

Grand jury indicts former Bell official

DALLAS (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted a retired vice president of Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. and five others on charges of bribery, fraud and income tax evasion.

Authorities allege it was part of a four-year scheme that bilked the utility out of more than $17 million.

Ray A. "Pete" Acker, 63, a former vice president for data systems at Bell's headquarters in St. Louis, was named in two indictments alleging he failed to pay $585,000 in income taxes on more than $1 million in bribes and kickbacks paid to him in 1975 and 1976.

The two indictments, both naming all six men, accuse Acker of accepting bribes for providing advance bid information and kickbacks for arranging the lease of computers and copying equipment to Southwestern Bell.

The indictment said the scheme defrauded customers, competitors, stockholders and management of the telephone company from June 1974 to March 1978.

Also indicted Thursday were Irven Eugene Barlow and Richard Reid Wadsworth Jr., officials of InterCap Corp. of Dallas. Robert Ansel Palmer Jr., president and owner of International Equipment Financing Corp. of Dallas. Robert Charles Sullivan Jr., former president of Citizens State Bank of Princeton, north of Dallas, and Warren Eugene Zimmerman, an Amarillo lawyer who has an office in Dallas.

Dallas businessman Joel H. McQuade, who's name surfaced along with Acker's this summer when some details of the federal case were revealed, was named an unindicted co-conspirator. The Dallas News reported today McQuade, former president of the Dallas Playboy Club, was offered immunity from prosecution in exchange for his testimony.

The indictments claim InterCap and International Equipment Financing Corp. engaged in brokering, buying, selling and leasing computer, copying and data systems equipment.

Sullivan used the Princeton bank for "laundering" money allegedly paid to Acker as bribes and kickbacks, the indictment stated.

The defendants were charged with violating federal racketeering laws by participating in a pattern of bribery prohibited by Texas criminal law and using the U.S. mail and interstate wire communications between banks to commit fraud.

The second indictment charges the men with conspiring to help Acker evade $585,000 in income taxes based on the bribes and kickbacks he received.

Acker, who now lives in Diana in East Texas, took early retirement last Spring after more than 30 years with Bell. He held several management posts in different Texas cities before being promoted to corporate headquarters in St. Louis.

U.S. Attorney Kenneth J. Mighell said the two indictments were handed down by the Dallas grand jury based on evidence gathered in a one-year investigation by the FBI, Internal Revenue Service and the Justice Department's Southwest Organized Crime Strike Force.

Two other men, Bonnie Bush Gee, a salesman for Palmer's company, and Sheril Ned Brown, former executive vice president of the Princeton bank, pleaded guilty to other charges earlier this week and also were named as unindicted co-conspirators.

Gee pleaded guilty Tuesday to a felony charge of withholding knowledge of a fraud conspiracy entered into by Acker.

McQuade and Palmer Brown pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of failing to report to the IRS the transfer through the Citizens State Bank of more than $48,000 from McQuade to Acker.

The investigation prompted Bell in July to ask the state Public Utility Commission to delay action on its pending $214 million rate increase request until the impact of the lost money could be determined.

The case became public when the U.S. Attorney's office asked a federal judge to put a hold on two $100,000 certificates of deposits held in a joint account by McQuade and his wife, who were in divorce proceedings.

Acker had intervened in the divorce suit, claiming the $200,000 was his.

Moslems shelled by Israeli guns

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli gunboats shelled Moslem western Beirut during the night in an apparent warning to the Syrians to call off their non-stop artillery, rocket and machine-gun war on the Christian eastern section of the city.

No casualties were reported in the Israeli shelling, but Lebanon's Red Cross said Syrian fire was raining down on civilians and hospitals in eastern Beirut, and that "nothing is being spared." Lebanese police said victims of the Syrian-Christian fighting had mounted to at least 1,000 dead and 1,700 wounded since February.

A high State Department official in New York said President Carter had sent a letter to Syrian President Hafez Assad in Moscow, where he is holding talks with President Leonid I. Brezhnev, expressing the United States' "deep concern and the need for an immediate cease-fire to stop the bloodshed."

The United States was expected to ask for a U.N. Security Council meeting today to call for a truce if one isn't worked out.

U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim said he was sending Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan from Geneva to Beirut to try to arrange a cease-fire. The Iranian prince was U.N. high commissioner for refugees in Geneva from 1966 to 1977 and has remained available to Waldheim for special assignments since resigning.

The official Lebanese radio said three Israeli gunboats fired on a Moslem section of beachfront highrises and night clubs called Ramlet Baida on Thursday night, then withdrew when Syrian artillery opened fire.

An Israeli military spokesman in Tel Aviv said the vessels fired on a Palestinian guerrilla naval base in southwestern Beirut. State Department officials said the Israelis told them the raid was to thwart a planned guerrilla operation.

Israeli radio said Defense Minister Ezer Weizman would report to an emergency meeting of the defense and foreign affairs committee of Parliament today.

It was not known what effect the shelling would have on next week's peace talks between Israeli and Egyptian, which Syria and other Arab hardliners are trying to sabotage with money and arms, much of it Soviet-supplied.

The latest round of fighting in Beirut has raged for a week, and Christian militia leaders said it had already spread to the nearby resorts of Bickfaya, Proumana, Beint Mery and Farava where many of an estimated 400,000 Christian refugees have fled.

The conflict erupted in February when the Syrians, backbone of an Arab League peacekeeping army that ended Lebanon's civil war two years ago, began trying to disarm the Christians. The Christians resisted because the Syrians refused to disarm the Palestinians and Moslems, not only in Beirut but in southern Lebanon near the frontier with Israel, the Christians' ally.

FOLLOWING THE RESIGNATION of the Swedish government, Speaker of the House of Parliament, Henry Allard, right, met party leaders to discuss the formation of a new government. Allard is seen talking with liberal party leader Ola Ullsten.

Westinghouse settles suit

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Westinghouse Electric Corp., reaching a $112-million out-of-court settlement with a Texas utility, has resolved the fourth of 17 lawsuits filed over uranium supply contracts.

The settlement was announced Thursday by the Houston Lighting & Power Co., project manager for four utilities in the South Texas Project.

U.S. District Court Judge Robert R. Merhige, Jr., of the Eastern District of Virginia, who presided in Richmond recently when eight of the cases against Westinghouse were tried, signed the latest settlement.

Westinghouse agreed to sell 80 million pounds of uranium at an average price of $10 per pound. But when the price of uranium soared to above $40 a pound, Westinghouse, fearing it would lose $2 billion, said it could not honor the contracts.

The lawsuits against the Pittsburgh-based company followed Westinghouse, in turn, filed suit against 29 uranium producers, alleging they conspired to raise uranium prices in order to drive Westinghouse out of business.

Westinghouse originally agreed to sell 11.3 million pounds of uranium to the South Texas Project at approximately $12 a pound, for a total of about $144 million.

Had Westinghouse been forced to sell the fuel at that price after uranium rose to $40 per pound, the cost would have been about $450 million and Westinghouse could have lost about $300 million.

South Texas Project is owned by Houston Lighting & Power, Central Power and Light Co., the City of Austin, Texas, and the City of San Antonio, Texas.

Westinghouse said the settlement will be accounted for in its third quarter report.

Under provisions of the settlement, Westinghouse will:

—Pay South Texas Project $1 million in cash within 30 days.

—Provide STP with 66 million pounds of uranium. STP will pay the total cost of production at Wyoming Mineral Corp., a Westinghouse wholly-owned subsidiary.

—Sell, at a discounted price, 1 million pounds of uranium which Westinghouse currently has an option to purchase.

SPS will consent to rate hike

By John Price
Pampa News Staff
Southwestern Public Service Co., in announcing its decision to accept the $15.9 million rate increase granted by the Public Utilities Commission, has almost promised it will request another rate increase in the near future.

Brac Biggers, SPS Panhandle division manager, said in a news release that after considering all alternatives, SPS decided to accept the $15.9 million increase. The electric company had asked for a $219 million increase, and after the PUC announced its ruling SPS had mentioned taking the case to court.

"We feel that to pursue the matter further would be an unnecessary added expense to the cities, our customers and the company," Biggers said in the release. "However, the $15.9 million is not enough to cover our expenses as they were presented to the regulatory bodies."

"In order to build coal-fired plants to take care of our customers' needs and comply with Texas Docket 600, I'm sure it will be necessary to request another adjustment to our rates in the near future."

Texas Docket 600 requires SPS to curtail its use of gas as a boiler fuel by 10 percent by 1981 and 25 percent by 1985.

The $15.9 million increase amounts to approximately a seven percent hike in electric rates to customers, according to Joe Gidden, new SPS district manager in Pampa.

Gidden said he did not know when the new rates would go into effect, but that it would be after the PUC rules on SPS' appeal of ordinances adopted by Pampa and other cities, limiting the rate increase to $4.2 million. "Before the end of this month we hope to have the ruling," Gidden said.

SPS could put the new rates into effect under bond before the ruling, but Gidden said that is unlikely.

Meanwhile, City Manager Mack Wofford said the city today received a copy of SPS' appeal to the PUC of the rate-limiting ordinance.

Asks for amendment

Texans form group to seek relief from taxes

By The Associated Press
A new organization — Texans for Tax Relief — has been formed to win voter approval of a "tax relief" amendment to the Texas Constitution in the November election.

Former state Republican Party chairman Ray H. Hanson of Dallas and Marcella Perry, a conservative Democrat from Houston, announced the organization's birth at a news conference Thursday.

"We will spend what we can ties state spending to the growth of the economy — unless the Legislature votes otherwise."

"That would be a very tough vote and, accordingly, a very real limitation" on state spending, Hutchison said.

In other political campaigning Thursday in Texas, Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements announced the appointment of Fred Wulff of Brady and Jay Anderson of Eagle Lake and East Bernard raise," Mrs. Perry said of the campaign. She has banking interests and is chairman of the board of regents of Texas Woman's University.

The proposed constitutional amendment the organization supports provides for the valuation of farm and ranch land on the basis of productivity rather than market value; creates a general homestead exemption from school taxes; provides for increased homestead exemptions for the elderly; and as co-chairmen of Farmers and Ranchers for Clements.

Rep. Bob Krueger, Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate, said he will be in Austin Oct. 16 for a $25-a-couple fundraising reception in his honor. The committee for the fund raiser includes Sen. Lloyd sen. D-Texas. Bent.

Krueger also predicted in a statement that unless legislation is enacted to raise the price of domestic sugar and to block dumping of foreign sugar, the sugar-producing capacity of the United States will almost certainly collapse.

Sen. John Tower, who opposes Krueger, said in Port Arthur, "I am sorry that the House failed to override the president's veto on the Public Works Bill. This contained many projects of great need in Texas. I think it reflects the administration's insensitivity to the needs of the western states."

