BLACK SMOKE pours out of the chimney atop the Sistine Chapel at noon Monday, shortly afterwards the smoke changed to white signaling a new pope had been elected.

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church Monday elected 58-year-old Polish Cardinal Karol Wojtyla as pope. He is the first non-Italian in 450 years to be named pontiff of the 700-million-member church. He took the name John Paul, the same as his predecessor. The 111 cardinal-electors made their decision in the second day of voting in their secret conclave in the chapel. It came on what was apparently the seventh or eighth ballot.

White smoke billowed into the night from the Sistine Chapel at 6:18 p.m. (1:18 p.m. EDT). "It is official, the pope is elected," the radio said. The windows of the sealed-off conclave area burst open and dozens of prelates stepped out to the applause of 50,000 persons in St. Peter's Square. The new pontiff succeeds Pope John Paul I, who died Sept. 28. In the absence of communication with the secret conclave, there was no way of determining how many votes had been taken. The conclave rules call for white smoke to be sent up immediately upon the election of the pope. But when there is reelection, the ballots are burned after two votes and black smoke is sent up. Shortly after this morning's black smoke, loudspeakers announced to the piazza crowd in English, French and Italian. "A new pope has not been elected. We ask all of you to pray for the church in this moment of great hope."

Some in the crowd did not seem disappointed. "I am happy because the choice is difficult and it must be made carefully," said Marie Niollet, who said she came from her home in France "just to pray for the election of the new pope." "We had two great ones in Paul VI and John Paul I," she said, "therefore the cardinals must take their time to give us another great pope." The black smoke that rose twice from the chimney on the chapel roof Sunday to signal the inconclusive balloting disappointed the crowds filling St. Peter's Square. But it had been generally predicted that there would be no repetition of the extraordinary and surprising unity that elected Pope John Paul I in one day of voting on Aug. 26. Most conclaves this century lasted three days or more. A total of 75 votes — two-thirds plus one of the 111 cardinals voting — is required for election. Before the conclave began Saturday, there were indications that the cardinals were once again split into a conservative bloc led by 72-year-old Cardinal Giuseppe Siri of Genoa and a moderately progressive bloc led by Cardinal Giovanni Benelli, the 57-year-old archbishop of Florence. One key issue dividing the cardinals was collegiality, the practice of a pope basing the policies of the church on consultation with the rest of the bishops around the world instead of the advice of the conservative-dominated Vatican Curia, the central bureaucracy of the church.

Increase postponed for cable TV

Action on a rate increase request by Pampa Cable TV has been indefinitely postponed by the city commission reportedly because of numerous service complaints by cable subscribers to commissioners. Pampa Cable TV has been informed that the commission will act on the rate request after the company noticeably improves its service. Pampa Cable TV is seeking a rate increase of 75 cents per month, from $7.75 to $8.50. The company is also asking to raise its secondary outlet charge from $1 per month to $1.50 per month. The rate increase is necessary, according to the company, because of increased business costs and plans for additional services. Pampa Cable TV plans to add Madison Square Garden sports and a 24-hour Christian broadcast network

Krueger says gas prices will rise

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Rep. Bob Krueger, D-Texas, said today the energy legislation just adopted by Congress will raise natural gas prices in Texas and should make it easier for other states to buy Texas gas that might be needed within the state. Krueger, Democratic nominee for the U.S. Senate, described the energy bill as a "bad piece of legislation" that was thrown together in 90 days, with Congress spending over 500 days trying to improve it. Krueger called a news conference to announce he would sponsor legislation next session to cut the cost of paperwork, which is "triggered by excessive government regulations." He said the expense of administering federal regulations has increased from $2.2 billion in 1974 to an anticipated $4.8 billion in 1979. Krueger said gas now selling for $1.80 per thousand cubic feet in Texas will immediately rise to over $2 under the federal bill.

Tax cut won't help overall bite

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation on the way to President Carter will cut income taxes for 65 million couples and individuals next year. But for most, it won't offset a higher overall tax bite from inflation and increased Social Security withholding. A four-member family earning $20,000, for example, will get a $167 income tax cut under the $18.7 billion measure Congress passed Sunday. But the effects of inflation pushing people into higher brackets combined with Social Security tax increases which begin Jan. 1 will cost that family $235 — or $68 more than the tax cut. The Senate passed the bill 723 and the House 337-38. Although there was no immediate word from Carter whether he will sign it, the compromise bill appears to meet most of the objections he voiced against earlier versions. It would cut individual income taxes in 1979 by about $12.7 billion, reduce business taxes by $3.6 billion, and give investors a big break by cutting the capital-gains tax by a net $2.1 billion. Miscellaneous reductions would cost the treasury another $150 million. "With what we had to work with (the budget allowance for tax cuts) we spread the joy around about as well as we could," Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., told the Senate. Not everyone was happy with the bill, especially Republicans and some conservative Democrats who were upset because conferees had dumped a provision granting $164.5 billion in new tax cuts from 1980 through 1983 if federal spending is held down. "We are sitting on our hands while middle-income Americans are facing a real tax increase" because of inflation and the Social Security hikes, said Sen. William V. Roth, R-Del. The individual tax cuts would be reflected in reduced payroll income tax withholding starting Jan. 1. These cuts include across-the-board reductions in rates, increasing the $750-per-person exemption to $1,000; raising the standard deductions from $2,200 to $2,400 for single persons and from $3,200 and $3,400 for couples, and expanding the earned-income credit for poor working families, to a maximum of $500. On the other hand, the general individual credit — $35 per person or $180 per family in most cases — and the deduction allowed for state and local gasoline taxes would be repealed.

And, for the first time, some unemployment compensation would be subject to taxation. An estimated 900,000 persons who wind up with annual incomes above $20,000, if single, or about $25,000 for a couple would find a portion of their unemployment benefits taxed. Generally only those single persons with incomes around $18,000 and families under about $20,000 would get enough tax cut to offset inflation and Social Security increases. Because of the structure of the tax package, some persons in the $40,000 income range would come closer to breaking even than would some at much lower levels. The bill includes a liberalized, once-in-a-lifetime tax break for persons over 55 who sell the home in which they have lived for three of the last five years and don't buy another costing at least as much.

Vance hopes to reopen negotiations

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and four other top Western diplomats met with South African leaders today to try to persuade them to abandon plans to go it alone in South-West Africa and to instead reopen negotiations on a U.N. plan for the delayed independence of the big mineral-rich territory. Meanwhile, in one of the bloodiest incidents of the 12-year-old guerrilla war in Southwest Africa, a landmine explosion ripped through a truckload of blacks returning from church services and killed 17 of them. The blast occurred near Southwest Africa's northern border with Angola, where the anti-South African guerrillas have their bases. South African press reports said fragments indicated the landmine was Soviet-made. The guerrillas are supplied with Soviet weapons. Vance's spokesman, Hodding Carter, said the secretary "deplores" the Sunday night incident and that it is "precisely to avoid a continuation of violence" that the negotiations here must succeed. Vance, Foreign Secretary David Owen of Britain, Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher of West Germany, Foreign Minister Donald Jamieson of Canada and Deputy Foreign Minister Olivier Stirn of France conferred today with Prime Minister Pieter W.

Botha and Foreign Minister Roelof F. "Pik" Botha. The two Bothas are not related. After 4½ hours of morning meetings, spokesman Carter said the participants had decided not to disclose what occurred. They were to resume their talks this afternoon and meet again Tuesday. It was the highest ranking foreign delegation ever to confront the white-minority South African government on its own soil.

