

Republicans say Detroit is 'Big D' - not Dallas

By MILLER BONNER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Ask a Republican where to find "Big D" today and he'll point you toward Detroit, not Dallas.

The Michigan city snared the 1980 Republican National Convention Tuesday in a show of "backroom" politics, claimed an angry Texan.

"The decision is a disappointment not only for Dallas and Texas but for the entire Republican Party," spewed Texas committeeman Ernest Angelo Jr. after a heated, 90-minute floor debate and three votes decided the issue in Detroit's favor.

The final 95-52 margin made it official.

Earlier a motion that would have allowed delegates to note their preference in a secret ballot failed 74-72 after a North Carolina committeeman switched his vote and broke a 73-73 deadlock.

"It makes me sick to my stomach that the committee didn't have the guts to go against the chairman," said Angelo.

Angelo said Bill Brock, the RNC chairman, railroaded Detroit through the selection committee in order to fulfill his desire to broaden the GOP's base.

Both Brock and the Texans claimed a secret ballot would have produced a victory for their respective sides.

Although Detroit is in the home state of former president Gerald Ford, several GOP officials said they feared a Dallas convention would give an unfair advantage to Texans

John Connally and George Bush as well as Ronald Reagan, who swept the state's 1976 presidential preference primary.

Angelo, the conservative mayor of Midland and a Reagan backer, was joined in his assessment of Dallas' defeat by state GOP chairman Ray Barnhart and, to a lesser degree, by state Sen. Betty Andujar, R-Fort Worth.

Mrs Andujar, one of seven persons on the selection committee, said the committee was never allowed to vote on Dallas or Detroit during its closed-door sessions.

The committee made Detroit a "consensus" selection.

During a floor debate with Barnhart, selection committee vice chairman Ody J. Fish of Wisconsin said every member of the committee was allowed to address the group and if a vote had been taken it would have been "overwhelming and perhaps unanimous with an abstention" for Detroit.

And if Brock, who chaired the selection committee, had brought the issue to a vote.

"I think Monday it would have gone 5-2 for Dallas," said Andujar.

But by Tuesday morning the discussion centered on the logistics of the convention sites and Andujar admitted that Detroit emerged with a slight edge over Dallas due to a larger working space at the convention center, better parking facilities and its ability to meet the RNC's prime date of July 14.

A Dallas convention would have had to be held on Aug. 11, 1980.

Connally to seek GOP nod in '80

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Texas Gov. John B. Connally today entered the race for the 1980 Republican presidential nomination with a call to the nation "to overcome the crisis of the spirit which is assailing our national resolve."

Connally, whose political career spans both major parties, declared his candidacy in a speech at the National Press Club. He characterized President Carter as a Democrat, as "a sincere, patriotic, hard-working man" who has failed "to provide effective leadership."

"The Carter administration is wrong for the times in which we live," he said.

Connally is the third candidate to jump into the race for the 1980 GOP nomination. The others are Rep. Philip Crane of Illinois and Los Angeles businessman Benjamin Fernandez.

In his speech, Connally emphasized the need for greater reliance on free enterprise and a strong national defense.

"Business has been stifled, berated and ridiculed, while labor has been painted as monolithic and avaricious," he said.

He called government, business and labor "integral components of the same economic team," and said the nation "will regain its full economic strength only when government decides to face the fact that the three great forces in the American economic system must work together."

Connally endorsed proposals to amend the Constitution to require a balanced federal budget. He also proposed a constitutional amendment to limit presidents to a single six-year term.

On foreign policy, Connally said this nation's willingness to enter into a new strategic arms limitation treaty with the Soviet Union must be linked to Russian policies around the world.

"We must not give them what they want in SALT and a free hand to act against our interests in other areas," he said.

On human rights, Connally said, "The question in countries like Korea and the Philippines is whether they have a government which provides for some human rights or a communist government which would deny all human rights."

Connally also called for increased production of coal and greater incentives for oil and gas exploration and production.

"We may have to revise the mining laws," he said. "We may have to revise the environmental restraints. We have to provide the balance that permits the nation to survive economically while we make progress environmentally."

Months of political spadework trying to line up support preceded Connally's announcement today, and his strategy will be to run in the primaries to prove his ability to attract votes in all parts of the country.

Once a protégé of staunch Democrat Lyndon B. Johnson, Connally became, in the early 1970s, a favorite of Richard M. Nixon, a Republican whose partisanship equalled Johnson's.

A man of impressive physical and mental presence, Connally enters the crowded race for Republican convention votes with some unique political problems.

He has spent most of his political career as a Democrat, including three terms as governor of Texas, the only elective office he has held.

He was indicted on bribery charges in an offshoot of the Watergate scandal, stood trial and was acquitted in April 1975.

As a Democrat, Connally was regarded as firmly in the party's conservative wing.

He switched to the Republican Party on May 2, 1973, when the Watergate scandal had the GOP on a downward slide in popularity polls.

"I didn't switch parties to save a sinking ship or to help the fortunes of any individual," he once told a news conference.

"I thought the leadership of the Democratic Party had forsaken its principles."

After disastrous midterm elections in 1974, in which scores of Republicans were swept out of office in a national reaction to Watergate, and the loss of the White House in 1976, the Republicans bounced back in 1978, making modest gains in Congress, governorships and state legislatures.

THIS SEMI truck carrying 500 sacks of cotton seed cakes from Levelland broke apart while going east from White Deer on Highway 60 around 9:30 a.m. Tuesday. The driver, A.B. Varner, who works for Levelland Vegetable Oil Co., said the 1978 Lufkin truck apparently broke because of its age. Although there were no injuries, he said it did scare him a little. Varner caught a ride to Pampa and phoned his boss who contacted several men from M.D. Snider Trucking Co. in Pampa to help unload the 50 thousand pounds of sacks. The truck was heading to the Hobart-Fatheree Ranch in Hoover.

Big issues 'absent'

By MILLER BONNER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — It wasn't so much what he said, but what he didn't say that concerned the Texas delegation following President Carter's State of the Union message.

Carter's lack of attention to energy and his passing comment concerning the prosperity of farmers sparked most of the adverse reaction.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, his distinctive eyebrows making him easily distinguishable to the national television audience Tuesday night, applauded Carter for his "commitment to fight inflation" before reminding the president of the energy situation.

"The president obviously is determined to steer a responsible course between inflation and recession," began Wright. "It may be like walking a razor's edge at times but I believe it can be done."

"The energy problem still is a long way from being solved," he added. "Inflation cannot be controlled in the long run unless we improve our relative self-sufficiency in energy production... our zeal to save money, we must not allow the moral equivalent of war to degenerate into the moral equivalent of manana."

Some major issues were noticeable by their absence," said Rep. Jack Hightower, D-Texas. "Little verbiage was given to energy and the reference to improved farm income would be hard for most farmers in our area to accept."

Freshman Rep. Mickey Leonard, D-Texas, termed the president's address "anti-climatic."

Gas hike may be smaller

Good news for Pampans. A proposed Pioneer Natural Gas rate increase may not be as large as was originally anticipated.

The city is negotiating with Pioneer in an effort to keep Pampa's commercial and residential rates lower than those of 62 other cities in the company's West Texas distribution system. Pampa's rates have traditionally been the lowest in the system.

When Pioneer proposed a $19.8 million rate increase in August, the company announced its intention to impose a uniform rate throughout the system. The company has since agreed to a $11.5 million increase, a hike of about 20 percent for all cities in the system except Pampa.

Making Pampa's rate uniform with the rest of the system would mean about a 30 percent increase for local customers. The Pampa City Commission is instead seeking a flat percentage increase for the entire system. While Pioneer won't go for that, it appears the company may agree to a compromise with the city.

Pioneer would yield an additional $250,000 in revenue by making Pampa's rates uniform with the rest of the system. City Manager Mack Wofford has asked Pioneer officials to half that increase to $125,000 and not set a time limit within which Pampa's rates must conform with those of the other cities.

Pioneer tentatively agreed to the requests, Wofford said, but the details are being hammered out before a final decision is made. The company is seeking, as part of the $11.5 million increase, a 10 percent late payment charge for customers. The charge must be approved by the Texas Railroad Commission, and Pioneer's decision on Pampa's rates may await railroad commission action.

If the commission denies the charge, Pioneer could decide to obtain the lost revenue through higher rates in Pampa. No matter what the outcome, Wofford said he doubts Pioneer will be able to implement new rates by the target date of Feb. 15.

News in brief

SUNNY

The forecast for Pampa calls for fair skies with warmer temperatures today. The high is expected to be in the upper 40s while the low should be in the upper 20s. Winds should be 15-20 mph from the southwest. Thursday's outlook calls for temperatures to be near 50 with a slight chance of rain.

Environmental protection grant sought

The city is seeking a federal grant for the construction of stormwater overflow ponds at the Pampa wastewater treatment plant.

City Manager Mack Wofford will travel to Lubbock Thursday to prepare grant application documents with the consulting engineer firm of Parkhill, Smith and Cooper.

"We're hopeful to fund approximately 75 percent of the cost of construction, estimated at $115-125,000, through an EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) grant," Wofford said today.

Water is diverted to the ponds during periods of high flow, and treated at a later date.

Repairs sought

More than immediate improvements may be coming to Perry Lefors Airfield if the Gray County Airport Board can acquire additional state or federal grants and the supplementary county funds usually required.

The board met this morning to discuss the improvement project. The board is beginning plans for improvement of the south end of one runway, with funds from a $60,000 Federal Aviation Administration grant. An additional $20,000 in matching funds has been set aside for the project by the county.

But board members are already making tentative plans to seek funds from the Texas Aeronautics Commission for added improvements, including changes to the lighting on the main runway, an overlay on the ramp, and expansion of the hanger area.

Board Chairman Jack Hood said the board should consider "trying to start making some repairs and improvements each year, in order to build up the airfield gradually."

Future projects depend on the availability of matching funds from the county.

County Engineer Gene Barber presented the board with an overview of the upcoming improvement project.

Barber said that the present problem is a transition joint in one runway, where an old section of the strip connects with a new one. Barber said improvement of the runway would involve reconstruction of 600 to 800 feet around the joint.

Barber predicted the work would take from three to five weeks to complete. He said contractors would be limited on construction time so the runway would be closed as short a period as possible. He said that because of the federal grant FAA engineers would have a lot of control of the project, including material specifications.

Barber said that the actual length of runway reconstruction would be tailored to fit the available budget.

The main problem in obtaining contractors, said Barber, is the weather in winter and competition of larger projects in the summer.

The board also discussed plans for opening bids for the purchase of a tractor and mower for the airfield.

