Success beyond dreams

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, claiming success "far beyond any expectations" at his Camp David summit, will solicit support from Congress for the Middle East peace blueprint he has signed with Israel's Menachem Begin and Egypt's Anwar Sadat.

Carter was to address Congress tonight in joint session at 8 p.m. EDT.

At an emotion-packed White House ceremony, Carter joined Prime Minister Begin and President Sadat in formally adopting a wide-ranging accord Sunday that Carter said "will provide that Israel may live in peace within secure borders."

Also initialed was a companion document that envisions the negotiation of a peace treaty between Egypt and Israel within three months.

The summit agreements won immediate and nearly unanimous praise from Democrats and Republicans on Capitol Hill. Sen. Richard Stone, D-Fla., chairman of the Middle East subcommittee, called them "an excellent beginning."

But Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., one of a small group of senators invited to the White House for the signing ceremony, expressed concern over possible criticism from Egypt's enemies who he said "will do everything they can to torpedo" the accords.

Although the Congress has no direct role in implementation of the agreements, Carter and his summit partners are seeking moral support for their efforts.

American officials said Carter, Sadat and Begin agreed to nothing that would call for American military involvement in carrying out the Camp David accords.

The dramatic proposal for an Egyptian-Israeli treaty may not sit well with Egypt's Arab neighbors because it would involve a separate peace that would leave unsettled Israel's historic conflict with other Arab neighbors — Jordan, Syria and Lebanon.

Ignoring this and other uncertainties, Begin turned to Sadat and proposed, "Let us promise each other we shall do it earlier than within three months."

Although sharp differences remain, the prospect of peace between Egypt and Israel by Christmas was a major surprise, made more dramatic by the deep secrecy imposed during the negotiations.

Carter, who was flanked by the two Mideast leaders, acknowledged "there are still great difficulties that remain and many hard issues to be settled."

In sketching one of the key agreements, Carter said Israel would end its military rule of the West Bank of the Jordan River over a five-year period, while retaining some military outposts.

The Palestinian Arabs now living under Israeli occupation there and in the Gaza Strip would choose their own "self-governing authority" and participate in negotiations to determine their future.

A major question left unresolved was whether concessions offered by Israel to the Palestinian Arabs will draw Jordan's King Hussein into the peace process.

Carter said he hoped "the foresight and wisdom" demonstrated by Sadat and Begin will guide all nations "as they continue to strive toward peace."

On the Sinai front, Carter said Israel would withdraw its forces more quickly, under terms of the proposed treaty that would make Egypt the first Arab nation to grant formal diplomatic recognition to the 30-year-old Jewish state.

On leaving Camp David at the end of 12 days of marathon talks that often stretched into the small hours of morning, Begin and Sadat beamed and waved toward reporters and photographers as Carter escorted them to a waiting helicopter.

Quake claims 12,000 lives

Aftershocks rumble through Iran

By PHILIP DOPOULOS
Associated Press Writer
TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A series of aftershocks rumbled through northeastern Iran today where 15,000 people were reported dead or injured from an earthquake that demolished 40 villages and badly damaged 60 others on Saturday.

Officials said they feared the death toll from the quake, which measured 7.7 on the Richter scale and was the strongest recorded this year, would rise when reports were received from the more remote areas.

The new tremors caused panic in the region about 400 miles southeast of Tehran and fears of another major quake.

The official Pars news agency said two-thirds of the 12,000 residents of the city of Tabas died and most of the survivors were injured seriously. It said several thousand people in villages surrounding Tabas, epicenter of the quake, were believed buried in the rubble of their homes.

The area is an agricultural region noted for dates, oranges and grain and is located on the edge of the Kaveer Desert.

"Tabas has become a mound of rubble, bent iron beams and dirt," one witness said.

"From each family, only one person has survived," said another.

The national radio and television service said at least 80 percent of the town of Firdaus, about 100 miles east of Tabas, was destroyed and "many" were killed or injured.

Rescue teams continued to pull bodies and a few survivors from the rubble of the flattened towns, but officials said even those who were safe were without shelter.

Officials said most of the injured would be flown to hospitals near Tehran.

The Red Lion and Sun, Iran's Red Cross, dispatched medical supplies, tents and blankets. Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi ordered 700 soldiers to the stricken area to help rescue and medical workers. The soldiers set up field hospitals and distributed food, water and medicine.

Mass burials were ordered as temperatures in the area rose to 90 degrees and bodies decomposed.

The government announced three days of mourning for the quake victims.

The quake struck at 7:38 p.m. Saturday and was felt in two-thirds of the country, even shaking buildings in Tehran. It also was felt in the major cities of Isfahan, Kerman, Rafsanjan and other towns ringing the Kaveer Desert.

Hurricane Greta pounds Honduras coastline

By TOM FENTON
Associated Press Writer
TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Hurricane Greta pounded the northern coast of Honduras with heavy rains and winds up to 125 mph today, following the path of a 1974 storm that killed 6,000 persons.

Amateur radio operators reported heavy rainfall and some flooding along the coast before dawn. But the Red Cross said it had no reports yet of casualties or major damage in the coastal lowlands, the area devastated by floods from Hurricane Fifi four years ago.

The U.S. National Hurricane Center in Miami said the storm, with gale winds extending 150 miles north of the center, was centered at 3 a.m. EDT at the mouth of the Patuca River, on the northeast coast, and was traveling along the coast just north of nearly due west at 10-15 mph.

The hurricane center warned of tides up to 10 feet along the coast and 15 inches or more of rain in the mountains that could cause serious flooding in river valleys.

Emergency warnings were broadcast on commercial and government radio stations, and there were some reports of residents of low-lying areas being evacuated. But many areas are so isolated that such warnings don't reach them. And failure to heed warnings that were given contributed to the heavy toll in 1974.

Radio operators at Puerto Lempira, a poor fishing town of about 7,000 on the northeast coast, reported 1,500 persons were gathered in five large buildings.

Manuel Mora, director-general of the Honduran Red Cross, said low areas on the four Bay Islands, 50 miles off the coast in the Gulf of Honduras, were evacuated, and food was being stockpiled. He said there are large tourist hotels on two of the islands, Roatan and Guanaja, and they probably are full at this time of the year.

Officials of the military government put army, police and Red Cross units on standby as Greta headed along the coast toward the heavily populated Aguan Valley, in northwest Honduras near the Guatemalan border.

San Pedro Sula, on the edge of the valley, is the most important industrial center in Honduras. It was isolated and badly damaged by the 1974 storm.

Honduras has the largest and poorest rural population in Central America. The average annual income is less than $300 and 70 percent of all Hondurans live outside the cities. Their contact with Tegucigalpa, the hilly capital, is limited.

Along the 200-mile stretch of Caribbean coast, three major rivers and many small streams flow down from the mountains and cross two fertile valleys into wide, snake-infested mangrove swamps. Half the country's food is grown in these two valleys.

The situation could become dangerous if, as it did with Fifi, high tides back up the water in the mangrove swamps and block the runoff from the rivers swollen by rain in the mountains.

Hurricane Carmen raked the coast only 10 days before Fifi in 1974 with winds up to 175 mph, but there was no large loss of life because the rainfall and tides did not combine to flood the countryside.

CLOUDY

The forecast for Pampa is clear to partly cloudy today and tonight, turning cooler tomorrow. Today's high will be in the 90s with tonights low in the 60s. Tomorrows high will be in the 80s. The winds are out of the southwest at 15-20 miles per hour with gusts, they will decrease to 10-15 miles per hour tonight.

Gandhi doesn't want job back

BORDEAUX, France (AP) — Former Indian Premier Indira Gandhi says she doesn't want to lead India again if she can help it, but she is sure her party will regain power.

"I have the public with me," she told the Bordeaux newspaper 'Sud-Ouest.

