Canadian power shortage termed 'possibly critical'

By DAN LACKEY
Pampa News Staff

CANADIAN-The city of Canadian may face a power shortage which Mayor George Arrington describes as "possibly critical" unless action is taken to obtain power from alternative sources before next summer.

The city council met last night in the latest of a long series of meetings to discuss the issue. Lack of adequate power has been a problem of progressively graver importance for more than two years in Canadian.

City power usage has increased by fourteen percent since 1977 and city power is presently being supplemented by power purchased from Southwestern Power Service and transmitted via North Plains Electric in Perryton.

Power from Southwestern Power Service presently accounts for between fifteen and twenty percent of the city's power usage.

The council is presently wavering between a short-term supplementary power contract with North Plains Electric and a long term lease-purchase arrangement with Southwestern Power Service. Southwestern has reportedly offered to lease-purchase the city plant for $132,700 annually for the next ten years with an additional $35,000 from 1990 to 2007.

The council, however, sent in late October a letter to North Plains requesting that company's interest in serving the city's power needs.

Mayor Arrington favors a lease-purchase arrangement with Southwestern, while mayor pro-tem Bob Lewis is on record as favoring a supplementary system contracted with North Plains.

Lewis has pointed out that a 10-year operating statement for Canadian Power shows that $466,705 in revenue from the city-owned plant has been used for fire, administrative, maintenance, and health expenses over the last ten years.

In last night's meeting the council considered a letter of reply from North Plains offering service to a borderline area of the city on the Northwest side of the railroad tracks.

City Manager Vernie Farrington said this arrangement would provide immediate supplement of the city's power needs and cushion the city from a possible emergency in the summer.

Mayor Arrington, however, expressed his concern for the long-term power security of the city and said "the possible arrangement with Southwestern is still totally open for negotiation."

Arrington said that Southwestern has offered to conduct an engineering study of Canadian "without cost or obligation" to determine the cost of setting up power lines to the city.

The council voted 3-2 in favor of requesting Southwestern to proceed with such a study.

Oil states sue U.S. government

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The states of Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas have filed suit challenging the Natural Policy Act of 1978, charging that the key portion of President Carter's energy plan is a federal violation of states' rights.

"It may be a landmark case, not only in energy matters but in the matter of state sovereignty," Larry Derryberry, Oklahoma attorney general, said after the suit was filed Monday.

"The issues in this case go far beyond what is being contested," he said. "They go to the heart of the question of where state sovereignty ends and federal authority starts."

The suit by the three major gas-producing states was filed in federal court at Oklahoma City against the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, which is responsible for enforcing provisions of the natural gas act. It attacks the act by challenging its constitutionality.

The three states are specifically challenging provisions in the act that for the first time allow the federal government to control the price of natural gas sold within a state and that compel states to participate in enforcing the act.

Enforcement of the act would cost Oklahoma alone an estimated $750,000 a year, Derryberry said.

In their suit, the three states will argue that the gas act violates the interstate commerce clause of the U.S. Constitution and the 10th Amendment, which reserves to the states all powers not specifically granted to the federal government.

Under the energy legislation, natural gas prices will be allowed to rise by about 10 percent annually until 1985, when price lids will be removed from most natural gas. At the same time, price controls will be extended for the first time to gas produced and used within a state.

The suit claims the gas act would unconstitutionally deprive the three states of funds received from intrastate natural gas production and earmarked by legislators for public use.

Leaders of the three states have estimated the act would cost consumers in the states from $70 to $100 per year.

The federal government was given 60 days to respond to the suit.

U.S. District Judge Ralph Thompson will hear the case.

New Mexico and Kansas had considered joining the lawsuit, but did not.

"It certainly is going to be a difficult lawsuit," Derryberry said. "We're talking about three and probably five states challenging the rest of the nation."

Tax adjustment tops board's agenda

By KATHY BURR
Pampa News Staff

An adjustment of $29,223,973 from the School Tax Assessment Board was among the topics discussed at Monday night's school board meeting.

Bob Phillips, superintendent of schools, told the board of the confirmation.

The taxable wealth of the school district is currently $884,495,000. With this adjustment the taxable rate would decrease to $855,271,000 for the 1979-80 and 1980-81 school year. This decrease will only take place if the state legislature approves the new assessment amount.

The board also reviewed the budget status at the meeting. The budget currently has a balance of $5,246,060.33 for the 1977-78 and 1978-79 school year. Expenditures to date amount to $2,182,967.38, with expenditures for the month amounting to $1,262,179.63.

The board also approved the selection of the textbook committee for the 1978-79 school year.

Phillips will chair the committee, with Helen Warner, a teacher at Austin Elementary, supervising the selection for handwriting books grades 1-6. Betty Tom Graham, mathematics coordinator at Carver Center, will take care of the selection of textbooks for mathematics grades 7-8. Arlene Gibson, reading coordinator at Carver Center will select the supplementary readers for grades 7-8. Johnnie Thompson, a teacher at Pampa Middle School, will select the life science books for grade 7. John Woickowski, choral music coordinator at Pampa High School, will select the vocal music books for grades 7-8. Sylvia Raber, a department chairman at Pampa Middle School, will select the books for American History grade 8. Nancy Coffee, a department chairman and Mary Lynn Chase, a teacher at Pampa High School, will supervise the selection of books for literature grades 9-11 and French III. Howard Graham, department chairman at Pampa Senior High School will select the books for high school American history and Mexican American studies. Charles Ely, a teacher at Pampa Middle School, will select the books for art grades 7-8. Doris Johnson, a teacher at Pampa High School will select the books for Art I and II. Dick Crockett, a teacher at Pampa Middle School, Vernon Cook, a teacher at Pampa High School and Don Nelson vocational administrator at the area vocational school will select the books for Introductory Shop grades 7-8. Good afternoon

News in brief

Travelers advisories will be in effect for parts of the northern and eastern Panhandle. Patches of freezing drizzle will occur or have occurred in the northern Texas Panhandle, especially on roads, bridges and overpasses. The forecast calls for occasional drizzle with light rain through Wednesday. The high today should be in the upper 40s with the low tonight in the mid 30s and the high on Wednesday in the 40s. The winds will be out of the southeast at 15-20 miles per hour today decreasing to 10-15 miles per hour tonight. The forecast for the Thanksgiving holiday calls for not as cold with a chance of showers.

Young disputes charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young and former members of a Memphis black activist youth group all dispute a theory that the FBI used the group to foment violence that led Dr. Martin Luther King to return to the city where he was murdered.

The House Assassinations Committee, continuing its hearings into the theory, was to take testimony today from two former FBI agents who dealt with the activist group, called the Invaders.

Some observers have speculated that the group was paid by the FBI to incite the violence during King's March 28, 1968 march in support of striking garbage workers.

It was that violence, King aide Ralph Abernathy has said, that led King to return to plan a second, non-violent event. He was killed in Memphis April 4, 1968.

The committee is trying to disprove what it calls speculation that the FBI paid the Invaders to foment the violence that broke out at the rear of the first march.

The theory is that because King was then organizing the huge poor people's campaign in Washington, the FBI knew he would have to return to Memphis after the violence there to demonstrate that he could keep a protest by thousands of people from becoming violent.

But the committee said Monday that Young, a King aide at the time of the assassination, has denied that he learned that the FBI had paid the Invaders to disrupt King's march.

Chinese leader faces problems

TOKYO (AP) — A flurry of wall posters in Peking indicated today that Chairman Hua Kuo-feng may be facing serious internal political problems and ideological dissent for the first time since he took power.

An open letter attacking the 1976 decision by the Chinese Communist Party Politburo to fire Vice Chairman Teng Hsiao-ping, who was sacked just before Hua took power but has since been reinstated, appeared in Peking today. Japan's Kyodo news agency said.

The open letter follows within 48 hours wall posters attacking the late Communist Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung by name and suggesting he was a fascist dictator.

Teng was fired for allegedly fanning violence that preceded the elevation by the Politburo of Hua to his present job.

Hua's rise is closely linked to the 1976 riots blamed on Teng, but Kyodo said the open letter, posted on a busy Peking street, did not refer to the parallel Politburo order that elevated Hua.

State, federal investigators to inspect plant

A state and federal construction inspection of the city's new wastewater treatment plant is expected to result in final payment of funds owed to the city by the federal government.

The plant, in operation since April 1977, cost $1.1 million to construct. The city paid $300,000, while the federal government promised to pay $800,000.

The city has had some difficulty in obtaining complete payment from the government, which still owes the city approximately $115,000. City Manager Mack Wofford said he believes the city will receive final payment after the upcoming inspection is completed.

The inspection, scheduled for 8:30 a.m. Nov. 29, will consist of an examination of both fiscal and construction records as well as a tour of the construction site. Milton Rose of the Texas Department of Water Resources and Gene Wassom of the Environmental Protection Agency will conduct the inspection.

"We anticipate that we will," he said, Wofford said. "The purpose of the inspection is to finalize it."

"There'll be a lot more paperwork, I'm sure, but that'll pretty well wind it up."

Referring to the size and frequency of federal payments to date, Wofford said "It hasn't been the cash flow we would have liked."

To satisfy EPA requirements for funding, the city recently passed an ordinance requiring industrial dischargers to pay a fee to use the wastewater plant.

The plant, located east of the city near Loop 71, has a treatment capacity of three million gallons per day.

Fathers, mothers wait today in fear

By ELLEN NIMMONS
Associated Press Writer

The fathers and mothers, daughters and sons of those who followed the Rev. Jim Jones waited today with fear, resignation, anger — and a question: were the people they love among the more than 400 twisted bodies in Guyana?

"Where's my mother?" screamed Margie Henderson as she flailed at a chain link fence at the People's Temple headquarters in San Francisco. "Shoot me, shoot me like you shot them!" she raged.

Her words were the words of thousands. The kin of the People's Temple waited: Timothy and Grace Stoen, for word of their 6-year-old son; Samantha Tucker of Tulsa, Okla., for news of her 86-year-old mother; and Mike Carter of Boise, Idaho, whose children and grandchildren—nine in all—went to Guyana.

In Washington, the State Department set up a task force, and for some families, the waiting ended. But the agency said it had no complete list of the dead — killed by poison or gunshots — or the living. Some 500-900 cult members were unaccounted for, and had apparently fled into the dense jungle.

The days of death in Jonestown, Guyana, began with the fatal shootings of California Rep. Leo Ryan, who had gone there to investigate the cult, and four others. They ended with the deaths of Jones and hundreds of his followers.

Some of the waiting relatives went to the People's Temple headquarters in San Francisco Monday, where about 25 cult members stayed behind locked doors and police guard.

"We want to make sure that nothing will happen to them," said Deputy Police Chief Clem DeAmicis, adding there was no indication the temple members might try suicide. "My feeling is that they are not interested in doing away with themselves," he said.

Outside, the people waited, and they talked. "There was a Hitler building up here in the heart of America — right here," said Johnnie Harris, who was seeking word on his 32-year-old daughter, Vera Young, a cult member for eight years.

