Snow, cold hits area

While Pride of Pampa band members are enjoying sunny skies and mild temperatures in southern California, the rest of us will have to suffer. The weather forecast for Pampa calls for an accumulation of one to three inches of snow by Sunday and continuing cold temperatures, with a high in the mid 20s. Gusty winds up to 20 mph will continue to prevail but the chance for more snow will drop to 20 percent later today. Meanwhile, Harry Keyes of the Department of Public Safety (DPS) reported Saturday night that his office had received numerous calls from motorists concerned about weather conditions. Slippery roads are the main danger, said Keyes. Keyes said the DPS will have extra officers on duty

More than 12 hurt in collision

MEMPHIS, Texas (AP) — More than a dozen people, mostly children, were injured Saturday when a bus chartered by a Dallas-area church was involved in a three-vehicle collision on a snow-covered Panhandle highway. The Texas Department of Public Safety said a car, a truck and the bus collided on U.S. Highway 287 north of Memphis. A hospital spokeswoman said most of the patients arriving at the emergency room had received minor injuries. One person with a neck injury was taken to an Amarillo hospital. The bus was en route to the First United Methodist Church in Carrollton.

Deaths linked to conspiracy

By DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A House committee concluded Saturday that President John F. Kennedy was probably assassinated as a result of a conspiracy and that a conspiracy likely was behind the murder of Martin Luther King Jr. The report by the House assassinations committee released at the end of a two-year, $5.8 million investigation, contradicted the Warren Commission's conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald alone was responsible for Kennedy's slaying in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963. It also differed with the FBI and other government agencies which concluded that King's murder in Memphis, Tenn., on April 4, 1968, was the work of one man — James Earl Ray. The panel said its conclusion in the Kennedy case was based on new acoustical evidence that establishes a high probability that two gunmen fired at President Kennedy. It also said that other scientific evidence does not preclude the possibility of two gunmen firing on the president. The committee said it believes, on the basis of the circumstantial evidence available to it, that there is a likelihood that James Earl Ray assassinated Dr. Martin Luther King as a result of a conspiracy. However, the panel did not state its reason for concluding that a conspiracy was behind the murder of King, the famed civil rights leader and Nobel peace prize winner. Chairman Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, has indicated it would cite its reasons when it issues its full report, likely next week, and in a compilation of evidence, probably in March. The committee, in what it called a "summary of findings and recommendations," called upon the Justice Department to review its findings and analyze whether further official investigation is warranted in either case. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, the late president's brother, was skiing in Colorado over the weekend. He said he would prefer to make no immediate comment. Tom Southwick, press secretary for the Massachusetts Democrat, said Sen. Kennedy's position in the past has been that he and the family were satisfied with the Warren Commission report but that he understands the House's desire to look into it. In Atlanta, George Clements, a spokesman for King's widow, Coretta Scott King, said she would not comment publicly until after examining the committee's report more closely. At Camp David, Md., White House associate press secretary Patricia Baro said President Carter would have no public comment on the report until he has a chance to study it. Besides concluding that both the Kennedy and King assassinations resulted from probable conspiracies, the committee made a series of recommendations aimed at preventing any other such slayings. It urged the Justice Department to re-examine its procedures for handling assassinations to make sure it takes full advantage of the resources of other governmental agencies and of technological and scientific evidence. Kennedy was shot to death on Nov. 22, 1963, as the presidential motorcade was passing through Dealey Plaza in Dallas. Lee Harvey Oswald was arrested for the slaying but was himself slain by Jack Ruby before he could be tried. King, the Baptist minister who won a Nobel peace prize, was shot to death in Memphis, Tenn., on April 4, 1968. At first, Ray pleaded guilty to the crime. But he later recanted, saying he'd been framed. Ray, who was brought to Washington amid tight security to testify before the committee, is serving a 99-year prison term at Brushy Mountain State Prison in Petros, Tenn. The new acoustical evidence, involving scientific tests on a tape recording made from a Dallas police officer's motorcycle radio during the time of the assassination, seemed to contradict the Warren Commission's

Dreams come true

PASEDENA, Calif. — For a band that has traveled to Ireland and is now about to perform in the Rose Bowl, it may be difficult to find an encore. But, this probably isn't the last trip for The Pride of Pampa. In an interview that ranged over a number of topics, Band Director Jeff Doughten said "We're working on something. We will spring it on you at the party Monday night." Doughten declined to elaborate. However, both he and assistant band director Jim Duggan gave a comparison between the visit to Ireland in 1977 and this trip which led 163 students and additional boosters to the Rose Bowl. "You have to look at it in prospective. The Ireland trip was competitive. It was a completely different type of trip. This one here is so much more select. There are only seven or eight high school bands in the parade. We feel it is a big honor. We're just as excited with this as with Ireland. This is not a second rate trip," he emphasized. "This is by far the biggest trip I've been involved in as a director," Duggan said. "As long as I can remember, it seems everyone I know watches the Rose Bowl Parade. It is something I will always remember and our kids will too. Very few people in the Panhandle have seen the parade in person." Comparing it to the Ireland trip, both men said a lot more people are involved with the Rose Bowl Parade and the route is longer. Doughten said, "This is the largest parade in the world. It's the most watched show of any 365 days a year. You can't beat the publicity." Asked how they got invited here, Doughten said he was over at Duggan's house last New Year's Day watching the Rose Bowl and they thought it would be nice to be in it. By chance, a few days later officials called and asked Doughten if he would be interested in having the band perform in the Rose Bowl. He said yes but he didn't want to wait three or four years which is usually the waiting period. However, the officials said they were talking about 1979 so he accepted.

Duggan said "It seems every time the band makes a big trip we get more invitations as a result." On another subject, Doughten said he would think Pampans are sick of the band. He said most people offer support and those who complain are a vocal minority. "If it weren't for the people of Pampa we wouldn't be here. They paid the bill." The funds were all raised by free enterprise, he said, and tax dollars were not used. He said it was support from the town that made him change his mind about his decision to leave Pampa. He had announced his resignation last month but later withdrew it. The support was certainly a factor in my staying I wouldn't have come back to an anti-band town. I'll tell you that band has done a lot for Pampa but Pampa has done a lot for the band. It's a two way street. They also discussed the effect of the trip on band members. "I think travel is one of the most educational experiences there is," Doughten said. Duggan, a Pampa High School student

"til he graduated in 1973, said he went on several trips as a band member. "It's hard to find anything wrong or negative about it. Referring to band members, Doughten said, "Some of them will never be able to come back to California. They can't afford it. They will always remember it and that's what makes it all worthwhile." Doughten said he feels more credit should go to band members and less to the directors. "When the band does well, the kids should get the credit. If they do poorly, we get the credit. That's the way it should be." On a related matter, he said when the band first arrived, the hotel commended the members for their good behavior. "That's the way it should be and that's the way it will be. You have to teach them that at home. They can't learn it once they get here." He said while other bands have a problem with a lack of enthusiasm, the Pampa band may have a problem with too much enthusiasm—but, for Doughten, that is a good sign. See also page 3

Only a few mass murderers are remembered

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer
Their names are household words. Starkweather. Speck. DeSalvo. Whitman. Manson — the mass murderers of our time. Now in the silence of a Chicago suburb, a new claim to this terrible list is being unearthed. This week police have recovered the remains of 28 boys and young men in Des Plaines, Ill. John Wayne Gacy Jr., a quiet man who hoped to one day run for public office, is suspected of mass murder. There have been dozens of mass murderers in American history although only a few are remembered. The first known American mass murderer was William Beadle of Wethersfield, Conn., who murdered his wife and 4 children on Dec. 11, 1783. The next two centuries are littered with a grisly chain, the bloodiest link of which was Her: an Webster Mudgett, alias Dr. Harry Holmes of Chicago. On the eve of the Chicago World's Fair of 1893, Holmes, a respected businessman, built a boarding house for single women visiting the fair. A charming, handsome man, Holmes wooed his boarders into signing their property over to him and then killed them. When the house burned down police discovered a web of secret corridors and chambers where Holmes had gassed and then dissected his victims. In a subterranean pit they found the remains of more than 200 women.

Perhaps the most abhorrent mass murderers have been the sex killers such as Albert Fish who murdered several children in Westchester County, N.Y., in the 1930s, including Grace Budd, 12, from whose mutilated remains he made and ate a stew. Sentenced to the electric chair in 1936 at the age of 66, Fish exclaimed: "What a thrill that will be. . . It will be the supreme thrill. The only one I haven't tried." True to his word, Fish eagerly helped the executioner strap the electrodes to his body. In the 1950s there was the case of Edward Gein — a Wisconsin farmer whom his neighbors remembered for his ready smile. When he was implicated in the murder of a storekeeper, police uncovered in his farmhouse a collection of horrors reminiscent of the Nazi concentration camps. Gein, who wanted to be a woman, murdered 15 women and wore their flayed skin beneath his clothing. The walls of his house were mounted with the faces of his victims, and furniture and utensils had been fashioned from skin and bones.

A freezer was packed with human organs on which Gein had been living. Gein was committed to a mental institution. Albert DeSalvo, "The Boston Strangler," killed 13 women between 1962 and 1964. At his trial, psychological experts testified that DeSalvo had turned to murder when his wife rejected his advances.

Cause for celebration

It is unlikely that 1978 was a year whose passing most of us are greatly regretting. As years go, it was not one of the best. On the international scene, it saw progress toward an eventual end to the long agony of the Mideast. But hope here was outnumbered by a multitude of crises elsewhere. At home, rampant inflation led the roll of domestic problems. And if 1978 is remembered for one single extraordinary event, it may well be one of monumental horror in the jungles of Guyana. On the whole, most of us are probably relieved to have reached the point where we can once more be off with the old and on with the new. Fickle humans that we are, only 12 months ago we were welcoming the new 1978 with high hopes and great expectations. Now it is upon 1979 that we afix our expectations. That is not only the way it is, but the way it should be. For it is the future we live for, and whether 1979 turns out to be rewarding or disappointing, it too will be left behind without undue regret and quite possibly with relief when the time comes. Yet we continue to carry something of all old years with us. In addition to the memories of good times and the lessons of mistakes made, we carry a sense of the continuity of life, its purpose and meaning. This continuity is not merely of our own small selves but of the nation, the world and the human race. To the extent that we identify our individual lives with this greater continuity, they acquire a significance beyond ourselves. And in thinking of all history rather than in terms of single years, we gain a truer perspective on the human adventure. The events of the coming year are still to be shaped. But already we know that we must compromise and revise and eventually accept what 1979 brings to us. Being human, however, we cannot commence this new year's adventure with anything less than hope or aim at anything less than success. Which is justification enough for celebration. Happy New Year.

Inflation will take bite in '79

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — For American wage earners, the coming of the new year will mean a fatter paycheck because of a cut in federal income taxes. But there is a catch. Although federal income taxes will go down slightly, the increase in Social Security taxes and effects of an expected 7 percent to 8 percent inflation rate will, over the long haul, wipe out any gains. Many people will find themselves in worse shape than in 1978. The following are only a few of the economic changes that 1979 will bring: — For those getting only the minimum wage, a 25-cent an hour pay raise takes effect Monday, although the business community has complained that the new $2.90-per-hour rate will be inflationary and should be postponed. — If you are not happy about the prospect of retiring because of reaching the age of 65, take heart. Beginning with the new year, the mandatory retirement age jumps to 70 for most of the nongovernment work force. Except for the highest ranking executives, federal employees now have no mandatory retirement age whatsoever. . . . Because of rules changes taking effect Monday, food stamp eligibility will be stripped from some 1 million people. But these benefits will become available for the first time for approximately 3 million poorer people. Also, under the new Agriculture Department guidelines, food stamp recipients no longer will be required to purchase some stamps with cash before qualifying for additional free coupons. — Beginning this week, hospital costs will become more expensive for Medicare patients, who will have to pay the first $160, instead of $144, before the government picks up the bill. — On the plus side for consumers, the federal tax on telephone bills drops from 4 percent to 3 percent in 1979 as part of the long-term phasing out of the excise tax. The change means a saving of 30 cents on a $30 phone bill.