Marcos doesn't like officials

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Imelda R. Marcos says she'd rather visit the Russians than American congressmen.

The Philippines' first lady says 15 U.S. congressmen were rude to her during a July meeting she requested in Washington.

Utility fight costing cities

The fight against a proposed Southwestern Public Service Co. rate increase has so far cost Pampa and 31 other Panhandle cities a total of $43,518.45. That figure represents about 95 percent of the estimated final cost to the cities of the rate case, according to Amarillo city Attorney Don Cheatham.

Pampa's share of the bill is $3,137.40, based on revenue of 35 cents per electric meter in the city. Pampa has 8,964 meters. City Manager Mack Wofford said rather than collect 35 cents from each meter location, the city will take the $3,137.40 from its general fund.

The $43,518.45 cost incurred in the rate case includes expenses for the Amarillo and Dumas city attorneys, fees for three consultants hired by the cities and payment for a transcript of hearings on the case conducted by the Public Utilities Commission in August.

Amarillo, with per meter revenues of $20,026.65, is paying the largest portion of the total rate case cost.

What is a United Way chairman

by PAMTUREK
(Pampa News Staff)

What is a United Way Chairman?

This year he is Vic Raymond, vice president and general manager of Cabot Machinery, husband, and father of three daughters.

What is Cabot Machinery Division?

In reference to United Way, Cabot is the largest single contributor; in 1977 more than $66,000. The company matches each dollar contributed by employees. Raymond was on the United Way Board the first three years he was in Pampa and has continued being active.

Raymond came to Pampa in 1972 as general manager of the Machinery Division and was later made vice president. United Way's goal for Pampa this year is $158,000.

What is Cabot at our local level in Pampa? When asked, one citizen commented, "Oh, you know, they have offices downtown in the Hughes Building... and ya know when you go to Amarillo, they have that green and black place on the right hand side of the road... oh and the shiny silver one farther down with 'Machinery' on top." They have all three.

The Carbon Black 'Pampa Plant' is the "green and black building on the way to Amarillo." This is not the only carbon black plant Cabot owns, it is one of many throughout the world.

Cabot Machinery is the "shiny silver one on down the road."

Each division is separate from the other. They all answer to a different boss in Boston.

Cabot Machinery is a high percentage of Vic Raymond's life: A man puts in eight hours a day and goes home, but his work doesn't stop there. The excitement and disappointments of the day come out at the dinner table or over an evening's cocktail. Perhaps it is easier to sort out the day when it is dark in the moments before going to sleep. Then there are hours waiting in airports, flying to meetings. It is more than an eight hour day.

To watch Vic Raymond walk through the machine shops, fabricating shops, one realizes it must all be worth it. He is proud of the 850 people who work in those shops and the people are proud of their work.

The excitement of the employees or esprit de corps is contagious. While walking through the facilities employees stop to talk and Raymond stops.

In the cutting shed, Raymond stops to watch and talk while a row of torches are programmed on a computer to cut a specific design.

He says "hi" upon walking into the building where the "carriers" are built. "Looks nice in here. When it's clean it's easier for the others to work," Raymond comments to a fellow worker. A big grin... saying I'm proud to keep it this way.

Big machinery gives off a feeling of power and pride. Proud is the feeling Machinery employees transmit.

"This is where we forge steel," Raymond says, turning the corner. Like in Bethlehem, Pa.? Maybe not exactly the same process. (See Raymond on page 4)

OPINION PAGE

Political solutions

Why do politicians have difficulty in the area of credibility? Let's let California's Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. answer the question. He gives one kind of a speech to the minority community because he needs its votes and another kind of message to the business community because he needs its financial help.

Imagine, if you can, the governor delivering to the business community the same message he took to the National Urban League meeting in Los Angeles.

Imagine Brown telling the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, for example, that he believes the federal government should pressure large corporations into spending more money in inner cities.

Imagine him telling the state's business giants what he told the Urban League: that "the lifeblood of corporate America is in the hands of the executive branch of America and when those hands start squeezing, corporate lifeblood will start flowing in the right direction."

"If corporations are told they cannot have any more purchases, they can't have any more banks and they can't have any more secret little deals until they start going to where the people are, they would go there," said the governor. "They are not going there one minute before the federal government acts."

So, what Gov. Brown has perpetuated in the minds of the members of the Urban League is that the reason the inner cities are decaying is the fault of large corporations, which have ignored them. And, the only way to save the inner cities is to invoke federal government powers to force the corporations to spend their money there.

We could not disagree more with the governor. Not only do we disagree, we suggest that he would not even agree with his own solution were he discussing the plight of the inner cities before a big business convention.

We submit that the government's idea that sociological solutions can be fashioned by shackling business and free enterprise is a myth created by politicians which has done this nation no good.

Since Brown told the Urban League that the power to force corporate America to do the "right thing" rests with the federal executive branch, we must consider that an ominous warning what kind of a president he would make.

Foreigners buy American farms

By ELIZABETH WEHR
Congressional Quarterly

WASHINGTON - Deep in the heart of Texas, the Prince of Liechtenstein is said to own a 10,000-acre tract of farmland - just a little smaller than his own pocket-sized nation.

But neither the agriculture Department nor Texas officials can confirm that the Liechtenstein story is accurate.

There's another story that "everyone knows is true" - according to one agricultural economist - but that nobody seems able to confirm: The queen of England owns a piece of lucrative Mississippi cotton plantation.

"Well, if she does, it's probably through some corporation without her name on it," said the veteran official in the Agriculture Department's cotton program.

The absence of any national system to identify foreign buyers makes it impossible to estimate the scope of their holdings. But under pressure from complaining farmers, Congress may try to change that. It is considering legislation that would require such holdings to be reported.

Farmers say that the rate of foreign investment has shot up dramatically for several reasons. Some blame the devaluation of the dollar, or an excess of "petrodollars" by oil-rich Arabs looking for solid investments.

Affluent Europeans and South Americans, worried about political instability back home, also are said to be buying heavily. And Canadians are reported to be taking advantage of a favorable currency exchange rate and lower U.S. interest rates.

Real estate brokers estimate that in some regions land deals involving foreign interests last year accounted for up to half of all land transfers. The sales, farmers say, are driving farmland prices out of the reach of American producers.

A "spot check" by Congress General Accounting Office (GAO) in June suggested that the farmers' concerns might be justified.

In one Georgia county foreign investors in 1977 acquired more than 6 percent of all the farmland, according to Sen. Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., who ordered the report.

But the GAO report was inconclusive, and suggested the need for a comprehensive, national disclosure system.

Now Congress appears ready to require all foreign owners of U.S. farmland, plus those holding long-term leases and other interests, to report these holdings to the secretary of agriculture. The secretary would have to analyze and report to Congress on the impact of these investments on farming, the U.S. economy, trade and other factors.

A simple bill setting up the national reporting system, and providing stiff fines for those who fail to comply, quickly passed the Senate - with no debate and no opposition.

A similar bill is moving along in the house, where the only objections so far come from a few members who fear that it would discourage the foreign investment needed to reverse U.S. balance-of-payments problems. But sponsors Talmadge in the Senate and Reps. Charles E. Grassley, R-Iowa, and John Krebs, D-Calif., in the House are optimistic, according to aides.

One reason it is so hard to track down the stories about the prince, the queen and their fellow investors in U.S. land is that most states don't require foreigners owning or controlling farmland to disclose their interests. And a survey of land records in the more than 3,000 counties would still be inconclusive Agriculture Department officials say.

Like American owners, foreign investors can hide behind corporations, agents and other intermediaries. They may want to avoid hostility from local farmers "who think even New Yorkers are foreign," as one congressional aide suggested. They may want to escape publicity. Or they may be evading currency restrictions in their own nations that prohibit outside investments.

