

Shah's son in Lubbock Prince would rule

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Crown Prince Reza Pahlavi, son of the Shah of Iran and heir-apparent to the throne, says he would return to rule his country one day "if the people want me."

"If they want me and they think I could help them — the 35 million people of Iran — then I would be ruler," said the 18-year-old prince who is receiving supersonic pilot training at Reese Air Force Base near Lubbock.

"This is what I have been studying for — economics, military and things like that — to help. If the people want me, I hope it will work out."

Prince Reza, who cannot legally ascend to the throne until he is 21, commented Tuesday during an informal news conference outside his home in this West Texas city.

He said he believes his father "probably will return to Iran" despite speculation the shah has gone into exile.

Earlier Tuesday, the shah and Empress Farah flew to Cairo on what was officially termed a vacation, although many called it the beginning of exile for the beleaguered monarch. It was speculated the shah and his wife would continue to the United States from Egypt.

"I hope everything will get better very soon," Prince Reza said. "I don't know if my father will ever regain power. The new government is basically taking care of everything."

The prince said he knew little more of the events in Iran than what has been reported in local newspapers and on television.

Prince Reza said he knew of no plans for the shah to visit Lubbock, although the U.S. State Department said it was possible the shah would stop here to stay with his family or pick them up en route to another destination.

Prince Reza said he believed any stay by his father in the United States would be only temporary.

Meanwhile, the presence of three children and the mother-in-law of the Shah of Iran stirred little reaction in Lubbock as the party took up residence Tuesday at the prince's plush, western-style home.

Lubbock residents went about their business. A group of Iranian students attending nearby Texas Tech University, numbering about 500, were also quiet, although they had staged a protest march against the shah last summer.

An attorney for Lubbock Legal Services, which has represented the students in the past, said he knew of no plans to protest the presence of the shah's mother-in-law, Farideh Diva, and Princess Farahnaz, 15, Prince Alireza, 12, and Princess Layla, 8.

They arrived at Reese Air Force Base in predawn darkness Tuesday aboard an Imperial Iranian 707 jet that left

CROWN PRINCE REZA PAHLAVI

McGuire Air Force Base, N.J., Monday night.

Security around the prince's home was beefed up as off-duty Lubbock policemen guarded the gates.

Despite the turmoil Tuesday, Prince Reza attended flight classes as usual at Reese.

The shah's family was spread across oceans and across a big chunk of the United States. In addition to Cairo and Lubbock, family members also were in California.

Heavy casualties in southern Iran

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Troops clashed with thousands of anti-shah demonstrators in Ahwaz in the heart of Iran's southern oilfields today and heavy casualties were reported on the day following the monarch's departure from the strife-torn country.

The Tehran newspaper Ettelaat said the army opened fire after tens of thousands of demonstrators had gathered in front of a mosque in Ahwaz. The newspaper's initial information was that there were hundreds of casualties, but there was no independent confirmation of the toll.

An official at an Ahwaz hospital said by early afternoon 25 casualties had been brought in and some of them were dead on arrival.

Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar, head of a shah-appointed civilian government called an emergency national security meeting to discuss the clash. Gen. Abbass Gharabaghi, chief of staff of Iran's 430,000-man armed forces, was among those attending.

The blowup confronted the Bakhtiar government with its first serious test of its ability to maintain law and order in the absence of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, who was spending his first full day abroad at Aswan, Egypt.

But the opposition also had problems.

A spokesman in Paris for Ayatollah Khomeini, the exiled Shiite Moslem religious leader who has been the spearhead of the opposition to the shah, said the provisional Islamic government or revolutionary council which Khomeini plans to form for Iran would not include leaders of the National Front.

The liberal-progressive National Front, headed by Dr. Karim Sanjaby, headed the political side of the anti-shah movement.

Farmland sales spark discussion

By MILLER BONNER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although foreign investors bought 93,000 acres of Texas farmland last year — including "some of the best soil in the state" — an Agriculture Department report concludes that the purchases were "insignificant."

But a congressman in whose Northeast Texas district most of the land acquisitions occurred said Tuesday the foreign buyers have sparked "quite a bit of discussion among our farmers and ranchers."

"They are quite concerned over the increased land prices," continued Rep. Sam Hall, D-Texas. "They are in a state of apprehension because most of the property is being sold to foreigners."

The Texas Agriculture Extension Service compiled the state figures included in a nationwide report requested by Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Georgia, chairman of the Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry Committee.

The extension service noted that the "concentrated" purchases of cropland in Texas included "some of the best soil in the state." But the report also noted that the purchases represented "an insignificant portion of total agricultural acreage in the state."

If foreign purchasers continued buying land at last year's rate, it would take 25 years before one percent of Texas' 157.9 million farm, ranch and forest acres would be under foreign control.

The Prince of Liechtenstein was identified by the extension service report as the largest single foreign buyer last year, purchasing more than 40,000 acres.

By comparison, Prince Francis Joseph II's country covers only 39,040 acres.

The prince's purchases last year included 17,000 acres in Hopkins County, 2,000 acres in Lamar County and a contract to buy 1,400 acres in Denton County.

Prior to the survey period, Joseph had bought 20,000 acres in Red River County.

Other significant foreign buys included — West German investor Adolph Scherer, 8,884 acres in Red River, Delta and Lamar counties plus a "reported" interest in 2,500 acres in Bowie County.

—Scandinavian investor Ulfrik Schwedterferger, 5,120 acres in Presidio County.

—and a group of Mennonites from Mexico, 6,400 acres in Gaines County.

The Texas Agriculture Extension Service said that foreigners were involved in 42 transactions in 26 Texas counties from Jan. 1, 1977 through June 30, 1978. The average purchase involved 2,219 acres.

The largest single group of foreign investors "would appear to be the West Germans," said the report that added "there is little or no indication that petrodollars are the source of current purchases."

The largest concentration of foreign buying centered from "Dallas, northeast to the Red River."

Other conclusions reported by the Texas Agriculture Extension Service were —no indication that foreign buying accelerated during the survey period.

No survivors in helicopter crash

OPA-LOCKA, Fla. (AP) — Two helicopters collided over a busy suburban Miami airport today, scattering the field with bodies and debris, officials said. Police said at least four people were killed and there were no known survivors.

"There's all dead people out there," said a dispatcher for Randle-Eastern ambulance. "They're lying on the field like rag dolls." The dispatcher said eight body bags were requested, but he did not know how many people were dead.

Carter wants tax credit considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration today urged Congress to give quick consideration to a special tax credit aimed at protecting workers who fight inflation by holding down their wage demands. In effect, the government would make up the difference if an employee group's average pay raise of 7 percent or less is exceeded by inflation.

Jury weighs Davis' fate

By ROB WOOD
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — A jury deliberated the fate today of Fort Worth millionaire Cullen Davis, charged with plotting the death of his divorcee.

The seven-man, five-woman panel, which heard 11 weeks of testimony and final arguments, deliberated a half hour Tuesday night before recessing.

It resumed the weighing of evidence at 8 a.m.

Davis, 45, waited out another jury just 13 months ago in Amarillo at the other end of the state, where he was acquitted of capital murder in the death of his 12-year-old stepdaughter.

The jury came out twice this morning seeking clarification on certain testimony. It wanted to know when key state witness David McCrory was fired from his job at a Davis-owned company. It also asked when Davis had mentioned to a Fort Worth lawyer, Hershel Payne, about McCrory's comments on killing people.

McCrory was fired Aug. 15, five days before Davis' arrest.

The jury wanted to know when chief defense witness Larry Gene Lucas had said he had talked with McCrory about killing Davis. The judge said the testimony of Mary Weir revealed that Lucas had his talk with McCrory in the latter part of December 1977 or early January. Lucas testified the talk occurred during the summer of 1978.

When the case went to the jury, at 6:16 p.m. Tuesday, Fort Worth Judge Joe Eidson sat on the front row no more than five feet from the jury box, his head cupped in his hands.

Davis was accused of soliciting the murder of Eidson, the judge who had presided over the long and bitter divorce case of the defendant and his estranged wife Priscilla.

Eidson was asked if he was at the trial at the request of the prosecution and he said, "Let us say it was a suggestion. I have tried to cooperate with the state."

The courtroom was filled for the final arguments and a score or more wandering the halls outside, hoping to find a seat for the eight hours of arguments.

It was a one-two-three punch for both sides, with noted Houston attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes taking the anchor lap for the defense and Tolly Wilson, chief criminal prosecutor of Tarrant County (Fort Worth) for the prosecution. The case was moved from Fort Worth to Houston because of excessive publicity in the northwest Texas city.

Shortly after the arguments, State District Judge Wallace Moore told the jury to elect a foreman and then deliberate. The jurors met for about 35 minutes and were excused for the night.

Official: Conserve energy

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger told Congress today that a strong nationwide effort to conserve energy is needed to offset loss of oil exports from Iran.

He told the Senate Energy Committee that more stringent actions — including, as a last resort, gasoline rationing — may be needed if this voluntary effort does not work and if Iranian production is not restored soon.

Schlesinger said he has sent letters to state, county and local officials urging them to immediately embark on tough conservation programs as a result of the Iranian situation. Similar appeals have gone out to business leaders.

A Schlesinger aide, Jim Bushop, said that some 1,500 such letters were being mailed.

Schlesinger said the steps that can be taken include tougher enforcement of the national 55 mile-per-hour speed limit, lowering thermostats in buildings, encouraging car-pooling and, in the case of businesses, switching from oil to coal or natural gas wherever feasible.

Schlesinger said Iranian unrest has resulted in total reduction of some 5.5 million barrels of oil a day on the international oil market.

The effect of the Iranian cut-off to the United States is roughly 500,000 barrels a day, but Schlesinger said increased production by Saudi Arabia and other exporting nations is helping to offset this loss.

The main effect is having on U.S. supplies is to reduce reserves. "We can live with drawdowns," the energy secretary said. "The situation is serious, it is not yet critical. We are not in any immediate difficulty."

However, he said that if Iranian production is not restored by the summer, the constant drain on reserves will make it difficult to build supplies again to take care of next winter's heating season.

