Americans leaving Iran after death threats made

TEHRAN (AP) — Iranian oil workers ended their strike against Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi today but troops opened fire on two demonstrations against the monarch, killing at least three persons and wounding 19, the official Pars news agency reported.

The casualties were reported in Sonqor, west of Tehran, where Pars said demonstrators set fire to the provincial governor's office and his home. Troops also opened fire to disperse demonstrators in the Tehran bazaar, but there was no immediate report of casualties.

The government oil company announced that its 37,000 workers were flocking back to their jobs after a two-week walkout that cut production more than half. The treasury estimated $750 million in oil revenues and bolstered the shah's forces. The end of the strike increased belief that the ruler had weathered the recent serious challenge to his 37-year reign.

The strike leaders agreed to call off the walkout after meeting with officials of the state oil monopoly, the National Iranian Oil Co., company spokesman Nezamuddin Mezeyeni said.

The strikers' committee claimed in a statement that "the shah has pledged to meet our political demands," but there was no confirmation of this. The demands included an end to martial law, declared Sept. 8 amid nationwide turmoil; restoration of civilian government and the release of all political prisoners.

The 59-year-old monarch began freeing political prisoners in August and pledged eventual return to civilian government when he installed an emergency military government last week. But it was believed that he would not carry out his pledge as long as there was likelihood of violence.

The shah also approved a 22.5 percent pay increase for the workers last week.

The oil company reported strikers thronging back to work all over the southwestern Kuzestan oil fields and at the giant refinery complex at Abadan, on the Persian Gulf.

"We expect a 100 percent turnout," Mezeyeni said.

He said production at Abadan, the world's biggest refinery, should return to the pre-strike level of 500,000 barrels a day by midnight. But he said it would take five or six days for production of crude from the oil fields to be brought up to the normal 6 million barrels a day from production Monday of 2.7 million barrels. Well-head output was cut back during the strike and has to be phased back slowly to avoid damaging equipment.

Iran is the world's second biggest exporter of oil, after Saudi Arabia. Half a million barrels a day is used domestically.

New find may double current reserves

Mexico premier oil producer?

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Reports of new oil discoveries along Mexico's Gulf Coast have increased the prospect that the southern neighbor of the United States will supplant Saudi Arabia as the world's premier producer.

The national oil company, PEMEX, said Monday if the finds along the "Golden Belt" are proven they could increase the country's potential reserves from some 200 billion barrels to more than 300 billion — double the amount of Saudi Arabia's known reserves.

Miguel Tomasini, PEMEX's press chief, said preliminary reports indicate the new field has 110 billion barrels of oil and 40 trillion feet of natural gas. He said the deposits are between Veracruz and Tampico at a depth of 270 to 6,000 feet in an area 75 miles long and 17 miles wide.

He said the field will be developed over 13 years with 30 wells drilled during each of the first four years. He also said about 1,800 miles of roads and railroads will have to be built to handle the oil.

PEMEX President Jose Diaz Serrano, breaking the find Sunday to the Latin American Petrochemical Congress in Cancun, said experts were being called in to confirm the size of the discovery and help revise estimates of Mexico's reserves.

He also said off-shore exploration is just getting underway along a 1,000-mile stretch between Campeche and Tampico, and that engineers reported there were promising formations in or near recent oil discoveries on land.

Serrano said as a result of the recent discoveries that plans are being made to increase Mexico's daily production from 1.4 million barrels now to 2.2 million barrels by 1982.

Mexico's most recent oil boom began seven years ago when PEMEX engineers started drilling deeper in the Yucatan fields where shallow wells had been producing less and less since they were first sunk in 1938. More deposits were found later farther north around Tampico.

PEMEX had said it was using new means of exploration that required almost monthly reassessments of known and probable reserves.

Only two months ago, Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo said Mexico's potential reserves topped 200 billion barrels and that known reserves were 20 billion. But foreign experts called his estimate of known reserves very conservative and said the figure was closer to 120 billion.

The Petroleum Producers' Association of Japan said in Tokyo today a six-member oil research delegation will leave on a 20-day tour to Mexico, Argentina and Chile Nov. 20 to find out whether Japan can participate in oil development projects in the three nations.

The delegation is to visit Mexico City Nov. 21-26, Buenos Aires Nov. 27-Dec. 1 and Santiago Dec. 2-6. The association consists of 23 Japanese oil developing firms.

Smoking affects heart

DALLAS (AP) — Cigarette smoke seems to dramatically speed the natural deterioration of tiny arteries inside the heart and greatly increase the risk of sudden death, says a Pennsylvania researcher.

Progressive hardening of arteries that feed blood to muscles in the heart may explain why "people who smoke have several times the rate of sudden death — of just falling over dead in the street — than non-smokers," said Dr. Richard Naeve, who heads the pathology department at the Hershey College of Medicine.

"These small arteries in a 40-year-old person who's been smoking for 20 years look like the arteries of a 70-year-old nonsmoker," he told a news conference Monday during an American Heart Association conference here.

Naeve said the small interior arteries are seldom studied but his research indicates they may be far more important than had been suspected.

More than a quarter-million Americans each year are victims of sudden death — a heart attack that comes without warning and kills within moments, according to the heart association. Although there are other possibilities, the stiffening of arteries inside the heart "is certainly an attractive (potential) explanation for some sudden deaths," Naeve said.

He said a six-year laboratory study of hearts removed from more than 200 human bodies shows the degeneration continues throughout life and may be part of the natural aging process. He said the problem is virtually impossible to diagnose before the damage is done and, in any event, "it's probably an irreversible change."

Naeve said most research has concerned the major arteries outside the heart and their role in heart attacks is well-documented. The much smaller interior arteries have been mostly ignored, he said, because they are extremely difficult to study.

"This disease inside the wall of the heart," he said, "is completely different from diseases in the major arteries outside the heart."

The small arteries fuel muscles that drive the heart, causing it to pump blood rhythmically throughout the body. They also supply oxygen to a series of fibers that carry electrical impulses to govern heart beat.

If the fibers are deprived of blood and the oxygen it contains, they begin to die. Then "you get an abnormal rhythm and you get sudden death," Naeve said.

He said stiffened arteries lose their ability to transmit blood when faced with even a small, momentary drop in blood pressure.

"What smoking does is damage these particular arteries and make their walls stiff," he said. "So when a pulse of blood comes down, the vessel can't expand (to ease its passage). That would happen in old age anyway, but it happens twice as fast in smokers."

Dallas group to conduct study

By JOHN PRICE
Pampa News Staff

The Dallas-based engineering firm of Henningson, Durham & Richardson, Inc. of Texas (HDR) was selected this morning by the city commission to conduct a traffic engineering study in Pampa.

The study, which is estimated to cost approximately $30,000, will be funded by the state through the Office of Traffic Safety.

HDR executives Robert Hogan, Frank Rasor and Roger Powell appeared before the commission and gave a 15-minute slide presentation, after which City Manager Mack Wofford recommended that HDR be chosen for the study. A total of three firms had expressed interest in the project.

"We're looking to January for funding" for the study, Wofford said. "We've been assured funds will be available to meet incremental costs, if necessary."

Powell will be the project manager.

Bill Hulsey, seeking water service for buildings he owns in an unplatted area east of the city, was told by the commission to "go through the regular channels" and take his request to the City Planning and Zoning Commission.

Hulsey said he needs the water service before he can rent the buildings as low-to-middle-income housing. His attorney, Ken Fields, pointed to a housing shortage in Pampa and said it would be in the best interest of the city to provide Hulsey with water.

Wofford said he wrote Hulsey in 1974, informing him that city utilities couldn't be extended to unplatted areas. "To my knowledge no action was taken after that," Wofford said. "No plat was submitted."

"I think Mr. Hulsey should plat his property, submit it to the planning and zoning commission and have them make a recommendation to us," said Mayor R. D. Wilkerson.

The commission also referred to the planning and zoning commission a request by Mrs. Rosa B. Fields that property west of the city be annexed and zoned industrial.

The property, divided into 310-foot-deep lots, is located west of Price Rd., south of Kentucky Ave. and east of the city water treatment plant. Wilkerson said if the property is annexed, a new fire station might be necessary.

Bids on commercial solid waste collection boxes and three vehicles for the City Utilities Department were received by the commission this morning.

Brillhart Body Container Inc. of Cleburn submitted a total bid of $7,736.90 on the containers, while Duncan Equipment Inc. of Arlington bid $8,937 and Scott & Hill Steel Corp. of Bartersville, Okla. bid $8,316.

Culbertson-Stowers Chevrolet Inc. bid $23,026.27 on the vehicles, while Harold Barrett Ford bid $26,271.65.

The commission approved payment of $8,988.28 for water and sewer construction in Davis Place, Unit 1, and a $2,282.08 engineering fee to Merriman & Barber consulting engineers.

Dedication of a street extension and alley from the First Christian Church were accepted by the commission. The 566-foot alley is located on the west side of the church.

Consumers face price hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumers can expect retail food prices to rise at least 6 percent next year and maybe by as much as 10 percent if farmers get bad weather and inflation worsens, the Agriculture Department said today.

J. Dawson Ahalt, head of the department's outlook board, said it "seems most likely" food prices will go up "somewhere between the two extremes" in 1979.

Food prices have risen about 10 percent this year, the steepest climb since 1974, when they shot up 14.5 percent. They were up about 6.3 percent last year.

Ahalt also said farmers' net incomes this year will be around $26 billion, up about 30 percent from $20.1 billion in 1977 which was the highest in four years. Another record year for exports of farm commodities, a mainstay of farm income, is in prospect, he said.

Despite rising expenses, Ahalt said farmers' net income next year may equal this year's level.

Ahalt's food price forecast was included in a speech prepared for the annual World Food and Agricultural Outlook Conference which opened Monday.

At a similar conference a year ago, the department forecast that 1978 food prices would go up an average of 4 percent to 6 percent, about half the actual rise of some 10 percent.

President Carter predicted last week that food prices will not go up as fast next year and will be "much more stable than in the past."

Earlier this fall, the department's senior economist, Howard W. Hjort, said retail food prices in 1979 probably will be up 6 percent just from general inflation and higher costs of middlemen, and could go up as much as 11 percent if farmers have bad weather.

Ahalt also noted the uncertainties of weather and its impact on global and U.S. food supplies and prices. He also attributed part of the 1978 increase to less beef and the general inflation spiral.

"Increases in food prices at retail this year were concentrated primarily in the first half of 1978," Ahalt said. "The advances stemmed mainly from reduced beef supplies and strong consumer demand."

"Additionally, prices were pushed up by higher processing and marketing costs and excess rains in California that damaged fresh produce early in the year," he said.

After cutting herds sharply to counter low market prices, beef production has dropped this year and prices have risen.

Ahalt said total beef output is about 4 percent less than in 1977 and that a 5 percent decline is in the offing for 1979.

In Chicago, Charles E. Ball, executive vice president of the Texas Cattle Feeders Association, told the American Meat Institute convention Monday that rising beef prices "possibly" will lead to another consumer beef boycott and "probably" result in beef price controls within two years.