Dollar gains on markets

LUXEMBOURG (AP) — The revaluation upward of the West German mark against some lesser West European currencies gave the dollar a slight boost today on most foreign money markets. Dealers said trading volume remained small while operators watched for a trend to develop. "The market is confused and trying to find its feet," a London dealer said. Morning dollar rates in major European financial centers, compared to last Friday's late rates: Frankfurt — 1.8645 marks, up from 1.8620. Zurich — 1.5391 Swiss francs, up from 1.5265. Paris — 4.2650 French francs, up from 4.2550. Amsterdam — 2.03225 guilders, up from 2.0210. Milan — 815 Italian lire, up from 814. In London, the British pound was selling for $1.979, compared with $1.9825 late Friday. In Tokyo, however, the dollar went down because of reported new Japanese trade surpluses. The dollar closed at 186.125 yen, down from Friday's close of 186.70. As the dollar improved, gold prices in the major European markets dropped. London's five major bullion dealers fixed the price for the morning trading session at $224.30 an ounce, 70 cents below Friday's close. In Zurich, the price was $224.375, down 50 cents. The West German government agreed Sunday to increase the value of its currency 2 percent Sunday against the Belgian and Luxembourg franc and the Dutch guilder, and 4 percent against the Danish and Norwegian crowns. The six currencies are linked together in a so-called "snake" rate system, or joint currency float. The six governments agreed to limit the fluctuation in the value of their currencies to 4.5 percent by central bank purchases. But the mark has been rising, and the other governments have been depleting their reserves.

Clarence Coffin-memories of a town

A frontier town in 1915. "There wasn't very much to it in those days — I suspect about 5-600 people. There was no paving at all, although there were sidewalks in some of town. There was no electric light system like we know today, and no water system, except for a few people downtown with lines." The town was Pampa, and the memories belong to Clarence Coffin, a retired postal worker who still makes his home here. "There were three to four houses along S. Cuyler St.,

Coffin said. "My father built a house on the corner of Thut and Gray Streets. Then, that was the edge of town." "We had three blocks there you might call downtown, the first ones north of the railroad tracks (on Hobart). There were school grounds on about the fourth block, with few houses extending north of the school block." "What is now Central Park was the dumpgrounds. There was nothing north of that, except one building, the Duncan home. That was the only house in that area at all. "The post office now sits where the White House lumber yard used to be. Where the White House lumber yard is now (101 S. Ballard) was a wagon yard. "There used to be a windmill and public watering tank on the block where City Hall is now. I would drive horses to it in 1916." Born in Douglas County, Mo. on Jan. 6, 1904, Coffin moved with his family to Pampa in a covered wagon in October, 1915. The family came to the Panhandle because of his mother's health; she suffered from tuberculosis. "Doctors told her she had only about three years to live if she stayed there," Coffin said. "My father heard this was a good place for someone with TB." Incidentally, Mrs. Coffin lived until 1969. The Coffins arrived in Pampa with five children, and two more were born here. Clarence was the second oldest child. "My father was basically a farmer, but we lived in town up until about 1919. We worked odd jobs until he could get out on a farm," Coffin said. Coffin began his working years on the farm, and worked on a pipeline from Amarillo to Pantex once for a few weeks. While still in school, he spent the summers of 1918-19 washing dishes in a downtown cafe. Pampa was "just a little country town — farming and ranching," until an oil boom hit in 1925. Then things started busting. "We had people coming in. On summer nights they would stand thick in the streets," Coffin said. "There was no place for them to go and sleep. We weren't ready for them." "What did Pampans do for recreation in those days? "We had dances around, but I never went to any of them," Coffin said. "There wasn't much to do. Had a movie theater — they'd show one reel and then show slides while they changed reels. The theater was here Ward and Jones is now (114 N. Cuyler). (See COFFIN on page 4)

OPINION PAGE

Will we have electricity?

The nation's electric power systems may seem to be able to meet consumer's needs for the next 10 years, but a current review expresses serious doubts. The National Electric Reliability Council doubts that the future will follow the presently accepted script.

According to the NERC report, sufficiency and the reliability of bulk power supply is now below the level required to meet economic goals.

The future power supply picture assumes that new generating facilities will be available on schedule. "This has not been the case in recent years as opposition to new plants has increased," the report states.

Scheduled to be added in the next ten years are 304,000 megawatts (MW) of new capacity. Expected in coal-fired plants in 141,000 MW, from nuclear energy 118,000 MW and 8,000 MW of oil-fired capacity. No new gas-fired plants are scheduled. It is assumed that solar, wind, biomass and other innovations will not make a significant contribution to electric energy in the next decade.

The NERC is expressing concerns with each of our primary fuels' future, if delays in new coal or nuclear capacity continue to take place, the resulting energy gap will have to be filled by additional use of gas and oil. "Dependence on more petroleum products is not in the best interest of moving this nation to energy self-sufficiency," the report says.

It is obvious that coal will be the principal fuel or electric production. It will probably supply half or more of our requirements over the next ten years.

Production of coal supply is now threatened on several fronts: recently enacted surface mining legislation, federal coal leasing policies, state legislation including resources depletion taxes and decreases in underground miners' productivity.

After the coal is above ground rail transportation is threatened by state and national governmental agencies, then when it is at last on hand, the utilities' ability to burn it in a reasonable and efficient manner will be hampered by pending federal regulations. Just lately the Environmental Protection Agency has announced that there will need to be $10 billion spent on scrubbers for future coal-burning plants.

In the light of new methods now being devised, these scrubbers may be obsolete before they can ever be placed in service. But this tremendous EPA roadblock is probably just a minor consideration for the chairborne "experts" in this meddlesome agency.

The largest increase in share of total electric energy should come from nuclear capacity. It has been estimated that this should grow from 13 percent to 27 percent within the decade.

The greatest threat to bringing this source on line does not stem from technology or industrial capability. Although the administration has recognized the nuclear generation is essential to the national energy program, it has not supported a breeder - reactor system.

A breeder - reactor program of fuel reprocessing can assure the availability of nuclear fuel well into the next century. Under present stalling we will soon be way behind other industrial nations in the vital breeder - reactor system use.

The NERC report concludes that if present problems continue we may see shortfalls in generating capacity by the 1980s.

We might be better off to give the whole EPA a five-year vacation with pay and ship them off, bag and baggage, to some far pleasant corner of the globe. Industry would then be able to go about the business of bringing us the energy we will need.

The anti-regulation chorus

(Mobile Oil Corp. Ad)
What a grand sound it is, this chorus picking up the tune that proliferation of government regulation is stifling the American economy. You've heard it from us before, of course, but some diverse new voices are joining in.

For example, it was the main theme struck at the American Bar Association's recent convention.

— Don't enlarge the "regulatory web," warned Assistant Attorney General John H. Shenefield, saying that continued federal regulation of energy industries could be at least as harmful as anticompetitive behavior by business itself.

— "A new pragmatism" in regulation is needed, Sen. Edward Kennedy asserted. He criticized the "government mentality that sees regulation as the natural order of the universe, that equates the Federal Register with Holy Writ, and that believes that anything the marketplace can do, government can do better."

— The Department of Energy wants to "permit market forces to really be felt in decision-making." Deputy administrator John O'Leary said, noting that the department is planning to back off from its role as regulator.

— Government regulation "increasingly controls, restrains and limits many of the productive elements of our society," a blue-ribbon ABA panel, headed by distinguished attorney John J. McCloy, reported to assembled members.

— The panel's three-year study recommended a regulatory overhaul and less direct intervention in the economy. Though its final report for ABA approval isn't due until next year, the current draft recommends deregulation of competitive industries, alternatives to rigid standard-setting, more reliance on tax incentives and antitrust enforcement, greater presidential authority over regulatory agencies, streamlined regulatory procedures, sunset legislation so agencies don't become "immortal" and gradual decoupling of commodities such as oil and gas.

And, although we didn't expect it, we were pleasantly surprised when California Gov. Jerry Brown described federal oil regulations in testimony before a House subcommittee in these words, "... the strangest, most complicated, bizarre and insane (mess) ... designed by experts to rip off the American consumer."

Sure, all this sounds oddly familiar — we've said the same kind of thing before, and so have other businessmen, and a few academics. But it's a delight to hear these points made by so many others now. After all, if the chorus gets loud enough, can action be too far behind?

