Pampan dies, wife critical after shooting

By JOHN PRICE
Pampa News Staff

A Pampa man apparently shot his wife and then took his own life Sunday morning in what police believe was an attempted homicide-suicide.

Alfred Richard Parker Jr., 24, died from a gunshot wound in the stomach, apparently self-inflicted with a .38 caliber revolver.

Joann Michele Parker, 22, was also shot once in the stomach and was taken to Highland General Hospital by Metropolitan Ambulance, where she underwent surgery. She was then transferred by helicopter to High Plains Baptist Hospital in Amarillo, where she was listed in critical condition this morning.

The couple was found at approximately 8:30 a.m. in the bedroom of their home at 313 Miami St. Mrs. Glen Courtney, Mrs. Parker's mother, reportedly found the pair when she stopped by the house to check on Mrs. Parker.

Mrs. Courtney reportedly called Metropolitan Ambulance, which called police at 8:45 a.m.

Parker, who was employed as an operator at the Phillips

Copolymer Plant in Borger, was pronounced dead at the scene. His body was taken to the Duenkel-Smith Funeral Home, and was then transported to Amarillo for an autopsy by order of Justice of the Peace Venora A. Cole.

The couple's infant son, Eric, was in the house at the time of the shooting and was reportedly taken into custody by Mrs.

Courtney.

Parker's body was found on the bed. His wife was on the floor, and had been moved by ambulance attendants when police arrived.

"It appears the people might have been arguing for a few minutes before the shooting took place," Police Chief Richard Mills said this morning. "It appears Mrs. Parker attempted to call for help after the shooting."

Mills said police believe the shootings occurred within 30 minutes before the couple was found.

All "physical evidence" points to an attempted homicide-suicide by Parker, Mills said.

"As far as we know now, we have nothing not to believe it

(the shooting)" was done by Parker, Mills added. The case is still under investigation.

In an unofficial statement, Mills said statements that Mrs. Parker was reportedly filing for divorce may have been a motive for the shootings.

Funeral services for Parker are pending with Duenkel-Smith Funeral Home.

Parker was born Jan. 14, 1954 in Hillsboro. He grew up in Pampa and was a 1972 graduate of Pampa High School.

He is survived by his wife and son; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Parker of Pampa; six brothers, Charles of Amarillo, Stephen of Earvin, and Edward, Cedric and Michael of Pampa; and one sister, Schivon Parker of Pampa.

Prospects dimming on SALT agreement

MOSCOW (AP) — Prospects dimmed today for quick conclusion of a U.S.-Soviet arms limitation agreement and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko said another round of negotiations "presumably" will have to be held.

"We are working, we are working very hard," Gromyko told reporters during a luncheon recess in the second day of talks here with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance. "The matter is very complicated."

With Vance at his side, Gromyko said: "We are a little closer than we were in Washington."

Added Vance: "I would agree with that. As I said before, these things are built brick by brick."

Washington was the site of the last round of talks, three weeks ago, in the joint effort to complete a SALT II treaty limiting strategic bombers and intercontinental ballistic missiles.

Vance's spokesman, Hodding Carter, refused to specify what the remaining obstacles were or what progress may have been made here. Asked whether the results measured up to Vance's expectations, Carter said, "This is roughly where he thought he would be."

The search for a treaty is now six years old. This is Vance's eighth set of negotiations with Gromyko in less than two years.

Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev was joining the final session in early evening. Vance's schedule calls for him to leave for Washington Tuesday morning, and U.S. officials said they were virtually certain his stay here will not be extended. Gromyko is scheduled to leave on a visit to France.

If a SALT II pact is not completed now, U.S. officials have said, another round of talks probably would be held within the next month.

Vance said earlier in a luncheon toast the American side was determined "to do everything within our power to ensure the success of these negotiations."

"There are some problems that remain to be resolved," he said, but added: "We believe that there are no problems that cannot be worked out fairly and reasonably given good will and determination on both sides."

Vance noted that a large part of the treaty has been worked out over the last several months, and said, "We can take heart from the very substantial progress" achieved so far.

Concluding a weapons limitation accord, he said, "is of urgent and paramount importance," with the consequences of failure far outweighing the problems of negotiating the remaining provisions.

Divers resume search for missing

ST. INIGOS, Md. (AP) — Divers resumed their search this morning for nine men missing from a Coast Guard cutter that sank after a collision with a coal freighter. But a Coast Guard spokesman said, "I don't know if you call that hope or not."

The bodies of two other crewmen were recovered by divers Sunday. Petty Officer Charles Crosby of the U.S. Coast Guard Reserve Training Center at Yorktown, Va., identified them this morning as Fireman Apprentice James L. Hellyer, Newcastle, Pa., and James W. Clark, officer candidate, of Clovis, N.M. Their ages were not immediately available.

"A surface search is still going on," Crosby said Sunday after divers had suspended their underwater probe for the night. "As far as I know, the divers haven't gotten well inside the boat. One body was found outside the boat and the second was just inside the hatch leading to the forward crew department."

Crosby said divers tapped on the hull of the sunken Cuyahoga "just in case someone was trapped inside," but they got no response. It is impossible to know whether the missing crewmen were above or below decks when the collision occurred, he added.

The dead and missing men were among 29 aboard the Coast Guard's oldest cutter. The collision between the cutter and the Santa Cruz II, a 521-foot coal freighter bound from Baltimore to Buenos Aires, occurred at 9:15 p.m. Friday under a clear sky and bright moon.

Petty Officer Roger Wild, who was among the Cuyahoga's 18 known survivors, said it had appeared the two vessels would pass each other. But "five to 10 seconds" after a danger signal sounded, the giant coal freighter collided with the cutter, which keeled over 50 degrees and sank three or four minutes later, he said.

The bodies were flown to Patuxent Naval Air Station for identification at the same Navy hospital where the survivors were treated early Saturday morning. The one man still hospitalized today reportedly suffered a head injury, but his condition was not known.

Five Coast Guard divers and eight from the Navy first entered the steel-hulled vessel Sunday, but the operation was hindered by strong currents at the site, which is in the main Chesapeake Bay shipping channel off Smith Point at the mouth of the Potomac River.

One body was recovered at 10:25 a.m. Sunday, just outside the 125-foot Cuyahoga, which was commissioned in 1927 as part of the Coast Guard's Prohibition fleet. The second body was recovered at 6 p.m. Diving was then called off for the night.

None of the crewmen on the Santa Cruz II, which returned to Baltimore Saturday, was injured.

The divers worked with helmets and powerful lights 57 feet below the gentle swells rocking the rescue ship, Red Cedar. Visibility on the hard, sandy bottom was limited to a few feet despite the lights, officials said.

A board of inquiry on the collision is to convene in Baltimore Tuesday morning, officials said.

Pope John Paul II marks installation with appeal

VATICAN CITY (AP) — John Paul II marked his installation as the first pope from Communist-ruled Poland with an appeal to different economic and political systems to "open wide the doors to Christ."

An estimated 300,000 persons, one of the largest crowds ever, jammed St. Peter's Square under cloudy skies Sunday for the investiture of the 264th pontiff on the steps of St. Peter's Basilica.

"Today a new bishop comes to the chair of Peter in Rome, a bishop full of trepidation, conscious of his unworthiness," the pope said in fluent Italian, uttering his vowels with a slight Polish accent.

Thunderous applause swelled from the jammed square when he told the predominantly Roman crowd:

"To the See of Peter in Rome there succeeds today a bishop who is not a Roman, a bishop who is a son of Poland. But from this moment he too becomes Roman. Yes — a Roman."

Then the new pope, turning his eyes from the sector where world dignitaries were sitting to the vast crowd, shook the sheets of paper he was reading and said in a loud voice:

"Open wide the doors to Christ. To his saving power open the boundaries of states, economic and political systems, the vast fields of culture, civilization and development. Do not be afraid. Christ knows what is in man. He alone knows it."

Many believe that having a pope from Poland may speed up improving relations between the Vatican and communist nations that was begun under Popes John XXIII and Paul VI.

Today, the pope receives representatives of the 102 states who attended the ceremony, including Polish President Henryk Jablonski, and there was speculation Jablonski would invite the pope, the former archbishop of Krakow, to visit his native land.

The investiture began with prayers inside the basilica at the Altar of Confession, built atop what is venerated as the tomb of St. Peter.

The new pope, clad in gold-trimmed robes, then entered the square, followed by a procession of 112 cardinals as the pontifical choir sang the hymn "Veni, Creator Spiritus" — "Come, Creator Spirit."

The pope kissed the altar, on a portable, red velvet-covered platform in front of the basilica, then received a simple white stole, foregoing the elaborate triple crown just as his predecessor, John Paul I, had done because of its implications of worldly power.

The last pope died Sept. 28 in the 34th day of his reign. John Paul I succeeded Paul VI who died Aug. 6, and with Sunday's investiture the world's 700 million Roman Catholics had their third pope in as many months.

Each cardinal filed by the 58-year-old John Paul II, seated on a golden velvet throne, knelt and kissed his hand in a sign of obedience.

When the Polish primate, 77-year-old Cardinal Stefan Wyszyński, approached, the pope stood up and kissed his hand to show respect.

In a gesture of ecumenism, John Paul II greeted representatives of Protestant and Orthodox churches with a kiss in his library afterward and had them join hands in a linked circle of prayer to "symbolize the unity we seek."

Thousands of security men were posted in the square and atop nearby buildings to protect the dignitaries.

