournament after unseeded 19-year-old Elliot Teltscher was forced to withdraw from the third set of the final match because of illness.

Teltscher, who turned professional three months ago after a brilliant amateur career at UCLA, won the first set 6-4. Smith, the No. 3 seed, won the second set 6-1 and was ahead 2-1 in the third when Teltscher withdrew because of stomach problems.

MAHWAH, N.J. — Top-seeded Virginia Wade beat third-seeded Kerry Reid 1-6, 6-1, 6-4 in the finals of the $75,000 Bergen County Women's Tennis Classic at Ramapo College. Third place went to 15-year-old Tracy Austin, who beat Regina Marsikova of Czechoslovakia 7-6 (7-4) in a single-set playoff.

BROOKLINE, Mass. — Defending champion Manuel Orantes of Spain led the way into the singles final of the 51st U.S. Pro Tennis Championships at Longwood with a 6-3, 6-2 drubbing of Arthur Ashe. Also making the finals was Harold Solomon, who recovered from a shaky start to defeat Corrado Barazzutti of Italy 3-6, 6-4, 6-0.

Landry: No comparison between Dallas in Oiler, Steeler games

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer
IRVING, Texas (AP) — Tom Landry says there is no comparison between the Dallas Cowboys in their 16-13 victory over Pittsburgh Saturday and their 27-13 loss a week earlier to Houston.

"The guys hustled and worked tonight. We played football tonight and we did not last Saturday," Landry said after the victory over Pittsburgh, which finished exhibition play for both teams.

Not that the Cowboy-Steeler game in Texas Stadium didn't have its disappointments for Landry. The Cowboys threatened twice in the first half and again in the third quarter, but got only one field goal out of it. But Roger Staubach wiped most of the painful memories away, taking the Cowboys 71 yards in 11 plays and 48 yards in six plays in the last three minutes to turn defeat into victory.

Staubach, who connected on 25 of 46 passes for 334 yards, his second-best passing performance in the pros, hit Drew Pearson with a 17-yard touchdown pass with 2:46 left and Tony Hill with a 15-yard scoring strike with 31 seconds remaining.

"Dallas has a big-play offense and it played well at the end, that's all," said Pittsburgh linebacker Jack Lambert. "There were a couple of big plays, and they deserved to win."

Terry Bradshaw completed 5 of 10 passes for 98 yards the first half, but only 2 of 9 the last half for 38 yards the last half and was sacked three times for 32 yards in loss.

Bradshaw hit Lynn Swann on passes of 20 and 35 yards to set up Rocky Bleier's two-yard plunge for a 6-0 lead in the first quarter, but Roy Gerela missed his third try for the extra point after offside calls voided his first two kicks.

Staubach was intercepted once, when linebacker Jack Ham deflected his pass into the arms of defensive back Tony Dungy. Dungy took the interception and dashed 16 yards into the end zone for Pittsburgh's other touchdown and a 13-3 lead.

Bradshaw, playing with a mask to protect a broken nose, went all the way for Pittsburgh. Staubach sat out only the last half of the second quarter. Danny White completed 4 of 6 passes for 23 yards, giving up an interception to Mike Wagner that gave Pittsburgh the ball on the Dallas 46 in the final minute of the first half.

Bradshaw threw a bomb to John Stallworth, who outleaped

Cliff Harris and Aaron Kyle in the end zone for the apparent touchdown reception, but an illegal motion call wiped it out.

Staubach brought the Cowboys from their 35 to the Pittsburgh 25 late in the third quarter, but three straight penalties nullified completions of 2, 22 and 45 yards, and a long field goal try failed.

Jim Brown, who starred for the Cleveland Browns, is the all-time pro football rushing leader with 12,312 yards.

Roller coaster building spree grows

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Old-timers at New York's Coney Island like to tell the story about the West Virginia coal miner suffering from apnoea — a psychological inability to speak — whose doctor told him to ride the amusement park's Cyclone roller coaster.

After a 90-second, gut-twisting ride, the story goes, the man stumbled off the car and said: "I feel sick."

The Cyclone, built in 1928 in the first "Golden Age" of amusement parks, was certainly one of the biggest coasters of its day and still looms menacingly over its now somewhat rundown surroundings.

But the miner — perhaps an apocryphal character — wouldn't have to go to New York for a cure now. After a hiatus of almost 50 years, amusement parks across the country are on a roller coaster building boom in what seems to be a race to claim the fastest, highest, longest, steepest and generally most hair-raising ride.

Bearing such fanciful names as "Rebel Yell," "Great American Scream Machine" and "Montezuma's Revenge," these new coasters — many built of steel instead of the traditional wood — often feature such extras as one or two 360-degree loops or multiple corkscrew configurations. The scarier-looking the ride, the longer the line.

The "roller coaster arms race" is what self-described amusement park expert Gary Kyriazi calls it. He is the author of a pictorial history titled "The Great American Amusement Parks," and has ridden nearly 200 coasters all over the country.