A few states, such as Iowa, where descendants of the Austrian statesman Prince von Metternich own a couple of thousand acres, require reporting. Fewer still simply prohibit foreign ownership of land in the state.

Behind the farmers' anxiety is a basic supply-and-demand problem: The total amount of land isn't going to get any larger, though more of it may come under improvements. Thus, if what the farmers say is true, the total proportion of U.S. farmland under foreign control is being greatly increased.

A few members of Congress filed bills this year that would simply outlaw purchases of U.S. land by foreigners.

But most members wouldn't even want to consider such a ban - even though it is not unusual in other countries - without having a better notion of just how serious the foreign investment problem is. Thus the pending reporting bills look to them like a good way to get more information or postpone action.

One dissenting note comes from Sen. Kanaster Hodges Jr., D-Ark., who predicts the foreign investors will simply "hire the best lawyers in New York to get around the reporting requirement. We'll get a very incorrect picture of the problem."

Public employee strikes may awaken taxpayers

By OSCAR COOLEY

SINCE MEMPHIS policemen and firemen recently were on strike, and many school teachers now are striking, let us note what George Meany, veteran head of the AFL-CIO, has had to say about strikes of public workers. In a symposium on Public Employee Unions, published in 1977, he averred:

"Laws forbidding Americans to strike do not work. Ordinary Americans recognize tyranny when they see it. They are not greatly moved by the fracture of an unpopular law, as we saw during Prohibition, nor of an unjust law, as in the case of New York's old Condon-Wadlin law, and countless other cases of class legislation. No law yet written has ever successfully forced Americans to work under conditions they find intolerable."

So, according to the dean of labor, if a certain law is "unpopular" with you, if you find it "unjust," just fracture it. If the conditions of your job are "intolerable," as impliedly the conditions of Memphis police and firemen and of school teachers must be - although the figures show that the wages of public employees have risen in recent years by a greater percentage than those of private employees - you cannot be forced to work.

ONE WONDERER HOW much success Memphis policemen will have in enforcing the laws of their city after they have deliberately broken laws and defied authorities, or how effective Ohio school teachers will be in teaching children to obey the law, after they have deliberately broken the state's Ferguson Act.

But we were quoting George Meany, the

No. 1 unionist, from whom these abused proletarians take their orders. Let us see what Meany has to say about unions and strikes in general:

"Collective bargaining... is the most effective instrument the mind of man has so far devised for reaching mutually agreeable solutions to the natural and unavoidable conflicts of interest between employers and employees. And strikes and lockouts are a normal and natural and necessary part of the collective bargaining process. Rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness include the right to withhold your labor."

HERE IT SHOULD BE noted that a labor strike is not just the act of a group of workers quitting work. There can be no objection to people quitting their jobs, either individually or severally, unless they are under signed contract to work until a specified later date.

But when people strike they do not quit their jobs. They cease working temporarily, so that their employer will suffer from lack of their product and therefore will yield to their demands. Then they return to their jobs.

If an employer, assuming his striking workers have quit, proceeds to hire others to fill their places, the strikers object in no uncertain terms, insisting that the jobs still belong to them. Often they attack the newly hired workers, injuring or killing them rather than letting them take over the jobs. This amply proves that to strike is not to quit.

Rather, a strike is a kind of blackmail. In effect, the strikers say to the employer, "You do this or else." It is a device for getting your way by means of threat, a threat to force the employer into bankruptcy unless he yields. And many an employer has been forced into bankruptcy by strikers.

MEANY SAYS STRIKES are a "normal and natural and necessary part of the collective bargaining process." He obviously means that workers cannot gain their ends by mere "bargaining," that is, talking. They have to threaten loss to the employer, and if the threat does not bring him to terms, to inflict the loss upon him. The strike resembles the ultimatum in warfare. To call this collective "bargaining" is to mangle the English language.

When public employees strike, the employer (government) is not threatened with loss of profit, for profit is not its aim. The employing body is an agency of the citizens, who finance it with tax revenue. When the employees demand more wages they are in reality demanding more tax from the citizens. When they strike, they threaten not the bureaucrats who hire them, but the citizens with a loss of public services. Striking police, say to the citizens, "Pay us more. Until you do, we will not keep law and order." The prospect of anarchy prevailing in their neighborhood is so terrifying that the citizens usually yield.

AN OBVIOUS SOLUTION to the strike problem is to hire people to replace the strikers. This is not encouraged by our laws, and it is strongly and often violently resisted by strikers. The long-run solution is a change in public opinion now so tolerant toward labor unions and strikes. When the people come to see that the union is a conspiracy of producers (the comparatively few) against the consumers (the general public), and that strikes are not collective bargaining but a form of civil war, we may get a change for the better.

Strikes by police, firemen, teachers - that is, by people who have been chosen clearly to serve the public interest - may awaken the American people and speed a return to sanity.

Ted: fun is enough ... today

By MARTHA ANGLE
and ROBERT WALTERS

BOSTON (NEA) - When the nation's governors decided to feature a discussion of national health insurance at their annual meeting here, the choice of a lead speaker was obvious: Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

And when the governors switched to a review of federal regulatory reform, it was only logical to ask the leading congressional proponent of airline and trucking deregulation to join in - Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

The number one topic of interest to the governors in the field of criminal justice is the future of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, which funnels federal money to the states to beef up their crime-fighting capacity. So who better to consult than Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, author of a bill to reform and improve LEAA?

Although he spent less than a day at their conference, Kennedy was the dominant figure of the governors' meeting, effortlessly occupying center stage wherever he went.

Even when the governors disagreed with him, as many do on the subject of national health insurance, they acknowledged the force of his argument and admired his grasp of the issue.

There is, in fact, hardly any area of domestic or foreign policy where Kennedy is out of his depth. After 16 years in the Senate, he has accumulated a remarkable degree of expertise on everything from strategic arms limitations to the anti-trust laws.

That alone would guarantee him a steady stream of speaking invitations, even if his name were, as the old line goes, just plain Edward Moore. Which, of course, it is not. And in this summer of '78 with Jimmy Carter's poll ratings at an all-time low, Edward Moore Kennedy is a very big draw at any conference or meeting.

Kennedy continues to insist with a perfectly straight face, that he will not be a candidate for president in 1980. And both the people who answer the pollsters' questions, and the politicians who scrutinize those replies, continue to ignore his disclaimer.

Kennedy could dampen the speculation at least some - what if he hunkered down and declined all invitations to appear outside his native state. But he has not done so. Indeed, he has turned up all over the country these past few months at high-visibility events ranging from an NAACP meeting in Detroit to ceremonies at the University of Mississippi.

On occasion, as at a national mayors' conference a few months ago, Kennedy accepted an invitation to speak after Carter had declined to appear - a circumstance which escaped no one's attention.

Democratic candidates from coast to coast are beseeching him to campaign for them this year even as they scramble to put distance between themselves and Carter. And Kennedy is responding. He will be in Pennsylvania later this month to help gubernatorial candidate Pete Flaherty; in Maine to campaign for Sen. William Hathaway; in New Jersey next month for Senate candidate Bill Bradley; in Iowa for Sen. Dick Clark; in Illinois for Rep. Abner Mikve and the state Democratic ticket.

But he will also be in New Hampshire on Sept. 30 for a state party shindig that he could easily have ducked, as he has done in other years. New Hampshire, with its first-in-the-nation presidential primary, as Henry Cabot Lodge did back in 1964, without so much as lifting a finger.

Why is he going? "Oh, I just thought it would be..." and the word "fun" hung in the air, chopped off by the mischievous grin and a mock groan of, "Oh, no you don't."

But there it was, nonetheless. Ted Kennedy is having fun. The more they grit their teeth at the White House, the more fun Kennedy has. For the moment, it is enough. Tomorrow may never come, but sufficient unto the day...