Others were less bitter. "I was favorably impressed with the social and humanitarian causes of the church and their integration efforts," said the Rev. William Power Clancey Jr., who said his son, Timothy, gave up drugs after joining the temple.

"But I see it now as a one-man cult," the minister said. "I had no idea it would end like this."

In Oklahoma, Samantha Tucker's thoughts were of her 86-year-old mother, Mary Rogers, who went to Guyana several years ago.

"It wasn't any surprise," Mrs. Tucker said of the deaths. "I know they were supposed to if anything ever happened to him (Jones)."

For 74-year-old Mike Carter, the State Department had this message: his two sons, Tim, 30, and Michael, 20, were alive, but their wives and Tim's child were dead. The fate of Carter's daughter, her husband and his two other grandchildren, was not known.

JAMES GRIMES poses outside the Peoples Temple headquarters in San Francisco on Monday with a picture of his daughter, Thelma Jackson. He said his daughter was a resident of the Jones settlement in Jonestown, Guyana. Grimes was one of several people waiting outside the headquarters for word on the facts of loved ones in Jonestown.

The other Idi Amin

By DON GRAFF

It is easy to dismiss Idi Amin as a brutal buffoon.

Easy, but perhaps not accurate. Skillfully as he plays that particular role for the world public, the Ugandan dictator is something more — a shrewdly intelligent, coldly calculating manipulator determined to hold on to the power he seized in 1971.

Amin's savaging of his own people and his outrageous ventures in diplomacy — haughty advice to the American president, peremptory demands upon the British queen, the suggestion to settle his latest imbroglio by means of a boxing match with Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere — make the headlines. Less noted is that in the tactics of practical politics, he is usually several jumps ahead of his opponents at home and abroad.

Amin has problems. Uganda's economy is a shambles and its credit shot. Coffee, 80 percent of the country's exports, currently is down a world markets and Uganda's earnings from it are further pinched by U.S. embargo. Foreign exchange has run out and major oil companies have turned off the tap.

The murders of hundreds of thousands of Ugandans have not eliminated opposition to his rule, which depends upon loyalty of the army. This he has sought to maintain with special privileges, such as access to foreign luxuries which Uganda can ill afford to import.

The army does not appear, however, to be completely bought. Officers are reported to have pressured Amin recently for reforms, including curbs on his feared intelligence services.

Faced with a sea of troubles at home, Amin chose to take arms against a supposed threat on his borders. Thus his invasion and on - again, off - again annexation of a slice of Tanzania.

Not that Amin doesn't have plenty of enemies out there, including Ugandan refugees plotting against him from Tanzanian sanctuaries. But this particular rip - off has all the marks of an inside job. Foreign offices are reading it as Amin's way of diverting attention from his domestic problems, dealing with his own army by marching it off against a foreign foe and throwing his neighbors off balance.

Not just Tanzania but also Kenya which, with luck, may make it through the transition of power following the death of President Jomo Kenyatta without losing its stability, the most notable of any nation of black Africa. A conflict with Uganda is the last thing the militarily outclassed new Kenyan regime needs at this point.

Without a Kenyan connection, Tanzania is at a disadvantage in countering Amin's aggression. The invaded territory is easily accessible from Uganda but on a remote frontier for Tanzanian forces. Amin can probably come and go as he wills in the area, so long as he is careful not to go too far. None of this deals with Uganda's real problems — unless circumstances in the end should combine to bring down the major one, Idi Amin himself. But the developments instigated by Amin are not the irrational doings of a madman. There are reasons behind them.

Although Amin may come out momentarily ahead again this time, he is nevertheless probably bringing more troubles on himself for future reckoning. Africans, since achieving independence from various European overlords, have been reluctant to police their own. A leader may be a devil, but at least he is one of them and not a white devil.

Idi Amin's tactics would seem destined to overcome even that reluctance sooner or later. But if it is to be the former, the Ugandan despot is going to have to come up against a shrewder tactician than himself, which so far has been far from the case.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, Nov. 21, the 325th day of 1978. There are 40 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1877, Thomas Edison announced that he had invented a talking machine. He called it the phonograph.

On this date:

In 1806, Napoleon Bonaparte issued the Berlin decrees, declaring a blockade of the British Isles.

In 1855, Sweden joined Britain, France and Turkey in an alliance against Russia.

In 1894, the Japanese captured the Manchurian city of Port Arthur.

Hokum of controls

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

For months, it has been clear that President Carter planned to take the country back into the era of wage and price controls. Robert Rowen of the Washington Post and other columnists close to the White House set out the administration's plan for a phased introduction of controls, first jawboning, the "voluntary" guidelines, followed by mandatory controls if the initial measures don't work.

Mr. Carter did as expected and predicted. He proposed "voluntary" controls as a first step in fighting inflation. The term "voluntary" is wholly misleading, however. While it's true that offenders, who disregard federal guidelines won't be jailed, they will be subjected to various forms of government harassment and retaliation. Offenders will be fined government contracts. They also may discover that the administration has arranged for an additional dose of foreign competition.

Coercion is the name of the game that President Carter intends to play. He will use a small stick at first, but bigger sticks will be utilized if business and labor decide that the bureaucrats don't know best.

The point to bear in mind is that the administration — the politicians and bureaucrats — believe they know what is best for the American people and insist on setting wages and prices. The Carter administration doesn't trust or believe in the operation of a free market economy to set prices.

It's very important that business not play the administration's game, that businessmen make clear to the public that they know the President's anti - inflation plan is deceptive.

It's very important the public not go along with the charade of the Carter anti - inflation program, and that citizens plot the historic failures of price and wage controls of any kind. When President Nixon introduced them in 1971, the result was shortages and rapid increases in price when the controls were lifted. Mandatory controls, such as those demanded by George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, represent the ultimate economic error. They produce a completely regimented and stagnating economy.

The American people are tragic victims of political hokum. A solemn - voiced President calls for national "austerity" only weeks after he forced through Congress a $7.4 billion foreign aid bill that squanders the nation's resources.

Mr. Carter told the American people that he would reduce the number of government workers. "Even as the President talked," he said the Wall Street Journal, "the Council on wage and price stability was moving in a hundred new desks for an expanded force of inflation fighters who will play 'I Spy' on the American economy."

Finally, while pledging anti - inflationary action, Mr. Carter promised cash rebates to unionized employees whose wage increases are within the officially approved limits. Mr. Carter would have to borrow more money and increase taxes in order to provide these rebates, which would be inflationary.

Some "business leaders" already have jumped to praise the President for his anti - inflation program, precisely as they praised President Nixon for imposing controls in 1971. These "business leaders" should be ashamed of themselves. There's nothing more disgusting than for the head of a major corporation to play the role of political courtier. Certainly, the nation's shareholders know that guidelines and price controls, voluntary or mandatory contradict the spirit of a free market economy.

There's one way and one way only to fight inflation in this country and that's to eliminate the billions of dollars spent on unnecessary federal government programs and give the nation a balanced budget.

'Legal plunder' is not real charity

How easy it is to be confused and misled by the improper use of words. Take the word "charity," for instance.

Charity, in its true sense, means the voluntary sharing of one's own wealth or resources with others whom the giver believes to be in need; a noble, compassionate and commendable act, provided that the gift is voluntarily received as well as voluntarily given.

Many people believe that those with much are obligated to share with those less fortunate; which, of course, is still all right, as long as the property they have in mind to be shared is their own.

But take the same word, "charity," in its corrupted political sense, and you have an entirely different concept. Now, instead of an exchange between willing participants, you have a third party, the government bureaucrat, entering the picture. He proceeds to take from those he believes to have too much in order to give to those whom he believes to have too little. Now, instead of true charity, you have legal plunder.

and the word "obligated," which under the true concept of charity meant that the individual had a moral duty to share with those less fortunate, now means that all individuals — those with little and those with much — have an "obligation" to stand still while their substance is plundered.

The bait goes something like this: "No one objects to paying taxes to take care of those who are really incapable of taking care of themselves."

That amounts to accepting the concept of legal plunder for a "good cause." Those trapped by it are aghast, then, at the millions who ride the welfare wagon, all claiming to be "really incapable of taking care of themselves."

That is not charity.

Painful topic of taxes

Taxes may be a painful subject for Americans, but it could be worse.

The United States actually ranks 10th among major nations in the severity of the personal income tax bite according to a study by The Conference Board. At the top of the list are Denmark, Sweden and Britain, where the average figures are respectively 28, 23, and 16 percent of personal income. Low men on the tax pole are France and Italy, at 5 percent each.

That is not the entire tax story, however. Social insurance levies increase the burden in all countries and in some cases exceed direct taxes.

In the Netherlands, employer - employee contributions hit a high of 18 percent of income and in France, 15 percent, three times the direct tax. West Germany with 13 percent and Belgium with 12 percent are also high in this category, while the United States is in ninth place with 8 percent.

This is one international comparison where it pays individually to be an also - ran nationally.

That's what they say

"Far too large a proportion of lawyers in courtrooms today are engaging in on-the-job training. Often at the expense of their clients and often at the expense of justice itself."

— U.S. Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, discussing the current state of the American legal system.

Nation's press

A little duplicity, please

Wall Street Journal
It isn't yet clear how seriously business and labor will take the President's wage and price guidelines, but we hope fervently that the President doesn't take them too seriously himself.

We hear, for example, that there has been a big debate within the administration over whether it would set a good example to allow crude oil price controls to expire next spring. The President is being advised, no doubt by bureaucrats with a proprietary interest in federal red tape, that it would look bad to take the lid off of crude oil when a lid has just been put on so many other things.

The plain fact is that wage and price controls, "voluntary" as well as mandatory, are bad economic medicine indeed. And if the administration persists in them, they can do just as much damage to other industries as they have done to the energy industry. But since the past damage needs to be undone, we can only urge that the administration worry as little as possible about consistency. There is nothing consistent about the way wage and price controls bite anyway, so a few more anomalies won't hurt.

For example, controls, whether voluntary or mandatory, aren't going to limit food price increases, since no controller has yet figured out a way to make the world commodity markets and U.S. farmers obey his voice. Indeed, if other prices are controlled, food prices will probably go up faster than otherwise as excess demand is channeled to food and other uncontrolled commodities.

The price of energy won't be stabilized either. There has already been enough disruption of the electric utility business by environmental radicals and the government to insure that electricity prices will continue rising for years to come. No U.S. price controller can dictate the price of imported oil. Indeed, when the Nixon administration inflated the dollar under price controls in the early 1970s it helped win us a fourfold increase in the price of imported crude.

Given the prospect that Mr. Carter's wage and price restraints soon will look as silly as the Nixon restraints looked five years ago, there is no point in letting them become an inhibition to wiser policies elsewhere. A phase - out of the crude oil ceilings would be a wise policy indeed.