'Reform' bill no one wants

By MARTHA ANGLE
and ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) — First it was the Bert Lance flap. Then "Koreagate." And now, the rapidly burgeoning scandal within the General Services Administration.

Everytime a new scandal erupts involving top-level government officials, the clamor begins. "Quick — name a special prosecutor. The Justice Department can't be trusted to conduct an impartial investigation."

The only change since the Watergate era — the last time the nation actually had a special prosecutor — is the party affiliation of those beating the drums.

Now that the Democrats control both the Congress and the executive branch, their enthusiasm for circumventing the Justice Department in criminal investigations with political overtones has largely evaporated. It is the Republicans, both on Capitol Hill and elsewhere, who are suddenly gung-ho for the appointment of special prosecutors.

They have made no headway in achieving their demands thus far, in part because the Carter administration has repeatedly ignored their pleas but also because none of these recent scandals has generated the level of public indignation and concern that Watergate produced.

It is not that Americans feel any great confidence in the integrity of the Justice Department and its ability to pursue allegations of official corruption with no holds barred. Indeed, public opinion polls continue to show a dismal lack of voter confidence in all government institutions. But people are burned out, weary of scandal; they are dubious about the ability of anyone to nail crooks in high places.

The lack of public response to GOP efforts to drum up interest in the various investigations commenced during President Carter's tenure has allowed the Democratic Congress to drag its heels on one of the major legislative initiatives to emerge from the entire Watergate experience.

That is a bill which would automatically trigger the appointment of a special prosecutor in federal criminal investigations that involve certain specified top-echelon officials — the president, vice president, senior White House staffers, Cabinet and subcommittee appointees and the like — or which threaten to prove politically embarrassing to the party which controls the executive branch.

If enacted at any time over the years since it was first introduced, hard on the heels of Watergate, the legislation would probably have resulted in a special prosecutor heading all three of the probes mentioned earlier — Lance, Koreagate and GSA.

But although the Senate, which drafted the bill to begin with, has passed it at least twice, the measure cannot seem to get through the House. This year, it was approved by the House Judiciary Committee back in May — only to disappear quietly into limbo between there and the House floor.

There is no overt opposition to the bill. The Carter administration, unlike its Republican predecessor, supports the legislation. House Judiciary Chairman Peter Rodino, D-N.J., says he has no idea why it isn't moving. House Democratic leaders shrug and mutter about the crowded schedule, saying they'll try to squeeze it in, but...

It is all a charade. The White House officially endorses the special prosecutor concept but has made no effort to lobby for the bill's adoption. Old hands at the Justice Department want no part of the measure, and their hostility is no secret on Capitol Hill. House Democratic leaders, equally cool to the proposal, know full well it will pass if ever put to a vote on the floor. So they are keeping it bottled up.

Even the Republicans who constantly cry for the appointment of a special prosecutor to handle specific investigations — such as the Lance case or the GSA probe — never mention the pending bill that could trigger such appointments automatically, not just during a Democratic administration but in Republican ones as well.

The special prosecutor bill is the quintessential "reform" proposal — a measure everyone supports and nobody wants.

Our aging industries

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

FALL RIVER, Mass. — This old industrial city, once the center of the nation's textile industry, has an antique aspect in the final quarter century of the 20th century. Business continues here, but industrial progress has passed it by.

There's grave danger that the entire American industrial machine increasingly has an antique status. A New England manufacturer pointed out to me that a sales film he produced showed American factories as background for his company's products. The film can't be used in Germany or Japan because the audiences are startled by the archaic character of the plants.

On the whole, the American people don't perceive the aging of their country's industrial infrastructure. They continue to think of America as the most modern industrial nation in the world. They don't realize that this is a land of old factories and old machines. As for the railroads — the vital transportation system for heavy industry, it has suffered decades of neglect through deferred maintenance.

Many of America's factories are out of date, as compared to German and Japanese industrial installations, because the tax laws have denied corporations the profits they need for continuing modernization of plants and tools. The tax laws have been full of disincentives for manufacturers who invest in new facilities and equipment.

Today, American industry is seriously undercapitalized. Liberal politicians have screamed about "obscene" profits at a time when corporate profits are wholly inadequate to replace outdated manufacturing facilities.

Taxes on investor capital — that is, capital available for the growth of the economy — have retarded U.S. growth in productivity. The secret of productivity and national wealth is a high level of investment in plant and equipment. But investment as a percentage of the gross national product — 17.5 percent — is lower in the United States than in any of the advanced industrial countries.

In Japan, for instance, investment is 32 percent of GNP. It's no wonder, therefore, that Japan has an enormously productive economy while America's economy becomes more sluggish every year.

The free-spending politicians are hiding these facts from the American people and threatening the country's well-being. They ignore the fact that savings in West Germany and Japan have risen to three or four times the savings rate in the United States.

America became rich because it made early, effective use of machines. Today, the politicians are denying industry the tools of the future. They are insisting that industry resort to labor-intensive operations, though the affluent, advanced countries of the world are going the other way.

The end result of this process will be an America that makes low-technology, low quality items with an industrial system that is a form of the dole. This is what Britain's industry largely consists of today.

Germany and Japan, however, will continue to produce advanced, high quality products for expanding overseas markets. Germany and Japan will grow richer while the U.S. falls behind them. One has only to consider the respective standings of the German, Japanese and American currencies to understand what is happening.

One wonders: Will the American people wake up and insist on the re-capitalization of U.S. industry?

Your money's worth

If you support a parent in a rest home

Sylvia Porter

(Fourth of 10 columns)
If you are among the millions who are supporting an elderly parent in a rest home, you may get several tax breaks that can substantially reduce your tax bills.

(1) You can deduct part of the costs when a parent enters a rest home. Say you support your mother who is about to go into a retirement home that requires payment in advance for her lifetime care. A statement then provides you with a financial breakdown showing that a percentage of the fee is to cover future health care.

Can you deduct that amount now, even though the medical services won't be rendered until future years, if at all?

New ruling: The IRS says you can — if your prepayment is in exchange for your mother's lifetime medical care by the home.

The general rule is that a taxpayer can't get a current reduction for prepaid medical expenses. For instance, you can't pay your physician this December for January's physical and deduct the fee on this year's return. The required prepayment to an institution for lifetime medical care of a dependent is a major exception.

Allocation is a must. John Adams entered into an agreement with Sunny Hill Retirement Home, agreed to pay a founder's fee for lifetime services. In exchange for this and a monthly fee, he received his room, board and medical care.

The agreement also provided that if John decided to leave the home, a portion of the founder's fee would be refunded. The home hadn't been in operation long enough to know how much of its fees were allocable to John's medical care, but it used long-term data from a comparable home to determine what percentage of the payments were for medical care. Sunny Hill gave John a statement to that effect and the IRS agreed with the home's figures in allowing John a medical deduction for future lifetime medical care.

What this means to you is that if you provide more than half a parent's support and pay a lump-sum fee to provide that parent with future care in a rest home, at least part of the fee is a deductible medical expense in the year you pay.

But to be sure you get the full deduction to which you are entitled, Prentice - Hall urges you to check whether the institution requires a prepayment for permanent medical care as a condition to admission for a parent. If so, request an apportionment between medical and ordinary care services.

(2) You might get a big head - of - household tax break for supporting a parent in a rest home, for both the IRS and the courts agree support of a parent in a rest home or home for the aged is similar to supporting your parent in a separate household.

For instance, if your taxable income is $20,000, filing as a single taxpayer results in a tax of $5,230. But filing as a head-of-household cuts your tax to $4,800, a saving of $430.

(3) You can still get a dependency deduction for hospitalized parents who receive Medicare benefits. The Tax Court recently gave back a dependency deduction many taxpayers thought was lost.

Medicare benefits are not taken into account when computing a dependent's total support, says the Tax Court. The old rule was that they were, at least hospital benefits received under basic Medicare. As for payments under supplementary Medicare, the IRS concedes they are not part of the total support.

