Oil accords reached

DENVER (AP) — The oil workers union has announced ratification of new two-year contracts by 12 locals representing about 2,000 of its 60,000 workers.

The signings were the first formal acceptance of tentative agreements reached last week between the Oil Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union and the industry.

OCAW spokesman Jerry Archuleta said Thursday that the union has now accepted offers from companies employing about 39,000 union members. The new offers are basically the same as the model Gulf Oil Corp. proposal accepted last week.

The Gulf proposal called for a 73-cent-an-hour wage increase the first year and a 5 percent boost the second year. The contract, contained a reopening clause for the second year.

The oil industry negotiations are the first carried out under President Carter's wage-benefit guidelines.

Oil workers had averaged $8.82 an hour under their old contracts which expired Jan. 7.

The first-year wage offer represents about an 8 percent increase, but the settlement won tentative approval from the administration which seeks a voluntary 7 percent limit on wage and fringe benefits over the life of the contract.

Ratification was by locals in Santa Fe, Calif., Toledo, Ohio,

Lake Charles, La., East Chicago, Ind., Casper, Wyo., and Alma, Mich., said Archuleta. He said no local has yet rejected the offer.

Archuleta said local issues have delayed ratification votes at some locals.

OCAW supervises negotiations of more than 400 contracts with 100 oil firms.

Meanwhile, officials of Texaco, Inc. and local leaders in the Oil Chemical and Atomic Workers indicated they would sign a memorandum of agreement today on a tentative two-year contract.

But negotiations continued between oil workers with other oil companies and between Texaco and other unions with different results.

—OCAW workers at the main Texaco asphalt plant at Port Neches ratified the Texaco proposal by "a large margin," main plant group chairman Amidee Morgan said.

Jury 'test' possible

By ROB WOOD

Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — State District Judge Wallace "Pete" Moore said today he may "test" the jury to see how far apart they are in deliberations in the Cullen Davis murder conspiracy trial.

Moore said he could not set a time limit on the jury, but "I will need to know soon the division."

He said the jury would, if necessary, deliberate Saturday and Sunday, although it is against state law for him to accept a verdict on Sunday.

The jury resumed deliberations at 8:10 a.m., starting their 21st hour of weighing evidence in the case. They received the case Tuesday night.

Moore said, "I hope the jury wants to watch the Super Bowl on Sunday because I do, and I had rather be doing that than answering their questions."

Jurors have repeatedly asked for the reading of testimony and the replaying of tape recordings. As the hours have passed, the defense has become more confident and the prosecutors more concerned.

"Obviously, the defense is jubilant. Their objective all along was to obfuscate the issue and dwell on trivia. They've lost sight of the forest for the trees," said prosecutor Jack Strickland.

The jurors apparently were exploring every avenue, listening to the testimony read by State District Judge Wallace "Pete" Moore and hearing the tapes of the meetings between Davis and FBI informant David McCrory over and over.

State department official in Amarillo:

U.S., Soviets close to SALT agreement

By DAN LACKEY

Pampa News Staff
AMARILLO — After more than 30 years of mostly giant steps forward in the nuclear arms race, the United States and the Soviet Union may be on the verge of the second baby step in an opposite, more positive direction.

That step is the second phase of the Strategic Arms Limitations Talks (SALT II) which President Carter hopes to turn into a ratified treaty during this session of Congress.

Selling SALT to the people who can put pressure on their senators is one of the tasks of the U.S. State Department.

To this end, John Dobrin, a political analyst with the department and one of the 60 members of the U.S. Salt negotiating team, was here Thursday to discuss the treaty at the request of the Amarillo Council on International Affairs. While he said SALT negotiations were "99 percent complete," he declined to comment on when an accord might be finalized. Such an accord would have to be approved by the Senate.

Dobrin said the Soviets find it difficult to understand what ratification means in political terms. "They tend to assume that the president can imprint his shadow on the Senate. When they want to do something that they think makes technological sense and then we say know because it won't fly with the Senate, they think we're stalling."

"The question you have to ask yourselves about SALT is does it improve national security or not?" Dobrin said. "That is the test by which the proposed agreement should be judged."

According to State Department figures the U.S. has 1054 intercontinental ballistic missiles (ICBMs) to Russia's 1400. 656 submarine launched ballistic missiles (SLBMs) to Russia's 950 and 350 strategic bombers to Russia's 150.

The United States leads, however, in total number of warheads, about 10,000 to 5,000.

Dobrin said that despite apparent numerical differences there is a rough strategic balance between the two superpowers.

"No one is ahead," said

Dobrin. "There is a rough balance — a rough strategic parity — and everything in SALT proceeds from this."

Dobrin cited the greater number of multiple warheads (MIRVs) on American weapons (almost all of the U.S.'s 656 SLBMs have multiple warheads, compared to only 20 percent of the Russians' 950 SLBMs); the inferiority of Soviet strategic bombers to our B-52s; and the diversity of our ICBMs as factors which make simple numbers misleading.

Dobrin said the U.S. has other advantages since American weapons have greater proven accuracy and reliability and better ability to survive an attack. Dobrin also said that greater diversity is an added asset. The Soviets, he said, have emphasized land-based ballistic missiles, while the U.S. has distributed its warheads more evenly among land-based missiles, submarine-launched missiles, and heavy bombers. Dobrin said that it was conceivable though not highly probable that a technological breakthrough could make portions of one side's forces obsolete and that would add to our military security.

The tentative provisions of the SALT II Agreement are the reduction of total strategic weapons to less than 2,250 during the term of the treaty. This provision requires the Soviets to give up about 250 of their total launchers, while the U.S. gives up none.

The second provision calls for a limit of 1,320 for all MIRV ICBM and SLBM launchers and aircraft equipped with long range cruise missiles. Another provision calls for a limit of 1,200 MIRV missiles including a sublimit of 820 on MIRV ICBMs.

The agreement is scheduled to run through 1985 and includes a protocol for the short term which covers issues not resolved in the present treaty, such as the use of mobile ICBM and cruise missiles. The third part of pact calls for a joint statement of principles committing both countries to work on SALT III.

Dobrin said that verification of the Soviets capabilities were reliable. "Information by photo reconnaissance is highly accurate," he said. "It's as least as good as the information we have on our own systems. We have to separate strategic intelligence from tactical intelligence. Tactical intelligence is very complicated but this kind of strategic intelligence is like counting beans."

Dobrin said the agreement does not require trust in the Soviets.

"We begin by analyzing for the worst possible case," he said. "Our first job in thinking up possible proposals is to come up with the worst possible thing the Russians could do to breach the agreement, and still come up with a negotiating package doesn't hurt us. Each of our proposals has been developed from that point of view. And if a point can't be verified or if we can't prove that it can be verified to congress, then it isn't included."

Dobrin sees the Salt Agreements as a part of a long process toward disarmament, but he said the immediate effect of the treaty is to cap the escalation of strategic weapons.