Ball said it will be 1980 or 1981 before cattle growers can replenish their herds enough to increase the number of cattle available for slaughter.

Verdict may inspire protests

BUFFALO, Minn. (AP) — Folksinger Dean Reed, one of 19 power line opponents acquitted of trespassing in a case that became an international affair, says the verdict will inspire others to protest social injustice.

"I think this was a very important verdict because of the international support we received here," said 40-year-old Reed. "Others will gain inspiration from what happened in this courtroom."

The six-member Wright County jury deliberated for nearly seven hours before acquitting Reed and 18 others late Monday of criminal trespass in an Oct. 29 protest at the Delano, Minn. terminal of a 427-mile power line from North Dakota to central Minnesota.

The case gained international attention when Tass, the Soviet news agency, began covering the trial. In a counterattack on President Carter's human rights campaign, the news agency said Reed's only offense was his "active struggle" in defending the rights of political prisoners in the United States.

In a dispatch today reporting the verdict, Tass said: "The victory attained over American reaction will be a profound stimulus for many people in the United States to come out ever more resolutely for their rights, against oppression and lawlessness."

Reed, who now lives in Studio City, Calif., is popular in Soviet bloc nations, where he often performs.

After the trial, the folksinger said he joined the power line protest "to draw attention to the great problems of political prisoners in the United States."

"I don't believe President

Jimmy Carter can talk about human rights being violated by other countries while at the same time turning his back on men like American Indian Movement leader Russell Means," said Reed. The Indian activist is serving a prison term in South Dakota.

The packed courtroom erupted with cheers after the verdicts were read, and Reed and the other defendants embraced.

Defendants said the acquittals will give the power line protest new impetus and draw support to their cause.

"This is a tremendous victory for the opposition to the power line," said Kathleen Randall, 25, of Minneapolis. "We grow. We get ever stronger. We'll be there every step of the way supporting the farmers."

The power line, which many farmers said invaded their property rights, was completed in September despite nearly three years of protests and vandalism, but will not be operational until spring. It was built by two power cooperatives for rural electric cooperatives in Minnesota.

Good afternoon

News in brief

The forecast for Pampa and vicinity calls for early morning fog becoming cloudy with light rain this afternoon. There is a chance of snow for today and Wednesday. It will be colder through Wednesday with the high today in the 50s, the low tonight in the 20s and the high on Wednesday in the 40s. The winds will be out of the northeast at 10-15 miles per hour today and tonight.

Grand jury to convene

The 223rd District grand jury will convene Wednesday morning at 9:00 in the Gray County Courthouse to begin hearings on 155 pending cases.

The cases include burglary, possession of controlled substances, criminal mischief, forgery.

Pampa to receive state funds

The Pampa Police Department is receiving approximately $1,500 from the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission to upgrade and update its radio system.

The funds are part of a $14,882 state criminal justice grant channeled through the PRC for law enforcement radio equipment in Armstrong, Donley and Hartley county sheriffs' departments, and police in Amarillo, Pampa, Tulia, Gruver, West Texas State University and Texas State Technical Institute.

The grant constitutes roughly 75 percent of the cost of upgrading the system. The city paid for the remaining 25 percent last spring.

Police Chief Richard Mills said the department has already made some improvements in the system but is waiting for the state funds to begin total implementation.

Dollar fluctuates on market

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fluctuated on European money markets today and the gold price was higher. In London it took $1.9660 to buy a British pound, compared to $1.9667 Monday.

Poor Ol' Clyde, he just up and died

They killed ol' Clyde, sure as shooting, in the name of endowing humanity, or to be specific, because they were encouraged to do so by a handout from your broke uncle who thinks his name is Got Plenty To Spread Among The Mighty, The Common Man and The Unwashed.

It stuck us that poor ol' Clyde didn't have to go the way he did, far from home, out there on that lonesome road that summer day.

But then ol' Clyde was never one to speak out. Seems, maybe, it was his lot in life, anyway, just to plug along. He never voted Democratic nor did he ever vote Republican. Ol' Clyde was one to pull his load through life with nary a thought about his civil rights, if he ever had any, and it probably never occurred to him to let a teammate or George, or whoever, do any of his share.

So it was, indeed, sad to hear that Ol' Clyde is now dead and gone and he went because somebody thought the show had to go on.

We're telling you about Ol' Clyde here, for the show that had to go on was really "your" show or "our" show for you and we paid for it. And Ol' Clyde laid down his life out there on that lonesome road, his passing being funded by your money.

Just thinking of Ol' Clyde and his going has left us all choked up, and we just can't bring ourselves to say hardly another word about this — this — This disgraceful thing. So, instead, we'll just let the Chattanooga News - Free Press tell you the rest of the story:

"Did you pay $2,600 in federal income tax this year? Then young D. Baum appreciates it because he had a delightful summer at your expense. Mr. Baum, a 22-year-old senior at Hampshire College in Massachusetts, 'made formal his dream of becoming a gypsy entertainer' by winning a $2,600 grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities for the express purpose of staging a 'medicine show.' Young Baum and two girls he recruited ventured out from York, Pa., in a wagon drawn by a horse named Clyde to perform an old-time medicine show in the Pennsylvania countryside 'in return for room and board.' The only hitch in the excursion came when poor Clyde refused to pull the wagon any further and died five miles from the nearest town. If your federal officials keep handing out our hard-earned tax money for many more summer 'medicine shows,' we taxpayers will no longer be able to 'pull the wagon' and will be finished off just like Clyde the horse."

For ol' Clyde's sake, and in his memory, let us now bow our heads for a moment of silent meditation, and then, let us all read this account again, from the very beginning. Then, let's not be silent anymore. Let's speak out, angrily, firmly for Ol' Clyde who never really revolted against pulling an unnecessary load. He just died.

Colonialism in high seas?

By MARTHA ANGLE and ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) — To the uninitiated, the crumbly black nodules that lie on the floor of the world's oceans appear to lack any aesthetic, social or commercial value.

Their color, size and shape give the dull rocks the appearance of burnt potatoes. Retrieval is highly complex and expensive because they are found only at the darkest, coldest ocean depths, usually two to four miles below the surface.

But billions of dollars will be spent in the coming decades to recover those nodules because they represent one of the few remaining untouched mineral treasures on the face of the earth.

A typical nodule is composed of 24 percent manganese, 14 percent percent iron, 9 percent silicon and 3 percent aluminum, with lesser amounts of almost two dozen valuable ores such as copper, zinc, cobalt and nickel.

Because intense exploration has been under way only since the 1960s, information about the prevalence of the undersea nodules remains imprecise and sometimes contradictory.

One estimate places the quantity in all the world's oceans at 15 trillion tons, but according to another estimate that amount is available in the Pacific Ocean alone.

Unlike many land-based resources that are being rapidly depleted, the nodules are believed to be growing at a rate of 16 million tons each year. Assuming the technology needed to harvest the undersea treasure can be developed, the seabed resource is truly a bonanza.

But who owns it? For centuries, the world's nations have generally accepted one basic theory of legal rights on the high seas: the ocean and its seabed belong to all countries collectively but to no one country individually.

That concept was reaffirmed in 1970, when the United Nations General Assembly approved, without a dissenting vote a statement of principle that said:

"The seabed and the ocean floor, and the subsoil thereof, beyond the limits of national jurisdiction... as well as the resources of the area, are the common heritage of mankind."

Implementation of that high ideal, however, has thus far eluded delegates to the United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea, which since 1958 has convened no less than nine times in New York, Geneva and Caracas.

The issue of rights to mine undersea resources has emerged as a classic North-South confrontation, pitting the highly industrialized nations of the Northern Hemisphere against the lesser developed countries of the Southern Hemisphere.

At the close of a mid-1977 session of the UN conference, some leaders of the latter groups secretly and unilaterally revised a crucial draft document, angering United States Ambassador Elliot L. Richardson, President Carter's special representative to the conference.

With the approval of the White House, Richardson went to Capitol Hill to announce that although this country still embraced the "common heritage of mankind" concept, "the United States (also) maintains that the right to engage in seabed mining is a legal freedom of the high seas."

In the ensuing year, six congressional committees approved unprecedented — and unwarranted — legislation authorizing the federal government to grant licenses to corporations that would, in effect, give them proprietary rights to the international seabed.

The measure was passed by the House during the summer and its proponents tried, but fortunately failed, to ram it through the Senate in the closing days of the 95th Congress.

The Carter administration claims the new law is needed to provide Richardson with additional leverage in the UN negotiations, but that approach also represents a crude neo-colonial effort to grab international territory to which this country has no lawful right.

"Exploration of the deep seabed by United States corporations... is by far the most extreme unilateral position we have taken short of war," says Rep. David F. Emery, R-Maine. "No other country has ever attempted such a venture into international waters."

Today in history

By The Associated Press — Today is Tuesday, Nov. 14, the 318th day of 1978. There are 47 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1935, President Franklin Roosevelt proclaimed the Philippine Islands a commonwealth and pledged full independence by 1946.

On this date: In 1775, American troops commanded by Benedict Arnold invaded Canada's Quebec Province.

In 1856, James Buchanan was elected the 15th president of the United States.

In 1881, the accused assassin of President James Garfield, Charles Guiteau, was put on trial in Washington. He was convicted and hanged the following year.

In 1942, air ace Eddie Rickenbacker and seven other Americans were rescued from a life raft, 23 days after their plane went down in the Pacific.