Tower to stump Pampa tomorrow

Texas U.S. senior Senator John Tower will be in Pampa Tuesday at 10:45 a.m. for a news conference and an informal visit with citizens at the Perry Lefors Airport.

Tower, 53, is serving his third term, and during his campaign has emphasized his 17 years of seniority in the Congress and his legislative initiatives in reducing federal spending. Other areas of emphasis include urging limits to governmental interference in the free enterprise system and assisting farmers and ranchers in achieving a fair return on their investments.

Tower will also campaign in Borger, Amarillo and Plainview.

School board to meet Thursday

The Pampa Independent School District will hold a regular board meeting Thursday at 7 a.m. at the Carver Educational Service Center.

Items on the agenda include the approval of revised policies, the bid opening for the sale of the wooden structures on Houston and Mann campuses and the disposition of the Houston campus.

Other items include the approval of minutes, payment of bills and the budget report. The board may meet in an executive session, to discuss personnel.

Housing project to head agenda

Adoption of a resolution expressing intent to assist in carrying out an apartment project for low income - elderly persons will head an agenda to be considered by the city commission at its regular meeting at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday in City Hall.

The city would assist in the project by forming a non-profit corporation, which would issue tax - exempt bonds to finance the apartment construction. The complex would be owned and operated by a private developer, and subsidized by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The resolution to be considered Tuesday is non-binding, according to City Manager Mack Wofford, and merely expresses the city's intent to take some sort of future action on the project.

The commission will also consider on second and final reading an ordinance making changes by the city and city employees in participation in the Texas Municipal Retirement System.

The changes, which were funded in the new fiscal city budget, increase participation by the city and employees, thereby increasing employee retirement benefits.

Doreen Miley — a unique person

By CARLA BARANAUCKAS
Pampa News Staff

Doreen Miley, district executive for the Boy Scouts of America, is in her paneled office talking to one of the Boy Scout leaders when a reporter arrives.

"Com'on in," she says to the reporter. "This is one of my leaders, and he was just straightening me out. And he was right, too."

The leader leaves after meeting the reporter, and Miley and the reporter go to lunch.

On the way to the restaurant, Miley talks about the High Adventure Explorer Groups which has recently returned from a rock climbing trip.

"They are so gung ho," Miley said. "They're talking about going skiing this winter and in the spring they want to go to the Bahamas." Miley describes a meeting the Explorers had recently.

"They're really neat," she said. "They ran the meeting and stuck to business as well as they could. When one of them got out of line, they took care of it and then brought that person back into the mainstream of things."

After a trip to the salad bar, the reporter brings the conversation to Miley herself.

Miley explains her job title is district scout executive.

"And the district name is Kiowa," she adds and gives a war whoop.

Before moving to Pampa, Miley worked for the Red Cross for nine years, she said. The job required that she move approximately every year and a half.

She ended in San Antonio doing recreation work in a military hospital, when the program she was working in was closed out.

The Red Cross offered her some other position, but she turned them down.

"I was tired of moving and I was hoping to settle down and be somewhere for four or five years, she explained.

For two months Miley looked for a job, but nothing "called or beckoned" her.

A friend of hers was working with the Boy Scouts and told her they were interested in having a woman in the district executive position.

Miley sent in an application and was contacted by Joe Chambers.

"We talked for a while, and I decided to come up here and give it a try," she said.

"The job has a lot to do with the recreation field, but it is more than that," Miley said. "You have to recruit, motivate and train leaders.

There's fund raising and just making sure that a lot of

OPINION PAGE

Liberty or safety?

The total devastating effect of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) on business and industry would be impossible to estimate. Although the continuing interference in one project stands out, it is the thousands of smaller incidents which cause the greatest harm to business and its customers.

What thousands of demonstrators failed to accomplish in stopping the building of a nuclear generating plant, the bureaucrats have achieved.

With $300 million worth of work already done the Seabrook, N.H., nuclear power plant is in big trouble. In consort with EPA, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission has ordered construction halted pending another review. This delay will add $15 million per month to the costs and will cause 1,800 people to be laid off while the bureaucracy fiddles around again.

Eventually all these costs will be borne by the consumers of electricity. They will, as taxpayers, also foot the bill for the salaries of all the government meddlers involved. And these bills will not be peanuts.

Gov. Meldrim Thomson of New Hampshire said, "If Seabrook is allowed to die or to be frittered away in costly months of arguments by bureaucrats, then we will be in serious trouble both here and throughout the United States."

This brings to mind the statements made by Reginald H. Jones, chairman and chief executive officer of the General Electric Co. In a recent speech he emphasized a theme of "The Vain Search for a Risk-Free Society."

A saying by Ben Franklin was used by Jones as he set the text for his remarks: "Those who would give (up) essential liberty to purchase a little temporary safety, deserve neither liberty nor safety."

The GE executive continued: "Our particular combination of political liberty, energetic and ambitious people, risk-taking private enterprise, and a knack for science and technology, has generated the most productive society on the globe."

"We are living longer and better and enjoy a range of cultural opportunities beyond the imagination of earlier generations. In fact, the success story is so familiar, and so easily taken for granted that we begin to have delusions about it. We dream of Utopia. We overestimate our powers, expect too much of our system and try to do too much too fast."

"We start to believe that we can protect everybody from the risks and vicissitudes of life in a vain search for a risk-free society. There is nothing wrong with trying to protect ourselves against risk. Our strongest instinct is for survival. But, we are at risk from birth to death."

Jones said that politicians respond to over-ambitious expectations and yield to pressures in order to stay in office. More output is then directed toward government and less is saved to be reinvested in the productive private sector. He calls this "transfer payments by which money is transferred from producers to non-producers in our population. In ten years, this item has increased from 25 percent to 40 percent of the federal budget."

The GE head continued, "... at every point we must ask ourselves: How safe is safe? How clean is clean? At what cost, in terms of jobs lost, resources wasted, and innovations suppressed, do we try to achieve the impossible goal of zero risk?"

Jones sees a small ray of hope in the present obvious disenchantment with ever-growing big government. We have also noted that and pin our hopes on the prospect that a reaction by an awakened citizenry will not be too little and too late.

The traffic in smut

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

The mushrooming spread of pornography in the United States has been documented in grim detail by Forbes Magazine. According to Forbes, the nation's pornographers — purveyors of filth — do at least a $4 billion a year business.

This is a shocking commentary on the state of public morals in the United States. As a U.S. Customs official told the magazine, "the U.S. can outporn any country in the world." This means that decadence and degradation have gained enormously in what once was a predominantly law-abiding, church-going society.

Consider these facts reported by Forbes in its Sept. 18 issue: There's an "adult" film business with two million admissions a week, and the smut peddlers put something like 50 million advertisements into the mails every year. Peep shows and sex shops in New York City may gross $10,000 a day.

The films, magazines, and books feature depravity in its full range with every possible form of deviate and sick behavior. The appetite for this material, which can't be described in family newspapers, is pathological.

This filthy tide is flooding the country because of decision made by the Warren Court in the 1950s and 1960s. The Roth decision in 1957 initially opened the door to mass distribution of pornography. The tide won't be rolled back until the U.S. Supreme Court reverses this and related decisions.

Nevertheless, Forbes reports that the "federal government continues to be active in suppressing pornography. It launched 40 obscenity prosecutions last year." This is encouraging. However, one wonders why every U.S. attorney isn't active in suppressing the smut peddlers. State and local authorities also can do much more cracking down on the traffic in filth. The media also should devote more resources to exposing this filthy trade.

In this connection, it's interesting to note the following statement in the Forbes article:

"Fawcett which distributes High Society, a skin magazine published by porn movie star Gloria Leonard, is becoming more sensitive now that they're owned by a big public company like CBS."

Certainly, it's newsworthy that a company owned by the major television network is distributing a pornographic magazine. That would be a good subject for Mike Wallace to explore on "60 Minutes."

The public should understand that the sex merchants are creatures of organized crime. The 1976 Report of the Task Force on Organized Crime and New York State Commission of Investigation reports, have documented Mafia domination of the porn conglomerates.

Pornography is a grave menace to the moral character of the country. The smut traffic is as bad as the drug traffic, for it promotes sexual animalism, nihilism and an inhuman view of human relations. It conditions people to brutality.

To roll back the tide of pornography will require moral indignation, organization of the forces of conscience, and effective police action at the federal, state and local levels. If the tide isn't rolled back, American society may lose its ability to distinguish between good and evil.

Events that shaped the world

By OSCAR COOLEY

Isaac Asimov, the biochemist who is also something of an author - his 200th book is soon to be published - helped Family Weekly celebrate its first quarter century by looking back and cataloguing "dramatic events that shape our lives," events of the last 25 years, such as the invention of the transistor and development of television, the pill, the Arab oil embargo, Watergate, Neil Armstrong's first step on the moon and the computer craze.

Asimov not only recounts these events but ties them together, showing how one has led to another. Scientist that he is, he evidently sees history as not a mere succession of random events, occurring by chance, but a connected skein of human doings, each done because and as a result of others being done.

With cheap radios and TV sets entering homes around the world, the people of Africa, the Orient, Latin America learned what was going on in the West and developed a want for a piece of the action. As a result, he says, "There was a veritable freedom explosion as the overseas empires of the European nations broke up in 20 years." Dozens of new nation-states, each with its own government, were born.

Sad to say, most of these embryonic governments are socialist in nature. Given a choice, their citizens did not choose the least oppressive type of government, limited and constitutional, but the most oppressive kind, totalitarian or near-totalitarian socialism. They threw off a comparatively easy yoke for a rigorous one.