Facts of life surprising

We should be reminded from time to time about certain things. The "Pathfinder," published by the Center for Education and Research in Free Enterprise, Texas A&M University, recently published a number of these.

The Pathfinder titled this column "Did you know ... Facts of Life Are More or Less Surprising." Following are some of the "Pathfinders" findings:

- In 1950 many welfare agencies refused to help families that owned TV sets because welfare was not supposed to finance luxuries.
- Americans spend an estimated 377,000 man years (a labor force equivalent to that of the city of Dallas) filling out 4,897 different federal forms.
- In 1975 the New York City government spent $1,900 per resident? Los Angeles finished a distant second spending $550 while Chicago spent $350 per resident.
- Congress, claiming a "special relationship with their employees," excludes its members and employees from coverage of regulatory laws such as occupational safety and health, equal pay for equal work, Fair Labor Standards, Equal Employment Opportunity and Social Security?
- In 1976 the top 5 percent of income earners paid nearly 40 percent of federal income taxes collected while earning 22 percent of income.
- The price of eyeglasses is 25 percent higher in states where advertising of such products is prohibited or restricted.
- An August 1978 poll in Iowa showed that 52 percent of the state's adults favored controls on all prices. When asked if they would still favor such a program if it limited them to a "smaller pay increase this year than usual," one quarter of the group switched to opposition to controls.
- Each month more than 2 million Americans quit their jobs.
- The minimum wage rate is programmed to increase at nearly 10 percent per year between 1976 and 1981. If that growth rate were to continue in the year 2000 the minimum wage would be $20 per hour or $41,600 per year.
- Only 6 percent of the public regards business ads about public issues as "very creditable" and 56 percent say they are "not creditable."
- In 1781 the state of Virginia tried to fix the price of a cavalry horse at $150,000 in Continental currency. The phrase "not worth a Continental," still survives.
- Wage and price controls have never been installed permanently in any Western country as other regulations have.
- In 1944 the federal government issued 5 billion ration coupons per month and controls were enforced by 65,000 bureaucrats and 325,000 volunteers.
- After-tax corporate profits in manufacturing are approximately 5 percent of each sales dollar. The public thinks they are 30-35 percent.
- In 1979 compliance with federal regulations on consumer goods and services will cost each American $500 annually. This is up from $300 in 1976.
- In another part of the "Pathfinder" publication were carried the remarks by U.S. Sen. Jake Garn R-Utah.
- Speaking in the Senate in opposition to the natural gas price bill: "Certain Greek cities, we are told, had a policy that anyone proposing a new law had to do so from a platform in the public market — with a rope around his neck. If the law was adopted, they removed the rope. If it was rejected, they removed the platform." Garn said.
- This new center at Texas A&M is supported totally by contributions and fees. No tax funds are employed, the spokesman for the center said.
- Keep up the good work!

Will EPA outlaw Hawaii volcano?

By HOLLY KURTZ

VOLCANOES NATIONAL PARK. HAWAII (AP) — Madame Pele, the Hawaiian goddess of the volcano, may have some surprises for the Environmental Protection Agency, the office that sets safe limits for potentially harmful chemicals.

And those surprises could have an impact on industrial anti-pollution requirements.

Studies at Hawaiian Volcanoes National Park show that its active volcanoes may emit halocarbons, a chemical group that includes fluorocarbons, which are suspected of being harmful to the atmosphere's ozone layer.

That layer shields the Earth from the sun's ultraviolet rays, which can cause skin cancer.

The two volcanoes are 4,090-foot Kilauea, which last erupted in September 1977, and 13,680-foot Mauna Loa, which last erupted in July 1975. Both are located on the island of Hawaii.

The gas studies were preliminary, and many more experiments must be performed before conclusions are drawn, said Gordon Eaton, former scientist in charge of the U.S. Geological Survey's volcano observatory in the park.

"If volcanoes generate fluorocarbons, it will have a significant impact on whether industrial applications are doing as much harm as we thought," said Tom Casadevall, a gas geochemist at the observatory.

The EPA has proposed that fluorocarbons be banned from use in refrigeration systems and in aerosol spray cans such as hair sprays and deodorants. The proposal has caused controversy in scientific and industrial circles.

An initial study of the volcanic gases came from Rei Rasmussen, a professor of atmospheric chemistry at the Oregon Graduate Center, a private research institute at Beaverton, Ore.

Two months after the last Kilauea eruption, Rasmussen detected fluorocarbons coming from fumaroles, or vents from which gas and steam escape.

He also took samples at the summit of Mauna Loa and tests showed the presence of halocarbons, Eaton said. However, fluorocarbons were not among them.

Scientists believe fluorocarbons and some other gases come not from the molten lava but from the vegetation that was sealed off and burned by the lava flow.

Rasmussen compared it to a smoldering campfire that is tightly covered.

There is no evidence yet, Rasmussen said, that volcanoes produce large quantities of fluorocarbons when they are not active.

He said he wants to return for more studies to determine the exact composition and amounts of the chemicals during a volcano's eruptive and quiet times. At this point, he said the chemical only has been identified, not measured, and the effect on residents is not known.

In his studies near Kilauea, Rasmussen also identified some toxic chemicals, including methylchloride, one of the top 10 substances on the EPA's first-choice list of compounds that must be studied as possible cancer-causing agents.

"We identified a Pandora's box," said Rasmussen. "We hadn't anticipated such large concentrations under cool conditions. We can only conjecture what is released when lava flow is in its rosy orange state as it moves over vegetation."

Don't blame bankers for inflation

Inflation is an excessive supply of money in circulation, causing each dollar to fall in purchasing power; causing, that is, a general rise in prices. When one points out that most of our money today is created by the private commercial banks, the question arises: Are the banks responsible for the inflation? To answer this, it is necessary to explain just how our money is created.

When a commercial bank (any bank that allows depositors to draw checks on their deposits) lends money, it simply credits the borrower's deposit account with that sum of money. He then can draw checks up to the amount of the deposit and pay his bills. This is now most of our money (all of the excess) is created. It really is not "money" as that word is commonly understood, but bank credit or money owed by the bank to the depositor. Demand deposits such dollars are called. Since it serves to pay most of our bills, it fulfills the function of money.

A small part — one-fifth to one-fourth — of our money supply is Federal Reserve notes and coins, commonly called "cash" and created by the U.S. government. However, cash does not become part of the money supply until it is in the pockets of the spending public. It moves from the government printing presses and mints into the vaults of the 12 Federal Reserve banks. From here it moves out to the some 12,000 commercial banks as they need it to meet the demand of the public. It is withdrawn by depositors to the extent that they want it to make certain purchases and to make change. Not until it reaches the point of being withdrawn from a bank and pocketed does it become part of the money supply.

This suggests why only a small part of our money supply is actually folding and jingling money. The people want only that much of their paying medium in the form of cash. From experience they know that for most paying purposes checkbook money is more convenient. There is nothing to carry around but a book of blank checks, and if you lose that or have it stolen, you have lost no money. Even a check that you have written and signed can be voided by promptly instructing the bank not to pay it. And you can write a check for an odd amount of dollars and cents.

Note that when a person cashes a check at a bank — that is, hands the teller a check and receives cash in return — the total money in circulation is not increased. All that happens is that checkbook money is converted into cash. The nation's money supply is not affected.

Note also that the amount of cash in circulation depends solely on public demand. Neither the government nor the banks control this amount. People withdraw cash to make small purchases in the marketplace. When merchants accumulate an excess of cash in their cash registers, more than they need to make change, they redeposit it in their banks — that is, reconvert it into checkbook money.

Hence, the proportion of the nation's money supply which is in the form of cash changes little. Our inflation definitely is not caused by the printing and minting of too much money.

Clearly, the bulk of our money is demand deposits in banks, and these are created by these banks as they extend credit to persons, firms, U.S. Treasury, agencies and organizations, through the making of loans and the purchase of bonds and notes. As these loans are repaid to the banks, the money is cancelled, and so the total fluctuates continually. Over a period of time in which the total created exceeds the amount cancelled, the money supply increases. It is when this increase exceeds the growth of the economy — that is, exceeds the normal demand for it — that we have inflation.

Since it is the banks which extend the credit, creating the money, it is easy to jump to the conclusion that the bankers are responsible for the inflation. However, a bank cannot lend an unlimited amount of money, for the reason that this would cause it to fail, to go bankrupt. The more it lends and thus the more demand deposits it creates, the more is the demand on it for cash. It must be able always to satisfy this demand — that is, to pay its debts to depositors with cash, for when they become depositors it was understood that it would do this. If and when it cannot, it must close its doors. But a bank's cash has to be "bought," dollar-for-dollar, from the Federal Reserve, so its stock is limited. Hence, its lending power is limited.