"I further note," Tower said,

"that my opponent didn't bother to show up to try to help in the effort to override the veto, which of course reflects his insensitivity to the needs of Texas."

Tower is scheduled to be in downtown Dallas on Friday night to address at banquet of cattlemen. His weekend schedule calls for visits to South Texas and to Fort Worth on Monday before returning to Washington.

Jobs for adult women rise

Unemployment figure jumps for September

WASHINGTON (AP) — The unemployment rate edged up from 5.9 percent to 6 percent in September, but the number of adult women with jobs increased sharply, the Labor Department said today.

The report indicated that the jobless rate is stabilizing at the 6 percent level, a big improvement from the 6.8 percent rate a year earlier.

Most of the gain in unemployment last month was caused by persons new to the labor force looking for work. The number of Americans with jobs advanced by 290,000 in September to 94.9 million, the department said.

"A substantial increase in the number of adult women with jobs accounted for the bulk of the increase," the department said.

"And, for the first time ever, more than half of their population were working or seeking work."

it said. The report showed that 37.95 million women over age 20 either had jobs or were looking for work out of a population group of 75.87 million.

The number of adult women holding jobs rose from 35.2 million to 35.7 million, an increase of about 500,000.

The only group experiencing a decline in employment was teen-agers, whose unemployment rate rose from 15.6 percent to 16.6 percent.

"An unusually large number of specially created summer jobs ended coincident with the beginning of the new school year," the report said.

In the past year, the Carter administration has tried to create new jobs with its economic programs.

However, the administration is become more worried about inflation as rising wholesale food prices threaten a new round of grocery price increases.

While inflation has run at a rate of about 10 percent so far this year, the unemployment situation has improved. The administration expects a 5.7 percent joblessness rate in the last three months of 1978.

The Labor Department said its September survey also showed:

—Unemployment for adult men dropped from 4.1 percent to 4 percent.

—The black unemployment rate declined from 11.7 to 11.2 percent.

—Unemployment for black teen-agers rose from 32.4 to 31.6 percent.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Alert focused upon prices

Billed as a consumer advocate and a political conservative, a recent speaker at a convention proved an interesting respite from the usual Naderite types. Mrs. Barbara Keating, who heads a group called Consumer Alert, focused her remarks on increasing prices.

This is the area ignored by most of the activists in consumer groups. In fact they have ignored it so studiously that most of their efforts have resulted in great increases in prices paid by consumers for extremely doubtful protection, if any.

We laud Mrs. Keating on two counts: She recognizes the greatest threat to consumers as "... rising costs precipitated by over-regulation by the federal government"; and that her group functions strictly by contributions. She seeks to spur grassroots interest and to increase membership in Consumer Alert to several thousand.

Mrs. Keating said that nearly $1,000 of the cost of every car can be attributed to such safety devices as seat belts and emissions control which have been mandated by government. She said that hamburger meat is affected by 41,000 different regulations "which surprisingly enough only raises the price about eight cents a pound. Consumers pay $62 billion a year for government regulation, which works out to about $300 for every man, woman and child," she said.

Among proposals opposed by Consumer Alert are government-mandated airbags for cars, the elimination of nitrates from bacon and the banning of antibiotics in animal feeds. "There has been no proof of the harmfulness of nitrates and antibiotics to humans, and outlawing them has raised the price of food," Mrs. Keating said.

"Let the public decide what it wants and needs. Consumer Alert advocates a responsible balance. We just ask that businessmen produce a good product at a fair price without the intervention of government regulation. No one can speak for all consumers and we don't try to," Mrs. Keating said.

Without the inhibiting factors of regulatory control by government bureaucracy, the marketplace and competitive private enterprise will always serve to provide more people with more of the things they need and want.

We are pleased to see at least one concerned group of consumers getting their sights squarely fixed on the real seat of our basic problem. We can only fault the lady on one count: she did mention that her group might seek some funding grants.

We may be wrong in thinking she was alluding to grants from the government. If the grants sought are voluntary grants from private sources, we do not fault her at all.

Laudable goals should not be diluted with a questionable means in attaining them. Any resort to political means for funding even the best of projects will be eventually self-defeating.

We wish Mrs. Keating success in her drive to "let the public decide." It is the only route to provide the best in consumer protection.

Nation's Press

Carter's achievement

(Wall Street Journal)

Progress toward peace in the Middle East has time and again proved itself a tenuous and fragile thing, but the strong first impression here is that President Carter has won a genuine achievement at the Camp David Summit. It is too early to see clearly the end result, but at least he has broken the deadlock that has gripped Israeli-Egyptian negotiations since the collapse of President Sadat's dramatic November initiative.

It does not diminish the President's achievement — indeed, it enhances it — to recognize how far he traveled to win it. When he came to office the foreign policy establishment was pushing a "comprehensive settlement" that in effect gave the Palestine Liberation Organization a veto over any Israeli-Egyptian settlement. The administration's first efforts reflected this posture, insisting on a comprehensive conference, including the PLO and the Soviet Union. The U.S. continued to pursue this line even after Mr. Sadat's trip to Jerusalem, a posture scarcely designed to bolster that initiative.

The plan Mr. Carter unveiled at Camp David with Prime Minister Begin and President Sadat looks vastly more like the original Israeli-Egyptian ideas than like the State Department's first efforts. Egypt, it seems, is going to get the Sinai back in return for recognizing Israel. Both parties have agreed to the general idea of an Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank over the next five years, with the Palestinian population getting some kind of participation in the negotiations. Settlement of the Sinai issue no longer depends on a simultaneous settlement of the Palestinian question. And the Soviets, throughout this whole process, have been nowhere in evidence.

So at Camp David Mr. Carter was able to demonstrate not only a capability of taking command of events, but also personal flexibility and growing understanding. We hope he can continue to avoid the paralysis that the comprehensive settlement approach carries. It is fine to try to involve Jordan's King Hussein in the peace process, as U.S. officials say they will try to do, but there is a danger that the more difficult issues of the West Bank could be allowed to disrupt a settlement in the Sinai.

We hope and trust, indeed, that Mr. Carter and his administration are now devoting considerable attention to protecting Mr. Sadat from the inevitable pressures and dangers in the Arab world. Syria and the PLO have already rejected the Camp David Agreements, and are no doubt going to try to sabotage them. The Egyptian foreign minister has apparently resigned in protest. Saudi Arabia will no doubt be urged to use its wealth to oppose the settlement and potentially could do great damage in undermining the Egyptian economy. Mr. Carter ought to be seeking Saudi support for Mr. Sadat, extracting a little cooperation in return for those F-15s we have agreed to supply.

The inevitable strains and tensions were appearing even before the President had the chance to address Congress last night, of course, and only time will tell whether the hopes of Camp David can be consummated. But Mr. Carter did revive hopes for peace in an atmosphere from which those hopes had all but disappeared, and that is no small cause for gratitude.

The political class in control

By BUTLER D. SHAFFER

he aftermath of Proposition 13 in California continues to disillusion even the most starchy-eyed innocents from Miss Goodthought's high-school Civics 101 class. Even the straight-A students are beginning to doubt that the politicians and the bureaucrats are only dedicated "public servants." Even the valedictorians are beginning to suspect what the school drop-outs always knew: those who control the government "represent" and "serve" the public in the same sense that Attila the Hun "represented" and "served" the people his men had looted, raped and conquered.

That the politicians and bureaucrats constitute a privileged class separate from and with interests different from the rest of us was evident from their reaction to the passage of Proposition 13. Did they — as one would expect of "representatives" — take this clearly-enunciated message from two-thirds of the voters and seek, dutifully, to carry it out? Was their demeanor that of obedient "servants" faithfully carrying out the directives of their "masters"?

It was not! The political class angrily reacted against the voters, and undertook to punish them for having the audacity to try to tell THEM to limit their predatory behavior. They reacted the way a sixth-grade bully does when the third-grade kids try to tell him to leave them alone.

To begin with, the bureaucrats identified those few government services that many people wanted — summer school programs, police and fire protection, libraries — and announced an immediate cut-back in those areas. Fothing was said about reducing the size of the bureaucracy in such places as the Department of Motor Vehicles or the Department of Employment Development; this population propagates itself faster than mosquitoes in a Louisiana swamp in July. I have gone into a lot of government offices in my lifetime, and each one seems to have any number of people employed in the following job classifications: Crossword-Puzzle Worker; Dirty Joke Teller; People Watcher; Rubber-Band and Paper-Clip Shooter; Window-Gazer. These jobs could have been eliminated and nobody would have noticed it. Hell, it would have taken these slugs six months to have gotten the message that they no longer had a reserved seat at the public trough.

But the political class didn't take this approach: that would have meant going against their own kind, members of their privileged class. Better that the enemy (i.e., the taxpayers and the voters) should suffer. "What can we take away from them that they want most?"

"Hey, it's June. What about summer school?"

"Yeah, that's a splendid idea. After these S.O.B.'s have put up with their screaming brats all summer, they'll think twice before passing another Proposition 13!"

Other members of the political class began to play the game. One Los Angeles politician, for example, proposed — in the true spirit of equality before the law — that the government shut down branch libraries in those areas that voted against the measure. This guy had no misconceptions as to just who the "boss" was!

Meanwhile, an effort was being undertaken to punish the principal proponents of Proposition 13: the landlords. In the state legislature and the Los Angeles City Council, measures were hurriedly prepared (and passed in LA) forcing landlords to roll back their rents to May 31 and imposing rent controls. The curious argument was advanced (contrary even to the convoluted logic of the aforementioned Los Angeles politico) that landlords — who favored Proposition 13 — ought to pass the benefits of this measure on to their tenants — one of the biggest groups to oppose the measure. Aside from the irony of the whole thing, there is no more logic in forcing landlords to share their savings with tenants than there is for grocers to share their savings with customers, doctors with patients, etc. But then, the roll-back measure was not designed to be "logically consistent" with any stated premise: it was designed only to punish the group perceived by members of the political class as being responsible for Proposition 13. "In case any other people have any bright ideas about who is running this place..."

The political class is still holding out hope, of course, that the courts will strike down Proposition 13. As a lawyer, I am well-aware that an argument can be made to demonstrate the unconstitutionality of anything, including the Ten Commandments or the Declaration of Independence. I have no idea what the courts will do, but you can be assured that members of the political class will be in there vigorously resisting any ad-dle-headed notion that the machinery of government is to be subject to the control and influence of taxpayers. For in the mind-set of the political class, THEY are the "masters," and WE are the "servants," and if you have any doubts of that, come to California and listen.