"Did radio and television spark the 'freedom explosion,' as Asimov suggests? One can well believe they contributed, but we should remember too, that in the early 1940s a world war, fought largely from the air, had brought about a mingling of peoples and had left the colonial powers of Europe in no shape to resist independence movements among subjects. In most cases the new nations came into being without the firing of a shot.

Political revolutions are spectacular but social ones come closer to individuals. Asimov looks upon the development of the first effective oral contraceptive in 1955 as one which started an epochal train of events — "the pill" liberated women. They now could enjoy sexual intercourse on impulse, without worrying about the probable squalling after-effect. Now equality with men was possible.

The results? Sexual license. Coeducational dormitories. Casual liaisons. Increased friction between mates, leading to a higher divorce rate. Asimov sees the whole women's "lib" movement as sprouting from the pill. This, presumably would include the legitimizing of abortion.

He might have integrated modern history still more by pointing out that such children as are permitted to be born spend much of their time, when not in school, in front of the TV tube. TV has cooperated mightily with the pill to free women. While the pill prevents children, TV entertains them. The public school, which considerably antedates both, presumably educates them. All that remains is to generate them in test tubes, nurse them in state nurseries, and women will be wholly liberated. Or will they?

The blacks in Africa could hardly achieve independence and leave the blacks in America subservient to whites, says Asimov, and so the civil rights movement "boomed and gained startling and non-violent success." He feels that the creation of new nation-states in Africa stirred American blacks to exert greater efforts to get equality in voting rights, schools, housing and employment.

It seems to me that Brown v. Board of Education, 1954, had more to do with it.

The invention of the atomic bomb wrought a revolution not only in warfare, thinks Asimov, but in international relations. Dreading a global holocaust, the United States did not press the war in Korea, hence it ended in a stalemate. Again in Vietnam, we withheld our hand, preferring actual defeat to atomic victory. Thus the bomb has "paralyzed our foreign policy," he says. We are the giant that everybody, even Cuba, thumbs their nose at.

But is this true? If the peace and borders of the United States were really threatened, would we not unleash the bomb? Americans show no sign of having renounced the desire to preserve themselves.

A less grim view than Asimov's might be that the invention of nuclear weapons was a step forward because it greatly reduced the likelihood of another all-out war. Because of reluctance to use the bomb, the United States (and other nations rich enough to build it) cannot boss weaker nations as the powers used to.

In both Korea and Vietnam, we left no doubt as to what we believe is the good way of life. But we enforce that way upon no one. In the final analysis, it is up to every people to choose their own way of life.

Asimov's science and politics are better than his economics. He thinks the oil embargo of 1973, revealing the dependence of the West on Middle East oil, elevated the Arab nations to the "driver's seat." He neglects the fact that we have had plenty of oil since the embargo and that Americans are driving more miles than ever. The Arabs are fully as dependent on us, their best customers, as we are on them.

And contrary to Asimov, the rise in the price of gasoline did not set off the world inflation, which is far more deep-rooted.

Today in history

Today is Monday, Oct. 23, the 296th day of 1978. There are 69 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1917, American troops saw their first action on the Western Front in World War I, in fighting near Lunenburg, France.

On this date: In 1641, the Great Irish Massacre took place after the discovery of a conspiracy against the English.

In 1776, in the Revolutionary War, Gen. George Washington's troops withdrew from the island of Manhattan.

In 1925, 25,000 women marched in New York, demanding the right to vote.

In 1942, in World War II, the British launched a major offensive against Axis forces at El Alamein in Egypt.

In 1944, the Allies recognized a French provisional government headed by Charles de Gaulle.

In 1954, the United States, Britain, France and the Soviet Union agreed to end the occupation of Germany.

Ten years ago: Nine anti-Castro Cubans were arrested in New York in connection with the bombing of 13 businesses trading with Cuba.

Needed: 'short form' charity

By MARTHA ANGLE AND ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) - "Charity never faileth," proclaims the Bible. Perhaps charity will "endureth all things," but that optimistic assessment was offered long before the treasury Department began promoting "short form" tax returns.

The ubiquitous 1040A "short form" for individual taxpayers allows a generous but fixed standard deduction as a substitute for the various itemized deductions - including those for charitable contributions - available on the longer, more complex form 1040.

In recent years, the Treasury Department and its tax-collecting agency, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS), have waged a determined (and successful) campaign on behalf of the 1040A.

In 1970, 52 percent of all taxpayers used that abbreviated form but Treasury and IRS convinced Congress to sweeten the pot by increasing the size of the standard deduction five times in eight years.

By last year, 77 percent of all individual tax returns were submitted on the "short form," and federal officials have a strategy designed to push that number even higher - to 84 percent.

The benefits of the 1040 A are obvious: it greatly simplifies both the taxpayers' chore of preparing the forms and the IRS' job of auditing the returns. But that reform has produced an unhealthy side effect: It has eliminated, for many low and middle-income families, the tax incentive to make generous contributions to charitable organizations.

The Treasury Department's own figures confirm the direct correlation between the percentage of taxpayers using the IRS "long form" (which allows itemization and deduction of charitable gifts) and the percentage of personal income donated to charity.

Martin Feldstein, a professor of economics at Harvard University, estimates that charitable giving would rise this year from $34.5 billion to $38.6 billion - an increase of $4.1 billion or 12 percent - if all taxpayers were allowed to claim deductions for their contributions.

Treasury and IRS officials generally agree with those estimates, but they oppose itemization because it would produce an annual federal revenue loss of approximately $2.6 billion.

Legislation authorizing itemization of charitable donations on the IRS "short form" was introduced this year in the House by Joseph L. Fisher, D-Va. and Barber B. Conable Jr., R-N.Y., and in the Senate by Sens. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., and Bob Packwood, R-Ore.

Those proposals were rejected by both the House Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee, but the sponsors of the legislation - convinced that theirs is an idea whose time has come - will re-introduce the measure next year.

Opponents of that approach argue that the standard deduction already includes an allowance for charitable contributions, the additional line will complicate a tax form whose principal virtue is simplicity and the change will set a precedent for the addition of other itemized deductions.

But the "short form" already allows itemization beyond the standard deduction - for such items as political contributions, alimony payments and moving expenses.

More significant is the special role voluntary giving and private charities traditionally have occupied in a country whose citizens are rightfully proud of their compassion for the oppressed, the sick and the needy.

For decades, much of the burden of alleviating the misery of those less fortunate people has been borne by the United Way, Salvation Army and other privately endowed charities.

If those groups' financial base continues to be eroded, their responsibilities undoubtedly will shift to federal, state and local government agencies.

There already exists a national consensus critical of government for engaging in too much meddling in too many people's lives. The failure of Congress to pass the needed remedial legislation next year will only exacerbate the situation.

Your money's worth

How to get tax break from charitable gifts

Sylvia Porter

(Ninth of 10 columns)

A charitable gift in 1978 is likely to net you more in tax savings than the identical donation next year — for the simple reason that your tax rates will be lower and so your charitable deduction in 1978 will give you a bigger tax break.

Cash donations, checks, the like - are completely deductible, of course. But gifts of property? The basic guide here is that when you give used clothing to a charity, immediately get an appraisal from the charity to prove your deductible gift.

The fundamental tax break is that you generally can deduct the full fair market value of the donated property and if the property has risen in value while you owned it, the gain escapes tax. But if you sold the property and contributed the cash proceeds, you would be hit with a tax on the gain.

To get the full benefit, be careful about what property you contribute and how you contribute it. For two major exceptions to the rule could undermine your deduction.

Exception No. 1: If you give appreciated property on which any profit would have been ordinary income if you had sold it, your deduction is limited to your cost. In brief, you cannot deduct the paper appreciation if it would have been ordinary income — or short-term capital gain had you sold the property.

Say you give XYZ stock to the Community Chest campaign in coming weeks. It's worth $3,000, but cost you only $2,000 when you bought it six months ago. Your charitable deduction is only $2,000, for if you had sold XYZ, your profit would have been short-term capital gain.

A wiser move: give long-term capital gain property whenever feasible. The tax law allows you to take the full fair-market-value deduction on property that would have yielded long-term gain.

CAUTION: Your gift is slashed unless you held the property for more than one year. If you bought stock on Dec. 5, 1977, for $3,000 and donated it to a charity on, say Dec. 3, 1978, when it's worth $8,000, your deduction is only $3,000. Had you waited a mere few days longer, your deduction would have been $8,000. Even if you give long-term gain property, you still can lose part of your deduction because of:

Exception No. 2: If you donate tangible personal property, a work of art or an antique, your deduction for any gain may be limited. Only the cost plus 50 percent of the paper gain on the object can be deducted if it's used by the charity in a "manner unrelated to its tax-exempt function."

Say you bought a painting a few years ago for $1,000, which is now worth $5,000. You give it to your former university, which auctions the painting for $5,000 and uses the money for education.

Your deduction is $3,000 because your university's sale of the painting is unrelated to its exempt function (education), even though the proceeds are used for education. So your deduction is cut back by 50 percent of your paper gain — $2,000.

What to do: Try to make sure that the charity uses the property to further its exempt purpose (e.g., your painting hangs in the school library where students can study it). Have the charity write you a statement of intent. The full deduction is assured if you can show (a) that the charity put your gift to a related use, or (b) you reasonably expected it to be so used, when you made the gift.

If you donate your services to charity, keep a running record of all expenses you or your spouse incur, include the nature of your expenses, the amount, charitable purpose.