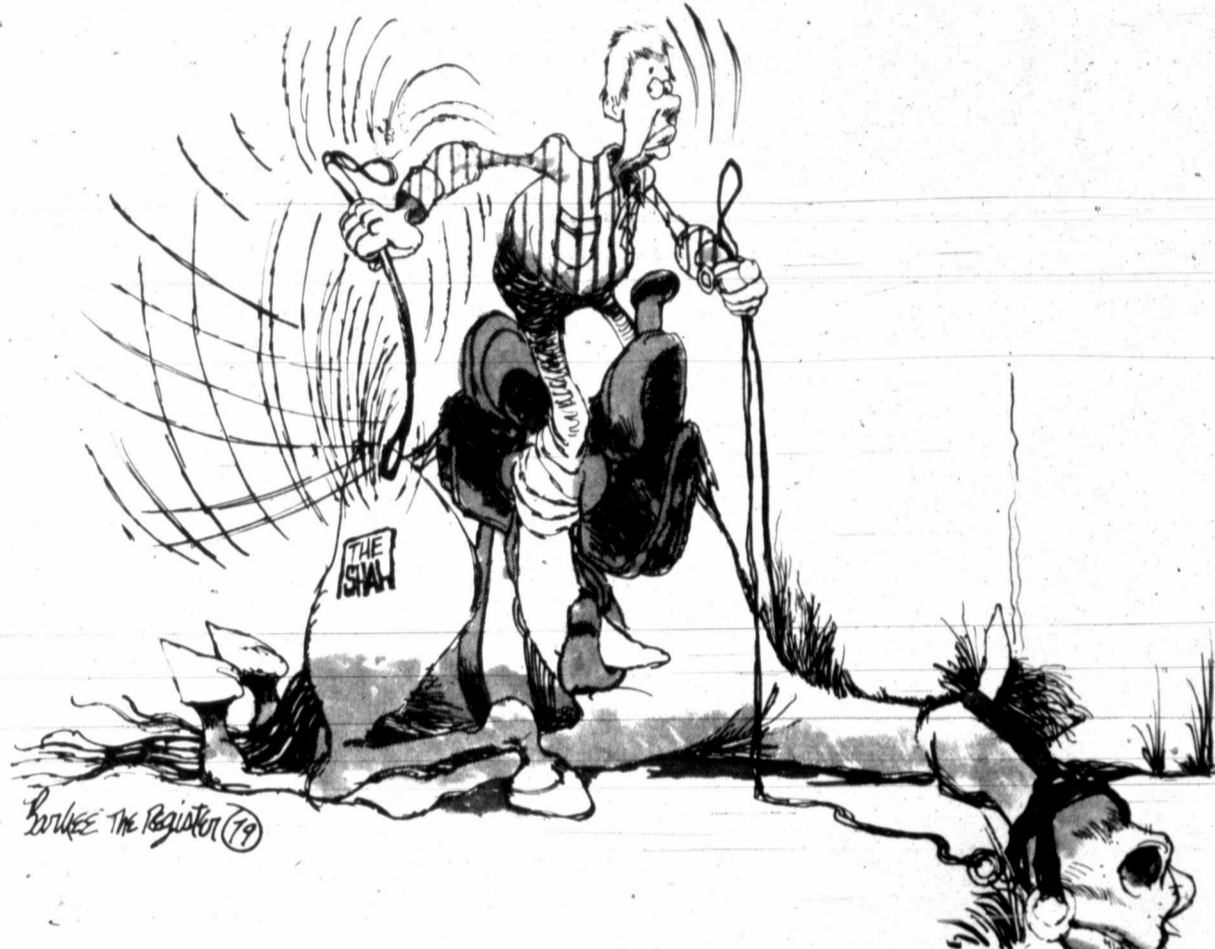

However, the banker is in business. He must get income to pay his expenses and make a profit. And he makes most of his income by lending at interest. So he is moved to lend as much as he safely can.

Free to do as he pleases, the banker would be limited only by his own discretion. But he is not that free. He must do as the Federal Reserve, a U.S. government agency, pleases. And the Fed puts a limit, called a reserve requirement, on his lending. This means that he must hold in reserve at all times cash in his vault, plus a deposit in a Federal Reserve bank, which is instantly convertible into cash, equal to or exceeding a certain percentage of the deposits in his bank. This puts a ceiling on his credit extension. And this is how the Federal Reserve controls the creation of money.

Must the banker lend as much as his reserves will allow? No law says he must, but he is in competition with other lenders. If he does not make a sale (loan), a competitor will. Further, the government brings great pressure on the banks to buy its bills, notes and bonds. It offers liberal interest rates and gilt-edge security. It has to in order to borrow the vast amounts it wants to spend. So, behind the rapid increases of the money supply by the banks lurks the government's policy of heavy borrowing.

Sometimes the Federal Reserve relaxes its reserve requirements just to facilitate government borrowing. Sometimes, even the Federal Reserve banks themselves buy bonds from the Treasury, creating dollars to pay for them, if the private banks and others do not buy them as freely as the Fed thinks they should.

It is the U.S. Treasury plus the Federal Reserve System which basically are responsible for creating the flood of dollars we call inflation.

Vermont and New Hampshire

By BERNARD SIEGAN

New Hampshire and Vermont are adjoining states. They are similar in size, topography and many economic characteristics. They are, however, quite dissimilar in terms of a major contemporary concern: taxes. Vermont has sales and income taxes, while New Hampshire does not. As a result, the former is the third most heavily taxed state in the nation, while the latter ranks 47th.

To discover whether taxpayers are getting their money's worth, Dartmouth Economics Professor Colin Campbell and his economist wife, Rosemary, made a comparative study of the fiscal systems of the two states for the period 1940-1974, which was published in 1976. They learned that the major types of expenditures — education, highways, and welfare — are much higher as a percentage of personal income in Vermont than in New Hampshire. They concluded, however, that little evidence exists that these services are better in the higher taxed state. Vermont taxpayers are not benefiting from their greater tax burden.

The growth in Vermont taxes has been at the state level, as sales and income taxes have been imposed and increased. The rise in local taxes — principally the property tax — has not differed appreciably between the two states. Prior to 1948, state tax receipts as a percentage of personal income was similar in both states. Starting in that year, the ratio began rising in Vermont, and by 1974 the percentage of personal income collected by state government was twice as high in Vermont as in New Hampshire — 12.5 percent as compared to 6.2 percent. Pre-1948, New Hampshire probably collected at the local level a greater percentage of personal income. But this difference has diminished in recent years, and in 1974 New Hampshire was taxing at the local level 7.5 percent of personal income and Vermont, 7.2 percent.

Data on total state and local general expenditures as a percentage of personal income follow the same pattern as the collection of taxes. In 1974, total direct general expenditures by state and local government, as a percentage of personal income was almost 50 percent higher in Vermont than in New Hampshire — 25.4 percent to 17.2 percent. (In both states general expenditures are higher than general revenues.)

Acknowledging that it is not simple to compare the quality and quantity of services in two states, the Campbells sought to determine as best they could, whether Vermonters are obtaining more and better education, welfare and highway services. If higher Vermont taxes are matched with superior services, this would not necessarily reflect a greater tax burden. People might well prefer living in a state where such advantages are present. The Campbells' analysis of Vermont services does not find any such benefits.

Measured as a percentage of personal income, Vermont spends almost 50 percent more than New Hampshire for education. A principal reason is the somewhat smaller teacher-student ratio of 16.1 against 17.0, which accounts in part for a greater per student expenditure in Vermont — $1,398 to $1,175 in fiscal 1975. No significant difference in quality of education is expected, since the differential is relatively slight and both states have a low student-teacher ratio.

A number of comparisons were made by the Campbells in their efforts to evaluate school quality of the two states. They report that similar measurements occur in (1) the dropout rate, (2) educational achievement of adult population, (3) scholastic aptitude tests scores, (4) percentage of selective service draftees failing pre-induction and induction mental tests, and (5) percentage increase in number of high-school graduates. Using these criteria, they concluded there is no significant difference in educational quality between the states.

Highway expenditures in 1974 were 4 percent of personal income in Vermont, as compared to New Hampshire's 2.9 percent. Vermont's higher expenditure may be partly the result of larger highway mileage per capita, speculate the Campbells. Total highway mileage is similar, however, in both states. Few of those whom the Campbells surveyed believe that Vermont highways are superior, and they conclude there is no evidence in highway quality to justify Vermont's greater outlay.

The Campbells believe that while "you get what you pay for" tends to be true in private business, their findings show it is far less applicable in the public sector. When goods are privately produced, in the long run their prices relate to costs — and high quality goods costing more to produce will usually be higher priced. Competition generally prevents lower-costs goods from being sold at higher prices than their cost. These restraints do not operate to hold down the expenditure for public services.

Industry spends billions to protect environment

By H.B. (HANK) HARKINS, PRESIDENT, TEXAS MID-CONTINENT OIL & GAS ASSOCIATION

The U.S. petroleum industry, operating in Texas and other producing and processing states, is very much involved in protecting the environment. Its commitment to this purpose calls for the expenditure of significant amounts of money.

In 1977, the industry nationwide spent in excess of $2.5 billion on environmental protection. That contrasts with approximately $11.6 billion in net income for the nation's 18 largest integrated oil companies during the same year. And it represents an increase of more than $147 million over similar expenditures in 1976.

Environmentalism in recent years has become an emotionally-charged political, social, and economic issue. But, the outlay of private capital by oil and gas producers and processors to protect the environment has been going on for a long time. Environmental protection expenditures by the U.S. petroleum industry during the 1968-76 decade totalled some $13.4 billion.

However, despite these expenditures, bureaucracies armed with an ever-increasing array of environmental regulations continue to confront the industry. Producers and processors now must respond to numerous federal statutes with particularly far-reaching effects. These include the Clean Air Act and its 1977 amendments and the Water Pollution Control Act and its 1972 amendments. Many of the regulations coming from these laws are unnecessary, particularly here in Texas. They amount to regulatory overkill.

Example: The Environmental Protection Agency has issued regulations that threaten injection operations in which water and other fluids are pumped underground to increase petroleum recovery. These regulations are unneeded in producing states, such as Texas, which have long histories of successful regulation of such operations.

Example: The EPA also has proposed that vapor controls be placed on storage tanks with a capacity of 952 barrels or more. The industry operating in Texas already is installing such controls on large tanks in populous areas. But, such a requirement on nearly all tanks in all locations, however remote, is going to cost more than it is worth.

Example: The Texas Parks & Wildlife Department wants oils and greases discharged with produced brine into the state's waters limited to a level that industry spokesmen are convinced cannot be achieved. Oilmen ask instead for regulations adequate to protect marine life in onshore and offshore waters, yet not so restrictive as to hamstring the production of oil and gas.

This country needs legislation that will provide for reasonable environmental conservation and protection, yet not put an end to business activity — including energy development.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The inauguration of Dallas oil millionaire Bill Clements as Texas' first Republican governor in 106 years had overtones of national importance.

Two probable GOP presidential candidates — John Connally and George Bush — sat behind the inaugural platform Tuesday, and Clements himself has been mentioned as a possible contender.

Such a suggestion might seem premature as Clements, 61, has never before held elective public office, but his defeat of former Democratic Attorney General John Hill was a major upset.

Clements also gained national political experience as Richard Nixon's Texas campaign manager in 1972. He served as deputy secretary of defense in 1973-77 as Nixon's appointee.

Regardless of his political future, Clements has pledged to "do everything I can" to prevent President Jimmy Carter from capturing Texas' 26 electoral votes in 1980.

Hill, who spent inaugural day fishing off Nassau, plans to campaign for Carter.