Unemployment in 1979

By BERNARD SIEGAN
As a result of a federal law passed in 1977 the New Year brings with it for some of the nation's lowest paid workers the dire prospect of unemployment. The law in question raises the minimum wage from $2.65 to $2.90 an hour, beginning the first of the year. Every employer faced with this 10 percent increase in cost for his workers will have to determine whether it pays to retain them, and it is likely that a certain number will decide to fire some employees.
One need not be an economist to understand the phenomenon involved. The greater the cost of a product or service, the less of it that will be used. Higher prices for oranges or shirts will cause fewer of each to be purchased. In addition, if a businessman has to buy something that costs more — labor in this instance — the price of his finished product will in time have to rise. This increase in price will reduce sales and in turn the amount of labor employed.

In an article in the current issue of Regulation, UCLA Economics Professor Finis Welch cites eight recent studies of the impact of minimum wage laws confirming teenage employment, conducted by Welch and James Cunningham. They found that an increase in the minimum wage that raised the cost of hiring by one percent caused the employment of 18- and 19-year-olds to fall by 1.3 percent, of 16- and 17-year-olds by 2.4 percent, and of 14- and 15-year-olds by 4 percent.
On this basis, these researchers roughly estimate that the wage minimums in effect during the spring of 1979 led to the reduced employment of 18- and 19-year-olds by 15.2 percent, of 16- and 17-year-olds by 26.9 percent and of 14- and 15-year-olds by 45.6 percent. The larger response for younger workers came from the fact that without the minimum wage rate their wages would have been lower than those of the others. Thus, the lowest earning workers are the most adversely affected by these laws.

Recognizing the harm of minimum wage laws on teenage employment, a number of European countries and some states in this country have adopted laws allowing this group to work at a lower wage. While the studies have generally concentrated on the impact of minimum wages on teenagers, Welch reminds us that what happens to teenagers is illustrative of what occurs to low wage earners generally.
In 1973, only 30 percent of those persons with usual hourly earnings below $2 were teenagers, but almost 50 percent were 25-64 years of age, about 66 percent were women, 25 percent heads of family, and 10 percent 65 years or older. Welch believes that all of these groups are affected by the minimum wage law, and therefore programs designed to reduce the undesirable consequences of minimum wage for teenagers will miss most of the affected population.

Moreover, the differential for teenagers creates problems for other low-paid workers. Those not given dispensation would have the worst of two worlds. First they would have to convince employers they were worth the higher minimum, and second, they would have to compete with youths, who, because of the differential, could accept lower wages.
Welch proceeds to ask the obvious: Why not consider differentials for all the others: the young adults, aged, women, less schooled, etc? "We have enacted temporary differentials for a limited number of students and for handicapped workers which is an acknowledgement that lower wages are necessary to give them a competitive edge. The logic for extending these differentials is inexorable. Why not extend a differential to all who would earn less than a minimum? In other words, why have a minimum wage at all?"

A consensus exists among the vast majority of scholars who have studied the issue that a minimum wage law reduces employment for low wage earners. Nevertheless, this regulation continues to expand. Since first enacted in 1938, the basic minimum has increased from $0.25 to the 1979 figure of $2.90. Much of this increase has been offset by inflation and the rise in real wages, so that according to Welch the basic minimum as a percent of the average manufacturing wage has increased during this period from 41.7 to 49.7 percent. However, the most important change has been the growth in the proportion of the workers covered. The amount was 43 percent in 1938, and it is now 83 percent.
Although the economic studies have not led to the elimination of the minimum wage, they may have tempered the amount provided in the 1977 legislation. Perhaps most important, these studies and others like them serve the political process by demonstrating the limitations and infirmities of government regulation. The evidence continues to mount that those well-intended laws designed to transfer wealth from the rich to the poor do not work and harm the poor most of all.
As a consequence, there has been a significant shift in academic opinion on the desirability of these laws. Ten years ago anyone who opposed minimum wage laws was considered a dodder or a Scrooge. Now those taking this position only risk being regarded as scholars.

Hiding from the chill

For many years it has been no secret that stepped-up production of coal was necessary to keep this nation's supply of energy flowing. Dramatic moves by the OPEC nations only added to the realization that all alternate fuels must be made available as the supply and price of imported oil would continue to be a major insoluble problem.
Tremendous increases in the production of coal was early indicated as our first best bet to fill the gap. White House economists and officials of the Department of Energy (DOE) are at long last taking a stand against the Interior Department as it plays along with pseudo environmentalists in moves to hamstring the coal industry's expansion plans.
The federal strip mining law of 1977 was a major victory for the anti-industrial activists. The law now is being subjected to the usual rule making within the Department of Interior and this agency is allowing no input from other agencies in the administration.
The proposed regulations due to come out in mid-February will become effective a month later. One Energy official, commenting on the situation, observed, "When these things are cast in concrete, you're probably going to have to live with them for some time."
The official added that the final rules, if they resemble the proposed rules, will add billions of dollars to coal-acquisition costs at a time when the Carter administration is trying to promote the use of coal.
The main reason is that the regulations set "performance standards," or engineering criteria, as well as stating desired results. White House critics and many others argue that the coal industry should be able to reach the desired results the best and least costly way possible, rather than follow a government "cookbook."
Energy Department analysts say that going by the performance standards will add about $6 per ton to the cost of mining Appalachian coal and $2.60 per ton of Western coal. And this, without helping the environment in any significant way.
The president's Council on Wage and Price Stability issued a cost analysis and in it the report said the Interior Department's proposed rules "appear more stringent than the Strip mining law requires."
There is also worry that extending the rules to existing mines might cut total production of coal by one-sixth.
It appears to us that right now is the time for Congress to repeal the law which gives this overbearing agency the legality to stab us all in the back.
If members of Congress allow this civil war now going on between federal agencies to continue, we can only expect to see energy brown-outs in our immediate future. These will soon be followed by total black-outs.
The economic health of the whole nation is riding on the availability of coal and nuclear resources. It won't do any of us much good to enjoy a super-clean environment as we freeze and starve to death.
The Congress gave the Department of Interior too much power in this matter, it can also take that power away. Members of the Congress had better take a good long look and act fast before it is too late.

Congress, IRS mount attack on publishing

By SAM CAMPBELL
The IRS is about to rule that half the cost of publishing a newspaper is not a deductible expense.
Shocking huh?
Well, the mitigating factor is that the IRS hasn't found out yet.
What really is happening is this: Sometime ago, Congress amended the U.S. Tax Code so that it bans cost-of-business deductions for "any amount paid or incurred in connection with any attempt to influence the general public, or segments thereof, with respect to legislative matters, elections or referendums."
Now the so-called "service" has begun a crackdown IRS agents are going through executives' speeches, press releases, letters to shareholders and advertisements to find advocacy material. Barron's Business & Financial Weekly reported they are conducting audits.
The push comes at the behest of Congress itself, operating through Rep. Benjamin Rosenthal of New York. He is chairman of the subcommittee on commerce, consumer and monetary affairs.
Barron's reported that when the new Congress convenes in January, Rosenthal's subcommittee will hold 12 days of hearings. It will interrogate tax enforcers and business alike. In preparation it has collected tons of material, especially advertising matter.
The National Association of Manufacturers filed a suit. The IRS responded with a seven-week audit of the NAM books. In a related action the IRS hung an audit on the Texas Association of Business. As a consequence both the NAM and Texas group have cut back on the distribution of information that might be construed as an effort to influence public opinion.
The point of the audits is that the IRS expects to disallow as a deduction dollars that are spent to influence lawmaking either directly or indirectly. It is going so far as to challenge the deductibility of contributions to trade associations, to the extent that such contributions are used for what the IRS calls "grass roots" lobbying.

Now what has all that to do with newspapers?
Only this: About 50 percent of all that a newspaper prints can be construed as affecting public opinion on lawmaking matters. Historically, that has been the function of newspapers. From the outset, long before the printing press was invented, Roman patricians kept servants whose job was to sit in the senate and gather reports for their masters. This practice evolved into modern journalism. Take the political news out of a newspaper, and who will know what is going on?
Obviously newspapers don't have any rights that others don't have equally. Just because a man has owned a printing press for a long time doesn't give him any more standing under the First Amendment than any other person. Freedom of the press means not only the right to operate a press you already have, but the right to rent a press or buy a press when you get so fired up over an issue that you want to tell people how you feel.
Yet if newspapers have the same rights as others and others cannot speak their piece, the inescapable conclusion is that the IRS eventually will be auditing newspapers for printing stories that keep you informed about KoreaGate, Fannie Fox, and other capital hijinks.
The attack on non-publishing companies for publishing information that doesn't set well with Congress is a sneak attack on companies whose regular business is publishing. It is a Pearl Harbor Day for the First Amendment.

COMMENTARY
Making a federal case of it
by don graff

J. Carter to the rescue, and not a test case too soon.
The administration's recent request for legislation restricting police access to press materials may well be the beginning of a long-needed clarification of both the protections enjoyed by and the responsibilities incumbent upon the press in our democratic society of laws. Given the time-consuming complexities of the legislative process, however, that must be in the long run.
Meanwhile, the very fact that government, as here proposed by the Justice Department, is on record as favoring a more specific statement of First Amendment rights should in itself take some of the heat out of the controversy and provide an opportunity for reassessing its basis and implications.
For the past year, the press has appeared to be on a collision course with the law enforcement establishment. It has lost most of the initial skirmishes in a series of unfavorable court decisions upholding police searches of newsrooms and denying confidentiality of news sources.
The result has been rising alarm in editorial offices at what has been viewed as an erosion of constitutional guarantees. The precedent being established case by case seemed to be that anything goes in bringing the press into line. On the other side, growing numbers of judges have taken umbrage at press criticism and what could be construed as attempts to tell the courts what the law is and how it should be interpreted.
It has reached such a pass that at a recent symposium in Washington, a well-known newsman suggested it might be time for the press to "get into the trenches" in its confrontation with the judges.
Other press figures, such as the eminent editor emeritus of The Wall Street Journal, Vermont Royster, have cautioned against promoting an adversary relationship that could only complicate efforts to resolve the issues and work to the great disadvantage of the press.
A point with which Prof. Robert H. Berk, now of Yale University and formerly U.S. solicitor general, firmly agrees. None of