Say you help support your mother with $4,000 a year, more than half her total support, and thus you have been claiming her as a dependent. Now your mother is hospitalized and Medicare pays $10,000 in hospital bills for her — which plus her Social Security benefits — add up to more than what you provide.

Under the old rule, you lost your dependency deduction for your mother. Under the new, you don't. For Medicare payments do not count toward "support," and you still meet all the support rules.

Keep track of the expenses that count in picking up a dependency deduction! Medicare benefits won't knock out the deduction but such items as Social Security might. Make sure you contribute enough before year-end to meet the more-than-half support test.

Tomorrow: Small business benefits.

Dallas has healthy job market

NEW YORK (AP) — Dallas has one of the healthiest job markets in the United States, according to an economic and management research company which did a survey on newspaper classified advertising sections.

"Help Wanted" ads in the Dallas newspapers increased by 123 percent between 1967 and February of 1978, indicating a good job market, according to The Conference Board, a New York-based company.

The Conference Board reported in its September information bulletin that Denver led, on the basis of a 162 percent increase in want ads in the Denver Post over the period.

In an article by Rudolph Oswald of the AFL-CIO, the bulletin cautioned that the figures could be deceiving. The article reported that last year "80 percent of 'help-wanted' ads in the classified sections of the New York Times, the New York Daily News, the New York Post and Newsday were deceptive, misleading, or the jobs were not available."

Panhandle winter to be cold, dry

By FRED PARKER
Pampa News Staff
The winter in the Panhandle will be cold and dry, according to predictions made by Ole' Abe Weatherwise in the 187th edition of the Old Farmer's Almanac.

The new almanac, made public today, notes that in Texas and Oklahoma "November through February will be colder and drier than normal, with a cold February; however it will be mild in the west in November, north in December and northwest in January."

The prediction also calls for a warm March to be followed by a cold April, with deficient rainfall.

The Old Farmer's Almanac notes that while January is expected to have temperatures averaging five degrees below normal with rainfall averaging about one and one-half inches below normal the February temperatures will average about 12 degrees below normal with moisture two inches above average.

The first frost is predicted for the period of Dec. 6-9 with light snow noted for the period of Dec. 25-27.

The OFA also calls for the summer, May through September, to "be hot north while normal to cool central and south" for Texas and Oklahoma.

Calling for a wet May, the OFA notes "drought conditions will be serious in the north during July and August."

For remainder of the country, the OFA says the winter in the East will start out cloudy and mild, but a cold wave and snowstorm Thanksgiving week will begin a series of cold spells extending through February.

These cold waves will extend into the South, the OFA predicts, with short, hard frosts expected as far south as central Florida at the end of December and the beginning of February and with above normal amounts of snow.

"Despite several cold waves in November and early December, the winter will not appear particularly notable in the Central United States until about Christmas week, when the first of several exceptional cold waves, particularly through the month of February, may be expected to result in a very cold period with greater than normal snowfall extending into the Gulf states and near-blizzard conditions in north-central states," the almanac observes.

In the general weather forecast summary the OFA notes, "In spite of snows, however, the amount of overall seasonal precipitation will generally be deficient except for such areas as the Northern Great Plains and regions bordering the Gulf."

Publisher Bob Trowbridge observes that the basic function of the Old Farmer's Almanac is to present "the structure of the forthcoming year." He explains,

"the almanac is first, last and always a calendar of the heavens with information about the seasons, the sun and moon, the length of daylight, the tides and so on."

In addition, the OFA offers regular information about holidays and Holy Days, anecdotes and pleasantries, rainy day amusements, outdoor planting advice and little-known, but fascinating facts and stories.

In this year's features, readers will learn in "Pursuit of the Moon's Shadow" why solar eclipses can be predicted hundreds of years in advance and since Abe Weatherwise predicts a good deal of snowfall this winter, tips on how to keep warm until the ice melts are included.

If for years, you've beat your head against the wall trying to figure out which came first, the chicken or the egg, your frustrations are over! The answer is revealed in this year's OFA.

As far as the nation's weather for the year is concerned, it's broken down into 16 regions.

Convicted employee pawn in operation

DALLAS (AP) — An employee of the Webb County tax-assessor-collector's office convicted of tampering with government records after the state found it was shorted $230,000 in tax funds, says she was just a pawn in the operation.

Irene Perez, a 22-year county employe, was fired in February, two weeks after an auditor from the state comptroller's office checked the books. She has 11 other indictments pending against her.

Co-worker Luco Prado was also prosecuted.

"Mr. Prado and I were just pawns in that office," Miss Perez told the Dallas Morning

News in a copyright story in Sunday's editions. "It has to be politics... They (prosecutors) just said, 'We're going to take her and let the biggies go. We're going to take her and that's it.'"

She referred to a group of Webb County politicians who served at the time J.C. Martin was mayor. She dubbed them "Ali Baba and the 40 thieves."

Martin was sentenced to serve 30 weekends in jail on a federal mail fraud charge stemming from a $200,000 loss in the city street department.

Authorities have been unable to find the $230,000 which they say is missing from the tax as-essor-collector's coffers. Her lifestyle and that of Prado show no changes for the better.

According to the News, Miss Perez filed an affidavit with her appeal of her 5-year probation sentence, naming Francisco Flores, the county's tax assessor-collector, and his chief deputy, Arturo Villarreal.

She claims Flores and Villarreal were members of Martin's group.

In the affidavit, Miss Perez claims District Attorney Charles Borchers of "persuading the grand jury not to indict Arturo Villarreal and Francisco J. Flores."

Flores has filed suit to recover the money from her.

Borchers said his office has been unable to find it.

"We couldn't find anything," he said. "And as best we could tell from the skimpy evidence that we had, so far as delineating between the two, the most we could show that he took... was around $5,000 or $6,000, as I recollect."

She said she repeatedly told Flores and Villarreal of the shortages before the comptroller's office found them.

"I should have gone to the district attorney myself a long time ago," she told the News.

To buying a home

Closing costs may add problems

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
There's more to buying a house than finding the right place to live and taking out a mortgage. Closing costs can complicate the purchase and add hundreds or even thousands of dollars to the already-steep price of your new home, and it pays to be prepared.

When you apply for a loan, the lender is required by federal law to give you a copy of a government booklet on settlement or closing costs. The lender also must give you a non-binding, "good faith" estimate of most of the closing charges. (The law does not define "good faith;" if the final bill differs greatly from the estimate, you would be wise to investigate.)

Some closing costs stem from legal requirements; others are a matter of custom. You may be able to negotiate with the seller to split the bill for some of the costs. Here is a list of the most common items:

Title search — A title or abstract company or lawyer will search previous ownership records to establish the right of the current owner to sell the property to you.

Title insurance — A policy which protects the lender against any ownership problems which were not revealed by the title search. In some areas the buyer pays for the policy; in others, it is the seller's responsibility. Either way, it protects only the lender. If you want title insurance for yourself, you need your own policy.

Attorney's fees — If the sale is a complicated one, it is a good idea to hire your own lawyer. The lawyer who represents the lender or the seller is not responsible for protecting your interests. You will, of course, have to pay the fee for any lawyer you hire. You also may be required to pay the fee for the lender's attorney.

Survey — The lender may require a survey to determine the precise location of the house and the property. You can save money if you get the seller to give you his or her old survey and an affidavit stating that no changes have been made in the structures on the property that would overlap the boundaries. Loan origination fee — A charge made by the lender to cover the administrative cost of the loan. It is usually a small percentage of the face value of the mortgage.

Mortgage discount "points" — A one-time payment to the lender in cases where the interest rate on the mortgage is less than the going rate for other types of loans. Each "point" is 1 percent of the original mortgage amount. Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration regulations require someone other than the buyer to pay the discount. (If the seller has to foot the bill for "points," he or she may raise the price of the house to make up the difference.)