"After a certain point you gain nothing by adding more weapons," he said. "You only increase your chances for a mishap, for a mistake. You have to see the danger in unchecked escalation. We're looking for nuclear equivalence as opposed to a blind search for nuclear superiority. And without SALT, each side is free to do the unexpected."

PAMPA HIGH SCHOOL auditorium often gets wet when there is heavy rain because of a leak. (Pampa News photo and story by Eugene Laycock)

Drip...drip...

The basement beneath the Pampa High School Auditorium was flooded Thursday from leaks caused by early morning rains.

The basement area, which some drama students call hell because of its location and hot temperatures, has had one such flood each year since 1969, says Rochelle Lacy, Pampa High School drama teacher.

The leakage, which came from a hole for the plumbing and from the sides of a supporting beam, has caused no damage, but props and building materials had to be moved, said Mrs. Lacy.

Repairs are made but leaks keep springing from different spots each year, she added.

The auditorium was built when the high school was erected in 1941 and has had no major renovations in its 38 years of service, said a spokesman for the school.

The leakage, says Principal Paul Payne, is caused by a tunnel for the heating system. The tunnel allows water to find its way to the basement through the foundation, he explained, but the leakage is no major problem.

U.S. recession 'not on horizon'

By MICHAEL DOAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Buoyed by a report showing the nation's economy is moving at an unexpectedly strong pace, the Carter administration says the dark clouds of a recession aren't anywhere on the horizon.

"We still don't see a recession — even at the end of 1979," Secretary of Commerce Juanita Kreps said Thursday.

Backing up that statement, the administration is predicting unemployment will rise only slightly this year, to 6.2 percent, and stay at that figure in 1980, it was learned.

That is well below the prediction of many private economists, who say it will hit nearly 7 percent. The December unemployment figure was 5.9 percent.

Some economists such as Arthur Okun and Alan Greenspan, say inflation will force the government to tighten credit further.

That would prevent businesses and home buyers from borrowing money and may lead to a recession and more unemployment, they say.

However, Mrs. Kreps told reporters President Carter's anti-inflation program will hold down inflation and make the credit tightening unnecessary.

The administration was encouraged by a report on the gross national product Thursday showing that the nation's economic output in the final three months of 1978 was far stronger than expected.

The GNP, the best measure of the nation's economic health, grew at an annual rate of 6.1 percent in the fourth quarter of last year, the department said.

That is stronger than the 2.6 percent rate in the third quarter and about double early predictions.

While the administration is trying to slow the economy in its fight against inflation, Mrs. Kreps said the fourth-quarter boom would not contribute to inflation.

One of the government's anti-inflation moves is to reduce the budget deficit, but two Republicans said Thursday the administration is not doing enough.

Canadian bank funds up

CANADIAN — Canadian banks are seven million dollars richer this year than last, according to reports recently released here.

The city's two banks totaled a record $40 million in deposits for 1978. At the close of last year, deposits for the First State Bank totaled $21,537,000, while the First National Bank showed deposits of $19,310,000.

Don Schaefer, president of the First National Bank, also announced the appointment of Dr. Rush Snyder to the bank's board of directors. Snyder, a Canadian physician for more than 30 years, was officially installed during a dinner meeting of bank officers, directors, and stockholders last week.

Snyder is past president of the Canadian School Board and the Rotary Club, and is a former chairman of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce. He was honored as Canadian's Man of the Year in 1974.

In other city news, the Canadian Chamber of Commerce budget for the new year was approved at $20,785, about $9,000 over last year's budget.

Hugh Wilson, the Chamber's first full-time manager, has announced that the Chamber will be conducting a membership drive. Wilson said that individual memberships were welcome and that those interested could apply at the chamber's new office at 116 Main St.

Good afternoon

News in brief

The forecast for Pampa calls for partly cloudy skies today with clearing later tonight. Temperatures are expected to reach a high of 50 with the low tonight in the mid-20s. Winds are predicted to be from the west at 15-20 mph, changing direction later in the day to come from the northwest at the same speed.

Mayor has distinguished week

It's been a distinguished week for Pampa Mayor R.D. Wilkerson.

Wilkerson was elected president of Texas Municipal League (TML) Region II at the quarterly Region II meeting in Amarillo Thursday night.

"Region II consists of the 26 Panhandle counties; more than 200 delegates from member cities attended the Amarillo meeting. Other officers elected at the meeting were Amarillo Mayor Jerry Hodge, first vice president, and Borger Mayor Jerry McClure, second vice president.

Wilkerson's primary function as president will be to represent the region and provide input at TML meetings. He will preside at Region II meetings and coordinate activities with the state organization.

The mayor, who just returned from the inauguration of Governor Bill Clements in Austin, has been invited back to the capital to meet with Clements next week.

Mayor Bob Folsom of Dallas, TML president, invited Wilkerson to join a small group of city officials in a 45-minute meeting with the new governor in his office Monday. The meeting will be preceded by a briefing and discussion session in the second floor conference room of the Southwest Tower.

Wilkerson was a member of Mayors for Clements, a statewide organization, during the recent election campaign.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

OPINION PAGE

Junk mail

Some of the more amusing aspects of our governments wasteful spending of our tax dollars, such as the study on the sex life of an African frog, are well publicized. A more subtle manner of waste, one which every businessman large or small is well aware of, is government junk mail.

Almost everyday here at the Pampa News we receive numerous articles, booklets and press releases along with all of the forms that must be filled out so we can stay in business. One of the recent "goodies" was an 18 page handout on the Carter Administration Summary of Accomplishments. It makes Jimmy appear as some sort of super hero who with a wave of his cape is able to make millions and billions of dollars appear and disappear. Why there is nothing this man can't do provided you sign over your checks to him — watch out for free koolade.

Another delightful piece to take home and curl up in bed with was a 34 page "letter" on the Savings Bond Program. In this "letter" they failed to mention that due to inflation and devalued dollars that the old 25 dollar bond would now be a 50 dollar bond — must have been an oversight.

Then there was one from the Department of Energy wanting to give away 8 million dollars in grants and another from the EPA telling about all the great things they have been doing to clean up mountains and cities so that we can live longer — at least those who didn't lose their jobs because their plants closed down, plants that couldn't meet the EPA specs.

Just suppose for a minute how much money could be saved if the government only sent this material to people who asked for it and were willing to pay for it. And how much time as well as money would be saved if busy businessmen didn't have to read all of this junk mail just to make sure there wasn't some new rule or regulation included that he would be held liable for. What if we refused to accept this junk mail and sent it back, do you think the government would get the message? Probably not. We would be sent a form to fill out explaining why we had sent back their material along with twenty other questions as to our race, sex, religion, color and national origin.

Big brother knows whats best...

Fateful foursome galloping again

THE FIRST GLIMMERING OF determination to subdue inflation seem to be showing itself in Washington. Will it last? Or will it flicker out at the first real gust of political pressure to continue the ways of big spending and big government that generated the problem in the first place?