Sun belt chill

Promoters of the booming urban areas of the Sun Belt have been barely able to conceal their glee in recent decades as they watched the big cities of Northeast and Midwest experience sharp population declines.
Newly relocated homeowners in the South, Southwest and West too often have embraced an I-told-you-so attitude toward the deterioration of Detroit, Cleveland, St. Louis and other cities they had fled.
But now, in a little noted but potentially significant shift in the migratory patterns of the nation's restless populace, the big cities of the Sun Belt are beginning to experience population losses.
That surprising development is documented in a recently issued Census Bureau report on urban population trends between 1970 and mid-1976.
Nowhere is the pattern more evident than in California, the state that long has been a mecca for refugees from the "Frost Belt."
If the Sun Belt has a symbolic capital, it surely is Los Angeles County.
In San Francisco, the drop is a far more substantial 7.1 percent. Even if that city's still-growing suburban counties are included, the growth rate for the entire Bay Area is a feeble 1.6 percent.
The only two counties in the entire state of California with a declining population are Los Angeles and San Francisco. If that's a surprise, take a look at the list of the fastest growing counties in the Golden State.
At the top of that list are Mono (up 82.9 percent) and Alpine (up 71.9 percent) Counties, both located in a sparsely settled region of the state between Yosemite National Park and the Nevada border.
With only one exception, every other county in the state with a population increase of 30 percent or more — Amador, El Dorado, Lake, Mariposa, Nevada and Trinity — also is in a rural area distant from the big cities.
There's a similar trend in the South. Atlanta, the region's biggest city, lies almost entirely within Fulton County, which has experienced a population loss of 5.7 percent. The recent growth of the Atlanta metropolitan area generally has occurred in the most distant suburbs.
In the New Orleans metropolitan area, Orleans Parish — the city — has lost 5.4 percent of its population, while outlying Jefferson, St. Bernard and St. Tammany Parishes are growing at a healthy rate.
In the Memphis metropolitan area, Shelby County, Tenn., which includes the city, has experienced only a nominal population increase of 3.1 percent. But to the south, in DeSoto County, Miss., the growth rate is a phenomenal 40.8 percent.
The pattern is repeated in Houston; Dallas; Fort Worth, Texas; Albuquerque, N.M.; and Oklahoma City. In each metropolitan area, growth has slowed markedly in the county in which the city itself is located.
Many Americans apparently have an aversion to living in very large metropolitan areas, regardless of the region or climate.
The Census Bureau report shows that urban areas of more than 3 million people have been losing residents during the early and middle 1970s, while those with 2 million to 3 million people are growing at only a very slow rate.
In metropolitan areas whose population is less than 2 million, however, growth continues at a relatively fast pace.
The implication ought to be quite obvious to the Sun Belt cities that expected to achieve economic gains at the expense of their older counterparts to the north and east.
No city is immune to desertion, possibly followed by decay. In the not-too-distant future, the city on the brink of bankruptcy may be Atlanta; Fort Worth, Texas; or Los Angeles — rather than New York, or Cleveland.

Public opinion

Sir,
After reading your article in Jan. 15 edition from "Concerned Citizen for Justice," I feel my opinion and many others I know needs to be expressed. I'm sure there are many citizens who do not realize there is much negligence and concern on the part of parents, police departments and courts that lead up to happenings such as the shooting of the young man last month on the "drag" of Pampa.
In view of his habits and condition prior to the incident, why was he even behind the wheel of a car, and where were the members of the "step" program of our police department? How many of your readers have ever encountered having to deal with intoxicated people or people so high on drugs they don't know right from wrong? I am hoping there was enough information brought to light in that case, individuals will learn from it, and, possibly actions in public streets can be more civilized here.
Thank you,

Speech called old stuff

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Legislative leaders say much of Gov. Bill Clements' "first chapter" program is old stuff that lawmakers rejected before and might turn down again.

There was little encouragement for the new Republican governor in comments from legislators following his first "State of the State Address" on Tuesday.

Li. Gov. Bill Hobby was clearly outraged by Clements' implication that the Legislative Budget Board's $20.7 billion two-year spending proposal contained nearly $1 billion worth of fat.

"The budget board, that notable bunch of free-spending liberals, met for six months, and I trust its recommendations won't vary by a percent or two from the bottom line of the general appropriation act that is passed," said Hobby, who turned and left the podium after Clements' speech without the usual handshake and greetings.

The board, chaired by Hobby, consists almost entirely of conservative legislators.

Hobby objected to Clements' recommended constitutional amendment limiting governors, lieutenant governors and attorneys general to two four-year terms.

"I think that's a restriction on the right of the people to pick who they want to," he said.

House Speaker Bill Clayton said Clements' proposed "Taxpayer's Bill of Rights" probably would be "very difficult to pass" unless presented differently from similar items that died in last summer's special legislative session on tax relief.

Cullen Davis 'shouldn't get free ride'

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Millionaire businessman Cullen Davis is trading one "cold damp place" for another, now that the murder-for-hire charges against him have been temporarily set aside by a hung jury.

Davis, 45, spent five months in jail after being arrested last August on charges he plotted the death of District Judge Joe Eidsen, the presiding judge over his divorce proceedings with his estranged wife, Priscilla.

But with Monday's mistrial declaration in Houston, Davis and his blonde girlfriend, Karen Master, are planning a ski trip of several days to Aspen, Colo.

His stay of several months in the Houston lock-up was "the worst experience of my life," he said.

The state said it will press for a new trial against Davis because "good conscience demands" it, Tarrant County District Attorney Tim Curry said Tuesday.

But Davis' immediate concern after returning from Colorado will be the resumption in February of his hotly contested divorce trial with his estranged wife, Priscilla.

Davis and Ms. Master have said they plan to marry once his divorce to Priscilla is final.

Many were calling the mistrial a victory for the defense; others were declaring it a triumph for the prosecution.

Curry said he has to chalk it up for the defense.

"The point is that as long as the defense can keep a man out of jail, they're winning. The tactics will now be to delay," he said.

Davis' chief defense counsel, Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, is so successful he can "pick and choose" when to go to trial again, the Fort Worth prosecutor added.

Curry said he personally would like to go to court with another Davis trial within six months, but doubts that is realistic.

"It boils down to whether a man of his resources and his money should get a free ride in the system. I don't think he should. I think the law ought to apply to everyone, regardless. I don't think it does at this point," Curry said.

Community chorale to be set up

By DAN LACKEY
Pampa News Staff

A community chorale is sought for Pampa and John Woicikowski, Director of Chorus at Pampa High School, says he will start one if he can find singers.

Auditions for the chorale, which will comprise 16 to 24 singers, will be held the week of Feb. 12 in the high school choir room. Times for auditions are 2:30 to 5:30 p.m. on Feb. 12 and 15; and from 5 to 7 p.m. on Feb. 13 and 14.

Woicikowski said Tuesday the idea of starting a local chamber choir "has been in the back of my mind for a couple of years. Since we have some folks with professional experience recently moved to town I decided to go ahead with it."

"This town has a tremendous amount of talent," Woicikowski said. "And I think it will work. I think a lot of people think that (participation in) chorale music stops with high school— unless, of course, they continue in college. I'd like to see more participation in fine arts after school, after college, when people return to their communities."

The auditions will consist of singing simple scales, a prepared religious or art song, and the reading of a church hymn.

But Woicikowski said he doesn't want anyone scared off by the idea of auditioning.

"I want to encourage anyone who is interested to try out," he says. "Especially the men. Even if they don't have a complete audition prepared, I'd like to hear them sing."

"Towns this size are just now beginning to start their own community choirs," he said. "The interest is progressing past the high school level."

Woicikowski said he hopes to attend church choir rehearsals in the area to spread the word about the choir.

He said the group will perform a variety of works by Verdi, Schubert, Mozart, Bach, and Vivaldi— including many selections which he says are beyond the range of high school students "because their voices have not yet matured."

However, the chorale will probably include a few of his students, he added. Woicikowski will conduct the ensemble and plans to hold at least one concert this spring.

The defendants told the court they were intoxicated at the time of the incident.

Stump was sentenced to two years in the Texas Department of Corrections. Miskowicz received a three year sentence.

Commenting on the sentencing, District Attorney Harold Comer said, "Criminal mischief has been a real problem lately, and we're just going to crack down on it."

According to a Pampa police memo there was a large amount of car window breaking during Christmas week of 1978. Eighteen incidents were reported with damages totaling $2,155.

Health care controls possible

By GREG THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer

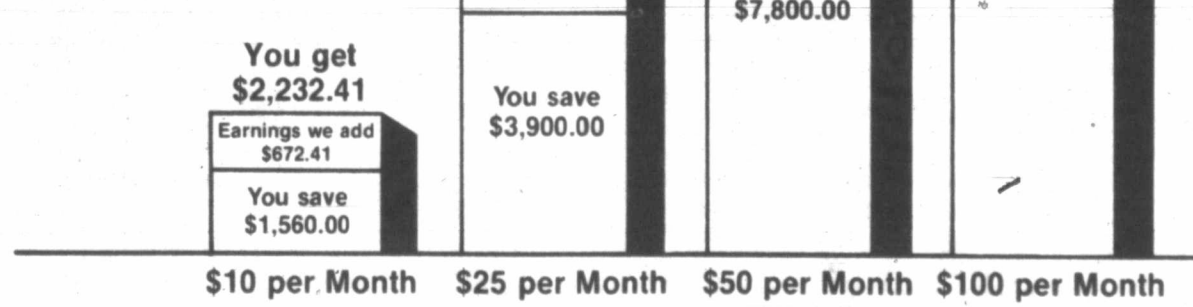

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The federal government will be forced to control rapidly escalating medical and hospital costs unless the health care industry "puts its house in order" and voluntarily slows the price hikes, says a consumer leader.

Such intervention, however, was bitterly denounced at a national health care conference here Tuesday by the president-elect of the powerful American Medical Association and the chairman of the American Hospital Association.

The industry, they said, is making progress in controlling costs through the Voluntary Effort, a united plan of the AMA, AHA and the Blue Cross-Blue Shield Association.

"If government intervention in health care responsibility is to be abated, then the health care industry and its component participants must put its house in order," Dr. Louis Meyer, chairman of the Conference on Consumer Organizations, told the national conference examining rising medical costs.

Consumers, Meyer said, will turn to politicians for solutions if to the health care industry doesn't control the cost increases. That, he added, could bring about a national health insurance program.

Farmers plan to boost corn, soybean plantings

By DON KENDALL,
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Apparently encouraged by higher grain and livestock prices, farmers say they intend to boost corn and soybean plantings this spring, according to a new government survey.

The Agriculture Department said Monday that the survey indicates an increase of 1.2 percent in this year's corn acreage and a 3.5 percent increase for soybeans.

Although farmers have plenty of time to change their minds before spring planting, the figures raise questions about the administration's effort to curb grain output by requiring farmers to take part of their land from production in exchange for federal price supports.