It would end the entitlements program, which subsidizes the importation of crude oil by having users of cheap domestic crude pay over their savings, and a little more to importers. There would be little if any effect on the prices the consumer pays for petroleum products, since world markets already are a major determinant of those prices.

There would be some contribution to capital formation in energy exploration and development as incentives to domestic production improved; this, plus the end to entitlements, might be enough to end the growth in U.S. dependency on foreign crude. Federal regulators freed from mucking about in the crude oil industry could be reassigned to the task of trying to implement the natural gas bill Congress has just passed; that would save the taxpayers the cost of the 1,000 to 1,500 new DOE employees administration insiders say will be needed to administer the gas act.

With such benefits, and such negligible drawbacks, there is no point at all in continuing the crude oil controls. If the administration needs a rationale to explain the inconsistency in its policy, it surely is not beyond the ability of someone in the White House to come up with one. In this case, a little old fashioned political doubletalk would be more than justified.

Make friends with computers

Many of us run scared from the subject of calculators and computers because they seem technical beyond our comprehension.

Actually the day - date wristwatch you are wearing is both calculator and computer. They don't have to be complicated.

And there are things all of us can learn from them if we just make friends with them.

Sixteen years ago the University of Illinois pioneered "teaching by computer." Now tens of thousands of students in 55 colleges take courses in chemistry, languages, veterinary medicine or whatever — by sitting at a keyboard communicating with a computer.

The computer talks back to the students on a screen by printout, in some cases even by synthesized speech.

Computer - based teaching of college students is one thing. Now corporations are training employees in new skills by computer. It costs a lot less to train a technician by computer — about $15 an hour — than otherwise.

Now we come to a more recent application of computer education that's even closer to home.

In Baltimore an adult learning center has been established where poor students and even functional illiterates, fascinated by a learning system unlike anything they've ever experienced before, are becoming self - sustaining wage - earners.

From this adult learning center the first class of 37 students has graduated. They have achieved at least an eighth grade level of competence in reading, math and language skills. Many already have jobs or offers.

Some have achieved the equivalent of high school diplomas and are registered for further college level study.

Again, all of these were previously categorized as functional illiterates.

So impressive are the results in Baltimore that Control Data and Commercial Credit Corp., the developers of this computer - based system of education, are hoping to expand the program nationwide.

The potential for reducing our nation's unemployment and increasing per man productivity is exciting.

There are nearly 23 million functional illiterates in the United States right now, unable to read at eighth grade level. Perpetuating this situation, 700,000 youngsters drop out of school each year.

So the Baltimore center results, projected, are of immense significance.

A girl who had been on drugs, had no skills other than grooming horses, graduated from the basic skills course in nine months and is now working as an official secretary - receptionist.

Baltimore Mayor William Schaefer calls this "a classic example of business and government working together."

How can a computer teach where other methods don't?

It is personalized tutoring, individualized, and face it — at a video screen learning becomes a game.

Voters take the initiative

MARTHA ANGLE
and ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) - However muddled the ideological message of Election '78, one major procedural trend was evident. The voters, no longer trusting the judgement of elected officials, increasingly opted to make their own decisions on key issues.

There were 40 separate initiatives, or citizen - drafted legislative proposals, on the ballot Nov. 7 in a total of 16 states — the most for any non - presidential election in at least 30 years, and second only to the 44 which were up for a vote in 1976.

The most highly publicized, of course, were the various offspring and imitators of California's Proposition 13, the tax - slashing initiative of last June, which overnight established the tone and direction of the entire national political debate of 1978.

But taxes and spending were by no means the only topics addressed by initiative this year; everything from gay rights to busing, from nuclear power to health care costs, from utility rates to returnable bottles showed up on ballots from coast to coast.

Despite the emotional heat connected with some of the propositions, and the lopsided lobbying expenditures associated with others, the voters showed remarkable care and sophistication in deciding the issues presented them.

Twenty initiatives were approved, 20 rejected. That is an unusually high success rate in historical terms; of more than 1,200 initiatives which have appeared on state ballots in the last 80 years, a cumulative average of 38 percent have been adopted. But it was by no means an indiscriminate performance by the electorate.

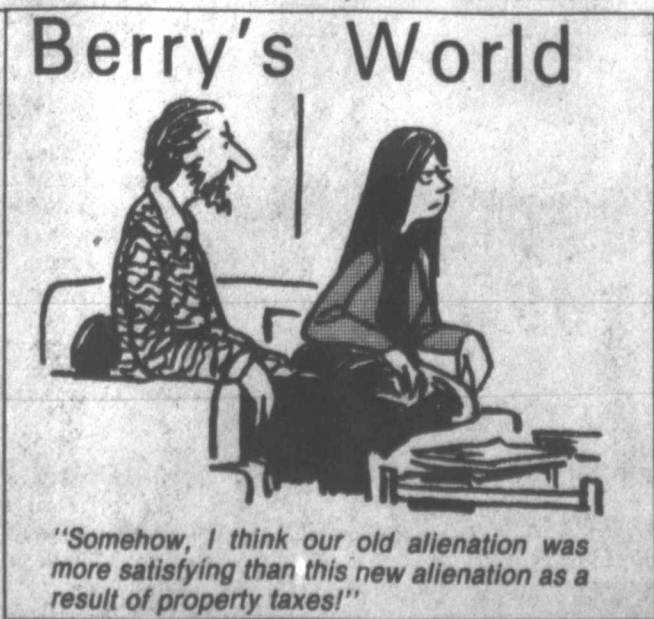

The results are vitally certain to add impetus to the drive by "Initiative America," a small Washington - based organization, to extend the initiative process to more states and to seek a constitutional amendment that would permit use of the initiative at the national level.

Some 23 states plus the District of Columbia now allow citizens to petition legislative proposals and state constitutional amendments directly onto the ballot. With one more vote by its legislature, Delaware could join the list next year. Additional states may follow soon.

Use of the initiative has been on the upswing throughout this decade. In all of the 1960s, only 89 citizen - drafted propositions appeared on ballots across the country. In the 1970s, there have been 150 initiatives, more than half of which were proposed in the last two elections.

What is noteworthy is the correlation between the growing popularity of the initiative process and the continuing decline in public confidence in traditional political institutions. The less faith voters have in their elected officeholders at all levels of government, the more they seem to be taking the decision - making power into their own hands.

No Longer a God

From the time he came to power in 1949 until his death two years ago, Chairman Mao Tse-tung was the unquestioned leader of the People's Republic of China. His words were considered the truth, and nearly every Chinese citizen owned a copy of the Little Red Book, a collection of quotations stating Mao's thoughts and ideas. Recent events in China suggest that Mao's once godlike image may be fading. Chinese newspapers have been attacking Mao's book, and China's leaders have politely suggested that the chairman may have made some mistakes. "Mao Tse-tung was a man," one recent newspaper story said, "not a god."

DO YOU KNOW — Who is the current leader of the People's Republic of China?

Auto thefts rising

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Car theft, a $75 million a year business in Texas, is growing so fast that insurance companies and state police think drivers need a little consciousness raising.

They have settled on a corny TV gimmick — so corny they hope children will parrot it around the house.

Television stations will be asked to give free time for 30-second spots that end with a cartoon rooster crowing. "Lock, Lock, Lock-a-doodle-doo."

"It's our hope that children will be running around yelling it at their parents and telling them to lock the car," said Darrell Joy, head of the Texas Crime Prevention Institute at Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos.

He said the rooster logo was developed to be a pleasant reminder, not a fear tactic, that would be most likely to be remembered by adults and children.

Col. Wilson Speir, director of the DPS, said something needs to be done.

Speir said 50,896 motor vehicles were stolen in Texas last year, a 13 percent increase over 1976.

"This year, if current trends continue, we estimate the number stolen may reach 60,000. Of those taken, 30 percent will never be recovered. The result of these auto thefts will be a net economic loss to Texans of approximately $75 million," Speir said.

Half the $40,000 for the auto theft prevention campaign came from federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration funds, with insurance companies paying the rest.

"I believe the campaign will reduce losses and hold premiums to the lowest possible level," said Max Wier of San Antonio, chairman of the southwestern advisory committee of the National Auto Theft Bureau, an insurance industry organization.

Besides TV spots, the campaign will include bumper stickers, flyers accompanying premium notices and educational campaigns for police officers, high school students, auto dealers and apartment managers.

Speir said most of the stolen cars that never are recovered "are probably taken by members of organized theft rings."

"Some of these find their way into Mexico where they are traded for narcotics. Some are re-titled and sold after the thieves change the vehicle identification number for that of a wrecked salvage vehicle," he said.

"But most of the non-recovered vehicles are disassembled and the parts sold both in Texas and interstate," he said.

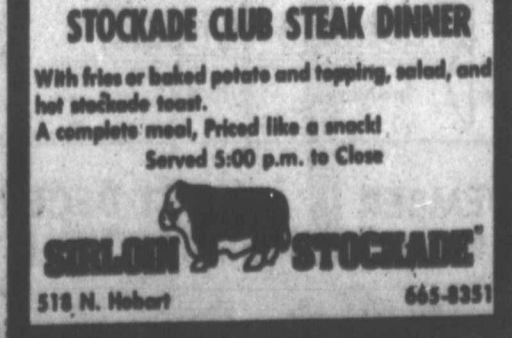

ROTHKO SHOW

NEW YORK (AP) — The Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum says "Mark Rothko, 1903-1970: A Retrospective" is "the largest and most comprehensive exhibition of this 20th century master's work ever to be mounted."

The show is on display through Jan. 14. Rothko was a pioneer of abstract color painting. The show consists of some 150 of his paintings and works on paper "which trace Rothko's career from its beginnings in the 1920s to shortly before his death in 1970."

FBI informant stole money from Davis

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — FBI informant David McCrory, saying his life was in jeopardy, admitted Monday stealing $5,000 from millionaire Cullen Davis but said he did so to guarantee an education for his son.

The chief accuser in Davis' murder-for-hire trial said the Fort Worth industrialist sent him to Las Vegas late last June to "launder" $50,000 allegedly earmarked for a "hit man."

The purported target was a Fort Worth judge presiding over the Davis divorce case.

"Why, when you got back from Las Vegas, did you take the $5,000?" chief defense lawyer Richard "Racehorse" Haynes asked McCrory. "To give to my son," said the state's key witness, "so in case Mr. Davis had me killed, my son would have at least $10,000 to go to college on."

Asked at one point why he took only $5,000, McCrory, 40, told the relentless Haynes, "I wanted to take it all and run and hide and get out of that mess."

Presumably, half the $10,000 McCrory said he gave his son came last spring from a $5,000 evidence Davis paid his one-time pool-shooting crony for "investigative" activities.

McCrory took the stand a week ago today to tell how Davis allegedly ordered him to find a professional killer to dispose of the judge and others. The essence of the state's case revolves around FBI tape recordings of two meetings between Davis and McCrory last August on the parking lot of a Fort Worth restaurant.

In the first meeting, Davis purportedly discussed the murder for money of the judge, and in the second he allegedly handed over $25,000 to pay the nonexistent killer.