Faith and fear

The Christmas Season is a time when millions are bidden to ponder their own faith. We suspect that such reflections are no less appropriate this year than they have been down through the long millennia of time.

Indeed, whatever prophets one might follow, or even for those who consciously accept no prophets at all, it seems to us that faith is a necessary constant of the human condition. It is the antidote to fear, the opposite of despair, which negates human progress and even life itself.

If these musings about a religious verity sound old-fashioned in an increasingly secularized world, we would argue just the opposite. As we write here daily about the conflicts and debates of the secular world, we are constantly made aware of the underlying struggle between faith and despair.

Faith holds that men can be trusted with freedom and liberty and that only under those conditions can the human spirit soar and the human condition improve. Whether or not that faith exists is fundamental to all political debate. A society in which faith in humankind is weak is vulnerable to submission to a spreading web of law and regulation or eventually to arbitrary, totalitarian rule.

Faith holds that human discoveries, even those that frighten or awe us, increase man's mastery over his environment. Man would not be the questing creature he is were this not the natural order of things.

Faith holds that the creation of the earth and the universe was not some caprice of God or nature, and that it is not man's destiny to destroy his planet and perish. This too is germane to today's political debates, particularly those that center upon future supplies of energy and exploitation of the earth's resources, not to mention Malthusian fears about population growth.

It will be argued in opposition to these ruminations that faith need not be blind and that it is thus proper for thinking people to concern themselves about such important issues as how a rising population will be fed or how to cope with the depletion of natural resources.

That, of course, is true. But such a discussion need not fall prey to a doomsday philosophy. Technological progress, drawing on the vast resources of human imagination and skills that have been built in this and other free countries, can supply answers to all the fears the doomsayers put before us. An apt expression, "the politics of fear," has been coined to describe the exploitation of worthwhile concerns by those who seek to expand their political power.

The answer to the human predicament is to press forward, not become immobilized in a slough of doubt and despair. To press forward requires faith. Christmas is a time for looking at the stars above, not the mud below.

Our band gets early practice

PASEDNA, Calif. — The Pride of Pampa has not yet performed in the Rose Bowl here but they have already displayed some of their talent for southern California.

As part of their stay in Anaheim, the 163 students and the accompanying boosters had a barbecue at the Kono Hawaii Polynesian Restaurant Friday. However, during the stage show, ten members of the band got the opportunity to serve up something for other patrons.

Jim Duggan, assistant band director, and Joe DiCosimo led the band members to the stage where they danced.

The restaurant's entertainers, who invited the students on stage, then thanked Oand Director Jeff Doughten for coming to Anaheim. A letter also was read from Anaheim Mayor John Seymour in which the official congratulated the band for coming to perform in the Rose Bowl.

While the band put on that unscheduled performance, a scheduled session at Disneyland Saturday was cancelled.

Doughten said he didn't like the security arrangements which would have forced the students to leave their uniforms and instruments in a room at Disneyland. Officials at the attraction refused to guarantee that the equipment would not be stolen.

"It'll be a disappointment but we just can't take the chance," said Doughten, referring to the cancelled performance.

The students and boosters did spend a good part of Saturday in Disneyland, though, enjoying the attraction.

On Friday, the band started the day by going to Universal Studios. They toured a studio where filming was going on for the shows "Battlestar Galactica," "The Rockford Files" and "Airport 79," starring Robert Wagner.

They later toured Wagner's dressing room.

They also toured Sound Stage 32 which was last used for the television show "The Munsters."

The band saw numerous demonstrations and special effects including an attack by a 25 foot long shark. Several students screamed at some of the effects. Jaws proved to be the favorite attraction.

After lunch, the band went to a center where they were able to take talent tests. They also visited the George C. Page Museum in Hollywood, which featured a number of fossils, before they returned to the hotel and the Hawaiian dinner.

Doughten said that two-thirds of the students had never been to California. Yet, a random poll of their reaction to the trip proved positive.

"I'm having a real good time," said Karen Motley, a junior trombone player.

"I'm real excited about it," she added, referring to the Rose Bowl.

"I think it is something exciting. Something different," said Rex Ruker, a sophomore trombone player.

Asked about the parade, Ruker said, "I'm expecting a good performance but it is scary." Despite all the fun, preparations were taking place for the parade which is scheduled for midday Monday.

Since the band has to get up at 3 a.m. Monday, they are scheduled to spend a quiet day today attending church services and visiting the Knott's Berry Farm.

Following the parade, the band members will have their own New Year's party.

They are scheduled to leave California Tuesday.

Assistant county attorney to be hired

Growing pains strike area

By DAN LACKEY
Pampa News Staff

Pampa will be undergoing some growing pains in the near future, says County Attorney David Martindale.

He was referring to general growth in Pampa, the new mall approaching completion, and the city being caught in the crack between small town and metropolis.

But the growing pains are being felt closer to the county attorney's office as well.

The Commissioners Court has already approved funds to hire an assistant county attorney, to help Martindale with what seems to be an increasingly insurmountable case load. The salary for the new office will be $6,000 a year.

The bulk of the cases tried by the county attorney are those in misdemeanor court—mostly public intoxication and drunk driving cases—and the number of such cases has more than doubled since 1974. Misdemeanor charges filed with the county clerk totaled 748 this year, compared with only 38 in 1974.

Martindale said Friday the job is now too big for one man. He added that quick prosecution of misdemeanor cases will allow fewer defendants to have their cases dropped under the "speedy trial" law.

By law, a person charged with a misdemeanor has a right to have his case dropped if he is not tried within 90 days.

Martindale said a number of cases has been dropped under the law. But figures on the percentage of cases dropped were not readily available.

An assistant would presumably help alleviate this problem.

Martindale said that he's "holding off" on naming a prospective assistant until the new year, but that someone should be selected and approved in January.

Although the misdemeanor cases are the numerical bulk of the county attorney's job, they are not the only source of cases he tries.

The county attorney's office handles child welfare cases, including abuse and neglect cases for the Department of Human Resources. Such cases can be time consuming in court, said Martindale.

The county attorney's office also handles cases referred from the juvenile probation officer as well as emergency protection of a child, child support, and delinquent child support cases. Juvenile Probation officer, William Leonard, said Saturday that he did not know if cases referred from his office to the county attorney had increased substantially. But according to District Clerk Helen Sprinkle child custody and support cases and hearings have doubled in 1978. There were 113 cases and hearings filed with the district clerk this year, compared to 66 cases in 1977 and 60 cases in 1976.

Cherokee Nation planned near Texas

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — You may snicker now, but Herbert Williams, a man who has grown immune to skepticism, says they'll be flocking to his Rio Grande Island when the casinos open.

The 68-year-old retired Air Force colonel says he'll soon establish Cherokee Nation — an independent country on an island in the muddy waters that separate the United States and Mexico.

And where on the 180-acre oval island will the casinos be?

Probably not far from the international banks that will be close to the television station over by the university near the office of ship registry down the block from the high-rise condominiums.

Those plush condos, of course, will be set apart from the hustle and bustle of the nation's first industry — a flying machine factory.

"It's certainly going to happen," Williamson, who claims to be part Cherokee, said at his Brownsville apartment.

The island, south of Los Indios in Cameron County, was "created by an act of God" — just like Williams' official letterhead says. When Hurricane Beulah blew through in 1967 it sent the river flowing over a strip of land that once connected the island to the U.S., leaving a new island in the Rio Grande.

"Both countries only claim to the middle of the river," the Kenedy, Texas, native said. "This is a big tract. Not something a turtle would get up on."

A visit to the island this past week was cancelled when heavy rains made the crossing impossible.

Williams and a few friends bought the island. Now, with several legal battles behind him and maybe more ahead, Williams says his dream nation is drawing nearer to reality.

"It'll be just like Texas was 100 years ago," Williams the historian said.

Except, of course, for the tax-shelter banks, the gambling and the flying machine factory.

"There are so many things we can do there. There's international banking and we've already had people interested in putting in a little Las Vegas. There could be a dog track. We even had one guy across the river — the last thing we would want is pimps and whores — but one guy there wants to put in an international whorehouse," Williams, the man who would be chief, said.

Williams says the nation's initial revenue may come from a Seattle firm that makes Flash Gordon-like one-man flying contraptions. He says it plans to move part of its operation to Cherokee Nation.

The planned banks would allow U.S. Citizens to sidestep the taxman.

"I had a couple of doctors who hate lawyers with a passion. They came down from the west and they're interested in putting in a bank of their own," Williams the financial kingpin said.

Williams says the gambling would be watched over by the island's government.

Davis to stay in prison

By ROB WOOD
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Cullen Davis spent the New Year's weekend in jail awaiting more cross-examination Tuesday after his defense attorneys surprisingly failed to file a motion that he be released on bond.

Davis, 45, has been in jail since his arrest Aug. 20 on charges of soliciting the murder of Fort Worth Judge Joe Eidson, who had been the presiding judge in the bitter and lengthy divorce trial of Davis and his estranged wife Priscilla.

His lawyers had been expected to request that Davis be released on bail and a hearing was set for Friday afternoon.

State District Judge W.A. "Pete" Moore had earlier in the day excused the jury until Tuesday when one of the panel became ill. Then the judge talked briefly with attorneys and said to those in the courtroom, "Happy New Year to you all," and left the bench.

Defense attorney Phil Burleson told newsmen. "There is further need for research on a new question that has arisen. The timing as to the filing of the motion is something that needs to be discussed. There are some other legal problems."

Burleson refused to pinpoint the problems nor would he say whether the defense or the prosecution brought up the matter.

Moore said the defense "never actually filed a motion. They told me there was another point of law to consider. I don't know what that point may be."

Chief defense lawyer Richard "Racehorse" Haynes said. "The matter is not before the court and I cannot discuss it."

Key proposal for Iran rejected by opposition

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer
TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A key opposition leader Saturday rejected a proposed solution to Iran's crisis that would strip the shah of much of his power but leave him on his throne.

attacked the U.S. and Turkish consulates, and British cultural centers were attacked in three cities. No injuries were reported in those incidents.

Palace sources said Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi was considering taking a "winter vacation" if Shapur Bakhtiar, the No. 2 man in the National Front opposition group, succeeds in his efforts to put together a civilian Cabinet acceptable to the monarch.

U.S., China start new relationship

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and China open a new era in relations Monday, setting aside ideological differences to forge a political link that could have lasting impact on the global power balance.

The Chinese will host a simple evening ceremony here at which Vice President Walter Mondale and Chinese diplomat Chai Tse-min will toast the establishment of normal relations between the world's richest and most populous countries.

A ceremony also will be held at the U.S. diplomatic mission in Peking.

U.S. recognition of Peking also will result in a simultaneous end to official relations with the Republic of China on Taiwan.

Officials said the flags at the Taiwan embassy in Washington and at its 14 consular offices around the United States were to be lowered for the last time on New Year's Eve.

All Republic of China nameplates will be removed from the buildings as well. Similar activities will be carried out at U.S. offices on Taiwan.

Nonetheless, most of the personnel at the respective facilities in both countries will remain on duty to work out ways to maintain trade and cultural ties between the United States and Taiwan.

That process is expected to be completed by March 1, when Washington and Peking formally exchange ambassadors. Also on that date, the official designations of the two countries' diplomatic missions will change from liaison offices to embassies.