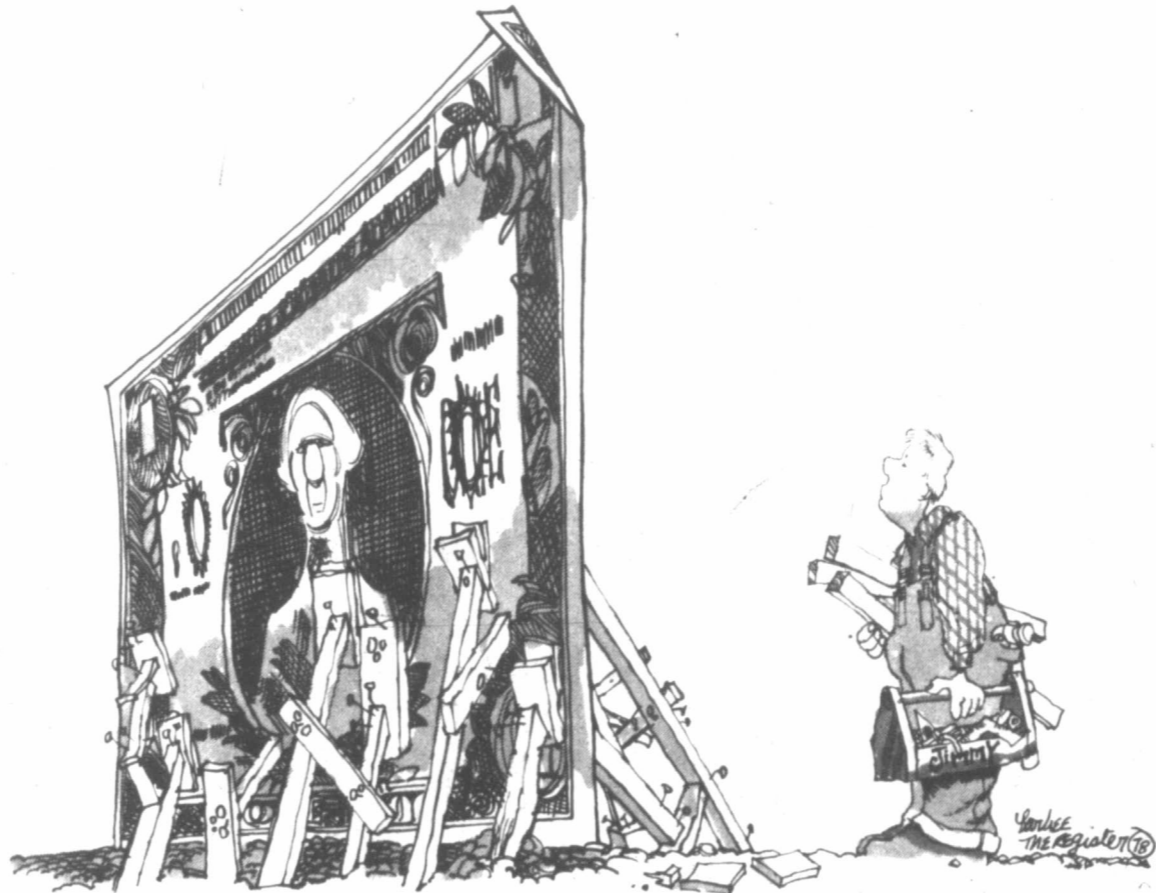

In 1970, a wind storm and giant waves were devastating the southern coast and islands of East Pakistan, and the death toll was estimated at 300,000.

In 1975, Spain, Morocco and Mauritania reached an agreement on the future of the Spanish Sahara.

Ten years ago: A general strike, student disorders and explosions spread chaos across Italy.

Five years ago: Britain's Princess Anne was married in London's Westminster Abbey to a commoner, Capt. Mark Phillips.

Thought for today: Culture is one thing, and varnish another — Ralph Waldo Emerson, American writer, 1803-1882.

Skyjack counterattack

This column coined the word "skyjack," which is now in the dictionary, when a personal friend was the first victim in June 1960.

Capt. Oscar Cleal, Pacific Airlines pilot, resisted an attempt to take over his airliner and was shot through the head.

He survived but was left totally sightless. Gallantly he continues to pursue a career as an investment counselor.

It was not until 1973 that the electronic screening process was instituted for airline passenger safety.

It has accomplished its purpose. It's a shame that every airline passenger has to be inconvenienced by electronic surveillance of his luggage and his person, yet the surveillance has intercepted 16,000 firearms and resulted in the arrests of more than 5,000 people.

Before the scanners were installed our country was averaging a skyjacking attempt every 12 days and a successful one every 20 days.

But in all the years since there has been only one successful skyjacking in the United States and that was carried out with fake weapons.

Overseas, where screening of passengers and luggage is poorly done or not at all, there continues to be a problem.

During the first half of this year there were 14 attempts at air piracy; 11 of the 14 involved foreign planes.

And in all cases where a weapon was used it was smuggled aboard in a foreign airport.

Of the three attempts in the United States, none involved the use of weapons and none was successful.

Our FAA is properly proud of its security record and is understandably resentful of the manner in which most foreign governments ignore their responsibility.

There are exceptions.

Ben Gurion Airport in Tel Aviv is heavily guarded and passengers are closely scrutinized. The same is true in Switzerland and West Germany.

In Ethiopia some planes have armed guards aboard who shoot first and ask questions afterward.

Military dictatorships in South America refuse to bargain with skyjackers, ransoms are not paid, negotiation is likely to consist of an immediate airport shootout.

But there are many countries — and to identify them might render them more vulnerable — where there are only occasional spot checks for security purposes or none at all.

Meanwhile, in the United States, our commendable safety record stands despite an all-time record volume of air travel.

Electronic surveillance is a lot of cost and inconvenience to a lot of people — because of an irresponsible few you could probably count on your fingers.

Price hikes ahead on electronic products

Are you planning to buy a color TV as a Christmas gift later this month or next? Or possibly audio equipment?

If so, don't delay. Right now may be your best time to buy — for prices of color TV sets and other electronic products from the home entertainment industry are heading up.

The price increases in TV sets may be as much as 20 percent by yearend or in '79 and the hikes in other electronic products may reach 10 to 15 percent.

To compound the problem, there even could be some model shortages by Christmas.

"We haven't yet felt the real impact of the U.S. dollar's drop in value against the Japanese yen in the rising prices the consumer pays for such products as TV and tape recorders," says Warren Hyman, board chairman of Newmark & Lewis, Inc., a leading appliance chain headquartered in New York, and one of the largest retailers of home entertainment equipment in the nation. "The price escalation is very likely to continue well into 1979."

Manufacturers have posted modest price increases so far in 1978. This past summer, for instance, RCA lifted the wholesale price on TV sets by an average 1.5 percent and suggested a $10 to $50 increase at the retail level — the first industry-wide price boost since '74. Also this past summer, Panasonic, headquartered in Japan, raised prices an average of just over 5 percent. In September, Sony followed with price increases of 2 to 4 percent on color TV, radio and tape recorders.

The dollar's wild retreat against the yen has been only one factor. Another has been the brisk sale of home entertainment equipment across the country and the resulting drain on inventories.

In addition, a Japanese agreement to curtail shipments to the U.S. and thus relieve some of the strain on our balance of trade, has helped fuel price hikes. Last year, Washington and Tokyo negotiated a pact limiting TV and audio U.S. imports to a formula establishing a quota based on earlier Japanese exports to the U.S.

The quotas, along with self-imposed import limits established by the American industry, cannot help but put a floor under prices to consumers.

Imports are restricted to ease the dollar drain; shortages of well-made, cheaper foreign electronic products inevitably develop; prices are bid up.

We, America's consumers, are always the ultimate victims as far as our costs are concerned. In an earlier column, I reported details on a similar dilemma in the furniture industry, in which price increases are the result of our efforts to prop the dollar by exporting more timber.

As Europeans and Japanese use their relatively "hard" marks and yen to invest in additional board feet of U.S. timber, the result is a sapping of supply, and higher prices to furniture manufacturers — which are being passed on to you and me.

The squeeze on American home entertainment manufacturers was dramatized recently when Admiral announced it was dropping out of the TV market. The parent company, Rockwell-International Corp., said its subsidiary would concentrate on the manufacture of refrigerator appliances for the consumer.

An estimated 11 million TV sets will have been sold in the U.S. by the time 1978 ends, up 14 percent over last year. The upsurge in sales of color TV has been virtually perpendicular.

When color TV sets were introduced in 1954, initial costs were around $1,000. But efficiencies in domestic manufacture plus the establishment of overseas facilities with cheaper labor have pushed down the costs of color TV to the $575 range today.

Now with fewer manufacturers on the American scene and with the bruised U.S. dollar paying more for all imports — including Japanese-manufactured electronic products — it's not difficult to foresee price increases for color TV and the rest.

Sylvia Porter

No one even suggests price increases to anywhere near the initial $1,000 level! But the warnings of informed appliance makers and retailers warrant at least your attention — and you have everything to gain, nothing to lose.

If you know you'll be in the market as a buyer in the near future, if you know you'll be hunting for bargains, start looking now!

The renters' backlash

(Wall Street Journal)

The aftershocks of Proposition 13 have revived the faltering drive for rent controls in California. The general antibureaucratic tide on the Jarvis-Gann voting day helped swamp local rent control initiatives in Santa Monica and Santa Barbara. But now the outcry for rent rollbacks stretches across the state. Los Angeles has already passed a temporary rent rollback ordinance, and a statewide rollback will be a hot issue in the next legislature.

This sudden reversal shows how the post-Jarvis ferment is bubbling over to the left as well as the right. Rent controls don't work; in fact, they are one of the worst things a city can do to itself, but the California voter is in no mood right now for lectures in traditional economics.

Seasoned politicians tell us the push for rollbacks comes from renters who don't want to be left out of the tremendous tax break going to property owners. The statement rings true as far as it goes, but we suspect more is involved. The voters had a once-in-a-lifetime chance in Proposition 13 to take matters into their own hands, and they are extremely edgy about attempts from any quarter to regain control. The landlords were unlucky enough to appear to be the first groups to be flouting the popular will.

The campaign against Proposition 13 made a big thing of Howard Jarvis's work for the Apartment House Association of Los Angeles County and the fact that landlords and business pay two-thirds of the property taxes he wanted to cut. So the pro-Jarvis people pledged to get landlords to pass on their tax savings to tenants. In an attempt to avert mandatory controls, Mr.

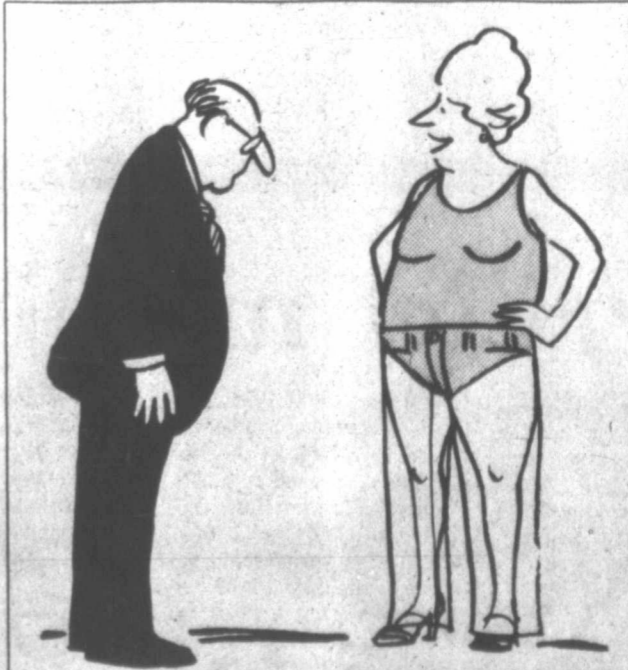

Jarvis even appeared at a Jerry Brown press conference to jawbone apartment house owners. When many marginal owners didn't, or couldn't comply, the public felt betrayed.

In this atmosphere, it doesn't matter that the landlords were simply responding to economic laws. The tax breaks from Jarvis were more than counterbalanced by pressure by higher rents, including a very tight rental market and the marginal economic health of smaller apartment buildings. Mortgage officers in Los Angeles report that many of the buildings with fewer than 40 units have had zero or negative cash flows. Far from repealing these pressures, the city council's rent freeze will harden and preserve them.

In that case, Los Angeles, San Francisco and the like will learn the rent control lesson the hard way. Construction will plummet, buildings will decay, and the true upward pressure on rents will only intensify. As New York City has amply shown, rent controls squeeze off the flow of capital to rental housing. Marginal landlords cut corners on maintenance, fall behind on their taxes and finally walk away from the buildings. California will be facing an upsurge of abandonments, and the rental market will stay as tight as ever.