The inflation we suffer from today is a testament to the large dose of economic ignorance and the even larger dose of waffling and political cowardice that have marked government policy for years. We've simply lacked the gumption to use fiscal and monetary restraints needed to keep the lid on inflation. So we have had —

GOVERNMENT OVERSPENDING. Ten years ago, federal expenditures were $185 billion and the government ran a small budget surplus. Even then, the spending figure was considered enormous. Today, expenditures are at half a trillion dollars and the deficit adds up to around a billion dollars a week. Go back 30 years, to the height of the Fair Deal, and you find total outlays about one-fourteenth what they are now.

That budget surplus 10 years ago, incidentally, was a fluke. The pattern since the 1950s has been red, not black ink — only two small surpluses in 20 years. The interest payment alone on the mushrooming federal debt created by deficits is like the current deficit, also a billion dollars a week.

OVERTAXATION. The average taxpayer works from Jan 1 to May 4 each year, more than a third of the work year, just to pay for taxes at all levels — if come, property, sales, Social Security Taxes have increased much faster than personal income over the past decade and are now the largest single item in most family budgets. In 1976, the latest year for which we have hard figures, America's paid $486 billion in taxes — federal, state and local. To put that in perspective, we spent $17 billion less than that on food, clothes and housing combined.

In addition to socking individuals, the heavy tax bite on businesses has a direct economic effect in that the tax code tends to penalize companies that save up to expand and create more jobs.

OVERREGULATION. The cost of regulation at all levels of government is estimated at a whopping $100 billion a year. This includes salaries at agencies charged with making regulations, the costs to businesses and individuals to comply with those regulations, and the "opportunity" costs, i.e., an estimate of the new products that didn't get produced and the jobs that didn't get created because of the time, money and energy detoured into regulatory compliance. Firms that pay out for regulation ultimately have to pass the costs along to consumers in the form of prices.

OVERBLOWN BUREAUCRACY. As government has swollen, so has the army of bureaucrats. The federal payroll has risen from 2 million in 1950 to about 2.8 million today. State and local government growth is even greater — from 4 million to nearly 13 million. This, of course, means increased outlays and the risk of deficits.

So big government translates into big inflation, and that spells trouble for us all. Nobody escapes inflation.

But there are hopeful signs, too. Although there are holdouts, a majority in Congress and the White House now label inflation the number one domestic problem. The president is talking about government restraint and is catching flak from the big spenders.

If the unfortunate wage-price focus is matched by a determination to implement wiser, more prudent fiscal and monetary policies — which are the only answer to curbing inflation — then the battle may be joined. If not, we are headed for a dark economic future.

By ROBERT LEFEVRE
Looking into the future, which one usually tries to do at this time of year, gives me an opportunity to indulge in some fearless forecasting. I trust you're sitting down. I am going to hazard the opinion that the year 1979 will find more shoddy products on the market than ever before. I predict many automotive recalls and possibly the recall of other products as well.

Why am I making that guess? Because as people turn more and more to government, asking that it make them safe, they become increasingly less safe. The truth is that people in government are not interested in making anybody safe. They are interested in getting and keeping their jobs. That's about it. Therefore, it follows that they will try to justify the existence of hundreds of governmental agencies which have no reason to exist except that they provide employment for thousands of non-productive people.

Therefore, it is safe to predict that government will launch more and more attacks on the market system, seeking to make it appear that every businessman, industrialist or free-enterpriser is a crook. That won't be true. But since the government controls the media (electronic media are all licensed, printed media can be profoundly influenced by postal rates and union demands) the view the government wishes to be stressed will be stressed.

But there is more. People who are crooks will get into business. When government is ostensibly protecting everyone, the loopholes become endless. You can anticipate an increase in the number of confidence racketeers, sleazy fly-by-night operators and quick-buck artists. The more the government poses as protector, the more gullible the public at large becomes.

The correct way to be protected from shoddy merchandise or from a fleecing is to realize that you have to protect yourself. But most people don't want to do that. They want to imagine that they live in a world where everything has been made safe. So they become increasingly dependent by shifting responsibility onto the shoulders of the politicians. This opens the door to the crook. When his potential victims have been lulled into a sense of false security by governmental promises, then his dupes are ripe for a sheering. The crook gets out his clippers and goes to work. The unsuspecting public, always imagining that crooks can't be around any more since government has made everything safe, believe the racketeer's statements even though common sense would warn them to disbelieve. So the public is gullible, and increasingly so as governmental services proliferate.

There's still another facet to the problem. Legitimate businessmen find that they must do as the government tells them or suffer legal reprisals with the attendant high costs of defending themselves in court. Never mind the customer. The important thing is to please the governmental agency. The consequence of this growing tendency on the part of business to surrender to political demand will be met by increasing customer complaint. The customers will find themselves getting less of what they want and more of what they don't want. Like screaming seat-belts in automobiles. Or air bags. Or dustpans to clean up after their puppies. Plus high prices to pay for all this nonsense.

Businessmen will have to defend themselves, but customers will be angry, not with government, but with businessmen. In process, business will, in fact, become less efficient as management focuses on its principle enemy, the government, and spends less and less time concerned with customer preferences.

So, as customers cry for protection, they will need more protection. As they imagine the government is making them safe, they will become less safe. The fundamental problem is that few people are willing, even at this late date, to realize that it is government itself that is their undoing. Most people put the blame for all problems on the other fellow's political party. If you're a Democrat, Republicans are the problem. If you're a Republican, then all evil comes from the Democratic Party.

But the truth is that a politician is a politician. Regardless of party, each politician tries to convince you that you should depend on government; look to government; pay for government; and support government. Anything else is presumably unthinkable.

Until the public gets below the surface here and begins to realize that it is politics, itself, that is the problem; no possible combination of agencies, bureaus or personnel will solve anything. Costs will continue to rise and merchandise will become increasingly shoddy from the point of view of the person who pays the bills.

A healthy elephant

By DON GRAFF

Trying to measure freedom on a world scale in a way is not unlike the task of the blind men asked to describe an elephant. It's not easy getting the picture of the whole animal from component elements that can be subject to such varying interpretations.

The complexity of the task, however, is not such as to daunt Freedom House, a private political research organization keeping vigilant watch on the state of liberty throughout the world since World War II. Since 1973, it has been issuing an annual "Comparative Survey of Freedom," rating the relative freedom of the world's nations.

According to the latest edition, 1978 ended up as one of the better recent years. Freedom lost ground in a few countries — eight with a combined population of 144 million. But it gained in more — 24 with some 563 million people.

It was the second consecutive year for which the Freedom House scale registered a net gain. The year's final balance for the world's estimated 4.23 billion inhabitants of 158 nations and 59 related territories was 35.1 percent "free," 24.7 percent "partly free" and 40.2 percent "not free."

To arrive at this finding, the survey evaluated each country according to some two dozen criteria reflecting political and civil liberties enjoyed or denied. These for the most part derive from the traditional European and American concepts of freedom, which might make it appear that lands of widely differing cultures and traditions were being rated according to an arbitrary and possibly alien standard. Something like all parts of the elephant being evaluated in terms of the tail.

But as the survey points out, "the political and legal if situations competing for acceptance in almost every country in the world today are to a large extent derived from Western experience."