In agreeing to normalize relations, the United States and China have cast aside bitter memories of past conflict, ranging from open warfare in Korea in the early 1950s to angry debate over ideological differences.

The unstated assumption is that the United States and China have been drawn together by their deep mutual suspicion of the Soviet Union.

It is unclear just how Soviet-American and Sino-Soviet relations will be affected by the new accommodation between Washington and Peking.

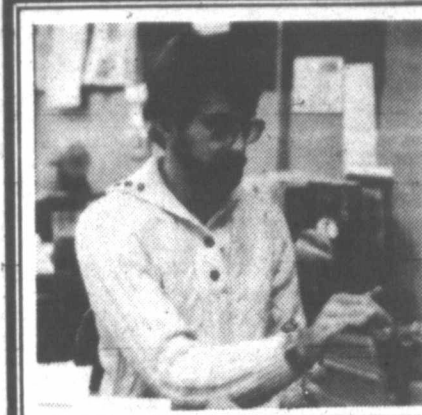

Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev said last week that a normal U.S.-China relationship is a "natural matter." But he also indicated that he has deep reservations over the anti-hegemony clause in the Dec. 15 Washington-Peking communique.

Hegemony is a favorite Chinese word to describe what they perceive as Soviet expansionist tendencies.

Peking and Moscow declined simultaneously in the mid-1970s. Brezhnev had been tentatively scheduled to come to Washington in mid-January to conclude a Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT II) but that now appears unlikely.

Just as a final breakthrough seemed imminent on Dec. 22, the Soviet side raised an issue, involving limitations on U.S. cruise missiles, that had not appeared to be a serious problem beforehand.

In the administration, it is widely believed that the Soviet strategy was linked to President Carter's announcement a few days before that Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping would visit Washington on Jan. 29.

Briscoe confident of tax cut

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe says he still thinks the state can take care of its essential services the next two years and also return $1 billion in taxes to Texans.

"We can make this tax cut, there is no doubt about it," the outgoing governor said on a radio-TV panel program (Capital Eye) that was taped Friday for release Sunday.

He repeated his promise that the Briscoe budget, to be presented after the legislature meets Jan. 9, will include a $1 billion tax reduction in addition to the $1 billion already programmed through the tax relief amendment approved by voters in November.

"In other words, a total reduction of close to $2 billion."

Briscoe said "The budget I will present will provide for the funding of the essential services, plus the inflationary factor. In addition that, it will provide additional funding for the major services of the state. It can be done. It's a matter of attitude. It's a matter of degree and determination."

He recalled that few "experts" agreed with him in 1973 when he predicted the state could live within its income without new or additional taxes.

"I think it's been proven very clearly that we not only could but did," Briscoe said. "And we put more new money into state services than at practically any time in the history of our state."

Briscoe said he is considering support of legislation to dedicate part of the state sales tax to school districts with the requirement that the funds be used to reduce local school taxes.

Another possibility, he said, was a flat reduction in the state sales tax, but he favors the school tax reduction.

Briscoe repeated that he intends to remain active in state and national politics after he leaves office Jan. 16.

He indicated he would be active in pushing a federal constitutional amendment to bind Congress to a balanced budget and future pay-as-you-go financing.

Area judge to be sworn in Gray County Judge-elect Carl Kennedy will be sworn in Monday morning during the first regular meeting of the County Commissioners Court for 1979.

Routine business is to be discussed in the court's regular session, including salaries and bills as recommended by County Auditor A.C. Malone. The court will also consider an order to approve participation for county employees over age 70 in the county-district retirement system for Texas.

According to Judge Don Hinton, all 254 Texas counties combine employee retirement money in a statewide system which permits broader investment of pension money and the enlargement of pension funds.

The court will convene in executive session to discuss personnel matters, but will not consider new appointments to the Highland General Hospital Board of Managers until a second meeting is held.

300,000 rural residences may have disappeared this year

New definition of farm based on sales figures

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Perhaps as many as 300,000 farms disappeared this year, but for the time being the government can't give a precise figure.

The disappearance involves a new definition and the method the Agriculture Department uses to estimate the number of farms.

In an annual report issued Thursday, department officials estimated there will be about 2.33 million farms in the United States at the beginning of 1979, down 1.7 percent from 2.37 million last Jan. 1.

But those are farms with annual sales totaling at least $1,000. That is a new definition USDA is using and one that will be used when Commerce's Bureau of Census begins its farm census next week.

For many years, both agencies have defined a farm as a unit of 10 or more acres that had annual sales of $50 or more. Under the old definition a unit of less than 10 acres qualified if it sold at least $250 worth of products a year.

The department discontinued the old definition in estimating the number of farms for this Jan. 1, so there is uncertainty about how many of the farms no longer being counted disappeared under the book-keeper's quill and how many actually quit being farms because they changed the way they were run.

However, the report included figures for both the old and new definitions of a farm for the past several years.

Last Jan. 1, for example, there were more than 2.67 million farms shown under the old definition. If the new $1,000 definition had been in use at the time, the number would have been 2.37 million.

Thus, those figures would indicate that somewhere around 302,000 farms faded from existence in 1977 because of the new definition.

According to the Census Bureau, it will use the new $1,000 definition when it begins its farm census next week but will also tabulate all farms regardless of size.

The use of the $1,000 definition has been debated for years in Congress, among federal agencies and by farm groups.

Proponents of the new definition say it is more realistic and eliminates many previously defined "farms" that were nothing more than rural residences.

The report said that under the $1,000 definition, the average size of U.S. farms at the start of 1979 will be 450 acres, up from 444 acres last Jan. 1.

Last Jan. 1, under the old definition, the average size of farms was 401 acres, up from 397 acres on Jan. 1, 1977. It did not show an average size for the start of 1979.

The total amount of land in farms this Jan. 1 was shown at slightly less than 1.05 billion acres under the new definition, a decline of about four million acres from last Jan. 1.

Organ donors give gift after life ends

By MICHAEL O'CONNOR
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — This holiday season is special to a young Ohio girl who learned, through the death of her best friend, what the gift of life means to those who give, as well as those who receive.

In a poignant letter, 18-year-old Betty told of her friend

Jean, who was killed in an automobile accident three months ago.

Jean had suffered a rare eye disease throughout her short life. In the brief time before she died, she asked that her eyes be donated to research in finding a cure for the disease.

Through the help of the Living Bank, an international organ donor registry headquartered in Houston, Jean was able to donate not only her eyes, but also her heart and kidneys.

"Jean taught me so much when she died," Betty said in her letter. "I often think of Jean's courage in facing her death, even if it happened so fast, and I'm especially proud of her in giving and donating after life.

"She taught me that giving unselfishly doesn't have to end when one dies," Betty continued. "I'd like to receive a donor card so that, whenever my turn comes to meet my friend Jean, I too can help another in life when I leave."

Although the names of the girls are fictitious, the letter is real — one of 72,000 sent during 1978 to the Living Bank, which celebrated its tenth anniversary in August.

"It takes something that touches the heartstrings of people to make them understand what it means to donate an organ," Lorraine Gress, executive director of the Living Bank, said in an interview.

"We are dedicated to educating the public, to showing them that through organ donation, they can give a gift after life if they want to," she said.

Fruit and pecan trees can make a major contribution to any home garden. However, gardeners must give close attention to adaptation and disease prevention.

The first step in producing healthy fruit and pecan trees is to select an adapted variety that has resistance to most of the major diseases that occur in this particular area of the state. However, we can be thankful that we are not bothered by a lot of diseases prevalent downstate.

In selecting peaches, plums, and apricots, be aware of the rootstock on which the variety is budded. The rootstock Nemaguard is resistant to root knot nematodes and should be the understock on all peach and plum varieties grown in the home planting. Root knot nematodes are a major problem on peaches and plums. Homeowners sometime get the idea that a nurseryman plants a Ranger seed and two or three years later the tree is dug and sold as a Ranger. This is not true. The nurseryman plants a seed which may be a Nemaguard. After one year the tree is budded to a variety such as Ranger. This insures that all Ranger trees are the same and reduces the differences that would occur between seedlings of the Ranger variety. Look for adapted varieties that are budded onto the nematode resistant rootstock, Nemaguard.

Bacterial leaf spot is a disease that attacks the leaves and fruit of peaches and plums. We had trouble with this disease in the wet spring of 1977. Currently there is no totally effective chemical treatment for this disease, so use resistant varieties whenever possible to avoid losses. Peach varieties such as Sentinel, Redglobe, and Frank have varying levels of resistance to this bacteria and should be planted where adapted.

In addition to selecting varieties which are resistant to diseases, select healthy vigorous plants that have the ability to grow and develop. Before planting a tree, check the roots to make sure they are free of galls or knots which would indicate the presence of nematodes or crown gall. Ends of the roots should not be torn or damaged. Clip damaged roots 1/2 inch behind the damaged portion.

Large amounts of high quality, home grown fruit can be produced in a small area if homeowners start off right. Take the time to find the right variety based on disease resistance and adaptability.

A booklet on Fruit and Nut Varieties recommended for Gray County has recently been updated and copies are available to anyone desiring a copy. Anyone considering buying fruit trees should get a copy because several common fruit varieties are not well adapted to the Texas Panhandle. The Elberta peach is a good example of a well known variety that is not well adapted.

The booklet includes recommended varieties for apples, pears, peaches, plums, apricots, cherries, pecans, walnuts, grapes, strawberries, jujubes, figs, and blackberries. Call 669-7429 or come by the County Extension Office in the Courthouse Annex.

Profile

Jack Bannon

Jack Bannon, who stars as Art Donovan in "Lou Grant," is the son of the late actress Bea Benadare and radio announcer Jim Bannon. While in his teens, Bannon began acting in television, getting roles on "Daniel Boone," "Green Acres," "The Beverly Hillbillies," and "Petticoat Junction," in which his mother starred.

At the University of California, Santa Barbara, he majored in speech and drama and took additional dramatic training with Jeff Corey and Gene Lasko.

In 1970, he travelled to New York City, "attracted," he says, "by the stage mystique," and worked in industrial films. He returned to Hollywood two years ago to resume his work in television and little theater.

The tall, brown-haired Bannon has appeared on the television series "Charlie's Angels," "Delvecchio," "Kojak," "The Rockford Files," "Quincy" and "The Six Million Dollar Man," and in the television movies "Tail Gunner Joe" and "Amelia Earhart."

He also has been active in the North Hollywood Playhouse and Theater East, appearing in productions of "Steamboat," "Waiting for Godot," "The Three Sisters" and "A Lion in Winter."

Bannon lives in Studio City, Calif., and his hobbies include wood sculpture and playing the clarinet.

Horowitz has busy year

By MARY CAMPBELL, AP Newsfeatures Writer

Looking at 1978 from the standpoint of classical music, it was a Schubert year and a Horowitz year.

It was the 150th anniversary of Franz Schubert's death, and orchestras, groups and soloists presented his music. The sometimes reclusive Horowitz was repeatedly visible, celebrating the 50th anniversary of his American debut. There were an unusual number of other birthdays and anniversaries.

And melody was slipping back into modern music. Horowitz began in January, playing Rachmaninoff's "Third Piano Concerto" in Carnegie Hall with the New York Philharmonic, where and with whom he made his American debut. The concert, a benefit, raised $168,000 for the orchestra — a record. Then Horowitz played — televised — at the White House. The President called him a national treasure.

In the fall he played with the Philharmonic again and NBC televised it. In May he scored a first — gave a Carnegie Hall concert for foreign tourists.