Your money's worth

Do your homework before buying furniture

Sylvia Porter

(Third of four columns)

If you need furniture and you are a shrewd buyer, you'll be in the market during the next few traditional "bargain" weeks - for you may find today's prices the lowest in years.

Just because this is so big-ticket a purchase and just because the outlook for prices is clearly against you in the near future, you must be a more careful shopper than ever before. With literally hundreds of selections from which to choose, a dizzying array of styles and sizes, a wide range of prices - not to mention both shady, on-the-fringe dealers as well as reputable retailers on the other side of the counter - you must do your homework before you set foot in any store!

(1) Measure your rooms and the wall space available for the new piece you are considering. Use a yardstick or metal tape - not a cloth tape - for accurate measurements.

(2) Check architectural features that might limit your arrangement of the furniture. Hallways, doorways and even ceiling heights can be obstacles to setting your new furniture in place.

(3) Don't forget to measure your doorway (so many of you don't even think of this). Can you get the few piece in? If you live in an apartment, consider the size of the elevator and its limitations.

(4) Allow enough space for doors to open and close easily.

(5) Don't overlook windows, heat ducts, radiators. Direct sunlight from windows can bleach and fade furniture finishes, and cause fabrics to fade.

(6) Take fabric samples with you to the store, for colors look different in showroom lights. Your new piece must match your existing color scheme.

(7) Plot your rooms on graph paper, cutting out paper patterns representing your furnishings (called templates) and moving them around to determine how much space you actually have to fill.

(8) Make an inventory on paper of the furniture you have on hand, the pieces you need to buy. Set a "ballpark" limit to each piece you intend to purchase. Draw up a two, three, or five-year furniture buying plan - and start with the basics.

Now, you're ready to head for the stores - and now you must be on guard, warns Harley F. Shuford Jr., president of Century Furniture Co. in Hickory, N.C., a region where woodcrafting has been a fine art for a full century.

(9) You must check labels with utmost care. For "what looks like wood may not be," says Shuford. Modern technology has made it possible to photograph wood grains which are then applied to non-wood surfaces or less expensive panels of wood. Then, too, plastic substitutes frequently are used in place of solid wood for decorative parts in order to keep costs down.

(10) You also must fully understand exactly what the labels mean. The Federal Trade Commission has established strict rules about labeling furniture - so the tag won't say "all mahogany" unless that's what the piece is made of. "Solid" indicates that all exposed surfaces are made of the solid wood named on the tag, without veneer. "Combination" means that more than one type of wood is used for the exposed parts. Don't be confused by a label reading "mahogany finish." Shuford explains, as this means that the materials used in the construction have been finished to resemble the wood named.

(11) In inspecting the construction, be thorough. Tip the piece over, or ask the salesperson to move it away from the showroom wall, so you can look underneath, as well as examine the exterior.

(12) Run your hand over flat surfaces to make sure they are smoothly sanded and that nails and screws are not protruding (to snag nylons or clothing).

(13) Pull out drawers by the corners as well as by the handles; if they are going to bind, they'll do it then. Drawers must be accurately cut with uniform space all around and no more than a quarter inch play when you move them from side to side.

(14) Size up the joints. Butt joints are the simplest but weakest - merely two pieces of wood simply laid together and secured without any kind of fitting. Joints should be nailed or screwed and glued firmly. Furniture also should never rock or wobble. Try to rock the piece; it should be rigid enough to withstand pressure.

(15) Examine chairs and tables in detail. Don't just look at a chair; sit in it. Check out finishes for bumps, ridges, hairline cracks, edges. In short, pull, push, lift, get as close to the piece as possible. This is a truly long-term investment!

For now we see in a mirror dimly, but then face to face. Now I know in part; then I shall understand fully, even as I have been fully understood. So faith, hope, love abide, these three; but the greatest of these is love. - I Cor. 13:12, 13.

Religion is the light of our life. Faith is the key that turns it on. - Ernie Ford, American folk and gospel singer.

Teacher, mother, friend-Ramona Hite

She's a teacher, a mother, a friend and has often been a director.

Ramona Hite is chairman of the business education department and is teaching five classes a day at Pampa High School.

She has been at Pampa High since 1969. "I did my student teaching in 1969. The first day I was here I was sent to the principals office because they thought I was a student without a hall pass.

She took a years leave of absence in 1972, so she could have her son, Chris. But she still remained active. During that year Ramona worked as substitute teacher in the school system.

As chairman of the business education department her responsibilities are varied. She sees her greatest responsibility as being in charge of all of the department equipment and department records.

At one time she was very active with school activities. During the 75-76 school year she served as the senior class sponsor.

"That was during the bicentennial," she said. "We had the chaplain of the United States Senate come to speak. We tried for the President."

Ramona was also involved in other activities but when the Miss Top O' Texas Pageant came along a few years ago she said she had to phase out her activities.

She added, "When you stick with something too long your ideals become stale." "My biggest responsibility is to my students and my class."

Ramona said she started working with the pageant about five years ago on various committees. In 1977 the Chamber of Commerce called her and her asked to direct the pageant.

She agreed to this on the condition she could check into the Miss Texas pageant. Since then she directed the past two pageants, and plans to remain active in the pageant.

Ramona is a native of the Panhandle, and says she's very proud of that.

Back in school, she is teaching four session of Beginning Typing I and also teaches one class of Beginning Shorthand. She enjoys teaching the beginning classes. "You take them into a course where 98 percent of the students have no training, and you can see their finished product."

She has her reasons for teaching business courses. "Business classes are elective and the students are here on their choosing. Their hands and minds are busy and that's why there are few discipline problems."

Ramona says she can't pinpoint any one outstanding event during her teaching career, but has fond memories of a young man who disliked school and was suspended last year. She explained he liked typing and came to apologize to her when he was suspended.

"I saw him change from a student with few goals. I saw him conquer drugs and set some goals."

Ramona spoke of another satisfaction. "It gives you a satisfaction to see the student in Typing I, Typing II and Shorthand I. You see a maturity level."

Even though she is involved with her work, students, and other activities she says her homelife is the number one thing.

"If you work you should give your employers your best. I cannot be considered a woman's libber. The man should be the head of the house."

Ramona Hite

Major proclaims constitution week

One hundred and ninety-one years ago today, the Constitution of the United States of America was adopted. Today also marks the beginning of Constitution Week as proclaimed by the President, an Act of Congress, and Mayor R.D. Wilkerson of Pampa.

The U.S. Constitution is the oldest constitution still in active use in the world today. The purposes of the observance of Constitution Week, according to the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution (NSDAR), are to recall the true significance of the events which occurred during September, 1787; to revitalize appreciation of our heritage; and to emphasize the responsibility of good citizenship in protecting the Constitution in the present and preserving it for posterity.

Miss Gertrude Carraway, while President General of the NSDAR, was responsible for the annual designation of Sept. 17-23 as Constitution Week. She conceived the idea and presented it to the Resolutions Committee. NSDAR and it was adopted by the National Society in 1955.

Members of Congress receive copies of DAR resolutions, and a resolution was introduced requesting President Eisenhower to proclaim Constitution Week. It was passed by both Houses of Congress, and Eisenhower issued his proclamation in August 1955.

John the Baptist was beheaded in 29 A.D.

Pantaleon Ancher, son of a French shoemaker, was elected pope as Urban IV.

Hill demonstrates hold on party

By TOM DeCOLA
Associated Press Writer
FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Gubernatorial candidate John Hill demonstrated his strong hold on the Democratic party over the weekend during a smooth state convention that handed him the platform he wanted and created a minimum of fuss.

Hill wanted Houston's Billy Goldberg as party chairman, and delegates gave him his man without opposition. Early predictions that the convention would give him a platform he could be comfortable with came true as Hill's hand-written version sailed through easily.