Outgoing Gov. Dolph Briscoe also was absent as Republicans whooped and hollered through the 35-minute inaugural ceremony that included the swearing-in of Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby to his third term.

Hill defeated Briscoe in the Democratic primary, and Briscoe insists he could have beaten Clements. Briscoe maintains that the Democratic Party shifted too far to the left in accepting Hill as its nominee.

The Clements-Hobby inaugural was the first time in Texas history that a governor and lieutenant governor from different parties have assumed office together.

Clements obviously enjoyed himself as possibly the largest inaugural crowd in recent years gathered on the South lawn of the Capitol grounds.

Numerous women, including Clements' wife, Rita, 47, wore fur coats in the 50-degree weather. The sun only occasionally peeped through the cloud cover, and Clements exclaimed as he ended his address, "and we have sun."

Clements also laughed loudly as he finished the oath of office by repeating after Chief Justice Joe Greenhill of the Texas Supreme Court — "so help me God."

Texans regain key posts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Texas congressional delegation, revamped by the retirements and defeats of several powerful lawmakers, has regained several crucial committee assignments in the U.S. House.

The biggest news Tuesday for Texans was the appointment of freshman Rep. Martin Frost to the powerful House Rules Committee by Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill.

Two Democrats, Reps. Jack Hightower and Sam Hall were, as expected, named to fill key committee posts vacated by the retirement of George Mahon of Lubbock and the primary defeat of John Young of Corpus Christi.

Hightower moved from the House Agriculture Committee over to the Appropriations Committee. Hall, beginning his third term, joined fellow Texan Jake Pickle on the Ways and Means Committee.

Frost, a Democrat from

City and State news

Each bill must pass through the 11-member Rules Committee before reaching the floor of the House.

"I am deeply honored that Speaker O'Neill has placed his confidence in me by nominating me for the House Rules Committee," said Frost. "To be named to the committee as a freshman Democrat is a humbling experience and I will work hard to justify the speaker's trust."

Frost won election to public office for the first time by defeating Dale Milford in the Democratic primary last year. He was aided by a strong district organization and almost $80,000 in campaign contributions from organized labor political action committees.

Grand Prairie, will replace Omar Burleson, one of nine Texans who retired from the House last year.

Local flu epidemic subsides

Groom public schools resumed regular class schedules Monday after a flu epidemic last week closed the schools from Wednesday to Friday and affected about 25 percent of the enrollment.

A spokesman for the schools said absences were cut to 2.5 percent on Monday and Tuesday.

Attendance at other area schools has suffered because of illnesses.

Schools in Claude were closed a day early before the Christmas holidays because of a large number of illnesses.

More recently, absences at McLean public schools have ranged between 8 to 10 percent but are starting to fall off, said a school spokesman.

The absentee rate in White Deer has been reported at 10 percent, but officials said this has not affected operations on a large scale.

Other reports from surrounding schools have indicated good attendance despite cold temperatures.

Mrs. Lathrop was a member of St. Vincent De Paul Catholic Church and the altar society. She was married July 4, 1939 to Elton Lathrop of Pampa who survived her. Other survivors are her son, Jack E. Lathrop of Pampa; two daughters, Mrs. Lola Hughes of Pampa and Mrs. Ann Henderson of Snyder and four grandchildren.

Town billboard ordinance upheld

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court today upheld Lubbock's 1975 billboard ordinance, an action which the Outdoor Advertising Association of America claimed could destroy the industry in Texas.

The civil appeals opinion, upheld by the Supreme Court, said the ordinance was a reasonable exercise of the city's police power. It noted that while the company valued the billboards at $710,000, all would be fully depreciated by 1982. It also observed that the firm relocates 20 percent of its billboards annually as part of the normal course of business and that the ordinance permitted billboards in no less than 595 locations.

Rejecting Lubbock Poster's contention that the ordinance abridged First Amendment rights, the court said, "Although commercial speech is accorded First Amendment safeguards, the manner in which commercial advertising is disseminated is subject to regulation." It added that Lubbock had attempted to regulate only the time, place and manner of outdoor advertising, not its content. The Outdoor Advertising Association of America filed a long "friend of the court" brief. It contended that if the court upheld the Amarillo opinion, this could "result in the total destruction of the outdoor advertising industry in the State of Texas."

Oil nominations down

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The railroad commission reported Tuesday that February nominations for the purchase of Texas crude oil total 2,825,681 barrels a day, a decrease of 25,394 barrels daily from January. The figures reflect a revised system of compiling monthly market demand data in which the commission is using only purchaser nominations covering wells and leases to which the buyer is "physically or contractually connected." "Additional demand" estimates have been dropped from monthly demand calculations, the commission said. Chief Engineer Bob Harris said the revised system "should more truly indicate actual demand for Texas crude oil." The commission will meet Thursday to set the statewide oil allowable for February. The January allowable is 100 percent.

Carter cutting U.S. budget deficit

By R. GREGORY NOKES Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is holding to his pledge to slash deficit spending to below $30 billion in the new budget, while still finding money for increased defense outlays. Although the federal budget will be in the red for the 19th time in the last 20 years, the cover will be green, possibly reflecting the president's optimism that he can balance the budget in the next year or two. The budget for fiscal 1980, which begins next Oct. 1, was going to press at the Government Printing Office today and will be presented to Congress, along with an accompanying presidential message, Monday. The president told congressional leaders Tuesday it will be "a tight, spare budget." He has repeatedly said the budget is small enough to help restrain inflation, but large enough to discourage a recession. Administration sources confirmed Tuesday that Carter will propose total spending of about $532 billion for 1980, up about $40 billion from this year. Virtually all of the increase is the result of inflation, however. With revenues estimated at about $503 billion, the administration will project a 1980 deficit of $29 billion. That would be the smallest federal deficit since 1973, when it was $14.8 billion. The deficit in the current 1979 fiscal year is projected at about $40 billion. Defense spending would be increased in the new budget. But there would be cutbacks in other areas, including some trimming of jobs, welfare and education programs, administration officials have said. The president defended his budget in a television interview Monday.

Clements saw marked verse

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — When Gov. Bill Clements took over his Capitol office Tuesday he found a special verse marked by outgoing Gov. Dolph Briscoe in the Bible, a tradition followed by Texas governors. The verse, from Micah 6:8, read: "He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God." When Briscoe took office six years ago, then-Gov. Preston Smith left this verse, from Proverbs 12:19: "The lip of truth shall be established forever; but a lying tongue is but for a moment."

Weather Texas forecasts

By The Associated Press
 Dense fog reduced visibility and caused traffic problems across a vast area of Texas early today. The fog was mostly east of a line from Wichita Falls to Abilene to Del Rio. Also some light rain fell in the Lower Rio Grande Valley with Brownsville reporting .02 of an inch by daybreak. Forecasts called for cloudy skies and scattered showers in the eastern half of the state. In West Texas, skies were to be cloudy, but rainfall was not mentioned. Highs were to range from the 50s in the Panhandle to the upper 70s in Southeast Texas. Most of the state had highs in the 60s. Early morning temperatures ranged from the 30s in the Panhandle to the upper 60s in the Valley. Extremes ranged from 31 at Dalhart to 68 at Brownsville. Fog was reported at Austin, College Station, Dallas-Fort Worth, Longview, McAllen, Palacios, Victoria and Wichita Falls. Tyler and Waco had rain and Alice, Corpus Christi, Cotulla and San Antonio reported drizzle.

WEATHER FORECAST by the National Weather Service calls for cloudy skies and cold weather for most of the country. Snow is expected in northern New England while flurries are predicted for the northwestern Plains. Rain is forecast for parts of Texas and New Mexico. (AP Laserphoto)

9 plead guilty to local charges

By DAN LACKEY Pampa News Staff
 Cases against nine people and a total of 11 charges were disposed of last week in 223rd District Court. According to District Attorney Harold Comer, this leaves the present 223rd District Court docket with about four cases to be tried. "We're pretty happy with the status of our caseload," Comer said Tuesday. "We disposed of approximately 240 felony cases in 1978." In district court last week, Joe Miller, 36, of Pampa, pleaded guilty to unlawful possession of a firearm by a felon. Miller was arrested Dec. 15 in connection with the alleged aggravated kidnapping of Judy Faye Evans, also of Pampa. In a Dec. 19 letter to the district attorney, however, Evans dropped her complaint against Miller. Comer proceeded with the prosecution of the unlawful possession charge. Miller, previously convicted of a felony in another state, was sentenced to five years in the Texas Department of Corrections. Immanuel Jackson, 18, of Berger, pleaded guilty to a December purse snatching incident. Jackson was sentenced to five years in the Texas Department of Corrections. Ester Macins Ambriz and Mikki Marcia Ellis pleaded guilty to the Nov. 18 shoplifting of Charlie's Furniture Store. Ambriz received a three year felony probation and a $350 fine. Ellis received a one year misdemeanor probation and a $350 fine. Both women are from Pampa. Ruben James Saldana pleaded guilty to attempted burglary of the Bill Foreman Co. on E. Brown Street. Saldana was reportedly caught breaking through a window on Nov. 5. He was sentenced to five years felony probation and given a $500 fine. Vicky Cockran Kelly, a former Pampa now living in Berger, pleaded guilty to forging six checks worth a total of $154.20. The 25-year-old woman was placed on five years felony probation and fined $500. Three Pampans also pleaded guilty to subsequent offenses of driving while intoxicated. Glenn Howerton, Lynn Marak, and George McClelland were all placed on five year felony probation and fined $500 each. By law, a second offense of driving while intoxicated is a felony. Roy Shouse, charged with the Oct. 16 1977 theft of a travel trailer from the residence of Carl Parks on N. Wells Street, did not show up for a jury trial last week. Judge Don Cain ordered the forfeiture of Shouse's $5000 bond and issued a warrant for his arrest. The district attorney reported that until shortly before his scheduled trial, Shouse had been held by Galveston authorities on another charge.