Earlier this summer, Kyriazi spoke at the first national roller coaster conference at Ohio's Cedar Point amusement park. The "Coastermania" meeting drew hundreds of coaster fans for seminars and rides on the brand-new "Gemini" coaster — the park's sixth.

Arrow Development Co. of Mountain View, Calif., which built the "Gemini," also can testify to the coaster's renewed popularity. Since 1974, when it built the pioneer "Corkscrew" roller coaster for Knott's Berry Farm in Anaheim, Calif., Arrow has sold some 30 large roller coasters at an average cost of $3 million.

Before then, said Arrow vice president Terry Brown, sales of a much less spectacular coaster averaged about one or two a year.

"The roller coaster is the biggest thrill ride and it always has been," Brown said. He said he thinks the current coaster building boom results from greater competition following an amusement park building boom set off by Disneyland's success in the mid-1950s.

"Some of these parks, several years ago, kind of had the market to themselves," Brown said. "Now they need to compete with their neighbors and so they look for things they can advertise or promote. . . . And if someone can advertise the biggest, the scariest, the most colossal ride, then so much the better."

What's behind the coaster craze? Why do millions of Americans ride open cars down incredibly steep inclines at speeds up to 60 mph? "It's the excitement, the danger that's involved," said Robert Montgomery of San Diego, who recently drove some 150 miles to ride the new "Colossus" at Magic Mountain park near Los Angeles. The "Colossus," billed as "the world's greatest roller coaster," has two consecutive drops of more than 100 feet and guarantees riders the sensation of weightlessness 11 times.

"Of course, if I really thought the ride was dangerous I wouldn't ride it," Montgomery said. His comments meshed nicely with Kyriazi's view of coastermania.

"They're kind of flirting with an imagined danger," said Kyriazi. He added that some psychologists believe coasters and other thrill rides fill people's need for adventure without the expense or expertise needed for such things as mountain climbing or flying.

The dangers are not totally imaginary. This summer, several amusement park rides were scenes of fatal accidents.

Three people died when a steel car plunged 70 feet from the Sky Ride at Six Flags over Mid-America in Eureka, Mo., and a man died in a similar accident on the Eagle's Flight at Magic Mountain. An 11-year-old boy fell out of a coaster in Wildwood, N.J., and died of brain injuries, and a 13-year-old boy fell to his death when a door opened in a cage on the Skydiver ride at Peony Park in Omaha, Neb.

But industry spokesmen say amusement park rides are generally safer than automobiles. A study by the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton Applied Research Center showed that in February-November 1977 there were 63 accidents requiring hospitalization on rides at 400 parks surveyed — one accident for every 6 million rides taken.

Terrence Cullinan, a consultant at SRI (Stanford Research Institute) International who specializes in leisure, said many of the accidents are caused by riders who do not obey instructions — like the boy whose arm was injured when he stuck it out of the "Mind Bender" roller coaster at Six Flags Over Georgia.

As for the mechanically caused accidents, Cullinan says, "people get hurt whenever there are people and machines involved." He noted that Disneyland, in 20 years of operation, has had only one fatality.

Safety standards vary by state. In some states, like California, rides must be inspected by state officials. Other states have no regulations, leaving safety to the park and its insurance company.

On the federal level, a November 1977 court decision stemming from a fatality on a type of ride known as the Zipper gave the Consumer Product Safety Commission authority to regulate amusement park rides.

The commission is now trying to have the Zipper declared unsafe as the result of several fatalities. Other ride accidents are being investigated, said Mana Jennings, a commission attorney.

Meanwhile, the International Association of Amusement Parks and Attractions, representing about 750 amusement parks and other attractions, is working to develop a voluntary safety code.

Klan creates tension in Mississippi

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Racial tension is simmering in three Mississippi towns, with the Ku Klux Klan holding ever more strident rallies in reaction to well-organized black boycotts of white merchants.

This weekend, 12 pickets in a boycott-connected march were arrested, including four Roman Catholic nuns. At a Klan gathering, four Klansmen were emboldened to strip off their hoods and reveal themselves as a businessman and three local police officers.

"There's no such thing as the New South," says Alfred "Skip" Robinson, a contractor and veteran civil rights leader who heads the United League of Mississippi. "There's more racism in Mississippi in 1978 than there was in 1962."

Indeed, the situation is strangely reminiscent of Mississippi's racial troubles in the 1960s.

A boycott of white-owned businesses in Tupelo and Okolona, spearheaded by the United League and punctuated by weekly League marches and occasional Klan counter-rallies, has spawned arrests and tense confrontations.

The latest arrests came in Lexington, a town of 2,700 people about 150 miles from Tupelo in the central part of the state, where other groups are leading the boycott, also against white-owned stores.

The protests, which began in February, stem from the Tupelo police department's refusal to dismiss two captains who were held responsible by a federal judge for beating a black inmate.

The officers were demoted and transferred to the fire department. They eventually resigned, but by that time demands for their ouster had coupled with broader economic demands and the boycott began.