Goldberg replaces Calvin Guest as chairman, and he left no doubt about who was responsible.

"I am most grateful to John and Betsy Hill for deciding I was the one who should have this job," Goldberg told the assembly. Later, Goldberg attacked Republican spending policies. "They are openly, brazenly telling the people of Texas, that they are committed to spending $10 million," Goldberg said.

The GOP slate includes Dallas' Bill Clements for governor and Jim Baker against Democrat Mark White for attorney general. The other spotlight race in November will be between republican Sen. John Tower and Rep. Bob Krueger for Tower's Senate seat.

Hill's strong influence came up short only once in a vote that also showed conservatives that they packed minimal clout.

Delegates shouted for and received a tedious, county-by-county roll call vote on a liberal-backed resolution supporting collective bargaining rights for public employees, an issue opposed by Hill. It passed easily, but Hill said later he would not be bound by it.

Conservative forces put up one more fight they considered a test of rural strength within the party, running Mrs. Billie Veach of Burnet against Fort Worth's Deralyn Davis for vice chairman. That post traditionally goes to a minority woman. Mrs. Davis is a black and was the recipient of a series of seconding speeches. She won easily, and liberal candidate Richard Perkins of Dallas then beat conservative Glyn Day of Odessa on a standing vote.

The convention heard resolutions for the first time in several years, and some caused floor flurries late in the proceedings.

A resolution to repeal Section 21.06 of the Texas Penal Code produced several speeches. That section provides a $200 fine for persons convicted of "deviate" sexual acts and was the target of a gay caucus group. Delegates voted to table the issue, saving Hill from potential embarrassment. Hill opposes repeal of 21.06, saying the legislature has the right to set the sexual norm for the state.

Other minority reports tabled would have supported extending the ratification deadline for the Equal Rights Amendment and opposing use of tax funds for abortions.

A resolution seeking to stop dumping and transportation of nuclear waste in Texas gained approval from the delegates.

Among the planks in Hill's platform:

—No new taxes, property tax relief and reform to achieve equity and fairness.

—Equal educational opportunity, more state aid to poor districts, higher teacher salaries and lower teacher-student ratios.

—Better state budget management, including review power for the governor, and reduction in the state payroll.

—Higher professional standards and higher pay for state law officers and counseling for rape victims.

—Agricultural use taxation of farmland, 100 percent parity and reduction of foreign food products.

—Deregulation of oil and gas prices and opposition to mandatory allocation of intrastate oil.

—Strict enforcement of nursing home care laws.

—Local industrial development bonds.

—Crackdowns on welfare fraud and a cut in welfare administrative costs.

—Requirement for financial disclosure by all elected public officials.

The issue of a presidential primary never came up. Hill would like to have one, and some Democrats oppose the idea altogether.

Tuberculosis health problem

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Tuberculosis — perhaps a disease of the past in the minds of most Texans — is now, and for the foreseeable future, will be a major health problem in Texas, the State Health Department says.

One of the reasons, it says is immigration from Mexico and Vietnam.

A weekly department report — "Accent on Health" — states that the total of 2,326 cases in Texas last year was the third highest total in the nation.

The department said tuberculosis is such an important personal and public health problem that it will prepare another report on TB next week.

Tuberculosis is an infectious disease often characterized by nodules on the lungs.

It is found in virtually every part of the state, the department says, with the highest number of cases in large metropolitan areas and in counties bordering on Mexico and the Gulf of Mexico.

The Rio Grande Valley had the highest case rate — 30 per 100,000 population — in 1977. The six largest metropolitan areas, with 34 percent of the state's population, reported 46 percent of the tuberculosis cases last year.

"We need to concentrate our knowledge, experience, support and effort needed to manage the control program at reasonable cost, in areas of the state posing the greatest disease problems," says Dr. Charles Eaves, director of the department's hospital care division.

Texas has two chest hospitals — at Harlingen and San Antonio — which the department describes as the "pillars" in the fight against TB.

Assassinations committee looking at Oswald Mexico trip

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House assassinations committee is examining Lee Harvey Oswald's activities during his trip to Mexico City in a futile effort to obtain a visa to visit Cuba.
 The committee today focused on questions surrounding Oswald's seven days in Mexico less than two months before he allegedly assassinated President John F. Kennedy in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.
 Conspiracy theorists have suggested that the Mexico City trip was linked in some way to the assassination, perhaps as the occasion of meetings between Oswald and someone who may have hired him to murder the president.
 Some also have speculated that Oswald actually may have visited Cuba secretly during the week he supposedly spent in Mexico.

ROBYN FRANKLIN, left, a member of the Ro Eta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi and Betty King, chairman for the city campaign of Multiple Sclerosis, go over campaign materials and city maps. The drive is being kicked off today under the leadership of Georgia Mack, with no goal set for the campaign.

Raymond

 but it is all here in Pampa, Texas. The department is entirely separate from the rig business. They melt 25,000 tons a year. It is poured, heated, forged, cooled, quenched, cord, tooled, and sold. Some is sold to the U.S. Government but not all of it. It is of very high grade.
 Machinery and steel are not the whole Vic Raymond.
 Back in his office he talks on the phone about international sales. He sits, then stands, then paces (he has a 20 foot cord on his phone). News of a decision to be made.

In the office are pictures of the girls: Lisa 15, Cindy, 14, and Amy, 11. Three painting by his wife, Alice, his desk and a conference table.
 When Raymond joined Cabot in 1966 as controller of the company's Carbon Black Division in Boston, he came from Raytheon. There he had been Manager of Budget and Planning. While with Raytheon in Ohio, Raymond explained, "We decided to go to California, so we could play more golf and ended up in Massachusetts."
 Raymond said, "We ended up going the opposite way."
 He has a B.S. degree in economics from Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania and an M.B.A. from the Graduate School of Management, Boston College.

When asked if he had expected to move to general manager of Machinery, Raymond answered, "It came as a bolt... I was not expecting an assignment in the Machinery Division. I knew where Pampa was... I had made trips to the Carbon Black Plant."

Some of the most positive aspects of Machinery Division are: "Everybody is right here (sales, marketing, etc.) Cabot lets the individual stretch himself... prove himself... we don't have to answer to 15 people... they let their people develop."

Besides enjoying Cabot, Raymond enjoys his family and likes spending time with them.
 He and his wife met on a blind date. They grew up in the same town but did not meet until Raymond was home from college and a friend set up a blind date.

We dated and were engaged for approximately five years. They were waiting for Alice Raymond to graduate from college.

"She graduated at 1 p.m. and we were married at 8 p.m. We left on our honeymoon for New York with $35 between us," he said. They have had fun ever since.

The couple planned to wait for children for five years. "We had college bills to pay off... we missed our timing by five days (that's when Lisa was born)."

When asked if he worked his way through college, his answer was, "I worked, had a scholarship, and a lot of help from the family, too... my mother in particular."

The vice president and his wife were both born and raised in Erie, Pa. Do you like Pampa? "We traded the hills, trees, and water. For the sunrise, sunset, and the people... yes."

"Do it - yourselfer," is how Raymond describes himself. "Start - it - yourselfer," is how his petite wife describes him.

The first try was when the couple purchased a 900 square foot ranch style house and sold it as a 2400 square foot colonial. He recalls putting a second story on. When he was finished, "I threw the old roof out the new windows."