The department's Crop Reporting Board said also that cotton producers indicate they will increase plantings 5.7 percent from last year.

In its first general look at the 1979 crop potential, the board said that surveys as of Jan. 1 indicated farmers intend to plant 79.2 million acres of corn for this year's harvest, compared to 78.3 million for the 1978 crop.

Soybean plantings were indicated at 65.4 million acres, up from 63.2 million planted last year.

The report did not project how much the 1979 crops may actually produce, only the number of acres farmers said they intended to plant in the major producing states.

Another survey, to be announced April 16, will reflect crop acreages as farmers actually take to their fields.

Officials said the Jan. 1 survey was conducted among approximately 20,000 farmers in 34 states that last year accounted for 98.5 percent of the nation's total planted acreage of the major crops.

A year ago, a similar report indicated that farmers would reduce 1978 corn plantings by 2.1 percent and boost soybean acreages 8.2 percent.

As it turned out, corn plantings were reduced about 5 percent from 1977, and soybeans were increased 9 percent.

Both crops set records for their size in 1978. Corn output rose to 7.08 billion bushels, a 10 percent gain from 1977, and soybeans climbed to 1.84 billion bushels, a 5 percent increase.

Cotton production, beset by poor yields and a smaller acreage, dropped 25 percent from 1977 to 10.8 million bales.

The administration, as it did for the 1978 crops, has announced acreage set-aside programs for wheat, corn, sorghum and barley in hopes of stemming a steady climb in the total grain supply because of recent bumper harvests.

Despite the largest grain stockpiles since the early 1960s, prices of wheat and corn at the farm have risen from year-ago levels.

That has been due in part to heavy export shipments to overseas customers and to a government program enabling farmers to store grain — mostly wheat and corn — for up to three years so that prices will go up.

But livestock prices also have risen sharply, and the outlook calls for prices to remain relatively high this year, at least.

The department said in a related report that the huge 1978 corn crop had a farm value of $14.7 billion, compared to $12.9 billion for the 1977 harvest, based on a preliminary season average price of $2.09 a bushel against $2.02 the previous year.

Last year's wheat crop was put at $4.74 billion, down from $5.85 billion in 1977. The 1978 wheat harvest was smaller due to acreage cutbacks, less than 1.8 billion bushels against the 1977 harvest of 2.04 billion.

But the average farm value of 1978-crop wheat was $2.94 a bushel, compared to $2.33 for the 1977 harvest, the report said.

Soybean prices at the farm averaged $6.42 a bushel for the 1978 harvest, according to the preliminary figures, compared to $5.88 in 1977.

Total value of 1978 soybeans was more than $11.8 billion against $10.4 billion in 1977.

The Jan. 1 survey also showed that farmers intend to plant 4.25 million acres of durum wheat this spring for the 1979 harvest, up 3.4 percent from last year.

Plantings of other types of spring wheat were indicated at 14.5 million acres, up 1.9 percent from 1978.

Last month the department said winter wheat producers planted 51.5 million acres last fall for the 1979 harvest, an increase of 8 percent from a year earlier.

A recent USDA newsletter to farmers, noting the larger winter wheat acreage, said that if producers of spring wheat follow suit — as Monday's report indicated they will — total U.S. wheat production in 1979 could increase after declining for two years.

Other crops in the Jan. 1 planting survey and their acreages included:

- Sorghum, 15.2 million acres planted for 1978, down 5.6 percent from 1978.
- Oats, 15.6 million acres, down 3.9 percent.
- Barley, 8.8 million acres, down 7.8 percent.
- Flaxseed, 732,000 acres, down 17.8 percent.
- Rice, 2.91 million acres, down 5.5 percent.
- Sugarbeets, 1.11 million acres, down 11.2 percent.
- Sunflowers, 4.14 million acres, up 48.1 percent.

China's oil wells need automation

By JOHN RODERICK,
Associated Press Writer
SHENG LI, China (AP) — An army of 100,000 men and women labors 24 hours a day on a frozen wind-swept plain here to extract from China's second biggest oil field the "black gold" vitally needed for modernization.

Toiling beside ancient mudwalled villages near the Pohai Gulf in populous Shantung province, the Sheng Li workers produce a healthy chunk of China's oil needs.

Described by its own workers as backward compared to the showpiece field at Taching in Manchuria, and light years behind Texas fields Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping will visit in February, it nonetheless coaxed from the uncooperative soil in 1978 about 18.25 million tons of crude oil worth some $1.6 billion on the world market.

Most of the oil gushing from its 3,000 wells contains between 10 percent and 17 percent paraffin which has to be removed at refineries before it can be used.

It moves from here by truck, rail and underground pipeline to Tsingtao, Tsinan, Nanking and other Chinese cities which take almost all its production. A small amount is shipped from Tsingtao to other countries, chiefly Japan, the Philippines, Thailand and Brazil.

Natural gas from Sheng Li is piped to Chipu, 80 kilometers away, where it goes into the production of 300,000 tons of ammonia a year.

What Sheng Li — aptly named "Victory" after the village where the first oil strike was made in 1964 — needs most is automation and modern equipment. Some of its people recall the contributions made in the past two years by the Smith Drilling Co., which supplied improved new drilling bits, and the Dresser Co., which provided up-to-date logging tools. Both are from Texas.

Another 80,000 women, most of them wives, run agro-industrial villages. Their income supplements husbands' wages, which average 65 yuan — $43 dollars — a month.

In winter, chill winds send the temperature down to 4 degrees below zero. In summer, 100-degree heat turns the treeless land into a blazing desert unrelieved by air conditioning.

Because it is a hardship post, the government offers workers inducements that include free water, electricity, housing, medical care, bathing facilities, cooking fuel, schooling, nurseries, transportation and heating. And because the work is tough, they get 15 to 25 kilograms of rice monthly, double the national ration.

Most of Sheng Li's workers have radios, bicycles, wrist watches, sewing machines, and higher than average savings accounts. But they lack one thing money can't buy: a home they can regard as theirs.

One case is Mrs. Hsun Mingchin, 38, boss of 36 workers, most of them women, as head of a collection and transportation pumping station. She and her husband, a secretary, met at Shanghai University students and she still years for the great port city that was home.

A pleasant-faced, intelligent woman whose hands are black with oil, she came here 11 years ago, believes in China's ability to become a modern nation and is convinced she is helping make it possible.

"Conditions are hard here, but the country needs us," she says. "Food? Oh yes, there is more variety in Shanghai. But it is a consumer city and this is a production area. We get by all right. I am happy to be here, doing my duty, as long as the state needs me. But if a field should open up near Shanghai, well, that would be better. I would like to go there. I am happy to do what I can to help our country become modern, like the United States."

She earns 70 yuan, two more than her husband, and has two children, the younger with her husband's mother in Shanghai. Her mother lives with them at Sheng Li and does the cooking. They have visited Shanghai only six or seven times in their 11 years here.

Mrs. Hsun has been here longer than most people and knows what hardship is. The first workers, some from Taching, lived in makeshift huts. Sheng Li, though still backward, has come a long way since. But the going has been rough.

Not only is the climate forbidding. The earth itself is resistant to oil exploration. It contains numerous rock faults which create oil deposits at wildly differing levels. To reach oil, drillers have had to go down as much as 16,500 feet or as little as 5600.

Aside from this help, and acquisition of a Romanian drilling rig, Sheng Li is an all-Chinese operation doing the best it can under primitive conditions.

What makes it a success is the dogged pioneer spirit of its workers who, for wages a Western oil worker would sneer at, put in a 48-hour, six-day week with a healthy slug of overtime.

Among them are 18,000 women working beside men in the fields. They do relatively light work with the exception of 76 in the "Half Sky" team — from Mao Tse-tung's description of women as holding up half the sky — who take samples, make analyses and do the same rough, outdoor work the men do, repairing wells when they break down.

Energy bill turned dramatic

By TOM JORY,
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — There were times, says D.A. Pennebaker, when pursuit of President Carter's energy bill through Congress, with a camera, appeared an endless task.

"What interested me, and what held me to it, not wanting to back off in spite of this swamp we were in, was this kind of Shakespearean sense of huge drama," the filmmaker says.

"Even if we were to get a tenth of what was happening, that was more than anyone else had gotten."

In fact, Pennebaker's story, "The Energy War" with atmosphere and intricacy intact, is five hours in the telling.

Only the Public Broadcasting Service would assume a film of such length, as it does in three parts beginning Sunday evening at 10 p.m. EST. Parts II and III follow Monday and Tuesday. As with all PBS programs, air date and time may vary, so check local listings.

"The Energy War" is, to be sure, a great deal more than simple documentation of this year-long legislative battle, though the approach is, for the most part, chronological.

The legislation — specifically, Carter's proposal to regulate the intrastate sale of natural gas — is followed through the halls and backrooms of Congress, into committee and finally onto the Senate floor, where a filibuster ensues. The documentary examines the consequent development of a fragile compromise.

The viewer, in the end, learns a great deal about the legislative process, a result perhaps more significant than any recollection of the bill's provisions.

Watch social security reports

People receiving social security monthly checks have an important responsibility to report changes in their situation which may have an effect on their eligibility or the amount of their checks.

Correct reporting may mean that a person will not have to pay back benefits he or she should not have received. Or, it may mean that a person will receive a larger check.

The events that must be reported are listed and explained in the booklet, "Your Social Security Rights and Responsibilities." There are separate editions for people who receive retirement and survivor benefits and for those who receive disability benefits.

Disabled people must also report if they return to work or if their condition improves.

Full information about reporting responsibilities can be obtained at the Pampa social security office, located at 1541 North Hobart. The telephone number is 669-3381. People can make their reports by phone, mail, or in person.

Pregnant teens get all the support they need

Dear Abby

by abigail van buren

DEAR ABBY: My sister and I are widows (in our early 60s) and live in separate houses in a small town. We are congenial, go everywhere together and enjoy each other's company. You might say we're inseparable.

My married daughter lives in another town close by. She says I am in a rut (she is right)—that my sister and I see too much of each other and need to go our separate ways for a while. So my daughter has invited me to take a trip with her to get away from the same old routine—and she doesn't want to include my sister.

I told my daughter I couldn't just up and go on a trip without inviting my sister because she would be hurt, and I couldn't blame her. I know how I would feel if she did that to me.

So, I am on the spot. Should I go with my daughter and hurt my sister, or stay home and hurt my daughter?