McCrory's role in the unusual episode has been under siege since Haynes launched his withering cross-examination late Thursday.

Davis' million-dollar legal team says it will show through questioning of state witnesses and those called by the defense that Davis was framed by his estranged wife, Priscilla.

The hostility between Haynes and McCrory led earlier to this declaration by the trial judge.

"Put in the record these two men do not like one another."

During Monday's testimony, McCrory said he could not remember specifically when it was that Davis alleged, gave him the $50,000 or precisely what his instructions were from Davis.

"That was a unique day in your life, was it not?" Haynes asked.

"No sir," the husky witness replied.

"Just an ordinary day when somebody gives you $50,000 to take to Las Vegas?" Haynes asked sarcastically.

"It was not my money," McCrory answered.

Haynes has produced 3'x4 1/2 foot cardboard calendars for most of 1978 and is using them to ceremoniously record McCrory's "don't know," "not sure" and "don't remember" responses to questions on specific dates.

"Mr. Haynes, are you trying to confuse me like you've done in the past?" McCrory asked.

Area labor leaders attend price briefing

By TOM DeCOLA

Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) — Area labor leaders attended a briefing Monday by members of President Carter's Wage-Price Council, but came away unconvinced the administration's voluntary controls will benefit their cause.

The federal panel met with management in a mild morning session, then spent the afternoon trying to placate union representatives.

Deputy Director Robert Russell and wage specialist Sean Sullivan outlined the program before opening the floor to remarks and questions.

Gene Freeland of the Dallas AFL-CIO office set the tone when he told Russell with some vehemence that the 7 percent average annual wage ceiling is mandatory in that management would enforce it.

"Find me one employer who won't... and I'll tell you about Santa Claus," Freeland said. "The extremely poor will come out of it extremely poor, and the extremely rich will come out of it extremely rich."

Attending but not taking part in the give-and-take was Charles Haddock, a representative of the Teamsters whose members will be voting on a key master freight contract in the first quarter of next year.

Haddock said it had been proposed from the floor at a local meeting that the union seek a 43 percent pay boost in the first year of their new contract. "I doubt that 7 percent will cover the fringes," Haddock, who left the meeting early, said he doubted if any of the union representatives present favor the Carter program.

"We should be prepared to endure more strikes," Russell told the management representatives, although he said he was not predicting more strikes.

Sullivan said the master freight and petrochemical industry contracts coming up in the first quarter would set the tone for labor acceptance of the voluntary program.

The briefing was the first of a series of regional sessions scheduled across the country.

The question of enforcement came up during the management session, and Russell had a ready answer. He said Carter plans to publicize a list of industries not complying with the standards, and government agencies will be prohibited from doing business with "violators."

Price guidelines ask businesses to hold annual price increases to one-half of a percentage point below the average rate of increase in 1976 and 1977.

Board to recommend new prison

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Legislative Budget Board has voted to include the first phases of construction of a new $83.5 million state prison in its recommendations to the 1979 Legislature.

Slated for completion in 1985 — if lawmakers appropriate the money — the new prison would house 2,000 inmates.

Board approval is a major boost, since the board includes the House speaker, lieutenant governor and several influential senators and representatives.

The board approved the first $42.4 million of the prison's cost as part of a $275.6 million budget package for the Texas Department of Corrections for fiscal 1980 and 1981.

Also in the budget proposal was $13.1 million to finish work on another prison, the 2,000-inmate Beto Unit.

The budget would add nine doctors and 10 dentists to the TDC staff, so there would be one at each of the 14 units, plus 35 medical attendants to provide 24-hour coverage seven days a week.

A federal court suit currently being heard in Houston alleges that inmates receive grossly inadequate medical care.

The budget approved by the board for submission to the Legislature also would add 612 prison guards to restore the ratio of one corrections officer to every 11 inmates.

Inmate population jumped from 20,862 to 24,615 between September 1977 and September 1978, and the department of corrections estimates it will reach 30,818 in 1981.

Texas electric users will pay more annually

By SUSAN STOLER
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Houston Lighting & Power Co. customers will pay reduced winter rates but will spend $55 million more overall annually under a Texas Public Utility Commission order.

The state's largest electric utility had asked for what amounted to a $235 million increase. Commissioner Alan Erwin said after the rate hike was approved Monday.

"We're disappointed," said Hollis Dean, company group vice president. "We'll have to review the order to make a determination of when we'll be back."

Residential rates would have increased 19 percent under the company proposal, said Jim Parsons, HL&P general manager for public affairs. A $34.06 monthly bill for 1,000 kilowatt hours (kwh) would have increased to $40.58, he explained.

"I wouldn't hazard a guess what it will be under the order," Parsons said. Exact charges will be filed within 15 days.

Commissioner Garrett Morris dissented from Erwin and Chairman George Cowden over the order, mainly because it mandated a seasonal rate structure, with lower charges in winter than in the summer.

"I think we ought to study it before we mandate it," Morris said.

HL&P currently gives winter discounts only to customers using 700 kwh or more. The commission order mandates lower winter charges for all customers.

"I would assume a bulk of people (served by HL&P) will notice a difference on this (winter rate discount)," said Gary Goble, a commission staffer.

In its first rate case filed with the utility commission, the company lost an attempt to retain a fluctuating cost of service adjustment charge.

The charge varied monthly and included fuel, labor, depreciation, financing and other business costs. Base rate charges appeared separately on customer bills.

Defense wants new team

PRYOR, Okla. (AP) — Defense lawyers for Gene Leroy Hart, accused in the slayings of three Girl Scouts last year, requested that the entire prosecution team including Mayes County District Attorney Sid Wise be replaced because of an alleged "financial interest."

A defense attorney for Hart alleged Monday that Wise agreed to co-author a book on the sensational case and made copies of investigative reports available to a newsman who was to write the book.

Wise denies making any records available to Ron Grimsley, the newsman, although he agreed to co-author the book with him.

Defense Attorney Garvin Isaacs has submitted an affidavit saying Grimsley received the disputed investigative evidence. Isaacs is asking the court to order the evidence be made available to him.

District Judge William Whistler issued a bench warrant Monday for Grimsley who left the Pryor area several months Whistler then continued the case on a day-to-day basis until Grimsley can be found and brought to court. No date was set for new hearings.

Hart's trial is now scheduled to begin Nov. 27. However, a 10-day notice must be given to potential jurors about the question of whether Isaacs will get the evidence.

It is also likely that the losing side on that ruling will appeal the decision to the state Court of Criminal Appeals.

Because the trial is expected to be lengthy, the court would also be reluctant to start it at a time it would run into the Christmas and New Year's holiday period.

Hart is accused of the killing of the three Girl Scouts at a summer camp near here in June, 1977. He was arrested after a long search and has been held either in Mayes County jail or the Oklahoma state Penitentiary since then.

His preliminary hearing was held last summer and he was bound over at that time for

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
 Light freezing drizzle coated streets and highways in northern and eastern sections of the Texas Panhandle early today, prompting the National Weather Service to issue a travelers advisory.

Fog covered much of the state during the early morning hours, making driving hazardous over a wide area.

But forecasters said the freezing drizzle would change to drizzle during the morning. Most of the state was to have cloudy skies, cool to cold temperature readings and light rain or drizzle. Highs were to range from the 30s in the Panhandle to the 60s along lower sections of the Texas coast.

Most of the state had cold, foggy, wet weather early today. Early morning temperatures ranged from the lower 30s in the Panhandle to the 50s in South Texas. Extremes ranged from 31 at Dalhart to 59 at Brownsville.

Some early morning temperature readings included 33 at Amarillo, 35 at Wichita Falls, 49 at Texarkana, 47 at Dallas-Fort Worth, 51 at Austin and Lubbock, 56 at Houston, 59 at Corpus Christi, 54 at El Paso and 39 at Lubbock.

Fog was reported at Abilene, Amarillo, Alice, Austin, Brownsville, Childress, College Station, Cotulla, Dallas-Fort Worth, Dalhart, Lufkin, Midland, Lubbock, McAllen, Palacios, San Angelo, Tyler, Waco and Wink.

Zero lot line homes cheaper to purchase

By SYLVIA PORTER

"Zero lot line homes" ... Note well this inelegant sounding string of words, for they stand for a new concept in home building rapidly sweeping across the country - under which home builders are being helped to provide you, a homebuyer, with the kind of detached, single-family houses you want at prices you can afford.

How can builders do it?

By reducing the size of the lot by 25 to 43 feet and placing the house on or close to one of the side boundary lines. Hence the name: zero lot line homes.

To maintain privacy, the wall of the house abutting the boundary sideline contains no windows or only windows placed higher than usual. The rest of the house is especially designed, to bring sunlight into what otherwise would be a dark interior. The single side yard is large enough for a garden, barbecue or patio area.

Begun about 10 years ago in California, where land has long been costly and homes built closer together, zero lot line homes are now springing up in such widely separated cities as St. Louis, Miami, Chicago, Denver and Dallas.

Municipal zoning officials, who once insisted that detached houses be built a certain minimum distance from the boundary lines of their lots, have taken a second look at these restrictions. Many now see the zero lot line concept as a way to reduce urban sprawl, while protecting new households from being priced out of the single-family home market.

Lieutenant governors balk at Missouri meet

By JACK KEEVER Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Lieutenant governors voted Monday to hold their 1979 national conference in the "jet set" resort of Jackson Hole, Wyo., but balked at a committee meeting in Missouri — a state that has not ratified the Equal Rights Amendment.

Members of two committees of the National Conference of Lieutenant Governors also tentatively voted to hold the 1980 annual conference in New York, a state that has ratified the ERA.

The executive and succession committees ended a two-day session with the ERA comments and adoption of a report stating that any lieutenant governor succeeding a governor for an incomplete term should be given full gubernatorial powers.

The Jackson Hole conference will be Aug. 28-30. The committee bypassed New York in 1979 for 1980 to give Democrat Mario Cuomo — newly elected lieutenant governor — more time to become accustomed to the office.

Two committee members reacted to a Monday newspaper story that two Republican lieutenant governors had been "cool" to a plea by Sarah Weddington for statehouse support for the ERA. Ms. Weddington, special assistant to President Carter for women's affairs, addressed the committee on Sunday.

Republican Secretary of State Thyra Thomson of Wyoming noted that the national conference had endorsed the ERA. Republican Lt. Gov. William Phelps of Missouri told reporters he would break a tie in the state Senate, if necessary, to pass the ERA.

Later, Phelps, vice chairman of the national conference, suggested Missouri for the next meeting of the executive committee, but Ms. Thomson objected because the state has not approved the ERA.

Lt. Gov. Shelby Smith of Kansas sought a compromise by inviting members to stay in Kansas, with meetings to be held in Missouri, but Ms. Thomson said 35 states had ratified the ERA and one of those should be chosen for the committee meeting. She said there are now eight woman lieutenant governors in the United States.