'Anti's' legislation abortion

By MARTHA ANGLE
and ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Sex, religion and politics may no longer be considered taboo as topics for polite conversation, but that certainly doesn't make them fit subjects for legislative attention.

Introduce any one of them into a debate in Congress and you've got a surefire distortion of the issue under discussion. Put them all together, and the result is a total shambles.

That, regrettably, is what has happened in the 95th Congress over the abortion issue, which combines in equally explosive measure all three formerly taboo topics.

As if Congress didn't have enough to worry about in these closing weeks of the session with the energy bill, civil service reform and a tax reduction it now faces the prospect of a rancorous House-Senate fight over no less than five major bills to which anti-abortion riders have been attached.

Last year, the huge Labor-HEW appropriations bill was held up for months by a bitter quarrel between the House and Senate over just how tightly a restriction on the use of Medicaid funds to finance abortions for poor women should be written.

To the dismay of the calendar-conscious leadership in both houses, the same bill is headed for a rematch this year and four other measures are ensnared in the abortion controversy as well.

In each instance, it is the House that is seeking to prohibit the use of federal funds for abortions while the Senate fights to keep restrictions to a minimum.

At stake are the defense appropriations bill, where the House wants to cut off paid abortions for military personnel; the foreign aid appropriations measure, where the target is abortion assistance for Peace Corps volunteers; a pregnancy disability bill, where the House wants to exclude abortion coverage from private health insurance plans; and a House move to prohibit the U.S. Civil Rights Commission from collecting and analyzing data about possibly discriminatory effects of the government's abortion policies.

What has precipitated this flurry of anti-abortion fervor in the House is to some sudden surge of broad-based public sentiment. On the contrary, public opinion polls have consistently shown a majority of those questioned support the Supreme Court's ruling that the decision on whether to terminate a pregnancy should rest solely with a woman and her doctor. Furthermore, an August survey by the Associated Press and NBC indicates a 49-43 percent plurality now favors the expenditure of federal funds to pay for abortions that poor women cannot finance themselves.

This, however, is an election year, and many House members who face close contests this fall fear the balance could be tipped by the small but active percentage of voters who judge a candidate by his position on abortion issues alone. So they vote for funding cut-offs as a matter of political expediency, even when they have no deep personal convictions on the abortion issue per se.

For those who do genuinely abhor all abortions on moral or religious grounds, funding cut-offs are a poor means of seeking to halt the practice.

The existing restriction on Medicaid outlays for abortions has now been in effect for a full year and has resulted, according to HEW calculations, in a 98 percent reduction in the number of pregnancy terminations financed by federal funds. Yet according to officials at the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta where abortions are monitored, there has been little if any reduction in the number of pregnancies terminated.

The Supreme Court has said women have a right to seek an abortion in the early months of a pregnancy. With or without federal assistance, they continue to do so. Congressmen who vote for funding cut-offs may help their own political prospects, but they are not stopping abortions.

Or if you're an unemployed worker seeking to find the job you want through an employment agency, what are the rules for you? There are guidelines, ways to avoid past errors and get what you need in the shortest possible time, but where do you find those rules and guidelines?

Today's column is directed to you, the employer; tomorrow's will be for the guidance of you, the employee.

(1) Before you even call an agency, agree with all who are involved in the hiring on precisely what skills and personality are needed for the position that's open. Be specific to the agency. In the words of Eugene Taylor, president of National Personnel Associates, a network of independent management-level employment agencies with 200 offices in 130 cities:

"Never say 'management engineer,' for in one company that might mean a project engineer, in another someone in charge of processes." Adds Orville W. Dale, personnel administrator of United Artists,

"always be sure the agency understands what you are looking for. People who left their last job because they were working for three people apply to me for jobs where they'll be working for four."

Ask the agency if the salary you have in mind is realistic. Too often it is not — and this slows down the search.

(3) Learn how the agencies work, especially their relationship between their counselors and job candidates. The counselors know many people not actively looking who might be perfect for the job, but who are reluctant to answer a blind ad.

Any recruiting effort that doesn't tap into this pool of prospective employee eliminates some of the employer's brightest prospects. (National Personnel Associates discloses that four out of five employees placed by its network of agencies last year were already employed — in short, par of this pool.)

Tami Scribner, vice president - human resources, Campaign Communications Institute of America, puts it clearly:

"The key objective for the employer is to get to know the agency very well. Treat it as a consultant even though you're working on a contingency basis. Make it part of your personnel department, get the agency people into your office, so they can understand what the work is like, the positives and negatives."

(4) Use only one or a very few agencies to fill the position, so the agency will work harder for you. If you have tentatively chosen an applicant but want to see a few more, be frank with the agency and it usually will cooperate.

If an agency knows, say, that it's competing with a half-dozen to a dozen others, it might send in anyone just to keep its hand in — a waste of time for you and for the agency. Certainly do not use an agency to check the market if you have no hiring plans; your company may as a consequence find it hard to get cooperation when you really need it.

(5) For specialized technical positions, give the agency suggestions of companies who may be employing the kind of workers you need. Also, cautions Dale of United Artists, "tell the agency the type of personality you are looking for, not only the skills and work experience. If maturity or articulateness are required, this should be explained to the agency." What this point really is warning you is: be honest. Don't let a prospective employee assume that the atmosphere in your company is different from what it actually is, based on your company's past reputation.

(6) It could be, if yours is a hard-to-fill position, that you should make special arrangements with the agencies you have chosen. At least explore the advantages of making such an arrangement. The agency, for instance, might use search techniques, but work primarily on a contingency basis. You, the employer, might agree to pay the cost of advertising or provide an incentive to be applied toward the agency fee if the agency fills the job. You, the employer, and the agency might work cooperatively with a search firm.

And let the agency help sell the candidate you want on taking the position. With the job market getting tighter, this help can be of enormous value — and the agency probably will offer the help persuade the applicant's spouse to relocate, if this is needed.

Tomorrow: How an employee can best use an agency.

Nobody's driving

During the early days of television, a favorite skit of a prime-time comedian involved a driver stopped by an officer who suspected him of imbibing.

In his defense, the driver insisted, "Nobody was driving, officer. We were all in the back seat."

The line is recalled by recent statements on the conflict in Zaire's Shaba province.

Accused by President Carter of encouraging the invasion of rebels from neighboring Angola, Cuba's President Fidel Castro insisted that he tried valiantly to bar the incursion when he was aware that it was planned.

Angolan President Agostinho Neto, too, disclaimed responsibility and pledged to disarm the rebels retreating to his country.

President Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire dismissed as unfounded speculation that he had invited the attack with his own support of Angolan guerrilla groups who took refuge in Zaire.

Mobutu may have been the most candid. He conceded that his army was cowardly.

His vow to retaliate against Angola by striking back with an elite military force, however, ranks with the fantasies of his adversaries.

Africa has enough troubles without the "let's-you-and-him-fight" mentality of its leaders and questionable friends.

Lovett has more to offer

Unaware of what Lovett Memorial Library has to offer?

Dan Sneider, director of the library, wants to give people a chance to see what is offered at the library and see it taken advantage of although he admits "Pampa is very library minded."

New books come into the library in what is called the "McNaughton Book Plan" whereas a basic collection of 350 books are loaned, tested on the public's interest and selected for purchase.

Several new films geared for family viewing are provided every month through the Texas Library Film System. These are made available to the public for a small postage fee, but advance notice must be made to the library.

"The film program is very successful," Mr. Sneider proudly added.

In addition to loaning books and films, the Pampa library has managed to maintain art prints on a rotating basis.

Several framed art prints in the library along the balcony railing are budgeted by state and federal funds.

After serving four and a half years in Lubbock, first as a reference librarian and then head of the branch, Sneider came to Pampa a year ago because "I felt it was time to move on."

"Being director and my own boss gives me an opportunity to be in contact with people," said Sneider.

Lovett Memorial Library offers an excellent reference collection of material geared for easy usage.

Librarians are more than eager to show the people how the system can be used to their advantage.

Pre-school children at various day care centers receive "Story Hour" Thursdays at 10:00 a.m. as a service program.

Library hours this fall and winter are 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Fridays, and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturdays.

Clarification on possible referendum

Recent stories in the Pampa News about the proposal to lease the Highland and McLean General Hospitals to a hospital corporation referred to the possibility of county residents petitioning to put the question of leasing the hospital to a referendum.

If 10 percent of the qualified voters in the county petition the commissioners' court to hold a referendum on the issue before the date of the first public hearing on the matter (Oct. 19), a referendum must be held, according to Texas statutes.

However, if no petition is presented to the commissioners' court by that date, the commissioners' court may make the decision whether to lease the hospital or not.

The law also provides for the commissioners' court to call a referendum whether a petition is filed or not.

Education board to meet Monday

The Pampa Independent School District Board of Education will meet Monday at 5:00 p.m. in the Carver Center conference room.

On the agenda for the meeting will be consideration and action of recommendations for property insurance coverage for the school district. The first reading of the recommended approval of policy revisions and payment for new construction and renovation bills.

An executive session will be held by the board to discuss personnel and the disposition of the Houston campus.

Minority businessmen face difficult problems

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Businesses run by blacks and Mexican-Americans have so much trouble getting bank loans that they are forced to operate on a "pay-as-you-go" basis, reports a legislator-citizens committee.

In a report adopted Thursday, the House Select Committee on Minority Business Enterprises said:

"Often these firms operate on a marginal basis and this tends to make them a less than desirable credit risk. As a result, short-term notes are often the norm."

It added that interest rates are higher for minority businesses and extensive collateral often is required.

The committee recommended that 40 percent of the state's business — such as construction and supply orders — go to small and minority businesses. Ten of that 40 percent should go to minority businesses.

The report to the Legislature was approved, 6-0. The committee was charged by Speaker Bill Clayton with making recommendations to promote minority business enterprises in Texas.

The committee held public meetings in seven cities — Alice, Fort Worth, El Paso, San Antonio, Austin, Harlingen and Houston.

"...stereotyping along both ethnic and sex lines, often looms as a major hurdle for a minority business person to overcome," the committee report said.

It said small and minority contractors felt that tougher bonding standards were imposed on them.

A state report indicated that state agencies awarded 32 percent of all purchases of articles and supplies to small businesses, but some witnesses testified that the percentage was not valid, because the definition of "small business" was too broad.

The committee recommended redefining a small business as one having 25 permanent employees or less and less than $1 million in gross sales annually.

The committee recommended establishing a legislative committee to make sure that legislative policies on purchases from small businesses are followed by state agencies.

The committee recommended raising the state bonding floor requirement for construction projects from $25,000 to $100,000.

It asked the State Insurance Board to see whether it would be feasible to set up an assigned pool for bonding for small business persons.

