Fanfare, protesters greet China's head

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter welcomed Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping to the White House today with the promise of "a common journey" as they began talks on bolstering the new relationship between the United States and China.

"On behalf of the people of my country, I welcome you, Mr. Vice-Premier," Carter said under windy, overcast skies during the ceremony on the White House South Lawn, which was twice disrupted by anti-Teng demonstrators. "Today we take another step in the historic normalization of relations. We share in the hope which springs from reconciliation and the anticipation of a common journey," the president said. Teng, reading his speech in Chinese, responded that "We share the sense of being on an historic mission Sino-U.S. relations are at a new beginning and the world is at a new turning point."

Teng warned that "the factors making for war are visibly growing" in the world. He and Carter both expressed hope that normal relations between their two countries would help preserve world peace. The ceremonies were disrupted twice, first by a woman protester who began screaming at Teng, "Teng Hsiao-ping, you are a murderer or a traitor!" She was dragged away by police. Moments later, a man standing among the reporters, 15 feet in front of the president and Teng, shouted "Traitor!" "Down with Teng Hsiao-ping!" and "You cannot make this a garden party!"

WITH THE BLOOD and brains of a slain friend in his hands, a demonstrator decries the death, one of almost 30 reported, after troops fired into the air over government protesters in Tehran, Iran Sunday. Troops fired machine guns into rioters armed with firebombs in the capital city's worst violence in months. There were 300 people reportedly wounded. (See related story on page 4)

West Texas group faces deportation

SEMINOLE, Texas (AP) — Visions of a farm-based religious community vanished in the West Texas dust for a group of 550 Mennonite immigrants now faced also with imminent deportation. They came from Canada and Mexico with the dream of establishing themselves on the 6,400-acre tract they bought near this West Texas town. But the land failed to yield the abundance they anticipated, so most abandoned the land in search of work in town or on area farms. Special congressional action prevented deportation shortly after the reclusive Christian sect arrived in 1977 without proper visas. But that action was temporary and time is running out. The disillusioned farmers have only until Feb. 1 to win approval for permanent residence. And their prospects for meeting the deadline look dismal, said Williams Chambers, regional director of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service. The Mennonites applied for permanent residence on the basis of expected jobs with Seminole-Mennonite Enterprises, Inc., which was to be busily building windmill-powered electric generators by now, providing work for half the Mennonite families. But government investigators visited SME, Inc., recently and found a cavernous building with almost no activity inside. "The company simply is not in a position to hire them as it was expected to do," Chambers said. "Naturally, it's a disappointment for us to see them looking for this to transpire, and so were we." If the Mennonites are unable to qualify for permanent residence, then they'll eventually have to leave the country, Chambers said. All but 25 of the 118 family heads and single adults have managed to find jobs which they hope will qualify them for permanent resident status.

Group nears capital

WYTHEVILLE, Va. (AP) — More than 900 persons and almost 400 tractors and campers were set to move out today as one of the nine caravans headed toward Washington to put in their bid with Congress for larger benefits for the farmers. Members of this tractorcade, which started Jan. 15 in Amarillo, Texas, are scheduled to stop tonight in Roanoke, then move on to Augusta County before making the final push to the nation's capital. It's the second trip in two years sponsored by the American Agricultural Movement, which hopes to have a caravan up to 16 miles long when all are joined together. This particular group picked up participants from adjoining states as it made its way through Arkansas and Tennessee before arriving here Saturday for a weekend that included snow. "We probably started with a selfish motive, to save our farms. But now we've developed into a group of people dedicated to saving our nation's economy as well as its farms," said AAM President Gerald McCathern. The group is upset over farm prices and the low parity prices they are receiving for their goods. Parity is the relationship of the cost of farm products to other products on the market. "In 1948, corn brought $2.29 a bushel. Today it is bringing only $2.25. Also in 1948, wheat was bringing 21 cents more a bushel and milo was up $1.13 cents from what I can get for it today," McCathern said.