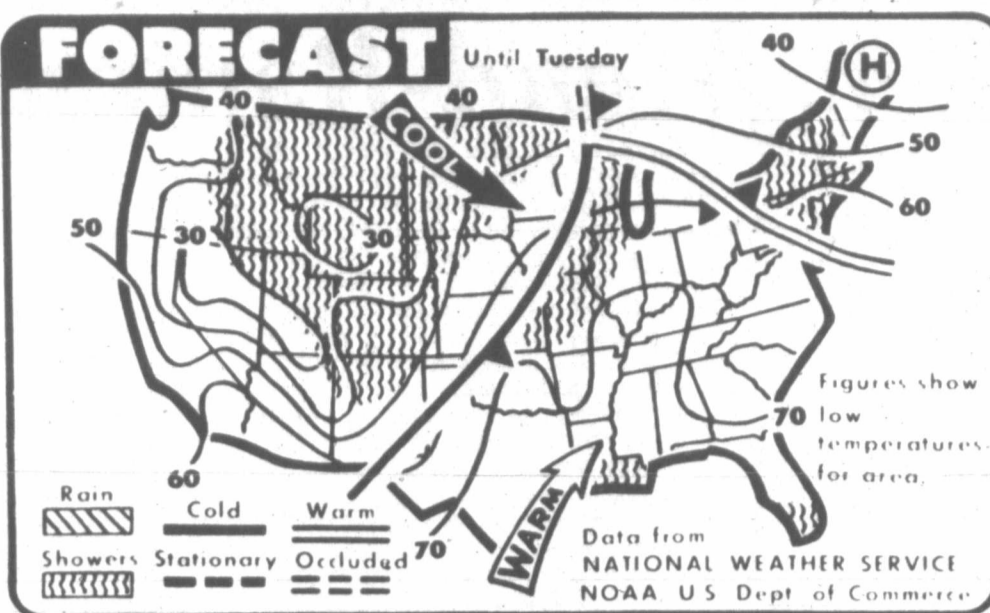

"I like to prove to myself I can do something I haven't done before," he said. He told his wife one day that he was going to build a swimming pool.

She said, "you're crazy" then helped her husband by mixing all the mortar. Next they decided they needed sliding glass door to go outside to the pool.

Where? said Raymond... There said Alice... he cut a hole and out fell the wall. Alice did most of the wiring after the new doors were in.

The Raymond family is very closely knit. All the girls swim competition and do it well, it is a family activity. They camp and travel in their motor home which Raymond added two feet to last winter. They enjoy being together and try to be together.

This is the United Way Chairman for 1978.

Somoza's troops mopping up rebels

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) - President Anastasio Somoza's national guard was reported mopping up one of the last two centers of rebel resistance in northwest Nicaragua today and making steady progress in the other despite hard fighting by the Sandinista guerrillas.

In the south, Somoza's troops repelled an attempt to overrun a border outpost and proclaim a strip of border land "free territory." The rebels there retreated into Costa Rica but vowed to return for another assault.

In Managua, businessmen announced their determination to continue the strike launched Aug. 25 to force the president's resignation, and a commission from the Organization of American States arrived in Costa Rica to investigate the Costa Rican government's charge that a Nicaraguan plane attacked a truck two miles inside Costa Rica.

Persons returning from the northwest said they saw many dead and wounded. They said the national guard, Nicaragua's 7,500-man army and police force, was executing people suspected of being snipers in Esteli and Chinandega.

FOCUS

Senator From Massachusetts

In this congressional election year, Massachusetts voters are paying close attention to their state's Republican senator, Edward Brooke, who is running for re-election. In 1966, Brooke became the first black to be elected to the Senate since the period of Reconstruction following the Civil War. He won election in a state whose voters are overwhelmingly Democratic, and whose population is largely white. Brooke, who recently concluded a controversial divorce settlement, faces strong opposition from a Boston radio announcer. The winner of tomorrow's primary will run against the Democratic candidate for the Senate in November.

DO YOU KNOW - Which Massachusetts congressman is currently the speaker of the House of Representatives?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER - Floyd Patterson, who lost the heavyweight title in 1959, won it back in 1960.

Astro-Graph

By Bernice Bebe Osol

 Many old ideas you've been reluctant to revive are likely to be altered considerably this coming year. Your outlook will become more imaginative and progressive.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A lesson learned from a painful experience may be erased from your memory today and replaced by wishful thinking. Rose-colored glasses aren't the answer. Find out more about yourself by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A business tip from a well-meaning friend could cost you, rather than save or make you money today. Before putting your dollars on the line, get a second opinion.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Neither you nor the one you're bargaining with are apt to get all you hope for today. Each will be required to make substantial concessions.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't overprice that which you do for others today. If the task you perform is a small one, your compensation should only be nominal.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Remember the lyrics about putting too much stock in the world's overrated pleasures while ignoring its underrated treasures? Those lines could be meant for you today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be content today with who you are and what you have. You wouldn't change places with others if you really knew all the facts.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Today if you seek counsel from friends, don't go to those who will tell you only what you want to hear. Hopeful advice must be frank and honest.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't throw caution to the winds today and buy things you can't afford. Wait until you can. They'll still be available.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) In situations where a firm hand is required today you're likely to have too tight a touch on the tiller. Take care you don't run your ship aground.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Act responsibly toward persons in your charge today, but don't take on the problems of outsiders who are capable of solving things for themselves.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) If your budget takes a bumping around today, it won't be because you don't know better. It will be due to indifference or sheer extravagance.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Instead of putting all your cards on the table as you usually do, today you may resort to empty promises or insincere praise.

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: To get right down to the nitty-gritty, how does a reasonably intelligent, fairly attractive 26-year-old single woman meet men? I'm not frantically searching for a husband—or even a "meaningful relationship"—but I wouldn't be adverse to it either.

I don't want a man who's interested only in a one-night stand, but it would be nice to connect with a guy who shares some of my interests and could brighten up my dull, boring life. (I'm a 9-to-5 office worker.) Any ideas?

ROBIN

DEAR ROBIN: I received no less than 100 letters this week asking the same question, so I'll kill 100 "Robins" with one stone and proffer the following:

The best way to meet decent men is through one's work, church, friends and interests—out in the mainstream of life. And no matter how lonely you are, avoid those lonely hearts clubs, singles bars and the phony computer dating services.

A girl who's in politics can make many new and interesting friends while gathering names for a petition, registering voters, or working on a campaign.

Don't overlook adult education classes in the evening—particularly subjects that appeal to men. (Scuba diving, aerobics, auto mechanics, sailing.) You may find that you're the only woman in a class of 30 men. (Whoopee!!!!)

Sports offer opportunities galore. If you're not keen on outdoor sports, try indoor sports. How about pool or billiards? If you live in a singles apartment with a pool table, pick up the cue. (Ha!) If you don't live in a singles apartment, visit a friend who does. Men hang around good pool players. (They even hang around poor ones so they can teach them. Either way, you can't lose.)

And last but not least—travel. Consider one of those affordable group tours. Get out and see the world, and the world will see YOU!

Above all, don't play games. If you find someone attractive, don't worry about who makes the first move. It's a whole new world out there. Help yourself.

DEAR ABBY: I know that most small boys have a natural aversion to soap and water, but at what age is a boy supposed to start keeping himself reasonably clean?

I have a son, 13, and you wouldn't believe how he detests soap and water. And to top it off, he doesn't even want to wear socks. The answer I get is, "None of the guys wear socks anymore, mom!"

When he comes home from school grimy and sweaty, and I tell him to shower before supper, he tells me he had a shower in gym, so he doesn't have to shower at home. And he climbs into bed at night, exhausted, with dirty hair and filthy feet. You should see the bed sheets! You would think he had been working in the coal mines. And he sleeps until the last minute in the morning, so he's too rushed to shower then. Please, Abby, how can I clean up this kid? I don't know how much longer I can take it.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN NEWS FAN

DEAR FAN: Cleanliness should not be optional. It should be mandatory, and if your son, at age 13, does not keep himself reasonably clean, offer to give a bath. And when you start undressing him, I'll bet he moves!