It said the Texas Office of Minority Business Enterprises — the only state organization charged with stimulating and expanding minority businesses throughout Texas — should be financed by at least matching federal dollars with state dollars.

In the 1979 fiscal year, the committee said, the state only appropriated $42,038 for the agency.

The committee also said state funds should be made available to teach the fundamentals of business, profits and management in the high schools.

present officers getting jobs here now."

The testimony came during the third day of a trial before U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice. Eight inmates in the state prison system have filed class action suits challenging the way Texas prisoners are treated and seeking major changes in the penal system.

Lamar, who has filed numerous lawsuits against the state and the corrections department, said he often had been forced "to work in the rain without a raincoat and in the mud without overshoes."

"At one unit where I stayed there were two all-black wings," the black inmate said. "At the Ellis Unit black prisoners did the majority of the work in the field. We were always in the fields earlier than the white inmates. We worked longer."

Lamar said he had submitted "somewhere between 90 and 100 complaints" about the food given to inmates.

"There were roaches in the food and the dining facilities were unsanitary, although they have improved," he said. "But now I only eat one meal a day in the mess hall. The other meals I buy at the commissary with money sent to me by my family."

Lamar also testified he had never been denied access to a lawyer since another inmate won a federal lawsuit forbidding the prison system from denying convicts the right of legal advice.

"This was a point for the state in its rebuttal to inmate claims that they have been denied access to the courts and to attorneys."

Ninety citizens of the Soviet Union were expelled from Britain in 1971 for espionage activities.

Inmate blasts prison conditions

HOUSTON (AP) — A man serving a 25-year term in the state prison system for armed robbery says the Texas Department of Corrections is guilty of racism and nepotism.

Alan Lamar, 41, told a federal judge Thursday that blacks do most of the work in the agricultural fields and that housing segregation still exists in some units.

Lamar also said, "We are not getting the best of possible officers because there are too many brothers and cousins of

Fire prevention week coming

Mayor R.D. Wilkerson Wednesday proclaimed Oct. 14 as Fire Prevention Week.

"I urge all citizens of Pampa, along with business, labor, farm and youth organizations, as well as schools, civic groups and public information agencies to observe Fire Prevention Week, to provide useful fire safety information to the public, and to enlist the active participation of all citizens in year-round fire prevention programs," Wilkerson declared in his proclamation.

"I bid all citizens to support earnestly the fire prevention and control efforts of their community fire departments," he concluded.

A banner proclaiming Fire Prevention Week is currently being displayed above the 100 block of N. Cuyler, and fire prevention posters will be displayed on various public buildings and business places in the city.

Fire prevention literature will be distributed to all elementary schools, and fire drills will be conducted at schools by firemen. Fire demonstrations at schools and civic clubs will be conducted by the Farm Bureau.

The fire department will have an open house at Central Fire Station, 203 W. Foster, Wednesday. Coffee and doughnuts will be served from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Equipment will be displayed for the public at Central Station. Sirens will be sounded at noon each day from Oct. 9-14.

To demonstrate the need for a fire prevention week, Fire Chief Finace Dyer cited statistics compiled by the National Fire Prevention Association.

In 1977, fires caused 9,950 deaths, 78 percent of which were residential. There were 134 firefighter deaths in 1977.

During that same year there were a total of 3,513,000 fires, causing losses amounting to $6,064,000,000.

Arson was the cause of 177,000 fires in 1977, resulting in 700 civilian deaths and $1,159,000,000 in property loss.

FOCUS

One Who Will Not Race

When the Canadian Grand Prix auto race gets underway in Montreal on Sunday, one of this year's top drivers won't be competing. Ronnie Peterson, who ranked second only to Mario Andretti in the race for the world driving championship, died last month in a fiery 10-car crash at the start of the Italian Grand Prix. Peterson was the 21st driver to die as a result of Formula One accidents since 1952. While safety standards and equipment have improved in recent years, the speeds at which the cars travel have increased. As retired driving champion Jackie Stewart remarked after Peterson's death, "It could happen time and again."

25,000 mile relay planned

The Pampa High School Key Club has announced plans for a project to raise money for mental retardation.

Students from each class will participate in a 25,000 mile relay to be held at Harvester Field Oct. 14 at 1:00 p.m.

Each student will be required to run a minimum of one mile in the relay for each $10 pledged to mental retardation.

Key Club President Mark Lehnick explained the purpose of the event is to let people know the basic elements of mental retardation and to help raise money for the mentally handicapped.

In 1971, Pope Paul VI celebrated his 74th birthday as the Italian press speculated he might resign before his next birthday.

Other projects conducted by the Key Club include educating others about mental retardation as well as helping the mentally retarded.

Stroke club hosts guest lecturer

Dr. Juergen Kleen, a Houston psychiatrist and a recovered stroke victim, was the guest speaker at a dinner held in the Starlight Room of the Coronado Center Thursday evening.
 The dinner, which was entitled a "Celebration in Living," was sponsored by the Gray County Division of the American Heart Association and the Pampa Stroke Club.
 Kleen suffered from a stroke a year and a half ago, but in his speech last night he said six months prior to the stroke he suffered from loss of hearing.
 This can be identified as an initial warning sign.
 Kleen said one of the most difficult things to do is to get a patient to accept himself as he is currently.
 In 1977 Kleen started group sessions and working with other stroke patients. "I have become a symbol to my patients, he said.
 "It is difficult to get the public to accept the stroke patient," Kleen stated.
 Kleen said often the stroke patient and his family become a statistic in society. He added there are approximately 500,000 new strokes in the United States each year, of these 11 percent bring total mortality.
 Kleen said there are several problems with the stroke patient and his family. Among them are the emotional ones.
 "Individuals with strokes don't understand what has happened. The individual worries that it will happen again."
 Stroke patients also worry about who is going to take care of them along with the financial problems.
 "He goes into a state of depression."
 "I was lucky enough not to become depressed after my stroke," Kleen said.
 He added many stroke victims will have ideas of suicide. "The patient is ashamed of his condition and prefers to sit and stare."
 After Kleen finished speaking material was presented to the audience on an overhead projector and later a filmstrip was shown.
 The material presented dealt with learning the warning signals and protecting yourself by learning the symptoms.

HEALTHFUL HINTS

Most often asked Questions On Nutrition BY: KATRINA BIGHAM

Q. Tell me about vitamin B.
A. One of the first vitamins discovered was vitamin B, first believed to be a single vitamin. But as research continued, it turned out to be a whole family of vitamins, each member related to another, yet each doing a different job.
 There are, according to the latest research, 17 B vitamins, and they are always found together in nature. Unfortunately, most people think of the B vitamins separately and take them separately, especially B-12 and B-6. One should be wary of doing this over long periods, because "The American Journal of Clinical Nutrition" states that in vitamin B deficiency, the administration of a single B factor may result in clinical signs of deficiency of the others. Leading nutritionist such as Linda Clark and Adelle Davis agree. Therefore, to derive the many benefits of the B vitamins or to correct deficiencies, one may take the best - balanced B-complex tablets available (Usually you have to take six daily of these, since it is not possible to obtain all the B vites in one tablet.), and preferably take them with a food rich in B vites such as liver, brewer's yeast, wheat germ, rice polish or blackstrap molasses.
 The benefits of the B vites are too numerous to list here, but the major ones are increased energy, mental alertness and well-being and better looking skin and hair.
 Oh, and folks, remember one thing--sugar and alcohol destroy the B-complex vitamins!

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: From the moment we announced our wedding plans, my mother kept harping, "DON'T open your gifts at the reception—it's so boring to the guests!"

After four months of hearing this, we decided to go along with her—just to keep her quiet.

We went on a brief honeymoon and returned to find that mother had opened all our gifts!

She justified it by saying that many friends and relatives had stopped by wanting to see what we had received.

Naturally, we were furious. But to top it off, after I sent off all the handwritten "thank-you" notes, I heard from several people who said, "Your 'thank you' was lovely, but it was not the gift we sent you."

Obviously, Mother got the cards all mixed up. Do I have the right to feel angry and cheated?

UNFORGIVING IN OHIO

DEAR UNFORGIVING: You have. But please don't be "unforgiving" forever. Mothers sometimes need to be forgiven, too.

DEAR ABBY: Our 18-year-old honor student son (I'll call him Bud) has just informed us that he doesn't want to accept the four-year scholarship offered him by a fine Eastern college. His reason is his 13-year-old girlfriend. He doesn't want to leave her!

Bud was a bright and sensible boy until he started going with this overdeveloped, aggressive little sexpot. You should see her, Abby. She could easily pass for 21.

The girl's parents don't seem to object, from the way they let Bud stay at her house at all hours of the night. In fact, they appear to encourage this relationship.

My husband and I are worried sick. Our son's entire future seems threatened. Should we talk to the girl's parents? I don't think they realize what a dangerous situation they could be pushing their daughter into.

CONCERNED IN IOWA CITY

DEAR CONCERNED: Don't expect the girl's parents to assume the entire responsibility. At 18, your son should know all the facts of life and a few about the law. (The girl is a minor. He is not.)

Bud may be academically bright, but he's socially immature. I urge you and your husband to communicate your love, understanding and concern to Bud. You can't force him to leave her, but you might rest more easily if you have an open and honest dialogue with him.

DEAR ABBY: A friend says I'm crazy, but I want to know what you think.

Five years ago, my husband and I became very close friends with another couple I'll call Ed and Mary. Two years later I found out that Mary was having an affair with my husband, and as a result our friendship broke up. The situation was heartbreaking for all concerned.

Mary has since begged my forgiveness for having let this happen. Our marriages are both stable now, and I believe I can truly forgive her and my husband, too.

We've missed these friends, Abby, and all of us have learned a lot from that terrible mess.

Do you think we can resume a healthy friendship once again?

FORGIVE AND FORGET IN IOWA

DEAR FORGIVE: If, as you say, your marriages are stable now, there is no reason why you can't resume your friendship. Your maturity and generosity are commendable. God bless you.

Ask Dr. Lamb

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB— I am a man in my early 70s with exceptionally good health, but last summer I contracted shingles. I went through all the avenues of medicines I could, but always the same thing: "Live with the aftereffects for three months to three years."

One doctor informed me a great deal of research has been done in this particular field but without success. I am aware that a virus infection of the nerves is the cause of the disease, if a disease it is, or the nerve ends being "blistered," as some say, and that the areas involved are different.

Frankly, I see no reason for the secret about the infection. Since I have had this illness, I have found a number of people with the same problem. So, if you could offer any suggestions, or shed some light on what this thing is, I am sure there would be a number of people who are interested.