"At the same time, my fuel prices have risen from 12 cents a gallon to almost 60 cents. Not only has the cost of gasoline and other fuels risen, but farm machinery, fertilizers, seed and personal items have skyrocketed," he added. McCathern said as many as four times more protesters are flying to Washington to meet the group when their machines arrive sometime Friday. The group hopes to persuade government officials to implement the full provisions of the 1977 farm bill passed by Congress, especially raising the loan rate for agricultural commodities to levels equal to 90 percent parity, said Russell Rowland of Poplar Bluff, Mo. Last year's tractorcade included threats to withhold agricultural production

Memphis man held in robbery
A Memphis man is being held in Gray County Jail under $50,000 bond after being charged Sunday with the armed robbery of a Pampa Allsup's store. Donald Ray Mason, 23, was apprehended at a southside bar shortly before 1 a.m. Sunday, after allegedly taking an undisclosed amount of cash at gunpoint from an employee at Allsup's on Wilks and Faulkner streets. The suspect was identified at the scene of the arrest by the Allsup's attendant and all cash was recovered, according to police reports. Police reported no injuries during the incident.

City officials subpoenaed
City officials have been issued subpoenas to appear in the court trying a suit filed by a Pampa woman against Southwestern Public Service Co. (SPS). City Manager Mack Wofford will appear Thursday in 47th District Court in Amarillo in behalf of the plaintiff, Judith E. Becker. Mrs. Becker's husband, Jack, was electrocuted July 6, 1975 while trimming trees at a home at 1308 Duncan. Wofford has been requested to present a copy of the city's franchise with SPS for the July 1975 period, along with copies of any written directives by the city regarding the placement of power lines in the alley behind the 1300 block of Duncan. City Secretary S.M. Chittenden and City Engineer Charles Smith have also been asked to appear at the trial, Wofford said.

Discrimination charged

Sears, Roebuck and Co. charging that government regulations are hindering rather than helping employment opportunities for minorities and women, has filed a sweeping class action suit against 10 federal agencies. Named as defendants in the unique suit are the attorney general, secretary of Labor, chairman of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, secretary of Commerce, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, secretary of Housing and Urban Development, the Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs, the Office of Federal Statistical Policy and

Standards Bureau of the Census and Federal Agency Council on the 1980 Census. The suit was filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court in Washington by Charles Morgan Jr., who is representing Sears. The class involved in the suit includes Sears and all other general merchandise retailers with more than 15 employees. According to the suit, the federal agencies are trying to hold private employers liable for a workforce, caused by government actions, in which white males are dominant. The suit charges that this unbalanced workforce was created through the GI Bill of Rights, veterans preference laws, the selective service system, restrictions on the number of women and blacks in the armed forces and the types of military assignments and vocational and other educational programs available to them. According to the suit, the federal agencies have also failed to enforce civil rights laws and have violated anti-discrimination provisions themselves, while creating conflicting requirements which result in discrimination against all employees. Sears has had a formal affirmative action program since 1968. The company contends its voluntary program, entitled Mandatory Achievement of Goals Plan, implemented in 1974, is more flexible and effective than government equal opportunity employment practices, which Sears says are contradictory and confusing. For example, the company says the 1978 amendment to the Age Discrimination in Employment Act further restricts job opportunities for women and minorities. The Sears suit seeks court orders that would prohibit enforcement of that amendment among other things.

Matson in Hall of Fame

AMARILLO — Showing "that special touch of class," that Pampa attorney Malcolm Douglass had mentioned moments earlier, a humble Randy Matson was installed as the 49th member of the Panhandle Sports Hall of Fame in ceremonies here Sunday. Matson, winner of gold and silver medals in Olympic shot put competition, said he always thought of himself as representing Pampa and West Texas. "I should be very thankful to the Lord for allowing me to be raised in this area," he said. Matson admitted his interest in track was something of "a miracle." "In Pampa, you're brought up to believe in football, basketball and hating the Amarillo Sandies," he said, after a standing ovation by the 500 people in attendance brought him to the speaker's podium. "Some records — like the world record and Olympic medal — are short lived, but this award will mean a lot to me for many years. It will have a special place in my heart," said Matson, who is already a member of the Texas Sports Hall of Fame and the Texas A&M Athletic Hall of Fame. Douglass, a close friend of Matson's for 20 years, called him "the most unique individual I've ever known" during his remarks before Matson's installation. "If you've ever been associated with a world class athlete, you'd know the pressure they're constantly under," Douglass said. "Randy Matson's come through it with the great sense of humility he had at Pampa High School." Matson graduated from