Further, the basic concepts of freedom are neither new nor geographically restricted. "They speak to human desires for justice and autonomy for groups or individuals that to a degree have been present in every society."

In short, the Western tail essentially wags the world animal. And even though the free third of the world is still grossly outnumbered, it nevertheless is encouraging news that the animal's state of health is improving these days.

Shoddier merchandise ahead

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, Jan. 19, the 19th day of 1979. There are 346 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1942, Japan invaded Burma during World War II.

On this date:

In 1736, the inventor of the steam engine, James Watt, was born in Scotland.

In 1795, French forces overran Holland.

In 1807, the Confederate general, Robert E. Lee, was born in Stratford, Va.

In 1861, Georgia seceded from the Union.

In 1937, Howard Hughes established a trans-continental air record, flying across the United States in seven hours, 28 minutes.

In 1938, General Francisco Franco's air force bombed the Spanish cities of Barcelona and Valencia, killing 700 persons.

IN WASHINGTON

Needed a shift to thrift

by martha angle and robert walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Anyone who has thought of buying a home lately, especially in a large metropolitan area, can testify to the fact that inflation in the housing market is enough to curl your hair.

The soaring prices are no deterrent to existing homeowners looking to "trade up." A modest house purchased five years ago for $50,000 is probably worth at least $75,000 today, and the profit will go a long way toward making up the downpayment on a bigger and better home.

But what about individuals and families seeking to buy a house for the first time? How do they swing it when the median purchase price is now over $50,000 in large metropolitan areas and indeed exceeds $70,000 in cities like San Francisco and Washington, D.C.?

The answer is that it's getting harder all the time; if current trends continue unabated, first-time home buyers may soon be virtually frozen out of the market.

Already, more than half of all first-time buyers are two-income families. They tend to purchase older, cheaper homes and to sink more than the traditional 25 percent of household income into annual housing costs — mortgage payments, real estate taxes, insurance and utilities.

Obviously there is a limit to the sacrifices families can make in other living expenses — food, clothing, medical costs, etc. — in order to keep up the house payments. And with a 20 percent downpayment still the dominant requirement for obtaining a conventional mortgage loan, it is becoming ever more difficult to scrape up the cash needed to buy a house.

A study by the U.S. League of Savings Associations shows four out of five first-time home buyers rely exclusively on savings to meet the downpayment. But in this inflationary period, fewer and fewer Americans are able or willing to save much money — especially when the interest available on their savings doesn't begin to match the inflation rate and is fully taxable to boot.

The League is expected to make a major push in Congress this year to exempt the interest on savings accounts from taxation, and while the nation's savings and loan associations obviously have a large measure of self-concern in such a proposal, the move has other merits worth considering.

Savings are crucial not only for home-buying, but for the formation of investment capital in general. But as inflation and taxes combine to rob savings of their value, consumers are spending and borrowing instead; consumer debt is at an all time high, and still climbing.

As a new League study demonstrates, other nations do far more to encourage saving — especially for home-buying — than the United States.

France, Austria and West Germany, for example have contract savings — for-housing plans that couple tax-free interest with government bonuses. A would-be home buyer agrees to save a certain amount over a four- to six-year period, and the interest his account earns is tax-free. Furthermore, the government adds a bonus to his savings — double the interest in France, and 17-18 percent of the amount in the account in Germany and Austria.

England has just this year initiated a savings and bonus plan of its own, while Ireland provides a government grant to first-time home purchasers. Israel not only exempts savings interest from taxation but also indexes savings against inflation, guaranteeing that the money does not lose value. Most Latin American countries do not have tax savings interest.

With nearly 63 percent of all households owning their dwellings, the United States leads the industrialized world in home ownership. But other nations — Canada, Belgium, Japan — are closing the gap fast, and new home construction here lags far behind that in most of Europe and Japan.

Thrift is more than a virtue; it is a necessity for individuals and the society as well. Exempting savings interest from taxation would go a long way towards encouraging thrift and stemming the trend to mounting consumer debt. The idea deserves serious scrutiny by Congress.

Another bicentennial

Are we ready for another bicentennial? Ready or not, another such is coming up and it is every bit as momentous as the 1976 event.

That one marked the 200th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, while come 1987 we will begin celebrating two centuries of an epochally successful adventure in self-government under the Constitution of the United States of America.

In these latter days it is generally and perhaps understandably overlooked that what was begun in 1776 was not brought to a satisfactory conclusion until 1787. The first event had a monopoly on the color and drama — the ringing of bells and ringing defiance of George III.

In comparison, the drafting of the Constitution, a four-month proceeding which 10 of the appointed 65 delegates did not even bother to attend, was a dry affair, a tiresome process of occasionally spirited debate but more often self-serving trading and compromising. Even in those brave post-Revolutionary days, special interests called the plays in the political game.

The document it produced, however, still ranks as one of the political marvels of the age. Where the Declaration of Independence required the courage to rise to the challenge of the times, the Constitution called for vision to prepare for the challenges of a future that could be but dimly foreseen.

And that it did. Brief to the point of being terse, the original document is unique among most such basic laws of modern times in that it did not attempt to dot every i and cross every t in determining the structure and operation of the government it was establishing. Its strength through almost two centuries has been not in what it spelled out specifically, but in the latitude it has allowed for interpretation, for the application of basic principles to the changing needs of changing times.

Consider that it was designed for a government which in its three branches initially consisted of a few hundred individuals and today numbers its personnel in the millions. Yet it still functions — not to perfection, perhaps, but effectively.

Chief Justice Warren Burger, taking note of both the occasion and the enormous expansion of the governmental apparatus, is suggesting that the bicentennial observance take the form of a nationwide discussion of the present and future roles of the three branches of federal government.

He would extend the proceedings over a three-year period — appropriate, since the Constitution was submitted to the states in 1787 but ratification was not completed until 1789 — with one year devoted to analysis in detail of each of the branches. The result, he envisions, might be a series of papers "comparable in utility if not in quality with the Federalist Papers of 200 years ago."

A possibility, perhaps, but likely to strike today's public as an even drier affair than the original constitutional convention was for the citizenry of that time.

A major observance, however, is certainly in order. And there is time to prepare since nothing that occurred between 1776 and 1787 — the squabbling among the literally sovereign states, the realization that they were not hanging together and therefore were very likely to hang separately — is the stuff of national celebration.

Considering where it started and where we've come, it's the least we can do.

Citrus season resumes again

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer
WESLACO, Texas (AP) — The multi-million dollar Rio Grande Valley citrus season has resumed at full speed after a 10-day embargo — but shippers fear the recent freeze may cut the season short by two months.

"Most of us will be out of fruit by the end of February," said Chuck Schneider of Progressive Farms. The Valley citrus season usually continues into May.

A hard freeze that took hold in the valley on Jan. 2 may have damaged up to a fourth of the 75,000-acre citrus crop, some officials have estimated. As the embargo ended Thursday morning, packing sheds were ready to operate at peak capacity. The orchards had been selectively harvested to insure that the best fruit was brought in for packing and shipping.