Lexington's boycott, also by blacks upset over alleged police brutality and insufficient minority hiring, is in its third month.

On Saturday, police claimed the marching pickets were blocking pedestrians on the sidewalks and charged 10 people, including the nuns, with disorderly conduct. Two men were charged with threatening an officer and assaulting an officer.

The nuns, members of a Franciscan order that has done social work in the black community and actively supports the boycott, have been sharply criticized by some residents.

The nuns said last week that men parked in cars outside their house had insulted them and eggs had been thrown at their car. The harassment prompted a rare news conference by the Rev. Joseph Brunini, bishop of the Diocese of Jackson.

The Klan has reacted to the new black activity with increased action of its own. Klansmen have not appeared in Lexington, but in Okolona Saturday, some three dozen Klansmen watched silently from behind a row of helmeted police as about 300 blacks marched downtown to demand more public and private sector jobs.

Later that night, the Klansmen reassembled for a rally about 20 miles away in Tupelo, a city of 25,000 residents whose businesses have been boycotted for six months.

About 70 Klansmen were joined at the rally by some 200 sympathizers.

The grand titan of the Tupelo chapter unmasked himself to reveal he was local businessman Bill Howard, who had remained hooded at all previous public appearances and used an assumed name.

Three Klansmen from Sallisito and Baldwin revealed that they were members of their local police forces.

The Klan has contended throughout the unrest in Tupelo that it is primarily trying to protect whites from harassment at the hands of black demonstrators.

Black leaders have vowed to continue their protest until their demands for affirmative action hiring plans are adopted.

UNINVITED GUEST
RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Nancy Thompson discovered recently that an uninvited guest had moved into her attic.

"It really scared me," she said, recalling how she opened the door to the attic and saw a large, dark form at the top of the stairs. She said, turned out to be a "huge nest, about four feet tall and three feet wide at the base."

F.R. Scott of the Richmond Audubon Society said, "I'm 99 percent sure that it was a starling. Starlings like to fill in holes and it seems that this one went in and tried to fill up the whole attic."

Miss Thompson plans to move soon, so she must remove the nest.

"I'll put it out in the yard so the builder can reoccupy it, and I'll try not to damage it too much," she said. "I just hate the thought of tearing someone's house down."

Action-line columns in local newspapers can be valuable shopping tools. Regular reading of the columns can give you an idea of which companies are convinced you must look for outside aid.

That aid is available from a number of sources, including the action-line columns and consumer agencies already mentioned.

The National Association of Attorneys General says that 90 percent of state attorneys general offices have consumer complaint-handling operations. The National District Attorneys Association has a special program to combat economic crimes. The experimental project is now in its fourth year; further information is available from the Economic Crime Project Center, National District Attorneys Association, 1900 L St. N.W., Suite 607, Washington, D.C., 20036.

No deaths were confirmed, but the Red Cross said there were dozens of injured and unconfirmed reports of fatalities.

Guardians clashed with street demonstrators in Jinotepe, 35 miles south of Managua, where there has been virtual street war for three days, and in Diriamba, about five miles north of Jinotepe.

Shooting was reported in Matagalpa, about 100 miles north of Managua. A Red Cross spokesman said thousands of demonstrators were building bonfires and that both demonstrators and guardsmen were erecting street barricades.

Thousands of demonstrators also were reported in the streets of Leon Sunday night.

Political opponents of Somoza predicted Managua would be paralyzed today by the general strike after 34 of the country's 36 chambers of commerce voted Sunday to back the four-day-old walkout. They urged their members to close down their businesses until Somoza resigns.

The strike, which has been more effective in the provinces than in the capital, was launched Friday by the Broad opposition Front, a coalition of a dozen political parties and three labor groups.

A government employee told The Associated Press people in his office were worried about their situation if the strike brought about Somoza's resignation.

San Clemente, Calif. (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon, sponsoring his first political event since resigning the presidency four years ago, entertained more than 400 Republicans at a fund-raising reception at his seaside estate.

State Rep. Robert Badham said Nixon limited in his brief speech Sunday to reminiscences about his Orange County past, including the early years when he practiced law in La Habra.

Badham, representing the United Republican Finance Committee of Orange County, said Nixon gave no indication of plans for his own political future. Nixon resigned as president in August 1974 because of the Watergate scandal.

Nixon, with his wife, Pat, at his side, greeted the 420 invited guests as they arrived at La Casa Pacifica, once known as the Western White House. The dinner was closed to the press.

The Republicans were served Alaskan king crab and Mexican food and some were given tours of the grounds. The guests were entertained by a strolling mariachi band.

The $250-a-plate affair raised more than $100,000, Badham said.

Meanwhile, Newsweek magazine reported Sunday that Nixon is among the dignitaries expected to attend a memorial service in New York on Sept. 13

Buyers should complain about faults

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
How much money did you throw out today?

Careless, lazy purchases can cost thousands of dollars — dollars that could easily be saved.

Don't hesitate to take the time and trouble to complain about faulty products or services — even if the amount of money involved is small. Nickels and dimes add up.