Auto travel: You can deduct your actual expenses for oil, gas, depreciation, etc., if you keep detailed records on costs of traveling to and from charitable meetings, campaigns or outings. Or you can deduct your charity-related auto expenses at a flat rate of 7 cents per mile. This flat-rate deduction won't be challenged, if you keep records of the mileage and charitable purpose of trip. You also can deduct cost of tolls and parking.

Uniforms and accessories. Choir robes, Scout leader uniforms, other clothing (hospital white gloves, shoes) provided such articles are not suitable for general use.

Meals and lodging. If you're away from home overnight for volunteer services, costs of meals and lodging are deductible.

Personally owned equipment. In addition to your car, you can deduct expenses of operating a boat, aircraft, electronic equipment or any other equipment you own and use in charitable service.

Tomorrow: Some unanticipated deductions

problem

By Associated Press

While politicians argue about national health insurance, consumers are left to seek their own protection and individuals can find that thousands of dollars depend on their making the right decision.

A report issued last week by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare said 57 percent of all medical bills were paid by third parties, including government and private insurers, in 1975. By the year 2000, third parties are expected to pay 75 percent of the bills.

An estimated 80 percent of the population is covered by some type of health insurance; Americans pay over $20 billion a year in premiums.

There are two basic types of coverage: hospital and medical-surgical.

Basic hospital coverage provides protection against hospital bills for such items as room, food, x-rays, laboratory tests, drugs and use of operating room facilities. Some plans provide what are called service benefits. These plans cover the full cost of hospital expenses for a specified number of days. Other plans offer indemnity benefits; they pay a stated amount or percentage of the costs.

Basic medical-surgical coverage is designed to pay doctors' bills you incur while hospitalized. You will get a list of the amounts allowed for different types of operations $150 for an appendectomy, for example. The allowance may or may not cover the surgeon's actual bill; it depends on your policy and your doctor. Some medical-surgical policies — the more expensive ones — cover the costs of a doctor's services in your home or at his or her office, as well as in the hospital.

Operators must face regulatory oil program

HOUSTON (AP) — Independent oil operators say they missed a chance to kill the new natural gas price controls bill and now must face the most extensive federal regulatory program ever developed in peacetime.

The natural gas policy committee of the 5,000-member Independent Petroleum Association of America discussed the new Natural Gas Policy Act more than two hours Sunday. Ray Hefner, committee chairman from Oklahoma City, told the group the industry will have a tough and often frustrating task trying to continue to produce natural gas while coping with a regulatory nightmare.

The gas bill now awaiting President Carter's signature would phase out some price controls by 1985 but would extend federal regulation to intrastate markets.

Hefner said producers missed a chance to kill the bill Oct. 13 when they were able to persuade only 20 of 58 Democrats from producing states to support a proposal to separate the bill from other energy measures on final House passage.

The proposal to separate was defeated, 207 to 206.

"We felt, and apparently the White House agreed, the gas issue could not stand on its own. This was the telling vote and everyone knew it," Hefner said.

"We, the producers dropped the ball. It is obvious we did not do the job we should have done with our own congressmen from our own states."

He said 10 Democrats in Texas, four in West Virginia, three from California producing areas, three each from Oklahoma and Mississippi, and one each from Colorado, Wyoming, and Montana voted against separation.

Hefner said the battle now before producers is "with an army of dedicated regulators armed with an unprecedented amount of regulatory authority."

'Tortilla Curtian' draws protests

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — U.S. officials say a proposed fence between this Texas border city and Juarez, Mexico, will help cut down the flow of illegal aliens.

The plan, however, is drawing fire from critics who compare the 12-foot-high barrier to the Berlin Wall and call it a "Tortilla Curtain."

The U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service plans to start construction on the 6 1/2-mile-long wall within 60 days. The project would cost about $1.4 million and take about six months to complete.

"This fence will be very much like the fence that exists between East and West Berlin — a symbol of something between two countries," said Gaston De Bayona of Juarez, the city's director of international relations. "What can we say? It's foreboding. It's ominous."

The fence will separate congested areas of El Paso and Juarez where INS agents have difficulty making apprehensions. A similar structure is planned for the border between Tijuana, Mexico, and San Diego.

Fences now separate El Paso from its Mexican neighbor along most of the wall site's length, but Border Patrol agents claim they are easy to cut, climb and tunnel under.

The new five-foot steel wall will rest on a concrete foundation buried at least two feet below ground surface. Above the solid steel, a metal mesh fence will extend the wall another seven feet. The mesh will lean toward the Mexican side and is designed to wobble and shake in order to make climbing more difficult.

U.S. officials say the new barrier will be an uncontroversial improvement in border control techniques.

Here's a $599 Christmas gift that just possibly makes more sense than anything you've ever given anyone (at any price)!

Never, EVER until now could you have dared to dream of walking into a store to buy a computer "off the shelf". To take anywhere. To put to work (or play) immediately. Never, EVER at the price of a camera, a moped, an electric guitar, a quality watch. Never, EVER. Until now. Until the advent of Radio Shack's breakthrough "personal" computer, the fabulous TRS-80™. So start dreaming... of the student, the teacher, the businessman, the person on your gift list who has a NEED TO KNOW about today's complex electronic world. Or the NEED TO IMPROVE in aptitude, in information handling, in numbers manipulation, in time saving, in personal achievement. TRS-80 is the dream come true, the "mind-blowing" gift of a lifetime that couldn't have happened until Christmas, 1978.

For those who think ahead...

TRS-80 is a complete made by Radio Shack system, not an attachment to a TV set. Complete means including 12" video monitor, 53-key professional keyboard, micro-processor computer, cassette tape recorder, 232-page owner's manual and a couple of games on a cassette for practice and fun. Best of all, TRS-80 is expandable in power, memory, computer language, in the ready acceptance of printers and other add-ons. Don't dream of anything less!

For those who care enough...

An educator thanks us for "making possible the tapping of human innovation and creativity on an unprecedented scale". A parent says his TRS-80 "investment is one of the most significant in value to our family and to the future education of our child that we have ever seen". We have kid customers and grownup customers. And professional customers and amateur customers. Each with a dream. Think it over. Christmas is a few tomorrows away. Radio Shack is ready TODAY!

LET'S VOTE FOR NOT AGAINST!

This is the most important political contest we have this fall. The race is not for the Presidency, the U. S. Senate or the U. S. Congress. It doesn't involve many thousands of voters or millions of dollars in campaign expenditures. It does involve honest, dignified and capable administration of local government and an outstanding candidate. This race is for Gray County Judge and the candidate is Carl Kennedy.

FOR COUNTY JUDGE Kennedy

Filed for by the Kennedy For County Judge Committee. Ben Tarpley, Treasurer. A copy of our report is filed and is available from the County Clerk's Office, Gray County, Texas.

 things happen right for a lot of kids."
 "Do you feel strange being a woman in the Boy Scouts?" the reporter asked.
 "You might say that," Miley laughed. "The den leaders were used to having a male DE. But now that I've recruited the den leaders, they don't know anything but a female DE. Basically people have been real open minded about it."
 Miley gives a lot of credit to the volunteers who work for the Boy Scouts.
 "The tremendous effort of volunteers amazes me and the things they will do to make things happen for kids," she said.
 Miley explains that den leaders meet with the Cub Scouts for an hour a week and have to spend time preparing for those meetings. Boy Scout leaders meet once a week and usually take their troops camping once a month, she said.
 "That's a lot of hours and a lot of personal time," she said.
 "Right now I'm trying to get a medical and a dental Explorer post going," she said. "You really need the right persons to help these kids get a hand on experience and see what a career might be like."
 Of course there are some logistical problems with being a woman in a basically male organization.
 At a recent council campere Miley was the only woman there, and there was only one toilet.
 "Of course the men were just used to going right in and waiting their turn," Miley said. "But I had to check things out and make sure they knew I was coming around."

 Miley was one of the first woman district executives in the country.
 "Did you feel like you really had to do an especially good job?" the reporter asked.
 "I still feel that way," Miley said. "It's a heavy weight to bear. They look at all those first ones very closely. But you get more comfortable in the movement as more women come in."

 One problem Miley found was she had never been a Boy Scout and had not experienced the programs herself.
 "I had to learn a whole different set of language," she said. "It was tough. There's a wealth of knowledge to grab hold of, so you can help people. I never feel like I have hold of all the handles. There's more to do than I can possibly do. Thank God for volunteers!"

Hundreds Are Killed in Hungarian Revolt

Soviet Tanks and Jets Join in Fierce Battle

Headlines like this one appeared in newspapers 22 years ago, when student street demonstrations in Hungary quickly grew into a widespread rebellion against that country's unpopular communist government. Many Hungarians were upset with a government which strictly controlled their farms, factories, churches, and schools. But the revolt was short-lived. Soviet soldiers, jets, and tanks moved in, and after a few weeks of bloody fighting, put down the rebellion. Many Hungarians died in the fighting. Others were sent to prison in the Soviet Union. About 190,000 people left their homes in Hungary to live in other countries. The Hungarian uprising began on this day in 1956.

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just read your answer to RENO—a widow, 44, with two nice children, a lovely home, no debts and a steady income, who wonders where all the decent men are. (All she meets are men who want to rush her into bed. You assured her there were still plenty of decent men out there somewhere.) Nowhere did you mention how lucky she was to have had one man, two nice children, a lovely home, no debts and a steady income (without working, probably).

I'm 45, have never had a husband, will never have children, and have supported myself for 25 years. I'm struggling to stay out of debt, and pray that my income will continue to be steady.