Pampa High in 1963 after an illustrious sports career. While the Harvesters enjoyed little football success during Matson's career, he garnered the state shot put and discus titles in track his junior and senior year. A three-sport letterman, Matson still holds the all-time rebounding record for Pampa basketball and is the fourth leading scorer in Harvester basketball history. He was 19 years old when he won the silver medal in the 1964 Olympic Games in Tokyo. He came back four years later to take the gold medal at Mexico City. In between, he was the 1967 winner of the James E. Sullivan Award, given to the top amateur athlete in America. Matson said he owed a debt of gratitude to Douglass, who "hand-carried me to A&M in 1963 and ran off and left me where I couldn't come back." Matson went on to win

Pope to talk to Mexican Indians

By ISAAC A. LEVI
Associated Press Writer
MEXICO CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II speaks to Mexico's Indians today after cautioning his priests in Latin America to keep the Roman Catholic Church out of politics and seek social justice by spiritual means. The pontiff was scheduled to speech, the pope paused to visit children in one of the city's charity hospitals. The pontiff walked through the wards, dispensing blessings to children and infants. He was accompanied by Mexico's leading comic, Mario Moreno, better known under his stage name "Cantinflas." The pontiff was scheduled to helicopter to the Mexico City airport, where he was to board a jet for the flight to Oaxaca, about 350 miles south of the capital. Opening a bishops' conference in Puebla that will chart the course of the church in Latin America for the next decade, the 58-year-old pontiff on Sunday rebuffed militant progressives advocating a "theology of liberation" and criticized those who see Jesus "as a political figure." Reading in Spanish, he told the third decennial conference of Latin American bishops their meeting was "not a symposium of experts, not a parliament of politicians, not a congress of scientists or technologists."

US payroll

Even a more fun game than the $600 chocolate monopoly set by Neiman - Marcus is the Civil Service Ghost Ruse.

For the uninitiated, the ghost ruse game is one of counting federal heads, or more properly, the number of people who actually receive a salary from Ma Guvmint.

Not counting the military, federal government statistics put the number at 2.9 million people in the civilian work force. The real number is more than double that - seven million.

The government plays the game from the standpoint known as "the gray area." The taxpayers still pay all the money that is paid out. Their fun is trying to find out how many people are getting it.

The past two years have seen great efforts by federal and state government to keep such tax-fed names confidential, such as those on food stamps, which has included strikers, teachers in summer and college students at even the most expensive schools.

As one government man put it, when it comes to talking about the civilian payroll, "The pressure is to keep the number as low as possible." The "gray area," is that limbo where those who work for the government are not counted, and includes hundreds of thousands of employees working for government - created agencies, or in government - mandated programs; numbers working in programs with grants, and people in "make - work" programs like CETA or Manpower.

Our heartfelt congratulations goes to United Press International, which had some guys who didn't really think the government was telling all when it set the work force at an "official" 2.9 million. UPI began surveying about a dozen federal agencies and found out that many "ghost" civil servants are not counted by the Civil Service Commission because of the flimsy definition Congress has applied.

Consequently, not counted are, for example, the Legal Services Corporation whose 4,795 attorneys and 241 administrative personnel provide "free" legal services to the poor. Nor are the 20,000 workers of the National Rail Passenger Corporation which runs the federal railroad conglomerate known as Amtrak.

The ghost game also reveals astonishing things. For instance, the U.S. Army has been called the fourth largest in the world. But actually it's fifth, because the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) is fourth with over 1.1 million people paid in full or in part with federal money.

Mr. Joseph Califano - who wants to be Mother to us all - fessed up to UPI that there are "84,600 in state government, 87,700 people in universities, 33,400 people in nonprofit research institutions, 113,900 employees in private contractors, and 88,900 in other areas."

For your rush copy of the game, send your W-2 withholding form, a pint of American blood, and one bushel of fringe benefits to... Sorry, we couldn't find the ghost on the federal payroll who's in charge of the game plan.

Red China trade -but who pays?

By SAM CAMPBELL

In striving to estimate trade potential with Red China, the Pacific Basin export-import dealer will find three fundamentals helpful.

These are: (a) food supplies, (b) the particularity of contradiction, (c) the U.S. Congress.

First, no country can expect to progress industrially until it has developed either an agricultural base of its own or is able to tap the food supplies of other countries. Pre-Mao, famine was an old and recurring story on the vast Asiatic mainland. Many observers in the country supposed that the Red regime finally got a handle on the problem. Yet, in 1976, the magazine World View reported that starvation and malnutrition-related diseases had claimed 50 million Chinese lives in the 1960-62 span. The magazine is published by the Council on Religion and International Affairs. The editorial board is comprised of leading academic figures.