Mortgage insurance premiums — A fee paid to a company or government agency which guarantees the lender against loss if you are unable

Dictionary Day

Today, Dictionary Day, marks the 220th anniversary of Noah Webster's birth. Webster didn't really invent the dictionary, but his name has become so commonly linked with dictionaries in the United States that it would be easy to assume that he did. The first dictionaries, produced by the Romans and Greeks, were lists of difficult words. The first English dictionaries, published in the 1600s, also contained only hard words. Dictionary writers of the following century began to include all words, not just hard ones, in their books. Webster published his first small American dictionary in 1806. His dictionaries have been revised many times, and are still being used today.

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — More than 23,000 rodeo fans packed the stands Sunday at the third performance of this year's Texas Prison Rodeo in Huntsville, and leading cowboy Willie Craig suffered a collarbone fracture that could cost him another championship.

The 58-year-old Craig was thrown during the saddle bronc riding event, and prison doctors said he would not compete again this year.

Craig, serving 30 years from Greenville, Texas, has taken part in the rodeo for 21 years and was champion cowboy in 1976.

He was among the leaders this year.

Some days it just doesn't pay

Three persons reportedly stole a trailer Sunday afternoon and attempted to tow it away by hand, but were foiled when they turned at an intersection and lost control of their cargo.

Michael Allen Manes and two juveniles reportedly stole the trailer from 2101 N. Russell and were towing it west in the 600 block of 21st Ave. One of the juveniles was sitting in the trunk of the car, towing the trailer by hand.

When turning south at the 2000 block of Coffee, the car reportedly hit a dip in the road. The trailer came loose, traveling south on Coffee and striking a parked car belonging to Andrew J. Christen, 2014 Coffee.

The person holding the trailer was reportedly pulled out of the trunk and injured, and a witness told police he saw three persons running from the scene, one of them screaming about a broken hand or arm.

An officer went to Highland General Hospital, where he found the three suspects. They reportedly admitted stealing the trailer and were taken into custody. The two juveniles were released to their parents, and Manes remained in the city jail this morning.

Manes was arraigned by Venora Cole, justice of the peace, Monday morning. Manes is being held in lieu of $1,500 in the Gray County Sheriffs office.

Travis County DA confiscates files

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - The Travis County district attorney's office has confiscated a typewriter and filing cabinet from the office of the secretary to Deputy State Comptroller Ralph Wayne and subpoenaed a number of public documents.

The items will be used in an investigation of reports that Wayne and an assistant conducted private business on state time, the Austin American-Statesman reported today.

Assistant District Attorney Stephen Capelle said Comptroller Bob Bullock was also served a subpoena for a number of public documents from his department. Bullock has promised to turn the documents over to the grand jury Tuesday, the newspaper said.

Capelle said the documents include pay vouchers.

Reports that Wayne and his administrative assistant, Jay Brummett, did personal business on state time and with the help of other state employees surfaced last week with the publication of the contents of a letter of resignation from former Bullock aide Bill Collier and George Kuempel.

Collier and Kuempel urged Bullock to fire Wayne and then resign himself to avoid scandal and conserve his health.

Wayne acknowledged that some of Wayne's and Brummett's private business was handled by them and Wayne's secretary, Sherri Revier, on state time but said the matter was taken care of by putting

Coffin

"After autos became plentiful, people started going down to Amarillo. They didn't go nearly as much as they do now."

Immediately after graduation, on July 1, 1926, Coffin went to work with the post office. "It was where the White Deer Land Museum is now, on Cuyler. Then they moved it to 111 W. Kingsmill late that same year.

"I worked inside as a clerk for a little over three years. Then a new rural route opened south to oil camps, and that's where I finished my working years, except for about three years, four months and five days in the navy as a radio technician during World War II."

Coffin recalls driving around Lefors in 1935 when the "big black duster" hit. "One Sunday afternoon, it was just as clear and beautiful as could be. I saw what looked like a black cloud, and it got closer and I saw it was a black cloud of dust coming south.

"I had to stop and sit in my car, and I couldn't see my hand in front of my face. It started about 4 p.m., and about four or five hours later I was able to start driving. I got home about 11:30 or 12." Visibility was so poor, Coffin said, that "if I hadn't known the road pretty well I could have gotten lost."

After 43 years with the post office, Coffin retired Oct. 31, 1969. "I've enjoyed every bit of it," he said of retirement. "I never have regretted retiring. I could have stayed until I was 70, but I didn't want to be on that route until they carried me off."

Coffin has seen Pampa grow and change over the years, and although it has become "a little too large" for his tastes, he said "it's been my home I and I like it here.

"We're out here without any trees or running water, and with lots of dust, but it's a good place to live."

"I've traveled over most of the U.S. I've seen some pretty country and some things I liked about other parts of the country, but all in all, Pampa is a hard town to beat."

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter, 24, is being married to a 29-year-old man who was married before. (No children.) His marriage lasted less than two years. This is our daughter's first marriage.

The problem: We're giving our daughter a lovely church wedding. The groom's parents (who are socially very prominent) say they will attend, but they prefer not to send any of their friends or relatives invitations to the wedding. Their reason: "All of our friends and relatives gave wedding presents to our son just two years ago—and once is enough."

Abby, what has our daughter to do with the wedding gifts his first wife received? Do you think the groom's parents have a right to cut down on the number of lovely gifts our daughter will receive just because her fiancé was married before?

ANAHEIM

DEAR ANAHEIM: A wedding invitation is a bid for one's presence—not presents. But if the parents of the groom choose not to send invitations for that—or any other reason—it's their privilege.

DEAR ABBY: A girl signed "Under Age and Over Developed" wrote, "Whoever said, 'boys like good girls,' is crazy!"

Well, she is dead wrong. I'm a 19-year-old male college student, and when I go out with a girl, all I expect is good company and nothing more. My problem is getting girls to believe that there are a lot of guys like myself who are saving themselves for marriage. They think I'm weird or gay or living in the stone age.

If I thought that women were good for sex only I could save myself a lot of time and money by just picking up a prostitute. Don't get me wrong, Abby, I'm not one of those holier-than-thou characters, I just don't want all the guilt that goes with pre-marital sex. And I certainly don't need to risk getting VD or causing an accidental pregnancy.

Please keep telling girls (and boys) to keep their standards high. I'm still old fashioned enough to want the girl I marry to be a virgin, and I hope that there are some girls out there who appreciate the same kind of guy. Sign me...

STILL CLEAN AT NINETEEN

DEAR STILL: There are. And thanks for a refreshing letter.

DEAR ABBY: I am a grown woman and I'm so ashamed of my problem I don't want to ask anybody else, so I'm turning to you.

I am never sure which fork or spoon to use when I am at a fancy dinner. I usually wait to see which utensil the others are using, then I follow suit, but I would like to be sure myself.

Can you help me?

DUMBAT THIRTY

DEAR THIRTY: Please don't call yourself "dumb." You are smart enough to ask.

Follow this simple rule: When silverware is lined up on either side of the plate, use the spoon (or fork) that is on the outside (farthest from the plate) first, and work toward the plate.

If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters For All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby: 132 Laasy Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Ask Dr. Lamb

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — A fellow jogger and I have a dispute that we hope you can solve for us. I have been told when you are getting into shape, or returning to physical exercise after being away from it, that you should run or exercise until you can't talk or you are breathing very hard. Then you slow up and walk until you nearly regain normal breathing and start in again. My friend says you should keep pushing on and never stop until you absolutely have to. This just causes me to feel like I am dying. So I have always used the run-rest method. Could you tell us which method is better?

Also, could you tell me if running on pavement would have any effects on my bones later in life? I run on pavement now, but I was told that if it doesn't hurt you now, you will be feeling it later on in life. Is this true or not?

DEAR READER — I really hope I don't have to choose between the two methods you and your friend are using for jogging. I don't think much of either one of them as a training method. Somewhere along the line, the general myth has been propagated that the way to train or develop physical stamina is to abuse the body. You don't need to do that.

All you need to do is to train—not strain. The purpose of jogging isn't speed anyway. Just jog at a comfortable rate that will still permit you to talk without getting winded. That's fast enough. Take a little more time to cover the distance. The distance you cover is what's really important.