You're a little naive, Abby. There aren't that many decent men around—if you mean by that a man who wants to get married to other than a 22-year-old who's slept around for five years.

I can't find a decent man. RENO has already had one. That's better than some of us. Plus she's had all those nice fringes. Try it without a husband. No lovely home, no kids, and everyone thinks you're a lesbian because you've never married. Believe me, Abby, the widows and divorcees fare better.

J. IN CHICAGO

DEAR J.: Thanks. I never realized how lucky that 44-year-old widow was until you pointed it out. That reminds me of the man who complained because he had no shoes—then he met a man who had no feet.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you can help me. I am an alcoholic. I am also quite deaf. I have attended two Alcoholics Anonymous meetings and I couldn't hear what was being said so it didn't help me one bit.

I wrote to the A.A. main office and they suggested that I go to a certain chapter and explain my problem. Well, I did—and they started to shout at me. I know they meant well, but they sure didn't know how to deal with deaf people because shouting is not the answer. It only made me nervous. Naturally, I beat a hasty retreat.

Any suggestions? I am certain that I am not the only deaf person with this problem.

DEAF ALCOHOLIC

DEAR DEAF ALCOHOLIC: Have you considered lip reading? If not, that might be your solution. You don't say where you live. Please write again and let me know. Perhaps I can put you in touch with an A.A. member who shares your problem and has a better solution.

DEAR ABBY: A man signed "Me in Malibu" wrote that he was divorced and had two children, 9 and 11. He said his ex-wife refused to let their children visit him for two weeks in the summer because he had a live-in lady friend. You told him to tell his lady friend to get lost for two weeks so the kids wouldn't see how he was living.

I highly disagree with your advice, Abby. I am 12 and my brother is 9. Our parents are divorced, and we visit my father every summer for a month. The fact that he lives with a lady has not corrupted us. She happens to be a very nice woman. We would feel much worse if we weren't able to visit our father at all. It is better having a woman around the house than to have a different one come in every two days.

Ask Dr. Lamb

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Six months ago I had my prostate gland removed. Now, my problem is that when ever I have sex, and reach a climax, the ejaculation doesn't find a way out. Yet it feels like I have completed the act. What happens when the fluid doesn't leave the body? I am 73 years old and would appreciate your answer.

DEAR READER — I am always surprised by the large number of letters I get from men asking this question. Of course, prostate gland surgery is extremely common and that's no surprise. But what does surprise me is that a man will have surgery and not know what to expect afterward.

The prostate gland rests just at the outlet of the bladder. When it enlarges and shuts off the outlet of the bladder, it causes trouble, and that's the usual reason a person has to have surgery. There are a series of very complicated little valves at the outlet of the bladder that shut the bladder off from the rest of the organs. When a man ejaculates, this valve is closed and, therefore, he has forward or normal ejaculation.

When this valve is damaged or destroyed in any way so that the valve isn't shut off, the ejaculation may go backward into the bladder. We call this retrograde ejaculation.

Prostatic surgery almost always damages this valve mechanism at the outlet of the bladder. There just isn't any way that a surgeon can remove the diseased prostate without damaging the valve at the same time in most cases. For this reason, retrograde ejaculation is the expected normal event after prostate surgery.

Retrograde ejaculation does not interfere with normal sexual activity, or normal sensations, but it can sure worry a man if he doesn't know what's really happening. In the presence of retrograde ejaculation, the semen that accumulates in the bladder is simply eliminated the next time the bladder is emptied.

To give you more information about the prostate, I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-6, Prostate Gland. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Address your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I would appreciate any information you can give me on the pituitary gland and what the loss of this gland can do to the body. I have a very dear friend who had a tumor of the pituitary gland about seven years ago. He went to a well-known clinic and had the tumor shrunk. In so doing, the gland was destroyed and he was placed on medication. I would like to know what effect the lack of the medicines would have on the body as a whole and anything else you can tell me about this particular problem.

DEAR READER — The pituitary gland is very small and located just underneath the brain and almost directly behind the eyes. It really has two parts. The back part releases hormones that stimulate the uterus to contract and can influence blood pressure. The front part of the gland is the master hormone gland. It releases hormones that stimulate the thyroid gland, the adrenal gland, the ovaries in a woman and the testicles in a male. Without these governing hormones, the thyroid gland doesn't produce enough hormone, the adrenal gland doesn't produce the hormones it should and the sex glands will stop producing enough sex hormones. This produces a wide variety of symptoms but weight loss and weakness are two of the prominent symptoms that can develop. Fortunately, the failure of hormone production can be pretty well replaced today.

Kravitz moves to women

BLACK SATIN QUILTED coat with notched collar and deep cuffs at left, wraps and ties with its own belt. A wool blazer, at right, features shoulder pads and a patch pocket.

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK (NEA) - Regina Kravitz, who's 30, wears three pierced earrings on each ear and says people tell her she's a ringer for Diane Keaton. Well, maybe a darker, fleshier version.

She also says she's very bright and creative and could have been anything when she "graduated NYU," having majored in English and literature.

grown up with and always loved.

"My grandparents were tailors and I saw people making a pattern out of a paper bag. But because they were immigrants in New York struggling to make it, there was always a taint.

She should have said "graduated from," but no mind. The thing to note is that although she started out writing advertising copy and editing at a television trade paper, she eventually got into fashion which she'd attached to clothing."

So she listened when her parents said better you should do other things.

But when you like clothes and it's 1970 and all you have to do to break into fashion is "come up with a great idea, get it made and sell it," why not?

"I would come home from work on the trade paper at night," she says, "and cut out flowers and things from upholstery fabric. Then I'd sew them on yellow rain slickers which I'd sell to boutiques on my lunch hour. They'd sell them for $250."

That's using the old noodle, all right. And it wasn't very long before she was wowing the menswear industry with her zappy notions for the new young male who "was getting hair transplants and wearing makeup."

She wasn't wowing the new young female because, she says, "Womenswear was still very closed on Seventh Avenue. You had to go through the typical channels of assistant designing, draping, spending five years buying ribbon, etc."

"I had tremendous recognition in menswear," she announces, "but it was hard for a woman to understand what a man was going to wear, so I figured out womenswear was better for me."

Best of all would be womenswear for her alter ego, the ex-junior customer who likes to wear a night-gown dress in pink cotton over skinny pants with pink metallic high-heeled mules, like Ms. Kravitz does; the woman who's rushing either and you making "value choices" and changing her life style as often as her clothes.

If anyone needs Ms. Kravitz' "multiple looks with minimal pieces," she does, this get-it-moving customer who could be 18 to 35 and who may have occasional lapses into "straight taste" and wear Calvin Klein.

"But I can give her six pieces that work from day to evening and she won't blow a bundle for the season. And all she needs to get 20 looks is a few accessories."

She can take a Kravitz synthetic faille peach one-button blazer coat-dress, for $76, and wear it alone or over matching pants for $60, or a sarong skirt for $76, with a sexy camisole for $34.

Then she can pull on an unlined brown wool check blazer coat for $98. Or she can slither into a Kravitz slip-dress with spaghetti straps and plunging back and front V's for $76, and a blazer bathrobe coat for $82.

She can do that in solids that match colors Ms. Kravitz isolates from her prints — or in a print like her "Turning Point" which is purple and pink ballerinas dancing up and down a black background.

Then, like Ms. Kravitz, she can sit down to a good, light meal and listen to Brazilian music because the rhythm is so sensual. And she can jaunt down to Chinatown for Ginseng, one of the Oriental "medicines" Ms. Kravitz believes in.

And she can spend some time thinking about systems. Ms. Kravitz is "systems oriented," she says, which is why the garment industry is so good for her. "To put together a business like this which is two and one-half years old, you have to be able to organize and analyze. And the only way you get to make what you want is to know things besides designing, like accounts receivable and payable."

Actually, the Kravitz customer can think about the display systems in Ann Taylor, Bloomingdale's, Joseph Magnin, Saks, even Macy's, which is where she'll find Regina Kravitz clothes. And lots of earrings for all the holes in her ears.

THE MOST WANTED FACE-winner of an informal poll by the editor's of McCall's magazine for their October beauty issue, actress Jaclyn Smith says the face she would most want to have is her mother's.

Nowadays Saturday night probably finds you "turning on" to the latest disco beat. The phrase may take on a new meaning within a few months when "body lighting" hits the disco scene.

The brainchild of Disco Lite Co. of New York, body lighting is a complete line of clothing designed for the disco dancer. Each piece comes with its own lights sewn into it.

"The idea is to turn the wearer into a walking light show," says company president Alex Cavallari in September's Billboard magazine.

The initial line will feature bow ties, belts, handbags and slacks studded with multi-colored light emitting diodes (LEDs) and powered by a small camera battery, concealed in the outfit.

Begun as a customizing business, Cavallari's company turned to mass production because of enthusiastic

The registry is expected to provide for the first time information about how many hemophiliacs there are in the United States and where, what kind of care they are getting and how much it costs.

The foundation describes hemophilia as a congenital blood clotting disorder which results from a hereditary defect in the blood's clotting mechanism.

George Herman Mahon-retires from Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the speaker's gavel echoed through the House chambers heralding the close of the 95th Congress, a politician whose actions have affected practically every American, quietly concluded a 44-year career noted for its irony and anonymity.

George Herman Mahon, the retiring dean of the House, spent the final, frantic hours of the session attending to the nation's money matters.

The lanky West Texan, who celebrated his 78th birthday in September, nurtured two spending bills through Congress — a $56 billion HEW appropriations bill and a similar Department of Defense measure that totaled $117.3 billion, the largest appropriations bill ever passed.