But by that time, anyone who could conceivably buy his own home will have done so. There will be a glaring contrast between the prosperous market in private homes and the contorted, decaying market in rental housing. Unfortunately, the main victims of this object lesson will be the low-income city renters, the very people these rent controls are presumably meant to help.

Burglary business booming

By JOHN PRICE
Pampa News Staff

Pampa's burglary business has been well publicized. Unfortunately the city's burglary business is also quite healthy.

Burglary ranked as the second most common felonious crime in Pampa and Gray County in 1977. The number of reported burglaries was exceeded only by the number of reported larcenies.

According to the 1977 Department of Public Safety Crime Report, there were 225 burglaries reported in Gray County last year. Most of them, 202, occurred in Pampa.

Burglary is virtually impossible to prevent — if a burglar really wants to get inside someone's home, he can probably do it — but there are a number of simple, inexpensive things you can do to reduce the chances that a burglar will pick your home as his target.

Good locks, such as a deadbolt lock that must be operated with a key, are burglar deterrents. A door that locks when it is slammed is no problem for a burglar; he can open it easily with a piece of plastic or some other simple device. A good quality lock that will resist picking and force is necessary, and even that is worthless if it is not used.

Windows may be locked with key locks built into the bottom window bar or with nails fastening windows together. Sliding glass doors may be secured with a slide lock or by putting an object—a steel rod, a nail or a piece of wood—in the door channel.

Keys shouldn't be left under a doormat, in the mailbox, or in a coat pocket when the coat is checked or hung up in a public place. Car keys and home keys should be kept on separate rings, and home keys should not be given to a parking attendant.

Make windows — be burglars think you're at home when you're not. Leave lights on while you're away, and turn on a television or radio. If you're going to be gone several days or longer, get an inexpensive timer that turns a light on and off at designated times.

Outside lights are also a good idea. They remove the thief's cover of darkness.

Don't allow mail, newspapers and milk bottles to accumulate while you're gone. Stop delivery beforehand or ask a neighbor to take these things in daily. Don't leave notes on the door or elsewhere saying you'll be gone until a certain time.

Keep the garage door closed and locked when there's no car in the garage. In summer, arrange to have the lawn mowed regularly; in winter, have snow shoveled off the walks and driveway.

Don't advertise your absence by putting a vacation notice in the newspaper; wait until the trip is over.

Be wary of strange telephone calls aimed at finding out when you won't be home. Don't let a stranger inside unless he can show identification indicating he has a legitimate reason to be there. If in doubt, call the person's employer.

People wishing to fortify their homes or businesses against intruders may ask the Pampa Police Department for a free security check. Police will inspect and then suggest any changes they feel would add to building security.

The local police department provides two other services that can help either deter or catch a burglar. Operation Identification, a nationwide program, has been in existence in Pampa for about four years.

Persons involved with Operation Identification may mark their property with an engraving pen available free from the police department. They are given decals to display on their doors or windows, stating that all valuable property inside has been marked. Marking property makes stolen items harder to sell and increases the chances of retrieving stolen property, while the decals discourage would-be burglars.

If requested, Police will also provide special surveillance of your home while you're away. An officer will stop by at least once daily and check all doors and windows.

Homeowners and renters may also insure against theft. A typical homeowners policy provides basic economic security against burglary, insuring the policyholder by up to 50 percent of the policy amount. (If your home is insured for $30,000, you have $15,000 in protection on the contents of your home, whether from burglary or another loss. If you rent, your burglary protection is the full amount stated in the policy.)

If you become a burglary victim you should immediately notify police, giving them the serial numbers or other identification numbers of stolen items.

You should then notify your insurance company.

Finally, a word to those who may read this and say, "Not me." Don't think that living in a certain neighborhood will make you immune to theft; burglaries occur in all parts of Pampa. As Police Chief Richard Mills noted, "One thing about our burglars — they're equal opportunity."

George Bernard Shaw won the Nobel Prize for literature in 1925.

Britain's "Vice-President"
Charles Philip Arthur George Mountbatten-Windsor, better known to most of the world as Prince Charles, turns 30 years old today. Shown here with a friend during parachute training last April, Charles is in no hurry to succeed his mother, Queen Elizabeth II, to the British throne. Instead, he currently acts as Britain's unofficial "vice-president," working from an office in Buckingham Palace, and traveling on good-will missions to other countries. A jet pilot, scuba diver, polo player and cellist, as well as Britain's next king, Charles has displayed a saving sense of humor. Once, after a horse threw him, he remarked, "That was excellent practice for parachuting."

Pampan's probation revoked

In a decision handed down in Austin on November 8, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals upheld the probation revocation of Kris Ward Kelly. Kelly had appealed the order on grounds of insanity but the court upheld the revocation, stating that testimony in defense of the appellant "was very generalized and not compelling to show a condition of insanity under Section 8.01 of the Texas Penal Code."

Kelly plead guilty to burglary in April of 1977 and was sentenced to ten years in prison. The sentence was suspended and probation granted. Kelly's probation was revoked on November 17 after he was arrested for driving while intoxicated.

The court ruling stated that a defendant entering a plea of insanity must present some evidence to indicate that he suffered from a mental disease or defect as a result of which he either would not know his conduct was wrong or would be incapable of obeying the law. Kelly remains free on $25,000 appeal bond, pending serving of a mandate for his arrest.

According to District Attorney Howard Comer, the mandate should be served within the week.

Officers graduate
Two members of the Pampa Police Department graduated from the Panhandle Regional Police Academy in Amarillo Friday.

S.R. Belt served as president of the police class, and P.L. Parker served as vice president and class valedictorian. Both officers have been assigned to the Pampa department's patrol division.

Final report notable for what it left out

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The final report of the House Public Education Committee on its two-session studies is almost as notable for what it leaves out as for what it includes.

The absence of two members prevented action on a "financial accountability" report that sharply criticized the privileges school districts grant the Texas State Teachers Association.

Reps. Jim Nugent, D-Kerrville, and Lee Jackson, R-Dallas, stayed away. Blocking the subcommittee vote that would have placed the report before the full committee Monday.

But Rep. Tom Massey, D-San Angelo, committee chairman, said recommendations in a report drafted for Nugent probably would be embodied in bills introduced in January.

Other reports were approved unanimously, but the harmony would have dissolved at once if the TSTA report had come up. The committee is divided between TSTA backers and those who resent its lobbying and its support of Attorney General

John Hill over Gov. Dolph Briscoe in the Democratic primary last spring.

Massey and Nugent both have criticized the TSTA, and Massey calls it a "union" and agrees with the draft report that it is improper to let teachers use in-service training time to go to TSTA state and regional meetings.

"It (the time lost) costs the state $10 million a year and should be abolished," Massey told reporters.

The report also mentioned check-off of TSTA dues by school district payroll offices, extended leave for teachers who are TSTA officers and the use of school facilities for TSTA communications.

"Certain of the above-cited practices and policies constitute mismanagement of public school funds," the draft report said.

Committee members approved a report recommending a new $15.2 million building for the Texas Education Agency, calling for an end to "cross-consulting" for the agency and for limitation of state funding for adult education to "basics."

"We are not in favor of baton twirling for adults or underwearing basket weaving," said Rep. Hamp Atkinson, D-New Boston, chairman of the oversight subcommittee.

He said cross-consulting involves an agreement by consultants to hire one another "but don't turn out a report." This should be "taboo," he said.

Did Ray fake conspiracy?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Trial lawyer Percy Foreman says James Earl Ray confided in jail that he faked the story of a conspiracy behind the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., and thought the killing would make him "a hero to the white race."

But a jail doctor at the time, Dr. McCarthy DeMere, told the House Assassinations Committee Monday that Ray had said, "I wasn't in it by myself."

The committee was turning today to a Memphis woman's story that she saw the assassin flee after shooting King in Memphis April 4, 1968 — but that he wasn't Ray.

The witness, Grace Walden Stephens, was accompanied to Washington by author-attorney Mark Lane, who contends Memphis authorities had her committed to a mental institution for 10 years to suppress her story.

Former Memphis District Attorney Phil N. Canale testified Monday that Mrs. Stephens told police the night of the assassination "that she saw nothing."

Mrs. Stephens, 62, said earlier this year that she told police she saw the assassin run down a rooming house hallway but the authorities did not take her seriously.

Defense lawyers begin efforts to show plot

By KEN HERMAN
 Associated Press Writer
 EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — Defense lawyers for indicted South Texas prosecutor Oscar McInnis have begun their effort to show that investigators used a felon to entrap McInnis.

The longtime Hidalgo County district attorney has been named in an indictment alleging he planned to have a friend's ex-husband abducted in Mexico and killed.

The pretrial hearing was to continue here today. Several motions are still pending, including a prosecution change of venue request and defense motions regarding evidence.

Much of the state case hinges on tape recordings obtained by concealing a recorder on Daniel Rodriguez — a county jail inmate who claims he went to authorities when McInnis asked him to arrange the slaying of Noe Villanueva.

The defense wants the tapes suppressed on the grounds of entrapment.

As the pretrial hearing began here Monday, defense lawyer Frank Maloney of Austin honed in on conversations Rodriguez had with McInnis before the tape recordings were made in April.

Rodriguez — convicted of federal drug charges and voluntary manslaughter — said McInnis had told him that Villanueva had kidnapped Villanueva's ex-wife's child.

"I just told him the only way we could get rid of Villanueva was to blow his brains out. I just said it jokingly," Rodriguez testified when Maloney asked who first suggested killing Villanueva.

"That didn't mean killing him?" State District Judge Vernon Harville of Corpus Christi asked Rodriguez.

"No sir, I just said it jokingly," the witness replied.

Maloney also tried to show that Rodriguez enjoyed special privileges in the county jail. Rodriguez had been in federal prison in Leavenworth, Kan., serving time for the drug possession conviction when he was returned here late last year to plead to the voluntary manslaughter charge. However, he was never returned to the federal facility.

He said he had asked to remain in the Hidalgo County jail.

"I feared for my life in Leavenworth," Rodriguez said, adding that he had informed on several prisoners at the Kansas prison.

Maloney also attempted to show that Rodriguez and Hidalgo County Sheriff Brig Marmolejo are friends. Rodriguez acknowledged that he has acted as an informant for the sheriff in the county jail.

Rodriguez said he told Marmolejo about McInnis' purported plot because, "I thought Mr. McInnis might have been setting me up."

In an attempt to question Rodriguez's credibility, Maloney called Walter McFarland to the stand. McFarland, agent in charge of the Texas Department of Public Safety narcotics unit, said Rodriguez had a reputation as a liar and a con man.

Special prosecutor Michael Hinton of Houston made no attempt to defend Rodriguez' criminal past.

"If you were going to have a criminal wrong done, you wouldn't go to someone of sterling character," Hinton said.

Earlier Monday, Harville denied a defense motion to quash the indictment on the grounds that the murder was to take place in Mexico. Maloney had successfully offered a similar argument to a federal judge who dismissed federal charges against McInnis in September.

Harville disagreed with Maloney's arguments — saying the defense argument meant that "if A solicits B to solicit C to kill D, then A has committed a crime."

How do they write love letters?