Nevertheless, federal inspectors said they found more dry fruit than usual at the sheds.

"Normally there is a minimum amount of dry fruit," said inspector Neal Picketson. "But now we're going to have a lot of it."

Dr. Richard Hensz, director of the Texas A&I University Citrus Center here, agreed that the effects of the freeze will be seen later in the season after the good fruit has been picked.

Oil office 'full of ghosts'

By SOLL SUSSMAN
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Industrial Commission's new executive director says his Mexico City office has such a small staff it has become known as "the office of ghosts."

But an inquiry about oil rig equipment may mean it's time for a change.

"We're looking at $2 billion now," Gerald Brown told the Texas Good Neighbor Commission on Thursday. The single inquiry "is the biggest one I'm aware of."

He proposed beefing up the 6-year-old office near the United States Embassy to serve all Texas agencies in light of Mexican oil and gas discoveries. "I think we (the TIC office) are referred to often down there as the office of ghosts. I can assure you that has changed," he said.

Gov. Bill Clements has said he would like to meet with Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo, with oil and gas as a topic. No date has been set.

Cowboy Coach

Former Dallas Cowboy running back Duane Thomas calls Tom Landry the "plastic man." Others consider him the best dressed head coach in the National Football League. But more important to Cowboy fans and opposing teams, Landry is a man who knows how to win football games. The only head coach the Cowboys have ever had, Landry has led his teams to the league playoffs 12 of the last 13 years, and won two Super Bowl titles. If his Cowboys defeat the Pittsburgh Steelers this Sunday in Super Bowl XIII, Landry will become the first NFL coach ever to win three Super Bowls.

Weather Texas forecasts

By The Associated Press

Scattered showers moved across East Texas today as most Texans enjoyed springlike warm but wet weather.

Highs were to range from the 50s in the Panhandle to the 70s and even the lower 80s in South and Southwest Texas.

Scattered showers and thundershowers were forecast for central and eastern sections of the state while West Texas had partly cloudy skies.

Dense fog reduced visibility to less one-half mile across much of the state early today. The fog covered most of the state east of the Permian Basin and the Lower Pecos Valley.

The National Weather Service warned of hazardous driving conditions resulting from the fog. In the Dallas-Fort Worth metroplex, forecasters said fog reduced visibility to about one-eighth of a mile in some areas.

The fog was blamed Thursday for a rash of multi-vehicle accidents at Lake Ray Hubbard on Interstate Highway 30 near Rockwall in the Dallas area.

National

State police in Iowa rode in sand trucks to reach victims of auto accidents today as freezing rain, sleet and snow swept into the Midwest only days after a storm that has claimed 97 lives.

"Every kind of precipitation imaginable is falling," reported the state Highway Patrol. Police were called out to round up a load of hogs "running all over the place" on Interstate 80.

Power transformers burst into flames Thursday as the storm passed through Kansas, leaving many homes without electricity. Flooding was reported in Kansas and Missouri.

FORECAST

Until Saturday

WEATHER FORECAST by the National Weather Service calls for rain and snow for the Midwest, Great Lakes and mid-Atlantic states. Snow flurries are expected for the northern Rockies and showers for the eastern Gulf. Most of the nation will be cold.

23 indicted in tax scheme

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - A 30-month investigation into a scheme that bilked pawn shops and lending companies of thousands of dollars has culminated with two sealed indictments by a federal grand jury naming 23 present or former Big Spring residents.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Roger McRoberts said the 23 are accused of getting blank W-2 forms, making up income tax returns as high as $2,000 and taking them to pawn shops or finance companies which offer cash for them at a discounted rate.

By late Thursday, 17 of the 23 had been arrested, McRoberts said. Of the 17 arrested, 11 are said to live in Big Spring and the other six are former residents - two now living in Abilene, two in Wichita Falls, one in Lubbock and one in Columbia, S.C.

Six of the suspects were in their 20s; two were 19. Bonds ranged from $1,000 to $50,000, although several persons were released on their own recognizance. They are scheduled for arraignment at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday before federal magistrate Bill Bristler in Lubbock.

The 23 were named in two sealed indictments handed up Tuesday to U.S. District Judge Halbert Woodward in Lubbock. Under a program offered by some pawn shops and finance companies, cash is offered immediately at a discounted rate for income tax refunds a person has coming. Such a program is legal if the tax returns are legitimate.

If a person presented an income tax report showing $500 due, the finance company - or "discount" - might offer him $450 cash for it and take over the responsibility for sending in and collecting on the claim.

When the Internal Revenue Service balked at paying the false claims, the finance company was left holding the bag, McRoberts said.

Big Spring authorities have been investigating the scheme for 2½ years. At one time, they estimated more than 60 persons were involved. Officials said the Internal Revenue Service went with its strongest cases and ended up with 23 indictments.

Area course completed

WHEELER - Twenty-seven ambulance attendants from fire departments in Canadian, Lefors, Shamrock, Wheeler and Briscoe completed a two-week extrication course here Thursday.

The 18-hour course taught patient handling and removal from automobiles. It was conducted by Joe Rice of the Canyon Fire Department, in conjunction with Panhandle Emergency Medical Services Inc.

The course ended Thursday night with a skills test for participants.

Winners announced

Local Distributive Education Clubs of America (DECA) competition was held Jan. 15, 1979. Dona Cornutt and Paul Stewart served as judges. The winners were Dana Kindle - Advertising Services; Julie Jones - Apparel and Accessories; Nickita Kadingo - Food Service; Ricky Patton - General Merchandising; Bud Kent - Petroleum; Robbye Cunningham - Finance and Credit; and Lisa Schaub - Food Marketing. These students will compete at the Area Career Development Conference in Amarillo, at Amarillo College, Feb. 2-3.

Other students who will be competing at the conference are Ricky Lewis - Creative Marketing; Leon Williams - Food Marketing; Theresa Hon - Finance and Credit; Terry Richardson - Apparel and Accessories; and Janice Oliver.

Retha Bradsher and Demetra Simmons - General Merchandising.

Kim Smith and Robert Echols will be entering a Chapter Free Enterprise Project. Pampa was chosen to judge all written events for Area VI Competition this year. This judging will determine which written events go on to state competition in March. The written events will be judged on January 29 in the D. E. Room at the high school by Pampa business people.

Meanwhile the local chapter along with the Wichita Falls Rider chapter, went to Red River N.M. on a weekend ski trip Jan. 12-14. The Pampa Chapter had 15 students including an alumni member attending. The ski trip, was planned as a recreational activity to relax and have fun before competition begins.

Dear Abby

by abigail van buren

DEAR ABBY: BURNING IN SAN DIEGO is upset because her only son is going to assume his wife's maiden name.

BURNING says, "If he doesn't carry on the family name, it will be the end of the family line."

Changing one's name doesn't constitute the end of the line. Genes alone determine a line. Thus a natural child (daughters included) can continue a line, regardless of the married name.

Why don't we emulate the Spanish and use the mother's maiden name as well as the father's?