Moreover the catastrophe was partially man-made. Marion London, research associate in Soviet and Chinese studies at Brooklyn College, wrote in the magazine:

"In every province misguided party zeal and amateurism prevailed over both agricultural science and old peasants' wisdom. Indiscriminate application of the methods of intensive cultivation (deep plowing, close planting, and heavy fertilization), under the supervision of inexperienced cadres, produced catastrophic crop failures even in the normally fertile rice paddies of South China."

The statement was buttressed by eyewitness accounts of Chinese refugees. So much for point No. 1. The second fundamental is the Doctrine of the Particularity of Contradiction. This is a part of Maoist theory. Communists make an art of saying simple things in a complicated way so that their utterances are made to seem more scientific. Mao wrote, "If in any process a number of contradictions exist, only one of them is the principal contradiction playing the leading and decisive role while the rest occupy a secondary or subordinate position." What he meant was, when you're dealing with a whole complex of problems, you've got to put first things first.

Applying that principle to the food situation, it comes out, "We're not going anywhere industrially if we starve to death in advance." Thus, finding a food supply - even if you have to entice a highly publicized enemy to give it to you - is the "principal contradiction playing the leading and decisive role" in the thinking of the current Maoist regime.

OK, then, who has the food supply? Answer: the U.S.A.

Next, how do we get it? Answer: Cause the American people to believe we have changed. Once we were bitter enemies, but now we are friendly. Hold out the hope for trade. Invite important Americans over; start with ex-president Nixon and work on down to Barry Goldwater. Stop shelling Quemoy. Let up temporarily on the military threat to Taiwan.

Third, where do we get the money to pay for surplus American food?

Answer: From the U.S. taxpayer.

That brings the discussion down to the Congress.

Just this past year, on Oct. 21, 1978 - just two months before President Carter recognized Red China, Congress enacted Public Law 95-501. The key provision (subsection b) amends Section 4 of the Food for Peace Act of 1966. It states as follows:

"Export sales of agricultural commodities out of Commodity Credit Corporation and private stocks on credit terms in excess of three years, but no more than 10 years, may be financed by the Commodity Credit Corp."

Briefly, the trade prospect with Red China is limited to foodstuffs, most probably cereal grains, and will be paid for by American dollars. Additionally, you may see some drilling equipment shipped to the mainland for use by American oil firms.

By ROBERT LeFEVRE

I suppose we can be grateful to those who voted for Proposition 13 on the grounds that latent hostilities have now surfaced. It is always good to learn. Experience is an expensive teacher, but if we do not use our heads, we are doomed to pay high prices for knowledge.

Across the nation groups of well-meaning citizens are now banding together to make an effort similar to the Jarvis-Gann initiative in their respective areas. Howard Jarvis has placed himself at the forefront of this effort by launching a national organization aimed at reducing federal spending by a hundred billion dollars.

Before we get carried away by the illusion that somehow we can rule the government and determine official policy, we ought to look carefully at the aftermath of Prop. 13 in California.

Proposition 13 and rent control

Today there is no larger villain than the landlord. While people were assured verbally that landlords would reduce their rents if they got a tax break, the evidence shows that all landlords have not done so. The assumption, now bruited about in official circles, is that any landlord who won't lower his rents is, in fact, a criminal. This very charge has been made.

Naturally, the politicians are jumping on the bandwagon. Discovering an issue, the clamor is for rent control. Of course, it won't be called rent control. It will be called a rent - rollback or a rent freeze, or protection of the poor. But it will be rent control, whatever it is called.

If anyone is interested in learning the result of rent control he need only look at the City of New York which has had rent control for a very long time. New York City is also the first city in the nation to officially become bankrupt. Of course, the feds have bailed it out, but the facts can't be bailed out. They persist.

It is probably true that some of the landlords in New York City appeared to the politicians to be gougers. So, when the World War II OPA ran its course and was abandoned elsewhere, New York City kept the wartime controls in place.

Here are the facts. Some persons who invest in multiple housing property find themselves strapped by the payments they must make on the mortgages they assume. Taxes, of course, are a big item, but there are many other costs besides taxes. All services and all utilities cost far more than they once did. Interest rates have risen.

Today, government agencies demand more and more obedience and compliance from those who own buildings. Codes are changed and then owners of property compelled to spend hundreds of dollars they frequently don't have to bring their properties "up to code." Many plunge even more deeply into debt.