NEW YORK (AP) - Victor Hugo got over 17,000 of them from one person.
 Jane Austen wrote one backwards.
 Thomas Jefferson wrote one on birch bark.
 And French writer-philosopher Voltaire wrote some of his in Italian.
 Letters, specifically letters of love and affection, explains Herbert Cahoon. The curator of autograph manuscripts at the Pierpont Mmcgan Library exhibited some 50 letters he had selected from the library's estimated 100,000-item manuscript collection.
 "Here are two from Juliette Drouet (1806-1883) to Victor Hugo," Cahoon says. "They were lovers. Over a 50 year period she wrote him more than 17,000 letters."
 "This Jane Austen (1775-1817) is among 51 the library has. It was written in 1817 to her niece Cassandra, and I assume she did it backwards to amuse this child of 5 or 6, to give her a game."
 "The Jefferson (1743-1826) was written from Lake Champlain in 1791 and in it the future president tells his daughter, Martha, "I must always repeat how much I love you."
 "These are just a few of the letters of this sort that the library has, says Cahoon, who has spent 25 years with the Morgan. "We have, for example, over 200 by Voltaire (1694-1778) to Madame Denis, his niece. He wrote his love letters to her in Italian, which made good sense in those days. Letters often passed through the hands of servants. But if the servants could read at all they probably could read only French, so Voltaire was making sure they couldn't read his letters."
 Revelations such as this are what makes this sort of letter important, says Cahoon. "The love aspect aside, some of these letters also are of considerable literary and/or historical importance. You always are finding something new and different."
 "In a letter you are getting just about as close to somebody as you can get. It's somewhat like the difference between a first edition of a book and the writer's actual working manuscript. The second puts you much closer to the person."
 Cahoon thinks letter writers of the past "more fully expressed themselves than now. People used to feel that they could unburden themselves in their letters, that they could discuss personal problems."
 "Now, this sort of thing is done on the telephone. The pace of life is faster now and people don't seem to have the time for writing letters, like this one from 1599 in which the unknown writer says, "You have my hart (sic) and shall have ever, change when you will but I will never."
 "I haven't seen many contemporary love letters and in the future people like me probably won't have much to collect. You never know, though. While love letter writing seems to have gone out of style there could be some notable exceptions."
 Cahoon says the museum adds to its collection by buying from dealers and at auction, noting that prices have gone up considerably.
 "This Elizabethan letter (a note by Elizabeth herself at age 14 to Sir Thomas Seymour) certainly would sell in the thousands of dollars."
 Canadian physician John McCrae wrote the famous poem "In Flanders Fields" while he was under fire in World War I.

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Gary and I have been married for a year, during which time he's been a perfect husband. I'm 24 and he's 26.

Last week I learned that Gary had a vasectomy before we were married. He didn't tell me. I found out accidentally when I came across his medical records.

Before we were married he promised me a family. How should this be handled?

WANTS CHILDREN

DEAR WANTS: Unfortunately, your husband's credibility is consistent with his fertility. (Imagine promising you a rose garden when he knew he had no seeds!)

I need more information. Why did Gary have a vasectomy? (If he dislikes children, he'd probably make a poor father.)

Is his vasectomy irreversible? (Some are not.) If his is, and he nows wants a family, there are children to adopt, you know.

This world needs responsible parents more than it needs more children.

DEAR ABBY: While flying from Los Angeles to Chicago recently, I was rudely awakened from a much-needed nap by a booming voice that came over the loudspeaker with: "THIS IS YOUR CAPTAIN SPEAKING! We are now flying over the Grand Canyon..."

Abby, this was not a chartered flight carrying a load of sight-seeing hicks who had never flown before. I'm sure most of the passengers had already seen the Grand Canyon from 39,000 feet.

Be a friend to those of us who fly the friendly skies frequently and print this. It might help.

J.E. IN L.A.

DEAR J.E.: I also fly the friendly skies frequently, and concur. (Captain, oh, captain, are you listening?)

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago a man we employed for many years in our retail business left us to open his own store—in competition with us. No particular ill will was involved, but we were not overjoyed since we had taught him the business from the ground up.

We continue to do well, but this man has done even better because he has a better location.

A friend of ours seems to take a perverse pleasure in constantly pointing out our competitor's ads in the newspaper, and talking endlessly about what a fantastic success he has made in such a short time. We are bewildered and somewhat hurt.

Are we overly sensitive? We feel very uncomfortable having to listen to this subtle form of needling every time we're in this person's company.

Any suggestions?

PHOENIX REPUBLIC READER

DEAR READER: One who makes a habit of bringing up an irritating subject is bad news. The Chinese put it this way: "Never speak of a rope in the home of one whose relative has been hanged."

If I were you, I would demote this "friend" to a nodding acquaintance.

Ask Dr. Lamb

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I would like to ask if beef bone meal with calcium, phosphorus, traces of zinc, potassium, copper, magnesium and manganese is a good medicine to take if the body needs more calcium? The dosage is two tablets per meal, or a total of six tablets per day. And this provides a daily intake of 982 mgs. of calcium and 441 mgs. of phosphorus.

Could these tablets be harmful to one with diverticulosis? They don't dissolve very quickly, and there is a grainy residue quite a while before it all gets soft. How long should these be taken and would there be any side effects?

DEAR READER — I don't have any objections to a person who needs calcium using these. One of the important points in taking calcium is to use substances that contain more calcium than phosphorus, and these do.

Many of our foods contain an equal amount of calcium and phosphorus, or actually more phosphorus than calcium. That's why some of these foods don't help much in preventing bone loss from the skeleton.

I see you'd be getting about one gram of calcium a day and that's a good amount, particularly for an older person who wants to prevent softening of the bones.

You raised a good question about diverticulosis. We are always concerned about anything a person swallows if that person has these little pockets of the colon.

The danger is that something will lodge in them. And there are a number of pills that are prescribed, or that people can purchase for themselves, that don't dissolve very quickly and may, in fact, pass through the entire digestive system without ever dissolving. That also means that some of those pills don't do much good — at least for the person who takes them.

If the pills really don't dissolve very readily, I would suggest grinding them into a powder and putting the pills into a little bit of milk or water and drinking the solution. That would certainly prevent any possibility of small undissolved portions of the pill lodging inside one of the little pockets of the colon.

To give you more information about the diverticulosis that you have, I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-6, Diverticulosis. Other readers who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Address your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have trouble getting my food down. It goes down for a while and can't go into the stomach and comes back up. Is there a cause for this?

DEAR READER — Yes, you have an obstruction of some type. Either in the esophagus (food tube), or at the place where the esophagus joins the stomach. This may be a simple muscle spasm. It can be due to scarring of the lower part of the esophagus or it could even be a malignancy of the esophagus.

Your doctor will have to examine the esophagus and upper stomach area to see what is causing the obstruction itself. I would urge everyone who has such a history to have an immediate medical examination. Only in this way can proper treatment be started.

Polly's pointers

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — To remove ballpoint ink stains, dip a sponge in sour milk or milk and vinegar. Repeat if necessary.

Wrinkled hair ribbons can be easily pressed by rubbing them over a hot electric light bulb.

When your plastic wrap sticks to itself, simply put it in the refrigerator for a while.

Renew the usefulness of that old broom by dipping it in boiling water and baking soda. Then dry it in the sun.

DEAR POLLY — A reader's Pet Peeve concerned having to wait for those who take so long getting on escalators. A person with poor vision has to exercise more caution in doing this and naturally takes more time. All of us may need to slow down a bit and remember some people need more time. — C.K.

DEAR POLLY — I was amazed that no reader sent in the method I use for preventing shrinking pie crust. Preheat the oven to 475 degrees before baking the crust and reduce the heat to 350 while it is baking. — LENORE

Old and new toy creations

SLOTLESS RAVING - features four cars and a new line of racers. The set includes two 'jam' cars, which travel in their own lanes at two-thirds the maximum speed of the driver-operated cars.

NEW YORK (NEA) — Although the most dramatic new trend on 1978 holiday toy counters will be in electronic and outer space-type toys, there will be no shortage of variety. The nation's toymakers again are providing a wide choice ranging from nostalgic to futuristic playthings.

With the number of first-born children increasing, Nordstrom reported that the industry is responding with a "broader range of infant and preschool toys than ever before." This is a particularly sensitive time, especially for first-time parents, and toy manufacturers are keenly aware of the need to provide play value, safety and quality.

Accordingly, the scope of crib, playpen and bath toys has grown apace with the baby population, stated Nordstrom. Christmas morning will find the diaper set busily engaged in all kinds of fun-filled and learning play activities.

The subject of safety doesn't stop with the preschool market, Nordstrom said. He pointed out that parents can be assured all of the holiday season playthings they buy are "better-made and safer," citing that the entire industry is completely committed to continually improving product quality, safety standards and performance.

Since adults have Christmas stockings, too, Nordstrom also called attention to the tremendous surge in "thinking" games, such as backgammon, Scrabble, chess, Othello and Mastermind. The newest strategy game to attract a following is Touche, which Nordstrom predicts will be a "hot ticket" this year.

The growing popularity of board games has led to a new twist in retailing. Formerly the exclusive domain of department stores and toy shops, games are now increasingly sold at bookstores throughout the country.

Familiar faces also will play a leading role during the Christmas toy season. Known in the trade as "licensing," this involves the use of popular figures to enhance the play appeal of all types of playthings. Most famous this year is Mickey Mouse, celebrating his 50th birthday.

According to Nordstrom, the use of a well-known personality on a product serves two purposes: attracting the consumer to the toy in the first place and enhancing the play appeal to the child since "it's like playing with a friend."

This year, those friends will number newcomers such as the "Star Wars" characters, as well as many long-time favorites, including the Sesame Street gang,

Parents talk about death

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — "Unfortunately, parents sometimes treat death like sex — a no-no, not a discussable subject," says a Purdue University family counselor who advises it is healthier to bring the subject into the open.

"Some children never say anything or show signs of grief," says Professor Wallace Denton of the School of Consumer and Family Sciences. "It may be that in some way a child has decided that he can't talk about death. Parents in this situation may initiate the subject and indicate that he can talk about it."

Part of the difficulty, says the director of the Marriage and Family Counseling Center, is that adults haven't sorted out their own feelings about death and thus may evade the subject or gloss over its reality.

Some anxiety about death on the part of children is typical, says Denton, who suggests that a matter-of-fact straightforward treatment of questions is the best approach.

"Initially the child is not filled with the morbidity of death as are adults," he points out. "Don't say things such as 'they have gone to sleep' since it causes fear in the child, who is afraid to go to sleep for fear he might not awaken."

"People who operate out of religious orientation can have some meaningful explanation, such as 'they've gone to Heaven.' However, an explanation such as 'Jesus loved him so much he took him to live with him' should be avoided. A child fears the latter statement, believing that Jesus might want him also."

Denton says that when a close friend or relative dies, a child should be able to be with a person to whom he feels close.

"There's sometimes a temptation to ship children off to a relative's or a friend's house, and sometimes it is advisable," he says. "But this increases the child's anxiety. Generally it is better for the child to remain with the family and be a part of the whole process."