He celebrated his 75th birthday with his wife at a disco. He was canceled in Philadelphia because he didn't send back a signed contract. He was on "Sixty Minutes," which showed it more than once. He held two New York news conferences and gave interviews. Referring to the 12 years before 1965, when he didn't perform in public, he told reporters, "In general I'm more private. I was not seeing anybody for years. This year is different."

The prize of the year for Americans was the gold medal at the Tchaikovsky competition, not won by an American instrumentalist since Van Cliburn 20 years ago, this year won by two. Nathaniel Rosen, 30, of Pittsburgh, won in cello. Elmar Oliveira, 28, of Binghamton, N.Y., won in violin, where two first prizes were awarded, the other to a Russian.

Composer Michael Colgrass won the Pulitzer Prize for music for "Deja Vu." The first five recipients of Kennedy Center Honors were singer Marian Anderson, dancer Fred Astaire, choreographer George Balanchine, composer Richard Rodgers and pianist Arthur Schnitzler. Performances and tributes honoring the five at Kennedy Center, after a White House reception, were televised. Comeback of the year was pianist Erwin Nyiregyhazi, after 50 years of not practicing. One musicologist called his playing now "the 19th century come back to life."

There seemed more classical music on TV. Tenor Luciano Pavarotti gave a solo concert from the stage of the Metropolitan Opera, which was televised. The six Live from Lincoln Center broadcasts included chamber music for the first time. "Amahl and the Night Visitors" was back on NBC for the first time in 12 years.

Composer Olivier Messiaen was saluted with two months of concerts in France, celebrating his 70th birthday. A 70th birthday concert for composer Elliott Carter in New York included a world-premiere chamber work by him. Pianist Rudolf Serkin, at 75, was soloist for the New York Philharmonic's televised pension-fund benefit concert. Pianist Claudio Arrau, at 75, celebrated the 55th anniversary of his Carnegie Hall debut by playing a concert there. Guitarist Andres Segovia had his 85th birthday while in the United States on a concert tour.

Arthur Fiedler has conducted the Boston Pops for 50 years. Kurt Adler has directed the San Francisco Opera for 25 years and been 50 years in the performing arts. Violinist Ruggiero Ricci celebrated the 50th anniversary of his debut in San Francisco at 10.

Among conductors there were some musical chairs. Zubin Mehta began, going to the New York Philharmonic. Carlo Maria Giulini succeeded him with the Los Angeles Philharmonic. Giulini's first concert was televised across the United States and by satellite to Europe.

The world premiere of "The Duchess of Malfi" by Stephen Douglas Burton, 35, with romantic melodies, was given at Wolf Trap Farm Park. The American premiere of "The Duchess of Malfi" by Stephen Oliver, 28, with dissonances, was given by the Santa Fe Opera.

Public hasn't seen unwieldy Congress

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Congress is unwieldy and disorganized, and this alarming development has for the most part escaped public attention, says Nancy Dickerson, who covered the government in Washington for CBS and NBC for nearly a decade.

"And I guess not many people really are concerned whether Congress is functioning as it should," Miss Dickerson says, "but I think they need to realize this situation affects their lives in a number of ways."

Miss Dickerson, who became the first woman network news correspondent in 1960, anchors an hour-long special, "A House Divided," that has been syndicated to nearly 150 stations for broadcast Thursday evening.

"The House has changed fundamentally since I began covering it," Miss Dickerson says. "There is a different kind of politician on the Hill today. They're not nearly as responsive to party discipline. They came here with a tradition of opposing the leadership — the president."

The program features interviews with a number of influential congressmen, including House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill and Reps. Morris Udall of Utah, and David Obey of Wisconsin.

It's an attempt to portray a House more responsive to the demands of well-organized special interests, one in which the voice of the public is threatened.

"Ed Murrow told me while I was at CBS," Miss Dickerson says, "that the journalist has the duty to alert the public to potential problems, and I think that's what we're doing with this program."

Miss Dickerson, whose career as a correspondent began at CBS, switched to NBC News in 1963 and became the first woman to anchor a regular daily network news program.

She left NBC in 1969, and since then has written, lectured and moderated syndicated news programs, including one of her own, "Inside Washington."

"I'm realistic," she says, "I don't suppose a lot of stations would carry things like this if it weren't for the FCC and its interest in public affairs."

"But we do our best to make this program worth watching, we keep up the pace, and if you're marginally interested in the problems of the world, I think we can keep your interest."

The program was produced by Capital Cities Communications, Inc.

Astro-Graph
By Bernice Bede Osol

Large goals are within your reach this coming year and many secret wishes could come true. As the new takes hold, past unproductive associations will be suddenly severed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Keep a tight rein on your possessions and resources today. Leaving valuables unguarded will tempt the light-fingered. Like to find out more about yourself? Send for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter, by mailing 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Without greater determination and resolve, goals you set today are likely to evade you. Do what must be done early in the day.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You tend to scatter your forces today and won't be able to get anything done. Unless you organize, you might as well leave the chores to another day.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be friendly and cordial to all today, but avoid getting deeply involved with anyone. Several high-strung people are crossing your path.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Handle with care one whose thinking and aims are not in accord with yours. Permit yourself to be influenced by this person and you'll be thrown off-course.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You have a tendency to promise one thing and then do another today. Take your responsibilities seriously. Remember: Alibis won't make amends.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Avoid those who have a history of being unreliable today. They could be responsible for causing you some type of financial loss.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're normally a pretty good judge of those you must deal with, but today you're apt to let your emotions lead you astray, to give your opposition the edge.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This would be a good day to take it easy. Do little or nothing. Your concentration is off. You aren't likely to perform any tasks well.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) In spite of what your better judgment is telling you, today you're likely to do something erratic that will be both counterproductive and costly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You are a bit edgy and have a tendency to overemotionalize today. Try to keep this under control and you could have a pleasant day.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Impatience is your worst enemy today. Because of it, you could get into a confrontation with someone who won't immediately go along with your ideas.

Harvies enjoy mixed success

By JOE BLOBAUM
Pampa News Sports Editor

Pampa's varsity basketball teams enjoyed some truly mixed success in their Friday and Saturday contests. The boys topped Hereford 67-51 for pride — and seventh place — in the Clovis (N.M.) Tournament, while the girls won a nail-biter on Friday, only to drop the consolation game of their own tournament to Lubbock Coronado Saturday evening.

Plainview came away with the championship of the girls tourney by taking a hard-fought 30-26 win over scrappy Perryton Saturday night.

Boys varsity

The Harvesters led at the end of every quarter to claim their second win of the season over the Herd and up their record to 7-10.

Steve Duke returned to form by leading all scorers with a 20-point performance. Steve Stout added 13, Doug Skaggs had 12 and Ronnie Faggins contributed eight.

Four points each by Joe Jeffers, Doug Baird and Steve Glover and two by Darryl Hughes rounded out Pampa's scoring.

The Whitfaces were led by Jackie Mercer's 16 points, while Robert Graves connected for 12 and Brent Allen 10.

Pampa led 35-28 at halftime and sank seven of 11 free throws to the Herd's 7-for-15 performance from the line.

The Harvesters will celebrate the New Year by returning to action at home against Lubbock Monterey Tuesday night.

Girls tournament

Becky Davis sank a 12-foot jump shot with just seconds remaining to give Pampa a 44-42 win over Hereford Friday in the Pampa Girls Tournament. But the effort may have taken something out of the Harvester girls on Saturday, when they dropped a foul-plagued 62-50 decision to Coronado for the consolation trophy.

Coach Mary Thomas said Pampa wasn't really trying to get the ball to Davis — or anyone else in particular — on the game-winning shot.

"We were just trying to get into overtime," she said. "But when I saw the shot go in I was glad she made it. I was glad it was over."

Davis wasn't the only Harvester providing heroics for the partisan crowd at Harvester Field House Friday afternoon. Susan Mitchell tallied all eight of her points in the final quarter against the Herd, while Pat Coats gave Pampa a 42-40 lead in the final minutes with a basket from long range.

Davis took game scoring honors with 14 points. Kelye Richardson contributed nine points toward Pampa's victory and Louise Mays led Hereford with 13 points.

The Harvies had a 4½-minute scoreless spell in their loss to Coronado Saturday. After Melissa Polson's basket gave Pampa its last lead of the game (10-9) late in the first quarter, the Mustangs scored 12 straight points before Davis connected on a free throw with 3:45 to play in the half.

From that point, Pampa rallied to a 21-17 deficit, but Coronado allowed the Harvesters just one more basket before the intermission and took a 32-19 lead into the dressing room.

Pampa came out smoking in the second half and closed the gap to 32-25, but that's as close as the girls could get. Richardson overcame a scores-first half to take game honors with 20 points before she fouled out.

Davis and Mitchell also went to the bench with five fouls, while Coronado's Patricia McFerren exited the game in the same manner. In all, 47 fouls were called. Pampa was whistled for 28 violations.

Davis had 11 points for Pampa, while Kathi Wyeth led Coronado with 17. Vanessa Rogers added 12 for the Mustangs.

In other games Friday, Coronado beat Berger 49-43 behind McFerren's 15-point performance. Donna Coffey topped Berger with 13.

Plainview advanced to the championship game with a 49-39 decision over Dumas. Gay Hemphill poured in 28 points for the Dogenettes, while Patricia Fortenberry led a balanced Dumas attack with eight.

Perryton topped Lubbock Estacado 31-27 for the right to meet Plainview. Val Aylett's nine points topped the winners.

Bad driving conditions forced Dumas to forfeit its third-place game to Estacado Saturday evening, while Berger took seventh place with a 37-30 win over Hereford. Coffey's 16 points paced the winners.

BECKY DAVIS (14) uses good body position to block the escape route of a Coronado Mustang in the consolation game of the Pampa Girls Basketball Tournament Saturday night. Looking on are Pampa's Kelye Richardson (22) and Paula Baldwin (52).

Rams hope to end losing ways

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Minnesota may be the underdog in Sunday's National Football League playoff game against Los Angeles, but none can forget the Vikings never have lost a playoff to the Rams.

"I think overall we've been about even through the years but, fortunately, we've been able to win the more important games," said Bud Grant, the Vikings' veteran coach.

"The past means nothing. This is a new game," responded rookie Coach Ray Malavasi of Los Angeles, who exudes confidence his squad can break the Vikings' jinx.

In four previous playoffs, two for the National Conference championship, the Vikings have shot down the Rams.

They did it last season in the divisionals by a 14-7 count after losing 35-3 in the regular season. This year the Rams won again, 34-17, during the regular season, giving rise to optimism — until they look back a year.

"We should go into the game in an excellent frame of mind," said Malavasi, who became head coach when George Allen was fired after the second game of the preseason. "But I think they are going to come in the same way we are, wanting to win and go to the NFC championship game. I know Bud Grant and what he's telling his club."

Both teams appear in good physical shape. The Rams have only defensive tackle Larry Brooks questionable and he could play. The Vikings lost starting left cornerback Nate Wright in the Oakland finale and he will miss the playoffs. Defensive end Carl Eller has a cracked thumb, but will play.

Again there are the reports that this could be the final season for Fran Tarkenton, the 38-year-old veteran of 18 NFL seasons who calls the signals for the Vikings.

He's been throwing more and scrambling less and Malavasi appraises.

"I don't think he's as effective as two or three years ago. He's not surrounded with as good people as he has had in the past. But anytime you have a scrambling type, he always presents problems."

On the other hand, the Rams have a young quarterback in Pat Haden, who is improving but still makes the mistakes of inexperience. They also have lost three running backs to injury — including Lawrence McCutcheon, who has led the club in rushing for five seasons.

Cullen Bryant, a six-year veteran from Colorado, has taken over for McCutcheon with the reliable John Cappelletti at full-back.

The Vikings, 8-7-1 this year, haven't shown their usual powerful running attack this season, but Tarkenton leads the league in passing.