The way to train properly is to start out gradually, then keep it up in a consistent manner. The two key words are gradual and consistent. If you are interested in running for speed and are an athlete, young and in good health, then once you develop an appreciable degree of endurance through normal sensible jogging, you may go on to racing activities, if that's what you want to do.

But you shouldn't confuse normal jogging with racing. Sensible, proper jogging is all right for almost all healthy people who have built up to that level of exercise.

Running or exerting oneself to the limit is most certainly not for everybody. There is a good reason why you might feel like you are dying if you keep on pushing after your body has told you that you are overdoing it. Most of the deaths that have occurred during jogging have been in people who were out of shape when they jogged to begin with, or in those who tried to jog 'too fast. That old competitive drive is particularly bad in men and they seem to always want to shorten the time required to jog a certain distance, or they want to outdo their friend. The end result can be a disaster.

To give you a better idea about the dangers of overdoing it and the relative safety of jogging correctly versus jogging foolishly I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-2, Jogging, Exertion, Sudden Death.

Jogging is wonderful exercise but you must be sensible about it. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Address your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

You can have long discussions about what kind of surface is safe to jog on. The simple truth is the harder the surface, the harder it is on your joints and the bones in your feet. It can turn out to be the knees instead of the feet that become affected.

Wearing very good shoes with adequate padding helps some. But if I had a choice, I'd rather that you run on a softer surface such as a cinder track or a normal earth surface. It's true that you may not have any pain or disorders in your bones and joints now; but later on, as you run and jog more miles, you may then develop changes.

BARBARA SHER: "A man grows up thinking maybe I can do that and a woman thinks maybe I can marry that."

Dreams begins success

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK (NEA) — Women, in your heart of hearts, what would you be doing with your life right now, all things being equal?

You realize who's probably doing it, don't you: a man, maybe your husband, because things aren't equal and men even have an edge on dreams.

"Men have a record of ignoring fear and practicing failure because they're forced to do things whether they're scared to or not," says Barbara Sher. "So a man grows up thinking maybe I can do that, and a woman thinks maybe I can marry that."

Which is why Ms. Sher, 42, started Women's Success Teams, Inc. two and a half years ago. To give women a shot at their dreams—for a fee.

A one-time New York welfare worker and the founder in '69 of Group Laboratories, a "human potential growth center," she decided if women worked together the way men do—exchanging contacts, ideas, encouragement—they could do anything they really wanted to.

"The idea of teams occurred to me, five to nine women who all had different goals. And the team goal would be for all of them to meet their individual goals."

Becoming a player works like this. Ms. Sher or one of her trainers goes into a city—Detroit, Dallas, Boston—and conducts a 12-hour seminar over three nights. You pay $250 to attend and on the third night you and all the other attendees are randomly split into teams.

You then pay $40 yearly for as long as you stay on a team. If you drop out because you're just not team oriented or you're no nearer becoming a clarinetist than before, Ms. Sher says you get a refund. "But," she said, "I suggest you contact Fairleigh Dickinson University where they have a leisure program and are looking for people like you."

That's what participants did on the third night of a recent Women's Success Teams seminar in a New York hotel. Eighteen women sat in a circle and each one got three minutes to ask for and get advice or information on her goal.

A large, European-accented blonde began. "I have 17 years experience as a physical fitness teacher but I'm unable to make new contacts. I want to set up luncheon programs in corporations."

Astro-Graph

By Bernice Bede Osol

October 17, 1978
Several unusual propositions could be presented to you this coming year. Screen all carefully. Look beneath the surface before committing yourself. There's one that looks especially good for you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Business conditions continue to be extremely complicated. If at all possible it would be best to totally avoid them today. Find out more about yourself by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your wisest course today is to make compromises or concessions, no matter how difficult. Setting the example will pay off in the long run.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Too many outside influences will stop you from accomplishing what needs to be done today. It's a shame you didn't get ahead of the job yesterday.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Due to your own actions, you could find yourself in a tight spot today. Venturing into uncharted territory was your mistake.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This is not the day to bluff your way through a situation you're not ready to handle. If you don't have the hand, don't play the game.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Combative situations prevail today in areas of philosophy, politics or religion. Take care not to tread in these areas.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Again today you'll have to guard against acting rashly in any financial situation. Being frugal and prudent is playing it smart.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Spiteful or angry actions made in retaliation today would cause you additional frustration. Be the peaceful cool-headed person you usually are.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Patience is not your long suit today so be extra careful in using tools or machinery, especially if you are performing a distasteful task.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Social situations continue to be touchy today and could easily arouse your ire. After the smoke clears you'll be sorry if you behaved scornfully.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Maintain composure at all times today. Striking back if someone offends you might be great for your ego, but it'll be bad for your reputation.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Perhaps you expect too much of others if you demand that they act immediately on their promises. Give them a chance. They'll fulfill their pledges.

Dodgers mugged during Bronx stay

By FRED ROTHENBERG

AP Sports Writer
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers, having been mugged in the Bronx while their team president was robbed in Manhattan, straggled back to Dodger Stadium today like tourists who know there is no place like home.

The New York Yankees, forced to win must games all year to get into the 75th World Series, now have to win just one of the next two games to repeat as world champions. The magic number dropped to one because rookie Jim Beattie, an unlikely hero, pitched his first complete game in 24 major league appearances and the Yankees ripped off 18 hits, including a record 16 singles, in beating the Dodgers 12-2 Sunday.

Thurman Munson knocked in five runs and joined Mickey Rivers, Brian Doyle and Bucky Dent with three-hit games in pacing the Yanks, who fought back from a 2-0 deficit by winning all three games in Yankee Stadium.

With ace Ron Guidry waiting in the wings for a possible seventh game, Beattie's nine-hit performance was pivotal. The Yanks can lose Tuesday night, when Catfish Hunter is scheduled to oppose the Dodgers' Don Sutton, and still have their ace in the hole for the final game.

Sutton, who lost to Guidry Friday night, felt the Yanks added insult to injury with their hitting rampage in Game 5. "There is a difference between an overriding desire to win and a mean streak," the Dodgers' right-hander said. "I think they try to kick your brains out."

"They play baseball like the Chicago Bears used to play defense. They certainly don't come to the park to play."

No longer the Bronx Bombers, they were more like embalmers, nailing the Dodgers' coffin with one single after another until they had more one-base hits than any team in Series history.

And the captain (Munson) and the catalyst (Rivers) made it happen. Unlike the Dodgers' right-handed hitters who have been destroyed by the unique Yankee Stadium dimensions, Munson utilized the ballpark's spaciousness in the alleys and center field.

"Maybe singles are the right way for right-handed hitters," said Munson.

"For a right-handed hitter to do well here, he has to swing down, hit line drives and use the whole ballpark," said the Yanks' sweet-swinging Lou Piniella.

Steve Garvey, the Dodgers' right-handed cleanup hitter, struck out twice against Beattie and left seven runners on base. He has yet to knock in a run in this Series.

"The key for us is going back to Los Angeles and getting our fans and our stadium working for us," Garvey said. "It's obvious when they molded a ball club for this park they looked for left-handed hitters who can use the right field area."

While Garvey and other Dodgers complained about their accommodations at Yankee Stadium, their president, Peter O'Malley, had a legitimate gripe about the Dodgers' downtown hotel. O'Malley's room was broken into earlier in the week and police have arrested a suspect who was allegedly trying to sell 30 Series tickets taken from the room. Police said some jewelry and cash also were taken.

The Yanks beat the Dodgers three straight with a variety of lineups. Willie Randolph, their fine second baseman, is not on the Series roster because of a pulled hamstring. Munson is hobbling and Rivers and first baseman Chris Chambliss have been in and out of the lineup.

Rivers, the offensive spark, was approached before Sunday's game by several Yankees players who patted him on the back and said they needed him, regardless of his condition.