Earthquake kills at least 129

By THOMAS KENT Associated Press Writer TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — At least 129 persons were reported killed by an earthquake in southeast Iran as the rest of the country celebrated the departure of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. The quake hit at 1:51 p.m. Tuesday — 5:21 a.m. EST — demolishing the villages of Bazanbad, Khorramabad and Ebrahimabad in the Quae'n area 500 miles southeast of Tehran, the state radio said. The broadcast said 129 bodies had been recovered so far and that it was expected more would be pulled from the debris. The Red Lion and Sun, Iran's Red Cross, said rescue teams had reached the remote villages about 100 miles west of the Afghan border and more than 120 miles south of the holy city of Mashhad.

However, relief efforts could be impeded because planes and trains have been idled by months of anti-shah strikes and there is little gasoline for motor vehicles because of the long oil workers' walkout. The Hagfors seismological observatory in Sweden said the quake registered an estimated 6.8 on the Richter scale. No readings were available in Tehran because employees of the university's Geophysics Institute who had been on an anti-shah strike joined throngs of others rejoicing over his departure after a year of antigovernment violence in which at least 1,500 persons died.

Company appoints

G. Ed Terrell, a native of Pampa, has been named assistant vice president - public relations for Southwestern Bell in Oklahoma. Terrell has been public relations director for the state since August 1975. He will direct all aspects of public relations in Oklahoma related to Southwestern Bell's residence, business and network activities. Terrell started his telephone career in 1954 as an advertising assistant in Dallas. He progressed through various public relations positions at the company's general headquarters in St. Louis and completed an assignment at AT&T in New York before he was transferred to Oklahoma City as general public relations manager in January, 1968. He graduated in 1950 from Oklahoma A&M with a B.A. degree in Journalism. He was a 1941 graduate of Pampa High School. Terrell and his wife, the former Billie Howard of Amarillo, have two children.

Police report

Vera Kettwell of 541 S. Barnes St. reported that unknown person or persons had shot out floodlights at her residence with a BB gun.

Dear Abby

by abigail van buren

DEAR ABBY: Can you help me find a job as live-in housekeeper in a motherless home? It must be a modern house in the most desirable section of the city. (No country or farm locations, please.) The father must be between 38 and 50, no older. He must be at least 6 feet tall, since I am a well-proportioned 5 feet 7 and do not feel comfortable with shorter men around me.

I dress well, am attractive and well-groomed. I enjoy music, disco dancing and outdoor sports. I am 36, in excellent health, and can furnish references.

LOOKING IN WORCESTER, MASS.

DEAR LOOKING: You sound as though you are looking for a man, not a job. If it's a position you're after, register with an employment agency or place an ad in the classified section of this newspaper. If it's a man you're after, your approach is clever, but much too obvious.

DEAR ABBY: OFF MY CHEST IN DENVER wrote that her daughter in college sent all her bills home regularly, but never enclosed a personal note. ("It would mean so much if she just wrote 'love' and signed her name.")

May I respond to that letter? First of all, a girl old enough to go away to college should be trusted with her own checking account and learn how to be responsible for her own bills. Perhaps the daughter is expressing (or not expressing) her resentment at so much parental control.

Second, children learn from us—their parents. If we don't tell them how we feel, then they won't tell us how they feel. If we want love and openness, we must communicate our needs to the others.

I would suggest, OFF MY CHEST, that you tell your daughter you need a point of contact with her, since you love her, and her absence after 18 years leaves a hole in your life.

Children who grow up and leave home need both roots and freedom.

I.M.: LA JOLLA, CALIF.

DEAR I.M.: U.R. an excellent psychologist. Thank you for a fine letter.

DEAR ABBY: KNOTTED KNUCKLES, suffering from arthritis, asked you if it is socially acceptable to type personal letters because holding a pen is oftentimes too painful. I'm glad you said yes. For those with crippling arthritis in the hands, here's a suggestion:

Stick a pen (or pencil) through a large raw potato which can be easily and painlessly grasped by an arthritic hand.

Billy Rose won a shorthand contest using this method when he was unable to hold a pencil because his index finger was in a splint.

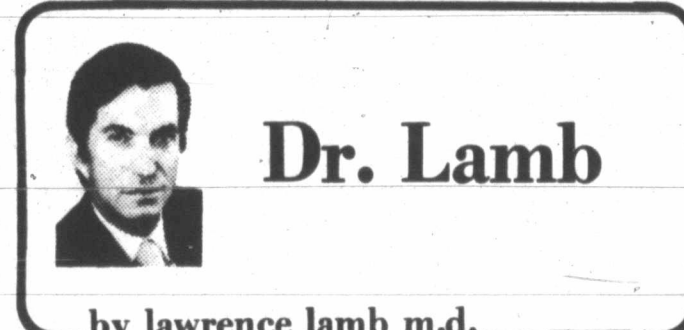

Pass this on to your readers if you think it's worth space in your column.

BRUCE L. IN MCLEAN, VA.

DEAR BRUCE: Considering the number of readers out there suffering from arthritis, if your suggestion relieves the pain of just one, it's well worth the space.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MY WIDOWED READERS. Good news! Since the first of this year, widows' Social Security checks are no longer decreased because of marriage.

by lawrence lamb m.d.

DEAR DR. LAMB—I am desperate for any information you can give me. I get very tired, so tired that I can't seem to stay on my feet. Before this started I was doing a lot of walking and shopping. I have been having this trouble for over six months and it's getting worse.

I went to my doctor and he didn't seem to know what was tiring me. This irritated me so much that I almost had a nervous spell. I started losing my hair and at present I don't have enough to put up in curlers. My laboratory tests included thyroid examinations which were completely normal. I am losing my hair rapidly. I hardly have any left.

I put some cloxol in a hair spray bottle to get rid of the larger bottle and I can't remember if I used it by mistake or not. I have made an appointment with the dermatologist because of my hair problem but I don't understand this being tired all the time.

DEAR READER—You did the right thing by having a medical examination. There are many causes for fatigue. In 80 percent of the cases no medical cause for the fatigue can be found. But that means one out of five cases of fatigue is associated with some medical problem.

It's pretty difficult to treat a person's fatigue unless you have a good understanding of what is causing it. If you really had low thyroid function that could cause you to be tired. Any number of medical illnesses, including infectious diseases such as tuberculosis, can cause fatigue.

Other hormone changes besides inadequate amounts of thyroid hormones can also cause fatigue. A good example here is a person who has low function of the adrenal gland. In its extreme form we call this Addison's disease. Weakness, weight loss and pigmentation of the skin may occur in this condition.

In the 80 percent of people who have no associated medical cause for fatigue, it is often caused by life style and psychological factors. Some people are bored because they don't have any goals in life. Others aren't enjoying life for a variety of reasons. One way to add a little zest to living is to do something every day that you enjoy.

Other people have a depression. These occur for a variety of reasons, but are most apt to occur in middle life. Often, depression to the point that it causes severe fatigue and inability to be active requires professional help.

To give you a better idea of fatigue, what causes it and what you can do about it I am sending you The Health Letter number 9-6, Fatigue: Feeling Tired and Weary. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. This Health Letter will also provide you some helpful suggestions about what you might do about your life style to combat your tendency toward fatigue.

You should see a dermatologist if your hair is falling out. This can be associated with nutritional problems. If your diet has changed drastically in association with your current episodes of fatigue, that might be a factor.

Nervousness sometimes causes a loss of hair and as you well know, conversely, if you lose a lot of hair that can cause you to be nervous, too. A dermatologist can tell you whether you have any basic scalp or hair problems or hair disorders that will respond readily to treatment.

Contour your arms and torso

Lie on the floor on your stomach, legs straight and hands on the floor, one hand on each side of your bust. Straighten your elbows as you push your torso away from the floor, arch your back and lift your head. Hold for a count of four. Now tuck your toes under and push your hips toward the ceiling, dropping your head. Return to second position and then to starting position.

SHOP BEFORE YOU LOSE

There are more traps for reducers than there are for bears! Everybody has his or her own special weakness but I think the "sweet tooth" is one of the most universal. This usually is just a question of habit. Habits are learned and they can be unlearned. When people resist sweets for a while, they lose their appeal (the sweets, not the people).

While you are unlearning this habit, which is damaging to health as well as figure, sweet-proof your home as much as feasible. Do not torture yourself by having candy, cookies and such items nearby. Some reducers find that a small piece of hard candy at the end of lunch and dinner is supportive to the will power.

When losing weight it is not necessary to completely deny your sweet tooth if you are in control. Very small and occasional indulgences will not sabotage your slimming program. However, many women are like the alcoholic who cannot take that first drink. They plan to have one little scoop of ice cream and end up having two or three more. They may plan on one chocolate and eat four. It is safer not to take that chance.

If yours is just a normal, habit-formed sweet tooth, try eating a hard boiled egg, some low fat cottage cheese, a small piece of chicken, fish or meat, or some other low calorie protein food, or drinking a glass of skim milk when temptation strikes.

Sugar has absolutely no nutritive value and sweet items usually are loaded with calories. It's a NO-NO for health and silhouette.

MENU FOR THURSDAY
BREAKFAST
 Blueberries: 1/2 cup
 Dry cereal: 1 cup bran flakes with artificial sweetener, if desired.
 Skim milk: One 8-ounce glass.
 Black coffee or tea with lemon.

LUNCH

Yogurt dip with raw vegetables: 1/2 medium cucumber, sliced; 1 medium carrot, sliced; 1/2 cup cauliflower buds; 1/2 green pepper, sliced; 2 green onions, sliced longitudinally. DIP: 3/4 cup plain, low fat yogurt mixed with 2 tablespoons each snipped fresh parsley and dill. 1 tablespoon lemon juice, pepper and garlic or onion salt to taste. (Chill and store in thermos for work).

Salmon with a wedge of lemon on a bed of watercress: One 3-ounce can salmon.

DINNER

Lamb chop in herb sauce: Broil one 5-ounce lean lamb chop and serve with the following sauce: Stir 1/2 teaspoon dried tarragon and 2 teaspoons chopped parsley in 1 teaspoon melted butter. Add 1/2-ounce dry white wine or white vermouth. Heat and mix with herbs. Pour over chop.
 Yellow squash sticks with lemon butter: 1 cup boiled summer squash (cut longitudinally) dressed with 1 teaspoon butter or margarine mixed with 1 teaspoon lemon juice. (Alternative: Zucchini).