Denton says that a child's major concern, perhaps triggered by the death of a grandparent, is fear of a parent's death and the worry, "Who'll take care of me?" For this reason, a child needs to be with people he feels close to for security and the knowledge that he will be cared for.

It should be remembered, Denton notes, that a child as well as an adult should be able to express grief. Research shows that unexpressed grief has a negative effect.

Her friends were amazed

DALLAS (AP) — In 1966, when Minda Brachman of Dallas paid several hundred dollars to get one of the world's best bridge players to be her partner for a regional tournament in Tulsa, Okla., her friends were amazed and her husband was dumfounded.

"Malcolm didn't encourage me at all. He was totally against it," she said of her decision to pay Jim Jacoby, syndicated bridge columnist and one of the world's foremost bridge players, to play with her.

"But at the time, it helped my game a tremendous amount, in just every way. We won two regional events, which I never really expected to do, but it was after that that my game started to improve."

Today, Mrs. Brachman is considered a near-expert in her own right. So is her husband, the president of an oil company who decided to take on serious bridge after seeing how much enjoyment it brought his wife.

"Many people are totally against it, and a lot of people can't afford to pay a professional to play with them, but it certainly did a lot for us," she said.

"If you play with nobody ever any better than you, your game is going to stagnate. You really have to play with people better than you." Bridge is an unusual game in that, even though there's enormous interest in the game and it has great fascination intellectually, it has not proved popular as a spectator sport.

What has developed, says Jacoby, "is a class of professional bridge players, experts, who teach their clients to play better bridge by playing with them in these tournaments and charging a fee for doing so."

Competitive bridge in the United States is based upon the master point system, where status is awarded based upon finishing high and winning tournaments, which provides incentive for people to play with top players.

The common bond among the top bridge experts, Jacoby says, is not that they pull off impossible coups or intricate plays.

"The secret of becoming a bridge expert is avoiding blunders. The top players simply don't make blunders. They may guess a card wrong or get too high, but as far as playing the cards wrong, they simply don't do it," Jacoby added.

Jacoby, 45, co-authors a bridge column — which appears in 250 newspapers around the world — with his father, Oswald Jacoby, who was one of the first greats of the bridge world. He works as a stockbroker in Dallas through the week, but will compete Nov. 16-26 in the winter national tournament at Denver.

In addition to the three national tournaments each year, Jacoby also participates in the 10 or 12 regional tournaments held each year in Texas and adjoining states and, occasionally, the smaller sectional tournaments held in the Dallas vicinity.

He once taught bridge classes, but hasn't done that in several years.

"I do teach high-level bridge on an individual basis, usually through participation in tournaments," he said. He gives playing and bidding tips to his partners and makes observations about their play.

The dramatic breakthrough, when average players become good players, he said, occurs when they finally learn to determine, through the bidding and play, how many cards the other players have in each suit and which players have the key missing cards.

"You have to try to 'put' cards in your opponents' hands, and to do it requires practice and concentration. You can liken it to athletic competition, when you learn how to hit a tennis ball or swing a golf club. There comes a time in the learning process when what was unnatural and very difficult suddenly becomes fluid and easy," Jacoby said.

Many persons for whom bridge becomes a consuming hobby never achieve that breakthrough, he said, although almost all show steady improvement.

"A player with very little potential will become a reasonably good player after 10 years of bridge as a serious hobby.

Someone who begins with great potential will, in the same period of time, become a top expert."

Bridge players who sit down opposite Jacoby and his partner find it hard to get into the bidding. Jacoby believes in getting to the right contract when the hand "belongs" to him and his partner.

He also believes in "stealing" the contract when the opponents hold the majority of the high cards.

"You'd like to bid to a final contract on every hand," he said.

"When the hand does belong to you and you reach a final contract, you are fighting the battle with a two-edged sword. First in the bidding, where you bid to the right contract, and next in the play, where your superiority as a declarer may net you a very good result," he said.

If the opponents bid to the final contract, Jacoby feels he has only one sharp edge to fight with — his ability to take as many tricks as possible on defense.

In the battle to score as high as possible during a bridge session, which generally lasts about three hours, Jacoby takes risks against some players he wouldn't take against others.

"Expert players have a feel for what kind of opponents can be run over and what kind of opponents you have to tread warily against," he said.

"In fact, I've felt for many years that I could play against a complete stranger and have a fair idea of what kind of player he would be just by the way he sorted his hand. People who pick up their cards with an air of assurance and confidence and have a thoughtful, careful look about them usually tend to be dangerous opponents."

Washington briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) — There will be more federal testing of potentially toxic chemicals being released into the environment under a new government program.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare on Sunday announced the formation of the National Toxicology Program. The program, intended to expand the scope of current testing, will draw its $40 million first year budget from the four HEW agencies already involved in the field: the National Cancer Institute, the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences, the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health and the Food and Drug Administration.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has pledged that the United States will have a military force so strong "that no enemy will ever dare to attack us."

He made his remarks during Veterans Day observances Saturday at Arlington National Cemetery. Carter also said all veterans of the Vietnam War are "unknown soldiers, because their service to our country has not been adequately realized."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Katharine Graham, publisher of The Washington Post, says she is very concerned about the Federal Trade Commission's "general tendencies to push further and further into the realm of information and its marketing."

In remarks to an advertising industry luncheon here Saturday, Mrs. Graham cited FTC action last summer against the Los Angeles Times in which the agency challenged the widespread use of volume discounts in newspaper and other media advertising rates. She said a free society should continue "to entrust a lot of judgments to the marketplace, instead of having them preempted by Congress and the agencies."

'Not just a union'

United Farm Workers-rallying point

By ROGER GILLOTT
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The United Farm Workers, a rallying point for liberals for more than a decade as it fought to unionize California's lush agricultural fields, is now quietly consolidating its victories as it lays a strategy for expanding to other states. "We still feel we are a movement, not just a union," says UFW leader Cesar Chavez. "But we're reevaluating... changing our priorities. We can't live in the late '70s with concepts from the mid-'60s."

In 9½ months since ending a worldwide boycott of California lettuce, table grapes and wines, the union has grown to an estimated 100,000 members, computerized its headquarters, founded a school to train its staff and made major gains in establishing centralized health and pension plans — a breakthrough for migrants who seldom have the same employer for more than a few months.

"We are finishing our work in California," Chavez' chief aide, Marc Grossman, said in a telephone interview from the UFW's headquarters at a converted tuberculosis sanitarium in the Tehachapi Mountains 120 miles north of here in Kern County. "Then — maybe sooner than people think — we will be able to concentrate on other states where we are needed."

The union is currently active in Arizona, Florida, Texas and Washington State. But those efforts have been minor compared to the push in California, where the union three years ago was able to secure passage of the Agricultural Labor Relations Act. That act, which followed more than a decade of turmoil in the fields, for the first time brought rule of law and the ballot box into the struggle between agricultural unions and growers.

Since no other states have a law similar to the ALRA, Grossman said. "It will be a long and difficult struggle elsewhere. We will go, anyway."

For Chavez, one of the toughest problems the union faces is "an attempt by growers to revive a warmed-over bracero program" by using immigration law to bring in foreign workers to pick crops, thereby undercutting UFW organizing efforts.

Nonetheless, the union's leaders hope to repeat the success they've had in California, where the UFW has won more than 76 percent of its union representation elections — far higher than the 46 percent average for other unions in the nation. This year, an estimated 100,000 persons are working under UFW contracts. Grossman says. Wages for UFW-covered farmhands have risen 124 percent since 1970 — from $1.65 an hour to $3.70 an hour. "The percentage sounds nice, but the wages are hardly inflationary," he says.

The union's work is carried out by a fulltime staff of 90 persons, who still — as when the Chavez founded his farm workers union in 1962 — receive only $10 a week plus lodging and food for themselves and their families.

In particular, Chavez is proud of union's centralized health and pension plans, which for the first time give regular coverage to migrant farmhands regardless of how frequently they move between jobs. In the past, few migrants became vested in such plans because they did not stay with any employer long enough.

"There is no other plan like it in the country," Chavez said.

The union's next big test comes in December and January, when the UFW will have to renegotiate contracts covering 20,000 workers for 66 vegetable growers from California's Salinas Valley to Arizona.

"It's too early to tell what will happen... It's up to the growers," Chavez says.

At least one grower has tried to decertify the UFW as his workers' bargaining agent. But an official of the state's Agricultural Labor Relations Board said he expects few similar attempts will be made as the contracts come up for renegotiation.

"It just wouldn't make any sense to try to decertify the union in most cases because its victories have been by overwhelming margins," said ALRB spokesman Bill Camp.

Salesmen selling 'lemons'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Used car salesmen sell so many "lemons" that the government should require them to tell buyers about defects, a Federal Trade Commission staff report said today.

The 564-page report, summarizing five years of investigation and hearings, said the sale of unsound cars is "a major consumer abuse... affecting the basic safety or utility of the most expensive item many consumers will ever buy."

Typically, used cars are sold with an oral promise to make any necessary repairs after the sale, but with a written disclaimer that the sales are "as is," the FTC staff said.

Later a salesman often refuses to make repairs and the customer suffers "insurmountable difficulties in proving the oral promises," the report said.

The staff proposed that used car dealers be required to inspect the cars they sell and to disclose what they find in forms posted on vehicle windows. A car's brakes, steering, engine and transmission would be described in writing as "OK" or "Not OK."

For those items marked "Not OK," a written estimate of repair costs would be required.

The rule would not mean the defects would have to be repaired, only that they be disclosed in writing. One goal of the proposed regulation would be easing the task of consumers trying to prove they had been lied to.

The staff also proposed that dealers be required to state whether a car's odometer had been set back.

The proposed regulation, which requires the approval of the five-member commission before it could take effect, would not apply to sales by private individuals.

Industry associations opposed the proposal, as they did at earlier staff hearings into used car sales.

Robert P. Mallon, president of the National Automotive Dealers Association, said used car prices would jump an average $200 under the regulation.

He said the inspection requirement "will drive costs up for dealers, which will be passed along to buyers."

He also charged the FTC will exceed its authority if it approves the proposal. This subject may be the basis for a future challenge in court by the NADA, which represents 21,000 new-car dealers, most of which also sell used cars.

Avocado trees have occasionally collapsed under the weight of their own fruit.

GOOD FIGHTER
CRANSTON, R.I. (AP) — When Jason Pisano's parents want to buy him a gift they tend to stay away from the ordinary.

For Jason, a 6-year-old cerebral palsy victim, a real cool present would be a sweat suit, a Muhammad Ali T-shirt, a pair of boxing gloves and the like.

Jason is an avid boxing fan whose bedroom looks like a gymnasium. On one side of the room hangs his green satin boxing robe with his "ring name," Jumpin' Joe Jason, written on the back. On the opposite side, his boxing gloves hang on the walls, just above punching bags, weights and an exercise mat.

He has acquired the knack of boxing with his feet. He is learning how to swim, and he plays baseball by holding the bat with his knees.

His mother says Jason hopes to have some kind of sports career, if not as an athlete then as a trainer.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Unitarian Church of All Souls was a "Churches' church for a while," as Sen. Frank Church, watched his son installed as the congregation's minister and his first grandson christened.