"The guys (Dick Tidrow, Rich Gossage and Jay Johnstone, among others) asked me to go out there," said Rivers, who scored two runs and knocked in another. "That means I had to go out there and do my best effort. It was a little motivation on the side. I know when I'm playing good, the team's doing good."

So is Beattie, who was rudely sent to Tacoma after being knocked out of a game in Boston in June. Clyde King, a super scout, worked on Beattie's pitching and confidence.

"He was a little down in the dumps," said King, who helped the former Dartmouth basketball player to change to a windup delivery. "He was very receptive and very eager."

"When I was sent down I could either give up and go home or stick with it," Beattie said. "I've never been a quitter before and I couldn't quit then."

Septien boot gives Dallas win

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Thanks to the coolness of a Mexican-born kicker, the Dallas Cowboys have climbed back into the middle of a hot National Football League divisional title race.

Rafael Septien, undaunted by an earlier miss, Sunday calmly booted a 47-yard field goal at 3:28 of overtime to give the Cowboys a 24-21 triumph over the winless St. Louis Cardinals.

"You have to definitely be cold in this business," said Septien, whose kick climaxed an eight-play Dallas drive.

"If you let your emotions control you, then you don't have a chance," he observed. "You have to watch the ball and keep your head down. It was the biggest kick of my life."

Septien's field goal settled a National Conference East struggle marked by three near misses for victory in the closing three minutes of regulation play.

First, St. Louis' Jim Bakken shanked a 33-yard field goal effort, his kick striking the left upright of the goal posts and bouncing back.

Then the Cowboys' Robert Newhouse flubbed a Dallas drive to the Cards' 16 by fumbling. And finally, as the fourth quarter ended, St. Louis defender John Zook reached up and deflected Septien's low kick from the Cards' 39.

Septien, whom the Cowboys acquired in preseason from the Los Angeles Rams, said the block by Zook only served to make him more determined.

"Coach (Tom) Landry came up and said, 'Don't worry about it. It was a long try,'" Septien recalled. "I was waiting for another chance, knowing it would come. But when I looked up, it was only two yards shorter."

Dallas' triumph boosted its record to 5-2 as St. Louis dropped to 0-7 via its 11th straight setback in two seasons.

"I think the toughest thing in the National Football League is to have injuries early in the season," said Landry in appreciation of the Cards' woes. "They're proving now that they're capable of playing good football."

Preceding the madcap finish, St. Louis took a 14-7 lead at halftime on two short touchdown plunges by Jim Otis but soon afterward fell behind.

A Dallas double reverse featured a handoff back to Roger Staubach, who unloaded a 37-yard touchdown pass to Tony Hill early in the third period.

Bertolaccini to keep momentum of tour victory

DALLAS (AP) — Personable Argentine long-hitter Silvia Bertolaccini places momentum at the top of requirements for success on the LPGA tour.

After shooting a four-under-par final round 68 to win the $75,000 Dallas Civitan Open Sunday on the par-72 Trophy Club layout, the 5-8, 135-pound Dallas resident via South America said, "Momentum is so very important. This is my first tournament victory in America and I expect the enthusiasm and momentum to carry over when I play next in Japan and then in Malaysia to wind up this year's tour."

"I couldn't wait in two years on the tour until I took first in Singapore last year. Now if I can win one time a year, that would be great, but it would be so much more profitable to be more consistent on the tour."

Bertolaccini beat out veteran Kathy Whitworth by two strokes with her card of 213 for the $11,250 first prize check. She now has won $41,542 on the 1978 tour.

Bertolaccini put together rounds of 72 and 73 to go with her course record 68 on Sunday for a two-stroke victory.

"They are different."

The last thing I want to do is think about death. But the time will come. Maybe not today or even tomorrow, but the time will come. For my family's benefit I took time to check into the facts about funerals and the available benefits from Social Security and the Veteran's Administration. I went by and visited with the people at Duemmel-Smith Funeral Home. They are different. Different because they were really interested in me having the facts. They answered all my questions and even gave me a booklet to take home. They told me they had their books for anyone who wanted them, and just for the asking too. I liked their open attitude and that's why when the time does come, I'll trust the Duemmel-Smith Funeral Home.

BORGER — Shane Brown placed second in bareback riding to lead Pampa High School's entries in the Tri-State High School Rodeo here over the weekend.

The only other Pampa entrant to place was Jo Linda Lawrey, who finished fourth in goat tying.

The cowpokes will be in Slaton this weekend for their next competition.

Chicken producers prospering due to beef cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — People who raise broiler chickens are prospering as a result of reduced supplies of red meat caused by massive cutbacks in the nation's beef herds and a reluctance of hog producers to boost pork output more rapidly.

Agriculture Department experts say that because of the red meat crunch broiler producers can expect thriving demand from consumers and relatively good prices for years.

A new outlook report by USDA says that "all indications point to a substantial increase in broiler production in 1979" and that an 8 to 10 percent boost appears reasonable.

Broiler production this year is setting another record, "and the increase would have been larger if more hatching eggs had been available," the report said.

After leveling off in 1973-74 because of high feed costs and "unstable economic conditions" generally, broiler producers saw good profits in 1975 and in 1976 boosted output 11 percent to around 3.3 billion birds.

Last year broiler production climbed another 4 percent to about 3.4 billion birds. Officials expect that about 3.6 billion broilers will be produced in 1978, up about 5 percent from last year.

Gerald R. Rector, co-author of the analysis, told a reporter that the farm price of live broilers this year may average about 26.8 cents a pound, compared with 23.6 cents a pound the past two years.

The report said that it has not yet been indicated whether cattle producers will rebuild their herds as rapidly as possible or take more time.

"Whatever the rate of rebuilding, it probably will be 1983 at the earliest before beef output (for the consumer market) gets back to the 1978 level," the report said.

"Considering the increase in population, it may be the mid-1980's before the per capita supply of beef and veal reaches the 1978 figure."

The production of broilers as they are known today is a relatively recent achievement. In 1934, for example, only 34 million were produced, contrasted against this year's 3.6 billion.

"Broiler producers were able to achieve such a phenomenal increase in production and sales because they were able to keep prices of broilers relatively low," the report said.

This was brought about through comparatively low feed prices and by "technological advances in producing, processing and marketing broilers," it said.

The farm price of broilers averaged 19 cents a pound in 1934, climbed to 20 and 30 cents through much of the 1940s and 1950s and then dropped below 20 cents a pound from 1956 through 1972, a year when broilers averaged only 14 cents a pound at the farm.

"In contrast, farm prices of hogs climbed from $4 per 100 pounds in 1934 to $24 in 1972, while beef cattle prices rose from $4 to $33.50 per 100 pounds," the report said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — At a time when most major beef-producing nations are cutting back on herds, producers in Central America have been increasing theirs sharply, the Agriculture Department said today.

The region includes the Dominican Republic, Haiti, Belize, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua and Panama.

According to the department's Foreign Agricultural Service, cattle inventories in those countries rose from 10.2 million to 14.4 million head from 1970 to 1978.

Although small in comparison to U.S., Australian and Argentine cattle numbers, the increase in Central America does signal an attempt by those countries to upgrade their agriculture and raises their potential for exporting more meat products to the United States and other importing nations.

"The United States continues to be the traditional market for beef exports from Central American countries, although these nations account for only about 16 percent of U.S. imports," the report said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers can expect "relatively stable" fertilizer prices through mid-1979, says the Agriculture Department.

And that "should encourage farmers to apply generous amounts of fertilizer" to their crops, the department's Economics, Statistics and Cooperative Service says in a new outlook report.

The experts look at the fertilizer situation this way:

Nitrogen — Large inventories, adequate production capacity. Availability of imports will probably keep prices close to current levels.

Phosphates — Supplies are large, and exports are expected to continue brisk into the second half of 1979. Exports have helped to reduce pressures from oversupply brought about by production expansion in recent years.

Potash — Imports will continue to provide about three-fourths of U.S. requirements, and total supplies are expected to be adequate.