DEAR READER— The blistering at the ends of the nerves that you are speaking of is much the same as the blisters that you see in chicken pox. That's not too surprising because the same virus that causes chicken pox also causes shingles.

You don't have shingles unless you have had the chicken pox virus earlier in life. The current theory is that the virus lies dormant in the roots of the nerve and later, sometimes 20 to 40 years, the virus is activated and causes shingles.

The involvement of the nerve explains the peculiar distribution of the pain and blisters. It follows the course of the involved sensory nerve. That's why it often involves a band around the chest, sometimes just on one side, or it can involve a peculiar distribution across the face or elsewhere on the body.

It is not really a contagious disease, although a person who has never had

DEAR POLLY— The tiny screws that hold my eyeglasses together fall out so easily. I coat these little screws with two coats of clear nail polish, let them dry for 10 minutes and feel much safer. — ISABELLE

DEAR POLLY— I bought a pair of sun glasses on sale and loved them but on my arrival home found one of the tiny screws was missing. I fixed this by using one of those little wire ties that are on bread or plastic garbage bags. I stripped it down to the bare wire and this slipped through the holes in the ear piece and frame. The wire was twisted tightly around and is almost invisible. — LORAINÉ

Danger lurks inside and outside

By Edward R. Ricciuti

There are a variety of yardsticks by which the dangerous qualities of poisonous plants can be measured.

Are plants to be judged by the potency of their toxins?

The frequency with which they cause death or injury?

The numbers of their victims? Whether or not they are within reach of many people? Or whether their danger lies behind tempting berries or brilliant flowers?

Many of the plants grown in the home or garden are doubly dangerous because they are both highly toxic and close at hand.

One of the most menacing is a relative of philodendron, dieffenbachia, whose broad, streaked leaves have made it a favorite houseplant. Some medical authorities consider dieffenbachia so hazardous it should not be kept in the home.

The reason why dieffenbachia is viewed so darkly is that its pretty leaves and stalky stem contain crystals of calcium oxalate. If the greenery of the plant is chewed, the tiny but needle-sharp crystals lodge in the tongue, lips and mouth, thereby irritating terribly the sensitive oral tissues.

The irritation in a severe case is so intense that the tongue, lips and throat swell to the point that they obstruct the victim's ability to talk. Thus originated the other name for dieffenbachia, dumbcane.

Children who know no better are the most common victims of dieffenbachia. In 1975, for example, 257 of the 308 ingestions of dieffenbachia reported to Public Health Service's poison clearinghouse were by children under 5 years of age.

If houseplants are kept within children's reach, the youngsters should be warned repeatedly that a pretty plant is not necessarily good to eat. This is especially important if a plant has bright berries, which youngsters can easily mistake for edible fruit.

A particularly dangerous plant in this respect is the Jerusalem cherry, another popular house variety, whose orange or red berries look unusually luscious. The leaves and unripe berries of the Jerusalem cherry contain the poison solanine, which can cause severe vomiting, diarrhea and, in extreme cases, collapse.

The safest course is not to keep the plant in a house with children of pre-school age.

The sorrowful results of what can happen when plants with poisonous berries are grown in or around households with youngsters is exemplified by a tragedy that occurred in Ohio a few years ago.

One summer day, a little girl was setting up a play luncheon on small toy plates in the yard of her home. She had arranged some brightly colored items — an apple and a radish — on a plate, then spied some red berries on a low, woody plant in her mother's rock garden.

She picked the berries and put them with the radish and apple.

The plant in the garden was daphne, whose berries, white or yellow flowers, bark and leaves contain dread poisons. The little girl ate the berries she had picked for her make-believe luncheon.

Within four hours, she had fallen into a coma. Within seven hours, she was dead, the victim of a tragedy that should make every parent look with scrupulous care at what has been planted around the yard.

How many parents are aware, for instance, that the yews that border the foundations, walks and driveways of innumerable houses in the United States contain a poison that can cause severe gastro-intestinal problems, convulsions and stoppage of the heart?

Cases of yew poisoning are uncommon in the United States, but that does not mean the danger from this attractive ornamental shrub should be taken lightly. Because of its extreme toxicity and the fact that it is in reach of millions of young children, the yew presents a grave potential danger.

Very small children should not be allowed to play unsupervised near yews, and older youngsters should be taught that under no circumstances should they eat the berries or the foliage of this plant.

Among other plants demanding parental vigilance are: mountain laurel, a shrub native to the eastern United States and widely used as an ornamental; poison and water hemlock, which are frequently mistaken for wild parsnip and wild parsley, respectively; castor plants; grown commercially as well as in gardens and homes, whose beans produce useful oil but can kill if chewed, and two warm-climate ornamentals, oleander and lantana.

Don't kick snake plant

By ELVIN McDONALD

Early last month, I spent 10 days in Key West, Fla., that southernmost part of the continental United States. For me, it was a dream come true, a frost-free climate and clean, moisture-laden air sufficient to grow thriving orchids and bromeliads literally hanging from the trees.

There were also sansevierias or snake plants all around, some in pots or half-rusted tin cans, others growing in hedgerows. They all looked tolerably healthy but not once did I see a planting that indicated anyone really cared. Comedian Rodney Dangerfield complains that no one gives him any respect. Sansevieria has the same problem.

In fact, since the days of the Victorian parlor, few sansevierias have been taken seriously. They've been relegated to the greasy spoons, saloons and down-in-the-mouth Hot Baltimore lobbies of the world. Those occasionally seen in the collections of succulent plants in botanical gardens were usually well-grown, but all too often defaced by bits of graffiti scratched indelibly in the leaf surfaces.

Thanks to today's generation of plant people and the influence of industrial design on private interiors, all of this is about to change. The trend toward less clutter in home furnishings and simplified lifestyle has brought with it a need for plants with a new look — specimens with strong, clean lines and sculptural forms. The sansevieria fills the bill perfectly and is increasingly the studied choice for non-cliche plantings.

What has happened is that the neglected sansevieria has begun to appear as the living sculpture in rooms featured by Architectural Digest, House & Garden and House Beautiful. However subtle the message may be, the plant most people wouldn't have been caught dead with is suddenly living it up in fashionably drop-dead interiors.

Now that the sansevieria's new image has created sufficient demand, growers are actively propagating the standard species and varieties as well as seeking out new ones. Although 34 different sansevierias are listed in Exotica III, at present only a baker's dozen are cataloged by mail-order specialists.

The influence of industrial design on home furnishings is not the only reason for sansevieria's new desirable status. It is in fact a remarkably adaptable plant. What else will grow in either full sun or a dimly lighted corner? In dry or wet soil? Cool or warm temperatures? Low or high humidity? And, from the viewpoint of growers and shopkeepers, what other plant can survive shipping and rough handling without so much as a single damaged leaf? For these reasons, the United States Department of Agriculture at Beltsville, Md., is now devoting considerable space and energy to the study of sansevierias and the development of new varieties.

Sansevieria (san-zuh-VEER-ee-uh) is a succulent member of the Lily Family and, as such, it numbers among its relatives such favorite houseplants as dracaena, aloe, asparagus fern, beaucarnea (pony tail), spider plant, pleomele and yucca. No matter how easy it is to grow any of these related plants, sansevieria is even easier. Virtually nothing we grow indoors survives neglect better than the sansevieria. No insects are known to attack it and only gross neglect will kill the roots. Sansevierias cannot survive freezing temperatures or standing for long periods of time with the roots in water. Otherwise, they are the original never-say-die house plants.

However, if you want to grow a blue-ribbon sansevieria, follow this cultural guide:

Light: From full sun to shade. In the absence of any natural light, use an incandescent flood placed 18 to 24 inches above or to the side of the leaves and burn it eight to 12 hours daily; a 74-watt size will sustain a small sansevieria or use a 150-watt bulb for a specimen.

Temperature: Average dwelling or office, ideally 60-80 F. during the winter heating season.

Humidity: Low to medium; mist only as a means of cleaning the leaves, or if it makes you feel good.

Soil: Three parts all-purpose packaged potting soil to one of clean, sharp sand. Water well, then not again until the surface feels almost dry to the touch.

The easiest way to propagate sansevierias is by division. This can be done at any time of the year. Simply unpot a plant with two or more rosettes of leaves and cut down through the fleshy rootstocks and soil between any two sets of leaves. Pot up the divisions in individual containers.

A more interesting and challenging way to propagate sansevierias is by leaf cuttings. Cut one- to three-inch sections of leaves horizontally and insert the base of each about a half-inch deep in moist vermiculite. Such leaf cuttings usually send up new plants exactly like those from which they were taken. Varieties like sansevieria trifasciata laurentii, with yellow-margined leaves, are an exception. When propagated by leaf sections, they revert to the coloration of the species. To multiply the tricolor forms divide an old plant.

The rewards for giving sansevieria a little respect are many, not the least of which are spikes of small flowers in season, usually white pale pink or greenish — and wonderfully fragrant.

Sansevieria

Kappa Iota

Gamma Conclave of Kappa Kappa Iota Sorority met Sept. 25, for the first meeting of the year. Hostesses for the meeting in the home of Laura Penick included Mrs. Gene Tatum, Lily Nuckols, and Mrs. Nicki Gordon.

The group welcomed Reba Hanks as a new member. Also attending were Mrs. Wathena Watt, Eloise Lane and Mrs. Jeannie Cone who will be initiated at the next meeting.

President Ann DiCosimo presided over the business meeting. She announced that Ouida Biggers, Texas State president would be speaking at a salad luncheon in Pampa on Sept. 30 at the Senior Citizens Center. Mrs. Penick reported on her trip to the National Kappa Kappa Iota Convention in Des Moines, Iowa in June. She was appointed a member of the nominating committee for the 1979-1980 officers at the national level.

BOB COLLETTE, 25, is considered one of the best fishing guides in northern Minnesota. He has refused to quit although a diving accident four years ago cost him the use of his legs. (AP Laserphoto)

After losing use of legs Guide refuses to quit

NISSWA, Minn. (AP) — Some people, not many, no matter what fate deals them, refuse to say, "I give up." One of these rarities is Bob Collette. Bob Collette is an outdoorsman. "Indoors is where you have to wait until you can get outdoors again," he said. He was raised on one of Minnesota's lakes, one of those jewels of creation where the pines that come down to the water's edge are so green they look black at dusk, a surrounding army of black spearpoints piercing the sky. No wonder the outdoors awed him. At age 3 or thereabouts, as soon as he could hold a rod, he became an able fisherman. At 14 he was an expert, so skilled he became a summertime fishing guide at various resorts.