That seems to be the ideal solution, don't you agree?
LATINO IN ENCINO

DEAR LATINO: SII But if only one name is used to carry on the family name, it would seem more logical to use the mother's. One can be absolutely certain who the child's mother is. But sometimes there's a question about who the father is.

DEAR ABBY: Why do you presume that "to be alone at Christmas is sad beyond measure"?

There are many of us out here who yearn to be alone at Christmas. I am one of them. I spent most of my life doing what everyone expected of me rather than doing what I wanted to do.

I've been alone for 25 years, and have used that time imaginatively and creatively. Being alone at Christmas certainly beats the greedy grab for presents and the gobbling of food like a bunch of pigs at a trough.

I think if more of us spent more time alone, we might have a more sane populace than we now have.

One could spend the day alone thanking the Creator for all the blessings received during the past year. Inviting someone to share Christmas with you in order to spare him or her the pain of being alone doesn't mean anything. It's how we treat those around us on all the other days that counts.

CREATIVE SOLITUDE

DEAR CREATIVE: I appreciate your view. Being alone by choice is one thing. But being alone because not a living soul has thought to include you (particularly on a holiday that's traditionally merry) is something else.

DEAR ABBY: Now that I am a parent myself I realize that parents aren't perfect. They may mean well, but they make mistakes.

For example, I am one of four daughters. We were all overprotected, and never allowed to make our own decisions or do our own talking.

I can still remember that, when I was 16, my mother took me to our family doctor for my first internal examination. She held my hand as we went into the examination room and told the doctor that she wanted to stay with me during the examination. Thank God he said no!

Abby, in that doctor's office was the first time in my life I actually had a chance to talk freely and answer questions myself.

I believe we should honor our fathers and mothers, but there should be some rules for parents, too. They shouldn't raise their children as though they are their precious property. They should allow them to grow up in preparation to face the world alone, because one day they will be put to the test.

STRUGGLING IN N.Y.

Have a question or comment for Abby? Address: Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply, include a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dr. Lamb

by lawrence lamb m.d.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am writing about a balance problem I have had for 10 years, but it is getting worse. Other than that, I am as healthy as a horse. I can't stand still without weaving unless I steady myself against something. I can sit in a chair sometimes and it seems like I lean to the left. I feel better sitting, though.

I can be standing and maybe turn my head and it feels like I'm falling or moving. My feet and legs seem weak and unsteady. Sometimes it bothers my eyes, but I have glasses and can see well. I don't go out much anymore because I feel so foolish. I walk like a drunk and kind of sideways.

My doctor said it was my nerves and gave me Valium, but that hasn't helped my balance problem. Any helpful suggestions would be appreciated.

DEAR READER — The control of balance is a fairly complex mechanism. It involves the little balance channels inside your ears. They register the position of your head.

It also involves signals that you get from all the nerves that go to your arms, legs and other parts of your body. These signals literally tell you where your feet and body parts are. This information from your feet and legs pass through your spinal cord to your brain.

If you have changes in your spinal cord, you might have trouble with your position sense of your feet and legs and this could affect your walking ability. We see this in a number of diseases such as inadequately treated pernicious anemia. That's just one example. Also, your balance mechanism depends upon your vision.

Finally, the signals from your eyes, ears and position sense nerves must all be integrated simultaneously by your brain. If there is some abnormality of function in the brain, this too can affect the person's sense of balance and his ability to walk.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 9-10, Dizziness and Vertigo, which will give you more information on the balance problem. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. This issue will give you more information about how your balance is maintained and things that can be done about it.

You may have to see more than one specialist to clarify your problem. Your description, however, suggests to me that you should start with a neurologist, a specialist in disorders of the brain. That does not mean that you're nervous although I wouldn't be surprised at your being nervous considering the problem.

The neurologist will evaluate the relationship of signals from your position sense nerves to your brain and determine if there is any factor related to your brain, such as poor circulation that might be a factor in your balance problem.

He may also want you to see an ear, nose and throat specialist to check on the balance canals in the ears or any disorder in the ears that may affect their functions. I would urge you to do this because I don't believe your condition is going to get any better.

It's true that you might take various tranquilizers that might make you feel less disturbed about it but they will not solve the underlying problem.

DEAR POLLY — I hope you or one of the readers can tell me how to get a stamping pattern out of a linen tablecloth. I would appreciate hearing any ideas. — ROSE

DEAR ROSE — One authority suggests applying a weak solution of household bleach to such stamping ink and then washing promptly in hot suds. If fabric will not take to the use of bleach make a paste of hydrogen peroxide and baking soda, apply to ink stains and hold over boiling hot water until steam penetrates. Rub spots and then launder. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — The stove heat has caused the handles to come off of two of my stainless steel cooking pots. They are very old but the stainless steel is perfect. I would like to get new handles for them but do not know where to take them. Can you tell me? The manufacturer's name on the bottom is "Low Heat." — LILLIAN

DEAR LILLIAN — I have an idea that the "Low Heat" mark is not the name of the maker but a warning to only use the pans on low heat, which would explain the unusual situation of having the handles burn off. There is a line of porcelain looking cookware that has clip-on handles for some of its pieces. Take your pans to a hardware store and see if they would fit. — POLLY

Women are urged to plan career

NEW YORK (AP) — Most women probably spend more time making such a minor decision as where to rent an apartment than they do thinking about their careers, says job-counseling specialist Linda Kline.

"Most of us, as women, sort of fall into our work. We don't really sit down and decide very consciously what it is we would like to do, how we would like to go about getting there, and what the things are that we have to do to get into the various companies or the various kinds of jobs, or even how to prepare ourselves," she said.

Ms. Kline, 38, is president of a corporate consulting and executive search company here specializing in the search for, counseling and placement of women and minorities.

She says women now constitute 40 percent of the U.S. work force, a 50 percent increase in the past 20 years. Yet less than 2 percent of all women who work earn $10,000 or more a year. And only about 1 percent earn $25,000 or more a year.

One reason for low incomes is that many women work in clerical or factory-type jobs. But, Ms. Kline says, there are now opportunities for women who are educated and who are looking for real careers to go into corporations and get positions where they can grow into management-level jobs.

"Let's face it, most men who are working and have worked for years do not become presidents of their corporations or vice presidents. Most of us reach sort of middle management levels. But until a few years ago even the middle levels have been closed to women. So things have changed very much for the positive in that direction," said Ms. Kline, who heads Maximus, Consulting Inc. and Maxima Ltd.

Ms. Kline says if a woman wants to compete in business, she has to have the right kind of academic background. So, if a woman with a liberal arts degree wants to get involved in business, it's a good idea for her to earn a master's degree in business, or at least to take some business courses.

"You have to be, at least to start with, a specialist in something. It isn't really good to be a generalist and to be a jack-of-all trades," she said.

"Also, if you are in a position that you consider dead-end and you don't think you're going to be promoted where you are, get out."

"If you're loyal to the company but you do not feel that your company has a particular loyalty to you, and they view you in one way and you feel it's going to be too hard to change the stereotype image, then get out."

