City hit by deluge

By The Associated Press

Very heavy thunderstorms triggered by a combination of a cold front and an abundant supply of moisture forced the National Weather Service early today to declare a flash flood watch for the southern portion of Northwest Texas.

The flooding conditions were expected as a result of the cold front which passed through the Panhandle Tuesday night and Wednesday pushing deeper into Texas.

As the colder weather continued to work its way south, temperatures in the Pampa area dropped into the 40s this morning, bringing out the winter clothing.

The drop in temperatures followed heavy rains Tuesday night and Wednesday which dumped from three and one-half to more than six inches of rain in the Pampa area.

The rain was general throughout the Panhandle with Carson County sheriff's deputies reporting totals from three to six inches. Unofficial reports from Canadian listed three inches of rain.

W.E. Melton, who lives 14 miles south of Pampa in the Hopkins community, measured five and three-fourth inches of rain at his home.

The flash flood watch covered Brewster, Jeff Davis, Pecos, Presidio and Terrell Counties.

Very heavy thunderstorms were reported during the pre-dawn hours across southern Andrews and northern Ector Counties. These thunderstorms were just a small portion of a large area of rain and thunderstorms that extended early today from the Abilene and Snyder areas southwestward across Midland-Odessa and across the Pecos River into the Davis Mountains.

Forecasters said there were no immediate reports of flooding, but warned persons in low lying areas to be alert for rising water and warned of the possibility of flooding of low water crossings. The rain was expected to continue throughout most of the day, forecasters said.

The cold front was moving across the state early today along a line from Texarkana to Brownwood to San Angelo to Del Rio. Behind the front, showers were reported and temperatures were cooler.

Early morning temperatures ranged from the upper 30s in northwestern sections of the Panhandle to near 80 along the Gulf coast.

Some early morning readings included 49 at Amarillo, 55 at Wichita Falls, 74 at Texarkana, 70 at Dallas-Fort Worth, 75 at Austin and Lufkin, 74 at Houston, 78 at Corpus Christi, 77 at McAllen and Del Rio, 66 at El Paso and 52 at Lubbock.

Forecasters called for mostly cloudy skies today with showers and thunderstorms expected over most of the state. Showers if Southwest Texas were expected to be locally heavy. Highs were expected to range from the 60s in Northwest Texas to the 70s and 80s for the remainder of the state. Highs in South Texas were expected, however, to reach near 90.

Highland General face emergency situation

By KATHY BURR
Pampa News Staff

An emergency situation has arisen at Highland General Hospital and no one is sure where the funds will come from to remedy the situation.

Within the past several weeks the hospital has had several pipes break, causing flooding of various floors.

Guy Hazlett, hospital administrator, says the breaks are now occurring at a rate of approximately two per week.

At the last board meeting a three phase reconstruction plan was presented to the board and the media.

Phase I of the plan deals with the domestic hot and cold water piping system, while Phase II deals with replacing steam and condensation piping along with controls. The estimated cost of Phase I is $363,184.19. The estimated cost of Phase II is $538,201.

The problem is - where does the money come from?

Following a pipe line break last week, hospital officials met with the county commissioners for a regular commissioners meeting. The purpose was to try and discover an avenue of funds available to the hospital.

During a telephone interview this week, Hazlett said, "It is really an emergency that we get this fixed. Something needs to be done immediately."

Where will the money come from?

"That's hard to say," said Hazlett. "There are many alternatives. We are looking at a long range project."

He added more renovation may be needed down the pike. "This may be the tip of the iceberg."

"The commissioners are going to explore all alternatives and that will take time. We are talking about one million dollars. I have no idea when an answer will be given to the hospital," Hazlett said.

He added, "Some type of answer is needed as soon as possible." He explained the situation is urgent and could result in some type of secondary damages.

Hazlett explained pipe breaks are now occurring several times a week. "Before we could work around it, but we can no longer do this."

The hospital seems to be making efforts to cut back in various areas.

Hazlett said, "The spending has been cut back in several areas."

He added, "An effort has been made to decrease expenses and bring in additional revenue by adding new doctors."

Hazlett explained, "Three different attempts have been made to cut back." This occurred in early 1977, the summer of 1977 and through out the first of this year.

Hazlett explained the hospital depends on annual contracts. "Almost 50 percent of every dollar goes toward wages."

With that in mind, Hazlett said, "We want to do two things." "First we want to get the best utilization out of every man shown." "In addition to that we want to bid out as many things as possible on an annual contract."

Hazlett explained discounts come with volume buying and the hospital is trying to make more money available for plumbing and remodeling.

He added the hospital is trying to reduce the accounts payable and the payroll expenditures.

Hazlett said the county commissioners indicated at the last meeting that both Phase I and Phase II of the plan were the most important.

Hazlett said he is not aware of any progress being made by the commissioners, but added, "This is no easy decision. They will have to take some time on it."

"They represent the public and the public will have to be informed."

Only isolated resistance by rebels remain

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Only isolated resistance in and around the northern city of Esteli was reported following the defeat of the widespread uprising against President Anastasio Somoza, but rebel leaders outside the country vowed to fight on.

The national guard announced Tuesday night that it had regained control of Esteli, the last rebel stronghold in the 11-day uprising. But AP photographer Hal Moore entered the city briefly Wednesday and found heavy firing from rebel holdouts as the government troops advanced, clearing barricades and returning sniper fire.

The Nicaraguan Red Cross estimated at least 1,000 persons were killed in the fighting in Masaya, Leon and Chinandega. There was no report yet of casualties in Esteli and three other towns where fighting on a smaller scale was reported.

The national guard, Somoza's 7,500-man army and police force, did not allow the Red Cross to enter Esteli until late Wednesday.

Red Cross President Ismael Reyes said most of the dead counted so far were civilians killed in air and artillery attacks to soften up rebel positions in the towns before the troops moved in.

The rebellion, which began Sept. 9, was led by guerrillas of the leftist Sandinista National Liberation Front. Thousands of other foes of the Somoza dynasty took up arms to support them.

A nationwide strike, called Aug. 25 by opposition political parties and joined by Nicaragua's major business organizations in an effort to end 41 years of Somoza family rule,

Booming housing market could face total collapse

WASHINGTON (AP) — The booming housing market could collapse if the government squeezes credit any tighter, warns a top federal regulator.

In a rare breach of the normally united front presented by government banking and monetary agencies to the public, Robert H. McKinney, chairman of Federal Home Loan Bank Board, criticized the latest interest increase set in motion by the Federal Reserve Board.

"For the moment, the bank board will do all in its power to counterbalance today's action by the Fed," McKinney said in a statement Wednesday. "I sincerely hope that still further tightening by the Fed will not be necessary, as it may well be at the risk of a housing collapse."

McKinney's agency regulates savings and loans while the Federal Reserve Board — known in financial circles as the Fed — regulates many of the nation's larger banks.

McKinney contends the Fed's actions in tightening credit throughout the economy may divert money from savings and loans and will make mortgage money more expensive and harder to get.

A bank board spokesman, Robert Marshall, said the board can blunt the impact of higher interest rates on the housing industry by advancing funds to savings and loan associations and by reducing the amount of cash they have to keep on hand. But he indicated no decision has been made on exactly what the board might do.

The Fed controls the nation's money supply by the purchase and sale of government securities to those large banks and thereby sets the federal funds rate — the interest charged by banks on short-term loans to each other. When the Fed drives up interest rates for banks, it also indirectly influences other interest rates in the country.

Lawyers haggle during Davis hearing

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Attorneys continued to haggle over intricate points of law today as a change of venue hearing for millionaire Cullen Davis' solicitation of capital murder trial entered its third day here.

Defense attorneys Wednesday attempted to call State District Judge Tom Cave as a witness, but Cave refused to appear and presiding Judge Arthur Tipps said he would not force him to testify.

Tuesday, Cave voluntarily excused himself from the case, saying that though he was justified in continuing to preside, allegations by the defense could cloud the issue of his objectivity. Cave kept Davis in jail without bond for 15 months while the 44-year-old industrialist awaited acquittal on capital murder charges last year.

The defense had asked for a 10-day delay when Cave stepped down, because a new judge had to be appointed. Attorneys also asked for the official disqualification of Cave, who originally filed the motion for a venue change. They claim the motion was moot after he stepped down.

Davis' attorneys are seeking delays in hopes the prosecution will not be ready for trial by Oct. 20. State law says that a defendant must be released if the state is not ready for trial 60 days after his arrest. Davis was taken into custody Aug. 20 and is being held without bond in Tarrant County jail, charged with attempting to hire a gunman to kill the judge presiding in his divorce case. During Davis' bond hearing, prosecutors also claimed he had a "hit list" that included the names of 15 persons, including his divorce judge, Joe Eidson, and Judge Cave.

Defense attorneys earlier had said they expected to conclude their questioning Wednesday, before becoming bogged down in a quagmire of legal points late in the day. More defense witnesses were to be called today.

Two attorneys called by the defense Wednesday testified that, in their opinions, a fair and impartial jury could be found to hear the Davis case.

Earlier, a newspaper reporter and a television newsman testified they did not believe an impartial jury could be found in Tarrant County or surrounding counties because of excessive publicity in the case.

Vance seeks cooperation in exchange for fighters

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance seeks Saudi Arabia's cooperation today with the Camp David accord in exchange for the F-15 fighter deal the Carter administration pushed through Congress.

Vance was flying to Riyadh after meetings with King Hussein that produced no public change in the king's opposition to the peace framework President Carter, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin erected at Camp David.

Meanwhile, Syria's foreign minister said Vance's visit to Damascus Saturday would have no effect on President Hafez Assad's unequivocal rejection of the Sadat-Begin agreements and all Sadat's dealings with the Israelis.

Carter spokesmen insisted during the administration's bitter fight last spring to sell the Saudis 60 F-15s that the sale was part of a plan to bolster American influence with the conservative Arab government in an effort to achieve a peace settlement for Israel.

Vance has two other levers to use on King Khaled and Crown Prince Fahd: the network of business and military contacts between the two countries, and the American contention that collapse of the peace process could result in Sadat's replacement by someone aligned with the radical Arab regimes.

U.S. officials do not expect the Saudis to use their influence publicly to rally support in the Arab world for Camp David. They believe private acquiescence would be sufficient for other Arab leaders to take the public steps necessary.

The Saudi influence derives from several sources. As custodians of the holiest shrines of Islam, they are important religious leaders. As the Middle East's largest oil producer and the owners of the world's largest proven oil reserves, they subsidize Syria, Egypt, Jordan and other poorer Arab states.

However, the Saudis in a statement Tuesday said the Camp David accord cannot be considered a final acceptable formula for peace because they do not guarantee Israeli withdrawal from all occupied territory, including East Jerusalem; the Palestinian right to self-determination and their own state, and recognition of the Palestine Liberation Organization as the sole, legitimate representative of the Palestinian people.

The Saudis also called for a unified Arab stand, presumably to come at an Arab summit. American officials believe such a meeting can only result in a tougher Arab stand toward Israel.

Vance met for two hours Wednesday with King Hussein.

Park's testimony reviewed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tong-sun Park, giving new details about his lobbying activities for South Korea, says he rewarded congressmen who voted favorably on aid to Seoul by directing business to their districts.

Park told the House ethics committee Wednesday that he encouraged South Korea to grant contracts for rice and various projects to constituents of "friendly" congressmen and senators.

Park discussed his "philosophy" in dealing with Congress while testifying that he gave Rep. John J. McFall, D-Calif., $4,000 in cash and a $500 tea set between 1972 and 1974. The congressman is accused of violating House rules by accepting the money and the gift.

McFall, who as a former majority whip held the third-ranking Democratic post in the House, was expected to testify in his own defense today. He has denied any wrongdoing.

Park said Wednesday that he linked favors he did for congressmen — especially regarding rice sales — with how they voted on military aid and other legislation affecting Korea.

"I had the feeling that if my friends in Congress were sympathetic to the needs of the people of South Korea, they ought to be recognized ... and helped in any way possible," said the former middleman for U.S. rice sales to Korea.

"I think I expressed reality when I said that if my friends in Congress wanted me to help them sell their (constituents') surplus rice, which was always a problem to them, they ought to show their support for military aid to Korea."

Castro faces Marine landing

GANDER, Newfoundland (AP) — The U.S. Marines landed just after Cuban President Fidel Castro. But it was a coincidence.

Castro made a brief stopover at the international airport here Wednesday en route to Havana from Moscow, where he met with top Soviet officials.

Castro was on the ground for almost two hours while his Soviet aircraft was refueled.

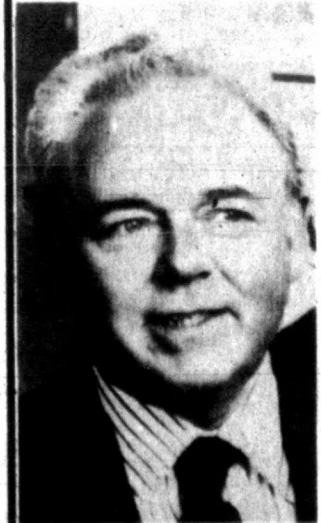

O'Connor under doctor care

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor Carroll O'Connor must quit smoking and drinking because of high blood pressure, his doctor says.

O'Connor, who has gained fame and three Emmys as television's hot-tempered Archie Bunker in "All in the Family," was treated for a nosebleed backstage at the Emmy awards presentation Sunday.

His doctor then ordered a special diet and banned alcohol and tobacco for the 55-year-old actor.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Covering Commandment.

Out of bounds

An obvious attempt to halt a proposed coal strip mine in Montana has used the excuse of a "social threat" in an environmental impact statement. The statement was prepared by the Montana Lands Department with the assistance of the U.S. Geological Survey agency.

We have never been aware that this federal agency was engaged in social studies, and from its name we would deduce that the state agency was operating out of its designated range of activity.

Since the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and its activists supporters have had a few setbacks lately, perhaps they are enlisting other agency people to pull their chestnuts out of the fire. Some court actions and demonstrations have also been counter-productive for them.

The Spring Creek Coal Company's plans to open a strip mine just five miles from the West Decker operation which is the largest surface coal mine in North America. The location is just north of the Wyoming border. The proposed strip operation envisions 243 million tons of coal to be mined over a 25-year period.

The two governmental agencies opposing the plan with their "study" claim that the new mining activity will worsen a state of "social disorganization" in the area.

"Operation of the mine would lower the quality of life in an area stretching from Sheridan, Wyo., to Birney, Mont.," the statement said.

The two agencies also said that the mine would contribute to the trend toward breakdown of social organizations in the area, as well as the increase in the incidence of drunkenness, divorce and delinquency.

The type of conclusions arrived at in this study could be used against any resource progress in the nation. If such governmental roadblocks were in force when this nation was young, the movement west would have been stopped before it ever got started.

And, the very people who are now using every excuse in the book to stop industrial progress would probably now be relegated to slum living in the East, if they ever were given the chance to exist at all.

We haven't noticed any marked attempt by any of the environmental fanatical fringe to deprive themselves of any of the benefits of our industrialized nation.

When we read the report of this latest attempt to stop progress in developing energy fuel we had cause to wonder why the EPA and its cohorts were not mentioned as parties to the negative impact statement.

There is a good probability that they backed off the "social threat" approach because it would be an open admission that man is a part of the environment.

This is not the illogical and usual approach to such matters when the "environmentalists" challenge man and his enterprise. The theme is generally based on the false assumption that all that takes place in nature sans man is good and everything related to what men do is bad. Especially, they deem it bad if there is an element of profit in the activity.

For to these do-gooders, profit is a nasty word even though without profit they would have had no means to pursue their own present crusades.

Earned and unearned money

(American Economic Foundation)

The only valuable money that government has to spend is that money taxed or borrowed out of the people's earnings. When government decides to spend more than it has thus received, that extra unearned money is created out of thin air, through the banks, and when spent, takes on value only by reducing the value of all money, savings and insurance.

In other words, this unearned money is inflationary.