UNDECIDED

DEAR UNDECIDED: Your daughter may be well-intentioned, but she is putting you on the spot. Perhaps a vacation away from your sister would get you out of a "rut"—but at what a price! As long as you and your sister enjoy each other's company and are congenial, perhaps that "rut" is not such a bad one. Pass up the trip with your daughter. If you were to go, feeling as you do, your conscience would prevent you from enjoying it.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married five months to a very wonderful man. This is his first marriage and my second.

I own some beautiful jewelry and furs and would enjoy wearing them, but my husband doesn't want me to wear anything "showy" that HE didn't give me. That means I can't wear any of my jewelry or furs because he hasn't given me any, and there is no way he could afford to match what I own.

I think he is being unfair, although so far I've gone along with his wishes.

I would appreciate your thinking.

UNADORNED

DEAR UNADORNED: I think your husband's insecurity is showing. I agree that his request is unfair. But whether you want to honor it or not should be YOUR decision.

Dr. Lamb

by lawrence lamb m.d.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am 5 feet 5 and weigh approximately 100 pounds. The problem is that I still feel fat. I eat one meal a day which usually consists of steak and/or eggs, a tossed salad and/or cottage cheese, a roll with margarine, iced tea and then I'll splurge and have dessert.

My question is, "Will the dessert make me fat"? I mean I've heard so much about carbohydrates and I'm afraid that even though my consumption is about 1,000 calories a day, I'm afraid the carbohydrates in the dessert will cause the fat to form on areas of my body where fat cells exist. I'm so confused about that.

People have told me I am slightly anorexic and maybe they're right but I am so afraid of getting fat I have to constantly be denying things to myself because if I eat them I am afraid it will turn to fat and I don't want to look like a blimp.

Also, if I drink a couple of alcoholic drinks in the evening I compensate for it by fasting for the next couple of days. Then I worry about all of the vitamins and nutrients I'm not getting. If you can understand this, I'd sure appreciate some advice. It's becoming harder and harder to live with this constant obsession.

DEAR READER: I'll be completely candid with you and tell you you need help. By help I mean psychiatric or psychological support. At your height, you are as skinny as a rail.

The description of your dieting habits leads me to think that you are suffering from malnutrition. You're describing yourself as a person who has anorexia neurotica, people who think they are fat when they are not. You have a faulty self-image of your body.

The fat cells you have have been destroyed long ago. The walls of fat cells can be digested just like other tissues of the body can.

POLLY'S PROBLEM

DEAR POLLY:—I have used a wax product on my vinyl floor for a long time and now there are very bad stains all over it. I am afraid it is ruined. I used bleach and baking soda with water, which helped a few places. But it still looks terrible. Please tell me how to clean my floor. —JOY.

DEAR JOY:—I think you probably need to remove that build-up of wax. The stains may be yellowed wax and may come off with the wax. —POLLY.

EDITOR'S NOTE — Each year, a fifth of the nation's babies are born to teenagers. Gradually, facilities are being developed to help girls go from childhood to motherhood.

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
AP Newsfeatures Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Her hips are too narrow because she's still a child, her blood pressure is too high because she eats potato chips and pizza and her mind strays from the subject at hand: having babies.

Tina, frail, swollen and just 15, still wears red ribbons in her pigtails and wants to go out and play. She stares out a window overlooking the bleak Baltimore neighborhood where she grew up. Her future is bleak: she's going to be a mother.

She blows an irreverent pink bubble, pops it and turns to her own weary mother of five: "Mama, I'm so tired. How much longer? I don't want to drink any more milk. When can I go out and see my friends?"

There are about 600,000 babies — a fifth of the nation's births — born to teenagers each year. Tina (not her real name) is among about one million such unmarried mothers. They have babies who are premature, underweight, undernourished, and undercared for, with a heightened risk of retardation.

They fuel a cycle of social sickness: unmarried mothers who drop out of school, can't find jobs, go on welfare and have babies — often repeating the pattern set by their own teenage mothers.

There are programs designed to make a mother out of a child, a parent out of someone who still needs parenting, to give patience to the impatient, to teach love to someone who hasn't known much love.

There is, for example, the Delaware Adolescent Program, the Park School for Pregnant Students in Grand Rapids, Mich., the Margaret Hudson Program in Tulsa, Okla.

The Johns Hopkins Center for Teenage Mothers and Their Infants, regarded as a national model, is in Baltimore, where Tina lives with her mother, four brothers and a new baby. Tina's boyfriend lives with his mother down the street.

The center has a lot going for it: $300,000 a year from the Joseph P. Kennedy Jr. Foundation and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare; a staff of 21, plus six city health department specialists.

It has a 4-year-old prenatal program that enrolls 400 a year, a 2-year-old followup that enrolls 250. It provides medical, psychological, social, educational, vocational and other services.

It will help a girl get free milk, find a second-hand crib, enroll her in typing class, give her birth control pills, and maybe find a senior citizen to babysit. Also, it will be her shoulder to cry on.

Only years will show whether the cycle of pregnancy and poverty is broken, but there have been results.

Mothers and babies are usually healthy. The prematurity rate has halved. The repeat pregnancy rate is 5 percent in the first year, compared with 25 percent nationwide. And 85 percent of the girls in followup are in school, work study or work.

Eunice Kennedy Shriver, executive vice president of the Kennedy Foundation, says, "First, Hopkins is a compassionate program that treats girls like whole human beings. Second, it makes real progress in infant health and nutrition. Third, it is an efficient network, a supermarket of services in one handy place."

Dr. Lulu Mae Nix, director of the Office of Adolescent Pregnancy Programs in the federal department of Health Education and Welfare, says there are different approaches — school or hospital-based or private agency. "The best programs have health, education, social services and day care," she says. "Whatever it takes for a girl to get on her feet and become independent."

A new $50 million a year federal program will provide grants to start and supplement comprehensive programs for teen parents.

"We try to provide a support system and let mothers know there are adults who care," says Dr. Doris Welcher, a clinical psychologist who heads the three-year Hopkins followup program.

"We do not advocate pregnancy or promiscuity, and we try to delay a second pregnancy," emphasizes Dr. Welcher. Ninety percent of her care-worn mothers who get pregnant again have abortions.

The girls are scared as they begin the 11-visit prenatal program. Many never had a pelvic exam and never have been hospitalized.

"Darling, we're gonna be friends," says Carrie Kearney, a community worker who listens to worries, makes home visits and holds their hands during delivery.

"You have to tell your mama you're gonna have a baby," she tells one girl, who slouches against a wall and blows smoke rings, "and we'll all pitch in."

Carolyn Smeton, a gray-haired social worker who looks like a fairy godmother, looks out at dreary faces and smiles:

"Welcome, ladies. You're going to be mothers, and it's time to prepare," she says. "Some girls are not happy to be pregnant: Maybe you have problems at home. We're here to help."

She tells them they may feel sick and cranky, that having a baby will hurt.

Now giggling, Tina asks if she can still play football.

"Well," she says, "that might be a little strenuous."

She sounds a continuing theme: "Your baby depends on you. You'd better get an education and a job so you can support your baby."

A girl meets Carol Wilson, registered nurse: efficient, practical, no-nonsense. She is the myth-dispeller who teaches child care and later will check baby, burp him and soothe him when mama can't.

"Babies don't come out cute and pink," Carol tells them. "It's not like television. It's tough, and they wake you up at night."

She gives a crash course on bottles, nipples, formulas and diapers, and basic arithmetic on getting the best buy. "Come on, Ladies," Carol urges. "Get your act together." Then comes baby. It's almost child's play:

The brightly painted waiting room is filled with children — half of them mothers, half babies. Tina and her friends are trading babies, showing them off, passing them around.

"My baby is stronger than your baby," boasts one girl. Another is playing with her baby's toy. Everyone is basking in the status of motherhood.

Tina nuzzles her sleeping doll baby. "I'm real happy," she says. "I wanted him all along."

Then the real work: followup. More medical, exams, counseling, social services and classes on child care and family planning.

People like Carrie Kearney will visit households like Tina's, which are straining at the seams because of the new arrival.

The big push now is on birth control. At each visit a girl sees a family planning specialist.

To Rosalie Street, director of followup education, falls the task of teaching a girl to become a mother. She jokes about "terminal diaper rash" and urges them, "Have fun with your baby."

"Girls are like sponges, hungry for information, and you can teach most to be good mothers," she says.

They ask difficult, emotionally-laden questions on discipline and spanking and whether a good baby is a quiet baby.

And because many mothers themselves read at only the sixth grade level, Ms. Street prepares her own materials: cartoons and simple stories about how to play with babies and why babies cry.

Always she urges, "Talk to your baby."

As the baby grows up, adolescent mothers who are themselves rebelling, must contend with rebellious 2-year-olds.

"And, oh, it is tough," says Ms. Street. "That's when baby is all over everything and gets on mama's nerves." That's when there is more verbal abuse and danger of physical abuse. Only one case of physical abuse has been suspected at the center.

Tina, now 17, no longer swollen, but frail and fretful, slings her squirming son to the floor and sinks into a chair.

"He's heavy," she declares, "and I'm tired."

He reaches up for her glasses. "Don't be so bad," she says, and pushes his hand away. He overturns her purse and her voice becomes shrill: "You get away!" She starts to raise her hand, but stops herself. Quickly, she holds him close.

"I try," Tina says, "but it's so hard. I thought I were too young, and I was."

Proposed budget open to criticism

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
 NEW YORK (AP) — Reviewing some of the government, economic and business announcements of late, you may conclude that the best efforts sometimes lead to the worst predicaments.

President Carter's announcement of a "lean and austere" budget for fiscal 1980, which begins Oct. 1, was instantly criticized as being like bacon: Open the package and you see the fat.

The President further erred in claiming his budget, which would spend $2,416.85 for every American, "is indeed fair to everyone in the nation." Millions, you may be sure, cannot be cajoled to that view.

He also left himself open to criticism from the budget-balance clique, who maintain that a $29 billion deficit at the crest of one of the longest expansions in the nation's history is inflationary.

But the budget is merely symbolic of intentions bending back to give the initiator a boomerang clout. The evidence is widespread.

Carter, for example, is said by some to be cornering himself into wage-price controls while seeking to avoid them. Fearing a clampdown, it is said, business is getting its price rises now rather than later.

The syndrome can be found everywhere.

Efforts to protect Americans through Social Security is, as many are discovering, liable to break them instead through payroll deductions.

Deregulation of airlines and other forms of transportation, long sought by many carriers as necessary to provide better service, is now claimed by some of them to threaten it instead.

Battles renewed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Congress was the brand new 96th, but the setting brought back memories of the energy battles of the 95th.

There was Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger puffing on his pipe and preparing to testify before the Senate Energy Committee chaired by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash.