When people find that their profits are reduced or eliminated from investments, they will try to unload unprofitable investments. Thus, when rental income is frozen and other costs continue to rise, the first effect on tenants is the discovery that the owners are reluctant to make repairs or to provide redecoration. The immediate assumption is that the owner is taking advantage. In fact, often to the contrary, may be that the owner is going broke and has no money with which to make improvements or even to decently maintain.

But the idea that a landlord might be in financial trouble rarely occurs to a politician. Or if it occurs, he prefers not to mention the fact. That is the route of unpopularity. It is always true that there are more tenants than landlords. Thus, a taxbreak in a given area, such as Los Angeles, does not mean profits for all landlords. It might, however, spell the difference between survival and non-survival, if no one interferes. But the assumption that a taxbreak lines the pockets of the greedy will have political clout and so it will be used, regardless of justification.

What is the long - range, predictable result? Any kind of rent freeze or control will put a chill on new building. The cure to high rents is to increase the supply rental units. It is the only real cure. Rent controls, by any name, will reduce or limit the supply of rental units. As fewer and fewer make profits by investing in multiple housing, the supply will become as rigidly fixed as the rents. Worse, existing units will deteriorate. And finally, as in New York, whole blocks of rental units will be abandoned and where bright and stalwart buildings once stood will emerge towering slums, windows broken, stairways sagging, inhabited only by derelicts and rats. Such will be the destiny of city after city if it follows the popular wave toward Prop. 13 and its ensuing rent interventionism.

As slums emerge, the city takes over. It confiscates properties once privately owned. Then it increases taxes on all others in order to clean up blighted areas. New government supplied unit are provided. The governmental units will charge only those rents that are politically approved. These will not cover the costs of building and managing. So new taxes must be provided and new controls imposed.

So long as the American people persist in supposing that there is a valid, reasonable way to get government to behave, they will be afflicted with the syndrome of government intervention and ultimate destruction.

But at least we can be grateful about one thing. Each new disaster teaches us something. Let's hope we don't have to completely wreck the nation before enough learn that government is never to be trusted even when outsiders are compelling the government to comply to certain restraints.

Into the drug jungle

By WILLIAM STEIF

The Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, lobby for most big drug makers, is going all-out to bar publication of the Health, Education and Welfare Department's "Guide to Drug Prices."

The guide, now at the printers, is the first U.S. catalogue of comparative price information on prescription and some non-prescription drugs. It divides 196 of the most frequently prescribed drugs, plus pain - killers like aspirin, into 16 therapeutic categories.

It lists the chemical, or generic, name of each drug along with the manufacturer's trade names for the same drug and the average per - dose wholesale price paid by 1,000 pharmacies in mid - 1977.

HEW wants to distribute the guide free to 350,000 doctors and pharmacists, plus consumers who ask for it, in order to encourage doctors and druggists to think price when prescribing or selling drugs. PMA says the guide's price list is "misleading and inaccurate" because it uses wholesale data, not retail. It says PMA had no chance to comment on the guide, claims HEW doesn't have "statutory authority" to publish it, insists the guide "favors the less research - intensive part of the market."

So in mid - December, it filed suit in federal court in Baltimore against HEW and soon will seek a permanent injunction against the guide's distribution.

But the government is proceeding with its campaign against high prices. On Jan. 9 the Food and Drug Administration released a list of 2,400 generic name products it considers the equivalent of brand drugs.

A friend has followed this issue closely because he's interested in the price of a drug named Dilaudid. His wife has terminal cancer. Dilaudid is 12 times as potent as morphine in holding down pain. My friend's wife uses more than 60 cubic centimeters daily. Five CC. equals a full teaspoon.

Until recently, my friend bought 20-cc. vials of Dilaudid at $8.65 per vial from a Washington - area pharmacy. Then he found he could buy Dilaudid for $5.28 a vial from a local hospital pharmacy. That includes a 10 percent markup for the pharmacy.

A salesperson at a major Baltimore - Washington drug wholesaler says the normal wholesale price for Dilaudid is not quite $4.75 per 20-cc. vial. HEW officials says the Defense Department and Veterans Administration pay considerably less.

Knoll Pharmaceutical Co., of Whippany, N.J., makes Dilaudid. A Knoll official says there's no difference in price, depending on the consumer, but then concedes "there are quantity discounts."

PMA agrees there are "bulk discounts" for drugs and says that under a federal anti-trust law all buyers have to be offered the same discount for the same amounts purchased.