The issue was unresolved. In essence, the succession report approved by approximately 15 committee members, said any lieutenant governor who succeeds a governor before a term is over should be given full title and powers and should not be considered an "acting governor."

The report also said that when a lieutenant governor moves up to governor, the lieutenant governor should then be replaced. The committee said in the 20 or so states where governors and lieutenant governors run as a team, the appointment of the new lieutenant governor should be for the balance of the term. In other states, such as Texas, the appointment would be until the next general election.

Aspen land planner David Clinger explains why zero lot line homes often are less expensive than traditional detached houses. "Lot costs amount to around 32 percent of the sales price of a house. Zero lot line houses let us get prices down in this area by increasing the density to 10 or 12 per acre."

Houston builder Michael Marx agrees: "When we can get 10 homes rather than four or five on an acre of land, we can sell them for two-thirds the normal price. We trade side yard space for higher densities. Our buyers like them. But equally important, the mortgage lenders like them. It is much easier to get financing for single-family houses than for town houses or condominiums."

St. Louis developer Fred Kemp adds: "Privacy is the big thing. Our houses are not just part of a row. You don't hear your neighbors pounding on the walls, and the patios are not right on top of one another."

Kemp reports he has sold most of his zero lot line homes, priced from $45,400 to $53,500. The smaller yards are viewed as a plus, particularly in the drought-prone West, reports my Washington associate, Brooke Shearer. As the cost of public water goes up, emphasizes Denver-based builder Harvey Alpert, "homebuyers want smaller lots so it will cost them less to water their lawns. In some new subdivisions around Denver, people are forbidden to plant grass on more than 40 percent of their lot."

Although a key attraction of zero lot line homes is their relatively low price - many sell for $43,000 to $71,000 and that's becoming a "moderate price range" in this era - the design principle also is being used in luxury homes.

You will find truly posh ZLL houses, with the "essential" feature of the swimming pool, selling for as much as $225,000 in such cities as Dallas and resort areas as Newport Beach, Cal.

Just consider the combination of forces behind the development of this concept in home building:

(1) Soaring costs of land and a demand for land among Americans the nation over seeking a protection against inflation that is approaching a dangerously feverish pitch.

(2) Rapidly climbing costs of development in just about every phase which cannot help but push up prices of homes to the ultimate buyers, who are crowding into the market.

(3) The shrinking size of families to two-member, three-member (and even single-member) units, which certainly makes a smaller house on a smaller, easier-to-care-for lot more feasible.

Against this background, the future for the zero lot line home appears bright indeed.

Under Foot

by Gil Phetteplace

Have you ever wondered why some folks eat three times as much food on Nov. 23rd than any other day?

It seems today you have to keep track of all the street-corner santas so that you don't have to explain to the children....

Thanksgiving day now signals; the end of high school football, the start of basketball, 4 games on T.V., one empty bottle of Alka Seltzer, and all the Christmas toys on display at the stores.

To start a fashion look or finish the complete outfit, shop Phetteplace Shoes, 109 N. Cuyler.

Good luck to the Harvesters, the Denver Broncos, the Dallas Cowboys, and the Bromo Seltzer.

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: To the lady who wondered why men in their 50s and 60s marry women in their 20s and 30s: Most men have not shopped for many wives, so they lack experience and expertise. Generally, they've had more experience shopping for cars.

When buying a car, who would opt for an old, used model when he could get a new, unused model for the same price? In an old model, the bumper sags, the frame is crooked, the paint job is poor and the pickup is gone. And if it's 60 years old, it usually comes with a crank.

If you print this, please sign me "Only Kidding in Lincoln, Neb." My 60-year-old wife would kill me if you used my name.

ONLY KIDDING

DEAR ONLY: If you're comparing a woman to an automobile, a restored antique is worth many times more than a new model.

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps I can tell you why older men prefer younger women. I'm a widower, 60, a college graduate, physically fit and financially well off. I enjoy dancing, skiing, tennis, golf, hiking, hunting, fishing, swimming, and the company of women.

Few women in the over-40 age group enjoy outdoor activities. Most are overweight and not in good enough condition to participate fully.

I admit that the older woman is more receptive sexually, but she is less responsive. And, after all, half a man's enjoyment is in the response he receives from his partner.

SANFORD, FLA.

DEAR SANFORD: My mail is running two to one in favor of the younger woman, but read on for an opposing view:

DEAR ABBY: I am a man in my 50s and, believe me, I find little of interest in young women. They can scarcely express themselves without the interjection of "Oh, wow," or a constant scattering of "You knows." I am content to leave these conversational crutches to their peer group.

Give me a warm, intelligent, mature woman in my own age group any time. One who's interesting, affectionate and fun to be with. Unfortunately, I've had no luck finding a woman my own age; they're either all socializing with each other, or they're completely occupied with their grandchildren.

I'll keep looking, however, because in my book, autumn leaves are the most beautiful of all.

BIG DADDY

DEAR DADDY: With your attitude, I'm surprised that you're not deluged with autumn leaves of all colors, shapes and sizes.

Benjamin Franklin, in a letter to a young friend, pointed out the many advantages in taking an older woman for a mistress. To paraphrase Franklin, who reportedly was quite a ladies' man: "Older women are preferable in affaires d'amour because they're more experienced, more discreet, there's no chance of children, women age from the neck down, all cats are gray in the dark, and, lastly—they're so grateful!"

Who said the teen years are the happiest? For Abby's new booklet "What Teenagers Want to Know," write Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Enclose $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope, please.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I want to build up my heart to prevent heart attacks. I know jogging is good for the heart but I've also heard it can be dangerous. What do you recommend for exercise for the heart?

DEAR READER — I am glad you identified the goal you have. The choice of exercise depends upon what you want to achieve. I think walking, jogging, running and endurance exercises are good for your heart if you do them properly and sanely, but the evidence for this is a bit meager.

These exercises are different from weight training, strength and body building exercises. They are endurance exercises. The whole goal is to increase the total body work enough to require your circulation to deliver more oxygen. That increases the work of your heart and lungs.

To give you a good review of what such exercises do I am sending you two issues of The Health Letter number 1-11, Exercise, Heart and Circulation, Part I and number 1-12, Part II. Others who want these two issues can send 50 cents for each with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for them to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have a personal question. I am a 53-year-old man and recently I've been having a problem that really upsets me.

My organ bends like a boomerang when I'm stimulated. Every time it bends to the left, it is very sore. When I try to straighten it with my hand, it feels like a broken joint. I know the organ is all muscle fiber.

I don't know what doctor to go to for this problem, and it has been like this for about four years. I enjoy sex, but with this problem I hate to date anyone.

Polly's Pointers

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — I do not agree with Mrs. H.P. who wrote that cold tea was good for plants. Room temperature coffee or tea are good for certain types of plants but poison to others. Dieffenbachia, orange trees, Schefflera and a few others thrive on the acid contained in coffee and tea but different ivys (including Swedish Ivy) wandering jew and many other plants will take a definite turn for the worse after using them. From experience I have learned the only way to save and revive "poisoned" plants is to remove from the pot, clean the pot and repot in new soil.

LINDA
DEAR POLLY — When peeling onions for a liver and onions dinner the tears started to flow, I grabbed a piece of plastic wrap and slapped it above my eyes. It clung there and scared the tears away. — MRS. D.S.

Matisse: a tribute to a rebel

By Norman Nadel

NEW YORK (NEA) — Nowhere in the world, including his native France, is Henri Matisse so well and so comprehensively represented in a single collection, public or private, as in this city's Museum of Modern Art.

So "Matisse in the Collection of the Museum of Modern Art," at MOMA through Jan. 30, 1979, would have to be rated, almost sight unseen, as a major exhibition of the year.

But it is the seeing that matters. Compared to the exhilaration and challenge of this experience, the size of the show (179 works) diminishes in importance. What matters is the show's — and Matisse's — astonishing diversity.

Major paintings, including a number of avowed masterpieces, span the incredibly broad range of styles he explored in that medium. They begin with the still life "Lemons and Bottle of Dutch Gin," blending Dutch realism and an Impressionistic celebration of color. It was done in 1896 when he was 26, a student of Gustave Moreau and copying paintings in the Louvre in Paris.

The paintings progress, chronologically, to "Memory of Oceania" (1952-53; he died in 1954) which is not a painting at all. Rather, it is done in gouache and crayon on cut-and-pasted paper over canvas. It defies category, as does much of his work in his late years. But the effect is that of a contemporary use of forms and space, which also could have been painted.

It is this airy freedom from the discipline of any single medium which adds to the exhibition's total impact. Included are not only paintings but sculptures, drawings, cutouts, prints, illustrated books, a stained-glass window and a set of chasubles (altar vestments) — the last of these done for the Chapel of the Rosary of the Dominican Nuns of Venice, France.

Matisse revolted not only against the art traditions of his time — time and time again — but against whatever he himself might have been doing the year before. He and the other "fauves," or wild beasts, as one critic tagged them in 1905, broke free from the Impressionists' fidelity to the appearance of things. These rebellious men used color and form as ends in themselves, rather than just as aesthetic means.

And not long after that, Matisse abandoned dimension, or the sense of depth, preferring to paint in bold, flat planes.

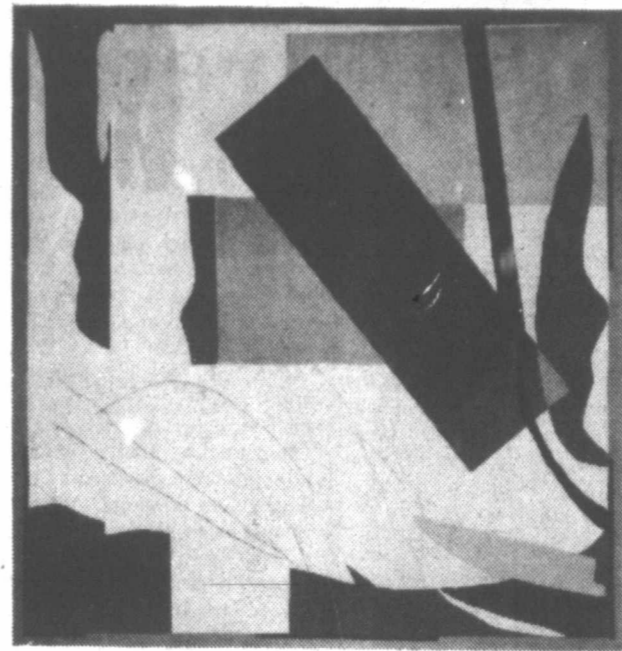

Why did he flatten his pictorial images, use what less free-spirited observers termed the wrong colors, alter forms and figures? One answer might be found in "The Red Studio," a 6-by-7-foot canvas painted when he was living and working at Issy-les-Moulineaux in the fall of 1911.

For a starter, the studio was white-walled and brightly illuminated from windows. In the painting, the walls, floor, tables, chair, stools, vase and three figures in a painting-within-the-painting all are Venetian red.