CONFIDENTIAL TO "LOVES LOVING": Those who love deeply never grow old; they may die of old age, but they die young.

Are your problems too heavy to handle alone? Let Abby help you. For a personal, unpublished reply, write: Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ask Dr. Lamb

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB—After a few days of barely being able to eat and severe heartburn, I had an X-ray study done and the results were negative.

My symptoms began to get worse to the point that I couldn't even swallow water. My doctor had me hospitalized. A specialist did a gastroscopic test and ran a tube down. He found I had a large, deep ulcer in my esophagus.

I am 30 years old and the doctor says it is very rare to find an ulcer this severe in a woman of my age. He thought the ulcer was caused by high acidity in my stomach, although I didn't test out as being that high. He placed me on medicines for one week and tested me again and was surprised to find that the ulcer was healed.

One of the medicines he gave me was Tagamet. He says I am to take it for the next three months. What does this medication do and is it necessary for me to take it this length of time? What causes ulcers in this area and are they likely to recur? The doctor did say I wasn't to have any alcoholic beverages or smoke, but I didn't drink very much and I only smoked a half pack of cigarettes a day so I don't see how that could be the cause.

DEAR READER—You can have an ulcer in the lower esophagus, the food tube that joins the stomach, just the same as you can have an ulcer in the duodenum where the stomach empties into the small intestine.

The stomach itself is protected from ulcers to some degree with a thick coat of mucus that resists the acid digestive juice. This mucus is restricted to the stomach so when the acid digestive juices squirt out the top of the stomach into the lower esophagus or squirt out normally from the stomach against the small intestine (duodenum), the acid digestive juice may literally digest your own tissues and cause an ulcer.

Tagamet is a relatively new medicine which has a different way of decreasing the production of acid digestive juice by the stomach. It has proved to be very helpful in many cases. The antacid that you mentioned taking in the rest of your letter is there to neutralize the other amounts of acid in the stomach.

In many patients with ulcers, if the acid digestive juice is sufficiently controlled, the ulcers heal as in your case. And they may heal rapidly if there is effective control or neutralization of the acid digestive juice.

To give you a better appreciation for ulcers and their cause I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-5, Ulcers—Duodenal, Stomach. Other readers who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

The Health Letter I'm sending you explains that stress is often a factor in increasing the acid digestive juice production by the stomach. Although Tagamet and other medicines are very helpful in controlling ulcers, you will do a lot better if you eliminate the factors in your lifestyle that contribute to ulcers. These factors include stress, cigarette smoking, alcohol and the use of coffee. The caffeine in coffee stimulates the stomach to produce acid digestive juice.

Yes, you had better stick with your medicines because individuals who stop taking Tagamet entirely may have a recurrence of ulcers. Small maintenance doses may help to solve this problem.

Polly's pointers

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY— I am writing in response to Marion's letter concerning water stains on a table. You answered "Use cold cigarette ashes and butter or margarine and rub vigorously with the grain of the wood." The part that annoyed me was "Have a man do this, if possible, as old stains will take a lot of hard rubbing." Get up with the times, Polly! Women are not the frail delicate creatures they were once thought to be! — W.P.

Thanks for your letter, W.P., but you are not starting an argument with me! I was speaking for myself and remember we are not all cast from the same mold. — POLLY

RAPE

Rape precautions

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK (NEA) — There's a policeman at the door.

"Don't be alarmed, ma'am," he says, flashing his badge. "There's been a burglary down the street and I'd like to come in and ask you a few questions."

So you swing open the door—and let yourself in for a possible rape.

What you should have done, according to New York Women Against Rape, was ask him what precinct he's with, close and relock the door and call up to verify his identity and mission. That's what you do, too, with unexpected repairmen and salesmen because badges, uniforms, credentials of any sort don't mean a thing.

You can't even trust a $300 suit and an attache case according to Pat Maher, a counselor with New York Women Against Rape which counsels rape victims and runs educational community programs.

"Plenty of rapists are well-educated, respectable looking men," she says. "Most women grow up thinking they're weirdos lurking in the dark. Lord knows there are plenty of those, but the fact is, it can be any man."

Generalities don't apply because there are as many different kinds of men who commit rape as there are ways of committing it: the good-looking lawyer in the singles bar; the employer with the country estate who says come up for the weekend.

And the victim can be any female, anywhere, any time of day—with more and more frequency, apparently. According to FBI statistics, forcible rape increased 8 percent nationally during 1977, while nearly all other crime decreased.

What any female can do, then, is try to avoid the circumstances conducive to rape, though there are no guaranteed safeguards. To start with, the rapist is interested in isolation and your accessibility. "Rapists like to have their victims isolated so they can have control," Ms. Maher says.

"If, say, you find yourself walking down a street alone, stay away from the buildings where someone can reach you easily. Walk near the curb and at night, walk out in the street itself.

foolish. Once those doors close, there's no escape. The rapist knows that.

In fact, the rapist usually knows just where to commit the crime and what his escape routes are, which means he knows the neighborhood. If it's your neighborhood, you should know it as well as he does: which stores stay open late at night if you need somewhere to run, etc.

Now, forget about good manners—sometimes they

"Plenty of rapists are well-educated, respectable looking men. Most women grow up thinking they're weirdos lurking in the dark. Lord knows there are plenty of those, but the fact is, it can be any man."

"At a shopping center, park where there are other cars and people. And before getting back into the car, check to see there's no one hiding in the back seat."

If you ride the subway, wait for the train with other passengers, preferably women, she says. And if no one's around, stay near stairs which lead out, but never near dark stairwells. When the train does come, ride in the conductor's car.

Elevators are harmless enough when there's a crowd, but if it's just you and him getting in and you have an uneasy feeling about him, walk away. And don't feel can lead to trouble.

"Don't hold the door for a man following you into your apartment building," she says. "Let him use his own keys or buzz the person he's visiting. And don't get conned into conversations with a man who wants the time or a light. The point, very often, is to engage you in conversation to size you up."

Teens Bridging Generation Gap

NORTHBROOK, Ill. (AP) — The generations came together as equals to learn about each other at a recent "Youth and Aging" conference organized by a Pennsylvania teen-ager.

Sixteen-year-old Joyce Collier gathered together her fellow student council members at her suburban Philadelphia high school to meet with representatives from such groups as the Gray Panthers. They all spent the day in a round of discussions and workshops on growing old in America.

"The conference was very successful," says Joyce. "It was a mutual learning situation, though I think the young people gained more from the experience. We gained an understanding of how older people feel about social issues facing our nation. Now we're better able to form our own opinions."

Joyce is one of scores of high-achieving teens listed in "Who's Who Among American High School Students" found to be building bridges across the generation gap by adopting grandparents, volunteering in convalescent homes and helping the elderly with chores.

There seems to be a trend toward breaking down age barriers among young and old, according to the book's publisher, Paul Krouse.

"When we started talking to outstanding teens 12 years ago, 'generation gap' was a widely used and practiced term," he says. "Today's kids—at least the high achievers we know—want to expand their knowledge and understanding of all people, so many are getting acquainted with older adults and learning the lessons of wisdom which older people have to lend."

Jim Firman, Inter-generational Services Coordinator for the National Council on Aging, tends to agree.

"Young people are a tremendous untapped resource," says Firman. "There's a great need among older people for professional services like shopping, helping with cleaning and just friendly visiting. The services that kids can provide are often critical, enabling older people to maintain their independence."

Two elderly women in Hico, Tex., age 84 and 94, are able to remain in their homes because busy teen-ager Debbie Barnett cooks, cleans and runs errands for them.

"Neither one of them wants to go to a nursing home and, without me, they probably would," says Debbie, who gets high school credits for her work with the two seniors. "It makes me feel really good to know that I can help them. And, it's one of the easiest jobs anyone can do."