"I charged $1 a fish. I ran the boat, baited the hooks and cleaned the fish. The customer got all I caught, too. If I didn't catch more than anyone else, something was wrong." Four years ago, when Bob was a veteran guide of 21, he went for a cooling dip in a resort pool after a hot July day of fishing. Nobody had told him the pool had been filled with concrete and had become a wading pool. He dove in. "There was no pain, but I knew something was wrong. 'Somehow I got to the side. A friend helped me out of the pool. I asked him to touch me. He touched me from my toes to my neck and I couldn't feel a thing. Well, I was scared.' He had shattered his sixth and seventh cervical vertebrae. "The doctors told me I would never walk again. They wouldn't say I would never use my arms, but that was the message I got. I never got a straight answer. Maybe it was just as well. "After about six months I was sitting in a wheelchair looking at my right hand. My thumb moved. "I worked at it hard. I wore myself out working at it. Two weeks later I got my fingers to move. Then I started working on my left hand. Finally I got it moving, then my arms." After several operations, months of therapy, Bob could get around in a wheelchair, get in and out by himself. On one visit home, before he was discharged, he asked his brothers to put him in a boat and take him fishing. "They taped a rod to my arm, and I fished. I don't know what I would have done without my fantastic brothers and all my friends." Through it all, Bob never lost his confidence or good humor. He wanted to remain what he was, a fishing guide, and did. He is one of the best in this part of the northland, and if he ever has had a moment of self-pity he doesn't remember it. "The way I am is the way I'm going to be. I accept that. I can do everything I need to do. I believe as well as you." Just so. He can hitch his boat behind his van, back it down a lakeside ramp, launch it, heft himself inside with strong arms, leaving his wheelchair on shore, settle in, bait his hook, grin. "Let's go fishing."

Washington briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Transportation Department plans to design a training program to help volunteer firefighters deal with accidents involving hazardous materials. A department study released Wednesday said, "In general, the fire departments in major cities have sophisticated equipment and trained personnel to handle most hazardous-material incidents. The training effort must concentrate on the part-time firefighter who, even though a dedicated volunteer, may not have the time or resources to devote to lengthy and expensive training."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of the National Academy of Sciences says the Soviet Union continues to stifle its Jewish scientists and intellectuals. Testifying before a House subcommittee Wednesday on scientific exchanges between the United States and the Soviet Union, Dr. Philip Handler said, "Anti-Semitism seems to have become almost official, resulting in reduced access to higher education, to the political system and to academic research and administrative posts." WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has agreed to President Carter's request to limit federal blue-collar workers to a 5.5 percent pay raise for the next fiscal year and to give top officials no raise at all. Other lower-echelon federal workers are already limited to a 5.5 percent raise. The bill now goes to the Senate.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of agricultural scientists says the government is overreacting to a study suggesting the food preservative sodium nitrite causes cancer. Representatives of the Council for Agricultural Science and Technology said Wednesday the test findings should serve as a warning but aren't serious enough to warrant the plans of the Food and Drug Administration and the Agriculture Department to propose gradually removing nitrite from the market.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate move to protect U.S. textiles from foreign competition could ruin current international trade negotiations, American and Japanese economic officials say. Richard Cooper and Hiro-michi Miyazaki agreed in a joint meeting with reporters Wednesday that "very serious doubt" has been cast on the future of the negotiations by the Senate's vote to exempt textiles from a list of goods covered by negotiators debating tariff changes.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ninety-five bulls are to arrive in Moscow this week, and 450 more are scheduled to be airlifted Oct. 16, making up a record sale of U.S. breeding cattle to the Soviet Union, the Agriculture Department said Wednesday. Susan McCullough, a spokeswoman for the department's Foreign Agriculture Service, estimated the value of the cattle at $750,000.

A Tourist 'Trap'
FREDERICK, Md. (AP) — When Gordon and Nomette Walters saw the red lights flashing in the rear view mirror of their motor home, they were sure they had run into "one of those southern radar traps." Out of the patrol car stepped Trooper Lynn Moberly and Edward Crawford, but no tickets were handed out. Instead, they rolled out "Operation Welcome Mat" and the Walters got Frederick's red-carpet treatment. Crawford, vice president of the Frederick suburban Kiwanis Club, approached, asked the elderly California couple if they could spare 24 hours. When they said yes, they were escorted to the executive suite of one of the town's finer motels and city officials presented keys to the city and told the Walters they had the right "to do anything you want to while you're here." "We've never won anything before in our lives," said Mrs. Walters, 68. Walters, 71, a retired auto inspector, said the 24 hours was "something that happens just once in a lifetime." The special event, said Mayor Ron Young, is Frederick's way of making "sure we get our share of tourists, even if we have to snatch them off the highways."

Agriculture department has made some changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Traditionally, the Agriculture Department has been a man's domain, especially in the higher-paying career jobs, and there have been few changes for women to brag about.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland says his department's track record in employing and promoting career women to higher-level jobs "needs much improvement."

Bergland's views on the Federal Women's Program — which was initiated in 1967 with an executive order banning federal job discrimination on the basis of sex — were included in a memorandum to USDA agencies made public Wednesday.

The Agriculture Department has 84,625 full-time permanent employees of which approximately 24 percent are women, compared with a total federal work force of 30 percent women.

Bergland said that the lag is far greater in the higher paying jobs.

For example, he said, in the federal pay categories GS-12 through GS-12 — salaries of $15,090 to $21,883 a year — women comprise 7.2 percent of the workers against 22.5 percent in the government overall.

Bergland said that in categories GS-13 through GS-16 women have 3.7 percent of the jobs against 5.9 percent for the entire U.S. government. Those jobs pay $26,022 to $42,423 a year.

The job figures pertain to career Civil Service employees and do not include women serving in politically appointed jobs in the department, such as Assistant Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman and a number of others.

Bergland said that President Carter in a memo almost a year ago directed that progress reports on women in federal jobs be submitted by each department or agency.

"He expects to see significant improvement," Bergland said. "I intend to see that USDA makes that improvement."

Bergland said that "new and innovative initiatives and programs" must be used to provide greater opportunity for women already working in USDA and "to recruit more women, particularly in non-traditional areas."

Telling agency heads that he expects "full and active cooperation of all managers" in promoting opportunities for women, Bergland also directed them to set up specific goals and timetables to accomplish the task.

"We must also provide experiential and training opportunities to enable them (women) to achieve satisfying and rewarding careers and to work up to their potential," he said.

Additionally, Bergland said he expected agencies to keep in mind the president's "concern with reference to older women and minority women" in federal jobs.

U.S. Lutheran and Roman Catholic scholars have finished drafting a joint statement on papal infallibility, an issue that long has divided them. While still differing about it, they reportedly put it in new perspective.

It's the result of five years of talks between official dialogue teams on the thorny subject. Their agreed upon statement is expected to be issued later this month.

Participants say it puts the emphasis on the "indefectibility" of the church, seeing it as protected from irremediable error by God's authoritative word in Scripture.

Both the Catholic and Lutheran representatives affirm that biblical basis as safeguarding the church from being deflected from the truth, participants say.

But the Rev. Dr. Warren Quanbeck of Luther-Northwestern Seminary in St. Paul, Minn., says areas of disagreement about papal infallibility remain unresolved.

"While we agree on indefectibility of the church, Lutherans are unable to see how we can speak of infallibility of a person or an office," he says.

That doctrine — holding that the pope is infallible on faith and morals when he speaks ex cathedra (from the chair) — has been definitely used only once since it first was claimed by Roman Catholicism in 1870.

The occasion was in the 1950 declaration by Pope Pius XII that the Virgin Mary had been assumed bodily into heaven. In recent times, with reforms of the Second Vatican Council stressing the shared responsibilities of people, priests and bishops with the pope, the concept of papal infallibility has receded into the background.

The Lutheran-Catholic dialogue teams, which have been meeting periodically ever since mid-1965, have found agreement on most beliefs — the Nicene Creed, baptism, the ministry and Holy Communion.

But since 1973, they've grappled with the remaining stickler — papal infallibility.

In addition to a common statement, titled "Teaching Authority and Infallibility in the Church," the two groups also have drafted separate Catholic and Lutheran "reflections" about the document.

The conclusions are expected to also include historical material and detailed reviews of the convergences and "common ground" found in the conversations.

The teams earlier produced an agreement about "Papal Primacy and the Universal Church" in which they maintained Christian unity would be possible under a renewed model of the papacy, with the pope as presiding pastor under authority of the Gospel.

The dialogue meetings are sponsored by the U.S. National Committee of the Lutheran World Federation and the Roman Catholic Bishops' Committee for Ecumenical and Interreligious Affairs.

Special services to be held Sunday

Sunday will be a special day at the Calvary Assembly Church that will be highlighted by the sermon of a father and son duo.

David Powers and his son, David, Jr. will minister to the congregation beginning at 10:45 a.m. following Sunday School classes.

Powers, who is pastor of the church, said his son David has been preaching for five years and has given sermons in nine states and has even preached on television. David is 13 years old.

The church, which is at the corner of Crawford and Love, invites anyone interested in the services to attend.

Religious roundup

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indiana's United Methodist Bishop Ralph T. Alton has protested the recent grant by the World Council of Churches of $85,000 to the Patriotic Front of Rhodesia (Zimbabwe) as a violation of the ecumenical body's policy.

He says he wrote to the WCC general secretary, the Rev. Dr. Philip Potter in Geneva, Switzerland, saying the grant was contrary to the organization's stated policy in "situations of political conflict where church leadership was involved on both sides."

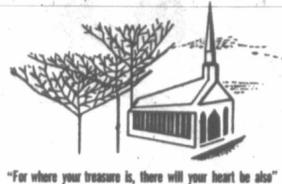

The grant went for humanitarian aid to guerrilla movements led by the Rev. Joshua Nkomo and Robert Magabe.

Musical scheduled

Barrett Baptist Church will present the musical "Greater Is He" Saturday at 7:30 p.m. The church is located at 903 East Beryl in Pampa.

Larry Rice of First Baptist in Sherman will direct the musical with the singing group "Solid Rock".