Let's look at the difference between earned and unearned money. Money is earned as people take part in the production and exchange of goods and services (1) by working, (2) by buying corporate stocks and bonds, and (3) by providing money to others who put it to work.

While the first two ways are obvious, the third is somewhat complicated because it involves depositing money in savings institutions that lend or invest it. (This is also indirectly true to life insurance, profit sharing and pension plans.) But in all cases this money earns interest while in the hands of other people.

So for all practical purposes the supply of earned money is made up of payroll, profits and interest.

Government taxes part of this earned money and uses it to buy part of this production. This is not inflationary because the total number of dollars seeking goods remains the same.

Government also borrows another part of this earned money by selling bonds to the people.

Now let's look at the unearned money spent by government.

This is extra money: money that does not represent the production of anything. It is created by depositing government I.O.U.'s in the commercial banks and receiving checkbook money in return. (This privilege is enjoyed only the Federal Government.) This brings into play an important economic law: The selling price of any stock of goods is about equal to the amount of money trying to buy it. If the money seeking goods goes down, prices go down, and vice versa.

So, when government creates and spends unearned money, the new total becomes the selling price, and the earned money loses purchasing power.

Throughout history, government have favored the idea of creating unearned money because then they do not need to levy additional taxes to meet their expenditures.

As we have seen, however, the spending of this unearned money automatically reduces the value of all money and is, in effect, an indirect tax.

Here is another historical fact: Every government on record has, in one way or another, indulged in this practice of introducing unearned money into the economy and, as a result, every currency on record has lost value, either slowly or swiftly.

The best way to keep the loss gradual is for the voters to urge economy upon their government.

A better solution is for voters to restrict government spending to no more than the amount people are willing to be taxed directly to pay for government services.

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

One of the principal characteristics of this election year is increased public concern over economic policy. The ordinary citizen is seriously discussing a variety of tax limitation proposals and curbs on spending.

We have a more sophisticated electorate than we did a generation ago. Certainly, this is true when so esoteric a subject as the capital gains tax is a topic of popular discussion.

Economic awakening

It's a good thing that the American people are getting interested in economics, for their future depends on the policies adopted.

The policies followed in recent years have brought us to a situation of national peril — to severe inflation, declining productivity, weakened industries, and a drastically lessened ability to compete.

America has had abundant capital, but the liberals in power in Washington have exported vast sums of capital in the form of foreign aid or misapplied it through mistaken social legislation.

Dennis J. Carney, chairman of the Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp., recently discussed some of our country's mistaken policies in an address at Steubenville, Ohio.

Mr. Carney pointed out that "United States loans, aids and financing, through American-supported international financial institutions, have already contributed $5 billion directly to the expansion of our (the steel industry's) competition." He cited the case of a recent U.S. Export-Import Bank loan of $74 million for construction of a steel mill in Trinidad and Tobago expressly designed to export steel products to the United States.

The U.S. government is doing this at a time when steel facilities are being shut down in the American Middle West.

American companies also are being forced to make non-productive investments.

Giving his own company's experience, he said:

"During the past four years alone, we have spent more than $103 million, or nearly one-half of our total capital expenditures for environmental control facilities. In the same four years, our entire profit was only $51.6 million. So we spent twice as much as we earned for environmental purposes."

Well, cleaner air is a desirable goal, but at what expense? And on what timetable? In economic terms — in terms of creating wealth for the American people and protecting their jobs — such "investments" are, in the words of The Wall Street Journal, "waste of capital and manpower in idle or unproductive endeavors."

The millions of dollars steel companies were forced to spend on pollution controls (the installations were mandated by the federal government) were millions that weren't available for the modernization and expansion of plants.

Therefore, America's foreign competitors often have more modern production facilities that can undercut American manufacturers even in the U.S. market.

Add to this situation the foreign aid for foreign governments, which use the aid to develop their industries, and a virtual mania in America against any sort of defense of national economic interests, and one understands the dimensions of the problems facing the United States.

The absurd and mistaken policies outlined here are destroying U.S. industries and eliminating jobs held by Americans. They are weakening the strength of America and eroding its wealth. The electorate must come to understand the folly of such policies and demand new approaches that will help restore and preserve the industrial might of the United States.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Sept. 21, the 264th day of 1978. There are 101 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1776, the first naval battle of the American Revolution was fought on Lake Champlain.

On this date: In 1792, the French Assembly voted to abolish France's monarchy.

In 1938, Czechoslovakia agreed to cede the Sudeten German area of that country to Nazi Germany.

In 1949, the People's Republic of China was proclaimed by its Communist leaders.

In 1949, West Germany became an independent nation as the U.S., British and French occupation zones in Germany were transferred to German control.

In 1964, the Mediterranean fortress island, Malta, became independent but remained within the British Commonwealth.

In 1967, rain and tornadoes that spun off Hurricane Beulah caused floods and wind damage in Texas, with losses estimated at $500,000.

Ten years ago: Several thousand people were under arrest in India after police clashed with government workers protesting poor living standards.

One year ago: Bert Lance resigned as Director of the Budget after weeks of controversy over his past business and banking practices.

Today's birthdays: Presidential assistant Hamilton Jordan is 34 years old. Secretary of the Army Clifford Alexander is 40. Pianist George Sandor is 66.

Thought for today: Praising what is lost makes the remembrance dear — William Shakespeare, 1564-1616.

"If they'd just slow down enough, I'd invite them to reading class."

The good people of Sitka

Did I ever mention that once, on a trip to Anchorage, Alaska, I put the Lear down in Sitka for refueling and uninvited and unexpected I received the most gracious welcome imaginable. Refreshments, invitations to go fishing, mementoes to take home — and it was all done with the easy, casual kindness of people to whom people are still important.

Sitka, Alaska, had its first mugging recently and the people of the area were so embarrassed.

Here's how it happened: An elderly couple from California, Martha and Lawrence Joseph, got off a tour ship to visit the picturesque fishing village and Sitka's Totem Park.

Two young men accosted them, knocked Mr. Joseph to the ground, struck Mrs. Joseph and grabbed her leather shoulder bag and ran with it — and all their vacation spending money, $200.

Well, the bag was found later in a trailer court — empty. Police and townspeople were so solicitous and sympathetic.

The Josephs tried to be philosophical about it and got back aboard their cruise ship which sailed that evening.

There had never been such a crime in Sitka before. Never. The Sitka Daily Sentinel mentioned the incident prominently. It was not long before the grapevine closed in on the culprits: two young men, 18 and 17. The two were charged with the crime — they don't fool around forever with such things in Sitka. The young men were appropriately punished but the money was not recovered.

Down at Harry Race's drugstore the talk about it led to a determination to do something about it. They chipped in dollars and fives and pocket change and pretty soon had $100.

Word got up and down the bay front and more money started coming in. Pretty soon there was a total of $200.

Somebody got the address of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph from police department records and a check was sent to them at their Culver City, Calif., address.

The check bounced.

What I mean is that the check was returned to Sitka with this letter from Martha and Lawrence Joseph:

"Dear Sitkans: Receiving your check for $200 gave us one of the happiest surprises we've had in many years. You are truly wonderful people. While we are of modest means, we would feel much better if you would accept return of the money to be used for whatever is your favorite charity."

The letter goes on to thank the Sitka Police Department and Police Capt. Olsen in particular for his efficient and sympathetic help.

The check for $200 has now been turned over to the Sitka Visitors' Bureau. If anybody ever again is similarly inconvenienced while visiting Sitka, there will be an immediate remedy.

But somehow I don't expect anybody ever will be.

Home repairs: warranties

Q. How long does a major brand dishwasher last?

A. About eight years.

Q. How long will it take before a water heater with a five-year warranty springs a leak?

A. Five to 10 years.

Q. What's the average life of a forced air furnace?

A. 15 years.

If you're considering buying a house more than 10 years old, expect something to go wrong. Maintenance records of the vital systems in older houses usually are non-existent. A huge 3.7 million houses will resold in the U.S. in 1978 alone — and if you're a typical buyer of one of these, you'll be virtually ignorant of how long the heating, plumbing, wiring and built-in appliances will last.

How, then, can you, an uninformed consumer, protect yourself against the future likelihood of costly repairs?

Since 1971, more than 100 companies have emerged from coast to coast, offering warranty plans that cover the cost of home repairs — and today warranties on resale homes are available in 35 states. (California residents buy more warranty plans than anybody else: Ohio residents are second.) You, the homebuyer, may sign a contract calling for a fixed annual fee and deductible clause. In return, the cost of your home repairs will be paid by the company.

As an illustration of how the plans work, American Home Shield Corp., Dublin, Cal., largest company in the U.S. selling comprehensive home service contracts, charges an annual fee of $20 to $250 with a deductible of $25 or $50 respectively.

Under its plan, the company will service, repair or replace the heating, air conditioning, electrical and plumbing systems, as well as built-in appliances (oven, dishwasher, etc.). Some of these plans also cover certain structural defects in floors, walls, ceilings and foundations, at extra cost.

Your house is not inspected before a contract is signed and AHS places no limit on the size or age of the house and cost of repairs. (Repairs on a covered house have cost as much as $6,000.)

In areas where it has a concentration of customers, AHS has its own in-house repairmen. It also has a network of 2,500 licensed contractors in the 35 states, who are authorized to charge up to $50 for parts and labor without prior approval from AHS. Beyond that, the company decides if bids from other contractors are required. And it samples repair work done to check performance and price.

You are guaranteed one-hour emergency service plus regular service within 48 hours — except where a house is in a remote area. In that case, another time limit is specified in the contract. Service calls cost between $20 and $50 and are applied toward the deductible amount. To minimize inconvenience and avoid unnecessary cost, you, a customer, will be given free advice (if you choose) on how to solve your problem or instruction on how to correct such simple malfunctions as a pilot light that might have gone out. You may call the company toll-free for repairs 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

The basic AHS plan is for one year, but you also can get two and three-year plans. Condominiums as well as single family homes are covered. The plans are marketed exclusively through real estate brokers, who do not receive a fee for selling the plan.

Brokers, AHS claims, have found that the warranty plans are an effective selling point and that they enhance the chances of a marginally-financed buyer to get a mortgage because the lender feels the new homeowner is protected against destructively high repair costs.

Thus, the key question: if you are offered a repair warranty by a responsible company in the field, should you rush to buy?

No, says David T. Smith, president of AHS, with refreshing honesty. First, consider how handy you are around the house as well as the house's age and condition and decide whether you really need a plan of this sort. Then, carefully investigate the company.

Read your contract with utmost caution to make sure it spells out precisely what the warranty covers, the cost of service calls for your area, whether they are deductible, if you can phone the company toll-free. Inquire about the company's repairmen. They should be licensed contractors, not just handy-men.

Ask your broker about the names of other homebuyers who have bought the warranties, check to see if they are satisfied with the services. Finally, take nothing for granted, no matter how great the lure!

Liquor and beer legal in Abilene after ruling

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The sale of liquor and beer was legal in Abilene today for the first time since Prohibition Days.

The Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission issued two permits for off-premise beer sales to Skinny Inc. Wednesday shortly after a decision by the Texas Supreme Court.

Another off-premise beer permit, one for sale of mixed drinks and a wholesale liquor distributor's license were approved later.

Texas' highest court said Wednesday that an Austin district judge had no right to interfere with an Abilene local option election over the sale of liquor and beer.

Wednesday's hearing in the Texas Supreme Court resulted from a June 17 local option election in Abilene on legal sale of beer and liquor. A July 10 vote canvass showed the "drys" won by a narrow vote. Then an Abilene district judge wiped out the July 10 vote on grounds that ballots from voting Precinct 19 were not counted and a July 20 canvass showed the "wets" won by a narrow margin.

Anti-liquor forces brought the legal fight to Austin and obtained a court order on Aug. 8 from District Judge Charles Mathews that voided the "wets" victory and said the July 10 decision for the "drys" would stand.

Both the "wets" and "drys" filed election contest suits in Abilene but neither has been set for hearing.

The Alcoholic Beverage Commission asked the Supreme Court to tell it what to do, specifically asking that Mathews' decision be cancelled.

"The mandamus is granted that Judge Charles Mathews issue an order setting aside his judgement of Aug. 8," the Supreme Court said Wednesday after hearing an hour and a half of argument. No motion for a rehearing would be considered.

"It concerns me that the counting of votes in Abilene is being interrupted by what happens here in Austin," said Associate Justice Jack Pope.

"Neither the attorney general's department nor the Alcoholic Beverage Commission cares whether Precinct One in Abilene goes wet or dry," said

Assistant Attorney General Max Flusche, representing the commission. "We are here with the argument that this should be litigated in Taylor County not Travis County."

"We are here because the Alcoholic Beverage Commission made an arbitrary decision and took the latest-dated vote canvass as a basis to issue permits," said Buck Wood, attorney for anti-liquor forces. "The only way we could perpetuate the dry victory (of the July 10 canvass) was to sue the ABC in Travis County."

Mary Joe Carroll, speaking for the anti-liquor group, warned that if the Supreme Court voided Mathews' order the election contest suits in Abilene would be dismissed.

"This court is deciding if Abilene is wet or dry," she said.

In murder trial of officer Weapon experts to testify

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A bloody bullet-proof vest that couldn't protect Patrolman Ralph Ablanedo and a bullet-riddled hackberry trunk have made the point — an AK-47 is a powerful weapon.

But prosecutors of David Lee Powell, 27, Ablanedo's alleged killer, planned to call ballistics experts today to testify further about the slugs that cut down the young officer.

Powell could be executed with a lethal injection if convicted of killing Ablanedo. Also charged with capital murder but scheduled for a separate trial next month is Sheila Meiner, who was driving Powell's car the night of the slaying.

Ablanedo's slender widow, Judy, put her hand to her mouth and wept quietly when the bullet-proof vest was introduced Wednesday. It had two holes in the chest area and was brown with dry blood.

The prosecution introduced a section of hackberry tree trunk, sliced down the middle to show a four-inch bullet track through the dense wood. The tree was a few feet behind where Ablanedo was standing when hit by the machine gun-like fire.

Jurors also saw an American M-67 hand grenade, a smooth, olive drab, baseball-shaped weapon, that apparently was tossed at policemen during the shoot-out following Ablanedo's slaying.

An AK-47, widely used by Communist forces in the Vietnam War, can fire 600 rounds of 7.62mm ammunition — roughly .30 caliber — a minute at a muzzle velocity of 2,329 feet per second.

A fingerprint expert, John Williamson, said he examined the AK-47 for prints.

"Did you find any prints of David Powell?" asked Assistant District Attorney Phil Nelson.

"No, sir. I couldn't get any prints off the gun," said Williamson.

The weapon was found propped between the front seats of Powell's red Mustang after Ablanedo was killed and a man exchanged shots with police before dashing to the Travis High School grounds.

Powell was found several hours later hiding on the campus.

Sgt. Doane Bailey brought in Ablanedo's gray bullet-proof vest, heavily stained by the officer's blood. Two holes pierced the vest. Doctors have testified Ablanedo's 10 wounds included two through the chest.

"Where did you get it?" Bailey was asked.

The doctors in the emergency room tossed it on the floor, and I picked it up," Bailey replied.

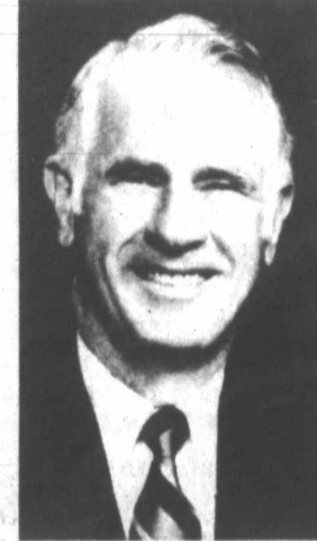

Police Sgt. Kenny Williams said the contents of Powell's car included a book called "Rifles," with two sheets of paper inserted between pages dealing with the Russian-made version of the AK-47.

Also in the car, he said, was a copy of "Head Magazine," which he called a periodical "for opium people."

Munitions experts from Fort Hood said the M-67 grenade picked up from the parking lot where officers traded shots with occupants of a red Mustang had a 16-foot kill radius and a 38-foot injury radius.