"There are lots of other companies around."

Ms. Kline says if you choose to stay in your company and try to get promoted, then always dress one level up.

"Are you dressing like a secretary?" she said. "Nothing wrong with that if you like being a secretary and want to stay one. But if you have an idea that you have management capabilities and supervisory strengths, but everybody views you as a secretary, look at how the other people dress, the men as well as the women, and change the way you look so that people will deal with you more as a peer rather than someone who is subordinate to them."

Ms. Kline says it's also a good idea for a woman to pick someone in her company as a role model or a mentor — someone who is interested in helping her advance her career because she makes that person look good.

"You seek out someone in power — who may not be your boss, it may be a totally different department — someone whom you would like to emulate, you would like to learn from, and find out if that person is willing to 'sponsor' you."

"Will they teach you what you need to know to get out of your department into something else? Do they view you as someone who has the potential to go far in the company and also work with them and help them look good?"

"This is very important," Ms. Kline said. "Women tend to wait to be picked. We sit there and we wait, we wait for someone to say, 'Darling, you have done a great job, here is the gold star on your forehead.' That does not happen."

Ms. Kline has a 12-year background in the consulting field. She is a member of the Board of Directors of the New York Association of Women Business Owners.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Ambition reigns supreme with you today and you'll seek to gain new allies. However, you can ruin your chances for success if you depend on another to do what you should yourself.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're a bit too sensitive today and could unfairly feel others are trying to take advantage of you. Use your logic. You'll judge differently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Granted that you have strong social desires today, but you can't express them at the expense of your mate. Try to understand his or her needs, too.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Someone's feelings could be hurt today if you don't show the same cooperation to this person as he or she has shown to you. Be fair.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A loss of momentum in your productivity can result from a division of your attention between pleasure and responsibility. Concentrate on one or you'll lose both.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Enthusiasm motivates you today. You'll be a mixer. Take care, however, not to spoil the fun for others if you run into someone you're not too fond of.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're a born leader today and know how to set the pace, yet you might not do so because you could allow someone to put doubts in your head.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Gratify your whims only after you meet your obligations or you may find yourself in an embarrassing spot, trying to explain your position.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) There's no question that you know how to bring home the bacon today. Do be careful that your generosity isn't exploited by one who doesn't deserve it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You should be setting your sights on lofty goals today. Instead, you are apt to let self-doubts erode your confidence.

HERE'S ROGER STAUBACH, veteran field general of the Dallas Cowboys. The Cowboys, current world champions, are hoping for a third Super Bowl victory when they meet the Pittsburgh Steelers in Super Bowl XIII at Miami's Orange Bowl Sunday. The Steelers will also be gunning for their third championship.

AP writer picks Dallas in Super Bowl

Why Cowboys will win it

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys will become the first team to win three Super Bowls Sunday because Dooomsday Defense will shackle Franco Harris and harass Terry Bradshaw into fatal mistakes.

The Cowboys, champions of the National Conference, are field goal underdogs against Pittsburgh, the American Conference kings, but the game should be a tossup.

For example, there were five common opponents. Dallas was 5-1, splitting with Los Angeles. Pittsburgh was 4-1, losing to Los Angeles.

Dallas, which has an incredible 21-5 record against AFC teams, has the edge in the vital statistics — the bottom line that REALLY controls a National Football League playoff game.

The Cowboys lead the NFL in the sacked-sack category (defensive sacks minus offensive sacks) with a plus-25 reading. Pittsburgh was second with 19 more sacks than the opposition.

This means Bradshaw, the Steeler All-Pro quarterback, will be spending his day dodging Randy White, Harvey Martin, Ed Jones, and Larry Cole, not to mention the blitzing Cowboy linebackers. Bradshaw will have to scramble and that's a hard way to win games.

Dallas has the best rush defense in football, yielding only 107.6 yards per game. Harris burned Dallas for 179 yards rushing two years ago but the Cowboys have studied that film and feel they have a special answer for him this time. Harris won't be able to go inside or outside without a shadow.

Pittsburgh's great defense will be facing the best third-down team in football.

Quarterbacks are study in contrast

MIAMI (AP) — Only one-tenth of a point separated them in the final passing statistics during the season, but Dallas' Roger Staubach and Pittsburgh's Terry Bradshaw are two very different people.

Bradshaw, the National Football League's Most Valuable Player, led the league with his 28 touchdown passes, three more than Staubach, but also threw four more interceptions than Roger's 16. Each completed about 56 percent of his passes. In all, the NFL's complicated rating formula gave Staubach 84.9 points to Bradshaw's 84.8.

But they are a study in contrast. Staubach, long acknowledged as one of the game's finest quarterbacks, remains spoon-fed by Dallas Coach Tom Landry, who sends in every play from the sidelines and is almost never overruled.

Bradshaw, conversely, has come of age this season, having shed for good the rap that he was less than brilliant by proving he can lead as well as anyone — and better than most.

"The criticism he's gotten is totally unjust. Terry's a very smart young guy," says Staubach, six years older than the 30-year-old Bradshaw. "He was thrown in as a rookie in some very tough situations and made mistakes. I did the same thing as a rookie, but I didn't play nearly as much at the start, so it wasn't noticed as much."

Bring up the subject of Bradshaw's intelligence and Terry winces, but he has come to terms with it. "I have nothing to prove to anyone," he says emphatically.

"I've always said that you never live down an image that's created about you. It haunts you throughout your playing career, and perhaps even when your playing days are over. It just stays there and will not leave. I don't like talking about it. It's a touchy subject I've lived with for nine or 10 years."

The question of brains aside, it is Bradshaw, not Staubach, who maintains almost total control of the Steelers' offense while Staubach merely carries out his boss' orders.

Chuck Noll, Pittsburgh's coach, doesn't say Dallas' way is the wrong way. "Teams that win as many games as they do and get to as many Super Bowls as they do don't do too many things wrong," he observed. But he feels more comfortable with Bradshaw in command.

"We feel that having him in command takes some of the pressure off of us on the sidelines. That's one less thing — and it's a big thing — that we have to worry about. We can be a lot more efficient."

"I wouldn't want the sidelines to send in the plays," says Bradshaw. "I like it the way it is now. I think when a quarterback calls the signals, his players react and respond better to his own plays."

"You get the blame if you lose and the credit if you win, so you might as well do it yourself."

Carew signs Angels pact

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — California Angels General Manager Buzie Bavasi has finished half the task with rather surprising ease — signing Rod Carew — but now faces what promises to be the difficult part of the job.

After Carew signed an Angels' agreement Thursday, believed to call for some $4 million over five years, Bavasi made plans to fly East to try to work out a trade with Minnesota Twins owner Calvin Griffith for the rights to the seven-time American League batting champion.

A stumbling block in the negotiations between the Twins and Angels apparently centers on California third baseman Carney Lansford, who hit 294 as a rookie last year. Minnesota wants Lansford included in the trade for Carew, but the Angels have declared him untouchable.