F. Forrester Church, the Idaho senator's 30-year-old son, on Sunday promised to make a "prophetic pulpit" as the ninth minister in the history of the 159-year-old church in Manhattan.

Earlier in the day, the minister's 7-week-old son, Frank Forrester Church V, was christened.

RENO Nev. (AP) — Billy Martin, the fiery former manager of the New York Yankees, has been named in an assault and battery complaint.

Sports reporter Ray Hafar of the Reno Evening Gazette and the Nevada State Journal filed the misdemeanor complaint Saturday after an incident Friday that left him with a bruised eye and chipped teeth.

Martin, who said he didn't plan to file charges, told the Gazette-Journal Saturday that Hafar "stuck his chest out. He said he could whip me. I thought he was going to throw a punch at me before I hit him."

But Hafar, 25, said: "I didn't challenge him to a fight. I was just trying to stand up to him when he tried to take away my notes."

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Evert said her four-month break from professional tennis was "a long dark period in my life."

Ms. Evert says in an interview with People magazine that she had been "crying two or three times a day for no reason. I didn't know why... I had to take time off." She said that winning all the time may have caused her problem. "Maybe I was winning too much. Night after night after night, it was just too much of a strain to get psyched up like that."

PLYMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — Dick Gregory says he is planning to run for Edward Kennedy's seat in the U.S.

Senate in four years. Gregory, a comedian and civil rights activist, told WNAZ-TV that he would run against Kennedy in the 1982 Democratic primary.

Gregory said that for the first time, Kennedy had campaigned against Sen. Edward Brooke, the nation's only black senator and a Republican, who lost last Tuesday to Sen-elect Paul Tsongas. Kennedy had not stumped for Brooke's previous rivals.

HOMESTEAD AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. (AP) — Former President Richard Nixon is spending a couple of days with close friends Bebe Rebozo and Robert Abplanalp in the Florida Keys.

Nixon, who arrived here Sunday for the planned visit, was met by about 40 people when he stepped from a private plane and posed for pictures.

Nixon will stay at the exclusive Ocean Reef Club in the Keys, said Abplanalp, an industrialist who made a fortune with aerosol spray cans.

"It's just a couple days of vacation in the sun," Abplanalp said. "He's doing very fine. He's in very good spirits. His health is very good; in fact, I'm going to ask him what his diet is."

ROYAL OAK, Md. (AP) — President and Mrs. Carter took part in a "very private" religious meeting at a farm owned by former Sen. and Mrs. Harold Hughes.

The meeting on Sunday was attended by 15 persons other than the Carters and the Hugheses. White House press secretary Jody Powell said Hughes invited the Carters to the farm more than a year ago.

While he was a senator, Hughes, a Democrat from Iowa, often sponsored prayer breakfasts, and has said his faith helped him overcome alcoholism.

Also at Sunday's meeting were Sen. and Mrs. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla.; Sen. Pete Domenici, D-N.M.; Sen. Dewey Bartlett, R-Okla.; Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore.; and Mrs. Sam Nunn, wife of the Democratic senator from Georgia.

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Archaeologists and monks have unearthed a coffin which they claim contains the remains of John the Baptist, the newspaper Al-Ahram reported.

The report said the coffin was discovered in a cave in the grounds of the Bishop Maqar Monastery at Wadi Natroun, 60 miles northeast of Cairo. Al-Ahram said the remains were moved in the 5th century from Palestine to Alexandria and were moved to the monastery in the 11th century.

TOKYO (AP) — A former Japanese army policeman released from a Shanghai prison after serving 20 years for espionage has been flown to Osaka where he rejoined his family.

Yoshiharu Fukaya, 63, was the second Japanese freed from a Shanghai prison since the signing of the Sino-Japanese peace and friendship treaty recently. He had been in Shanghai since 1945, was arrested in 1958 and sentenced to a life term.

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Joseph Califano, the U.S. secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, arrived in Israel Sunday night to sign an agreement for a U.S.-Israeli exchange of teachers and cooperation on research for educating the retarded.

Califano said the agreement is "one of the broadest and deepest agreements in the field of education we have with any country."

LONDON (AP) — Newspapers in Greece and Turkey have agreed on a program of reporter exchanges in an effort to ease tensions caused by the disputes between their governments over Cyprus and conflicting territorial claims in the Aegean Sea.

The agreement was reached in talks at the International Press Institute in London between editors and publishers of Greek and Turkish newspapers. Turkish journalists are to visit Greece later this month, and Greek reporters will visit Turkey early next year.

Money lost on needless car repairs

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
Americans spend nearly $50 billion a year to repair and maintain their cars and many of them complain that they aren't getting their money's worth.

Just over 30 percent of all the complaints received by the federal Office of Consumer Affairs in the first eight months of 1978 related to automobiles. Many of the complaints concerned high prices for new cars, but many also dealt with the frustrations and problems of getting old ones fixed.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has estimated that up to $20 billion is wasted annually on poor, needless or fraudulent repairs.

Industry officials argue that fraud is involved in only a small percentage of cases but they concede that, rightly or wrongly, consumers are concerned about the quality of auto repairs.

In most areas, auto mechanics need not be licensed to practice. Repair shops do not have to register or meet any type of government standard. Certification and testing programs generally are voluntary rather than mandatory.

How can you avoid problems? Start by reading the owner's manual that comes with your car, advises Donald A. Randall, a spokesman for the Automotive Service Councils, Inc., a trade association representing about 5,000 of the nation's 240,000 auto repair shops. Randall said that the growth of self-service gasoline operations has made preventive maintenance more important than ever.

Don't wait until you need a mechanic to find a repair shop. "Make the selection before you break down and are captive of the nearest garage," Randall said.

Among the things to keep in mind when comparing garages are the facility's reputation, convenience and appearance. Does the place look reasonably clean? Are there parts lying all over the floor? Does the shop have power tools and a lift to raise the car off the floor?

Check to see if the repair shop is a member of the Automotive Service Council which sets standards for its members and runs an informal complaint-handling service. Look for the emblem of the National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence. The institute, set up six years ago by the U.S. auto manufacturers and dealers, runs a voluntary testing and certification program.

Note: Be careful about refusing payment if you are not satisfied. Most states have what is known as a "mechanic's lien law." If you refuse to pay your bill, even if it is outrageous, the shop can keep your car.

Promotion through ranks

WASHINGTON (AP) — More and more, it looks as though a good way to become a member of Congress is to work for one.

At least eight of the 97 congressional candidates elected for the first time on Nov. 7 had worked on the Capitol Hill staffs of senators or representatives.

Another, Sen.-elect Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., started out as a congressional intern. Still another, Rep.-elect Mike Barnes, D-Md., worked on the presidential campaign staff of Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine.

And Democrat Tom Daschle, involved in a still-undecided House race in South Dakota, formerly worked for Democratic Sen. James Abourezk of that state.

Because 28 of the 30 former Capitol Hill staff members already in Congress will be back, this means there will be at least 38 lawmakers who have worked in some capacity for a member of Congress or a congressional committee when the next session begins in January.

In 1963, according to biographical sketches in the Congressional Directory, there were 22. That's an increase of nearly 75 percent in 15 years.

With the election of Democrat Al Swift to succeed his former boss, Rep. Lloyd Meeds, four of the seven House members from the state of Washington will be former staff members.

In Swift's opinion, however, the disadvantages of Capitol Hill staff experience outweigh the advantages for a candidate.

"In my judgment the advantage you have comes in savvy and know-how, but the connection is a disadvantage you have to overcome," he said.

The other former congressional staffers in the Washington delegation are Rep. Don Bonker, who was a research assistant to former Sen. Maurice Neuberger, D-Ore.; Rep. Tom Foley, who was assistant chief clerk and special counsel of the Senate Interior Committee, and Rep. Norm Dicks, who was a legislative assistant to Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash.

All are Democrats. Altogether, 29 of the ex-staffer lawmakers are Democrats and nine are Republicans.

Apparently the only senator-elect with Capitol Hill staff experience is Nancy Landon Kassebaum, R-Kan., who spent one year on the staff of the man she succeeds, Republican Sen. James B. Pearson.

Besides Swift, the representatives-elect who worked as regular staff members in congressional offices are: Tony Coelho, a Democrat who succeeds his old boss, Rep. B.F. Sisk, D-Calif.; Marvin Leath, D-Texas, succeeding Democratic Rep. W.R. Poage, on whose staff he served; Dan Mica, a Democrat who succeeds Rep. Paul Rogers, D-Fla., for whom he worked; Pat Williams, D-Mont., who was administrative assistant to Montana Democratic Sen. John Melcher when Melcher was in the House; Howard Wolpe, D-Mich., who worked for Michigan Sen. Donald Riegle, a Democrat; John Hinson, R-Miss., administrative assistant to Republican Rep. Thad Cochran, whom he succeeds.

BOYS TOWN STATUE
OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — "He's not heavy. Father, he's m'brother."

Throughout the years, the words have become firmly linked with Boys Town.

Until recently, the message the words convey was depicted in stone outside the Boys Town visitor center here: A statue showed a boy carrying his little brother piggyback.

The work, created in about 1948 by Ira Correll, was fashioned from soft stone, vulnerable to the elements. This year it was taken inside and a new bronze sculpture offering a modernized version of the two boys was created by Enzo Plazzotta, an Italian artist.

Five castings have been made. They will be placed at various Boys Town-related places, including Boys Town centers at Stanford University in Palo Alto, Calif., and Catholic University in Washington, D.C.

November 15, 1978
Lady Luck will prove to be a rather staunch ally for you this coming year, careerwise, especially in situations where you merit her aid. Take full advantage of the breaks.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) For reasons known only to yourself you may be tempted to do something today that opposes your better judgment. This could be an enormous blunder.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You're not apt to put yourself out today for others unless it is advantageous to you in some specific manner. Such an attitude will do little for your image.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Do something fun today with a buddy who has been helpful to you in the past. Go the whole route, even if it means grabbing the tab.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) This can be a very productive day, but it could also be fraught with challenges. You're a match for anything you have to contend with, so be of stout heart.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) The hostile manner of another will have small effect upon you today when you turn the other cheek. Go your merry way and let him grumble alone.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) There is material opportunity around you today, but it's also possible you may not develop it to the fullest. Don't waste your good shots.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be willing to share the good that befalls you today. If you're tight-listed where you should be generous you may receive like treatment at a later date.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be careful today that money doesn't become a nasty issue between yourself and one you're fond of. Friendship is more important than the silver involved.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're lucky today in things you personally manage but be wary of ruffling feathers in the process. Inspire your followers, don't incite them.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Keep that particular goal in mind today, or you could be stopped by the first obstacle. Your motives must be greater than the menace.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Tactics that are too assertive will produce a dilatory response today. The opposite will be true if your approach is warm and jovial.

Penn State reaches top spot

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Sports Writer

The Nittany Lions of Penn State, often a bridesmaid but never a bride, made it to the top of The Associated Press college football poll today for the first time ever.