But there's an "exemption" to that law: non-profit institutions, like hospitals, can get even cheaper wholesale prices, presumably so they'll pass the savings on to their patients.

It doesn't always work that way. When my friend's wife is hospitalized, he pays $7.70 for 20-cc. of Dilaudid for her. Knoll Pharmaceutical Co. wholesales Dilaudid directly to the hospital for $3.30 for a 20-cc. vial.

A pharmacist says one drug firm has "76 different classes of customers." HEW's drug price guide is only a small first step into the pharmaceutical jungle. One of its primary points is to demonstrate that medicines often are marked up 100 percent or more from wholesale to retail, whether the seller is a non-profit or profit-making institution.

You can write PMA President C. Joseph Stetler, 1155 15th St., NW, Washington, D.C. 20005, and ask him why PMA won't cooperate - and whether 100 percent markups in vital drugs are necessary.

IN WASHINGTON

Carter shouldn't risk it

-by martha angle and robert walters-

WASHINGTON (NEA) - President Carter is taking a sizeable and unnecessary political risk in emphasizing so incessantly his determination to hold the federal budget deficit to less than $30 billion in the next fiscal year.

As Senate Budget Chairman Edmund S. Muskie, among others, has tried to warn him, there is no way Carter or anyone else can determine today how much red ink will show up when the books are closed Sept. 30, 1980 on the budget the president is sending to Congress later this month.

Of all the elements in the federal budget, the deficit - which represents the gap between revenues and expenditures - is probably the least predictable because it is so directly contingent upon the health of the economy as a whole.

It is worth recalling that Carter originally predicted a $60.5 billion deficit for the current fiscal year, whereas the latest estimates place the figure at close to $41 billion. The projected fiscal 1978 budget deficit was $61.8 billion; the actual figure, $48.7 billion.

In those two instances, the expectations proved worse than the actual deficit. But with Carter's fiscal 1980 budget, the danger is the opposite. Administration economists made a number of quite optimistic assumptions about the performance of the economy over the next 21 months in setting a $29 billion deficit target.

In direct contrast to most economists in the private sector and on Capitol Hill, they are making no allowance for even a mild recession during that period and have calculated that unemployment should reach no more than 6.2 percent on the average for calendar year 1980 - less than half a percent above its current 5.8 level.

If they are wrong, even by a little bit, Carter's precious deficit figure will wind up on the scrap heap. A 1 percent rise in unemployment, for instance, brings with it a $15 billion drop in revenues and a $3 to $5 billion increase in expenditures for unemployment compensation, welfare and the like.

That's a fact, and it's not subject to control or cajolery by Carter, the Congress or anyone else. It's a safe bet, however, that the Republican presidential nominee next year will remember that Carter promised no more than a $29 to 30 billion deficit and will hold him politically responsible if the red ink rises - no matter how little Carter could do about it.

What Carter and Congress can do, in their efforts to fight inflation, is to control federal spending more tightly than they have in the past, but even this is harder than it sounds.

More than 75 percent of the budget is "uncontrollable," not subject to cuts by either Carter or Congress. Part of this (about 11 percent of the total budget) is interest on the national debt. Another chunk is contracts already agreed to.

But the bulk of the "uncontrollable" spending goes to the multitude of "entitlement" programs established by law over the years - Social Security, medicare, medicaid, food welfare, disability, unemployment compensation and the like.

Eligibility and benefit levels for such programs are set by law. Claims filed must be paid - until and unless Congress is prepared to take away the "entitlements" it has created.

Muskie and his Budget Committee are trying to force their colleagues to face up to the long - range fiscal problems created by entitlement programs, especially in the retirement area. But it is an uphill fight.

"We've been indulgent about adding eligibility and benefits for all sorts of programs, but it's very difficult politically to talk about cutting back," Muskie said in an interview.

Aside from a few modest reductions in some ancillary Social Security benefits, Carter is not even proposing cuts in the costly entitlement programs. His ax is aimed at the under - 25 percent of the budget still subject to congressional control, and even there, defense spending has been exempted.

Even if Congress agrees to the cuts in discretionary spending the president is seeking, outlays for the entitlement programs could soar beyond projections if the economy goes into a slump. Then Carter is likely to wish he never heard of the word "deficit," let alone talked about it.

Lawmaking underway this week

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Lawmaking finally gets fully underway this week as Texas senators and House members jump into a full schedule of committee hearings.