Apparently no one realized what a drawing card Schlesinger was. The room was packed. Every seat was taken. Many reporters were squeezed against walls, notebooks and pens ready.

Jackson arrived and was about to start reading his opening statement when he surveyed the crowd and asked, "How many media people can't find seats?" About 20 hands shot up.

Jackson motioned some reporters to vacant seats at the committee table. Then he surveyed the room again and began directing others to seats.

"You, sit over here... And you young ones over there, move here in front of me and sit on the floor. This is just for accredited news people, you understand... You, against the wall, there's still some room up front."

Then, after asking, "Does everyone have a seat?" Jackson sat down and read his statement.

"Call me Bill... Call me Howard... Call me Max..."

Call me Birch... What do you call members of the Senate if you don't want to call them "Senator?"

Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., being new to the United States Senate wondered what to call her colleagues, so she checked with their offices.

"Does the senator have a preferred nickname?" an aide asked.

Unfortunately, the results were as lively as last year's filibuster.

Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., said, "Call me Bill."

Sen. Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn., said, "Call me Howard."

Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., "Call me Max."

and Birch Bayh, D-Ind., "Call me Birch."

The exceptions to the dull rule were Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., who likes "Fritz," Walter Huddleston, D-Ky., who uses "Dee," Henry Jackson, D-Wash., who is called "Scop" and Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., who likes "Maggie."

Some dates to watch for in 1979, if you are interested in Senate trivia.

On March 3, Sen. Milton Young, R-N.D., will have served in the Senate 33 years, 11 months and 25 days, moving him past George Aiken, now retired as senator from Vermont, into 10th place on the all-time longevity list.

15 women named to council

Fifteen Texas Panhandle women have been named to the Area Advisory Council of the Office of Programs of Women of West Texas State University, according to Lila Vars, women's advisor.

The women include Mrs. Jack R. Allen, 1821 Eton St., Perryton; Virginia Browder, Cedar Hills Ranch, Memphis; Vida Brown, Wheeler; Mrs. Tom Draper, Rural Route 3, Hereford; and Mrs. B. Raymond, Evans, 49 Travis Rd., Tulia.

Also serving are Mrs. Ples Harper, 2523 5th Ave., Canyon; Mrs. Lemore Hill, 907 Lee, Borger; Mrs. James Lovell, 822 Normandy, Dumas; Dr. Ruth Lowes, 1506 Creekmere, Canyon; and Mrs. Fred J. Neslage, 2005 Charles, Pampa.

Completing the council are Mrs. Ralph E. Randel, 400 Charles, Panhandle; Mrs. Milton Richardson, 801 W. Bedford, Dimmit; Mrs. R.L. Robertson, 124 Wayside Drive, Amarillo; Mrs. A.J. Robinson, 5302 Berget Drive, Amarillo; and Mrs. Horace E. Wilson, 1615 Bryan Place, Amarillo.

Honorary members are Mrs. Max Sherman, Amarillo; and Mrs. B.M. Sims, Wellington.

The purpose of this council will be to assess the educational needs of women throughout the Panhandle," Mrs. Vars said.

The Office of Programs for Women was officially established at West Texas State University in 1975 to help women 23 years of age or older cope with the problems of returning to school through counseling and specialized programs. The input of the council members will provide a basis for the further development of the program.

One such activity is the monthly brown bag luncheons which feature talks by university staff or faculty on topics of special interest to women returning to school. An adjunct organization of the office which is designed to promote cohesiveness and a sense of belonging is Women Involved in New Goals (WINGS). WINGS hosts the brown bag luncheons as well as other get-acquainted meetings for women.

The university's Women's Office also sponsors the WTSU Texas Panhandle Distinguished Service Awards for Women, which has honored 28 women in the last three years for their service to their community. The next awards luncheon will be April 21.

The Office of Programs for Women is also working on the establishment of a day care center at the university.

The women on the Area Advisory Council were selected for their outstanding contributions to and involvement in their communities, and will act as a liaison between their area and the university, said Jane Kerr, graduate assistant for the Women's Program.

Mental health chairmen sought

Chairmen for the May drive for mental health will be recruited around the state during the next two months. The drive will benefit the programs of the Mental Health Association.

The Mental Health Association in Texas is a voluntary organization dedicated to promoting mental health while working on behalf of the mentally ill and their families.

Members monitor existing mental health services and seek needed services.

The organization's entire support must come from contributions, such as those collected in the May drive.

Nuclear training open to women

ALBUQUERQUE — The Nuclear Field program, previously limited to only male enlistees, is now open to qualified women recruits. This expansion is part of the Navy's process to integrate women into all possible aspects of the Navy's mission. In addition, it provides a partial solution to the problem of decreasing numbers of qualified male personnel needed to fill the Navy's nuclear program requirements.

Enlistment criteria for women applicants will remain the same as those qualifications required for males. Women who successfully complete nuclear field training may be assigned to nuclear support billets on destroyer tenders and submarine tenders, at submarine support facilities (shore-based only), to nuclear instructor duty, or to billets as nuclear operators on nuclear ships which are not normally expected to become involved in combat operations.

The Navy ratings that are open to women in the Nuclear Field are: ET (Electronic Technician); EM (Electrician's Mate); IC (Interior Communications Electrician). The nuclear power candidate will attend the appropriate basic Class "A" school. School lengths vary from six to 27 weeks, depending on rating specialty. The curricula are basic to the ratings and not specialized for nuclear power. After completion of this basic rate training (must be in upper two-thirds of class), graduates proceed to nuclear power training.

Such training consists of three courses: (1) Nuclear Power Fundamentals is a six-week course at Orlando, Florida, designed to prepare the student for more intense training to follow. (2) Next is the 24-week Basic Nuclear Power Course, also at Orlando, which covers reactor principles, physics, radiological fundamentals, heat transfer and fluid flow, chemistry, and other NF-unique studies. (3) Finally, the candidate attends one of three Nuclear Power Training Units in the U.S. for 26 weeks of training as a nuclear propulsion plant operator on a land-based prototype reactor plant.

There are three Nuclear Power Training Units located in the United States at West Milton, N.Y.; Windsor, Conn. and Idaho Falls, Idaho.

Farming improved

Three farmers and ranchers in the Gray County Soil and Water Conservation District have completed Great Plains Conservation contracts, according to Vane O. Campbell, range conservationist of the Pampa Soil Conservation Service.

"The contracts have not only enabled the farmers and ranchers to draw cost-share assistance to apply needed conservation practices, but it has helped to improve the environment we live in by stopping wind and water erosion."

The contracts that have expired were on Randy T. Stalls, Arthur J. Rhode, and Roman J. Friemel.

The conservation practices applied include 327 acres of pasture planting, 11,944 feet of cross fence, 5,502 feet of livestock pipeline, three water storage facilities, one pond, and one diversion 1,300 feet long. Also, management practices were applied to the entire farms and ranches to help improve the overall operations.

There are also additional conservation practices available for cost-share assistance under the Great Plains Conservation Program.

The program is voluntary. Its core is a complete resource conservation plan for the farm or ranch. The plan is based on the needs of the land and the desires of the individual land owner.

"Since the Great Plains Conservation Program has been in effect in Gray County, there have been 301 applications made for participation in the program," Campbell added.

There have been 209 farmers and ranchers that have gone into contracts on 274,444 acres.

Your local Soil Conservation Service Representative or a number of your local Board of Soil and Water Conservation District Directors will provide further information on the program.

Seniors' group formed

A Perryton Chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) has been formed. J. Leonard Johnson, national AARP president, has announced.

Mr. Johnson offered congratulations on behalf of the eleven million member organization to the new chapter (No. 3128) and its president, Earl Waide of 718 S.W. 15th Street, Perryton.

Local AARP chapters sponsor community public service programs, work to influence the enactment of local, state and federal legislation; and acquaint members and other older citizens with the programs and services offered by the national organization.

Founded in 1958, AARP is the nation's largest organization dedicated to helping older citizens achieve retirement lives of purpose, dignity and independence.

The association encourages older Americans to remain active in community and public affairs, provides legislative representation at all levels of government, and sponsors services to help them stretch retirement incomes. It also publishes magazines and other materials of special interest to older readers.

FOCUS

Protecting the Forests
During the first century of our nation's history, America's forests seemed so enormous that many people believed the country would never run out of trees. It wasn't until 1891 that President Benjamin Harrison created the first forest reserves, to protect some wooded areas from fires and unwise logging methods. President Theodore Roosevelt placed more than 125 million acres in the national forest system, and helped set up the U.S. Forest Service in 1905. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland recently announced a proposal which could double the nation's wilderness system, and affect the future use of 62 million acres of forests. Bergland expects Congress to consider the proposals later this year.

Pampa, Stout delight green towel crowd

By JOE BLOBAUM
Pampa News Sports Editor

Steve Stout tossed in 18 points — including an 8-for-9 performance from the free-throw line — in the second half to lead the Pampa Harvesters to a 53-44 District 3-AAAA victory over Amarillo High Tuesday night before a towel-twirling mob of PHS students at Harvester Field House.

The students, who were admitted to the game for 50 cents if accompanied by a green towel, had plenty of opportunity to wave their school colors in the second half, when Pampa put the clamps on the Sandies' offense.

"It saved us," Coach Gary Abercrombie said of the largest home crowd this year. "They rattled Amarillo High and it really gave us a home court advantage. It was a big help."

So was Stout, who led a second-half charge that saw the Harvesters erase a 24-19 halftime deficit by scoring the first 12 points of the third quarter. The Pampa center scored eight of those points by hitting two layups and a pair of 15-foot jumpers.

But it was his accuracy at the free-throw line that ultimately swung the pendulum in Pampa's favor. Stout connected on 10 of 12 attempts from the charity stripe, while his counterpart Kevin Wagner of AHS hit just five of 12.

In fact, it was free throws that won the game for the Harvesters, who have been improving on their free-throw percentage the last two weeks. Pampa sank 17 of 25 attempts, while the Sandies were a cold 10-for-24 from the line.

"I guess you're supposed to say something positive after a win, but I don't know," Abercrombie said of the game that got ragged on both ends of the court in the final quarter.

"It beats getting beat, but I'd like to see us have some poise down the stretch. Stout hit some big free throws, anyway."

At least the Harvesters had the poise — and the guts — to come back after shooting a horrid two-for-13 from the field in the second quarter.

Down 13-12 after the first period, Pampa was outscored 11-7 in the second period, thanks mainly to Wagner's one-for-four shooting at the free-throw line. Two of his misses were on the front end of one-and-one situations, and they helped keep Pampa close enough to catch the Sandies.