The historic DOD bill passed by a voice vote, Mahon nodded with pride during an infrequent interview recently.

Congressional observers added that legislative approval of both bills were indicative of the respect Mahon has earned during the past 14 years as chairman of the powerful House Appropriations Committee, the traditional starting point for all money bills.

Mahon's reign over the committee coupled with his chairmanship of the defense appropriations subcommittee, gave him a firm grip on the federal government's purse strings.

And therein lies the irony permeating Mahon's career.

His voting record reflects a pro-defense, anti-social program stance and has branded him a fiscal conservative.

Yet during his service on the appropriations committee, federal spending and debt has increased dramatically.

When Mahon arrived on Capitol Hill, the federal budget called for $6.5 billion in expenditures compared to almost half a trillion dollars today. The federal government employed 780,582 persons in 1977, more than 2.8 million persons were on Uncle Sam's payroll.

"The federal government is out of control," he stated matter-of-factly. "The tendency is to determine what you need — you have to do more for the poor, more for the handicapped, more for education, more for public roads. In other words, all of these things are pressing for consideration and the tendency of the administration and Congress has been that we've got to have these things and whether or not you've got the money doesn't receive adequate consideration.

"I've preached the doctrine that we shouldn't expand old programs and originate new expensive programs unless we had the money in hand or in sight. But that philosophy is disregarded in so many instances."

Mahon was certainly in a position to strong-arm colleagues over to his fiscal philosophy. Using his chairmanship, he could have thrown an untold number of wrenches into the legislative machinery.

"I approached the job with the idea of achieving longrange success," he explained. "You can be brutal and arrogant and to some extent effective in the short range but you can't continue in that mold."

"I've found I could be more effective by working with people, often and mostly behind the scenes in achieving my goals of fiscal responsibility. I haven't gone to guys and said, 'Hey, you haven't voted with me on blah-blah so I'm going to cut your throat on some public works bill.'"

"You can kick people in the teeth on certain occasions and get by with it but you can't kick 'em in the teeth from year to year and be effective."

Mahon prefers a more gentlemanly approach. During floor debate this year on the B-1 bomber, Mahon impressed upon fellow members that ICBMs are the weapons of the future.

"The only purpose of a bomber is to do the cleanup job and after the atomic exchange, we could probably do the cleanup job in an ox cart," he said.

Certain HEW officials "should be picked up by the nape of the neck and shaken until their teeth chatter" he stated more recently adding he intended to contact President Carter concerning the department. A White House aide intercepted Mahon as he left the House chamber. The president was on the phone a few minutes later.

But Mahon often fought with kid gloves rather than bare knuckles.

"Mahon never did abuse that power, there were times when I wished he had used it more," said former Rep. Bob Casey, D-Houston.

"George can't help, he's too much of a statesman," commented a former president famous for his strong-arm tactics.

That president — Lyndon B. Johnson — was a congressional aide in 1934 when Mahon was first elected to the House.

LBJ, according to Mahon, was by far the most effective in dealing with Congress than any of the eight men who occupied the White House during Mahon's 44 years on Capitol Hill.

Franklin D. Roosevelt's presidency was in full swing when Mahon arrived. The young Texan gained his political goal during Harry Truman's administration, becoming the first — and to date, the only — chairman of the defense appropriations subcommittee.

He played golf with Ike; conversed regularly with JFK and became "Mr. Chairman" of the far-reaching Appropriations Committee when LBJ took office.

When the Republican administration of Richard Nixon took office, Mahon's nephew was one of the few Democrat-appointed U.S. attorneys to retain his post. Today, Eldon B. Mahon sits on the federal bench in Texas' northern district.

And in 1970, when a tornado ripped through Lubbock, Nixon quickly released federal relief funds for the largest city in Mahon's district.

Gerald Ford was a member of Mahon's committee before succeeding Nixon.

Although Mahon announced his retirement plans six months into his final term, Jimmy Carter has relied on the tall Texan, despite his lame-duck status.

"I've always had good rapport with the administration, regardless of who is in power," said Mahon. "In the last couple of decades, I've had access to people from the president on down. I'm not trying to be arrogant or boastful but I have had access to the right people and I've been able to help my constituents have appropriate hearings."

"Yesterday afternoon I had five people here wanting to talk to the secretary of agriculture. So I went went down and talked to the secretary of agriculture."

His political clout was enormous but outside his district and the power centers of the federal government, Mahon remained relatively unknown. In an age of computerized media campaigns on behalf of politicians, Mahon avoids reporters due to his demanding schedule and a lingering farmboy shyness.

"I haven't sought the headlines," he said. "I always felt I had the people at home with me. I never was a grandstand type and I'm not now. I guess I'm the only congressman serving today with no public relations-type man in his office and I'm certainly the only committee chairman."

"Headlines are all right for a time but if you're going to be a headline man, you've got to be a headline man all the time."

My record proves it wasn't necessary because I've been on top all these years."

Carter can focus efforts directly on foreign field

WASHINGTON (AP) — Now that Congress has shut down, Jimmy Carter can focus his energies even more directly on the foreign field. He will be excused if he looks at the world, at least for a while, through rose-colored glasses.

In the Middle East, there is the hint of peace after 30 years of war. Egypt and Israel, with more than a gentle nudge from the president, are near agreement on a treaty.

The United States and the Soviet Union appear on the brink of a breakthrough to limit their long-range bombers and intercontinental ballistic missiles.

Even southern Africa, so long resistant to solution, offers new promise of peaceful transition to black rule in Rhodesia and Namibia.

U.S. relations with West Europe and Japan are smoother than they have been in years. China isn't demanding instant normal relations. The Panama Canal treaties are part of history. Turkish troops still occupy almost half of Cyprus but the pressure on U.S. bases in Turkey has eased with a restoration of regular American arms aid to Ankara.

Most satisfying to the man in the White House, no Americans are in combat. There are no casualty figures. Americans are helping to keep the peace in the Sinai Peninsula. They are not fighting other nations' wars or their insurrections.

All this makes Carter look as good as he probably feels about the situation. Presidents get the blame for international disasters, even when they are faultless. The corollary, and it seems fair enough is that they also get the credit when peace flickers over the horizon.

What is so strange about Carter's good fortune is that the settlements taking shape in the Middle East and between Washington and Moscow are not exactly what he had in mind a year ago.

Residents live with history

ANDERSONVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Residents of this south Georgia town have spent the last 100 years trying to live down the history of the infamous Civil War prison in which nearly 13,000 Union soldiers died. Now they're banking on that history to revitalize the town.

"We've tried to go back and make our town look like it did during the Civil War when the prison was here," said Mayor Lewis Easterlin. "The prisoners were unloaded here and carried over to the prison. We have about three stores and 10 houses still standing from Civil War days."

Easterlin, in his 22nd year as mayor, said the project began seven or eight years ago "when we realized we were going to dry up."

The renovation is nearly complete, and Easterlin credits the guild, a group of 120 persons from Andersonville and other parts of Georgia, with helping raise the $250,000 needed for the project.

A new bandstand was finished just in time for the Andersonville Historic Fair earlier this month. The road that connects Andersonville with the Civil War cemetery is being resurfaced and the town is capitalizing on tourist trade brought by President Carter's hometown of Plains, 21 miles away.

"The old road from Andersonville to the cemetery was just a path when I was a boy — just a pig trail," said Easterlin. "You had to ford the branch, and around Sweetwater Spring it was marshy and overgrown with weeds and vines."

Easterlin said the Civilian Conservation Corps, formed during the Depression, restored the cemetery, where more than 12,000 graves bear witness to conditions at the prison. As many as 30,000 Union soldiers at a time were crowded into a log stockade that enclosed 16 1/2 acres.

Festival offers escape

MAGNOLIA, Texas (AP) — Come to the revel, m'lords and ladies, and bury your cares 'neath a sumptuous repast for the body and soul.

Such is the promise of the Texas Renaissance Festival, a medieval Woodstock for the family in the midst of the East Texas piney woods.

It's a sensuous conglomeration of feasting and festival patterned after the fairs held in Italy, France and England between the 13th and 16th centuries.

Here, peasant and noble alike can partake of a hearty cup of mead and gnaw on a turkey leg while feasting their eyes upon the sensual delights of belly dancers or gypsy terpsichore.

The entertainment ranges from magic, mime and mock battles to singing, Shakespeare and Scottish bagpipes.

A variety of acts run continuously on the stages of three theaters on the 150-acre grounds, while street entertainers perform for those meandering past, and stopping occasionally to inspect, the many arts and crafts displayed in buildings and booths lining tree-shaded lanes.

Particularly large crowds were awed and amused by the antics of Jim Ridgley, a tight-rope walker and juggler from Los Angeles.

"There are six or seven of these fairs around the country at various times during the spring, summer and fall, and I travel from one to the other," he said. "In the winter, I go back home to practice and do street entertaining."

Ridgley said he usually is paid a small salary by the festival promoters, but supplements his income by passing the hat after each performance. It invariably was filled almost to the brim by the appreciative audiences.

The Master of the Revels is Merlin, a jolly old elf attired in the black robes and peaked hat of the royal wizard who answers to the 20th Century moniker of Bill Palmer.

"There are about 1,200 actors working at the festival," he said. "Over half live here during the festivities, and the rest of us have to go back to real jobs in Houston."

Palmer said the number of visitors to the festival, which runs each weekend in October and the first weekend in November, ranges from 10,000-15,000 on Saturday and 20,000-25,000 on Sunday.