The grenade did not explode even though its pin had been pulled, officers testified. It was disarmed later at Fort Hood.

Farr to speak at symposium

W.D. Farr, head of National Cattlemen's Association Feeder Grade Subcommittee and Gene Edwards, president of Amarillo's First National Bank, will address the National Golden Spur Symposium, Lubbock, Friday.

The symposium on Livestock and Money will be held from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. in the museum of Texas Tech University.

The emphasis of the symposium will be on government regulations concerning ranching and livestock industry.

Other speakers at the symposium will be Everett Harris, president emeritus, Chicago Mercantile Exchange and Robert Jensen head of the Department of Nutrition at the University of Connecticut.

Sponsors for the symposium are Texas Tech College of Agricultural Sciences, American Quarter Horse, National Cattlemen's National Wool Growers, Ranching Heritage, Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers, Texas Cattle Feeders and the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers Association.

Legionnaire's disease hit VFW convention

DALLAS (AP) — Two of the 35,000 conventioners at the Veterans of Foreign Wars national gathering here in August contracted Legionnaire's Disease.

An inspection team from the Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta visited several Dallas hotels Wednesday searching air conditioning systems, water coolers and other environmental items for clues to the illness' mysterious habits.

"We're still unsure as to how this disease is spread," said Dr. Stella Goings of the CDC. "The organism that causes the disease seems to like water."

Neither of the two cases involved a Texas resident, but Dr. Goings said identification of those afflicted would have to come from local authorities. CDC officials in Atlanta reported both were "appropriately treated and doing well."

Dr. Goings said two other convention-related pneumonia cases were "presumptive" Legionnaire cases, and six other pneumonia cases gave no signs of being Legionnaire-suspect.

The VFW convention ended Aug. 25. Since the incubation period for the disease is 14 days, the doctor said there would be no reason to believe latent cases will be reported.

Dr. Lowell Berry of the Dallas City Health Department said the disease is thought to be common, with some 15,000 to 45,000 cases occurring annually.

Good Neighbor Day

In Phoenix, Arizona, 40 high school students spent an afternoon cleaning and painting a local rehabilitation center. In Ohio, students performed plays, created posters, and entertained area residents. Students in Lakeside, Montana, took part in a special poster and essay contest. In different ways, they were all celebrating Good Neighbor Day, a tradition originating in Montana in 1972. Good Neighbor Day, now celebrated in several states, comes this year on Sunday, September 24. The day's organizers are working with the public schools to help spread the observance to every part of the country.

Police notes

A westbound 1976 Chevrolet driven by Lawrence Hamilton of Laverne, Okla. was traveling in the middle lane in the 500 block of W. Brown, attempted to make a left turn into a private drive and was in collision with a 1967 Pontiac driven by William Bryant, 1316 E. Francis, who was also westbound.

Joe Gilmer Guthrie, 205 W. Craven, reported his house was burglarized and a television was stolen.

A.J. Hindman, owner of the Ozark Bar, 316 S. Cuyler, reported someone stole $500 out of the cash register.

A vehicle driven by Todd Guy Clement, 2407 Christine, attempted to pull away from a curb in the 1500 block of Duncan and was in collision with a southbound car driven by Lillian Reynolds, 2336 Duncan. Clement reportedly was cited for failure to yield right-of-way.

A car belonging to Paul F. Colliers, 820 N. Gray, was parked on the 400 block of W. Cook St. and was side-swiped by an unknown vehicle.

Marilyn Sue Coutts was westbound in the 700 block of W. Foster when she reportedly lost control of her vehicle and side-swiped the building at 721 W. Foster. Coutts was reportedly cited for changing direction suddenly.

Jerry Lyn Mercer of Miami, Texas was northbound in the 1800 block of Hobart and was in collision with a car driven by Vernon Earnest Baggerman, 2226 Hamilton, who was stopped at the intersection of 19th and Hobart. Mercer was reportedly cited for following too closely.

While on patrol at 4:30 this morning, officers discovered K's Thrift Center, 2207 Perryton Parkway, had been burglarized. A 1977 Pontiac was seen in the area and was stopped. The driver, a 19-year-old male, was reportedly acting suspiciously and was arrested and jailed for investigation of burglary.

Police responded to 34 calls in a 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today.

Fire report

The fire department responded to a fire at 10:20 p.m. Wednesday at 1240 S. Dwight. A throw rug over the floor furnace caught on fire and did light smoke damage to the house. The house was owned by John Hood.

Appeals court upholds Ferguson death penalty

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals has upheld the death penalty for Bernard Ferguson in the "savagely, ruthlessly" murder of an attendant at a Killean convenience store.

Ferguson, 17 at the time of the Jan. 25, 1977, slaying, was convicted of stabbing Randy Tingle four times in the back as Tingle lay face down in the store.

The appeals court said Wednesday expert medical witnesses testified that the size of the wounds was "compatible" with the knife having been twisted after it was thrust into Tingle.

An accomplice witness, Jody Persons, testified that just before Ferguson stabbed Tingle the last time, Tingle groaned and said, "That's enough." Persons said blood was gushing from Tingle's mouth.

Approximately $28 was taken from the cash register. Persons testified that on the way out Ferguson took a package of cookies.

Tingle pleaded with a caller to contact the police, who arrested Ferguson 3 1/2 hours later as he and Persons arrived in a car at a Killean residence.

Blood was found on Ferguson's jacket, pants, gloves and on currency found in his billfold. There also was blood on a knife found at the residence. The blood on the knife and jacket was shown to be the same type as Tingle's.

Lung cancer risk high in shipyard workers

BOSTON (AP) — The risk of lung cancer is unusually high among men who worked in shipyards during World War II, probably because of their exposure to asbestos and other possible cancer-causing materials, a federal study concludes.

In the study, conducted in coastal Georgia, researchers found that men who worked in wartime ship building and repair yards are 1.6 times more likely than usual to suffer the often-fatal form of cancer. The rate is far higher if the men also smoke cigarettes.

About 4.5 million American men held shipyard jobs during World War II.

In a review three years ago, the National Cancer Institute discovered a strikingly high rate of lung cancer on the East Coast between Charleston, S.C., and northern Florida and along the Gulf Coast, mostly in Louisiana.

The institute's latest study, published in today's New England Journal of Medicine, concludes that at least part of the reason for this trend is the shipyard work there more than three decades ago.

"Asbestos and possibly other shipyard exposures during wartime employment account for part of the excess mortality from lung cancer in certain coastal areas of the United States," the researchers wrote.

Asbestos, a fiber made from crushed rock, is used for insulation in shipbuilding. It causes lung cancer and mesothelioma, a rare cancer of the lining of the stomach or lung, but the diseases usually take 20 to 30 years to show up.

The researchers examined the records of 458 men who had lung cancer in coastal Georgia and found that 95 of them had worked in shipyards in Savannah and Brunswick during the war. Of 553 disease-free men, chosen for comparison, 80 had been shipworkers.

Court upholds conviction

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — The New Jersey Supreme Court upheld the criminal contempt conviction of The New York Times and its reporter Myron A. Farber today for withholding notes in a murder case.

The high court ordered Farber to report back to jail on Sept. 26.

The case has attracted national attention, and its outcome could set a precedent on freedom of the press.

Farber and The Times were expected to appeal today's ruling.

The court disagreed with Farber's argument that he is protected by the First Amendment and New Jersey's shield law for reporters.

Farber was jailed for 27 days after he refused to give his notes to the judge presiding over the murder trial of Dr. Mario Jaslavich, who Farber dubbed Dr. X in a series of articles for The Times.

The Supreme Court ordered Farber released while it considered his claim that the First Amendment and the state's shield law protect him from divulging his sources or turning over his notes to a court.

Farber, meanwhile, was served Wednesday with yet another subpoena for the notes he took while investigating a series of patient deaths at Riverdell Hospital in Oradell in the mid-1960s.

The subpoena, which seeks his notes on any interviews conducted with three physicians at the hospital, was the third served on the reporter since the Jaslavich trial began in February.

Eugene Scheiman, Farber's attorney, said the reporter would not surrender the files.

Ford to testify in hearing

By MARGARET GENTRY
 Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Gerald R. Ford is returning to Capitol Hill to explain how the Warren Commission went about investigating the murder of President John F. Kennedy.

The House Assassinations Committee summoned Ford to answer questions about the quality and thoroughness of the probe which led the commission to conclude that Lee Harvey Oswald was the assassin and that he acted alone.

The former president also was expected to be asked about a statement in FBI files that he agreed to keep the FBI "thoroughly advised as to the activities of the commission" on a confidential basis.

Ford is one of the few still-living members of the commission which then-President Lyndon B. Johnson created seven days after the assassination of Kennedy in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963. Ford was a House member from Michigan at the time. The late Earl Warren, then chief justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, was commission chairman.

The commission was assigned to get to the root of the assassination and the murder of Oswald by Jack Ruby.

Pamphlet available at local tax office

A new pamphlet is available from the local school district tax office that will help you understand the taxes you pay.

It is entitled "Taxpayers' rights, remedies and responsibilities."

The pamphlet explains the four basic stages of the tax process in the local school district.

The procedures are explained in separate articles which can be read at any time and checked at any time of the year when specific information is needed about school taxes.

Disease program slated at Shamrock

Shamrock General Hospital has announced a program about respiratory disease that will begin at 6:30 p.m. September 28 at the hospital.

Inservice Education Director R.N. Betty Hobbs stated speakers from the American Lung Association of Texas including Dr. Ted M. Nicklaus; William A. Young, RRT, and James D. Keister, LPT, will lecture.

Patients who suffer from lung disease as well as others who participate in the study will be able to recognize different lung problems when they occur.

New York it ain't, but ...

New town being built by former militant

By Tom Tiede

SOUL CITY, N.C. (NEA) — Late in the 1960s, amidst the struggle for civil rights in the black community, Floyd McKissick looked around and came to a harsh conclusion: "Too many people had that image of the black man on the corner with his fist in the air and nothing in his head or pocket." And so McKissick, a one-time fish peddler, set out to change the image. He decided to build a new town to prove "the viability of black participation in the free enterprise system." In 1968 he mortgaged his personal property, begged more than $1 million in loans, and began to option the land for Soul City.

Of course, everyone thought he was loony. For one thing, new towns were not built by individuals, they were built by wealthy corporations. Then too, McKissick could not have chosen a better location in which to fail: Warren County, N.C., is small, poor, and situated near the economic edge of U.S. civilization.

Still, McKissick was insistent. And today, 10 years later, his faith in his idea is apparently being vindicated. New York it ain't, but Soul City, pop. 200, is slowly taking form. The streets are paved, the public utility cables have been placed underground, and some 50 families live here in trim new homes.

The 5,000-acre community is still largely empty. Yet the swimming pool is filled with area children, the tennis courts have been occupied all summer, and as many as 250 people work here daily. Most jobs are in construction or administration; a hundred other workers are employed in a manufacturing plant.

To be sure, none of this development has come in the absence of tribulation. McKissick has had numerous tangles in the last decade, including one with the Ku Klux Klan. Early on, the Klan was part of a Warren County element that belittled Soul City; later, newspapers and public officers were to join the skeptics.

McKissick says now he understands the suspicion.

After all, he was a militant black, former head of the Congress of Racial Equality, and "people wondered if Soul City was going to be a refuge for revolutionaries." He says he spent years convincing observers that the town would be multi-racial, quiet and neighborly.

But suspicions continued. McKissick borrowed $10 million in federally guaranteed loans, and critics questioned what he was doing with it. There were newspaper editorials suggesting skulduggery. Some were saying McKissick was making himself rich. Eventually, U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms (R-N.C.) demanded an inquiry.

FLOYD McKISSICK isn't standing on the corner waving his fist anymore. The former head of the congress of Racial Equality raised enough money to launch a new town. Soul City's residents call it the most innovative economic development program ever created by a black American.

The inquiry took place in 1975. And as McKissick believes, it was a God send. The Government Accounting Office searched Soul City's books for weeks, and concluded they were clean.

In fact, the GAO found that the government owed Soul City $37. McKissick says the federal acquittal turned his project around.

Suddenly, the skepticism and criticism faded. New grant money began to come in. State and local agencies started to respond. Says McKissick: "For years we had spent money getting ready to build. Putting in water and public utilities, for example. Now at last we could start with the bricks and mortar."

Not that a metropolis has followed. Soul City advertises that it is located on a major Interstate (85), and is within 500 miles of 63 major cities, yet industry continues to be unimpressed. The "A. Phillip Randolph Industrial Park" here is all but empty — and, without business, the town is still only a promise.

Yet McKissick insists the promise is stronger than ever. Of $10 million borrowed, Soul City still has $2 million in the bank, collecting interest. Land here that once sold for $200 an acre is now worth 50 times that. Of 14 new towns being built in America, Soul City is the only one regularly paying bond premiums.

As for the master plan, it is essentially on schedule. The idea is to have 13,000 houses built in 30 years. McKissick says more than 40,000 people will live here then, in homes that now cost $25-$75,000. He adds there will be jobs for all, 1,500 acres of green space, and major shopping and theater complexes.

Best of all, McKissick says there will be harmony in Soul City. Harmony with the environment, the society, and each other. "The whole idea is to improve the human condition," he explains, "so if we get a white dude who says he don't like a black cat, we get them together and tell them we don't allow that stuff."

There remains much to be done toward these goals. Raising the rest of the money, for instance. Ever the optimist, McKissick says the community can be finished for about $75 million. Others think that's too low by half. Meantime, lending institutions are increasingly reluctant to deal with hard-pressed new towns.

But so what if the odds look risky? After 10 years of gambling, Soul City is alive and well. Residents call it the most innovative economic development program ever created by a black American. And even if it isn't, says Floyd McKissick, ex-radical, it's better than standing on corners waving empty fists.

Nun operates, maintains school without assistance

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — When Franklin University bought the Sisters of Notre Dame's high school building, the boiler engineer, building superintendent, and maintenance staff remained under a contract with Franklin.

All of those duties belong to a woman — a nun-of-all-trades. Sister Hilda Riensberg has been caring for the building for her order for the past three years.

Not many of Franklin's professional staff and probably none of the students realize that one woman performs the monumental task of keeping the building clean and its systems in perfect working condition. Those who do know are almost incredulous.

Sister Hilda, slim and simply dressed, is taken back by the attitude toward her. She is modest and unassuming: "I really like to work. And I have a feeling for buildings," she explained.

"They all are different. It takes about a year to really know a building. They do have quirks."

University officials respect her expertise and confidently leave management of the building in her hands.

"There's heat, that's all I know," said Fred Bunte, president of the University.

If something goes wrong in the plumbing or other systems, she sends for someone and she shows them where the problem is. Then Franklin is billed for the service.

Sister Hilda's occupation is not what one would usually expect from a nun of the teaching order of the Sisters of Notre Dame but she perceives a special need for the job.

"I volunteered for it because it seemed important to me for the buildings to be well kept. I think a well-maintained building and classrooms are good for learning."

For 10 years before coming to Columbus, she cared for a much larger school building owned by her order in Cincinnati, where she had a hand in construction work. "We converted a 90-year-old convent into a school, lowering ceilings and taking down walls."

Her day starts at 5:30 a.m. when, accompanied by an armed guard from the university, she leaves the convent to unlock the school next door and adjust the three boilers to bring heat up to daytime temperature.

She tests the water for minerals to determine whether the chloride is too low or if sulfite is too high. She cleans classrooms when they are not in use. On weekends when the building is empty she has help from a university student with such chores as cleaning the gymnasium floors.

She couldn't be happier if the arrangement — doing work she believes in, staying on in the convent community that has become a familiar home and adding her salary to the convent funds.

"I find it very gratifying and satisfying," she said softly.

Washington briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department would gain 18 months for its experimental program requiring some food-stamp recipients to work for the stamps under a bill passed by the House.