Rice: 3/4 cup, cooked.
 Skim milk: One 8-ounce glass.

NEXT: COME ALIVE WITH SPRING

There is more iron in three large eggs than in three ounces of tuna.

Top farm job being filled soon

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — After a year-long vacancy, the No. 2 job in the Agriculture Department soon may be filled by former Lt. Gov. James H. Williams of Florida.

President Carter said Monday he will nominate Williams to be the department's deputy secretary, subject to Senate confirmation.

The job had been held by John White until Carter moved White to the Democratic National Party headquarters, as the party's chairman.

White's resignation was effective Jan. 28, 1978, and the $57,500-a-year job has been vacant since then. Several names surfaced as possibilities in succeeding months, but potential candidates for the post either were dropped by the administration or asked that they not be considered further.

Williams, 52, was elected to the Florida Senate in 1968, re-elected in 1972, and picked to be then-Gov. Reubin Askew's lieutenant governor when Askew sought re-election in 1974.

Williams lost a bid for the gubernatorial nomination in the Democratic primary in Florida last year.

He is a citrus grower and cattle rancher from Ocala.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, appearing with Williams, told reporters that he considered Williams' political background a "very important" qualification for the job.

Williams will serve as sort of an "executive director" of department operations and will concentrate much of his responsibilities on budget matters, Bergland said.

Neither Bergland nor Williams said they foresee any serious opposition to the nomination.

Bergland, who has recently undergone tests and therapy for back pain that began during the holidays, said that he is now back to work "at full speed" and is feeling much better.

But Bergland still is under doctors' care and will undergo further examinations to determine whether his back problem can be solved without surgery, an aide said.

Williams said he had agreed to place his stock portfolio and similar investments in a blind trust to meet federal requirements and would sell his cattle holdings to conform to conflict-of-interest law.

In addition, Williams said he agreed to take no part in department policymaking that involves citrus fruit. He said his holdings include a 140-acre orange grove and partnership interests in several others.

Williams said that his years of experience in agriculture, agribusiness and political office were factors in deciding to seek the deputy secretary's job.

His two main interests, he said, include a long-term goal of balancing the federal budget and finding solutions to the U.S. trade deficit and its impact on inflation.

"I feel like a guy who is overly qualified to go back home and farm," Williams said.

"I really feel like there's something more that I can and want to do in government, and I felt that this was the level and the kind of a job that I can make a contribution," he said.

Foreign customers bought the crop production of almost one out of every three acres farmers harvested in 1977, according to new analysis by the Agriculture Department.

The export analysis showed that about 342 million acres of crops were harvested in 1977. Of those, the production from an estimated 107 million acres - 31.2 percent - was exported in the 1977-78 fiscal year that ended Sept. 30.

Thomas A. Warden of the department's Economics, Statistics and Cooperatives Service said Monday that the 31.3 percent export share is the largest on record, up from the previous high of about 30 percent in 1974 through 1976.

The analysis was included in the current issue of "Foreign Agricultural Trade of the United States," published monthly by the agency.

Farm exports last fiscal year also set a value record of $27.3 billion, up 14 percent from $24 billion in 1976-77. They also were a record in terms of volume, some 127 million metric tons against 108 million in 1976-78 and the previous high of 111 million metric tons in 1975-76.

Looking at crop production, the report said exports last year required the output from 40 million acres of food grains, 26 million acres of feed grains, 32 million acres of oilseeds and 5 million acres of cotton.

By commodity, rice and sunflower seed led the list with 68 percent of their production in 1977 going into export channels. Other leading items and their percentage going to foreign countries included:

Wheat, 61 percent; soybeans, 56; cattle hides, 55; almonds, 43; cotton, 42; inedible tallow, 41; dried prunes, 37.

Campaign money sought

Ronald Reagan's boosters are taking a simple if bleary-eyed, approach to building their list of potential campaign contributors for a 1980 presidential bid.

"I feel like I've been playing Pong all week," said John M. Laxalt after poring through microfilms at the Federal Election Commission to find the names of financial angels to conservative Senate and House candidates last year.

"But it's worth it. We'll have a list of proven contributors."

Laxalt, brother of Nevada Sen. Paul Laxalt, is the Washington representative of Reagan's California-based issues group, Citizens for the Republic. The senator is busy organizing a separate campaign committee for Reagan. He expects to file with the Federal Election Commission in the near future so that fund-raising can get under way in earnest. That would be a key step toward a Reagan candidacy, even if he decides to hold off on making a formal announcement.

Hogs mean money for entertainer

By TOM DeCOLA
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The Head Sausage Peddler just kept turning over rocks, and sure enough, he came up with a big ol' bait worm.

That's really the way Jimmy Dean talks, whether he's working as board chairman of Jimmy Dean Sausage, country entertainer, music producer or jacket maker.

Dean has parlayed his poor, small town (Plainview, Texas) background and soft drawl into millions. Some of the cash comes from entertaining and other ventures, but most of it comes from hogs.

The hogs are made into Jimmy Dean's Pure Pork Sausage, and their skins are turned into wearing apparel. The proceeds from these processes provided the sausage company around $40 million last year, and Dean expects to gross around $100 million this year.

The man who gave us "Big Bad John," a recording about the fictional hero of a mine disaster, presides over these enterprises from different locales. There's a condominium along Dallas' plush Turtle Creek Boulevard, a home in New Jersey, a 53-foot yacht that's home for a couple months a year, and land in Charlestown, S. C., where Dean vows he will build a home some day.

If Dean's folksy manner and casual style of dress are part of the man, so is the elegance of the Dallas office, on the 11th floor of a high-rise north of downtown. The furnishings are tasteful, but there are some hints.

The walls in the corridor leading to the office of the Head Sausage Peddler (his own term) are decorated with grade-school sketches made for a class project at a school in Iowa, where Dean has a meat packing plant.

Beneath a chair in the office lay two golf balls, often used for impromptu putting matches where a dollar or two may change hands. The putting is done on the carpet, sometimes across a sculpted corporate symbol—two cowboy boots arranged to somehow make you know they stand for "JD." Visitors probably should not putt against the peddler—he knows the breaks in the carpet.

His smile is easy, his laugh spontaneous.

But there is still a slight bitterness, a bitterness once greatly magnified in a falling out with his younger brother Don, who was his partner in the sausage-making business.

Many brothers fight, but the Deans feud. Jimmy at one point obtained a temporary restraining order to keep Don away from the family home at Plainview after he said Don nearly ruined the business. Jimmy bought Don out, and Don, who lives in nearby Irving, has a pending slander suit against Jimmy.

"It was really for the best," Dean said in a rare somber moment during an interview. "I was bitter for a long, long time. I think now it's more pity."

He said the two were never close growing up, calling Don the "fairhaired one" while referring to himself as "the black sheep, the wanderer."

Nor did Don take part in Jimmy's rise in the entertainment ranks.

Is Don jealous of Jimmy's celebrity?

"You know...I really feel like that probably may be the thing," Jimmy Dean said. "There was a certain paranoia there."

Dean is anxious to reopen a pork plant in Plainview. He shut the plant down a year ago, claiming it was costing him $27,000 a week to keep it open. He feels that some in his hometown are bitter about the lost jobs, but he hopes to make amends.

Women in Science

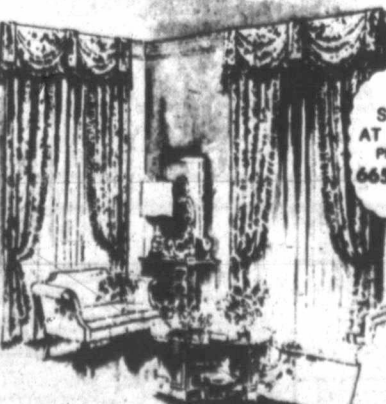

What do an old telescope, a collection of algae, a model of an eye, and a pickled scaly ant eater have in common? All of those items are currently on display at the Smithsonian Institution, as part of an exhibition titled "Women in Science in 19th Century America." Few women were encouraged to enter such fields as biology, astronomy, chemistry and physics during the 1800s, and those who did often faced serious obstacles, simply because they were women. The Smithsonian display, which includes old photographs and books, points out the accomplishments of these women, as well as some of the problems they encountered. The exhibit continues through next month.

DO YOU KNOW — Who was the first woman to graduate from medical school in the United States?

 All those things on which you've labored so hard will start to pay off this coming year. Put your knowledge to work. Great strides can be made.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) That optimistic disposition you display today makes you a dominating force. People are drawn to you. They want to do your bidding in hopes it rubs off on them. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in 1979 by sending for your copy of the all new Astro-Graph Letter for 1979. Mail $1 for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your analytical faculties are exceptionally sharp today. Success comes easily when you're working on any investigative or fact-finding projects.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Stronger bonds can be cemented today, so get together with those important to you. Effects on the collaborations will make everyone happy.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Once you set your mind to something today, there's little doubt you'll get what you go after. Determination, coupled with optimism, makes this possible.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your company will be in demand today because of the pleasant, vivacious manner in which you assert yourself. It should be a fun day.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) That goal you've been striving so hard to obtain can now become a reality. Tie up all those loose ends that have been impossible to knot.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your ability to draw people together and bring out the best in them is without equal today. Take the initiative. Use this wonderful quality to the fullest.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The industriousness with which you apply yourself pays off in double profits today. Go out after something big.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be a take-charge person today. You are both bold and clever with your ideas. Others are just waiting to follow your lead.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It's important that you have the power to hang in there today. Something that may not be apparent is already in your grasp and will soon show itself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Select lively visionary companions today. You won't enjoy being with deadheads, since you're bursting with energy, both physically and intellectually.

Frigid second half plagues Harvesters

By JOE BLOBAUM
Pampa News Sports Editor
AMARILLO — A cold spell. A shooting lapse. Neither cliché adequately describes what happened to the Pampa Harvesters in the second half against Tascosa here last night.

Up by 38-35 at halftime, the Hustling Harvesters saw their three-point lead vanish into the thin air of the third quarter, never to return. The same can be said of their shooting eyes.

Pampa sank just four of its 14 field goal tries in the third quarter, but that was a hot streak compared to what happened in the final period. Just when they needed the points the most, the Harvesters couldn't find the basket.