The regular session began Jan. 9. However, there have been few legislative results so far because of opening ceremonies, the inauguration festivities and drafting of ground rules in each house.

Now, it is up to the appointed committees — 30 in the House and 19 in the Senate — to screen all the 650 proposed House measures and the 330 Senate proposals and listen to public testimony on each proposed new law or change in old laws.

A few committee meetings were held last week but the full schedule begins today.

The House Appropriations Committee holds its first public hearing on its version of the 1980-81 general appropriations bill this afternoon. The Senate Finance Committee holds another session on its version about the same time.

Legislative leaders estimate it will be at least six weeks before either house is ready to vote on a state spending bill for the next two years. Frequently, the appropriations issue is not settled until the final days of a legislative session, and then by a 10-member conference committee picked to negotiate differences between the two houses.

The Senate State Affairs Committee takes up several pending subjects today including a law change that would allow mixed drinks to be served in hotel rooms, make county commissioners' courts redistrict each 10 years, and limit Texas governors to two 4-year terms.

Mexicans would work in Texas

By KEN HERMAN Associated Press Writer HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements favors a program that would allow Mexican citizens to work in Texas — but Clements says an amnesty program allowing illegal aliens to remain north of the border would be a mistake.

The governor, in his first address to a private group since taking office, Saturday night grants Mexican citizens temporary permits to work in Texas.

"We have in Texas alone 3 million of these illegal Mexican aliens," Clements said. "And the possibility of a national policy, as put forth by Mr. Carter, where would we in effect bless these people and have them as instant citizens — what are we going to do five years from now? And what are we going to do 10 years from now? Are we just going to have a revolving amnesty program?" Clements said.

The governor, who feels that the Mexican workers are needed in Texas, said he fears that an amnesty program would "suck out of Mexico millions of its citizens."

The crowd of Mexican-American business leaders applauded Clements' remarks.

The governor also reiterated his hope that Texas can soon take advantage of Mexico's energy supplies.

"It is absurd that we in the United States have not taken advantage of the potential that exists in Mexico for helping to solve our energy problems," he said.

told the Rio Grande Valley Mexican-American Chamber of Commerce about his recent meetings with Mexican President Jose Lopez-Portillo.

Clements sees a return to the Bracero program of the 1960s as a solution to the tidal wave of illegal aliens coming to Texas. The Bracero program

Nitrate poisoning kills some cattle

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Unusually high concentrations of nitrate in hay has killed hundreds of cattle in Texas, according to a doctor with the Texas Veterinary Medical Diagnostic Laboratory.

"We have had reports of 17 cases of cattle being poisoned from eating hay high in nitrate content," said Dr. John Reasor, a toxicologist at the facility, located on the Texas A&M University campus.

"If that many are reported, it's likely there are hundreds more in the state not seen by veterinarians or sent to the lab," he said.

The lab's director, Dr. William L. Sippel, said natural nitrate concentrations have increased in hay because of unfavorable weather, including an unusually dry summer.

"Growth of the hay was slow, causing an accumulation of nitrogen," Sippel said. "Then, cold, wet weather resulted in cattle eating more hay to increase body warmth and to maintain physical condition. These cattle were not able to detoxify the larger than normal quantities of nitrogen consumed."

Reasor said the nitrate reduces the ability of the animal's blood to carry oxygen, and they suffocate. He said nitrate poisoning cases have been reported from Oklahoma to Torreon, Mexico, as well as in Texas.

Reasor said one rancher near Decatur, Texas, lost 80 cows overnight.

"Abortion of calves has also occurred in large numbers of cattle which ate hay containing high nitrate content, but not enough accumulation of the chemical to cause death," he said.

Reasor advised ranchers to have their hay analyzed, especially hay that was baled on highly fertilized pastures or hay that wilted during the growing season.

Trial witnesses appear

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — The first of up to 40 witnesses were summoned to court today to testify in the capital murder trial of John W. McCrory, 27, of Argyle, Texas. He is accused of raping and strangling a Lewisville, Texas, high school girl last June.

The final juror was seated Saturday, ending three weeks of selection. The case was transferred here from Denton, Texas, on a change of venue.

Denton County District Attorney Jerry Cobb said 35 to 40 witnesses would testify for the state.

McCrory is accused in the June 2 death of Jeana Melissa Walker, a Lewisville high school majorette. Her partially nude body was found on a rural Denton County road near her car, which had apparently stalled when she was on the way to pick up her boyfriend to attend a graduation party.