The "workfare" project was to be finished by next March, but it hasn't gotten under way yet. So the House voted Tuesday to give the Department until October 1980 to report to Congress on how it goes.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has passed a bill to increase veterans' burial allowances from $250 to $350. Backers of the bill, passed by a voice vote Tuesday, said the allowance has stayed the same for 20 years, while the costs of funerals and burial expenses have more than doubled. The bill now goes to the Senate.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency has asked that a pesticide known as DBCP be permanently banned from use on many food crops because it has been shown to reduce the sperm level of workers exposed to it.

The proposal would make permanent a temporary suspension ordered on the last October on the pesticide, which has been used in the United States since 1955 to control soil roundworms that damage crops, home lawns and golf courses.

Government dealing out food price projections

By DON KENDALL,
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has started in earnest to deal out food price projections for next year, something like a poker game where there is more shuffling than betting.

On one hand, food prices might go up "only" 4 or 5 percent — if farm prices hold steady in 1979, the Agriculture Department's chief economist, Howard W. Hjort, said Tuesday.

That would add something like $3.40 a week to a four-member family's grocery bill over the entire 12 months. This year, with food prices going up 10 percent, the same family's grocery bill will rise about $6.21 a week.

But Hjort told a House subcommittee that if farm prices go up again, possibly triggered by less meat and dairy products, next year's increase might be as much as the 7 or 9 percent predicted by private forecasters.

Using the same example, a family that paid $62.10 a week for food in 1977 and saw their average bills rise to $68.31 this year, could see them go up further to as much as $74.76 a week in 1979.

National briefs

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Car insurance rates should not be based on a driver's age, sex or marital status, a national task force of state insurance commissioners has recommended.

Michigan Insurance Commissioner Thomas C. Jones, chairman of the group, said Tuesday use of factors like age "for purposes of classifying automobile insurance risks lacks sufficient justification and therefore violates public policy standards regarding unfair discrimination."

BOSTON (AP) — After combing over 100,000 miles of ocean, the Coast Guard has called off its search for the missing Gloucester fishing trawler "Captain Cosmos" and its six-man crew.

The eight-day search ended at 6 p.m. Tuesday after turning up no trace of the craft, which disappeared with its crew on Sept. 9 while returning from Georges Bank.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — New restrictions on automatic dialing-announcing devices for "junk" calls and other telephone solicitations have been adopted by the California Public Utilities Commission.

The rules, effective Nov. 4, provide that automatic equipment — which can funnel recorded messages to telephone numbers in sequence or work from a specific list of numbers — can be used only under certain conditions. It requires that the recorded message be preceded by an announcement made by a human operator stating the nature and length of the recorded message and identifying the organization calling.

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — Attorneys for Kristina Berster plan to defend her against charges of violating U.S. immigration laws by arguing she was afraid of being returned to West Germany and branded a terrorist.

Lawyer William Kunstler said Tuesday that a "defense of necessity" would be employed at Miss Berster's Oct. 3 trial if a motion to dismiss the charges against her is rejected. Miss Berster, 28, has pleaded innocent to charges of violating U.S. passport laws and conspiring to enter the country illegally. The West German woman was arrested in July, after authorities say she crossed the Canadian border near Alburg, Vt.

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — A California Institute of Technology scientist has discovered a large asteroid located within the Earth's orbit and dubbed it "Ra-Shalom" to commemorate the Camp David Mideast summit.

The name is a combination of "Ra," the Egyptian sun god, symbol of enlightenment, and "Shalom," the traditional Hebrew greeting meaning "peace," discoverer Eleanor Helin said Tuesday. She said she first spotted the asteroid, which is 2 to 2½ miles in diameter, Sept. 10 on photographic plates at Palomar Mountain.

But Hjort, as USDA economists have done in the past, cautioned that next year's food prices will be determined by weather patterns, meat production and inflation in the general economy.

A major question, he said, is whether pork and poultry output will make up the slack in reduced beef production, brought about by cattle producers trimming their herds after years of depressed prices.

But there are other forces at work, too, involving legislative and administrative decisions in the works to alter farm programs in the year ahead.

Bills by the House Agriculture and Ways and Means committees would hike federal sugar supports to 16 cents and 15 cents a pound, respectively, compared with a target of 14.5 cents sought by the administration.

Three congressmen said Tuesday that the legislation could force retail sugar prices up by 55 cents a five-pound bag by 1982, a 45 percent boost from current prices.

Rep. Dave Stockman, R-Mich., said that either of the two measures in the House "will totally undermine our efforts to halt this runaway inflation."

Rep. Willis D. Gradison Jr., R-Ohio, called the Agriculture Committee version "a high-price welfare scheme for a relatively small group" of about 17,000 sugarcane and sugarbeet farmers in the United States.

Although he said that the bills probably will not be killed when they come up for debate later this week, Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., said that "it's a battle that has to be fought."

The Congressional Budget Office has estimated that the Agriculture Committee sugar bill would mean increases in food prices overall of 2.6 percent by 1982, adding $3.7 billion to the more than $200 billion consumers already pay for food each year.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency has proposed that a pesticide shown to reduce the sperm level of workers exposed to it be permanently banned from use on certain food crops.

Officials said Tuesday that the proposal would make permanent a temporary suspension ordered on the pesticide DBCP last October. The chemical would continue to be allowed for some other crops and purposes.

But it could be applied only by "trained applicators wearing protective clothing," the agency said.

Steven D. Jellinek, EPA assistant administrator, said the cancellation was proposed "on certain vegetable crops where possible residues could harm the general public."

However, the residue problem does not exist for other major agricultural, residential and commercial uses, so we're proposing that these be continued with new restrictions to protect farmers, applicators and field workers," he said.

The chemical has been used in the United States since 1965 to control soil roundworms (nematodes) that damage crops, home lawns and golf courses.

Concern over DBCP (dibromochloropropane) arose last year when it was identified as the cause of sterility and low sperm levels among production workers at the Occidental Chemical plant in Lathrop, Calif., the agency said.

Later tests on other DBCP workers in Arkansas and Chicago and on several hundred farmers, pesticide applicators and formulators showed the same problem, it said.

The agency was already investigating DBCP "as a suspect human cancer agent, since it had caused stomach and mammary tumors in laboratory studies for the National Cancer Institute," officials said.

Crops that would remain barred from DBCP use are: broccoli, Brussels sprouts, cabbage, carrots, cauliflower, celery, cucumbers, eggplants, endive, lettuce, melons, parsnips, peanuts, peppers, radishes, squash, tomatoes, turnips and strawberries, except nursery stock not allowed to bear fruit.

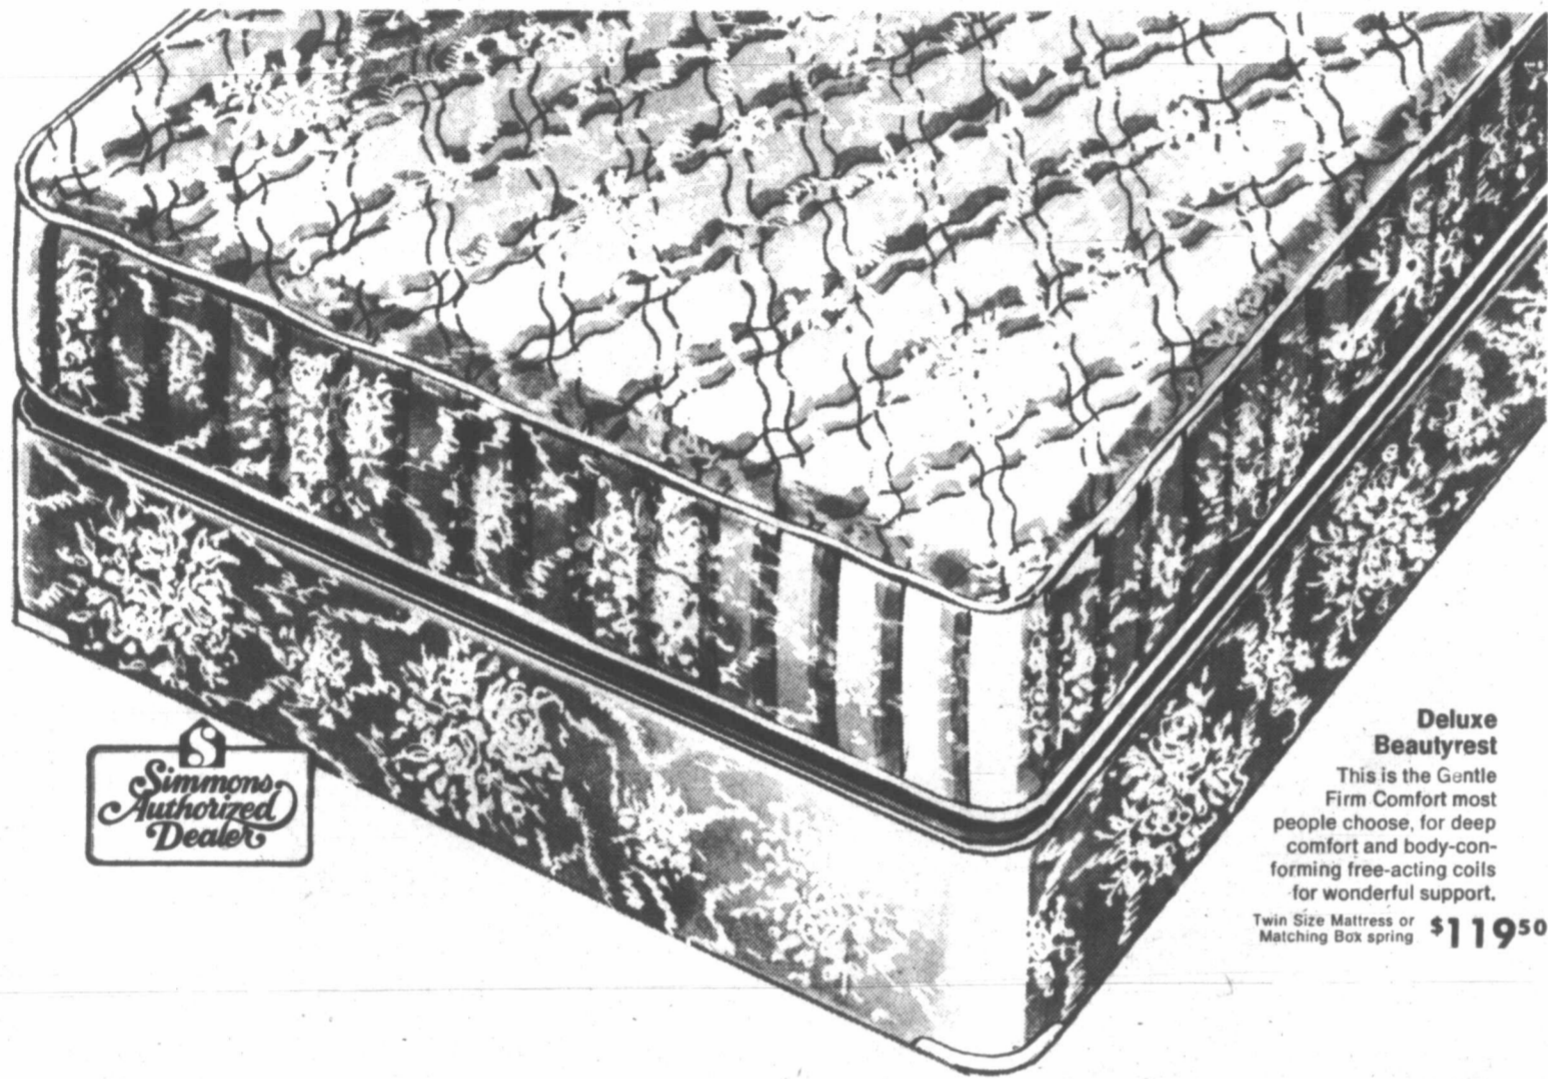

The chemical would be permitted on soybeans, cotton, citrus and other fruits such as peaches, grapes and pineapples, and on ornamental plants, lawns and golf courses.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has bought 100,000 metric tons of U.S. wheat for delivery in the coming year.

Earlier, the Soviet Union ordered 565,000 metric tons of corn to be delivered in the third year of a long-term purchase agreement that will begin Oct. 1.

Under the pact, Russia is committed to buy a minimum six million metric tons of corn and wheat combined each year.

Archie Bunker's 'throne' is national cultural exhibit

By EILEEN ALT POWELL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — For nearly eight years on national television, Archie Bunker has held court from a rust-colored, wingback chair.

It has been his soapbox for tirades against Jews, Poles and blacks. A place to worry out loud about job and family. A launching pad for verbal strikes against his "dingbat" wife, Edith.

But as of today, Archie Bunker can stop worrying about protecting his throne from would-be usurpers, notably his son-in-law. His chair is now in the Smithsonian Institution as a cultural exhibit.

The public will be able to view the chair — encased in plastic along with the patterned armchair used by Edith — in the "Nation of Nations" wing of the National Museum of History and Technology.

"They're on the second floor to the left of George Washington," one guide said of the chairs' location relative to a statue of the first president.

What the 1940s chairs — old when acquired for "All in the Family" from California prop warehouses — are doing in the national museum was explained by S. Dillon Ripley, secretary of the Smithsonian.

"Museum people have a high regard for objects that tell a story," Ripley told some 800 persons at the exhibit opening Tuesday night. "By honoring these chairs, we give recognition to a popular television series that we hope has stimulated audiences to re-examine their values and prejudices, dreams and desires."

The chairs have been central to the story of the couple from Queens since "Family" premiered on CBS television on Jan. 12, 1971.

From their living room, actor Carroll O'Connor and actress Jean Stapleton have dealt with topics from the Vietnam War to inflation, menopause and racism — often in a simultaneously distasteful and amusing way.

As son-in-law Mike once tried to explain Archie to guest star Sammy Davis Jr.: "He's not so bad. He wouldn't burr a cross on your lawn."

To which Davis responded: "No, but he might stop to toast a marshmallow."

The comedies — or what Ripley suggested might better be termed "social commentaries from one family's living room" — have won the show 50 million weekly viewers, more than a dozen Emmies, financial security for creator Norman Lear and star status for O'Connor, Ms. Stapleton and former regulars Sally Struthers and Rob Reiner.

And protests, too, from Polish-Americans, the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith and others offended by the Bunkers' words or deeds.

But Lear told those at the Smithsonian that having a positive influence on American viewers was the show's aim:

"We were happy tossing our pebbles into the streams of social awareness, and we will continue to throw more. Should an appreciable portion of the nation elect to join us at the water's edge, perhaps our combined efforts will be measurable."

Lear, 54, said that "Family" also reflected one of his late father's traits — "a territorial imperative about his chair."

His show became the first TV situation comedy that "examined social issues at the heart of American life," said Smithsonian curator Carl Scheele. "It changed the face of a lot of TV's approach... I don't think television could revert to the pre-Archie Bunker era."

The museum's exhibit has the chairs separated by a small walnut end table, topped with a doily, a glass ashtray and a partially smoked cigar. Floral wallpaper forms the backdrop.

Nearby in the wing dedicated to America's ethnic background are a rainbow-colored Wurlitzer, the white gloves and black-face makeup used by Eddie Cantor and a reconstructed 1925 Italian-American kitchen, complete with replica stewing chicken.

"Family" cast members thought it was appropriate to put the chairs in the Smithsonian.

"It's better than being cast in wax," concluded Ms. Stapleton.

O'Connor, prevented from attending the ceremony and a White House visit by continued treatment for high blood pressure, used a long-distance phone hookup to say that admission to the Smithsonian "is really a great thrill to me. No other honor done to Norman and the rest of the cast can possibly equal that."

The show goes on, despite the contribution of its chairs to the national museum. An assistant to Lear said replicas of the "originals" complete with frayed threads and stains have been created for future episodes of "All in the Family."

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Over the years I've read many letters in your column from people complaining that a friend, relative or neighbor habitually imposes on them. Then they ask, "What should I do?" And you always trot out your stock answer, "TELL THEM HOW YOU FEEL!"

Then I'd say to myself, "What a cop-out. Everybody knows that, but they're hoping Abby can offer some magic words that will make it easier for them."