Pampa was 0-15 from the field in the final eight minutes and got its only points of the quarter from the free-throw line, where it hit six of seven attempts.

"We just fell apart," according to Pampa coach Gary Abercrombie. "I don't know — it's a lack of character, a lack of self-discipline, a lack of a lot of things."

"We played very poor defense and gave up a bunch of easy baskets that made the score wider than it should have been. We didn't cover anybody the second half."

Pampa's breakdown came after a first-half rally that saw the Harvesters pull from a 31-22 deficit midway through the second quarter to its three-point bulge at the intermission.

The Rebels came out like the District 3-AAAA favorites they are and had the Harvesters buried 10-2 in the opening three minutes. But Pampa, behind Steve Duke's four baskets and a pair by Steve Stout, scratched back to trail 23-18 by quarter's end.

Tascosa upped its lead to 31-22 on Mike Washburn's layup with four minutes left in the half, but the Harvesters came on to outscore the Rebs 16-4 before halftime and take their lead.

Ronnie Faggins, who finished with a game-high 19 points, kept Pampa in the game before his teammates joined the rally. The 6-3 sophomore scored the Harvesters' first nine points in the second period and finished with 11 for stanza.

But the Rebels regained their poise in the second half, while the Harvesters lost all of theirs. Pampa's dismal shooting in the second half reduced the team percentage to 35 for the game after a 17-31 performance in the first two quarters.

Tascosa, meanwhile, dominated the Harvesters on the inside and hit 30 of 60 shots — including 17 layups — for the game. The Rebels even ran a few successful alley-oop plays behind a double screen, and there was little the Harvesters could do to stop it.

"I guess we tired ourselves out, the way we played the second half," Abercrombie noted.

But the Harvester mentor could point to several reasons for Pampa's second half woes. Guards Duke and Doug Skaggs, who entered the contest averaging 27.6 points per game between them, shot a collective seven for 26 from the field and were held to 16.

The Harvesters were outrebounded 35-22, and had most of their big men in foul trouble throughout the game. Faggins exited the game with five in the fourth quarter, while Stout and Darryl Hughes had four apiece and Cedrick Parker three.

Parker, playing perhaps his finest offensive game of the season, garnered 11 points for the Harvesters, while Duke put in 10. Sam Washington, with a 7-10 performance at the charity stripe, led Tascosa scorers with 17. Nolan Earle worked the inside for 13 and Jay Leverett added 12 as the Rebels upped their season mark to 17-5 and district record to 2-0.

Pampa fell to 10-12 and 1-1 in loop play by losing to the Rebels for the first time since the 1974-75 season.

The Shockers had no better luck as they fell 45-42. Pampa led 26-24 at halftime, but 20-3 free-throw shooting wrecked Pampa's chances to pull out the win after being outscored 15-8 in the third quarter.

Dwayne Avery paced the Shockers with 11 points, while Vic Wallace and Sam Edwards added eight apiece. Kevin Leutkahans had 12 for the Rebel JV.

Pampa entertains Palo Duro Friday night for its next action. Game times at The Green Pit are 6 for the junior varsity and 7:45 for the main event.

Longhorns get cooking to whip Rice

By RICK SCOTT
Associated Press Writer
The Texas Longhorns — pre-season favorites to win the Southwest Conference basketball championship — are beginning to play like the team Coach Abe Lemons had expected.

"There's just not any phase of our game that I was not pleased with tonight," said

Lemons after the Longhorns popped the Rice Owls, 94-81, in Houston Tuesday night to improve the SWC record to 4-1.

The defending National Invitational Tournament champion Longhorns hit on 59 percent of their field goal attempts and were paced by Jim Krivacs' 30 points and Tyrone Branyan's 24.

Rice, now 2-3 in the SWC and 5-10 for the season, was led by Elbert Darden who hit 30 points.

In other SWC action Tuesday night, Baylor beat Houston 85-77 and Southern Methodist defeated Texas Tech 69-65.

A crowd of 5,400 fans — many of them dressed in clown costumes — filled the Rice gym. The clown outfits were the result of a comment Lemons made last year when he said Rice seemed to be playing like clowns.

"It didn't bother me," said Lemons. "Besides, they didn't have much to holler about."

SMU used a balanced scoring attack — led by Brad Branson and Reggie Franklin with 14 points each — to improve its SWC record to 2-1 with the victory over Texas Tech, which fell to 3-2.

In Waco, where Baylor handed Houston its fourth loss in five SWC starts, most of the talk after the game was about officiating.

Houston Coach Guy Lewis restated his distaste for the three-official rule. It results in too many fouls and disruption of the game flow, he complained.

Houston had 32 fouls and Baylor had 22 more.

"Both teams had to change their game plan when officials started calling the game so close," said Baylor Coach Jim Hailer who saw two of his starters pick up four early fouls each.

Symbolically, he was in the Dallas Cowboy "rookie" photo.

"I feel like a rookie and they are treating me like it," said Smith, nervously shifting his feet. "I had to have my picture taken with those knot head rookies."

Smith, of course, was coaxed out of retirement by the Cowboys after No. 2 tight end Jay Saldi was injured early in the season.

For years, Smith had bedeviled the Cowboys as a member of the St. Louis Cardinals. He came to Dallas under unusual circumstances.

"I had resolved myself to retiring and I was as happy as I could be," said Smith, who will be 39 next month. "St. Louis lost two of their tight ends and Coach Bud Wilkinson (assistant) Larry Wilson asked me to come back.

"I took a physical with some 15 X-rays. The Cardinals said I didn't pass the physical. Dallas called. I passed their physical and signed."

Smith said the Cardinal front office later denied it ever talked with him.

"Why did they deny they talked to me?" said Smith. "If they wanted to say I was over the hill or something like that, OK. But it made me sound like I was lying."

He added he would like to come back to Dallas next year "if they want me."

Smith got off the team bus Tuesday and said "I was wondering where they had the dancing bears. It was like a circus. I can see how it's hard for a team to concentrate on the game—particularly a new team."

His emotions flowed over.

"I wish I was here with some of my old teammates like Larry Wilson and Charley Johnson. They wanted to be part of a Super Bowl as much as I did. This is the highlight of my career no matter what happens.

Denise Hilburn hits 35 for Mobeetie

Denise Hilburn delighted a home audience by pouring in 35 points for Mobeetie in a 74-43 girls basketball romp over Quail Tuesday night.

The Hornet boys weren't as fortunate, however, as the visitors took a 46-45 squeaker behind Rick Alston's 25 points.

Richard Laverty led a balanced Mobeetie attack with 11. Donna Langley had 15 for Quail in the girls contest.

At Wheeler, Samnorwood's Randy Breeding tallied 30 points as the Mustangs dropped a 77-60 decision. Myron Jolly had 16 points in a losing cause.

McLean and Lefors split games at the Tigers' lair. The McLean girls topped Lefors 44-34 as Jamie Trew scored 14 points. Jonetta Dunn of Lefors took game honors with 18.

The Pirates got revenge in the boys contest by doubling the score on the Tigers, 62-31. Floyd Cotham and John Taubert had 12 apiece to lead the victors, while Chuck Pierce had 13 for McLean.

Allison ignored Briscoe's home court advantage to take a pair of wins. The girls got 13 points from Becky Cornell en route to a 50-34 triumph, while the boys got 20 from Ken Keys in a 51-48 win. Rolanda Hill and Mike Meadows led Briscoe scorers with 14 points in their respective games.

Wellington, meanwhile, took full advantage of playing at home against White Deer. Susie Chandler scored 25 points to lead the girls to a 48-41 victory, while Charles McIntosh exploded for 33 in a 64-49 waltz for the boys. Eddie Lick's 15 points topped the Bucks scorers and Mary Miller had 12 for the Dees.

Lisa Wright hit 22 points to help Panhandle to a 51-22 win at Shamrock. Susie Copeland had 12 for the Irish girls. The Panther boys also won, this time by a 63-41 count. Terry Casey had 20 points for the winners, while Jerry Palmer had 16 for Shamrock.

Debra Rankin's 28 points helped Phillips' girls to a 49-41 win at Stratford, while Joe Lemley hit 22 to give the Blackhawks a sweep, 48-45. La Ronda Stacy (15) and Terry Bilbrey (13) were Stratford's scoring leaders.

Perryton, rated fifth in the state's Class AA ranks, whacked Canadian 56-37 in Perryton as David Reynolds scored 18. Dale Schafer had 11 for the Wildcats. The Canadian girls took a 35-29 win behind Alisha Hobby's 12 points. Ruth Ogden led Perryton with 11.

Follett's teams swept Miami, winning 59-25 in girls action and 57-43 in boys play. Laurie Richardson's 14 points topped the winners in the girls game, while John Laubhan had 18 for Follett in the boys contest. Randy Stone (16) and Susan Bean (6) were Miami's leading scorers.

Shah expected to meet Sadat

By NICOLAS R. TATRO
Associated Press Writer
ASWAN, Egypt (AP) — Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi is resting at a Nile island hotel in Egypt's winter resort and is expected to fly on to the United States before the end of the week.

Egyptian sources said the 59-year-old Iranian monarch would make few public appearances during his stay. But he will meet Thursday with President Anwar Sadat and former President Ford of the United States, who is touring the Middle East with his wife.

The 150-room Oberoi Hotel was cleared for the royal billionaire, who with Empress Fahrah is occupying the presidential suite. Thirty-two more rooms were taken by their entourage of nearly 20 persons.

The royal fugitives from political turmoil and mob violence in Iran arrived Tuesday in an Iranian air force jet loaded with baggage. Later a barge ferried truckloads of goods to the hotel, which is about 150 yards from the water.

Members of the hotel staff said the royal suite had been stocked with flowers, baskets of fruit and chocolates, but they complained about the security precautions.

"What's the point in changing the flowers twice a day if security guards check every petal of every flower?" one housekeeper said.

Sadat and the shah talked privately three times Tuesday — at the airport lounge when the Iranian monarch arrived, then at the hotel and later before a formal dinner attended by the two families and guests.

Details were not reported, but it was thought that they discussed the deadlocked peace negotiations between Egypt and Israel and increasing Soviet influence in the Middle East and Africa as well as the bleak outlook for the shah.