An investment in Your Future ...ATTEND CHURCH

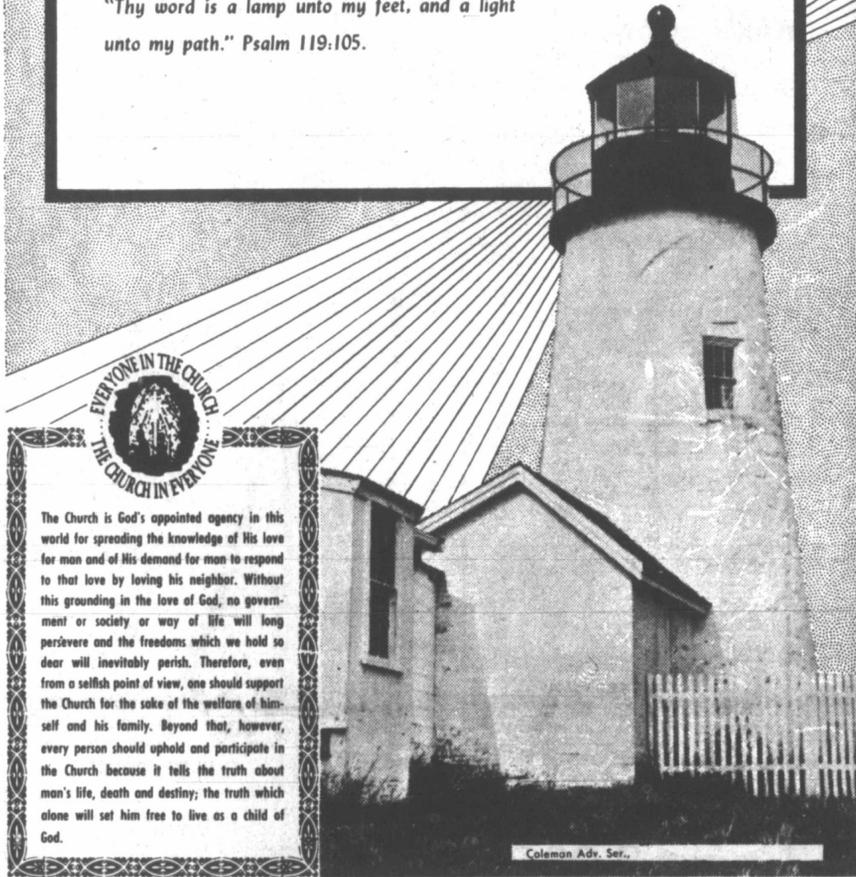

"For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also"

The Protecting LIGHT

This lighted tower is a light shining in the darkness to guide sailors and ships through the night. Our Lord is our light who guides us faithfully through life, even though it be as a stormy sea — He knows the way. His word, as proclaimed in His church, will light your way and bring peace, joy and comfort.

"Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." Psalm 119:105.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Search for new Pope begins

VATICAN CITY (AP) — At the Vatican this coming week, they get down to the solemn business of finding the right man to carry on what the Cardinals call the world's oldest continuing institution: the papacy.

The job description calls for an administrator, a communicator, a linguist, a motivator, a theologian (preferably a canon lawyer), a financier, a teacher, a discreet politician and an able public relations practitioner.

Some of the qualifications would be needed in any top executive job, but this is not anything like finding a new chairman for the Ford Motor Co. Ford, a younger institution by nearly two millennia, doesn't worry about tradition as much as the Roman Catholic Church, whose goals are eternal and whose prospective clients embrace all civilization, making them difficult to program into a computer.

Ford could get executive recruiters — headhunters, they're called — to do the looking, instead of cardinals.

Even before the conclave begins Saturday, Oct. 14, the cardinal recruiters will be looking among themselves for a man of learning, of wit, eloquence, tact, charm and — something not usually sought in industry — piety.

In principle, any male — even a married one willing to put his wife in a convent — is eligible for the post first held by St. Peter 263 popes ago and most recently by John Paul I, who died in his bed only 34 days after his surprise election as the church's top executive.

In practice — a practice going back 600 years to Pope Urban VI — only cardinals, the princes of the church who do the electing in secret sessions, are likely prospects — preferably Italian cardinals.

The last non-Italian to occupy the chair of Peter was Pope Adrian VI, born Adrian Florenz in Utrecht, Holland. Roman mobs hailed his election by stoning the cardinal electors after the conclave in 1522.

The right man must not be too young, since tradition dictates wariness toward a papacy that might last a quarter of a century. Cardinal Jaime Sin of Singapore, just 50, is the youngest elector.

The candidate sought must not be too old either — John Paul's fatal heart attack at 65 undoubtedly will be a factor this time in weighing the "papabili," the papal possibilities, although the average age of the cardinals eligible to vote is just a bit over 66.

Pope Paul VI, who died Aug. 6 after a 15-year reign, revised the 1,000-year-old papal election process to exclude cardinals who have passed their 80th birthday from entering the conclave.

"Health is always a consideration," New York's Cardinal Terence Cooke admitted as he arrived for his second conclave in two months, echoing a now current theme that was not even discussed with reporters the last time.

Yet, unlike other big organizations, this most pervasive of all multinationals, dealing with 700 million members in 146 countries, does not insist on a thorough physical for its top management prospects or require an annual checkup after their selection.

In this unique high-rise world of steeples and campanile, there is room at the top for both a traditionalist and an innovator.

However, he must not come on too strong (in the beginning, anyway) as a radical reformer or a hidebound reactionary, since the Catholic Church in the past 15 years has been heavily buffeted by the cyclonic winds of change emanating from the reforms of Vatican Council II, which John XXIII inaugurated and Paul VI had to carry out.

Ford's River Rouge plant could easily swallow up the 108-acre Vatican City State and its 1,000 resident population. Yet the man the recruiters seek must have a wide knowledge of the world, without appearing worldly.

In a job where the pope is considered infallible in matters of doctrine, his credibility in temporal affairs must go beyond the image Madison Avenue seeks to create for other corporate heads.

Pope John Paul I served only 34 days in office, two days longer than the man who had the briefest American presidency, the almost forgotten William Henry Harrison who died April 4, 1841, from a chill he caught riding a horse in his inaugural parade.

Yet John Paul's influence on the conclave beginning Oct. 14 will be, in Cardinal Cooke's word, "pervasive."

The last time the cardinals met, the pre-election favorites were all cardinals with long management experience in the Curia, the church's central bureaucracy. But the electors passed these in favor of Albino Luciani, the patriarch of Venice, who had no Curia experience and none in the papal diplomatic corps when he became John Paul I.

Now, because of his brief influence, the names most often mentioned are pastoral types, bishops in their dioceses: Salvatore Pappalardo of Palermo, Sicily, Corrado Ursi of Naples, Giovanni Colombo of Milan, Giovanni Benelli of Florence and Giuseppe Siri of Genoa.

But as the long history of the papacy shows, the only certain thing is the uncertainty that will grip the crowds when white smoke rises from the little stack atop the Sistine Chapel and the senior cardinal deacon makes his way out on the center balcony of St. Peter's Basilica to announce the 264th occupant of the chair of Peter.

To him will go the keys of the kingdom, the traditional fisherman's ring and, for a world headquarters, instead of a glass and steel high-rise, the largest cathedral in Christendom, the combined masterpiece of Michelangelo and all the great artists of the Renaissance.

Double Duty Ministry

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Paul and Phillip Cassibry have military and medical personnel at the army hospital in Fort Benning, Ga., seeing double.

For years the twins — both chaplains in the U.S. Army — were separated by their assignments. Now the Army has placed them both at nearby Fort Benning and the confusion has started.

Maj. Phillip Cassibry had been at the post about a year before his brother arrived, and he already was well known at the military hospital.

Even when they were assigned to posts on opposite sides of the globe, their identical features were sometimes a problem.

A Can of Worms — For Dinner STOCKTON, Calif. (AP) — Mike Trachiotis began eating worms as a lark, but now he's grown rather fond of the wiggly little creatures. And he hopes they'll bring him fame and fortune.

The Delta Junior College student claims to hold the world record for worm-eating — 38 at a single sitting. However, the current Guinness Book of World Records doesn't list a worm-eating category.

"If someone eats more than me, I'll eat more than them," Trachiotis boasts. "I just put them live in the back of my throat and swallow."

Trachiotis began eating worms after he saw a movie producer do it at a campus promotion and offer anyone duplicating his feat a part in his next picture. But despite frequent worm repasts since then, Trachiotis has not heard from the producer.

"At first this was a fun thing, but now I hope it will lead to other things, like movies," the 19-year-old said. "My big dream is to eat worms on the Johnny Carson show. I think that would blow people away."

It Rained on His Parade

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — It didn't rain on Joel Valdez but Tucson's city manager got a soaking anyway.

Valdez, participating in the filming of a television program Wednesday, was near the elephant enclosure at the Reid Park Zoo for one scene when Sabu, the bull elephant, sucked up a trunkful of water and shot it at Valdez, drenching his back.

Valdez calmly continued reading from his cue cards and said "that's show biz" when the scene was over.

The untidy incident wasn't the first involving the zoo and a city program. While Charles Sacamano of the University of Arizona was filming an advertisement urging Tucsonians to follow a water use program this spring, one of the zoo's camels threw up on him.

Vidkun Quisling became Norway's sole political leader in 1940.

October 6, 1978

Old attitudes will make way for the new this coming year and you'll find yourself being receptive and anxious to acquire knowledge about many different things. This change will do you good.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) The oldtrums accomplish only one purpose — keeping you miserable. Shake them off. Get yourself moving. You'll quickly find much to smile about. Find out more about yourself by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Being subjected to putting up with difficult people would normally get you down, but not today. Because of your attitude, things will eventually come out your way.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you run into a few setbacks today, look for new methods or people to help you accomplish your purposes. Success lies in a fresh approach.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You have a friend who can help you find the answers to a situation that has you stymied. Don't be too proud to seek advice.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Call a halt to an involvement you have with another if things are getting a little too costly. In retreat, a new direction can be found.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't become frustrated when you run up a dead-end street today. Admit you made a wrong decision. Once you accept this, a new way will open up.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A heavy responsibility not necessarily of your own making could rest on your shoulders today. Accepting the burden philosophically will be a big help in disposing of it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Depending on others today to take care of what you think should be their duties would be a mistake. The only person you can rely on is yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Old, unsolvable problems should be kept buried for the moment. Go on to other things that you know bring happiness.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Take care today with jobs calling for mental concentration. Though you may want to get your work finished, chances are your mind would wander too much.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're good at everything today except the handling of money. Wait till another day to shell out for something you think you can't live without.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A lack of patience could spoil some beneficial happenings coming your way today. A little more tolerance for those you deal with will reward you the most.

Phils battling long odds

By GARY MIHOSES
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies, playoff flops at home for the third straight year, battle long odds and the Los Angeles Dodgers here tonight in what could be the final game of the National League title series.

"We want to end this as quickly as we possibly can," Dave Lopes said after he and pitcher Tommy John led Los Angeles to a 4-0 win Thursday in Philadelphia that left the Dodgers a step away from a three-game sweep in the best-of-five set.

"Nobody in the athletic world right now thinks we have a chance — except us," said Phillies third baseman Mike Schmidt, whose team is now 1-8 in playoff games over the last three seasons and 0-6 at usually friendly Veterans Stadium.

Schmidt led off Thursday's game with a line drive single to right. Phillies partisans roared and John wondered on the mound.