Fans haven't exactly swarmed around the box office. There were about 20,000 of the 71,000 seats left when the deadline for local televising passed. CBS will televise the game nationally with the Los Angeles area blacked out.

Bum: Snow no problem

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — The prospect of rain or even a light snow doesn't intimidate Houston Coach Bum Phillips on the eve of the Oilers' National Football League playoff game with the New England Patriots.

"I coached for three years in Amarillo, and after you've coughed in Amarillo, the weather won't bother you anymore," Phillips said Saturday at a press conference with Patriots Coach Chuck Fairbanks.

Phillips, who once shared assistant coaching duties with Fairbanks at the University of Houston, called Amarillo "the coldest place in the world."

The National Weather Service predicted rain and possibly light snow for Sunday's American Football Conference playoff at Foxboro. Temperatures are expected in the 40s.

Phillips, decked out in his standard uniform of cowboy boots and ten gallon hat, ran a string of one-liners by reporters, joking that Oiler quarterback Dan Pastorini may have to wear an improvised flak jacket permanently to protect his tender ribs.

Asked if he hoped that the reported knee injury of Patriots quarterback Steve Grogan would keep the versatile signalcaller from running, Phillips quipped, "It would be an even bigger advantage if he couldn't play."

Phillips also put down published reports about the game.

"I read someplace that Toni Fritsch can speak four languages and that included English as one of them. That's wrong."

Fritsch, the Oiler's placekicker is a native of Austria.

Fairbanks said he expected all 45 members of his team, including Grogan and ailing linebackers Steve Nelson and Steve Zabel to be ready for the game.

Grogan, who took part in a light Patriots workout Saturday, said reports of his knee troubles were exaggerated.

"Any time you have a knee injury, surgery is a possibility," he said. "But I'm not planning on it. Right now, it feels pretty good and I think it is going to be okay."

In Sugar Bowl battle

Lions need to convince skeptics

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Sports Writer

Thanks to their 1-2 rankings, Monday's Sugar Bowl pairing between Penn State and Alabama is being billed as a showdown for college football's national championship.

"The only way we can convince people we are a national championship-caliber football team is to play a team like Alabama in a game like the Sugar Bowl," said Coach Joe Paterno of No. 1-rated Penn State.

And there are a number of people who need some convincing. Like Bear Bryant of runnerup Alabama, third-ranked Southern California's John Robinson, No. 4 Oklahoma's Barry Switzer and Bo Schembecher of fifth-ranked Michigan.

Besides the Sugar Bowl shootout, Monday's bowl finds Southern Cal against Michigan in the Rose Bowl, Oklahoma against sixth-ranked Nebraska in the Orange Bowl and No. 9 Houston against No. 10 Notre Dame's defending national champs in the Cotton Bowl. No. 11 Georgia plays Stanford in the Bluebonnet Bowl Sunday night.

Paterno was asked if he considered the Sugar Bowl something like a college Super Bowl in view of the 1-2 rankings.

"Yeah," he said, "but there could be some other schools out there thinking otherwise."

How right he is. For example, Alabama's Sugar Bowl facts sheet says: "Obviously if No. 1 plays No. 2, the winner should be the national champion. Right? Right. But Southern Cal might have a claim to the crown if Alabama ekes out a win and the Trojans paste Michigan in the Rose Bowl. Southern Cal beat Alabama 24-14 early in the year in what Tide coaches say was the worst game Bama played."

That line, however, does not come from Bryant.

"I'm not entering into that at all," said Bryant. "I'm going to let the voters do the voting."

About the only ones not entering into the last-minute politicking are Tom Osborne of 9-2 Nebraska, Bill Yeoman of 9-2 Houston and Dan Devine of 8-3 Notre Dame.

"I don't think a team with two losses can get it," said Switzer. Alabama, Southern Cal, Oklahoma and Michigan all show one loss.

Penn State, the nation's only unbeaten team, thinks that a victory over Alabama should give the school its first national championship.

"I said repeatedly during the season we wanted to win it on the field," said Paterno. And then, noting that Penn State never has won a national championship despite several undefeated teams, he added: "I'm worried about you guys voting for us. You haven't been too good to us in the past."

Paterno or Bryant, or maybe both, will be claiming the national championship late Monday. So might some others.

The Pro Football Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio, has been expanded to the point where it has 51,000 square feet of floor space.

Irish, Houston to meet for fun and pride

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Notre Dame earned the national championship in the Cotton Bowl a year ago but Monday the thrice-beaten Fighting Irish play the twice-beaten Houston Cougars for fun and pride.

"Or, at least, they had better show up to play as far as Notre Dame Coach Dan Devine is concerned."

"When you pull on that gold helmet it means something, if you put on that white jersey with green lettering and it doesn't do something then they (the players) ought to get their fannies back home," says Devine.

He is quick to point out that the three-point favored Irish have developed a serious attitude in preparations for the Southwest Conference championship Cougars.

"I was afraid there might be a letdown because last year's game meant so much," says Devine. "This will be a different type game with an excellent opponent. Houston has a lot of talent and is well-coached. They are very team-oriented."

Devine says, "Our team has recognized that they will have to play good football to win. They have pride."

This year the Cotton Bowl is clashing on national television with Penn State and Alabama in the Sugar Bowl.

But Devine says the Cotton Bowl will be the best spectator game.

"This will be a great game. I keep trying to tell you," says Devine. "If I had to buy a ticket and I was a football fan I'd pick this one."

Notre Dame, making its fourth Cotton Bowl appearance, flogged Texas 38-10 last year and the heroes of that game return, tailback Vagas Ferguson and All-America linebacker Bob Golic plus quarterback Joe Montana. Ferguson gained 100 yards rushing and Golic made 17 tackles. Both have been injured but Devine says they should be at full speed New Year's Day.

The Irish hope to bounce back off a dramatic 27-25 loss to Southern California.

"We were in a state of shock in the first half," says Devine. "I'd hate to lose a game like that and not have a chance to play another."

Houston's famed Veer offense features Randy Love and Emmett King, who became the first pair of backs from the same school to rush for 1,000 yards in the same season. The Cougars averaged 300 yards per game on the ground.

"We've relied on the run all year and Notre Dame is not in the habit of giving up ground," says Cougar Coach Bill Yeoman. "We had better do something miraculous on offense."

Yeoman says a victory over Notre Dame could help his young program, but adds, "It's only helpful if you're successful."

Kickoff is 1:10 p.m. CST with a sellout crowd of 72,000 assured.

Palo Duro marathon Jan. 13

CANYON — Entries are being accepted for the Third Annual Palo Duro Marathon, scheduled for 11 a.m. Jan. 13 at the Palo Duro Canyon State Park.

A four-mile run is also scheduled. Trophies, electronic stopwatches and medals are among the prizes to be awarded to winners and top finishers in each division of the races.

Marathon divisions include open, high school, 30-39, 40-49, 50 and over and ladies. The four-mile entrants will be classified into 15 and under, high schoolers, open, 30-39, 40 and over, ladies 25 and over and ladies under 25.

The course for both races is located entirely within the park. The marathon will consist of a six-mile out and back portion and four laps around a five-mile loop. The course will be entirely on asphalt roads and has no major hills.

The four mile race will be run around the same loop the marathoners use, but will not complete a full loop. First aid stations for the marathon will be located at the six-mile point and every 2.5 miles after that.

Entry fees for the event are $4 for all runners except the high school and 15 and under divisions, provided the entries are recorded before Jan. 12. Fees will be $5 on race days. High school and 15 and under divisions have a $2 entry fee.

There is also a flat charge of $1 per car for entering Palo Duro Canyon State Park. Park officials insist that all runners sign a waiver of responsibility prior to racing. Minors' waivers must be signed by a parent or guardian. This rule will be strictly enforced.

The overall record for the marathon was set in last year's event by Michael Jenkins of Lubbock, who covered the course in 2:42:06. Larry Sims' time of 20:22 is the overall standard for the four-mile course, while Lou Allred of Pampa holds the over-30 record of 22:27.

Entries and inquiries should be directed to Race Director Bob Dunbar, 6526 Fulton, Amarillo, Texas 79109. His telephone number at work is 806-378-3675, and his home number is 806-353-2725.

SCOTT LAIDLAW scores the go-ahead touchdown for Dallas in the Cowboys' game against Atlanta Saturday. The Cowboys topped the Falcons 27-20 and will meet the winner of today's Minnesota-Los Angeles game for the NFC championship next week. (AP Laserphoto)

Pokes come back, 27-20

DALLAS (AP) — Reserve quarterback Danny White came off the bench to spell injured Roger Staubach and master-minded the hard-pressed Dallas Cowboys to a 27-20, come-from-behind National Conference playoff victory Saturday over the amazing Atlanta Falcons.

The victory put the defending Super Bowl champions into the NFC's championship game against Sunday's winner of the Los Angeles-Minnesota matchup.

Staubach was knocked cold and suffered a slight concussion on a late tackle by Falcon linebacker Robert Pennywell late in the first half with the wild card Falcons leading 20-13.

White, who had set up Dallas' only first half touchdown on a fake punt, passed two yards to tight end Jackie Smith to tie the score 20-all in the third quarter. It was the first touchdown catch of the year for Smith, a former St. Louis Cardinal.

White then directed the Cowboys 30 yards after a poor Falcon punt for the game-winning touchdown with 9:46 left in the game. Scott Laidlaw, who had scored earlier on a 13-yard run, punched the ball in from less than two inches away from the goal.

A big defensive play by Cowboy cornerback Benny Barnes turned back a Falcon bid to tie the score with 3:09 left in the game. On fourth-and-one from the Cowboy 32, George Franklin was stopped cold by Barnes, and the Falcons' last-gasp bid for a miracle ended.

A heavy Cowboy rush forced Falcon punter John James to shank the ball only 10 yards before it went out of bounds to put Dallas in position for the game-clinching touchdown.

Pennywell was flagged for a personal foul after Tony Dorsett ran 10 yards. Laidlaw then ran 14 yards to set up the winning touchdown.

Atlanta, who had won six of their 10 victories in the last two minutes, played with poise in the first half while Dallas lost four fumbles.

After a 34-yard field goal by Rafael Septien, strange things began to happen in Texas Stadium.

An unsportsmanlike conduct penalty on Cliff Harris gave Atlanta lanta life on a 78-yard drive climaxed by Bubba Bean's 14-yard touchdown run.

White's fake punt, which he ran 12 yards on fourth-and-10, set up Laidlaw's first touchdown run.

Butch Johnson fumbled away a punt, and Atlanta tied the score 10-10 on Tim Mazzetti's 42-yard field goal.

A 48-yard field goal by Septien gave Dallas the lead again at 13-10.

Falcon quarterback Steve Bartkowski flipped a 17-yard touchdown pass to Wallace Francis and Mazzetti hit a 22-yard field goal to give the Falcons, who were 14-point underdogs, a shocking seven-point halftime lead.

Harris killed any Falcon hopes of a miracle comeback by intercepting a Bartkowski pass with 29 seconds to play at the Atlanta 24.

The Cowboy Doomsday Defense, which was plundered by Atlanta runners in the first half, dominated the second half when it counted.

Dallas intercepted three Bartkowski passes and sacked the Atlanta third-year quarterback five times.

Bartkowski completed only eight of 23 passes for 95 yards.

White completed 10 of 20 passes for 127 yards and had one intercepted.

The tough Atlanta defense permitted 1,000-yard rusher Tony Dorsett only 65 yards on 14 carries, while Bean gained 72 yards and Haskell Stanback of the Falcons gained 62.

Staubach completed seven of 17 passes for 105 yards before he was knocked out of the bruising game.