Sadat has said that because of the turmoil in Iran, he believes the government there and its armed forces are no longer a buffer against the Soviets in the strategic Persian Gulf area.

The shah, whose country is Moslem but not Arab, visited Sadat in Aswan a year ago and urged other Arab leaders to support the Egyptian leader's drive for a peace treaty with Israel.

When he returned Tuesday, Sadat laid on a red-carpet reception befitting a chief of state: a military guard firing a 21-gun salute, a band playing Iran's national anthem and Egyptian officials out in force to greet the visitors.

"He is like a man in a trance," said one Egyptian official.

The shah was pale and fidgety, his smile seemed forced and his wave to the scattered crowds along the road from the airport lacked enthusiasm.

WARMER WEATHER melted a lot of the snow that had accumulated in the Pampa area over the past few weeks. That meant a lot of street crossings were filled with water. However, city officials said there were no serious reports of flooding.

Clements enjoyed celebrations

By SUSAN STOLER
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — It was his night to party and Gov. Bill Clements clearly enjoyed mingling with the predominantly Republican crowds at his five inaugural celebrations.

Before it was over, Clements even joked about inviting Pope John Paul II to Texas.

After all, a Pole was expected to be elected pope as much as some folks expected a Republican to take the governor's office in Texas, Clements said.

"It's been an absolutely marvelous day," the GOP governor told some 2,000 gathered at the All Texas Ball at Austin's Municipal Auditorium.

"I think it was a sign from above that when I was sworn in the sun broke through the sky."

Earlier in the day, Clements took office as Texas' first Republican governor in more than a century.

Also celebrating Tuesday night, but in a less buoyant mood was Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby. The Democrat also was sworn in noon ceremonies on the capitol steps.

"You know this was a tough year for us Democrats," Hobby told more than 1,000 gathered at the Driskill Hotel.

"We lost the governorship," he said to applause and cheers. "Yet we Italians also lost the pope."

Clements and his wife Rita followed Hobby before the $50 a ticket crowd.

"I think I'll ask the pope to come to Texas," the new governor said. "Yeah, that's a good idea. Lt. Gov. Hobby has a good idea every once in a while."

Some 7,000 spectators turned out for the five celebrations honoring the bi-partisan team.

But they also swarmed over two others in the official party.

Former Gov. John Connally and former UN Ambassador George Bush signed autographs all night and posed with well wishers. Both men are expected to announce possible presidential campaign plans later this year. Both received much verbal encouragement for a run at the Republican presidential nomination.

"I hope he runs for president. I'll campaign for him," said Betty Green of Kemah after chatting with Connally and his wife, Nellie.

Members of the Texas Legislature, and judges of the State Supreme Court, Court of Criminal Appeals and the Third Court of Civil Appeals were introduced at the $10 per person All Texas Ball.

Also presented were Atty. Gen. Mark White, members of the Texas Railroad Commission, Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown, Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong and Treasurer Warren Harding.

The official entourage then visited a free celebration across the parking lot in the Austin Coliseum where only a blue jeans and cowboy hat clad crowd of 100 awaited their arrival.

The balls topped off the day that began with a prayer breakfast, church service, inaugural swearing in ceremony, parade, ice cream party and symphony concert.

And when it was all over, at least one ghost story went out of circulation.

"The rumor is that when we swear in a Republican governor, the statue on top of the dome is going to fall off. That's what everybody's waiting for," laughed Mildred Pike of Hempstead.

But the statue remained on top of the building when the day was over.

Lover 'believed' actor cared

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michelle Triola Marvin says she became Lee Marvin's live-in lover only after she believed he would support her for life, promising "Michelle, don't worry. You will be taken care of."

"I took that to mean if we were no longer together and I was an old bag, he would take care of me," Miss Marvin testified Tuesday in the landmark property rights trial.

She was to resume testifying today.

Miss Marvin told Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall in the non-jury trial how her romance with Marvin began as a passionate affair during filming of a movie, then deepened to involve joint living quarters, bank accounts and foreign journeys.

"I thought he wanted to spend the rest of his life with me," she testified in a voice barely above a whisper.

The 46-year-old Miss Marvin, who lived with the Oscar-winning actor for six years, is suing for $1 million plus a share of his income during their liaison, contending she gave up her show business career to concentrate on his.

Marvin contends the couple did not sign a formal agreement on property rights and since they did not marry, she is not entitled to a portion of his income.

The trial is the first to test a 1976 California Supreme Court ruling that unmarried partners could sue for property settlement. The ruling came in an appeal by Miss Marvin's attorney, Marvin Mitchelson.

The trial is expected to set a precedent for payment of "alimony" in cases of unmarried cohabitants.

At Tuesday's session, Miss Marvin told her version of the Hollywood-style romance which began under the klieg lights and ended on the beach at Malibu.

She sat in the witness box with her hands folded and occasionally glanced across the courtroom where the 54-year-old Marvin sat with his lawyer. His current wife, Pamela, shifted nervously in her front row seat.

Marvin never wanted marriage, she conceded. "He said when two people loved each other there was no need for a piece of paper," she recalled.

They took a romantic vacation together to San Blas, Mexico where Marvin convinced her to move in with him, she said.

Under Mitchelson's questioning, Miss Marvin stressed that the actor introduced her as "Mrs. Marvin" to his friends. She had her name legally changed from Triola to Marvin shortly before they broke up.

The judge admitted as exhibits nine love letters Marvin wrote to Miss Marvin and numerous pictures of the apparently loving couple hugging and smiling in Hawaii, Palau, Japan and Malibu.

"Were those happy or unhappy times?" Mitchelson asked as he showed the pictures to Miss Marvin.

"They were happy times," she said softly.

Cambodian fighting continues at port

By DENIS D. GRAY

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Fighting is reported continuing around Kompong Som, Cambodia's only deep-water port, and Thai sources say the ousted government's forces still hold the city.

The sources reported fighting near the naval base at Ream and along sections of Highway 4, which connects Phnom Penh, the capital, with Kompong Som, 136 miles to the southwest.

Vietnamese and Cambodian naval units also were reported battling northwest of Kompong Som around offshore islands to which troops of the routed Cambodian army fled from the three-week-old Vietnamese invasion.

The retreating forces recaptured Kompong Som on Monday, the sources said.

The Vietnamese invaders installed a pro-Hanoi provisional government of Cambodia Communists in Phnom Penh on Jan. 7, replacing Prime Minister Pol Pot and the other Khmer Rouge leaders who had ruled Cambodia since the Communist victory in 1975. The ousted government has pledged to carry on a guerrilla war, and there are unconfirmed reports that its leaders have set up headquarters in the mountains of southwest Cambodia or on some of the offshore islands.

China, the ousted government's only important ally during its years in power, has promised to aid the fugitive forces with military supplies, but analysts in Bangkok say getting them past the Vietnamese navy and air force would be difficult even if Kompong Som is held.

The new government in Phnom Penh announced that all representatives abroad of the former government have "completely lost their representative character and must cease their activities." But it said diplo-omats should stay at their posts until further orders.

"Those with meritorious service will be commended and used appropriately," said the announcement, broadcast by Radio Phnom Penh. "The violators will be punished under the law of the People's Republic of Kampuchea."

Kampuchea is the name given Cambodia by both the old and new governments.

SPK, the news agency of the new government, said the restoration of Phnom Penh is under way after nearly four years of neglect by the ousted regime.

Meeting seen as crucial to church

By CHARLES H. GREEN
Associated Press Writer
PUEBLA, Mexico (AP) — Roman Catholic bishops meet here next week in what is already being talked about as a crucial gathering that will chart the course of the Roman Catholic Church in Latin America.

The meeting could set the church on a collision course with repressive South American governments or anger those pushing for change in an area where two-thirds of the people live in poverty.

At the least, the conference will provide some fireworks between liberal and conservative elements in the church. Its importance is underlined by the presence of Pope John Paul II, who will open the meeting on his first trip abroad since becoming pope.

The Jan. 27-Feb. 12 Third General Conference of the Latin American Episcopate — popularly called Celam III — will gather 350 Latin American bishops who have prepared for the meeting for over two years.

The theme is "Evangelization in the Present and Future of Latin America" and lines are already drawn between those who want the church to take a stronger, more involved role in helping the poor and those who feel the church can best help through traditional methods.

"Celam III, the third meeting of the bishops of Latin America... must make decisions that will have crucial, transcendental importance for the church in Latin America and beyond," wrote theologian Gary Maceoin in the U.S. quarterly "Cross Currents."

"What the bishops decide may not resolve the issues. It will, however, have a major bearing on the survival of the institutional church, either facilitating or complicating the struggle of the people of Latin America to free themselves from the oppressions under which they have long groaned," Maceoin added.

The Puebla conference is a direct descendant of what was called Celam II in Medellin, Colombia, in 1968 which emphasized the Vatican II results and put them within a Latin American framework.

"In the documents of Medellin, we find the church, for the first time, taking note of the common people, of the popular classes," J.B. Libanio of Brazil wrote in the magazine "Convergencia."

The documents that came out of the Medellin conference were widely described as liberal, socially aware guides for leading the Roman Catholic Church into closer relationships with the poor.

However, some more conservative theologians think the documents did not reflect calm, mature deliberation and that the bishops that wrote them were influenced by widespread rioting and unrest prevalent throughout the world at the time.

Even more, bishops and priests who tried to put the Medellin concepts into practice were often accused of being communist and ran into conflicts with conservative and military governments.

An estimated 300 million of the world's 900 million Roman Catholics live in Latin America and two-thirds of them live in extreme poverty. Their lives are not ones of free choice but controlled strongly by economic need and in some countries by political oppression as well.

Against this background, those who see the need for change in Roman Catholic policy feel only the church can help these people get a better share of land, income, dignity and basic human rights.

Organizers of the coming conference wrote a preparatory document that many claim was strongly influenced by conservative, traditional elements. It has been widely criticized as "a subtle rejection of Medellin."

However, lay groups and clergy have met several times in regional sessions and out of these meetings has come a preliminary draft — more liberal and socially inclined — that may well become the basic working document at Puebla.