Then I was faced with a very irritating situation. A couple I'd known for years made a habit of dropping by our lake cottage uninvited every Sunday morning. They'd even bring some of their friends and spend the entire day eating our food, drinking our beer, and using our towels which we'd find wet all over the place.

I finally got fed up and told this couple in no uncertain terms that they are not to come over unless invited!

At first they were hurt, but they got over it, and when we invited them they came gladly. We're still good friends, and now I'm sorry I didn't tell them sooner.

I just want to say that what appears to be a stock answer, "TELL THEM HOW YOU FEEL," shouldn't be dismissed as a cop-out. It's really the only workable solution to many a tough problem.

NEW YORK POST READER

DEAR READER: Thanks, I needed that. Telling someone how you feel doesn't necessarily mean telling them off.

DEAR ABBY: Is divorce contagious? I'm beginning to think it is. It seems to break out in large numbers in certain communities, and even in certain families.

If divorce is contagious, some smart scientist could make a fortune if he came up with a vaccine to prevent it. What are your thoughts on the subject?

YOUNG PROFESSOR

DEAR PROF: Divorce is not contagious, but it breaks out in certain communities because some people who have only considered it have gathered the courage to go through with it after friends and relatives have made the daring plunge. The only way to prevent divorce is to eliminate marriage.

DEAR ABBY: What do you do when people ask to borrow your comb?

I wash my hair and comb it every day before school, and find it very annoying when kids ask me if they can use it.

I feel like a snob and get mean looks if I say no. What alternatives do I have?

ANNOYED

DEAR ANNOYED: Carry two. One for your own use, and the other for lending.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet, "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Sent $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (25 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Ask Dr. Lamb

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Thanks to your column on problems caused by milk, I am now enjoying my cereal with Lact-Aid milk and avoiding all other foods in which milk makes up a very large portion. It's great not to have those awful cramps and diarrhea with no apparent answers.

Since we have solved this in the sense that I can eat cereal with milk as long as I use Lact-Aid everyone, especially me, wants to know if I will be able to enjoy cheese, ice cream and those foods again. Do you ever get your enzyme back after it has disappeared?

I've had some fractures. Can your bones get weak from not having enough calcium? I am 55 years old and have never been much of a milk drinker but have always loved ice cream, yogurt, cottage cheese and puddings.

Now I'm trying to remember to eat a couple of cans of sardines a week because they contain bones as well as being nutritious in other respects. Should I be supplementing my diet with calcium in some other way? I really don't care that much for milk even now that it doesn't cause stomach problems.

DEAR READER — Any woman in your age group probably should get the same amount of calcium that occurs in one quart of fortified skimmed milk a day. That's over a gram of calcium a day, preferably about one and a half grams.

Women who are on calcium deficient diets are five times as likely to have fractures from weakening of the bones as women who get enough calcium.

There are quite a few people who cannot digest lactose, the sugar that's in milk, because they lack an enzyme that breaks it down into single sugars for absorption. These individuals do have gas, diarrhea

Polly's pointers

DEAR POLLY — I need help for a friend who now lives in Japan. She soaked some clothes in her washing machine overnight with dry bleach (a Japanese product) and the next morning discovered the inside of the machine was discolored and all black. What will remove this discoloration? Vinegar did not work too well. Three or four washings have been done in the machine. The stains do not come off on the clothes but still remain in the tub. Help! — STEFANI

DEAR STEFANI — I think your friend should contact the makers of the dry bleach and ask them what could be causing her trouble. She is in Japan and she used a Japanese product so they should be able to give her some help. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — I have been painting my home here in Hawaii and found that after opening a can of paint if I punctured a few holes in the groove around the can this allowed the extra paint to drip back into the can. This is an especially big help when using gallon cans. No problem later with paint dried in the can. Much Aloha. — LU

Vera: 300 ideas yearly

By Ellie Grossman
NEW YORK (NEA) - A few blocks up the river from Sing Sing, in Ossining, N.Y., there's another large institution. Printex. Cheerful, homier than the first, but almost as well secured.

It was just a rambling mansion in 1948 when Vera Salaff Neumann and her husband, George, moved in; a perfect place to print her wallpaper designs.

The Neumanns eventually added to the house and now there are two rambling buildings with locked fire doors, buzzers, intercoms and corridors lined with artifacts Mrs. Neumann has collected in her travels. "I've been just about everywhere but Bali and Australia," she said recently, sitting in her bright office among more bric-a-brac with her longhaired dachshunds, Hansel and Gretel.

Well, why should you care where Mrs. Neumann, 71, has gone and what she lines her corridors with? Because if you drop the Salaff and the Neumann, that leaves "Vera" which goes with scarves which she started signing back when no one was signing anything.

In fact, she signed place mats first of all. She, George and another man were marketing them when they started Printex around 1946.

That's when the "Vera" look began — a monochromatic, free-style fern, to begin with. Other artists were filling their canvases with different things in 13 colors — none bright like hers. "My timing was right," she says, accounting for her immediate and continuing success.

George would silk-screen her designs for place mats on the kitchen table which was only large enough for place mat designs. (A stencil-like process which involves picking up each color individually from a painting and then scrunching them together again, silk-screening can be further researched in your public library.)

VERA SALAFF NEUMANN: "I'm a Leo and I feel better in the oranges and yellows. But I also like sophisticated muted tones."

"The Vera look is very fresh and bold," she explains. "I'm a Leo and I feel better in the oranges and yellows. But I also like sophisticated muted tones."

And whether it's an abstract design or big or little flowers, "it's very free. You can tell by the brush strokes."

Her public likes the look so she maintains it. And 25 artists at Printex (there are 100 employees in all) translate it from her and another colleague's designs into silk-screens for linens, sportswear, tissue boxes and other accessories which account for either 50 or 100 million dollars gross a year. She's not sure which.

But there's enough, though she doesn't get it all, she laughs, for her to swim in her own indoor pool every day before dinner. After she has worked in her wild flower garden on the grounds of her seven or eight-room house in Croton-on-Hudson.

The day starts for her at 8 a.m. when she goes to the office, sees to it that "my dogs have their water and then I try to sit down and get something designed very fast so I can get it out." She laughs again. Something like the fresh cherry blossom sprigs she was sketching the day we visited, which she swore no one planted on her desk for the effect.

Still, the ideas do come from everywhere. They must, because she needs 300 a year for three sportswear, three-and-a-half scarf and two linen collections. So she may take Japanese book-marks, say, and turn them into a pattern for a 28-inch silk scarf.

"I think of myself as an artist," she says. "I always wanted to be one, but I had to get some kind of profession under my belt, so I went to Cooper Union and Traphagen School of Design."

She went at night — "It took 100 years" — because her father, a coffee and tea importer who lost what he had in the crash, couldn't send her during the day.

During the day, she painted lampshades or cards, whatever art job she could get her hands on.

"After I graduated, I did get a job on Seventh Avenue in a coat place as an assistant designer. They said, see what that girl has in her portfolio and try to sketch it later. I was so horrified that anyone would ask me to steal someone's work that I decided Seventh Avenue wasn't for me."

So she designed children's furniture instead, and fabrics, and then she married George Neumann, an advertising man from Vienna who had fled Hitler's Germany and they began Printex.

"In general," she says, looking back, "I have pretty much what I wanted out of this life. But I miss my husband who died 12 years ago, and my parents. And my sister is very ill."

So there are concerns. And once, when George died, she says, "I thought about not going on for about a week, but I thought he'd think I was a coward if I didn't continue. I think working and being independent has really kept me going and being interested in people."

Short (five feet point nothing), white-haired, sprightly, energetic, she takes the good that has come her way easily because "nothing falls into your lap. You have to work especially hard."

But then you can let pleasure fall your way too. Like fish for dinner; quiche and salad for lunch in an executive dining room overlooking the Hudson; Scarlatti, Bach, biographies, and the fact that her son, a sculptor, and her daughter who lives in a cottage on her grounds, are both going to make her a grandmother this year for the first time.

DAR

At a recent meeting of Las Pampas Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Phil Vanderpool gave a program entitled, "Our Constitution."

Regent, Mrs. J.S. Skelly, Jr., presided over the business meeting; the president general's report was read by Betty Hudson; and Mrs. Henry Merrick gave the national defense report.

CCC

The Civic Culture Club met recently in the home of Mrs. F.R. Grantham. Groom, for a covered dish luncheon.

A schedule for visiting home-bound members was organized.

The program, "Heritage of General Federation of Women's Clubs (GFWC)," was presented. Members of the association number approximately 10,000,000.

Opportunities for improved quality of life will be the topic of future study and projects.

Borger girlstown

Girlstown, U.S.A. at Borger will celebrate their eleventh birthday with an open house at 2 p.m. and a barbecue from 3-7 p.m., Saturday.

The program will feature Ernest H. Loehr of Amarillo. Loehr is well known as a civic servant as well as a businessman.

The highlight of the celebration will be the crowning of Miss Girlstown, U.S.A., Borger. This is an honor bestowed upon a girl who has shown leadership qualities in academics, campus life, and religion. She is elected by the other girls and staff children. She will represent the girls at special functions and will be their spokesman for one year. The results of election are kept secret until Miss Girlstown is crowned.

Milwaukee is famous as the beer capital of America. But what do the beer drinkers of Milwaukee drink?

According to the 1978 Milwaukee Journal Consumer Analysis, a report which surveys consumer brand preferences in 200 categories of goods and services, Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer has once again moved ahead in its long-standing position as the overwhelming favorite of Milwaukee beer drinkers.

Survey results disclosed that Pabst, in both bottles and cans, was a five-to-one favorite. In fact, preference for Milwaukee's Pabst in cans was greater than the total of its nine competitors, and in bottles greater than the total for ten other competitors.

More than 3,000 households in the four-county metropolitan Milwaukee area participated in the 55th Annual Journal Consumer Analysis, the oldest such survey in the United States.

Sea farming has run into political snags

By ROBERT LOCKE
Associated Press Writer

The 1970s, which history may mark as the Decade of the Deep, could open a new age of scientific discovery and economic benefit surpassing the returns from the just-ended decade of space exploration.

— William A. Nierenberg, head of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography, September 1970

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It was to have been the decade when man would become master of the ocean depths and the seas would surrender their treasures.

As the 60s ended, there were visions of man-made islands and ocean-floor colonies; of mineral-rich nuggets to be gathered from the sea bottom; of fish ranches and seaweed farms to feed a hungry world.

As the 70s conclude, however, the sea's treasures still remain largely untouched. Economics chipped away at the vision; politics created further obstacles.

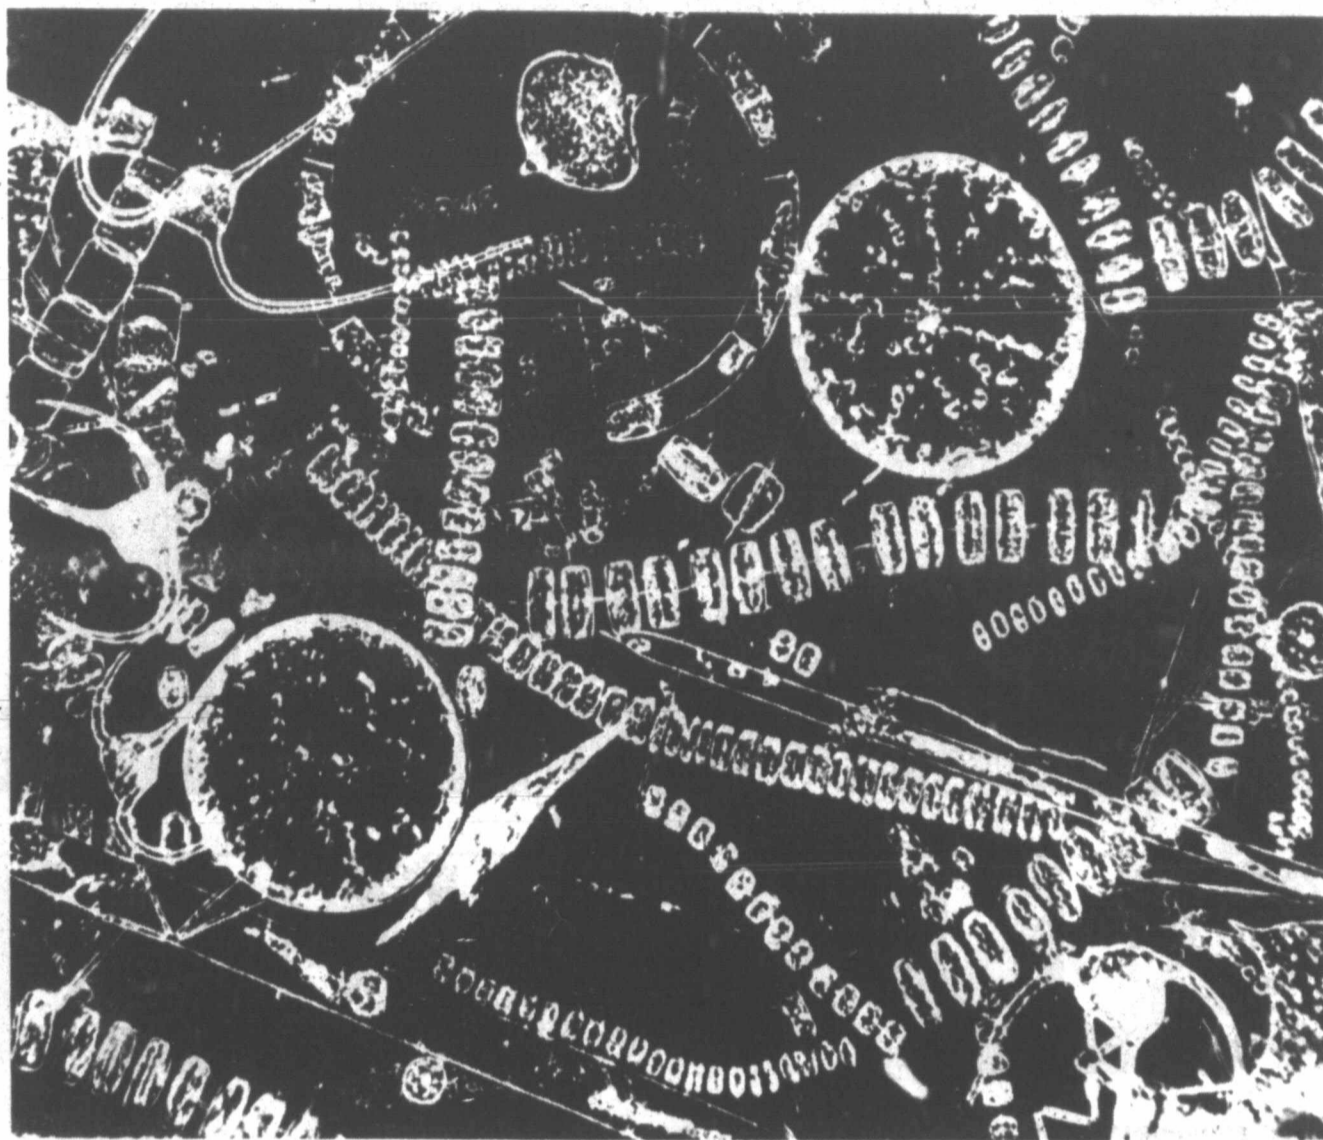

"Did we have a Decade of the Deep? Well, yes and no," says Dr. William Nierenberg, head of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography near San Diego and one of the world's top oceanographers. Scientifically, the answer is yes, he says. "The difficulty has been that the political side is going badly. It's become a hopeless mess."

Nations meeting to develop a Law of the Sea strategy have entered a no-man's land, says Nierenberg, an adviser to the U.S. delegation at the United Nations-sponsored conference. "This whole Law of the Sea thing has been nothing short of a disaster. They're restricting the ability of scientists to do research on the oceans."

Nierenberg says the first really scientific exploration of the deep ocean floor has been performed by Scripps' drilling ship, the Glomar Challenger.