It was the first visit to the National Football League playoffs for the Falcons, who advanced by defeating Philadelphia last week.

The Cowboys, trying to win a record third Super Bowl, have participated in a record 23 NFL playoff games.

Steelers upend Broncos

By GARY MIHOCS
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Terry Bradshaw hit 16 of 29 passes for 272 yards and a pair of fourth-quarter scoring bombs, leading the Pittsburgh Steelers to a 33-10 victory over the Denver Broncos Saturday in the American Football Conference semifinal playoffs.

Bradshaw's potent display, which included 10 receptions by wide receiver John Stallworth, combined with 105 yards rushing and two touchdowns by Franco Harris, boosted Pittsburgh into the Jan. 7 AFC title game.

The Steelers will host Sunday's Houston-New England winner.

The AFC-West champion Broncos, who booted Pittsburgh from the playoffs a year ago, took a 3-0 lead with 5:50 left in the opening quarter on a 37-yard field goal by Jim Turner.

But with Steelers' fans waving their yellow "Terrible Towels" in packed Three Rivers Stadium, Pittsburgh took command with the kind of offensive power that gave the Steelers the best regular-season record in the National Football League, 14-2.

Harris, typically primed for the playoffs, dove 1 yard for a touchdown with 2:33 left in the first quarter, putting Pittsburgh ahead to stay 7-3. He added an 18-yard touchdown sweep early in the second quarter.

Craig Morton, Denver's ineffective starting quarterback, was relieved in the second quarter by Norris Weese, who directed a touchdown drive that closed the gap to 19-10 by halftime.

After a scoreless third quarter, Bradshaw put the game away on a 45-yard touchdown pass to Stallworth, who made a leaping catch at the end of the end zone, and one series later, Bradshaw found Lynn Swann at the goal line on a 38-yard touchdown toss.

In the first half, Harris rushed for 57 yards on 14 carries, while Bradshaw hit 10 of 18 passes for 120 yards. His 22-yard pass play to Stallworth early in the second quarter set up Harris' sweep for a touchdown.

Stallworth's 10 receptions were a record for the NFL playoffs. The mark excludes the AFC and NFC championship games and the Super Bowl.

Stallworth's receptions netted 156 yards.

After Weese led the Broncos on a 49-yard touchdown drive that ended with a 3-yard run by Dave Preston, Gerela added a 27-yard field goal with seven seconds left before halftime.

Hayes out at Ohio State

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Legendary Woody Hayes was fired Saturday, ending his reign of 28 years as head football coach at Ohio State University after losing his temper and slugging a Clemson player in the closing moments of Friday night's Gator Bowl game.

Lou Holtz, a former assistant at Ohio State and currently head coach at Arkansas, is a leading candidate to replace Hayes. The Associated Press learned, according to NBC-TV sources, Holtz will be named to the job within a few days.

Holtz, who has expressed an interest in the Ohio State job before, will coach the West team in next week's Hula Bowl game and was en route to Honolulu when word came Saturday that Hayes had been fired.

In a telephone interview from Honolulu, Holtz told Little Rock television station KARK that he has no plans to resign. "I plan to stay at the University of Arkansas for as long as the people want me to," he said.

Clemson beat the Buckeyes 17-15 in the Gator Bowl at Jacksonville, Fla., with the victory sealed by middle guard Charlie Bauman's interception with two minutes left to play. When Bauman was forced out of bounds at the Ohio State sidelines, Hayes grabbed the player and swung at him.

A few hours later, Ohio State Athletic Director Hugh Hindman, who played for Hayes at Miami of Ohio one season and coached under him with the Buckeyes for seven years, notified his old boss that he was being relieved of his duties.

In a terse statement, Hindman said, "It was the toughest decision I ever will have to make."

Hindman and Harold Enarson, the school's president, had reached their decision shortly after Hayes' outburst against Bauman.

Hindman said Hayes' actions against Bauman led directly to his firing. He said no decisions had been reached before the game. Hayes' fourth loss in his past five bowls, Enarson had watched the game from the stands while Hindman viewed it from the press box.

"We both felt the same way afterwards," said the athletic director. "But I still have great admiration for him."

Hindman said he went to Hayes' motel room and notified the coach about 8 a.m., moments before the Ohio State coaches and players flew home.

Upon his arrival here, Hayes refused to talk to reporters and was whisked away in a police cruiser.

Two of Hayes' players, All-America linebacker Tom Cousineau and defensive end Kelton Dansler, also heading for the Hula Bowl game, both said they were not surprised at the firing of their coach.

"The only way was to fire him," said Cousineau. "He never would resign. It's a disappointment to me that a great career, a coaching legend, has to end on a note like this."

"I figured it could happen if we lost this game," said Dansler, an All-Big Ten Conference performer. "I knew there could be some shake-ups."

The 65-year-old Hayes has skirmished with the news media during his 36 coaching seasons. But Friday night's incident marked the first time he had punched a player from an opposing team.

"Coach Hayes grabbed him (Bauman) around the helmet and hit the player three times around his face," said an Ohio State athletic official who asked not to be identified.

Hayes became a legend by spending all of his career coaching within the borders of his native Ohio.

His 238 career victories rank him fourth on the all-time college football coaching list. Only Amos Alonzo Stagg, Glenn "Pop" Warner and Paul "Bear" Bryant are ahead of him in victories. Hayes ranks second to Bryant's 283 triumphs among active coaches.

Hayes' tenure at Ohio State produced a 205-61-10 record, two national championships and 13 Big 10 titles or co-titles. He took 11 Buckeye squads to bowls including the last seven years in a row. Hayes' Bowl record was 5-6. The Buckeyes finished this season 7-4-1.

Frigid weather may greet Oilers

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — The Houston Oilers may be the hottest team in the National Football League playoffs, but the New England Patriots have a blast of cold air ready Sunday for their American Football Conference semifinal matchup.

Frigid and possibly wet weather may be on tap. The Oilers are used to the comfortable confines of a domed stadium. The well-rested Patriots, meanwhile, claim they are prepared for their best NFL game of the long season.

"Whoever wins this game is going to earn it," says Oilers Coach Bum Phillips. "Both teams will be ready."

The pairing has intrigue. Phillips and Patriots Coach Chuck Fairbanks are good friends, having been assistants long ago at the University of Houston.

Other elements: —Houston beat the Patriots in Foxboro Nov. 12, rallying from a 23-0 deficit and winning 26-23. The victory began the Oilers' playoff charge to qualify as an AFC wild card team.

—Houston has rookie sensation Earl Campbell, the NFL rushing leader, whose running made it possible for quarterback Dan Pastorini to enjoy his finest pro season as a passer.

—Houston upset Miami 17-9 in the opening round of the playoffs.

—New England still may be recovering from Fairbanks' two-day suspension by the team for accepting a coaching job at the University of Colorado. Fairbanks, back for the playoffs, says, "I can't work harder to prepare for the team," but he is a lame-duck coach.

—The Patriots, however, have a high-powered offense and solid defense—a balanced passing and running attack led by quarterback Steve Grogan and a solid pass rush.

Houston finished the regular season with a 10-6 record and second place in the AFC Central Division. New England, 11-5, won the AFC East title.

"We've got a better team than two years ago," says Fairbanks, referring to the 1976 squad that was 11-3 and lost a playoff game in Oakland on a controversial penalty call. "But this will be a very difficult game.

"The playoffs are like a tournament. Each game becomes more and more important. It's sudden death. Teams don't come up flat. There's never a lack of intensity. There have been cases where teams have been too high."

Phillips says the Oilers are confident because, as the regular season victory against New England showed, "We have the potential of catching up at all times. We can score when we're behind. It's a good feeling."

Phillips downgrades Fairbanks' coaching status, as do many Patriots players who are more concerned with Super Bowl money than with their coach's future.

Also in New England's favor is its two-week rest since the last regular season game, a 23-3 defeat at Miami after Fairbanks was sent home by owner William H. Sullivan Jr.

Since the turmoil, the team has returned quietly to practice and several ailing players have healed, although the status of linebacker Steve Nelson, the defensive captain, is somewhat uncertain. He is recovering from a knee injury but expects to play.

Phillips says that several injured Oilers may be slightly stronger for Sunday's game. The team suffered no serious injuries against the Dolphins.

New England will seek to pressure Pastorini—who wears a rubber flak jacket to protect injured ribs—while Houston seeks to contain Grogan—whose running ability is the key to New England's offense.

New England will be expecting play-action passes from Pastorini, who likes to fake handoffs to Campbell, before tossing to such receivers as Ken Burrough. Phillips is particularly wary of Patriots' tight end Russ Francis, a touchdown threat as well as a jarring blocker.

The home field may be an advantage for the Patriots. But New England was only 5-3 at Foxboro this season, while Houston—in addition to its victory here—beat the Steelers in Pittsburgh and the Dolphins in Miami.

 The mass killings and suicides by members of the Peoples Temple in Guyana which cost more than 900 lives is ranked as the top news story of 1978 by editors and broadcasters of Associated Press member newspapers and radio and television stations.
 The ritual suicides in the cult's jungle commune, headed by the Rev. Jim Jones, followed by a few hours the slaying of a U.S. Congressman and three American newsmen in an airstrip ambush.

Fugitive wants to return home

"I was wrong, I'm sorry and I want to come home," So writes Abbie Hoffman, America's most famous fugitive and Feature magazine's travel editor, in the magazine's debut issue. It seems he's given up his game of catch me if you can, for another called forgive the fugitive.

"I was wrong to tell children to kill their parents," he continues in his confession. "It was the children's fault. Spoiled, selfish brats made the '60s. We encouraged children to leave home. Forgive me, mother."

"It's mind-boggling, but being a fugitive I've seen the way other people live and it's made me realize just how wrong I was. You know how it is when you're young and not in control. I'd like to go back to school — I've always had an itch to become a certified public accountant and work with the Indians."

Alluding to the drug charges that have kept him on the lam for so long, Hoffman said, "If Keith Richard is willing to sing for the blind (part of Richard's sentence for a drug conviction), I'm willing to sing for the deaf."

"I realize I can't repair all the damages, but I'm willing to roll up my sleeves and give it a try. Now can I come back?"

So far, the FBI hasn't responded.

Star thinks she's funny looking

In the new movie, "Superman," she melts the heart of the Man of Steel with ease, but off-screen Margot Kidder still thinks she's just plain funny looking.

Kidder says in the January issue of Viva magazine, "I know how to disguise myself so I can look quite pretty; I look okay if I put on makeup... My body is okay; it's all right in clothes, but naked, it's not. And I'm clumsy. I walk like a mouse."

Recently divorced from writer Tom McGuane, Kidder also reminisced about what went wrong with her marriage.

"We were both selfish brats... We really both wanted to go off and work for as long as we wanted to work and know that the other person would be there when we came back. We both needed a traditional wife. I mean, I don't see how any woman in her right mind would not want a wife."

HEALTHFUL HINTS

Most often asked Questions On Nutrition BY: KATRINA BIGHAM

Q. What causes a sore, burning tongue?
A. Adelle Davis states that when the B vitamins are under-supplied, many changes appear in the tongue—including the above mentioned problems. She says that in a general way you can judge how adequate your B intake is by looking at your tongue. It should be moderate in size, an even pink in color and smooth around the edges, without coating or indentations showing where it has rested against your teeth. The taste buds should be uniformly small and cover the entire surface and sides.

Okay, everybody, get in front of a mirror and stick out your tongue. If it is enlarged, has grooves, is "furry", is smooth and shiny where the taste buds have disappeared, is sore or burning, then perhaps you'd better take a look at your B intake.