The immense popularity of the festival, which is 45 miles northwest of Houston, brought with it that old nemesis of the Houstonian — the traffic jam.

Getting into the festival grounds meant a wait of about 30 minutes in a line of cars that ran for miles. But the line ran smoothly, and there was plenty of free parking.

The Master of the Revels said they were trying to make the Texas festival as much a duplicate of the original as possible.

"We're trying to tighten the

BOOZE NEWS

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans will consume an all-time high 450 million gallons of liquor this year, according to an estimate by the Wine and Spirits Marketing Bulletin.

The forecast is based on analyses of the first five months of 1978 which showed a consumption increase of 4 to 5 percent over 1977.

BUNKER CHAIRS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairs used by Archie and Edith Bunker in the television comedy, "All In The Family," have been added to the Smithsonian Institution's theater collection.

The collection includes artifacts from the nation's leading musicians, comedians, actors, singers and dancers.

SELF-KIDNAP

PARIS (AP) — French police have charged the manager of a garage with organizing his own kidnapping to obtain a $22,000 ransom from his employees.

Bruno Decocq, 30, disappeared from his garage recently with $1,400 from the till, which he was supposed to be taking to the garage owner.

What The UN Costs

Belmont, Massachusetts — Membership in the United Nations has cost the United States dearly in many ways, chief of which perhaps is loss of our ability to act in our own self interest. For over 30 years, we have been shackled both by membership in UN-sponsored alliances (NATO, SEATO, etc.) and the ever-present bugaboo of "world opinion." We have not been the masters of our fate for three decades and, partly as a consequence of UN membership, we have suffered defeat in two incredibly costly wars.

There is no way to place a dollar figure on the cost of Korea and Vietnam. Nor can anyone add up the price of the continuing UN stranglehold on our foreign policy. But if one digs hard enough, there are some figures which detail U.S. contributions to the modern Tower of Babel. At a time when many Americans have become highly conscious of the burden of taxation, a look at the fleecing given all of us to support the UN is absolutely essential.

Some Reduction!

Back in 1972, anti-UN sentiment across America caused Congress to demand a reduction in our yearly assessment for UN expenses. Accordingly, our "compulsory" levy for the regular UN budget went down — from just under 33 percent to 25 percent. Many Congressmen and Senators patted themselves on the back at election time, but few dared mention that the United States, only one of 132 member-nations at the time, was still being soaked for one-quarter of the UN's published tab.

"We're headed in the right direction," was the re-election cry. And the angry taxpayers were put to sleep. While they slept, our nation's "voluntary contributions" for special UN programs skyrocketed. We are presently paying

Dorsett sits, Dallas wins

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP) — Tony Dorsett, second-string millionaire. In a collision of two strong-willed personalities Sunday, Dallas Cowboy Coach Tom Landry demoted his wondrous half-back in a show of iron-fisted discipline that would have made the late Vince Lombardi proud.

Dorsett missed practice with the World Champion Cowboys Saturday because he overslept. When he arrived at Texas Stadium Sunday for the National Football League game against the Philadelphia eagles, Landry told Dorsett that Preston Pearson would get the starting call even though Dorsett's family was in the stands.

The Cowboys produced a workmanlike 14-7 victory over the Eagles to move into a tie with Washington in the National Conference East. Dorsett saw only spot action, pushing for 24 yards.

Landry said Dorsett will continue to be a backup until he shows he can make it on time. Whether he starts is up to him.

Dorsett was furious over the demotion, saying "My family came 3,000 miles to see me play. I was humiliated. It was hard to swallow."

"I overslept an hour workout. I just didn't think it was that serious. One player did the same thing earlier this year with no penalty. I was penalized because I'm Tony Dorsett."

Landry said Dorsett would be fined. The limit is $500.

"I'm not hardheaded in this area," said a grim Landry. "If he (Dorsett) recognizes what he did and comes back to work fine. I don't think a player should hurt our team...I don't think he intended to...I think he recognizes it is important for a player to tell us (if they have to miss practice)...We were worried about it. I think he recognizes he should be set down."

Landry said the Cowboys tried to call Dorsett Saturday but the "phone apparently was off the hook."

Preston Pearson rushed for 61 yards and caught three passes in the victory as Dallas moved its record to 6-2 alongside the Redskins, who lost to the New York Giants.

A one-yard run by Robert Newhouse and an 11-yard pass from Roger Staubach to Drew Pearson produced the Cowboy points—all in the second quarter.

Philadelphia, now 4-4 for the year, could only get the Dallas defense for Ron Jaworski's 34-yard touchdown pass to Keith Kreple.

Dallas held Wilbert Montgomery, the National Football League's leading rusher, to only 31 yards.

Preston Pearson was asked about the furor between Landry and Dorsett, who was the NFL's Rookie Offensive Player of the Year in 1977 with 1,007 yards.

"I'm always ready to play," said Pearson. "But let's face it. Tony is just too good to keep out of the lineup."

Pearson had a complaint of his own: "Just when I get it going, I come out."

Philadelphia Coach Dick Vermeil wasn't too happy himself in the Eagle dressing room. He was slapped with an unsportsmanlike conduct penalty when he came on the field after Jaworski was penalized 15 yards for intentionally grounding the ball late in the fourth quarter.

"I only stepped out on the field and pointed to the receiver Ron was trying to throw to and the official flagged me. He has every right to do it, but in my years in the league I've never seen it called. How many times have you seen coaches come out onto the field and not get penalized?"

TONY DORSETT sits alone on the Dallas Cowboy bench during Sunday's game with Philadelphia. He was demoted to second string and played only sparingly during the second quarter. The disciplinary action was taken by head coach Tom Landry because the star running back failed to show for Saturday's practice.

Upsets dot NFL games

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer
Upsets were the order of business Sunday as the National Football League season approached its midway point.

The Los Angeles Rams were knocked from the unbeaten ranks by the New Orleans Saints and Seattle and Tampa Bay flexed their muscles with impressive victories on a day which saw seven of 13 games go to the underdog.

Saints 10, Rams 3
The Saints scored the game's only touchdown by going 69 yards in seven plays after a razzle-dazzle pass attempt by Los Angeles punter Glen Walker was intercepted by New Orleans cornerback Eric Felton, setting up Manning's scoring pass to Galbreath.

Seahawks 27, Raiders 7
The Seahawks turned four interceptions thrown by Oakland's Ken Stabler into 17 points. Stabler has now thrown 19 interceptions in eight games. Sherman Smith led Seattle's offense with two short TD runs.

Bucs 33, Bears 19
Rookie quarterback Doug Williams completed 11 of 19 passes for 180 yards, throwing for two touchdowns and running for a third, as the Bucs dealt Chicago its fifth straight setback. Walter Payton, the Bears' great running back, managed just 34 yards on 15 carries.

Colts 7, Broncos 6
Bill Troup threw a 19-yard scoring pass to Glenn Doughty and Toni Linhart kicked the extra point in the second period. That stood up as Denver's Jim Turner, trying for his third field goal of the game, had his 27-yard attempt blocked by Baltimore defensive tackle Mike Barnes with eight seconds left.

Giants 17, Redskins 6
Washington lost its second in a row after winning its first six. Giants quarterback Joe Pisarcik completed just three passes, but one of them was a 43-yard scoring strike to Jimmy Robinson and another was a 46-yard heave to James Thompson on a flea-flicker play that set up the Giants' other TD, a three-yard run by Pisarcik.

Lions 31, Chargers 14
Detroit quarterback Gary Danielson had a big day, completing 22 of 32 passes for 210 yards and three touchdowns, two of them to rookie wide receiver Jesse Thompson. Detroit had lost five in a row.

Chiefs 17, Browns 3
Unheralded Arnold Mergado, who had spent most of his time on the special teams, rushed for 74 yards and two touchdowns to help the Chiefs end a six-game losing streak. The Hawaiian-born Mercado, the only player in the NFL of Japanese ancestry, teamed effectively with Tony Reed, who gained 97 yards for Kansas City.

Vikings 21, Packers 7
Minnesota won the game it had to win in its bid for a 10th divisional title in 11 years as Fran Tarkenton completed 26 of 43 pass attempts for 262 yards and three touchdowns.

two of them to Ahmad Rashad.

Patriots 23, Dolphins 24
Reserve running back Horace Ivory, a former Oklahoma star who missed most of his rookie season last year because of a leg injury, ran for 113 yards and two touchdowns as the Patriots outscored Miami.

Bills 5, Bengals 0
Buffalo beat Cincinnati 5-0. The only points came on a 20-yard field goal by Tom Dempsey and a safety when Curtis Brown and Lou Piccone tackled Cincinnati punt returner Dennis Law in his own end zone.

Jets 23, Cardinals 10
St. Louis, like Cincinnati, is now 0-8 after bowing to the Jets. Scott Diering scored two touchdowns for New York and Pat Leahy, the NFL's leading scorer, booted field goals of 20, 38 and 45 yards.

Falcons 20, 49ers 17
Atlanta erased a 17-7 deficit in the final 5:38, beating San Francisco on Tim Mazzetti's last-second, 29-yard field goal.

Saving par gives Young hint

HOUSTON (AP) — Donna Caponi Young got a hint of what was to come Sunday when she came out of a bunker to save par on the No. 4 hole at the Newport Country Club.

"I told everyone if I ever parred No. 4 I would win the tournament," Young said. "I went bogey, bogey, par on the three days and when I got the par I knew something was up."