"You are looking for the red wall," Matisse told a visitor to the studio shortly after the painting was finished. "This wall does not exist at all! As you can see here, I have painted the same pieces of furniture against a wall of the studio of a pure blue-gray color. These are the sketches, the studies if you wish; as pictures they did not satisfy me."

"When I had found the color red, I put these studies in a corner and they remained there. Where I got the color red — to be sure, I do not know that ... I find that all these things, flowers, furniture, the chest of drawers, only become what they are to me when I see them together with the color red. Why such is the case I do not know ..."

The sculpture, by contrast with the defiantly flat painting, is vigorously three-dimensional, demanding great, solid chunks of space even for small pieces. It is assertive, often harsh, exaggerated, yet at the same time composed, complete and timeless. Such angular sculpture, in which curves of face and figure might be fashioned in flat planes, is familiar today, but it was revolutionary when Matisse first did it between 1900 and 1913.

HENRI MATISSE'S "Memory of Oceania" (1952-1953) defies category, as does much of his work in his late years. It is not a painting at all. Rather, it is done in gouache and crayon on cut- and - pasted paper over canvas.

First of five heads he did of "Jeannette" (Jeanne Vadenin) between 1910 and 1913 shows the characteristic upswept hairdo of the time, a large nose, petulant mouth and small chin, in lifelike proportions. But then Jeannette starts to change. By the third version she is a sculptured caricature. The hairdo has become five lumpy buns. Eyes protrude and the nose is hewn in angled planes.

By the fifth version, her hair has become part of a single mass which includes her forehead and nose. One eye is gone, and so is any softness of the original. The transformation, from a head on the model's terms to one on the sculptor's terms, is complete.

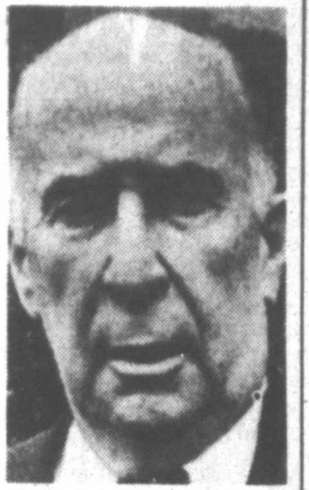

A grant from the Robert Wood Johnson Jr. Charitable Trust has made the Matisse show possible. It has been directed by John Elderfield, curator, department of painting and sculpture at MOMA.

In addition to the art, there are lectures on various aspects of the artist's work, movies and daily gallery talks throughout the run of the exhibition. That is a lot to devote to the work of one man. But when the one man is Henri Matisse, it is no more than he deserves.

What's up in nicknames?

Most Americans know that "Silent Cal" referred to President Coolidge and "Tricky Dick" to President Nixon. But test yourself on these more obscure political nicknames from "Safire's Political Dictionary" (Random House) by columnist and former Nixon speechwriter William Safire.

Mitchell: Big Enchilada

Abominable No-Man: Sherman Adams, President Eisenhower's chief of staff.

Barefoot Boy from Wall Street: Wendell Wilkie, Republican candidate for president in 1940.

World longs for natural greenery

By EARL ARONSON

AP Newsfeatures

"The world's longing for natural greenery is greater than ever before."

That's what F. Leon Herron Jr. said as O.M. Scott & Sons dedicated a new research center at Marysville, Ohio, in 1977. Greenery is the company's business and 100 researchers — pathologists, chemists, entomologists, agronomists, chemical engineers and geneticists — are working at the center to help make and keep things green.

During a recent tour of the facilities, some of these experts offered advice for the home lawnkeeper and gardener. For instance:

Grass response to slow-release fertilizers depends on the weather, rainfall, soil temperature and soil moisture. Some weeds don't come under control in the spring and return in the fall. Fall application of weed killers knocks out weeds or sets them back, and winter adds another blow to them.

Apply weed control in the morning when the dew is heavy and don't water for 24 hours. Fertilize at any time. If you have a thick turf you have less trouble with weeds.

If you overfeed your lawn, leaf spot and crown rot can result.

Testing is under way on house plants for growth regulators to control insect hormones, and thus the ravages by insects. Ferns, very sensitive, are being used in testing insecticides.

Drastic changes in light intensity could kill plants. Move them gradually to the light.

In seeking long-lasting, long-working plant food, one that costs several hundred dollars a pound has been developed, but not many would buy it at that price.

One objective is to develop a grass that does not need much mowing.

To those who witnessed blast Mine explosion remains fresh

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — At 5:40 a.m. on Nov. 20, 1968, the tiny community of Farmington, W.Va., exploded into the nation's headlines. Ten years later, the headlines have faded. But the memories of that gray, snowy Wednesday remain fresh for those whose lives were entwined with the 99 miners working the graveyard shift at the Llewellyn portal of Consolidation Coal Co.'s No. 9 mine.

A ferocious explosion in No. 9 killed 78 of those miners. The blast — the first of 20 major explosions and many more minor ones that would rock the huge mine over the next nine days — threw the shaft's elevator carriage into the air and the concrete blocks of the lamp house into the parking lot with such force they crushed automobiles. One car, set afire, sent smoke 150 feet into the air.

The destruction of the lamp house, where miners check in at the start of a shift, made it difficult at first for mine officials to determine how many miners were inside. Ultimately, only 21 of the miners escaped. Thirteen were able to walk or ride out of the mine fairly quickly. Within four hours, eight others were scooped out of a ventilation shaft, two by two, in a bucket on the end of a crane.

"I helped load them into ambulances," Charles Priester Jr. said shortly afterward. "They were sick and vomiting, and two of them were bleeding from the eyes. The concussion from a blast down in the mines does that to you."

For days, union, company, state and federal safety officials struggled to find a way to extinguish the inferno, but all attempts were thwarted by the devastating power of the continuing explosions.

A half-inch steel plant, anchored by two steel beams, was placed over the shaft in an attempt to smother the raging fires. Another explosion ripped the 30 tons of steel away as though it were tinfoil.

By the second day, smoke and flames poured from two other shafts — one of them seven miles from the Llewellyn portal. It seemed the entire mine was ablaze.

Throughout the long ordeal, residents of the community clustered at the company store, where mine officials had set up a public address system to carry news of rescue efforts, and at the Methodist church.

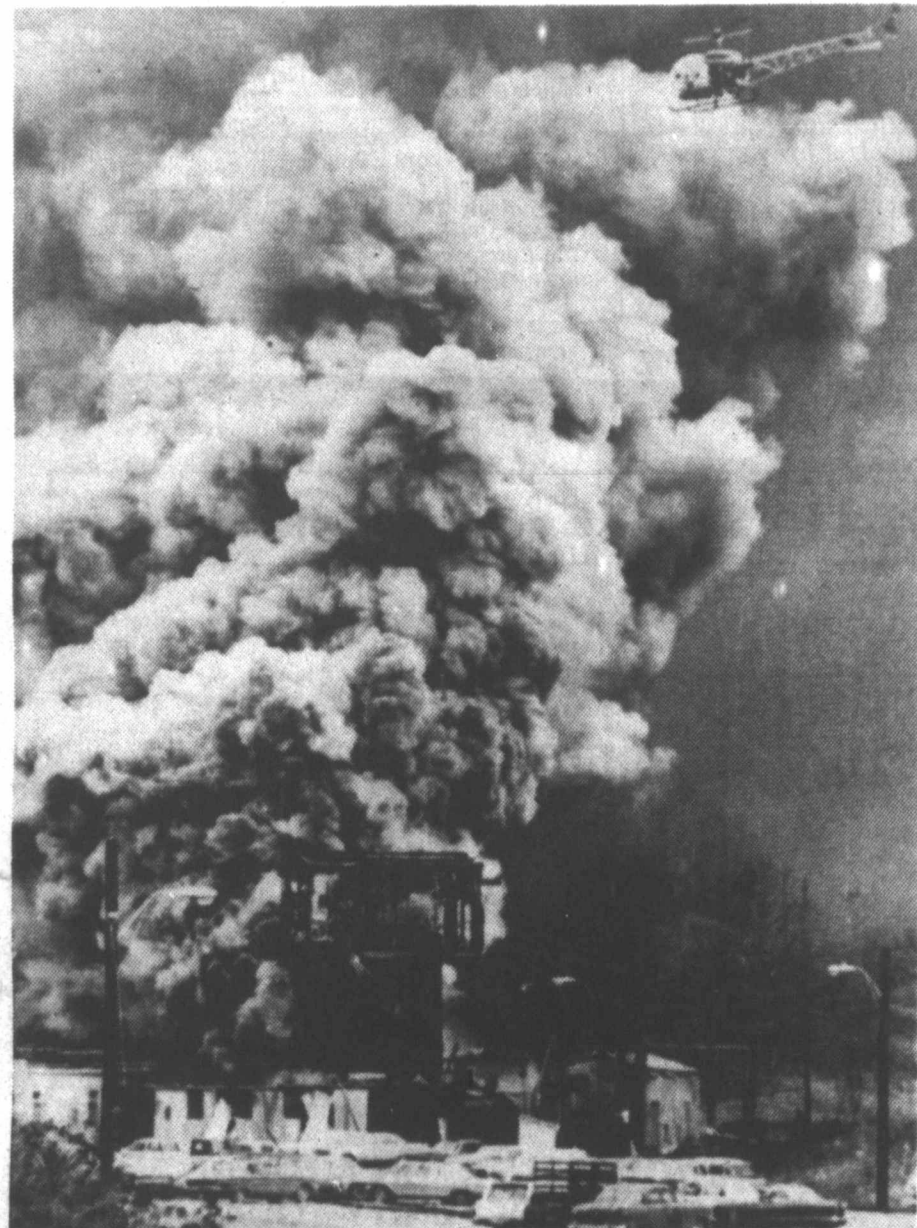

As in many small West Virginia towns, the Farmington mine was an intrinsic part of every resident's life. Those who didn't work at No. 9 were involved in some other way, in supplying or serving the mine, or dependent upon its personnel for support. Even the local women's club called itself the No. 9 Homemakers Club.

So it was not unusual for the community to gather at the mine. Within hours, the No. 9 Homemakers had set up shop in a weatherworn building, passing out coffee to families of the trapped miners and rescue workers. Later there were sandwiches, homemade soups and pies.

Most authorities could offer only grim predictions to the families clustered about the Llewellyn portal: "There's almost no hope of getting the trapped men out alive," Harry Turner, a Consolidated safety inspector, said on the second day.

Dark-haired Barbara Toler stayed at the mine to await her husband, Dennis, even though she was expecting a baby — due any moment. "I brought him a nice clean shirt in case his work clothes get burned off," she said. "But I forgot to bring a pair of pants for him."