"We have some clue now of the very large mineral resources in the oceans that are going to be available someday," he says. But getting at them is another matter. One such resource is manganese.

The conference "saw this wealth... as the heritage of mankind," he says. But "the whole thing seems to founder on an inability to agree on how to set up an (international) organization to do the mining."

TINY MARINE PLANTS, magnified 200 times, look like items from a jeweler's showcase. They do, in fact, represent part of the riches of the ocean. They Nierenberg doubts that manganese or such minerals as copper and iron will be significantly exploited during the next decade or two.

Also unexploited are Scripps-designed islands that could carry smelters and factories never got beyond the drawing board. "They would be very expensive," he concedes.

Money apparently plagued planned permanent sea laboratories or colonies — a vision the U.S. Navy once proposed for the mid-1970s and highlighted with its Sealab experiments in which aquanauts lived for several weeks on the bottom of the Pacific Ocean.

Howard R. Talkington, head of ocean technology at the Naval Ocean Systems Center in San Diego, says, "Sealab just became too expensive as you tried to support people deeper and deeper. It just wasn't economically viable." Money had much the same effect on under-sea vehicles, he says. The Navy shifted its emphasis to putting machines, rather than men, in the sea.

Most scientists agree that the wealth of oil and gas being coaxed from beneath the seas is a mere hint of the riches in waters covering 70 percent of the earth.

Nierenberg says waves that ripple the ocean's surface represent a very valuable resource.

"Waves are caused by the wind, so you've got a natural windmill out there," he says.

"It's simple to make a wave device that will go up and down and generate electricity."

However, doing it economically and reliably — battling the corrosive power of salt water is a continuing problem. Few wave-energy devices have reached the testing stage.

Another innovation is Ocean Thermal Energy Conversion, which relies on the temperature difference at that point where the layer of water warmed by the sun meets the deeper and colder water below the surface.

Most OTEC designs would circulate a fluid such as ammonia through a closed loop. Cold, deep water condenses the ammonia to a liquid, which is pumped upward and heated to a vapor by warmer water near the surface. The vapor turns a turbine to produce electricity. Then repeats the cycle.

TRW Inc. of Redondo Beach, Calif., has a U.S. Energy Department contract to provide experimental OTEC components in the early 1980s.

Besides producing energy, a system like OTEC could help stimulate mariculture, or large-scale ocean farming.

That would entail lifting microscopic nutrients from sea depths nearer the sunlit surface, and by recreating such natural upwellings OTEC might greatly enlarge the food supply for fish and the supply of fish for people.

Caltech's Wheeler North is working on an artificial upwelling in an experiment at raising kelp, seaweed used in products from beer to textiles.

He hopes to float a quarter-acre kelp farm off Southern California and fertilize it by pumping water from the bottom.

Small scale mariculture has been under way for years, but it's mostly to produce high-priced, fancy food — clams, oysters and lobsters, for example. That, Nierenberg notes, doesn't help in feeding large populations.

Another marine resource of huge potential is krill, shrimp-like animals that live in enormous schools in the Antarctic Ocean.

Conflicting national claims may present obstacles, and so, says Scripps' Walter R. Schmitt, may "the psychology of eating."

Dan Brown, a Scripps engineer, says the overall problem facing scientists is the thin spread distribution of ocean resources.

"The resources are all there," Brown says. "but everything is so dilute. And a lot of these things don't look so attractive now as they did at first glance. Reality has finally caught up with the ideas."

Technology upstages ELO's music

By Rob Patterson
 FORT WORTH, Tex. (NEA) - Electric Light Orchestra's four-month trek across America is more than a tour; it's a portable monument to mankind's progress, courtesy of rock and roll. Barnum, Beethoven and the Beatles meet the future in giant sports arenas, where fans enjoy a close encounter unlike any kind.

Upstaging ELO themselves on their tour is "Big Mac," a 65-foot diameter space ship that lifts off to launch each show to the strains of specially penned music by noted British composer Benjamin Britten and receives a standing ovation at the end of the show.

Lights swirl and flash, lasers sear through the stadium air. "Mac" splits open like an extraterrestrial clam and voila, ELO leader Jeff Lynne and company appear in a burst of energy like Kirk, Spock and the Star Trek crew beaming aboard.

While ELO ran through a tight but just a bit too easy display of the hits that endeared them to radio listeners and record buyers in the millions, a holographic laser screen, shots of light, and rich moodily lit scenes from the saucer drew cheers from the assembled space travellers.

"It is fair to say that this is the largest and most adventurous touring rock and roll presentation that has ever hit America," says "Star Fleet Commander Truman," known professionally as Andy Truman, whose British production company created and now flies the saucer, while his British wit keeps stray passengers chuckling.

"This is a totally British space effort," says Truman. "It is to give Cape Canaveral a run for their money. We don't believe that the United States should be the only ones in the space race, and so far we have been the only ones who have actually designed a space ship that can hover (courtesy of guy wires)."

The statistics of such an endeavor are staggering: 54 "Ground Crew" technicians; 14 45-foot semis to carry the equipment ("Often travelling at warp factor seven to reach the next lift-off," explains Truman); 16 hours to set up, not once yet missing lift-off. The saucer itself, a 525,000-watt, five and a half ton lighting rig with four times the power of the average rock lighting show, costs $300,000 for the basic model. But with extras like air conditioning, carpeting and a "force field laser show," the cost is closer to $2 million.

"No mean sum this side of the Milky Way or the other side," muses Truman. The band will merely break even claims Truman. Why did they do it?

"It's just a thank you from ELO to the people who have been buying the records over the years," says Truman. "They don't need spaceships to sell records, and they don't need spaceships to make people come listen to them."

And right after a lucrative new American distribution deal with CBS records, ELO stands to sell quite a few copies of the next record to the many fans they've "encountered" on this tour.

SHOP IDEAL WHERE YOU GET GUNN BROS.

Tourists finding home is place to be

LONDON (AP) — The great wave of European immigration is over, but still the gateways to America are thronged with the poor, the despised, the rejected, the accursed and the cheated.

The tourists are coming home.

Perhaps the time has come to update Emma Lazarus' touching poem inscribed near the Statue of Liberty and multiply it in miniature at all the international airports receiving the homeward-bound wave of victimized humanity.

Something on the order of: "Give me my tired, my broke,

My ripped-off tourists burdened with duty free.

The dollar-depressed refuse of your charter flights.

Send these, the fleeced, the tempers lost, humiliated, home to me.

I life my dimmer, energy-saving lamp beside the golden door.

"Pigeon droppings," John Osborne, Britain's angry young man, called them. And the more he saw them lining up at the Royal Court Theater to boost the profits of his play "In Admissible Evidence," the angrier he got, which is the approved manner of treating American tourists abroad, short of actually horn-swogging them.

The ever innovative Japanese have dreamed up a new way of gouging the tourists even before they get into town. They built the new Narita airport 45 miles outside Tokyo so the obsequiously smiling cab driver can extract $60 plus tip — more if his meter is conveniently not working — before the visitor even sees the outstretched palm of the hotel doorman.

But "parting is such sweet sorrow," as Shakespeare undoubtedly was moved to remark when the British Rail porters took him for a bundle at the Stratford-on-Avon station.

At docksides, rail terminals and airports all over Europe homeward-bound Americans all had sad parting tales to tell.

In Lucerne, $2.75 for a coke in Lucerne; 82 cents on the dollar for Traveler's Checks in Oslo, flights overbooked, reserved seats lost in the computer, handbag snatched by a motorbike thief in Florence, cabbie demanding 20 pounds ($40) for a trip to London's Heathrow.

Hidden $7 a night air conditioning charge at a Riviera hotel, shoes stolen outside a hotel door in Belgrade, inedible food at plunderous prices, luggage lost in Moscow, pockets picked in Zurich, Lyon, Lake Como, Cardiff and Lisbon, penalty fee for declining dollar in Kabul (where local currency is worthless even locally).

And an ingenious third collection "especially for our tourist friends" at the little baroque (what else?) parish church outside Ravenna.

It is impossible to sink in Saskatchewan's Lake Manitou, Canada's equivalent to the Dead Sea, because of the salinity of the water.

September share of sales tax

Millions sent to cities

Checks totaling $70.1 million have been sent to 900 Texas cities as their September share of the local option one percent sales tax. State Comptroller Bob Bullock said Friday.

The September rebates raise the cities total for the year to $306.5 million, an increase of 16.3 percent over the same period last year.

Pampa has received $625,596.98 to date in 1978, a 19 percent increase over the $524,020.60 received during the same period in 1977.

The sales tax is collected by merchants and other sales tax permit holders along with the state sales tax and rebated monthly to the cities in which it is collected by the comptroller's office.

Area cities' 1978 payments to date have been: Amarillo, $4,483,813.40, an 8 percent increase over 1977; Canadian, $94,703.27, a 12 percent increase; Lefors, $2,059.75 (increase amount unknown); McLean, $14,902.71, a 6 percent increase; Miami, $7,669.45, a 4 percent increase; and Wheeler, $28,187.88, a 20 percent increase.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) When you are in the presence of a certain individual, you tend to irrationally see yourself as somewhat inferior. Today you might foolishly let this happen again.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't be overly concerned today about doing things to please another if it goes against your better judgment. Operate under your own high standards.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Too much deliberation regarding decisions today could be self-defeating. Your first thoughts are your best, so behave accordingly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be careful in situations that call for divvying-up today. Unless the spoils are divided equally, someone will have hurt feelings.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You are very susceptible to flattery today. One who is aware of this may use shallow praise in order to twist you around his little finger.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be discriminating today regarding disclosure of confidential information. Talk openly to persons you love and trust, but be tightlipped with others.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your self-discipline may not stand up today if you are tempted by things you know you shouldn't do. Steer clear of situations where it could be put to the test.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Normally if you feel you're getting the short end of something you're ready to stand up for your rights. Today, you may be reluctant to do so.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You may put too high a premium on your independence today and do something foolish, just because someone concerned about you strongly suggests you do otherwise.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Others have more respect and appreciation for your talents today than you do. Believe it when they praise your worthy efforts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today you could find yourself in a predicament where you could personally profit, but may have to lower your standards in order to do so. 'Show must go on'

Tragedy fails to kill couple's dream

By Jane Richards

WINFIELD, Kan. (NEA) — Bruce and Veda Rogers' dream of establishing their own summer theater began to materialize in 1969. That was when they bought an old barn near Vassar, Kan., and converted it into a playhouse.

In 1974, the couple expanded their activities with the purchase of the showboat, Whippoorwill.

They had even bigger plans for 1978.

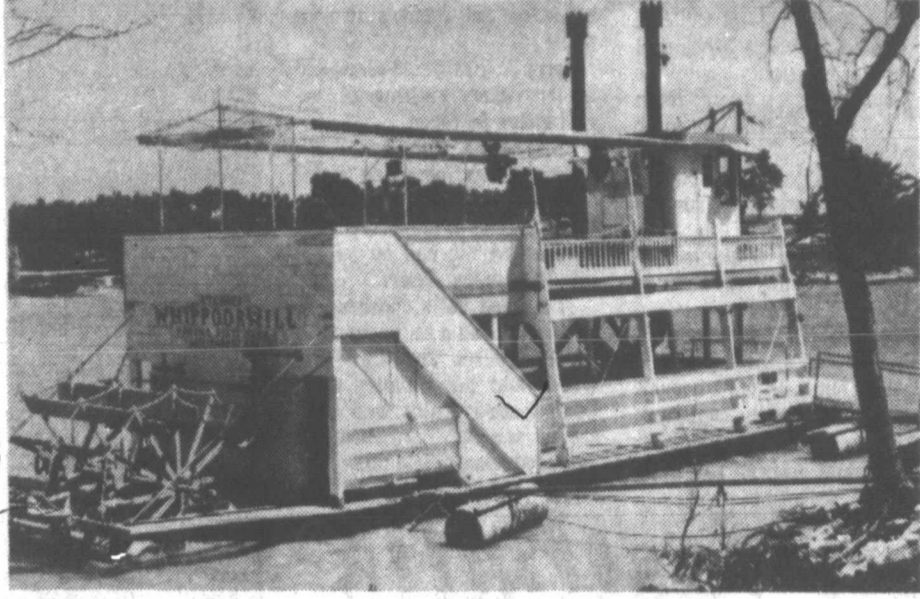

But on June 17, an unexpected storm — officials called it "an act of God" — capsized the showboat and claimed 16 lives. The storm also caused at least $20,000 in damage to the boat and its furnishings.

"It had been a shoestring operation for nine years," Bruce said. "We were just beginning to get on top of it."

The Rogers were never blamed for the Whippoorwill catastrophe. The boat had been inspected, licensed and insured. Life-saving gear was on board.

When they were convinced nothing could have prevented the tragedy — after the last body had been recovered and memorial services had been held for a member of the Whippoorwill crew — the Rogers decided "the show must go on."

TRAGEDY STRUCK Bruce and Veda Rogers in June when their showboat, the Whippoorwill, capsized in a freak storm. But the courageous couple had the boat back in operation within weeks.

Foreign briefs

SINGAPORE (AP) — Government owned Radio-Television Singapore announced today it will broadcast liquor advertisements only during late evening hours to avoid encouraging the use of alcohol by young viewers and listeners.

The network, which operates two television channels and two radio stations, also said it would limit commercials for women's underwear to the hours of 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. and after 10 p.m.

TORONTO (AP) — Peter Kent, Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's new African correspondent, was refused entry to Rhodesia when he arrived to begin his first assignment in that continent.

Trina McQueen, a CBC news executive, said Kent was met by security officials Monday at the Salisbury airport who told him he was not welcome and ordered him back on the plane. He returned to London.

Mrs. McQueen said a CBC producer, cameraman and soundman were granted one-week visas when they arrived in Salisbury Saturday, and a Rhodesian information officer who was asked about the Kent incident Tuesday said, "There has been some kind of mistake."

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Danish voters have approved lowering the voting age from 20 to 18.

The vote, in a national referendum Tuesday, was 1.21 million in favor and 1.04 million opposed. It means some 140,000 teen-agers will be added to the voting lists.

MOSCOW (AP) — Two dropouts from a construction college have been convicted of a series of robberies and two rape-murders and one was sentenced to death, the newspaper Sovetskaya Litva reported.

It said the other defendant was sentenced to 10 years in a labor camp because he was only 17 years old when the murders were committed last spring.

HJOERRING, Denmark (AP) — A gale-force storm has topped the Skarrekitt, a 48-foot pillar of limestone that rose out of the sea 150 yards off the sandy shore of northwest Jutland.

The pillar was the source of many legends, including one that a man seeking to find a treasure of gold hidden near the top was attacked by a large seabird nesting in the stone and fell to his death.

Tuesday's storm left only a three-foot mound of the Skarrekitt's stone jutting from the sea, and geologists said that, too, will soon disappear.

Just four days after the storm, they re-opened the Vassar Playhouse to a full house. Dinner-theater cruises on the repaired and refurbished Whippoorwill resumed within three weeks. Sympathetic friends and admirers rallied to their side.

The Rogers say words cannot describe their anguish at the showboat accident. But despite their recent difficulties, they have not given up their ambitious plans for expanding their summer playhouse into "Vassar Junction," Veda explains, "will be a place where people can come to enjoy a gourmet dinner, a show, music and entertainment in the lounge, an art gallery, even flowers."

"We plan to have several artists-in-residence, who will be encouraged to create without having to worry about a place to live or where their next meal is coming from," she continues. "We feel that there are so many ways to be creative — on stage, in the studio, even in the kitchen and the garden. What we want is to provide a place where this can happen."

To make it happen, Bruce and Veda resigned their teaching jobs this spring and put their family home in Winfield on the market. They moved to Vassar to devote all their time and energy to making their dream come true.

"It's like a homecoming for us," Bruce explains. Both grew up just a few miles from Vassar Junction. The pair credits Bruce's father with inspiring their love for the theater.