"I thought it might be a long day — maybe a short one for Tommy," John said.

But he allowed only three more singles and two walks as his sinking deliveries were continually beaten into the turf for groundouts by the frustrated Phils.

It was Lopes, the Dodger team captain, second baseman and adrenal stimulator, who delivered the key hits — a home run, a single and a triple that each drove in single runs.

"Aggression is our key to success. We come out swinging," said Lopes, who the night before rapped a two-run homer, a double and a single in a 9-5 Dodger romp.

The Phils began the day banking on starting pitcher Dick Ruthven, now 1-11 lifetime against the Dodgers.

Ruthven retired nine straight Dodgers before Lopes led off the fourth inning with a homer over the left field wall.

Of the 27 Philadelphia outs, 21 came on ground balls. John, idled more than two weeks in September with a leg injury, got a bit tired in the seventh. But even that didn't help the Phils.

By the ninth inning, John looked fresher than ever. Schmidt grounded out. Larry Bowa grounded out. Then Maddox flied out to Rich Monday in right and it was over.

Whether it's all over this season for the Phils will be determined tonight at Dodger Stadium.

The Dodgers tonight are counting on pitcher Don Sutton, who has a 6-0 record in three NL playoff games, two World Series games and one All-Star game.

The Phils will counter with Steve Carlton, 0-2 in the playoffs and 0-2 in the World Series when he was with the St. Louis Cardinals.

"We're in our own backyard," said LaSardo. "Things look good."

Shockers cream Dumas

Down by an 8-2 score at halftime, the Pampa Shockers stiffened on defense while scoring just about every yard imaginable in the second half on their way to a 40-8 thrashing of the Dumas junior varsity here Thursday afternoon.

Pampa should have scored the first time it got its hands on the ball, but a penalty nullified a long punt return to a touchdown by Bobby Dorsey. Instead, the Shockers took over on their own 49 and drove to the Demon 16 before running out of downs.

But Dumas failed to move the ball and a high snap from center forced the Demons punter to 4-1.

Spikers whip Hereford with good team play

In a display of organization and team work, Harvesters Spikers defeated Hereford here Thursday 15-3, 15-1. The win brings Pampa's match record to 13-2.

Throughout the match the Harvesters were diligent in setting up every play rather than going for easy points.

"They were trying for play," Coach Lynn Wolfe said. "We had played Hereford before and knew they would be easier. This was a good time to practice setting up plays."

Wolfe said the team would continue to concentrate on setting up plays.

"If we do that in the easier games it becomes second nature," she said.

Playing without regulars Troi Staus and Carmella Caldwell, the Harvesters had trouble building up their usual momentum early in the first game.

Possession of the serve saw Pampa leading 3-0 when Demetria Simmons their fourth server, came to the line.

Simmons added three points to Pampa's tally before one of her serves hit the net.

The serve continued to change hands quickly with Pampa picking up four more points on four possessions.

With the score reading 10-3, Simmons came to the service line and racked up four more points to give the Harvesters a 14-3 lead.

Sharon King added the final point to put Pampa ahead 1-0 in the match.

In the second game Pampa got rolling early with Mia Dacus giving the Harvesters a 4-0 lead assisted by Mamie Laycock and Demetria Simmons who made key plays.

Teresa Stafford added two more points before Hereford put up their only point of the game.

From then on it was Pampa's game with Demetria Simmons adding six points to Pampa's side and Sharon King putting up the final two points for the 15-1 win.

Pampa's junior varsity defeated the Hereford junior varsity 15-4, 15-4 to raise its record to 8-2.

simply cover the ball in his own end zone for a safety and a 2-0 Shocker lead.

The Demons scored late in the first half after recovering a Pampa fumble on the Shocker 35. Helped by a 17-yard pass play on a fourth-and-four situation, Dumas scored on a 1-yard quarterback sneak with just 20 seconds remaining in the first half. A fine catch on the extra-point attempt gave the visitors an 8-2 cushion at the intermission.

The Shockers came out of the locker room with fire in their eyes and scored 14 points in the third quarter and 24 more in the fourth to up their season's mark to 4-1.

Completely dominating play after the line of scrimmage, Pampa shut down the Demons' offense and blew open holes for its offensive backs to walk away with the victory. Dorsey began the scoring parade when he broke three tackles on his way to a 9-yard touchdown run midway through the third period.

Derrick Young did a Fran Tarkenton imitation on the extra point attempt, covering approximately 30 yards before he scrambled into the corner of the end zone for a 10-8 Shocker lead.

The Shockers were back on the board less than three minutes later when fullback Clifford Anderson rumbled 20 yards through the Demon defense for a TD. This time the PAT failed, but it was just three minutes before Anderson scored again.

His second touchdown came after the Shockers took over on downs near midfield. Anderson ripped off a 16-yard run. Dorsey advanced the ball 15 yards closer to the end zone and Anderson covered the last 19 by outrunning a pair of Dumas defenders to the end zone on the first play of the final quarter. Dorsey's run made it 24-8 with 11:53 to play.

The Shockers upped that to 30-8 one minute and 48 seconds later when Young hit Steve McDougall with a 32-yard touchdown pass. Another McDougall (Jeff) ran in the extra point for a 32-8 Pampa lead.

The Shockers' final score came with just over seven minutes left when quarterback Clay Coffee ran one over from the 3. Brian Driscoll, whose ball-toting had set up Coffee's TD, bulled over for the extra points.

The Shockers will have a chance to avenge their only loss of the year Thursday when they host the Borger JV in a 7 p.m. contest.

Owners change provisions on expansion, franchise shift

CHICAGO (AP) — The National Football League, eyeing the Rams' intended move from Los Angeles to Anaheim, Calif., changed its constitutional provision of requiring unanimous consent for expansion or franchise shifts.

The league lowered from 28 to 21 the number of votes needed to approve expansion or the moving of a franchise from one city to another.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle, at the close of the two-day meeting, said the change in the constitution from unanimous to three-quarter approval was designed to make it easier to get a team into Los Angeles after the Rams have moved to Anaheim in 1980.

"The Rams have a letter of intent to move from Los Angeles to Anaheim," said Rozelle. "and they have conditional league approval to make the move. The Rams need no further approval to move. Lowering the figure to 21 from 28 will make it easier for a team to move to a city where we do not have a team."

Rozelle said the league will eventually expand from 28 to 30 teams but "there isn't any talk of expansion right now. We like to space our expansion until the newer teams like Tampa Bay and Seattle get stronger."

No other action was taken in Thursday's final session.

The NFL's spring meetings are scheduled to begin March 12 in Hawaii.

Kickers could decide OU-Texas

DALLAS (AP)—All the smarts say it's No. 1-ranked Oklahoma's top-ranked offense against No. 6-ranked Texas' paralyzing defense Saturday in the 73rd renewal of their Red River rivalry.

But the battle of unbeaten very likely could be decided by two of the best kicking games in collegiate football.

In fact, kickers Russell Erxleben of Texas and Ewe von Schamann of Oklahoma have been in the pressure cooker the last two Oklahoma-Texas clashes.

Erxleben, the NCAA record-holder with a 67-yard field goal, kicked field goals of 64 and 52 yards last year in Texas' 13-6 victory over Oklahoma.

In 1976, Erxleben kicked field goals of 37 and 42 yards in a 6-6 tie. The Sooners scored a touchdown late in the game but von Schamann never got to kick the extra point because of a bad snap from center.

"Erxleben is the most influential weapon in the game," said Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer and he wasn't necessarily talking about Erxleben's placekicking.

Erxleben has punted 24 times against Oklahoma for a 47.5 yard average.

"Everytime you look up you have to go 70 or 80 yards," said Switzer. "Texas has the greatest defense college football has had in the last two years and then they have a punter like Erxleben."

Von Schamann holds the NCAA record of 93 consecutive conversions and only last week kicked a 52-yard field goal against Missouri. His punting average dipped slightly below 40 yards because he had a punt blocked. With Oklahoma's offense, he's only had to punt nine times in three games.

Erxleben averaged 45 yards per punt in Texas' first three games.

Oklahoma was a seven-point favorite in the nationally televised high noon shootout in the Cotton Bowl because of its offense, which has averaged 450 yards a game.

"We haven't played anybody with the offensive firepower of Oklahoma," said Texas Coach Fred Akers. "Oklahoma has great team speed. You just try to slow them down not shut them down."

It's the second meeting between Akers and Switzer — former teammates at the University of Arkansas.

Sports brief

BORGER SOCCER
BORGER — Borger's soccer teams will travel to Garden City, Kan., Sunday afternoon for a double-header. The games will be played at a stadium behind the Garden City YMCA building.

Kickoff for the junior team game is set for 2, while the senior squads will square off at 3. Sunday's game will be the second for the young Borger teams, formed in the spring.

Other games scheduled include a match in Dumas Oct. 15 and home games Oct. 29 against Chile-Dumas and Nov. 5 against the Alamo Soccer Club of Amarillo.

SWIM LESSONS
The Pampa Youth and Community Center will offer swimming lessons for women beginning Oct. 16. Classes will be held from 10-11 a.m. Monday through Friday for two weeks.

Classes offered will be beginners, advanced beginners, intermediates and swimmers. Women should pre-register before Oct. 16 and can sign up at the health club from 9-12 a.m. and the youth center from 4-10 p.m. daily. Lessons are free to members and $5 for non-members.

Sophomores tie Guymon, 8-8

Defense was the name of the game for the Pampa sophomores here Thursday night as they tied Guymon, Okla., 8-8.

While the offense could generate only 30 total yards, the defense put up a goal-line stand nearly every time Guymon had the ball. The visitors operated in Pampa territory most of the night, but only came up with a third-period touchdown ip show for it.

The visitors took a 2-0 lead into the dressing room at halftime. Pampa's punter stepped out of the end zone for a safety in the first quarter, and that was all the scoring Guymon got in the first half, despite excellent field position that included a first-and-goal on the Pampa 4.

The defense accounted for Pampa's touchdown that tied the game in the final seconds of the third quarter. Leslie Jones intercepted a Guymon aerial and raced untouched for a 41-yard score. Ronnie Preston made a fine sideline catch on an extra-point pass from quarterback Marty Garner to tie the game, and that's the way it stayed as Pampa's defense rose to the occasion twice more to repel Guymon scoring threats.

Now 0-2-1 on the season, the sophomores travel to Borger Thursday night for their next action.

New 100° PRECISION IN-LINE 25" diagonal PICTURE TUBE

New 100% SOLID-STATE CHASSIS

... Gives you a new level of performance and reliability — with state-of-the-art technology and plug-in modular construction.

New HIGH RESOLUTION FILTER