Astro-Graph

By Bernice Bede Osol

November 22, 1978
Your desires for independence are apt to grow stronger than usual this coming year. You'll be your own person — and be happier — without offending anyone in the process.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Someone who knows how to manipulate you and your generous nature may try to pull something rather shrewd today. Forewarned is forearmed. Find out the secrets of getting along with others by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 488, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It's not likely you'll achieve all you set out to do today, because you'll be tripping over your own feet. Be more deliberate, less impulsive.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Caution and self-doubt are not one and the same, although today you could believe them to be so. Tread warily, but have hope in your heart.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Normally you get along with just about anyone when you apply yourself. Today, however, joint ventures could cause complications you're better off without.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It may be necessary to do a little apple polishing with the boss today, even though he is in the wrong. After all, it's his signature that makes your paycheck cashable.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You tend to make promises today that you'll have difficulty in delivering. Don't tell someone you're going to do something for them if you know you can't.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be wary today of placing too much trust in unreliable individuals. They could create complex problems which you will have a hard time unwinding.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A major fracas could erupt at home today if you bring up an issue on which you and your mate are poles apart. Select dinner table conversation topics wisely.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A key to having others treat you considerably today is to treat them in a like manner. Being dictatorial will only earn you unpleasant retorts.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your desires to buy greatly exceed your means today, so steer clear of the expensive boutiques. Shopping should be restricted to small cash sales.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Being your own person and doing things your way is not without merit, provided no one is hurt in the process. Cooperate today, but don't use others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) In order to get along with another today you may agree to something which is opposed to your best interests. Be friendly, not foolish.

Mayberry MVP

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Fullback James Mayberry and linebacker Jeff Lee have been chosen the most valuable players on this year's University of Colorado football team.

Mayberry, a 5-foot-11, 215-pound senior from Amarillo, Texas, ended his college football career as the third-leading rusher in CU history, with 2,550 yards. He also was named the team's top offensive back.
Lee, a 6-foot-1, 210-pound senior from Snohomish, Wash., recorded 85 tackles this year before he was injured during the CU's clash with Kansas State two weeks ago.

Mark Haynes of Kansas City was selected as the top defensive back.

Campbell leading NFL backs

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — It was supposed to be Earl Campbell vs. Delvin Williams, a battle of two super running backs. It was no contest.

"I don't try to compete against anybody or compare myself to anybody," said Campbell, Houston's soft-spoken rookie. And there was no way anybody could compare anybody with him after he ran roughshod over Miami Monday night.

His four touchdown runs, his 199 yards, 81 of them with barely a minute to play with barely turned out to be the winning score in the Oilers' 35-30 victory — all those were merely surface numbers, not indicative of just how great this Heisman Trophy winner from the University of Texas may become.

His explosive performance vaulted him from fourth to first in National Football League rushing with 1,143 yards, 13 more than Williams and just 29 fewer than the rookie record of 1,172 set four years ago by San Diego's Don Woods.

His four touchdowns — from 1, 6, 12 and 81 yards — gave him 12 for the season, just one shy of the rookie record set by Cookie Gilchrist in 1962.

And as the names were fossed around — Woods, Gilchrist, Williams, and the bigger ones like Brown, Simpson, Payton and Dorsett — Campbell's voice became almost plaintive.

"Please, please," he begged, "Don't put me on the spot. I don't set goals for myself now. The game I had tonight, I didn't plan it. That one yard that would have gotten me 200, that didn't matter as long as we won. If I hadn't gained the 56 to go over 1,000, that wouldn't have mattered just so we won."

"When I first came into the league the only goal I set for myself was to try and stay healthy all season and go out and do my best. I don't go out there trying to break records. I don't run with the ball thinking I'm gonna be better than somebody or get more yards than somebody."

"I just try and do my best, that's all. Sometimes my best looks like my worst, but it's not important how it looks. What matters is how we do, whether we win."

Without him, of course, the Oilers would have been nothing Monday night. With Houston holding Williams to 73 yards rushing (Miami finished with 127 on the ground to the Oilers 265) the Dolphins had to count much more on Bob Griese's passing.

And Griese was superb, completing 23 of 33 attempts for 349 yards and two touchdowns, a 10-yarder to Nat Moore to open the scoring and an 11-yarder to Jimmy Cefalo on the game's final play.

One-yard runs by Williams in the second period and Leroy Harris in the third scored the other Miami touchdowns. But for a few moments it seemed the two biggest points would be A.J. Duke's end-zone tackle of Houston Quarterback Dan Pastorini, who had passed 15 yards to Mike Barber for Houston's other touchdown.

Duke's safety gave the Dolphins a 23-21 lead with 12:25 to play, and the ensuing free kick gave the Dolphins the ball at the Houston 45-yard line. Miami appeared poised to put the game away.

"After the safety we got the ball in good position and didn't get anything," said Griese. "That was the key series. They have a good defense and you're not going to score every time you get the ball."

Coach Don Shula agreed, noting that "the turning point was the drive that stalled after the safety."

The result left each team at 8-4. Houston two games behind Pittsburgh in the American Conference's Central Division and Miami one back of front-running New England in the AFC East.

Sugar bowl to get 1-2 punch?

By The Associated Press

A matchup between the nation's two top-ranked teams in the Sugar Bowl for the national championship?

It could happen if second-ranked Alabama beats Auburn Dec. 2 in its final game of the season. A victory by the Crimson Tide would make them the Southeastern Conference representative in the Sugar Bowl, against No. 1-rated Penn State, on New Year's Day in New Orleans.

The Nittany Lions, the nation's only major unbeaten team and atop this week's Associated Press college football poll with 1,306 points, accepted a Sugar Bowl bid last week. They play their regular-season finale Friday at home against 15th-ranked Pittsburgh.

In the weekly balloting, by a nationwide panel of 66 sports writers and broadcasters, Penn State, 10-0-0, received 59 first-place votes in finishing first by an overwhelming margin for the second week in a row in The Associated Press' major college poll.

Alabama, 9-1-0, collected three first-place votes and moved from third place into the runnerup spot with 1,213 points. Both Penn State and Alabama were idle last weekend.

Southern California, which clinched a Rose Bowl berth with a 17-10 victory over UCLA last Saturday, advanced to third place with two first-place votes and 1,152 points. Only two points behind the Trojans was Orange Bowl-bound Oklahoma, which routed Oklahoma State 62-7. The Sooners retained fourth place with the other two No. 1 votes and 1,150 points.

Houston, idle last week, climbed from sixth to fifth with 1,025 points, and Michigan, which beat Purdue 24-6, advanced from seventh to sixth with 1,015 points.

Nebraska, Oklahoma's Orange Bowl opponent but a 35-31 loser to Missouri last week, slipped from second to seventh with 880 points.

Defending national champion Notre Dame, a 38-21 winner over Georgia Tech and recipient of a Cotton Bowl bid, vaulted from 10th to eighth with 797 points.

Rounding out the Top Ten were Texas, which remained ninth with 794 points after a 41-0 rout over Texas Christian, and No. 10 Clemson, which outscored Maryland 28-24 and won the Atlantic Coast Conference title. Clemson accumulated 749 points.

Arkansas led the Second Ten and was followed by Georgia, Maryland, Michigan State, Pitt, Ohio State, UCLA, Purdue, Missouri and Iowa State.

Last week's Second Ten were Maryland, Clemson, Arkansas, UCLA, Purdue, Michigan State, Louisiana State, Pitt, Ohio State and Georgia Tech.

Missouri's upset over Nebraska enabled the Tigers to return to the Top Twenty after a three-week absence, while Iowa State, which had been unranked for five weeks, re-entered by downing Colorado 20-16.

LSU dropped out after losing to Mississippi State 16-14 and Georgia Tech fell from the rankings after its setback against Notre Dame.

Horner has season to remember

ATLANTA (AP) — This has been a year Bob Horner will relish for a lifetime.

"What else can happen in a year?" the slugging third baseman of the Atlanta Braves wondered Monday after being named the National League Rookie of the Year by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

"That's absolutely fantastic," said Horner, who began lifting weights Monday to rehabilitate his left shoulder following corrective surgery on Oct. 3.

"That caps off a year that I'll probably never forget the rest of my life — getting married, college Player of the Year and Rookie of the Year," he added.

Horner, the No. 1 choice in last June's free agent draft, played only half a season to win the award, which is decided by the votes of two BBWAA members in each of the league's 12 franchise cities.

Horner received 12½ votes to beat out shortstop Ozzie Smith of the San Diego Padres and pitcher Don Robinson of the Pittsburgh Pirates, the only other players gaining support in the balloting. Smith had 8½ votes and Robinson 3.

"They were both real good candidates for the award, too,"

Horner said. "I wished them all the best, but I'm happy to win it myself."

Appearing in 89 games after joining the Braves on June 16, Horner hit 23 homers and drove in 63 runs. He scored 50 runs, had 17 doubles and one triple.

He had a .266 batting average and a .539 slugging percentage, fourth best in the league behind Pittsburgh's Dave Parker, Los Angeles' Reggie Smith and Cincinnati's George Foster. He did not have enough at-bats, however, to qualify for league recognition in slugging percentage.

The Sporting News earlier named Horner the collegiate Player of the Year after he batted over .400 and hit 25 home runs for Arizona State, which lost to Southern California in the College World Series finals.

His ratio of one home run for every 14.04 at-bats was the best ever recorded by a Rookie of the Year award winner, surpassing the one for every 14.77 at-bats set by Willie McCovey when he broke in with the San Francisco Giants.

"I just think he's got a super future ahead of him," said Atlanta Manager Bobby Cox. "He will be capable of winning the RBI and home run titles in the future."

Why did 400 people die?

NEW YORK (AP) — Hundreds of members of a religious cult formed an orderly line, then took their lives with a draught of poison. Shocking, yes. And bizarre. But not, say the experts, surprising.

Challenged from without, shaken by defections within, the Rev. Jim Jones's People's Temple swelled with uncertainty, then "imploded," experts believe. Nearly 400 cultists took their own lives in the isolated jungle of Guyana, a tiny South American republic.

Some reportedly were shot, but Guyanese authorities said most apparently died of poison. An estimated 700 others were believed to have fled into the jungle. The suicides — including Jones, his wife and son — died just hours after the sect ambushed and killed five Americans, including U.S. Rep. Leo Ryan of California.

Mind-boggling though the mass suicide appears, scholars on suicide and cults such as the People's Temple say they saw it coming. It was only a question, they say, of who and when.

"Nobody has believed we silly people who said it is possible to control people to this degree. But it has happened," said Boston psychiatrist John Clark.

who has studied these cults for five years.

"This is not surprising," said Rabbi James Rudin, an official of the American Jewish Committee who has written extensively on cults. "It's not surprising when you consider the totalitarian atmosphere in which most cults operate."

"Our war, our side — it's a madness of many," said Dr. Edwin Shneidman of the University of California, the nation's only professor of thanatology — a discipline named for Thanatos, the Greek god of death.

These men say that strong, even totalitarian, leaders like Jones leave no room for their adherents to dissent. Often, says Clark, it is this uniformity of thought and belief that attracts followers.

"People who go into cults are in a state of mind that does not allow inside information to enter. They feel safe, cozy. They can talk their own language to each other. It's reinforced by their opposition to all outside reality — an 'us and they' mentality."