Carew said after signing the contract — with a contingency clause dependent on the successful conclusion of a California-Minnesota deal — that he was optimistic he would be wearing an Angels' uniform this year.

"If the deal goes through with the Twins, I'm looking forward to coming out here and doing my part to help the Angels win a pennant," the 33-year-old first baseman said. "The contract part is over and done with, and I'm happy. Now it's all up to California to try to satisfy the Twins. I'm optimistic."

Although neither the Angels nor Carew would divulge the terms of his contract, it would make him one of baseball's highest paid players.

"I wasn't really looking too much at being the highest paid player in baseball," Carew said. "I just wanted to be properly compensated, just wanted to be happy. The Angels have made me very happy."

Jerry Simon, Carew's agent, was asked if the contract with the Angels would put his client in the same financial neighborhood with Pete Rose, the former Cincinnati star who signed a reported four-year, $3.2 million free-agent contract with the Philadelphia Phillies.

"I think that's probably a fair statement. I don't know of a better contract," said Simon. "It's very substantial."

Carew, who has played for Minnesota since 1967, has a .334 career batting average, highest among active players.

Lombardi Award given to Clark

HOUSTON (AP) — As a 6-2, 240-pound high school pole vaulter, Penn State All-America defensive tackle Bruce Clark shocked his peers by pole vaulting 13 feet two inches in a schoolboy track meet.

Clark pulled another surprise Thursday night when he was named the winner of the ninth annual Vince Lombardi Award as the nation's outstanding collegiate lineman of 1978.

All-America offensive guard Greg Roberts of Oklahoma, had been the pre-dinner favorite based on his earlier selection as the Outland Trophy winner. Five of the previous eight Lombardi winners also had won the Outland.

Clark also was an underdog because no junior had ever won the award, named in honor of the former Green Bay and Washington coach who died of cancer.

Clark probably was the most stunned of all.

"Again I'd like to thank the Rotary Club (sponsors of the $100 per plate dinner) of Houston—Oh boy, I'm going to choke up—for this award," Clark stammered. "I have to thank a lot of people for my being here."

Clark, who blossomed from a freshman linebacker into a 6-2 268 pound defensive tackle, thanked head Coach Joe Paterno, his line coach J.T. White and his girlfriend Jane Pasarella.

"Coach White taught me everything about defensive tackle. I didn't even know the stance," Clark said. "I want to thank Coach Paterno, who decided I should become a part of the Penn State organization and my girlfriend who helped me through."

"I'd sometimes get uptight before a ball game and she'd tell me to just relax and go out and hurt somebody. That sounded funny coming from a girl, but it helped."

Clark said his schoolboy pole vaulting career ended as soon as he signed to play football for the Nittany Lions. His slimmer peers were surprised to see his 240-pound frame skimming over the cross bar and he was just as surprised to be named the Lombardi winner.

"I wasn't even thinking about winning," Clark said. "I just thought Matt (Millen) and I would be coming down to have a good time."

Clark said it was tough getting accustomed to playing a down position. "Matt pulled me through," Clark said. "I'd see him over there working his butt off and I decided if he could do it, so could I."

Texas Gov. Bill Clements was the principal speaker at the dinner and broadcaster Tom Harmon was master of ceremonies.

Fund drive to kick off

ABILENE — Robert Wilson of Borger will preside at a dinner and meeting at 7 p.m. Monday, at the First United Methodist Church in Pampa to launch the 1979 McMurry College Annual Fund drive in the Pampa district.

United Methodist churches in the area will participate by sending ministers and volunteer workers to help with the fund-raising campaign for the Methodist-owned college in Abilene.

Churches represented at the dinner and meeting will include: those at Borger, Bunavista, Fritch, Miami, Phillips, Stinnett, Wheeler, White Deer, Mobeetie, Briscoe, Gageby, Pampa, Lefors and Allison.

On the program is a slide-tape presentation about the college by Mike Barry, director of alumni services and associate director of development at McMurry.

Other Pampa district kick off meetings will be held on Tuesday, in Memphis and Wednesday, in Perryton.

Wilson is McMurry Annual Fund Sub District Chairman of the cluster of United Methodist churches attending the Pampa dinner.

Heading the McMurry Fund drive as Pampa district chairman is Gene Cudd of Spearman. As such, he will coordinate efforts within the district to top last year's Pampa district contributions of $24,630.83 for McMurry.

The McMurry Annual Fund was begun in 1973 to raise money for academic and general expenses of the college.

Blacks can be Mormon priests

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Long, inner struggle and an extraordinary round of prayer led to the decision to admit blacks to the Mormon priesthood, relates church president Spencer W. Kimball. He says the answer came so clear it couldn't be questioned.

The leader of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, in its official weekly, Church News, last week gave the first detailed description of the soul-searching process which resulted last June 9 in the abrupt change in the church's racial policy.

It happened, he says, after he had spent days in lonely prayer about it in the church's temple in Salt Lake City, followed by an unusually extended gathering there of his Council of 12.

"I knew that the time had come," says Kimball, 83, who is considered prophet, seer and chief revelator of God's contemporary will for the 4-million-member church.

He disclosed the details in an hour-and-a-half group interview for a special issue of the church publication, commemorating his first five years in office.

His presidency, coming after he had undergone open-heart surgery and suffered a bout with throat cancer, had "seemed likely to be pretty much a caretaker administration," observes William B. Smart, editor of the church-owned daily newspaper, the Deseret News. Smart adds that instead, Kimball's "administration has been, simply and unequivocally, the most dynamic five-year period the church has seen since its early formative years."

The highlight of the period was the church's dramatic change in the rules of its priesthood, closed to blacks since the church was founded in 1830, but under the new decree, opened to "all worthy males regardless of race or color."

"I went to the temple alone, and especially on Sundays and Saturdays when there were no organizations in the temple, when I could have it alone. It went on for some time as I was searching for this, because I wanted to be sure," Kimball said in the interview.

Then, he added, came a "meeting of the Council of the 12 in the temple on the regular day."

"Thou wilt shew me the path of life, in thy presence is fulness of Joy..."

Labeled for PROTECTION

Coleman Adv. Ser.

Some medicines may be taken internally; others are for external use only; therefore labels caution us as to their proper use. These precautions are for our own protection and good.

All things in life are not so clearly marked as to their proper use. The Bible is our source and guide, our label.

Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path.

Psalm 119, 105

ATTEND CHURCH, STUDY GOD'S WORD

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH
THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Movie set

The Johnny Cash movie, 'The Gospel Road', will be shown Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at the Middle School auditorium. The movie will be shown by Joanne Cash Yates, Johnny's sister. Admission is free.

TOKYO (AP) — A study by four Japanese Lutheran bodies and the Lutheran World Federation finds that by far the most often cited immediate cause of a person's attending a church is a "personal invitation."

About 52 percent of the newcomers to church services cited that reason, with the next most important reasons in this order:

Connections with a church school or organization, 14.3 percent; nearness of a church, 13.2 percent; curiosity or interest, 10.3 percent; worries and troubles, 8.3 percent.