"What was my father like?" Bruce pauses a moment. "My father was — I can't explain — he was in vaudeville, he was a songwriter, an agent, a mailman, an insurance salesman, a newspaper editor. Well, my father was a very brilliant man!" (He was also the stepfather of Ginger Rogers, who bears his name.)

"Bruce and I attended a tiny school," Veda continues. "When two people in a small school can play the piano and sing, they are asked to perform on just about every program. We frequently did Bruce's dad's songs, and sometimes he would accompany us."

Veda's interest in the performing arts began at age 5 when she first played the bass drum in her family's orchestra. "There were nine of us children," Veda explains, "and we had the orchestra until World War II scattered the family throughout Europe and the Pacific."

years, Bruce and Veda played the county fair circuit, at lodges and churches — anywhere a program was needed. "We'd do anything," Veda laughs. "Popular music, sacred songs, Bruce's dad's songs, the classics — anything."

Both majored in music education at the University of Kansas. When Veda was a sophomore and Bruce a junior, their friendship ripened into love. They were married in 1956.

Then came three children — two daughters and a son. By that time, the couple was hooked on community theater.

"Our kids literally grew up in the theater," Veda recalls. "We even had a little bed we'd take along so they could sleep backstage."

Those were hectic years. Bruce taught school in the winter and flew with the Air Force Reserve in summer. Veda stayed home to give voice lessons and wash "70,000 diapers a week."

"We were too busy to do much dreaming then," she sighs. "But we knew we had to get more education. So we sold our house and returned to KU for a year and a half of graduate work."

Then, 12 years ago, the Rogers moved to Winfield, where they taught school and helped organize the community theater.

"We're prime believers in community theater," Veda says. "It provides a really good way to work off aggressions, anxieties and problems."

Last year, the couple starred in "Trouble in Tahiti," the theater's entry in the Festival of American Community Theaters. They won the Kansas competition and placed second in the regionals.

Theater has been more than an avocation for the Rogers since 1969, when they purchased the barn that was to become Vassar Playhouse. They also bought an adjoining rock house, which, along with several trailers, is now their living quarters.

The next year, they founded the Lakeside Players, a company of 25 to 30 young people seeking theatrical experience. The players not only present the Playhouse and Whippoorwill shows; they sell tickets, write publicity, build sets, prepare meals, take care of the grounds, even keep the Whippoorwill engine running.

The three Rogers children are charter members of the Lakeside Players. Daughters Kate and Margaret, both survivors of the Whippoorwill catastrophe, are performing arts majors in college. Son Chris is a high school senior.

"Our children enjoy the whole operation," Veda notes happily. "Together, I know they could run the whole show. It's a good feeling."

At this rate, the Rogers may be building a Kansas theatrical dynasty to rival Broadway's Barrymores of old.

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (AP) — The state couldn't convict the rider, so it filed suit against his motorcycle.

Kelly Pearce, director of the Idaho Department of Law Enforcement, filed suit Tuesday in 7th District Court against a 1970 Honda 750.

The suit alleges the motorcycle was used to transport marijuana and should be awarded to the state.

The case against the motorcycle's rider, Allen Ireland of Idaho Falls, was dismissed Aug. 29. But the case against his bike lingers.

Folksy Forecasts

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A big argument brewing in these parts is which is the best indicator of winter: the level of hornets' nests or the lack of black bands on woolly caterpillars.

"I've heard three people tell me about finding hornets' nests low on the ground, which indicates an open winter with not much snow," says folklorist writer and naturalist Nevyle Shackelford of Beattyville.

Says Culbertson weather watcher Goebel Culver, "I broke a shuck off my corn the other day and it ain't no big, tight shuck. I say it's going to be a mild winter..."

Some forecasters say most caterpillars are showing solid blonde — meaning a mild winter.

Boston loses scoreboard game

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

The Boston Red Sox were so busy playing scoreboard baseball they forgot about the game on the field.

Before the Red Sox came to bat in Detroit they were delighted to see that New York Yankee ace Ron Guidry had lost to lowly Toronto.

"We couldn't wait to get on the field when we knew Guidry got beat in the first game," said Jerry Remy, who had four of Boston's six hits in a 12-2 clobbering by Detroit Wednesday night. "Then we saw Toronto ahead 2-0 in the second game and we were really psyched up.

Meanwhile, Toronto handed Guidry only his third loss in 25 decisions, 8-1, in the opener, but the Yankees rallied for three runs in the ninth to win the nightcap 3-2.

With both Boston and New York having 10 games left, the Yankees lead the Red Sox by two games in the American League East.

Elsewhere, Milwaukee moved to within 5½ games of the Yankees with a 5-4 victory over Kansas City, which now leads California by five games in the AL West. Minnesota beat Texas

5-3. Rusty Staub and Lou Whitaker each belted three-run homers for Detroit. Boston's Jim Rice, the major league home run leader, belted his 42nd, a two-run shot in the ninth.

Blue Jays 8-2, Yanks 1-3
Guidry, who entered the game with a 21-inning scoreless streak and seven straight victories, gave up a pair of unearned runs in the first, then gave up more than two runs in one inning for only the second time all season.

"I thought I had good stuff," said Guidry, who allowed six hits and five runs in 12-3 innings. "They just hit the ball and found the holes. I thought I made good pitches on a couple of guys, but they fought them off and came back to get some good hits.

Chris Chambliss and Graig Nettles also singled in runs in the Yankee ninth. The Blue Jays rapped out 13 hits in support of Mike Willis' six-hitter in the first game.

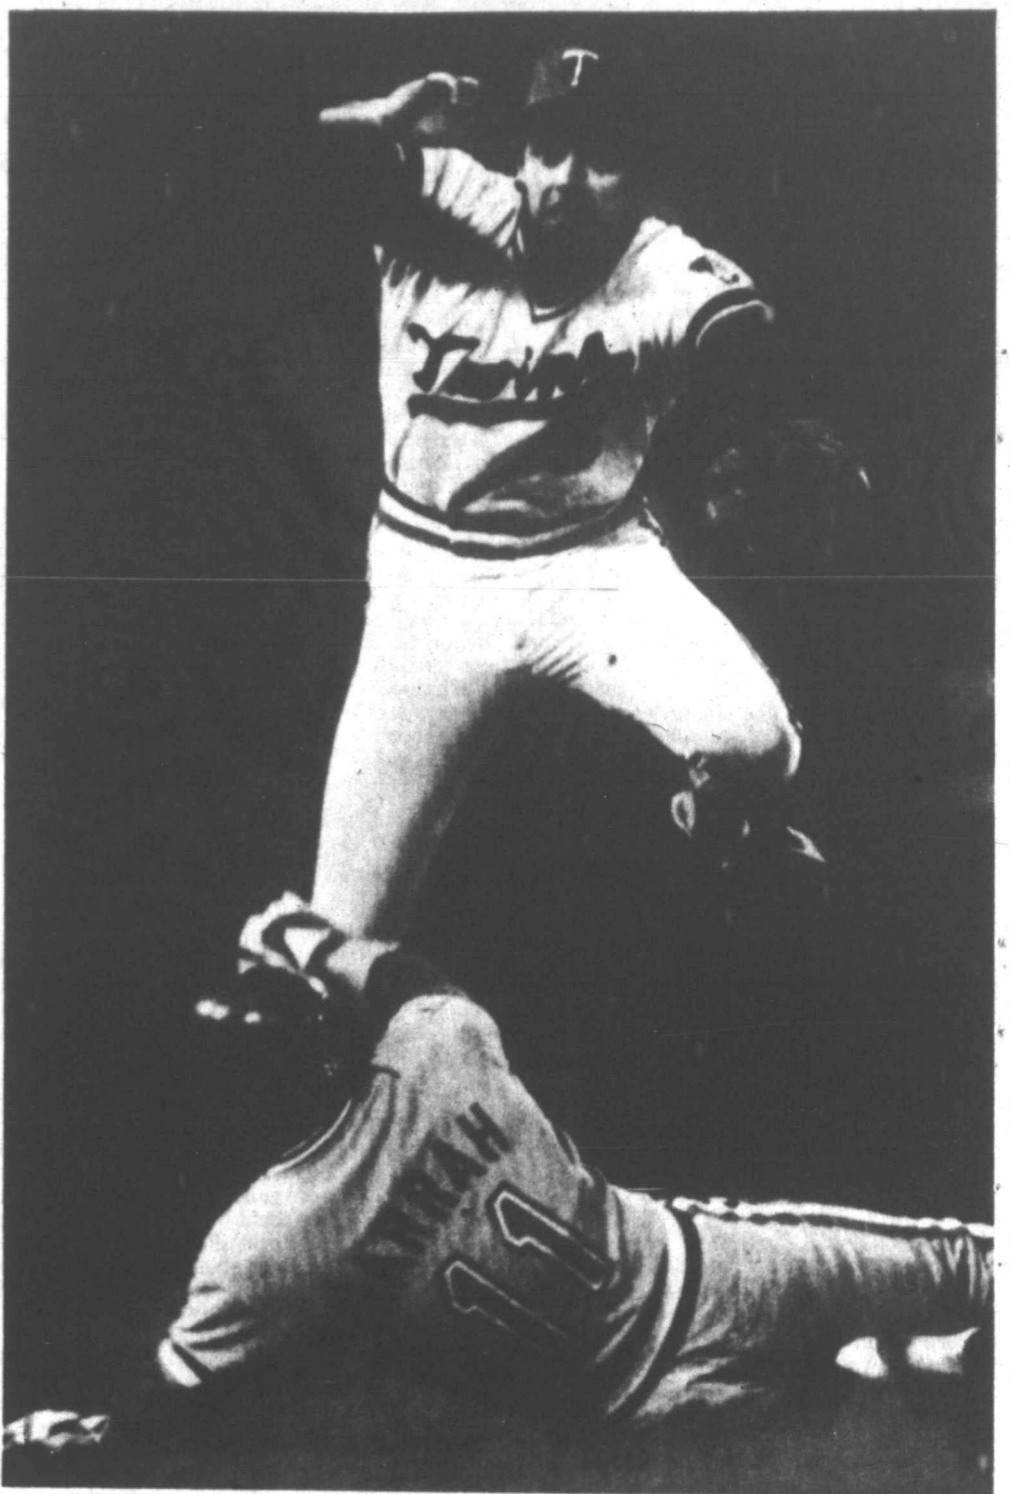

Brewers 5, Royals 4
Paul Molitor drilled a two-out single in the eighth, capping a two-run rally that pulled Milwaukee over Kansas City. Larry Hiale singled and came home on Sal Bando's two-out triple.

Jerry Augustine, 13-12, picked up the victory, retiring all seven batters he faced.

Twins 5, Rangers 3
Dave Goltz tossed an eight-hitter and Minnesota scratched for four runs in the fourth without getting the ball out of the infield to defeat Texas.

The freak rally consisted of two walks and a hit batsman to load the bases. Then Dave Edwards and Roy Smalley drew bases-loaded walks and Rod Carew and Dan Ford each had run-producing infield hits.

TEETH - GRITTER Roy Smalley of the Minnesota Twins bears his fangs as he makes the relay throw to first base in the seventh inning of Wednesday night's game with the Texas Rangers. Smalley forced Toby Harrah at second and completed the double play by throwing out Jim Mason at first. The Twins won, 5-3.

Phillies fatten up on fastballs

By KEN RAPPAPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Philadelphia Phillies got a diet of fastballs from Dan Schatzeder.

That's the kind of stuff big league hitters fatten up on. Especially hitters like Greg Luzinski and Mike Schmidt.

"If they throw you enough of them and keep coming after you with fastballs, you can make an adjustment and maybe find your stroke," says Schmidt, who found his Wednesday night while helping the Phillies beat the Montreal Expos 4-2.

Schmidt belted his 21st homer following Luzinski's 32nd in a game-breaking, three-run sixth inning at Montreal's Olympic Stadium.

The power show by Philadelphia's two sluggers and a strong performance by pitcher Randy Lerch came at a most opportune time. Coupled with Pittsburgh's 5-1 loss to Chicago earlier in the day, it improved the Phillies' lead over the Pirates to two games in the National League East.

Lerch, 10-8, scattered eight hits, including a two-run homer by Tony Perez, before getting relief help in the ninth from Tom Reed, Cubs 5-Pirates 1.

Mike Krukow upped his record to 8-2 with a four-hitter and Bill Buckner drove in two runs with a single and a sacrifice fly to lead Chicago over Pittsburgh.

Reds 4, Dodgers 3
George Foster slugged his 34th home run and pitcher Tom Seaver drilled a two-run single as Cincinnati defeated Los Angeles and prevented the Dodgers from clinching a tie for the National League West championship. The Dodgers' lead is 7½ games with nine remaining. Their magic number for winning the division remained at three.

Giants 6, Padres 3
Vida Blue ended a personal five-game losing streak and Jack Clark and Mike Ivie each rapped two hits and drove in a run as San Francisco defeated San Diego.

Blue, 17-9, had not won since he beat the Dodgers Aug. 4 and had made eight previous starts in search of his 17th victory.

Blue got relief help in the eighth from Randy Moffitt. Padre starter Eric Rasmussen, 14-14, lost his fourth straight game.

Mets 7, Cardinals 6
Willie Montanez delivered a two-run, bases-loaded single to snap a 3-3 tie, then John Stearns and Elliott Maddox followed with sacrifice flies for a four-run seventh inning as New York beat St. Louis.

Braves 3, Astros 2
Glenn Hubbard's two-out, ninth-inning single scored pinch-runner Ed Miller from second with the winning run as Atlanta beat Houston.

With one out in the Braves' ninth, Joe Nolan singled and was replaced by Miller, who stole second while appearing in his first major league game. Hubbard then delivered his hit to left for the winning run.

Shocker, soph games, switched

Tonight's game between the Pampa Shockers and the Dumas Junior varsity has been switched to Dumas, PHS Athletic Director Ed Lehnick said this morning.

The Shockers have two games scheduled with the Dumas JV and will now host Dumas Oct. 5, Lehnick said.

"They didn't have the rain we had," Lehnick said. "And I'd hate to tear up the field in September."

The Pampa sophomores, meanwhile, will still host Liberal this afternoon, but on the practice field. Game time for the sophomore game is 5:30. The Shocker-Dumas game is scheduled to begin at 7.

Statue of Liberty, Wing-T used as more than a novelty in NFL

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

It is the intent of the National Football League to be, perhaps more than anything else progressive — which doesn't explain the return this year of a couple of concepts which vanished along with raccoon coats, hip flasks and the Varsity Drag.

They are the Statue of Liberty play and the Wing-T offense, two ideas which, for more than a couple of decades, sat moldering on the shelf, fun to think about now and then but certainly not worth playing with.

Nevertheless, they are being used — with varying degrees of success — by Seattle and Kansas City.

Jack Patera, calling the shots with a Seahawk offense once dedicated to the proposition that any play in which the ball does not become airborne is illegal, is giving defensive lineman whiplash by sending David Sims past them at the most unlikely moments.

And Marv Levy, who didn't let his Phi Beta Kappa key get in the way when he ran the football at Coe College about 30 years ago, is trying in his first year as head coach at Kansas City to turn Tony Reed and the rest of the Chiefs into the Ohio State of the NFL — 3 yards and a cloud of yawns.

In other words, while the NFL goes about the business in the off-season of trying to open up the offense with more passing, Patera and Levy fly (or, more accurately, run) in the face of progress by selectively ignoring changes in the rules designed to promote the art of the air ball.

"There's really nothing new in football," says Patera. "Almost anything you can do has been done before. Oh, they can change the rules around but it doesn't really change anything."

"I'm not a great advocate of rules changes," he adds. "They can put too much of a burden on the officials. You end up with too many things being called, sometimes the wrong things being called."

This year, for example, has brought into prominence the esoteric phrase "illegal chuck." It sounds like a reference to bad meat.

Besides, Patera points out,

"just when you think you've discovered something new, someone comes along and says, 'Oh, yeah, we used to do that back in '48, or something like that.'"