Penn State's 19-10 victory over North Carolina State coupled with previously unbeaten Oklahoma's 17-14 loss to Nebraska, vaulted the Nittany Lions from runner-up to Oklahoma the last four weeks past the Sooners into the top spot.

Meanwhile, Nebraska took over second place in a tight race with Alabama, setting up the possibility of an Orange Bowl showdown between the nation's 1-2 teams. Nebraska was named Monday to represent the Big Eight in the Orange Bowl, while Penn State is expected to receive an invitation when the formal bids go out Saturday.

"I don't feel any different now than I did when we were ranked No. 2," said Penn State Coach Joe Paterno. "We still have two tough games to play before we can stake a claim to being No. 1. I've always said the only poll that means anything is the final one."

Penn State, 10-0 and the nation's only unbeaten major college team, winds up its regular season Nov. 24 against No. 20 Pitt.

The Nittany Lions, who finished second in the final 1968 and 1969 polls and fifth in 1971, 1973 and last year, received 55 of 66 first-place votes and 1,296 of a possible 1,320 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Nebraska received six first-place votes and 1,209 points while Alabama, a 31-10 winner over Louisiana State, held onto third place with four first-place votes and 1,203 points.

Oklahoma slipped to fourth place with 1,092 points, while Southern California remained in fifth place. The Trojans, who whipped Washington 28-10 and knocked the Huskies out of the Top Twenty, received the other first-place ballot and 1,071 points.

Houston climbed from eighth to sixth with 975 points following a 10-7 triumph over Texas. The loss dropped the Longhorns from sixth to ninth place behind Michigan and Georgia.

Michigan held onto seventh place with 965 points for a 59-14 rout of Northwestern, while Georgia jumped from 11th to eighth with 803 points by defeating Florida 24-22.

Rounding out the Top Ten were Texas with 733 points and defending national champion Notre Dame, a 31-14 victor over Tennessee with 662. The Fighting Irish had been out of the Top Ten since the first week of the season when they lost to Missouri.

The Second Ten consists of Maryland, Clemson, Arkansas, UCLA, Purdue, Michigan State, Louisiana State, Pittsburgh.

Ohio State and Georgia Tech last week. It was Georgia, Purdue, Maryland, Notre Dame, Clemson, Arkansas, Michigan State, Navy, Washington and Pitt.

Navy dropped out by losing to Syracuse 20-17 while Washington bowed to Southern Cal. Meanwhile, Ohio State trounced Illinois 45-7 and returned to the Top Twenty for the first time in five weeks, while Georgia Tech made it for the first time this season by winning its seventh game in a row, a 42-21 triumph over Air Force.

Stabler quiet after victory

CINCINNATI (AP) — Oakland Raiders quarterback Ken Stabler could have called it vindication, but he wasn't talking after tossing three touchdown passes in a nationally televised 34-21 victory over the Cincinnati Bengals Monday night.

Embittered by media criticism after throwing 23 interceptions in his first 10 games this season, Stabler continued his cold war afterwards.

"Nothing personal, I just don't have any comment," said the bewildered 32-year-old National Football League veteran, dismissing reporters from his cubicle. He completed nine of 19 passes for 109 yards.

Taking advantage of seven

Cincinnati turnovers, the Raiders, 7-4, withstood a 388-yard aerial barrage by Ken Anderson to move into a first-place tie with Denver in the American Football Conference Western Division.

The loss plunged the mistake-prone Bengals to 1-10.

"Our defense created the turnovers and our offense took advantage," said Raiders' Coach John Madden as Oakland boosted its record in Monday night games to 11-1-1 since 1970.

AMARILLO — Misti Howard placed second in the 11-12-year-old Group II division at the Top O' Texas Age Group and Ability Group Championships over the weekend at Amarillo College.

Others participating and placing from Pampa included Laimie French, third in 11-12-year-old Group III; Lisa Campbell, fourth in 11-12-year-old group II, Kristi Hughes fourth in 11-12-year-old group IV (advanced) and Brianna Marsh, sixth in the 11-12-year-old group III.

AMARILLO — Jo Linda Lowrey and Shane Brown captured individual championships for the Pampa High Rodeo Club at the Tascosa rodeo here over the weekend.

Lowrey took first place in goat tying, while Brown's victory came in bareback competition. Terry Mullins' tie for fourth place in bareback riding was the only other finish in the top six for Pampa entries. The cowpokes will be at the West Texas State Tri-State Rodeo over the weekend for their next outing.

Auerbach returns to coach Celtics

BOSTON (AP) — Red Auerbach, who coached the Boston Celtics to nine National Basketball Association championships and was general manager for four more, will abandon the front office to coach the staggering franchise, it was reported today.

The Boston Herald American said Auerbach, president and general manager, will take over from Tom Sanders, who resigned Monday, dejected and disillusioned over the Celtics' horrendous start — two victories in 14 games.

The Celtics called a news conference for noon today. It was reported earlier that Sanders' resignation would be announced, but the newspaper said details of a major trade also would be made public.

Co-owner John Y. Brown said Monday night that he "couldn't comment on anything now," but added that everyone would be "very happy when it (news conference) is over."

"I'm sure everyone will be pleased with the moves we plan to make," said Brown. "We're going to turn this thing around. We want the Boston fans to be proud of this team and they will after we do the things we think are necessary."

Auerbach, the winningest coach in NBA history, had rejected efforts by others to get him back on the bench.

He said as late as last week that if he were younger, he wouldn't mind returning to coaching, but added, "at my age, I'd probably have a heart attack in a week."

Sanders, who took over the club in January, replacing Tom Heinsohn, reached his decision after a long meeting Monday over a long meeting with Brown and Auerbach, according to the Herald.

Anti-inflation program may not work

NEW YORK (AP) — Time will show if the administration's anti-inflation program was a giant step toward price moderation, but some professional observers already think we should view it as the end of the rope.

As they see it, President Carter has lassoed those he thinks are the troublemakers, labor and management, but now he can't be sure the rope won't break. If it does snap, then controls would be the next step.

This, according to the argument — one held by various economists, business people and union leaders — would be part of a natural progression that begins with jawboning and proceeds to guidelines.

AFL-CIO President George

Meany, disgruntled with Carter's guidelines, would even like to proceed directly to controls. And surveys indicate a good many Americans share his sympathies.

But if you believe in natural progression, as expressed in scores of bank letters, speeches, economist warnings and the like, controls would come only as guidelines fail.

The reasoning is twofold.

1. The economy is too large and diverse to surround with voluntary guidelines. Enterprising organizations, labor or management inevitably will wriggle out of the noose, claiming or finding exceptions.

2. If the first step occurs, the administration might concede defeat. More likely, it would seek temporary authority from Congress to impose controls, with legal penalties assessed against transgressors.

The possibilities that the voluntary guidelines won't work is already considered high by opponents, who term them overly rigid. Nobody likes to say it, but many feel that guidelines must permit some slippage.

But still another factor, the political, enters the equation. Will the Carter administration ease up on the guidelines or perhaps abolish controls if it appears the economy is tipping into recession?

With an election year coming up, that possibility has to be considered. Recessions shake incumbents and their party, as Richard Nixon learned when he sought to succeed President Eisenhower.

However, the only indication of what recession would mean to the guidelines policy is that given by Alfred Khan, the anti-inflation czar, who has been quoted as preferring controls to recession.

While that choice is not the one foreseen by current critics of the guidelines, it suggests still another way in which they could lead to even harsher techniques in the alleged search for economic moderation.

Conceivably, the administration could be lucky because, entirely apart from the Washington efforts, the economy has shown indications of cooling. After four years of expansion, it was to be expected.

Meanwhile, even those opposed to guidelines as unworkable and controls as un-American concede that some good might yet come from them. Fear of them, it is said, can do wonders to undermine inflation psychology.

That psychology, almost everyone knows, assumes that prices will continue to rise, and that to beat the rise you get your pay raises in advance and you buy your house and appliances now instead of later.

That psychology quickly dissipates under the threat of controls and, in fact, its opposite takes over — that is, the notion that it might pay to wait.

We shouldn't have to wait long. By spring the verdicts will be in.

Officials unhappy with Olympic plans

MOSCOW (AP) — Top officials of the U.S. Olympic Committee say they have been striving to persuade their Soviet counterparts to allocate more tickets to better sporting events for American tourists at the 1980 Summer Olympics.

USOC Executive Director Donald Miller told a news conference Monday: "There are still a number of problems outstanding. We want what's best for the American visitor, what best fits our needs. The host country doesn't look at it from our viewpoint."

Noting that travel publicity must soon be launched, Miller added: "The sooner we get these things cleared up, the better."

According to the American officials, the problems still unresolved include:

- More tickets for Americans seeking to attend the Games. The Soviets have proposed 200,000 but the U.S. side wants 10 percent more.
- More U.S. tickets for the opening and closing ceremonies.

—More tickets to events most interesting for Americans, such as swimming, boxing and track and field, rather than soccer and team handball. U.S. organizers contend that the present ratio is "unacceptable."

—Better tourist accommodations. The Soviets have allotted 20,000 beds for American visitors, 60 percent in "class

A" hotels and 40 percent in student quarters. The U.S. side wants an 80-20 ratio.

Miller and USOC President Robert Kane held the news conference at the end of a five-day visit to the Soviet Union to review Olympic preparations and meet with Soviet Olympic organizing officials.

The American side hopes that through further negotiations with the Russians, the problems still outstanding will be resolved by early next year.

At the same time, he said there was "nothing extraordinary" about the U.S.-Soviet negotiations, pointing to problems with tickets and accommodations at the previous Montreal, Munich and Mexico City Olympics.

The USOC official described the atmosphere of the talks with the Soviets as amicable and candid.

Asked if he believed tourists would receive good treatment in 1980, Kane told reporters: "I can't believe the Soviet Union would invite the whole world here and not treat them well."

Both Kane and Miller said they thought the Soviet Olympic facilities under construction or already completed were "superb" and "outstanding." Miller termed the Olympic Village being built in Moscow the "best I have ever seen."

Testimony begins today

CLEBURNE, Texas (AP) — Doctors and nurses who saw a West Texas doctor putting tape over his mother's mouth as she lay in a heavily sedated state were the leadoff witnesses in an attempted murder trial that began today.

An eight-man, four-woman jury was chosen Monday afternoon to decide the fate of Dr. Milton Rains, 51, of Littlefield, Texas. He said the tape he put over his mother's mouth was to hold a moistened piece of tissue intended to relieve her chapped lips.

The incident, alleged by some as an attempted mercy killing, occurred last July 29 at the Johnson County Memorial Hospital in Cleburne. Rains' mother died last month in a nursing home from cancer.

If convicted, Rains could be sentenced to prison for 2 to 20 years and fined up to $10,000.

Attorneys said they expect the trial to end by this weekend. District Judge E. Byron Crosier is presiding.

Carriers honored

Drew and Trent Watson, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Watson, were named paper carriers of the year by the Pampa News last month.

But the honor didn't end there. Recently the Kiwanis decided to recognize these two boys for the work they have done.

Both Trent and Drew attended a luncheon with their parents and were given an award by the Kiwanis for the work they have done.