More important than the par, however, were the three birdies and one eagle that allowed Young to charge past second-day leader Alexandra Reinhardt with a three-under-par 69 to win the $50,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament by a three-shot margin.

Reinhardt, who led at the end of the first two rounds, faded with a final round 73 to finish second. Sally Little of Dallas flirted with the lead early in the final round but finished with an even par 72 for third place.

Young's nine-under-par 207 total earned her a first-place check of $7,500 while Reinhardt got $5,400 for her 210 runnerup position. Little was another shot back at 211 and she earned $3,620.

"I missed birdies from 12 feet, eight feet and six feet on the first three holes," Young said. "I was close all day so when I got the birdie on six I was real excited."

Young, who recorded her 15th tournament victory, followed up with an eagle on seven for the second straight day. She bogied the next two holes to fall back into a tie with Reinhardt but birdies on 12 and 13 put Young into the lead for good.

"I'm only an average putter," said Young, who counted seven makable birdie putts that she missed. "I'd win more tournaments if I could putt better."

"The last thing I want to do is think about death. But the time will come. Maybe not today or even tomorrow, but the time will come. For my family's benefit I took time to check into the facts about funerals and the available benefits from Social Security and the Veteran's Administration. I went by and visited with the people at Duemel-Smith Funeral Home. They are different. Different because they were really interested in me having the facts. They answered all my questions and even gave me a booklet to take home. They told me they had those booklets for anyone who wanted them; and just for the asking too. # Miami, again the homosexual issue

By MARTIN MERZER
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Dade County is involved in yet another battle over homosexual rights, but many of the principals show little enthusiasm for repeating campaigns that last year brought bitterness and negative publicity to Miami and the surrounding area.

"This is aggravation we don't need again," said Bob Green, husband-manager of Anita Bryant, the singer who was a leader of a campaign that succeeded in repealing a previous homosexual rights ordinance — and drew nationwide attention.

Green says he is tired and that the issue has profoundly changed his family's life. "It's been pretty rough," he said.

And some people who were prominent homosexual rights supporters last time are questioning the wisdom of bringing up the subject again.

"I'm going to do nothing," said Dade County Commissioner Ruth Shack, who sponsored the original ordinance repealed in June 1977. "The community spoke loud and clear. That's why I'm doing nothing."

This second battle caught most homosexual rights supporters and opponents by surprise. A petition campaign by a single group forced the County Commission to place the proposal on the Nov. 7 ballot.

There are differences between this vote and the last one. In 1977, voters were asked to repeal an ordinance already on the books after approval by the County Commission. It banned housing or employment discrimination based on "affectional or sexual preferences."

The ordinance was overturned by a margin of more than 2-1. That was the first of a number of publicized elections that overturned similar ordinances in Eugene, Ore., St. Paul, Minn., and Wichita, Kan.

This time, Dade County voters are being asked to approve an ordinance, not repeal one. "We need an election this time in a positive vein," said Melodie Moorehead, one of the advocates of homosexual rights who helped get the issue on the ballot.

The proposed ordinance is much broader than the one repealed. It bans discrimination not only against homosexuals but also on the basis of race, religion, marital or military status, source of income and state of pregnancy — among other things.

The words "affectional and sexual preferences" appear in the lower two-thirds of a 90-word sentence, prompting opponents to suggest that supporters are trying to pull a quick one. Said Green:

"They call it log-rolling in political circles. You stick what you want in the middle of lots of other things. It's a can of worms."

Ms. Moorehead, a psychotherapist who specializes in patients with "alternate lifestyles," denied that charge.

"It's not a question of hiding ...," she said. "We're saying to the people, 'Don't come out of your closets to vote for the gays. Come out and vote for yourselves. You vote for you and I'll vote for me and we'll all win.'"

Another difference is that this time the public seems apathetic about the issue, which has caused financial problems for both sides.

Ms. Moorehead notes that this time around, no word has come from such prominent homosexual rights supporters as singer-poet Rod McKuen.

"We're finding that our volunteer staff is very, very low," she said. "The dollar flow coming to us is almost zilch. People have been intimidated by the (last) referendum."

Green said opponents are having financial troubles as well. "We can't raise funds," he said. "We have to dip into the funds that are allocated for other things."

Green, in a reflective mood, appeared tired of the whole business.

His wife started her crusade in January 1977 charging that the original ordinance would allow homosexuals to be teachers. Since then,

Green said, her income from singing engagements has been cut by some 80 percent. She still has a contract to promote Florida orange juice, but her commercials appear much less frequently.

"The talk shows won't take her. We've got books to plug, albums to plug, and they won't take her. The rule sometimes is, 'Yeah, we'll have Anita Bryant but a gay must sit next to her'" for political balance, he said.

He added: "They don't do that to Jane Fonda or Shirley MacLaine" — other entertainers who have taken controversial stands.

Asked if he ever thinks wistfully of the days before the homosexual rights battle, Green said: "About every five minutes."

Major homosexual rights proponents deny Green's claims that they have threatened Miss Bryant or tried to hurt her financially.

"We support the full equality of Anita Bryant," Ms. Moorehead said. "Her citrus contract is coming up for renewal next year and we hope she gets it."

Farmers may learn about foreign land owners

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers and others soon will be able to find out for the first time how much land in their communities is owned by foreigners.

The information will be provided under a new law that requires foreign investors to report their holdings of U.S. farmland to the government.

But Rep. Thomas S. Foley, chairman of the House agriculture committee, says that the law, signed by President Carter on Oct. 14, should not be viewed as a form of federal control on who can own land in this country.

"What Congress has done is create a system which will help us find out, for the first time, whether foreign citizens are — or are not — buying up alarming amounts of U.S. farmland," Foley said.

"After we find out what the real facts are, we can then make some informed decisions about what, if anything, should be done," he said.

A report by the General Accounting Office, an auditing agency of Congress, said recently that part of the problem is that foreign investors in U.S. land "often buy through intermediaries with no records available on the actual landowners."

Although current information is sketchy, the GAO said it appears less than 1 percent of the nation's 1.3 billion acres of farmland is owned by foreigners.

The agency said some people support foreign land investors "for bringing capital" into what they see as a sagging U.S. agricultural economy.

Many older farmers and other American landowners are eager to get the highest dollar for their property and would be likely to view any federal curbs on sales to foreigners as an infringement on their rights, others have said.

Carter, in signing the bill, noted that government surveys indicated foreign ownership of land is still very small. But he said that farmers are concerned about foreigners driving up prices and added he "recognized that we need more information before we reach definite conclusions."

Under the new law, the Agriculture Department has three months in which to issue regulations for the reports to be filed by foreign citizens who currently own or later buy or transfer farmland.

After that, current foreign owners will have to file reports on their holdings within 180 days, and future buyers or sellers will have to file reports within 90 days of their transactions.

The law provides civil penalties of up to 25 percent of the value of the land held by offending foreigners.

The reports will be available to the public within 10 days of being received by USDA.

Those covered by the law will include "all foreign persons who hold any interest (except a security interest such as a mortgage) in any land used for agricultural, forestry or timber production purposes," Foley said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Agriculture Department analyst said today that U.S. exports of wheat and feed grains to Japan could suffer a setback because of its surplus of rice.

William T. Coyle of the department's Economics, Statistics and Cooperatives Service said that, faced with a domestic glut of rice, it is seeking ways to reduce production and to stimulate rice consumption.

One possibility, he said in a weekly issue of "Foreign Agriculture" published by the department, is for Japan to undertake a costly rice disposal program including export subsidies as well as the use of more rice in livestock feed.

New recruits different breed

FORT DIX, N.J. (AP) — Raw and hapless, the Army recruits marched enthusiastically along a dusty trail and belted out the company cadence:

"Standing tall and looking good,

"Ought to be in Hollywood.

"That's the Delta Company boogie.

"What a crazy song."

It might have been a typical scene out of this military training reservation's 61-year history, but there was one important difference. This time women were striding along with the men.

Fort Dix, a bastion of warrior-tough masculinity since its establishment in 1917 as a staging area for World War I troops en route to Europe, has gone coed.

In line with a new Army policy, this sprawling central Jersey military base, about 25 miles east of Philadelphia, last week welcomed its first group of 40 female recruits for basic combat training.

Officers here expected to process up to 73 female soldiers through basic training each week from now until April, when the number will jump to 123 a week.

Women are barred by law from combat duty, but they nevertheless are trained to fight with bayonets, rifles and grenades.

Unlike their male counterparts, female "boots" are allowed to keep their hair, provided it doesn't touch the collar, and are permitted to have curlers and hair dryers in the barracks.

But the Army is determined to treat the women privates the same way as it does the men — which is to say tough.

"Other than bras and panties, they bring the same things men bring — that is, nothing," said Lt. Col. Meredith Caram.

Some of the women feel the drill sergeants may be treating them too equally.

"They go out of their way to make us feel we're like the men," says Pamela Briggs, 18, of Philadelphia. "I don't want to be treated special but I don't want to be treated like a man."

Socializing with male recruits or drill sergeants is strictly forbidden. Women are housed in the same barracks as men, but on different floors.

Fort Dix, which puts more than 15,000 recruits a year through the 8-week basic training course, is the fourth Army base in the nation to train women. Women and men traditionally were trained separately.

Women have long been a part of the Army, but in the past they were restricted to roles as medical, dental, administrative or clerical aides.

Today, women are eligible for 96 percent of the Army's 491 job specifications.

"I'm glad I'm in with the guys," says Mary Hanna of Bernardsville. "We boost their morale and they boost ours. It's competition within the platoon."

Some of the male recruits agree.