Installment debts eating up income

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans in 1947 had installment debts equal to 3.26 percent of personal income, or a little more than $30 for each $1,000 earned. Thirty years later the ratio was about $131 per thousand.

That's just installment debts — the kind that are gradually repaid or perhaps not repaid in monthly units.

Throw in home mortgage and other debt and the total equals 70 percent or so of personal income. And in many households the ratio was about 100 percent.

Individuals were not alone in running up debt. In 1947, the federal government had $258 billion of unpaid bills. At the end of fiscal 1976, it had climbed to $860 billion and, of course, was still rising.

Business joined in. Although America was built with equity — people saving money and investing — corporations have been borrowing to finance expansion, and of late at a sharply rising rate.

Business Week magazine notes that in just the past three years corporate debt has grown 36 percent, and now totals more than $1 trillion. In 1947, the total was about $100 billion.

While the picture is one streaked with flaming red, it is true that much of the debt is backed by substantial assets, such as homes. And it is also true that inflation has magnified the size of some figures.

Still, the picture painted by the numbers is unpleasant to view:

— A population either forced or anxious to do things now and pay later: The government to give benefits, business to expand or pay for environmental demands, and individuals to live well, or just survive.

— A cheapening of the dollar, or, in other words, inflation.

— Rising interest rates. In 1947, the prime interest rate, the very lowest rate that big banks quote to their very best customers, was 1.5 percent. As recently as January 1972 it was only 4.75 percent. But now it is around 10.

Rising interest rates are supposed to curtail such borrowing, and G. William Miller, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, is among those who believes this most strongly. But borrowing continues.

It continues because the governments — state and local as well as federal — overspend their budgets. Because business can't get money in the stock market these days. Because people need houses to live in.

And so they borrow, and as they do, officials say, the country approaches a day of reckoning. Eventually it's got to stop, they warn, and the only question is whether it stops gradually or with a collapse.

95th Congress passes into history

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 95th Congress passes into history praised as "courageous and constructive" by a president who battled with it about many issues and is uncertain whether to sign the tax cut that was its crowning effort.

"Whether they have made enough progress to merit our signing of the bill will depend on our analysis," President Carter's chief domestic adviser, Stuart Eizenstat, told reporters shortly before the House and Senate adjourned late Sunday.

But in a telephone conversation with House Democratic Whip John Brademas of Indiana, Carter said from his presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., that the 95th was "one of the most courageous and constructive congresses in the history of the country."

Other assessments were not all as rosy. Interviewed on NBC's "Meet the Press," Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., said the 95th did "less for the average working person in this country" than any Congress he had seen.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., however, said Congress had voted the biggest tax cut in history and "still kept its long-standing commitment to meet the social needs of the nation."

Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia said, "This has not been a rubber stamp Congress, yet it has not been a balky, unyielding Congress." He said he thought Carter's record in the Congress was "very good."

And Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee, the Republican leader, said GOP members of Congress had "changed the whole direction of the federal government" by pushing for tax relief and less government intervention in business.

The last major action of the 34-hour, 17-minute weekend session that ended Congress' two-year run was passage of compromise legislation cutting taxes on individuals and corporations by $18.7 billion.

Among other votes in the closing hours, the lawmakers:

— Completed action on an energy program gradually lifting federal price controls from natural gas and giving tax credits for home insulation and solar energy. The program also calls for taxes on gasoline-wasting cars.

— Passed a revamped Endangered Species Act, giving the federal government more leeway to decide whether projects such as dams should be halted because they threaten wildlife.

— Approved a watered-down version of the Humphrey-Hawkins "full employment" bill spelling out goals for cutting inflation and boosting employment. The bill creates no new programs for meeting the goals.

— Eased restrictions on taxpayer-financed abortions voted earlier by the House as part of a $56 billion spending bill for the Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare.

— Sent to Carter a bill restricting loans and overdrafts by banks to their officers and major stockholders — legislation prompted by disclosures about the financial affairs of former Budget Director Bert Lance.

— Passed an administration-backed bill giving airlines greater authority to compete by cutting fares and embarking on new routes without getting the approval of the Civil Aeronautics Board.

— Approved a compromise version of a $10.2 billion public works bill Carter had vetoed, eliminating six water projects he said were wasteful or damaging to the environment.

— Approved a $51 billion, four-year program of federal aid for highways and mass transit, which its backers said had been scaled down sufficiently to avoid a veto.

— Killed an administration-backed sugar price support program. The Senate had passed it, but opponents in the House said it did too little for farmers.

Congress refused to go along with Carter proposals to curb hospital costs, create a consumer protection agency and revamp labor and election laws.

The lawmakers also scrapped some of the main elements of his original energy program, including taxes on the price of oil, and failed to pass an Alaska lands bill labeled as the administration's top priority in the environmental area.

Child may never see nursery

By JANE SEE WHITE
Associated Press Writer

When their daughter was born last month, Joanne and Terrence McCartney's worst fears were quieted. Terra is a healthy baby with the standard complement of fingers and toes.

But she has not yet slept in the yellow nursery her parents painted for her in their house along Love Canal in Niagara Falls, N.Y. Her mother says she never will.

Like nearly 200 homes around it, the McCartney house is shuttered, abandoned. The residents fled the tidy, white-clapboard neighborhood because it was poisoned with toxic chemicals that seeped from a canal once used as a chemical dump.

State health officers urged residents to leave in August after concluding the chemicals may have caused a disturbingly high level of miscarriages and birth defects among those living along Love Canal.

Three months later, work has begun on cleaning up the canal, most of the residents have left and the state is in the process of buying up the homes.

The canal was used to dump chemicals three decades ago.

After the chemical companies sealed the canal, houses and a school sprouted along adjacent 97th and 98th streets. The residents did not know that more than 80 toxic chemicals — some known to cause cancer — were oozing into their soil, their basements and truck garages.

When health officials released their findings in August, an irate McCartney roared at them: "My wife is eight months pregnant. It's too late now. She's been here all the time. . . . If the damage is done, man, the damage is done."

Today, Joanne McCartney can chuckle about it. "I have no complaints. She was born Sept. 15 and she's fine. She weighed 7 pounds 11."

According to Jack Bryan of the state task force coordinating the Love Canal evacuation and cleanup, 179 families have left the area. Another 43 plan to go, but 17 families along the two streets say they will remain, he said.

The state paid to board up the abandoned houses, to move the families. It is paying their rent until they find new homes. It will pay much of the cost of draining and purifying the chemicals.

The state's Urban Development Corp. has offered to buy the now-worthless homes along the two streets. The State Health Department is conducting a wide range of elaborate tests on area residents.

All this will cost about $2 million, Bryan said. So far, he said, the federal disaster administration has committed about $1.6 million.

The McCartneys live now in a rented country house some 15 miles from their Love Canal home. Mrs. McCartney says the air smells good and "the water tastes great, but I'd like to get out of here into a house I own. It's very difficult to find housing because so many other people are looking."

So far, the development corporation has offered $7.8 million to buy 228 houses, Bryan said, and another 11 purchase offers remain to be made. About 100 families have accepted the offers so far, he said.

Karen Schroeder said she took the $47,000 offer for her Love Canal house although she believes the house — with a swimming pool and five bedrooms — is worth as much as $55,000.

"It's pretty good. I'm not complaining," she said.

Tom Heisner said his Love Canal property to the state, then bought back the house. He will move the structure to a new plot, Bryan said.

Construction crews went to work last week to clean up one-third of the poisonous canal. No plans have yet been drawn for cleaning up the rest, Bryan said, but if the procedure works, it likely will be used.

He said the plan is to drain the chemicals from the earth and the canal into a holding tank, purify them and then give them a final cleaning in Niagara Falls' sewage treatment system.

Although the state contends there is little danger, some 3,000 residents of the area feared the construction work would unleash poisonous clouds or spark a toxic explosion. As a result, Bryan said, the State Office of Disaster set up an elaborate evacuation plan.