The Statue of Liberty play is a sort of delayed draw, in which the quarterback drops back, suckering the defense into thinking he's going to pass, then hands off to a back. Last Sunday the over-eager New York Jets repeatedly stormed after quarterback Jim Zorn, only to find Zorn bulling his way past them, en route to 121 yards and three touchdowns.

The Wing-T is, in effect, an admission that a team's passing game could do with some improvement. It adds a running back at the expense of a receiver — although these days running backs are often among the league's leading receivers. Levy also acknowledges that, in Kansas City's case, it is a means of keeping a questionable defense off the field that much longer by running the clock down with grinding, 14-play drives.

And it is, Levy stresses, a commitment to conservatism, to getting away from fancy, high-powered and sometimes disastrous offenses.

"The way things have been going, the defenses have become offenses, making big plays, scoring a lot of points, because teams trying for big offensive plays sometimes find themselves in deep holes, long passing situations," Levy says.

"We want more normal yardage situations: first and 10, second and six — although I'd prefer better than that — third and two. That way you control the ball, you don't make the big mistakes, you don't let someone else's defense become an offense against you."

Like Patera with his Statue of Liberty, Levy sees nothing novel about his use of the Wing-T. "There's no magic in formations," he says. "It's all in how you handle the ball... The key for us is that we don't put in a new wrinkle for this team, new offensive plays for that one."

"I've found that if you start doing that you end up with nothing. We're just trying to refine what we know how to do and to do it better every week."

TENNIS

HARTFORD Conn. — Andy Pattison upset second-seeded Stan Smith 6-3, 6-7, 7-6 in second-round play of a $75,000 men's tennis tournament.

In the last first-round match, top-seeded John McEnroe ousted Steve Docherty, 6-3, 6-4.

In other second-round competition, Antonio Munoz of Spain defeated Australia's Dick Crealy 4-6, 6-3, 7-6. Johan Kriek of South Africa beat Mark Edmondson of Australia, 6-3, 6-1 and Billy Scanlon downed Bruce Manson 6-3, 7-6.

LOS ANGELES — Kim Warwick of Australia beat fifth-seeded Sandy Mayer 1-6, 6-3, 7-6 in a second-round singles match in a $200,000 men's tennis tournament.

In other second-round action, fourth-seeded Roscoe Tanner defeated Cliff Richey 6-2, 6-2; ninth-seeded John Newcombe downed Colin Dibley 6-2, 6-1, while 11th-seeded John Lloyd of Britain topped Trey Waltke 7-6, 6-2 and Peter Fleming eliminated John Austin 6-4, 6-2.

In the completion of first round matches, top-seeded Eddie Dibbs outlasted Victor Pecci of Paraguay 3-6, 6-1, 7-5; second-seeded Brian Gottfried beat India's Vijay Amritraj 6-1, 6-3; and sixth-seeded Harold Solomon defeated Cliff Letcher of Australia 6-2, 6-2.

MONTREAL — Fourth-seeded Laura Dupont survived a match point and went on to defeat Patricia Medrado of Brazil 5-7, 6-1, 7-5 in a $40,000 women's tournament.

Blow by blow

By Joe Blobaum, sports editor

Before getting around with this week's guesses on the high school football scene, let's do a little name-dropping.

Martha Nause, the first-round leader at last week's Lady Sarah Coventry LPGA tournament, is an acquaintance of staff member (and part-time sports writer) Carla Baranaukas. The two lived on the same dorm floor at St. Olaf College in Minnesota. Carla also is chummy with a clown in the Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Circus, so at least she keeps a diversity of company. Anyway, Nause posted eight birdies in the first round, one short of the single-round record in LPGA play.

David Caldwell, Pampa High graduate and a sophomore running back at TCU, is scheduled for surgery on an injured shoulder this week. He'll be out for the rest of the year. Caldwell carried once for no gain in the Horned Frogs' loss to SMU two weeks ago. And congratulations to Harvester tailback Mike Porter, whose three-touchdown performance against Dumas led to his selection as the area AAAA offensive player of the week by the Amarillo Daily News.

But getting back to high school football and the hazards involved in predicting the outcome of games, last week's record was a paltry 4-2. Pampa's inspiring victory over Dumas took some of the sting out of being so wrong in picking the Demons to win by three, but McLean's loss to Shamrock still has my head shaking.

With a 9-4 season mark to work with, here's this week's version of Russian roulette:

Pampa at Altus
City Editor Greg Hardin, who paced the sidelines at the Dumas game with camera in hand, told me the Harvesters weren't pleased with a three-point underdog role last week. Obviously, my nifty little plan to inspire the team worked, since they pushed Dumas all over the field.

In any case, this week's match at Altus is probably a toss-up. Altus is an explosive team that hasn't had its fuse ignited yet, but a few individual standouts can't win against an inspired group of 22 men. Therefore, I'll figure last week's momentum to carry Pampa to an eight-point win against the Oklahoma bunch, which admittedly has a tough time against Texas schools.

White Deer at Claude
A battle of teams in search of their first victory. Both schools have played Groom and lost — Claude by a 21-6 count and the Bucks on a 20-8 verdict. A 15-point setback minus a 12-point loss leaves you with a White Deer win by three, right? We'll see Friday night.

Panhandle at Canadian Canadian is coming off a heart-breaking loss to Stinnett, while Panhandle crunched Gruber 27-7 after topping Stinnett 14-7 in its season opener. The Wildcats need a little more offensive firepower to take the Panthers, who rate a nine-point nod. But this could also be half of my two-misses-a-week allotment.

Shamrock at Groom
Shamrock got bombed by Wheeler to open its season, then came back to take advantage of McLean's miscues and post a 25-20 victory over the Tigers. But Groom didn't get its football tradition by making mistakes. The Tigers prefer to force the other team into errors, which is what will probably happen Friday night. Groom by 18.

Texline at Miami
Miami's Warriors, with just one senior on the team, have been a pleasant surprise with a whitewash of the Pampa sophomores and a hairy win over Claude. This one won't be a surprise, however. Carla Baranaukas, who will cover the game, says Miami by 10. Who am I to disagree?

Phillips at Wheeler
The saddest thing about Wheeler's season is that the Mustangs may not be pushed until mid-October, when they travel to Miami and Groom in successive weeks. I've nothing against the Black Hawks, but I'll be surprised if they stay within 30 points of the defending Class B champs. After all, nobody else has.

McLean at Silvertown
Silvertown's supposed to be a year away. McLean Coach Bill Coward might have wished he were somewhere else during last week's loss to Shamrock, but I doubt the Tigers will succumb to the fumbleitis that doomed them last week. McLean to win by six.

Grimsley: USC to down Tide

By WILL GRIMSLEY

AP Special Correspondent

The lady in the optometrist's office was going through the routine eye examination.

"Look at the chart," the doctor said, "can you read the top line?" "Read it!" the lady exclaimed. "I know the guy — he plays football for Notre Dame."

The Fighting Irish — Mastzak, Horansky, Martinovich and Co. — have shaken off the Missouri setback and, as in the two previous years, hope to make a bid for No. 1.

Our score last week: 42-9, 823, with Penn State over Ohio State the piece of resistance. This week's upset special: USC over 'Bama.

Southern California 21, Alabama 17. The Tide has had two toughies. The Trojans are young, fresh, eager and away from home.

Notre Dame 27, Michigan 19: The Irish don't get aroused until they've blown one — Georgia Tech in 1976. Mississippi in 1977.

Ohio State 25, Minnesota 14: Woody's gamble with the passing game backfired, now it's back to the infantry.

North Carolina 18, Maryland 10: The Tar Heels and their new coach, Dick Crum, are both defense minded, give ground grudgingly.

Army 20, Virginia 7: The Cavaliers averaged half a touchdown per game in 1977. Not enough against improved Army.

Tennessee 32, Oregon 7: Coach Johnny Majors takes the wraps off his quarterback Jimmy Streater.

Brigham Young 27, Colorado

State 14: BYU's quarterback Marc Wilson, 6-4, sights his TD throws over heads of defenders.

Penn State 22, Southern Methodist 17: The Mustangs' Mike Ford-Emmanuel Tolbert combination can be troublesome.

Texas 30, Wyoming 7: The Longhorns field a team that rhymes — players named Ham, Jam and Lam. How about Slam?

Brown 19, Yale 17: Brown has a man named Whipple — Mark Whipple — who should squeeze the charmin' Elis.

Memphis State 22, Mississippi State 10: Scampering Lloyd Patterson could provide the needed edge.

Arizona 24, Texas Tech 7: When Arizona joined the Pac 10, Coast pundits warned that Coach Tony Mason was "a builder."

Cornell 14, Princeton 7: What a difference a year makes. Princeton won last year's game 34-0.

Arkansas 35, Oklahoma State 14: The Razorbacks' Lou Holtz has become king of the one liners: "The right angle is try-angle."

Oklahoma 37, Rice 7: Who let all those race horses out of the corral?

Spurs trim camp roster

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs have trimmed their training camp roster to 14 by cutting third-round draft choice Gerald Henderson and free agent Marshall Rogers of Pan American after Wednesday's morning practice session.

The National Basketball Association team plays its first exhibition game here Saturday against Kansas City and opens its season Oct. 13 in Denver.

The 6-3 Henderson was drafted last spring from Virginia Commonwealth.

Rogers, who is 6-1, was the NCAA scoring champion two years ago and spent a season with the Golden State Warriors.

Meanwhile, disgruntled George Gervin, last year's NBA leading scorer who says he wants to be traded because of a contract dispute, was at practice Wednesday but is refusing to talk to reporters.

The 6-7 Gervin, who averaged 27.2 points per game last season, wanted the Spurs to renegotiate his contract. Gervin, however, reportedly turned down the Spurs' offer of $300,000 per year for eight years.

Gervin has five years remaining on an eight-year contract paying an estimated $150,000 per year. He missed three of the team's first four training camp sessions, before returning and saying he wanted to be traded.

Federal fugitive living in Washington

Johnson found alive by FBI

DALLAS (AP) — Bobby Johnson, a federal fugitive for 20 months despite the fact he reportedly drowned in the Gulf of Mexico early last year, has been seen alive and positively identified by the FBI.

James Geer, assistant special agent in charge of the Dallas division of the FBI, said agents positively identified the Wichita Falls grain dealer Aug. 18, living in Clarkston, Wash., under the assumed name Darrell Dean Olson.

However, the same evening, Johnson was apparently tipped that agents were in the area and fled Clarkston, abandoning the truck he was driving about 20 miles outside the town, the agent said.

Geer said agents had been conducting interviews in Clarkston after receiving information about a vehicle linked to Johnson that was registered to an Irene M. Olson at Great Falls, Mont. Further investigation determined the woman had moved to Clarkston, Wash., and was living with a Darrell Olson. Agents had interviewed the woman in Clarkston the evening Johnson disappeared. Geer said the present whereabouts of Johnson and the woman are unknown.

Federal investigation of Johnson began in January 1977 when a several million dollar grain shortage was uncovered at Robert Johnson Grain and Molasses Co. about the time Johnson was reported as having drowned under mysterious circumstances Jan. 3, 1977. He reportedly fell from a cabin cruiser in the Gulf of Mexico, and his body was never recovered.

An intensive multi-state investigation led to the filing of a complaint Feb. 11, 1977, charging Johnson with transportation of stolen grain. At that time, Johnson was listed as a federal fugitive. Geer said.

Since his disappearance, several persons have reported seeing Johnson, but Geer said officials had failed to develop any information to show conclusively that he was alive. One witness told the FBI Johnson had undergone plastic surgery and was seen in Uvalde, Texas. Another account had him spotted in South America.

A federal grand jury was convened in Wichita Falls Feb. 14, 1977, to look into the allegations against Johnson. On Sept. 13 of that year, an indictment was returned charging Johnson and his brother, H.C. Johnson, with 17 counts of transporting stolen grain. H.C. Johnson was later convicted, and was sentenced to 16 years in federal prison earlier this year.

Farmers reactions mixed about FBI announcement

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — Farmers in the Wichita Falls area had mixed reactions to the FBI's announcement Wednesday that fugitive Bobby Johnson had been found alive, but they all agreed that it probably wouldn't help them get their grain back.

More than 400,000 bushels of grain were reported missing from Johnson's grain elevators in Iowa Park and Wichita Falls when he was reported to have drowned in the Gulf of Mexico in January 1977 under mysterious circumstances.

The FBI reported Wednesday that agents positively identified Johnson as a man living in Clarkston, Wash., under the name Darrell Dean Olson in August. Johnson apparently was tipped that the FBI was in the area, however, and fled.

Less than three hours after the FBI announcement, all farmers contacted by the Wichita Falls Record-News had heard Johnson was alive.

One said he was in the bathtub when the 6 p.m. news came on; another said he was in a field when another farmer told him: a third said he'd heard it about two weeks ago, or about the time a recent photo of Johnson and information of his location began circulating among area law enforcement agencies.

D.D. Zachry of Charlie, Texas, said he never had a doubt that Johnson was alive but added, "I can't see how it will change anything I just don't know."

Zachry said he lost about 5,000 bushels of grain that had been stored in elevators owned by Johnson when he disappeared.

"That isn't as much grain as some farmers lost, but to a small farmer, that is quite a bit," Zachry said.

Clarence Mahler of Iowa Park said he and his son Barry lost about 43,000 bushels of grain. About the FBI announcement, he said, "I guess it could be true. I had mixed emotions.

Sometimes I thought he had died. Then there were times I thought he might have been alive. Now what do we do?"

Mahler said just a couple of weeks ago the receiver for the bankruptcy case mailed him a check for $26,000 as partial repayment for the grain he lost. On today's market it would be worth almost $139,000.

"But there has been a suit filed against the receiver by another party and some are saying we might have to give the money back," said Mahler, adding, "This is the biggest mess I've ever heard of."

C.H. Dowdy of Charlie said he and his family lost about 25,000 bushels of grain to Johnson.

"You might say I lost a year's work."

Dowdy said he wasn't surprised to learn the FBI had proven Johnson was alive.

"It was his mode of operation. I knew him too well to think he was dead. But maybe I didn't know him all that well or I wouldn't have stored grain with him in the first place."

David celebrates birthday in his plastic world

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ Associated Press Writer HOUSTON (AP) — David, who has lived his entire life inside a germ-free bubble, celebrated his seventh birthday with family and friends today and with hope that one day he'll be able to shed his plastic cocoon and run and play like other children.

David was born with a rare blood disorder that does not allow him to fight off disease-causing germs which constantly surround the body.

He lives in a sterile isolator at his home or at Texas Children's Hospital where a team headed by Dr. William T. Shearer is working on a cure for David and others like him.

To step out of his isolator would mean almost certain death.

"David's case is unique in the whole world," Dr. Shearer said. "There are no medical precedents. Unlike other children with SCID (severe combined immune deficiency), he has never been sick and is the longest surviving patient."

David's last name or the location of his home has never been revealed at the request of the parents.

Dr. Shearer stressed David is not a medical experiment.

"We have to consider now, what is most important to a child growing up," Shearer said. "David has not been left an object of medical curiosity with little development as a person. He hasn't been left in an incubator merely as a laboratory animal."

Bryna Holcombe, David's nurse, says the 45-pound youngster is making the best of his situation.

"He seems to be content at this point in time, he doesn't ask when he can get out of the isolator," Holcombe said. "He understands what is wrong with him in the simplest form and he realizes he has to stay in there."

Last year David took temporary adventures outside his isolator in a space suit designed at Johnson Space Center similar to those worn by U.S. astronauts. But he has since outgrown the suit, his nurse said.

"He's having as normal a childhood as possible under the circumstances," Holcombe said. "But he is anxious to get his new suit so he can do more exploring."

Df. Murdina Desmond of Texas Children's Hospital said David currently is participating in classroom assignments and exchanging papers while remaining in isolation.

His first grade teacher visits four mornings a week to outline what the class is doing.

"He is in a give and take situation with his peer group now," Desmond said. "He is learning what every child learns, that he is not perfect in everything."

She said future plans include visits at David's home with his classmates. The use of video taping for video class activities.

Morelos is the second smallest state of the Republic of Mexico, yet one of the most important agriculturally.