Remember what the nutritionists tell us about the B's working together and be sure that if you take separate B's (like B-6 or B-12), to take them with a good balanced B-complex tablet and/or a good natural source of B such as brewer's yeast or liver.

At wit's end

By ERMA BOMBECK

The world is divided into two groups: those who aren't crazy about cats and those who think cats are the greatest thing to hit this country since sliced bread.

I personally cannot relate to anything that licks its feet while I'm talking to it, but I have to say since seeing cats on television, I have never seen a more impressive animal.

I used to think cats wandered from room to room looking for a velour sofa to shed on, but since watching them on television I have gained a new respect for them. They type, answer the phone, play the piano, take baths and do the cha-cha-cha. In one commercial, there were 18 of them nudging one another out of a bowl of their favorite food.

If anyone out there has a cat out of work, it's their own fault.

As Mary Worth once said, "I don't mean to meddle," but it's my observation that dogs had better shape up. Just tipping over a 50-pound bag of dog food and panting isn't going to do it anymore. How much longer can they slide in on the coattails of Benji?

If dogs don't get an image-maker pretty soon, their popularity will go right down the tube. Do dogs have a big poster going for them? Cats do. The picture of a cat hanging from a parallel bar saying, "HANG IN THERE, BABY" is a classic.

Have dogs made an impact on Washington? If so, then how come the words "fat cat" dominate the political scene?

And who can quarrel with cats' association with sex symbols? A starlet can purr like a sex kitten, but where is she if someone calls her a bow-wow?

I don't think I'm being dramatic when I say it's only a matter of time before cats hit Broadway in "CHORUS FELINE," take over movies with a thriller called, "CLAWS," and have their own TV series, "LITTER HOUSE ON THE PRAIRIE."

The other night as I was watching TV, my dog was lying on my foot snoring when I saw a cat dancing and singing on television.

That tore it. I got up and headed for the door.

"Are you going out to buy cat food?" asked my son.

"Are you kidding? I'm going out to buy a cat."

Mrs. Thomas B. Rogers

McClellan-Rogers wedding

Terrie Jan McClellan of Fritch became the bride of Thomas Burleson Rogers III at 8 p.m. on Dec. 29 in the First Baptist Church in Fritch. The Rev. Claude Cone officiated at the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.O. McClellan of Fritch, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. T.B. Rogers Jr. of Pampa.

The music during the ceremony was provided by Elbert Hensley at the piano and Mrs. Gene Bennett at the organ. Vocalist were Lee Kendle, Kathy Kendle, Pat Kelly and Billy Talley.

The maid of honor was Holly Rae Graham of Hobbs, N.M. and the bride's attendants were Mrs. Eddie Richardson of Stamford, M's. Terry Johnson of Lubbock and Donna McClellan of Fritch.

The best man was Paul Fowler of Memphis and the groomsmen were Eddie Richardson of Stamford, Lin Cope of Canyon and Garvin McCarrell of Amarillo. Ushers were Ricky Wright of Dimmit, Matt Mills of Shamrock, Terry Nepper of Hereford and Mike McClellan of Fritch. Candlelighters were Roger Morris of Muleshoe and Carroll Cook of Friona.

The bride chose a formal wedding gown of white chiffon with a Queen Ann neckline, long sleeves and high-low waistline. The entire bodice was re-embroidered Alencon lace over English net on chiffon and was sprinkled with seed pearls; both front and back yokes were sheer. The sleeves were extremely full bishop's sleeves made of chiffon over an inner straight sleeve of pearl-sprinkled re-embroidered Alencon lace over English net; they were accented by wide lace and pearl covered cuffs. The skirt was plain, draping in soft folds from a high-low waistline to a chapel length train in the back. The veil was full length and was edged in lace and pearls. The gown was made by the groom's mother.

The reception took place in the First Baptist Church parlor with Kathy McNaney, Mrs. David Martin, Roma Johnson, Mrs. Felton Isaacs and Mrs. Gary Anderson assisting. Mrs. Matt Mills of Texola, Ok. registered the guest.

Upon returning from their honeymoon in Dallas, the couple will make their home at 1612 Coffee in Pampa.

The new Mrs. Rogers is a graduate of WTSU and a member of Chi Omega Sorority. She is presently employed with Phillips Petroleum Co.

The groom is a graduate from WTSU and is a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity and played on the WTSU football team. He is currently employed at Pampa High School as defensive coach.

DECORATING TRENDS... by Charlie's

Have you ever visited a home where they have nice furniture with an attractive living room, dining room and bedroom — yet there was still something lacking?

It may have lacked that certain something which decorators call "the finishing touch."

It's exactly at this point where imagination and ingenuity are most needed: where a little "flair" goes a long way. This is often the difference between ordinary furnishing and beautiful decorating.

There are many ways to accomplish the "finishing touch". Here are just a few:

Where you have both white walls and white draperies, a valance or cornice in a contrasting color may add life to your room.

When most of your living room has neutral colors, try replacing your pictures with some containing daring, bright colors.

Place a mirror in your room where it will reflect the outdoors and add color and size to your room.

If the width of your room permits, place your sofa a foot or two away from the wall and put a decorative eye-catching screen against the wall.

These are just a few ideas. For more ideas for your home, we invite you to stop in and visit us.

What's up in firewood?

Falling temperatures are making an evening spent in front of a crackling fire increasingly appealing. If you have not yet purchased your yule logs, consider these firewood ratings from the U.S. Forest Service:

Excellent: Apple, ash, beech, birch, dogwood, hard maple, hickory, locust, mesquite, oaks, Pacific madrone, pecan.

Good: Alder, cherry, soft maple, walnut. Good, but smoky: Douglas fir, Southern yellow pine.

Fair, but good for kindling: Aspen, basswood, cottonwood, yellow poplar, Eastern redcedar, Western redcedar, white cedar, Eastern white pine, ponderosa pine, sugar pine, Western white pine, true firs, spruce.

Fair: Elm, gum, sycamore, cypress, redwood, lauch, tamarack.

The Forest Service suggests combining easily ignited softwoods and long-lasting hardwoods in the fireplace. Then, once the fire is started, add some fruit or nut woods for a special aroma.

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Last New Year's Eve you published a set of New Year's resolutions. I cut it out and taped it to my bathroom mirror where I could read it every morning. I can truthfully say that I am a much better person today because I've tried to live by those rules.

Please run that column again for those who may have missed it. I hope it will do for others what it has done for me. In case you're wondering, I'm no teenager. I'm a 34-year-old father of three.

HIGH ON LIFE IN HAMILTON, O.

DEAR HIGH: Don't thank me. The credit belongs to Overeaters Anonymous—an organization of caring, confessed compulsive eaters who have regained their self-esteem by losing weight, feeling better, looking better and helping others to do the same.

Their credo:

—Just for today I will try to live through this day only, and not set far-reaching goals to try to overcome all my problems at once. I know I can do something for 12 hours that would appall me if I felt that I had to keep it up for a lifetime.

—Just for today I will try to be happy. Abraham Lincoln said, "Most folks are about as happy as they make up their minds to be." He was right. I will not dwell on thoughts that depress me. I will chase them out of my mind and replace them with happy thoughts.

—Just for today I will adjust myself to what is. I will face reality. I will try to change those things which I can change and accept those things I cannot change.

—Just for today I will try to improve my mind. I will not be a mental loafer. I will force myself to read something that requires effort, thought and concentration.

—Just for today I will exercise my soul in three ways: I will do a good deed for somebody—without letting him know it. (If he or she finds out I did it, it won't count.) I will do at least two things that I know I should do, but have been putting off. I will not show anyone that my feelings are hurt; they may be hurt, but today I will not show it.

—Just for today I will be agreeable. I will look as well as I can, dress becomingly, talk softly, act courteously, and speak ill of no one. Just for today I'll not try to improve anybody except myself.

—Just for today I will have a program. I may not follow it exactly, but I will have it, thereby saving myself from two pests: hurry and indecision.

—Just for today I will have a quiet half hour to relax alone. During this time I will reflect on my behavior and will try to get a better perspective on my life.

—Just for today I will be unafraid. I will gather the courage to do what is right and take the responsibility for my own actions. I will expect nothing from the world, but I will realize that as I give to the world, the world will give to me.

It makes sense, doesn't it? And so does the program. It's free. For information about this wonderful organization, write to P.O. Box 6190, Torrance, Calif. 90504.

P.S. Have a happy, healthy New Year. And pray for peace!

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read your column about the 16-year-old boy who was doing weight training and ate a lot of eggs. I am a body builder and I eat 14 eggs a day. You're out of touch with what is needed to build bodies.

Eggs contain zero carbohydrates and are the highest source of quality protein. So, though you ate a pound of meat, if you ate the same amount of eggs you would absorb more protein than the body can use.

By the way, the cholesterol problem you stated makes me believe you never trained for competition because only a small percentage of cholesterol is taken from the foods consumed. Also, Doctor, while you are on the subject, without cholesterol your primary sex functions would be kaput. Are you trying to sell corn oil?

Now a person who weight trains properly, especially one training for a contest, is putting heavy work loads on the vascular system. His blood is forced through at such a rate that the fat which is not burned up during the training session is flushed through the system.

Fats are not the body builders but carbohydrates are, so you are not able to have any milk preparing for a contest. All I can say, Doctor, is you should go to the gym and see the serious body builders. You can see the results of a dozen eggs a day on these guys.

DEAR READER — At least you have lots of enthusiasm although I can't say much for the validity of your statements.

It's true that your body manufactures cholesterol, but the cholesterol that goes into your blood stream is absorbed from the small intestines. That cholesterol comes from the mixture of the amount that is in the food, the amount that is in your bile and other sources. The dietary cholesterol is important.

Because your body manufactures a reasonable amount of cholesterol, your statement that not consuming any would cause your primary sex functions to go kaput is completely wrong. The inconsistencies in your letter are rather amusing. You say that the cholesterol in the food isn't important, then you say without cholesterol your sexual functions would be kaput.

Cholesterol is the basic building block for sex hormones, but the amount that is needed is a very, very small amount. I have never seen reported or know of any case in which the cholesterol was so low that it was a factor in not producing the normal amount of sex hormones. If you are consuming lots of cholesterol to build up your sex hormones, you are making a serious mistake.

Now you also said that fats are not body builders but carbohydrates are so you can't drink any milk before a contest. That's rather ridiculous. Fortified skim milk is very low in fat whereas about two-thirds of the calories in eggs come from fat. Eggs not only contain cholesterol, but they also contain fat.

Your concept of how fatty-cholesterol particles are deposited in the vessels is rather naive. To paraphrase your letter, all I can say, weight lifter, is that you've got a lot to learn, and I don't think you are ready to learn it. You have to start with basic biochemistry and some rather basic understanding of scientific facts.

For other readers who want some basic information on what you can and cannot expect in terms of protein consumption for weight training, you can send $1.50 with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for The Health Letter number 5-4, Weight Training For Energy And Weight Control. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — Recently I had to send some fragile stemware out of the state. I wrapped each piece in tissue paper and then in several thicknesses of newspaper and then lined the inside of the carton with foam egg cartons. They went all the way with no breakage.

Pampa Post Script

By JUNE ALEXANDER

Christmas memories ... a church at midnight ... Mary Jane Johnson singing 'O Holy Night' ... a mother sitting on the floor reading 'The Night Before Christmas' to her two small daughters ... the bright blue sky and crisp air of Christmas Day in the Panhandle ... empty hospital corridors ... all the youngsters home for the holidays, and how nice it is to see them ... Katherine and Jack Reeve, dressed as Santa and Mrs. Claus, spreading joy as only they can.

Incidentally, I have another name for Katherine Reeve. I call her Martha. Maybe she'll tell you why but I never will.