Clark believes Congressman Ryan cracked this wall of uniformity when he visited the People's Temple commune Saturday to investigate alleged abuse of sect members, several members chose to leave with him. These events, Clark says, "tore apart the cult's sense of certainty."

"I think the thing imploded," he said. "You have to understand that there is no room for ambiguity in groups like this. When ambiguity occurred, when something went wrong, they all panicked and the cult destroyed itself."

The ambush and killings followed. Within hours, according to witnesses, cult members lined up for a draught of poison reportedly brewed in a large vat.

Mark Lane, a lawyer representing the cult, was at the camp just before the deaths. He said the members discussed suicide before he fled, fearing for his own life. He said two cult members told him: "We are all going to die now."

"They were smiling... they looked genuinely happy," Lane said.

A California psychologist, who accompanied Ryan to Guyana to try to get his daughter out of Jonestown, said members of the group rehearsed mass suicide and signed undated suicide notes before they left California for Guyana.

One can only speculate about

Jones' motives. There were reports he was seriously ill. He was apparently fascinated by suicide and once led a demonstration calling for a "suicide barrier" on San Francisco's Golden Gate Bridge. But a more compelling question is why his followers were willing to join him in death.

"There is something called 'altruistic suicide,'" said Shneidman, "when ties to the society are so strong that the dictates of the group govern the individual's life. It would take enormous ego strength to step out of that line in the jungle and say, 'I prefer not to.' If he does, they might shoot him."

Shneidman said he was reminded of Masada where nearly a thousand Jews under siege by the Romans during the first century A.D. committed suicide rather than be slaughtered or enslaved.

Rudin adherents like those who followed Jones into death "true believers." "The true believer is a tragic phenomenon in world history. They are often intolerant. They are prone to follow authoritarian leadership. And they'll do anything to further the cause."

Washington briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The AFL-CIO is prepared to join a proposed international union trade boycott of Chile to protest the Chilean military government's repression of workers' rights, a spokesman for the labor federation says.

AFL-CIO spokesman Allen Zack said Monday that the Inter-American Regional Organization of Workers, which is affiliated with the AFL-CIO, opens a meeting Friday in Lima, Peru, where a decision to start the boycott is expected. AFL-CIO actions which could include the refusal of longshoremen to unload ships carrying Chilean products or to load ships destined for Chile.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police statistics showing an increase in aggravated assault are the product of differences in reporting rather than an increase in violence, according to a criminologist testifying before Congress.

Franklin E. Zimring of the University of Chicago also told the House subcommittee on crime Monday that rates of serious crime by the young have stabilized and in some cases declined in recent years.

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House press secretary Jody Powell says more than $500 million a year is now being saved through various administrative "reforms and improvements" begun since President Carter took office.

But Powell complained Monday that the moves — including faster processing of veterans insurance premiums and slower payment of Pentagon bills, allowing more interest to be accumulated — are not being covered by reporters because "it is difficult to make these sort of reforms and improvements an exciting or sexy sort of story."

WASHINGTON (AP) — New regulations aimed at protecting the mentally ill and retarded people who are involved in federally financed research projects have been proposed by the government.

The regulations, for example, would allow such persons to refuse to participate in the government programs. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare spends millions of dollars in research money involving the mentally ill, emotionally disturbed, mentally retarded and senile.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge says the Hari Krishna religious sect can distribute literature at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts just as beverage and souvenir vendors do.

U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch made the ruling Monday in dismissing charges of soliciting that had been filed against three members of the International Society for Krishna Consciousness, which claimed that a National Park Service regulation prohibiting the sale of leaflets and pamphlets in the Kennedy Center violated their rights of free speech.

Cancer caused by bomb tests

CEDAR CITY, Utah (AP) — Folks here used to get up early to watch the brilliant pre-dawn flashes and enormous mushroom clouds 100 miles away. Twenty years later, Blaine Johnson counts 11 people dead of cancer within 200 yards of his house.

Two neighbors have leukemia now, just like five of the 11 who died in the past 10 years in this waystation of 8,500 between Salt Lake City and Las Vegas. Just like Johnson's daughter, who died of leukemia in 1965, three years after the United States stopped above-ground nuclear testing at a barren site upwind and across the state line in Nevada.

The American Cancer Society said the national annual leukemia death rate is 6 per 100,000.

"Everyone thought it was the neatest thing to watch the blast just before dawn, watch the cloud form and then drift by," said John Rogers of nearby St. George. His mother died of cancer in 1956.

"We actually believed that the federal government would not involve itself in anything that would jeopardize the public health," added fellow townsman Ronald Garner, whose daughter died of cancer in 1966. Curiosity may have resulted in catastrophe for many. Like LeOra Hafen of St. George, widowed 13 years ago when her rancher husband died of cancer. Leukemia had taken a 15-year-old daughter in 1956, and cancer has since claimed her mother and a brother-in-law.

One of Mrs. Hafen's friends, Arizona rancher Max Brinkerhoff, died of leukemia last February. The illness had previously claimed three of his childhood pals.

An informal telephone survey in three small southwest Utah towns — Parowan, Paragonah, and Summit, combined population less than 2,000 — turned up 157 cancer deaths, survivors said last week.

"They became, in effect, civilian soldier-victims of the Cold War," said attorney McArthur Wright, who represents surviving families in a developing legal fight for damages.

Wright and co-attorneys Dale Haralson of Tucson, Ariz., and former U.S. Interior Secretary Steward Udall filed claims with the Energy Department in Las Vegas in September on behalf of 38 survivors.

They seek damages of $1 million for each of nine deaths. Within a month, Wright said, as many as 212 additional claims will be filed.

National briefs

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — President Carter's special assistant on women's affairs says the proposed Equal Rights Amendment is "an issue that will not go away."

Sarah Weddington told lieutenant governors Sunday that the proposal "is a very basic principle and right in this country." The measure, which would outlaw discrimination based on sex, must be ratified by 38 states by June 30, 1982, to become part of the Constitution. So far, the ERA has been approved by 35 states, but four have since rescinded approval. The validity of that move still is in question and the Justice Department has said it is up to Congress to decide.

DALLAS (AP) — Welders and technicians from England begin work today, building a giant $450,000 sculpture by Henry Moore.

The sculpture, "Vertebrae in Three Pieces," is the largest work the English artist has ever developed. It will be placed on the plaza of the new City Hall. Three giant parts of the sculpture, each weighing 9,000 pounds, arrived Nov. 11. Moore has said he will attend dedication ceremonies on Dec. 5.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Some medical interventions made possible by recent technology are "half-cures" that harm a patient more than leaving him alone. Dr. Raymond Duff of Yale Medical School says.

Patients usually prefer medical intervention to death, but in cases where informed patients choose death, their wishes should be respected. Duff told a conference on "Life, Death and Human Rights" on Saturday. Duff created controversy when he suggested in The New England Journal of Medicine that severely medically impaired infants should not be kept alive by extraordinary means.

FLORENCE, Ky. (AP) — An incoming Piedmont airliner overshot the runway at Greater Cincinnati Airport and braked to a stop on grass, according to airport officials. There were no reports of injuries among the 35 passengers and crew of four.

The plane was arriving from Huntington, W.Va., early Sunday night. The flight originated in Washington, D.C., with stops at Richmond, Roanoke and Huntington. The incident occurred in clear weather on the airport's shortest runway.

CINCINNATI (AP) — A 27-year-old Cincinnati man was jailed after allegedly injuring three sheriff's deputies during a brawl at an Anderson Township restaurant.

Hamilton County Sheriff Lincoln Stokes said one of the deputies, Randy Kocher, was thrown through a plate glass window by the alleged assailant, John Straehley, who was charged with felonious assault on a police officer, drunkenness, disorderly conduct and resisting arrest.

Kocher suffered a severe laceration to the chest and cuts to the shoulders and arms. He was listed in satisfactory condition.

Washington briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pan American World Airways Chairman William T. Seawell says it is "disturbing" that Alfred Kahn, chief federal inflation fighter, has reportedly questioned Pan American's attempt to merge with National Airlines.

Kahn was quoted in a newspaper account Thursday as saying he is skeptical that such a merger would stimulate the competition he feels is necessary in the airline industry. Pan American is attempting to merge with National while Texas International Airlines is trying to acquire National through stock purchases. National's officials have approved the Pan Am merger and oppose the TXI takeover bid.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bombings killed 127 persons in the United States last year, injured hundreds and caused more than $1 billion in property damage, according to John G. Krogman, acting director of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

He says explosives investigations are the "No. 1 priority" of the bureau and the agency is ready to respond quickly anywhere in the United States to major bombing and arson cases. Krogman's remarks were prepared for delivery to the American Police Conference meeting in Las Vegas, Nev., and released here today.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The portrayal of old people in television commercials is getting better because advertisers realize that the "elderly" constitute a $60 billion-plus market, a University of Maryland communication expert says in a new study.

Kathleen Jamieson based her study on the elderly people portrayed on 300 commercials broadcast in October as well as on congressional hearing data from the House Select Committee on Aging.

WASHINGTON (AP) — No matter how many new faces turn up in Congress every two years, many things stay the same.

Assuming that rule holds true, here are the sort of things that could happen after the 96th Congress convenes in January: Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., will denounce the obstructionism of unnamed Republican senators and declare that the first order of business will be to change the filibuster rule to make it easier to close off debate.

After a six-week filibuster, Byrd will abandon his effort to change the rule. "The Senate has spoken," he will say with masterful understatement.

Unnamed friends of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., will be quoted as saying he has decided to allow his name to stay on the ballot in the New Hampshire presidential primary. Kennedy will deny the report and then leave for an extended skiing vacation in New Hampshire.

President Carter will be asked, while on a 40-state speaking tour, whether he will demand that Congress outlaw the sale of gin between the hours of noon and 3 p.m. Sen. Russell Long will point out that the Carter plan would really penalize as busboys, bottlers and olive pitters.

Gerald R. Ford will leave on a 37-state speaking tour. "Someone must carry the Republican message to the American people," Ford will say at 37 airport news conferences. The former president will deny the trip marks the opening of his campaign for the 1980 presidential nomination.

Ronald Reagan will leave on 38-state speaking tour. "Someone must carry the Republican message to the American people," Reagan will say at 38 airport news conferences. The former California governor will deny the trip marks the opening of his campaign for the 1980 presidential nomination.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., will be asked, while on a 40-state speaking tour, whether he is running for president. "You bet I am," he will say.

President Carter will appoint 17 former aides of House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr.

to various federal jobs. "I never cease to marvel at the ability of our great Democratic president to find the right person for the right job," the speaker will say.

Taking advantage of a special excursion fare, Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California will tour the country by bus. Asked if this is the start of a campaign for the 1980 Democratic presidential nomination, Brown will reply: "I'm going wherever this ticket takes me."

The royal "we," it is believed, was first used by Richard I of England.