And that's exactly what the Harvesters did. Pampa canned eight of 13 field goal attempts in the third quarter and held the Sandies scoreless until Jeff Helton sank a 10-footer with 5:35 gone in the half.

Fittingly, it was one of Stout's 15-foot efforts that put the Harvesters on top for good (25-24) with six minutes to play in the third period. He added six free throws (in as many attempts) in the final stanza while Darrell Hughes was adding a pair of layups to ice the win.

Stout's 10 rebounds were also high for the Harvesters, who beat Amarillo 39-36 on the battle for the boards. But the Harvesters committed 23 turnovers to 17 for the Sandies, and many came in the final moments of play.

Fortunately for Pampa, AHS played just as badly and allowed the Harvesters to reach the 500 mark (12-12) for the first time since Nov. 25, when they were 1-1.

Pampa's junior varsity lost a 55-43 decision in a game that could have been mistaken for a parade to the free-throw line. Forty-five fouls were called and a total of 61 free throws were shot, although just 34 of them were made.

Darrell Johnson hit 12 points to lead the Shockers, while Aaron Cunningham had 17 points, five fouls and a technical foul to lead the Sandie JV.

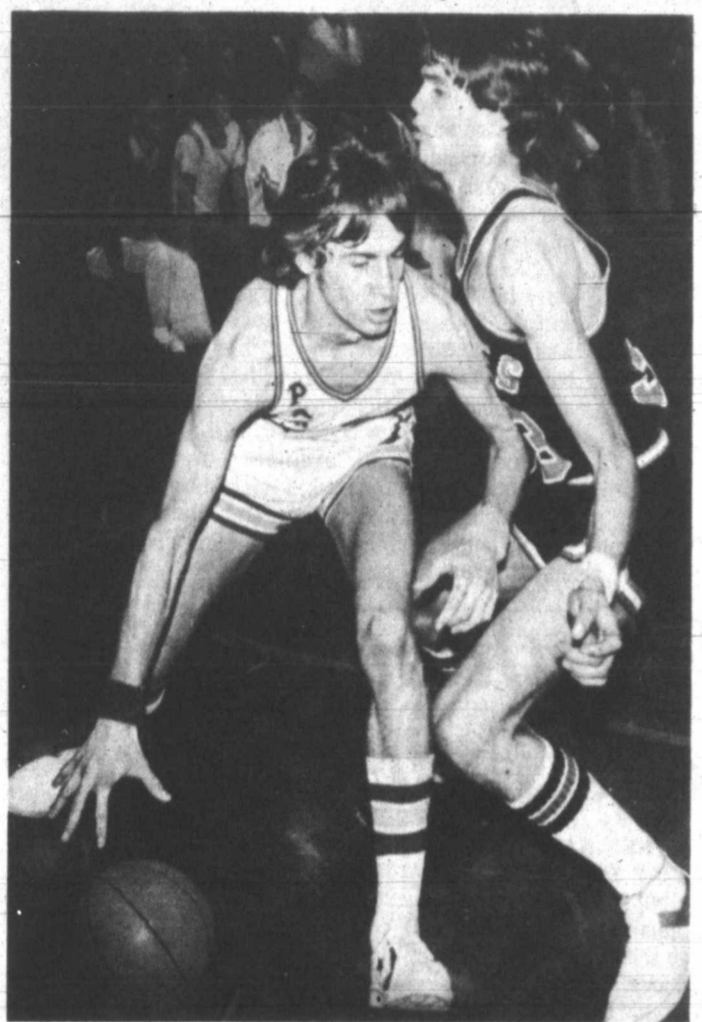

Pampa, which ended its first-half district slate with a 3-1 mark, will take a break from the district wars by traveling to Plainview Friday night. Sophomore and junior varsity games are also scheduled.

Sandie girls stop Pampa

AMARILLO — The Pampa High girls basketball team lost a foul-filled 61-45 game to Amarillo High here last night in a District 3-AAAA battle.

Pampa stayed close to Amarillo in the first quarter 12-12, but dominated in the personal foul department. The Sandies attempted eight — and sank three — free throws during the first eight minutes of play while the Harvesters shot none.

Harvesters Kellye Richardson and Becky Davis led off the team's scoring in the first period with two consecutive field goals which were answered by Amarillo's Marcey Dale.

Pampa added four more points when Pat Coats tossed in a five-footer and Susan Mitchell connected from the free-throw line.

Dale, who was Amarillo's high scorer with 21 points, backboarded a short shot to bring the Sandies within two points of the Harvesters.

Another basket was thrown in for Pampa by Richardson, and again the Amarillo girls held on by Doris Henke's two free throws, ending the first quarter of play.

In the second quarter, both teams rushed against full-court presses, resulting in a large number of free-throws for both teams.

The Harvesters made four of 10 free throws, but the Sandies had more chances when the Harvesters had accumulated 10 team fouls early in the quarter and sank 11 of 19.

The press also forced both teams to throw away several passes. Richardson made a couple of steals, one of which was followed up by Coats' quick jumper.

Amarillo's Doris Henke scored four points in the last confusion-filled minute of the first half, and Davis tossed in a three-footer to keep Pampa within 10 points. Still, Amarillo held a 32-22 lead at the intermission.

The second half kept the pace set by the presses, and Pampa made seven of 10 free throws. The Sandies had received less chances at the line during the last half, making 5 of 8.

Richardson, who was Pampa's high scorer with 12 points, had three second-half field goals before she fouled out early in the fourth quarter. Mitchell followed Richardson to the bench to leave the Harvesters two starters short.

During the closing minutes, Pampa's Davis threw in two fast buckets and swiped a couple of passes to keep Pampa within shooting distance of Amarillo.

Pampa Coach Mary Thomas said that her girls worked hard, rebounding well and forcing 23 interceptions. However, she said the girls are experiencing pressures from their first district games.

The junior varsity girls fell to Amarillo 52-34. Assistant Coach Bedkey said the girls failed to hit a good percentage of their shots. Terri Tyrrell reaped the high point honors 10 points, while Joni Hale added six.

The Harvesters will host powerful Plainview in a non-district game Friday night at 7:45, with a JV game slated for 6. Pampa has lost to Plainview twice already this season.

Fairbanks' dispute spreading

BOSTON (AP) — Fallout is spreading in the dispute over Chuck Fairbanks' coaching contract.

The New England Patriots' coach currently is in Los Angeles, where he is preparing the American Football Conference squad of all-stars for next Monday night's Pro Bowl.

Patriots owner William H. Sullivan Jr. will be in Los Angeles for the Pro Bowl, along with other parties in the dispute.

Sullivan's son Chuck, a lawyer and team vice president, said Tuesday a settlement in the case was discussed with University of Colorado officials last week, but proved fruitless.

Fairbanks is seeking to escape from his $150,000 per year Patriots contract.

Say hey! Willie in Hall

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "If" is a word that Willie Mays said he disdains.

But when pressed about what he thought he would be worth on today's ballooning baseball market, he was 30 years old and a free agent, the newest member of the Hall of Fame said Tuesday. "I could make $8 million."

The usually extroverted, cocky Mays was being somewhat conservative, at least according to Monte Irvin, his former teammate in the black leagues and with the New York Giants.

"On today's market, he would be worth $10 million easily," Irvin said, adding that the day of the $1 million per season player was "not far off." At present, the highest paid player in the majors is Pete Rose, who recently signed an $800,000 per year contract with the Philadelphia Phillies.

Mays, however, had no reservations about his abilities, discussing them freely after being only the ninth player voted into the baseball shrine in his first year of eligibility, exclusive of those inducted during the initial balloting in 1936.

The "Say Hey Kid" received 409 votes of a possible 432 cast by 10-year members of the Baseball Writers Association of America. The 94.6 percentage of the votes was the highest total since Ty Cobb garnered 98.2 when the voting was inaugurated 43 years ago.

Babe Ruth and Honus Wagner, each with 95.1 percent of the vote, were the only others to receive a higher percentage than the fun-loving, happy-go-lucky Mays, who spent a total of 22 mostly glorious years with the Giants — both in New York and San Francisco — and the New York Mets, for whom he now coaches.

"I always knew I would be in the Hall of Fame," Mays said bluntly and without any hesitation.

"I thought I was the best baseball player I ever saw," continued the 47-year-old Mays, now also firmly entrenched in the business world. "Nobody in the world could do what I could do."

"I hope I'm not saying anything wrong," he continued. "If you play ball, you have to believe you are the best."

Mays might get some argument about being the best, but there is no questioning that he was one of the best.

His Hall of Fame credentials are impeccable — 606 home runs, third highest total in baseball history; four-time National League home run champion; a .302 lifetime batting average; a two-time Most Valuable Player Award winner; National League Rookie of the Year in 1951; a powerful and accurate throwing arm, and daring on the bases that frightened and harassed the opposition.

But Mays didn't concern himself primarily with statistics or awards.

He played baseball because he loved it.

"I hope it doesn't sound too corny," he said. "To me, love means dedication and sacrifice. You have to love the game."

"I loved every moment of it. I didn't play for myself. I played for the people who came to the games, so they could go home and say they had enjoyed themselves."

Mays also said that during his last three years with the Mets, "I got paid about $150,000 or $160,000, not knowing I could play a whole season. I didn't come here (to New York) to play baseball. I was 42...or 41...or 40. It was a love affair."

Asked to summarize his career, Mays said, "One word — love. I had to sacrifice a bad marriage to play baseball and a good marriage to play baseball. My wife pushed me to play baseball (with the Mets)."

Mays called his last three years "my worst years."

But he added, "I want to commend the Mets...Mrs.

Joan Payson and Mr. (M. Donald) Grant — they said, 'Hey, we gotta take care of this kid.'"

"I want to apologize to the Mets," continued Mays. "I really don't think I really gave them what I should have given them."

His Mets career aside, Mays was an outstanding player.

"You could see the way he caught the ball, the way he threw it, the way he hit it, he would be a star," said Irvin, now a member of the baseball commissioner's office and Mays' roommate friend on the Giants. "He was so strong, so youthful, had that beautiful body."

"It was easy to recognize that he had all the natural movements of a great baseball player."

Duke Snider, the ex-Brooklyn Dodgers' center fielder who finished second in the Hall of Fame balloting, was not surprised that his contemporary had been elected, but he was disappointed that he did not receive the 324 required for enshrinement.

"Willie really more or less deserves to be in himself," Snider said from his Fallbrook, Calif., home after collecting 308 votes — 16 short of election.

This was Snider's 10th year on the ballot. He has five more chances to make it.