As we enter the New Year, I am reminded of times gone by ... The original chat-column in this newspaper was called Peg O' Pampa and appeared in 1935. The whole idea was the brain child of Sylvia Conley who wrote the column anonymously for five years. Anonymity for five years? In Pampa? Pretty neat trick, Sylvia.

Marjorie Guill wrote for the Pampa newspaper when she was in High School; so did Mickey Leverich.

Kathryn Steele was born in Pampa and has lived here all of her life. I don't know of anyone else who has never moved away for any period of time. Do you?

Four streets in that part of Pampa that was known as the Cook Addition are named for the Cook children. The streets are Christine, Mary Ellen, Charles, and Russell. The fifth child, Jane, was only 12 months old when her father died so she didn't have a street named for her. Seems she wasn't too happy about it either.

It's New Year's Eve. Please be careful; somebody loves each one of you.

BRIDE OF THE WEEK. Vickie Lynn Brown, daughter of Mr. & Mrs. Brown of Canyon, is the bride to be of Don Kite, Jr. Selections are at COPPER KITCHEN.

Texas gets Canadian doctors

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

Dr. David Feinstein can crack now about the "menopausal physicians" in Canada who told him over and over that their hospitals had no staff position for another gland specialist.

But it wasn't funny at the time to the young physician, just out of residency. Without a hospital staff position, he couldn't do the research and start the practice he had dreamed of.

So Feinstein, his wife and three children left their native Ontario in September and joined the flow of Canadian physicians and nurses to Texas.

"I was rejected in Canada, but in Texas I was met with open arms," said Feinstein, 30, director of the diabetic unit at Methodist Hospital in Dallas. Since 1974, the Texas State Board of Medical Examiners has — by reciprocal agreement — licensed 674 Canadian doctors to practice medicine. That's more than half the 1,104 physicians Canadian authorities say have emigrated to the United States during that period.

In 1978 alone, the board has licensed 375 Canadians. Problems in Canada's government-managed medical system also have sent nurses streaming to Texas. In 1978, the state's Board of Nurse Examiners licensed 400 of them, more than double the 172 licensed in 1977.

"All I know is at the time I graduated, they were laying off nurses. I wrote all over Canada looking for jobs and was told they had none," said Heather Fletcher, 25, a nurse at Hays County Hospital in San Marcos. Canada's nationalized hospitals were cutting budgets and paring nursing staffs at the same time the country's colleges were graduating new nurses in record numbers, says Ken Holliday, who until December ran a recruiting program for the Texas Hospital Association.

"About 1973, they had as much of a nurses' shortage as we did. They cranked up to cure it and were graduating 2,500 to 5,000 nurses a year in Ontario alone. Then they got into a money crunch and there was a cutback in hospital staffing patterns. Where they had four nurses on a shift, they cut back to one," Holliday said.

Doctors' reasons for emigrating have been more complicated. Feinstein searched for nine months for a hospital staff position but, despite high qualifications, found no openings. He suspects older doctors wanted to foreclose competition. "In Texas, you have open membership in hospitals. If you have a license and are qualified, you have the right to go on staff in a hospital. But in Canada, doctors can say, 'No, we don't want another internist on staff at this time,'" he said.

"The older, menopausal physicians have too much say in whether you can come on staff," Feinstein added wryly.

Dr. Roy Gillick, also of Ontario, set up practice in Houston in 1977, and blames his departure squarely on Canada's national health insurance system.

"Finances are one part of it but not the big thing," said Gillick, a general practitioner. "In Canada, I had 50 to 75 patients per day, and even at 50 a day I was rushing them through. When it's free, the patients demand the care. I could give them five minutes, and when that happens the fun goes out of practicing medicine."

Now Gillick said, he sees about 30 patients per day. He said the Canadian government limited fees to $8 for an office call — compared with $10 to $15 in Texas — and withheld 10 percent of that for book-keeping and administrative expenses.

Gillick, 44, says he handles Medicare patients only if they pay him directly and do their own federal paperwork for reimbursement. He says he treats indigent for free rather than deal with Medicaid.

"I left one country because of government forms and red tape, and quite frankly, I don't want to get involved in it," he said.

Dr. George Sharpe, 34, a neonatologist (newborn specialist) in Austin, couldn't find a position in Canada that would enable him to expand on research he had done in Sweden.

He took a job in Oklahoma City in 1975, came to Austin two years later to "look it over," liked what he saw and accepted a position at city-owned Brackenridge Hospital. "I had I found an equal opportunity in Canada, I probably would have stayed..." Research money in Canada is drying up rapidly. The nationalized health insurance scheme is costing far more than they thought it would," said Sharpe, who grew up in Newfoundland and was educated at Dalhousie University in Nova Scotia.

Sharpe quotes another Canadian practicing in Texas as being "surprised to find that every person who walks into his office is genuinely sick. This is not the case in Canada. There are a significant number of over-utilizers who come to talk."

It's not just the lure of a Sun Belt climate and the lack of an income tax that accounts for the sudden rise in the number of doctors and nurses in Texas. The Texas Hospital Association and a number of local groups have been very active recruiters in Canada.

Feinstein said he responded to an advertisement in a medical journal and was met at the airport by a hospital recruiter who drove him to interviews in Houston, Dallas, Austin and Wichita Falls — red carpet all the way.

"There is a fair bit of solicitation going on by hospital organizations," said Gillick, who added that Texas does have its attractions.

"If you are going to move, you might as well get out of those bad winters," he said.

Holliday said hospitals have sought help from the Texas Hospital Association for several years because of Texas' doctor shortage. The association buys advertising and lets the member hospitals follow up the responses attracted by that advertising.

Holliday has made several trips to Canada to sell Texas to nurses, including slide presentations and vigorous question-and-answer sessions at most nursing schools in Ontario.

"If they ask you, does it get hot in Texas, you've got to tell them, 'Yes it does.' They hear about the crime rate; that all Texans carry guns and it's not safe to walk the streets. You tell them that some people carry guns in pickups for hunting," Holliday said.

Recruiting doctors with the kind of educations that enable them to easily obtain Texas licenses is a matter of pure economics for hospitals.

"We have to be realistic about it. The physician is the purchaser of hospital services for the patient," says Jack Martin, the hospital association's public information officer. "If a hospital has only one or two doctors on staff, it will run at a low occupancy rate and have a hard time breaking even."

Recruitment of several Canadian doctors in the Spring Branch area of Houston enabled a hospital to raise its occupancy rate from 75 percent to 100 percent, Martin said.

Petro boom is mixed blessing

EDITOR'S NOTE — The once sleepy sands of Arabia have undergone a dramatic transformation in the years since oil prices were raised. The new petro-wealth has brought industry, housing and higher incomes but also inflation, congestion and costly miscalculations.

By OTTO DOELLING
Associated Press Writer
JIDDA, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Five years after they imposed an embargo on Israel's Western supporters, Arab petro-powers have found the resulting oil boom to be a mixed blessing.

Arab oil states have been converted into gigantic construction sites in their technological dash toward the 20th Century.

Picturesque old coral and mud-brick buildings with hammam windows and crenelated roofs are being bulldozed to make way for faceless boom towns of glass, steel and concrete.

From dawn to dusk, the desert peace is shattered by the rattle of jackhammers.

"It's been like the gold rush and World War II combined," said an American diplomat in Jidda. Saudi Arabia's commercial center on the Red Sea.

Since the quadrupling of oil prices in 1973, the earnings of the 13-state Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) have skyrocketed from $22.5 billion to $130 billion a year, with the Arabs collecting about two-thirds of the total.

The unprecedented oil wealth has enabled well-connected entrepreneurs in the free-enterprise Arab states on the Persian Gulf to rake off vast fortunes to finance jets and palatial villas at home and abroad.

But the petro-bonanza also is seeping down to those whose families once depended for a livelihood on camel driving, goatherding, pearl diving and dhow sailing.

Their modest Toyotas and Datsuns compete on jammed new boulevards with the Cadillacs and Rolls Royces of the sheikhs. Libya and Kuwait, where the bedouins once relied on camel transport, now boast one car for every three inhabitants.

In Saudi Arabia, which abounds with rags-to-riches land deals, about the lowest paid native is the traffic cop earning the equivalent of about $600 a month.

Conservative states, not to be outdone by the socialist members of the petroleum cartel, have become tax-free welfare havens where public services from health care to costly desalinated water are part of the commonwealth. In Kuwait, even local telephone calls are free. Billions are being invested to construct schools, hospitals and housing.

While the royal rulers of Arab Gulf states attempt to build on old feudal structures, Libya is using its petro-billions to create a "new socialist society... where profit and money disappear." While the money is still at hand, Libya is investing $25 billion in a five-year industrialization drive to provide new refineries and steel, petrochemical and electrification plants.

Iraq, one of the reputed sites of the Garden of Eden, is pushing a $10-billion agricultural program with model farms, animal husbandry and cattle-breeding centers. The socialist state is also building up gas and petrochemical industries.

In socialist Algeria, by contrast, more than 70 percent of the working population still is tied to agriculture. As a result of an all-out industrialization drive, very little of the oil wealth has reached the rural population. But the government hopes the average income will rise from $375 in 1970 to $625 by 1980.

A decade ago, some of the poorer sheikhdoms making up what has since become the United Arab Emirates (U.A.E.) survived on gold smuggling and selling passports and eye-catching postage stamps.

Now, the seven-state U.A.E. federation and Kuwait rank as the richest countries in the world with per capita incomes averaging more than $15,000 a year.

Complaints filed on Taiwan break

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — Defendant Carter may have more trouble in Congress than in court over the termination of the U.S. mutual defense treaty with Taiwan.

After all, it was Carter who promised to shape foreign policy with congressional participation from the outset. It didn't work that way on the new China policy.

Carter became a defendant when Sen. Barry Goldwater and 14 congressional colleagues sued him for putting the Nationalist Chinese on notice that the 1954 defense treaty will end in a year.

They seek to have the federal courts invalidate Carter's action, part of the price the administration paid for diplomatic relations with Peking.

Just as the president alone cannot repeal a law, he cannot repeal a treaty, which itself is a law," they argue. "He must first ask Congress, or at least the Senate.

Carter didn't ask Congress, nor did he tell Congress until the night Washington and Peking announced the establishment of diplomatic relations. At the same time, the United States announced the break with Taiwan.

Congressional consent is a legal point. Advising Congress is a political one that will be argued long and loud.

In those arguments, the complaints won't be limited to Republican Goldwater and his conservative allies. A good many Democrats are miffed that they weren't consulted in the deliberations that led to the new China policy, even though some of them agree with it.

Congress is not likely to do anything to change the outcome, but Carter's sometimes difficult relations with Capitol Hill hardly have been enhanced.

The Goldwater lawsuit complaints that Carter's action was "shrouded in secrecy, contrary to a law enacted by Congress specifically calling for prior consultation."

Actually, all that measure did was declare it to be the sense of Congress that House and Senate should be consulted in advance on any proposed policy change affecting the Taiwan defense treaty.

Sense of the Congress resolutions are like political platforms — it's nice to abide by them, but there is no penalty clause in case you don't.

Carter said the China diplomacy had to be conducted in secret. He and Zbigniew Brzezinski said it wouldn't have worked otherwise.

They may be right, but Carter didn't talk that way when he was campaigning for the White House. He accused the Republicans of running "a kind of secretive Lone Ranger foreign policy."

DISTRIBUTIVE EDUCATION (DE) CLUB president Terry Richardson stands in the sportswear department at Dunlap's. Richardson has been employed by Dunlap's for a year and a half. She says that "D.E. is a fantastic learning experience" for her. The 17-year-old junior is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.T. Richardson Jr. of 2305 Comanche. She plans to attend Texas Tech and major in marketing.