Paul Barton, a teen from San Diego, Calif., who has been a magician for four years, takes his magic show to convalescent homes.

Older people in Orleans, Minn., were surprised to receive many gifts this year from teens like Patricia Stewart who chose them as "Secret Grandparents."

One commonly seen friendly visitor to Rew, Pa., nursing homes is Amber Biddle, 17. She spurred her social-service club to hold monthly birthday celebrations and holiday parties at nearby residences for seniors.

The club's teens sing to the residents, play bingo with them, make greeting cards for them and just simply talk with them.

"They love us," says Amber. "They'll join in with us, and play along on their instruments. They tell us stories about when they were our age, and give us advice."

"If I could, I would tell other teen-agers to just love older people as if they were their own grandparents," she adds. "The older people are just as interested in learning about new things and in meeting new friends as we are."

As the span has narrowed between the generations, the teens' knowledge and experience has widened, Krouse points out. "At least these kids will grow older without the fear of aging. And that's a nice feeling."

Rams find ingredients

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

The Dallas Cowboys are not invincible. All it takes to beat them are an aggressive, hard-hitting defense and a good, little quarterback.

The Los Angeles Rams had both ingredients Sunday as they scored twice in the fourth quarter to beat the Cowboys 27-14 and knock the Super Bowl champions from the National Football League's unbeaten ranks.

"Team defense makes the difference," enthused Los Angeles defensive end Jack Youngblood after the Rams picked off four of Roger Staubach's passes and held Dallas to 96 yards rushing, including just 38 yards in 19 carries by Tony Dorsett.

"Sure, we got to No. 33 (Dorsett)," said Youngblood. "When you play like we've been playing, you can stop any one person. We didn't let him run, so that made them throw it. Our coverage was great, so they made mistakes."

And when they made mistakes, the Rams capitalized on them. An interception set up their first TD and a 43-yard interception return by Rod Perry accounted for an insurance score in the closing minutes.

As for the good, little quarterback, the Rams' Pat Haden threw for two touchdowns — a 21-yarder to Ron Jessie in the second quarter and a picturesque 43-yard bomb to Willie Miller to snap a 14-14 tie midway through the final period.

After three weeks, there are five unbeaten teams in the NFL. Besides Los Angeles, the clubs with 3-0 records are the Chicago Bears, who blanked the Detroit Lions 19-0; the Pittsburgh Steelers, who trounced the Cincinnati Bengals 28-3; the Cleveland Browns, who defeated the Atlanta Falcons 24-16; and the Washington Redskins, who beat the St. Louis Cardinals 28-10.

Dallas, aiming for its 10th straight victory, drew even at 14-14 on Staubach's 18-yard scoring pass to Tony Hill after 4:44 of the final period. But the Rams struck right back in four plays, Haden hitting Miller with a beautiful, high-arching pass for the go-ahead score.

Bears 19, Lions 0

Chicago scored three times in just over four minutes of the third quarter to post its ninth straight regular-season victory, the first time the Bears have done that since 1941-42. Bob Thomas started the burst with a 28-yard field goal, then Tommy Hart tackled quarterback Greg Landry in the end zone for a safety and Bob Avellini followed with a 40-yard scoring bomb to wide receiver James Scott.

Steelers 28, Bengals 3

Terry Bradshaw completed 14 of 19 passes for 242 yards, including scoring passes of 28 and 12 yards to tight end Bennie Cunningham, as Pittsburgh ripped apart Cincinnati for 447 yards total offense and dealt the winless Bengals their third straight loss.

Browns 24, Falcons 16

Brian Sipe hit on 20 of 35 passes for 219 yards and two touchdowns and also scored on a 2-yard run for the unbeaten Browns, who turned back a second-half comeback by the Falcons that was led by Steve Bartkowski, making his first appearance of the season.

Redskins 28, Cardinals 10

Rookie Tony Green, a 5-foot-9 speedster, raced 99 yards on a kickoff return for one of three Washington touchdowns in the first half as the Redskins beat St. Louis.

Raiders 28, Packers 3

Mark van Eeghen rushed for a career-high 151 yards as Oakland rolled up 348 yards on the ground in beating Green Bay. In addition, Arthur Whittington ran for two touchdowns and Terry Robiskie one.

"We had talked all week that we'd learn a lot about ourselves when we played a championship caliber team," Packers Coach Bart Starr said. "I think one of the biggest things we'll find out is how we'll respond to a licking like this. And that's just what it was — a good, old-fashioned kicking in the fan."

Seahawks 24, Jets 17

Quarterback Jim Zorn sprinted to a first down on a fake field goal in the fourth period, setting up fullback David Sims' third touchdown run of the game for the Seahawks. The 3-yard scoring run with 10:20 to play capped a 65-yard, 14-play drive. Sims, who gained 121 yards on 23 carries, earlier scored on runs of 3 and 2 yards.

Bucs 16, Vikings 10

"We got some good breaks and took advantage of them," said Tampa Bay Coach John McKay, whose club got its biggest break with 4½ minutes remaining in the third period when a punt glanced off the shoulder of Vikings rookie Kevin Miller and the Bucs' Billy Cesare recovered on the Minnesota 5.

On the next play, Tampa Bay rookie Doug Williams fired a bullet to Morris Owens for the winning touchdown.

Oilers 20, 49ers 19

Houston's Toni Fritsch kicked a 19-yard field goal with 1:16 to play to cap an 80-yard, 11-play drive and thwart a San Francisco comeback. The 49ers had erased a 17-6 deficit on a pair of second-half TD passes by Steve DeBerg.

Eagles 24, Saints 17

Ron Jaworski and Harold Carmichael combined for second-half scoring passes of 18 and 6 yards for Philadelphia, although the Eagles needed an interception in the end zone by John Sanders with 13 seconds left to finish it off.

Dolphins 31, Bills 24

It was like old times for Miami, which pounded out 275 yards on the ground in posting its NFL record-tying 17th victory in a row over Buffalo. Del

Streck stuns Open field

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Obscure Ron Streck, who came into the $200,000 Texas Open in danger of losing his Professional Golfers Association tour card, really hasn't been himself the last couple of days. Just ask Hubert Green, Lon Hinkle and Ben Crenshaw.

Streck, 24, of Tulsa, Okla., who had to scramble Friday to barely make the two-round cut at even-par 140, fired a 7-under-par 63 on Saturday and a withering 62 Sunday to capture a storybook one-stroke victory worth $40,000.

"I'm still a little bit in shock. I think," he said after finishing a stroke ahead of Hinkle and Green and two strokes ahead of Crenshaw. "I feel very, very lucky to win, especially the way I've been playing this year."

"I just barely made the cut," added Streck. "I just wanted to put two good rounds together to show everybody I could."

What he did was to post the best back-to-back rounds on the PGA tour this year. Before that, his only claim to fame was playing on the same Tulsa University team for two years with LPGA star Nancy Lopez and tying for 14th at the 1978 Quad Cities Open.

"The guy shoots a 63 and a 62. What can you say?" said a stunned Crenshaw, the leader through the second and third rounds before floundering with a 69 Sunday.

Streck has averaged 74 strokes per round this year and was 156th on the PGA money list with $6,933 before the Texas Open — his third-to-last chance to either cement a place in the Top 160 or win $10,000. Otherwise, he would be forced to return to the PGA Qualifying School.

On Thursday, Streck shot a miserable 73 in his first time to play on the 6,525-yard Oak Hills Country Club Course.

Knowing he needed to par the final hole in the second round to make the cut, Streck blasted out of a sand trap and dropped in a tricky six-foot par putt. He later said that was probably the most pressure he felt the entire tournament.

Only Streck's mother and father — and an unidentified tipsy fan who inexplicably befriended him Friday night on the practice green — followed him Saturday when he began fashioning his third-round 63.