For Enos Slaughter, however, his chance to get elected by the BBWAA ended in bitterness after 15 failures.

"I feel I deserve to be in the Hall," Slaughter said from his Roxboro, N.C., home after finishing third with 297 votes. "I really feel bad and a little hurt. I was in St. Louis not long ago and spoke to some baseball writers. They told me they all thought I had a good chance, but that it was going to be close."

"Just look at my records," said Slaughter, the former St. Louis Cardinals' standout. "My credentials are in the book. I think Mays deserves to be inducted into the Hall of Fame. But look at the voting. Snider finished ahead of me and all he did was hit home runs."

Does warm up for win

The girls basketball teams from Shamrock and White Deer had a tough time deciding who was going to win — or even score first — Tuesday night at White Deer, but the Does eventually warmed up enough to take a 38-27 decision.

Both teams went scoreless in the first period, but the Irish girls grabbed a 12-10 lead at halftime before the Does caught fire behind Della Satterwhite's 10 points. Sindy Hensley had nine for Shamrock.

In the boys game, Eddie Lick poured in 18 points to lead White Deer to a 55-45 victory. Carl Bennett had 11 for the Irish.

Debra Rankin kept up her hot shooting with a 27-point effort for Phillips as the Blackhawk girls scored a 61-42 triumph over Stinnett. Dena Hart had 18 in a losing effort.

The Rattlers gained revenge in the boys contest with a 54-43 decision. Rick Goodwin's 15 points led the winners, while Phillips' Joe Lemley took game honors with 20 in a 61-37 romp over McLean's boys. Joy Rhine had 11 for McLean in the girls game, while Randy Suggs had 16 in the boys contest.

had 11 for the girls in a 38-31 triumph Cynthia Maddox (12) and Keith Horn and Kevin Meeke (14 apiece) were Briscoe's scoring leaders.

Micah Lewis' 12 points led a balanced Canadian scoring attack as the Wildcats downed Spearman 51-47 at Canadian. Zane Newton had 18 points in a losing effort. Spearman's girls rode Stacy Ketch's 28 points to a 58-31 decision over the Wildkittens, despite Alicia Hobdy's 18 points.

Connie Crowell and Steve Britten paced Groom to a pair of wins over McLean in Groom's gym. Crowell hit 18 in a 55-36 game, while Britten took game honors with 20 in a 61-37 romp over McLean's boys. Joy Rhine had 11 for McLean in the girls game, while Randy Suggs had 16 in the boys contest. Kenneth Keys' 28 points weren't enough to keep Allison from absorbing a 49-40 loss at the hands of Mobeetie. The Hornets, meanwhile, got 18 points from Dean Hathaway. Allison's girls, however, beat Mobeetie 53-44 as Becky Cornell accounted for 25 points. Cheryl Estes had 16 for Mobeetie.

At Lefors, Floyd Cotnam scored 17 points to lead the Pirates to a 57-40 win over Claude. Wess Stockett had 11 for the Mustangs. Claude's girls recorded a 48-22 win over the Pirate girls behind Christie Webb's 18 points. Jonetta Dunn had seven for Lefors.

Miami used its home court to take Booker twice. The Warriors rode Randy Daugherty's 19 points to a 67-62 triumph, while the girls got 20 from Debbie Bass in a 67-53 win. Jay Barton (19) and Brenda Pennington (15) were the leading scorers for Booker.

KURT LOWRY of Pampa won't be telling a fish story when he talks about the one that got away. Bowling in last week's Thursday night Mixed League at Harvester Lane, Lowry left this 10 pin standing in the tenth frame and wound up with a 299 game.

Worthen calmly sets new record

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Big numbers are Sam Worthen's game, so it means little to him to shoot down an important Marquette basketball record.

"It's no big thing," he said after recording a school-record 14 assists during Tuesday night's 75-60 basketball victory over Oral Roberts. "I've had games with more assists in the open leagues in summers back home."

The commanding performance broke the school's single-game assist record set by Jim Boylan against Butler last March.

"I knew the record was coming sooner or later, if not this year, then next year," said the unexcitable Worthen, a 6-foot-5 transfer from McLennan Community College in Waco, Tex. "I know how I play and I know my game. This is a team thing here."

"With the type of team we have, three or four others have the kind of talent to set a record. It's just that everybody has a different role. Mine is to set up everybody for shots."

If Worthen seemed insouciant about his spectacular show,

Bernard Toone wasn't. After scoring 24 points for the 13th-ranked Warriors, several of them courtesy of Worthen's terrific passes, Toone insisted that his capable teammate is a combination of last year's backcourt tandem of Boylan and Butch Lee.

"Sam can take over and get the important basket," said Toone. "Then again, he can penetrate, draw a man to him and make a perfect pass to the open man. If he keeps playing like this, there are some good things ahead for us."

Two other ranked teams were in action Tuesday night and both of them won — No. 11 Georgetown beating St. Francis (Pa.) 74-62 and No. 20 North Carolina State routing East Carolina 104-88.

Worthen had 15 points in a splendid all-around effort as the Warriors won their 14th game in 16 this season. Marquette put the game away by outscoring Oral Roberts 15-1 at the start of the second half to take a 51-25 lead.

John Duren scored 17 points and Craig Shelton had 16 to lead Georgetown over St. Francis.

Oilers extend Bum's contract

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers owner K.S. "Bud" Adams has decided he likes Bum Phillips' folksy brand of humor — and his football coaching.

Phillips, who led the Oilers to a 10-6 regular season record, silenced rumors that he might not return next season as Oiler coach and general manager by signing a three-year contract Tuesday.

An Oiler spokesman said the entire Oiler coaching staff also had been offered contracts.

Phillips, whose easy-going style helped the Oilers advance to the American Football Conference championship game last season, said in late November he had not been offered a new contract and apparently was "playing out my option."

Adams spiced rumors about Phillips' departure by declining to discuss the coach's status, saying only he would talk to Phillips at the end of the season.

Then last Saturday, it was rumored Phillips would be among those considered for the New England head coaching job if Chuck Fairbanks doesn't return next season.

Phillips was out of town Tuesday but was expected to return today.

Bradshaw, Staubach to meet again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Terry Bradshaw, fresh from helping Pittsburgh prove it's the best football team on the planet, says flatly that he believes the American Conference is better than the National Conference.

Dallas' Roger Staubach, ever the diplomat, politely disagrees.

Those two — the players who made Super Bowl XIII super — figure to be influential in resolving the debate at the Coliseum next Monday night as the National Football League's longest season ends with the Pro Bowl.

Bradshaw, who led the Steelers to a 35-31 Super Bowl victory over the Cowboys, will be the starting quarterback for the AFC and Staubach will be at the helm of the NFC team.

"I think the AFC is the better conference because it's more exciting," Bradshaw said Tuesday as Pro Bowl preparations began. "I think the AFC teams are a little more open. Maybe it's a carryover from the old American Football League.

"But that's not to say there aren't exciting teams in the NFC," Bradshaw continued. "Dallas, New Orleans, Atlanta and other NFC teams play a pretty open style of game."

"I don't think you can say one conference is better, or more exciting," said Staubach. "Certain teams in the AFC are more exciting than others, and the same goes in the NFC."

"I think the total results of games played between the two conferences are pretty close, and I know we (the Cowboys) have an outstanding record against AFC teams."

Each conference owns four Pro Bowl victories, and Bradshaw and Staubach agreed that an AFC-AFC rivalry has developed.

"I think the players feel pride for their conference," Bradshaw said. "We certainly want to win Monday night."

Ford not in gear for 1980

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — While prospective Republican presidential candidates gear up for 1980, former President Gerald Ford appears to be moving in the opposite direction.

Ford has told veterans of his 1976 campaign staff to go to work for other candidates if they choose. Two key men from the old Ford organization have signed on with George Bush, former United Nations ambassador and U.S. envoy to China.

James Baker, the Houston lawyer who managed Ford's campaign last time, now is managing Bush's emerging 1980 White House campaign. And Robert Visser, counsel to the President Ford Committee in 1976, is treasurer of the Bush organization.

Both men said they went to Ford first and were told to go ahead and sign on with another candidate.

"He not only didn't discourage me from doing it," Baker said, "he encouraged me to do it."

Ford has said he is keeping his options open and is not going to endorse any other candidate before 1980 convention time.

"I guess it stands to reason that he would be available or would undertake a race himself if nobody came out of the early primaries, if it was just a confused mess," Baker said.

In that event, former Ford partisans in Bush's camp might be free to return to the fold. But with as many as 40 primaries expected in 1980 and candidates locking up convention delegates in each one, there would not be much left for a late entry.

Another signal from Ford is the quiet conversion of his old campaign committee into a political action committee. This is no more than Ronald Reagan, Ford's 1976 nomination rival, did. The difference is the timing.

Two years ago Reagan took the money left over from his campaign and founded Citizens for the Republic, a multipurpose committee that has helped some Republican candidates and financed Reagan's own travels while he was between campaigns.

Now Reagan is on the verge of bowing out of Citizens for the Republic and forming a new campaign committee. He cannot reclaim the $1.5 million he put into it or the other millions raised since, but he has made good use of it already, moving around the country making friends in the right places and staying in the public eye.

But Ford is giving up potential campaign funds to a general purpose committee at the time other possible candidates are beginning to stuff their war chests.

Ford already had given $1 million to the Republican National Committee from his left-over 1976 committee, and Federal Election Commission records show the President Ford Committee has raised $249,334 since it converted to a political action committee.

The ex-president could have used this money to run in 1980, but he cannot reclaim it now.

So, in terms of money and staff he will have to start from scratch with a new presidential campaign, if he starts at all.

Records set

LUBBOCK — The right bait at the right time plus good growing conditions for Texas fish have produced six new records this year according to the Texas State Fish Record Committee of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

The striped bass record has been broken twice since Jan. 6th with the current 32 lb. 12 oz. fish caught from Lake Texoma on Nov. 20.

The new hybrid white-striped bass record is 11 lbs. 6 1/2 ozs. and was caught April 2 at Lake Nasworthy near San Angelo.

A 66 lb. blue catfish holds the present record after being submitted to the record committee last spring.

A Wichita Falls man caught a 31 lb. freshwater drum at Lake Arrowhead on May 4 breaking the old record by near 6 lbs.

A record redear sunfish weighting 3 lbs. 4 ozs. was landed by a Seguin angler at a Guadalupe county farm pond on April 23, and a Borger angler caught a 10 lb. 14 oz. walleye from Lake Meredith on April 12th.

Texas anglers catching large fish should first have them weighted before filleting the fish for supper.