An unrelated legal matter that could have delayed the trial was resolved Saturday when attorneys for both sides agreed to keep District Judge Stanley Kirk as the trial judge despite a formal misconduct complaint pending against him.

The State Commission on Judicial Conduct filed the complaint last week, asking the Texas Supreme Court to suspend Kirk pending proceedings to remove him permanently because of allegations of misconduct.

The charges stem from a trial in Kirk's court last June in which a man was acquitted on a charge of indecency with a child. A juror complained that when jurors returned the innocent verdict Kirk threw papers in the air, gave jurors a tongue-lashing, told the defendant he was now free to commit the same crime again and stormed out of the courtroom.

The commission, which requested a transcript of the trial in question, further accused Kirk of altering the court record when he responded to that request.

Cobb said Kirk informed all attorneys involved in the case about the charges and asked whether they wanted another judge to take over the trial. Cobb said the attorneys agreed there would be "no problem" in Kirk's presiding.

Former chief faces sentence

HOUSTON (AP) — Carrol Lynn, the highest ranking Houston police officer ever charged with a felony, was ordered to appear for sentencing today on convictions of obstruction of justice, perjury and extortion.

The former police chief, once described by a city councilman as "a kamikaze pilot who achieves his mission but destroys himself," could receive a maximum of 35 years in prison and a $30,000 fine.

Lynn, an assistant chief when he was arrested in April, 1978, was convicted by a federal court jury Dec. 14. He had been accused of lying to a grand jury and of being involved in a bizarre scheme to collect a $45,000 bribe from a one-time Houston oil company sales manager.

John Vincent Holden, the former Houston oilman who was accused of mail fraud and violation of security regulations, testified Lynn promised he could quash a federal investigation of the oilman's business dealings with the payment of the $45,000.

Canales and the Castillos testified they had no knowledge of any bribery scheme.

Lynn, a 22-year veteran of the force, was arrested outside Holden's home by FBI agents

Eclipse coming to area

Panhandle residents will be able to see the last eclipse of the sun in North America this century, if there are no overcast skies on Feb. 26.

Arthur Schneider, Director of the Don Harrington Discovery Center in Amarillo, said the eclipse will only be partial here but it will be total in the northwestern section of the United States and in central Canada.

Panhandle residents would be able to see an eclipse in which 70 to 75 percent of the solar disc is shadowed by the moon. The event will begin at about 9:08 a.m. with a dark notch appearing on the upper right of the sun's face. Around 10:18 a.m., the greatest eclipse will take place. The moon's shadow first strikes the earth in the North Pacific, about 1,000 miles west of Vancouver at sunrise. It then swiftly moves eastward, striking land at the mouth of the Columbia River between Washington and Salem, Ore., near the path of total eclipse. The shadow then continues to sweep eastward and slightly northward passing into Canada.

Schneider warned that it will be extremely dangerous to look at the sun during the eclipse because the infra-red rays could burn the retina, causing blindness.

The eclipse should end at 11:37 a.m.

The Great Survivor

"I am an old revolutionary," says Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-p'ing, now in the United States for a historic nine-day visit. At 74, Teng has been called China's "great survivor." A member of the Chinese Communist Party since 1925, Teng was with Mao Tse-tung on the difficult "Long March" across China in 1934. He later suffered bitter political defeats, when Chinese leaders who opposed his views forced him out of important government jobs. But Teng always endured. Today as China's second-in-command, he leads the drive to modernize China, in part through increased contact with the West.

FOLLOW PRESCRIPTION DIRECTIONS

Have you ever received a prescription for an antibiotic with the instructions to take it for two weeks and then after a few days, when you were feeling better, discontinued the medication?

Has your doctor ever given you blood pressure pills with instructions to take them twice a day but you decided to take them when you thought your blood pressure was up?

If this sounds familiar, you are not alone. Millions and millions of other folks are doing exactly the same sort of thing, often with dangerous consequences.

In study after study it turns out that about one out of every two patients does not take the prescribed medication according to the doctor's instructions. They take too much or not enough or instead of with meals they take their drug on an empty stomach. Doctors often label such people "noncompliant" and shake their heads despairingly, as if all the blame lies with the patient.

While it's true that many people think that they know better than the doctor, more often than not the reason individuals make mistakes when taking drugs is that they do not understand the complicated and sometimes ambiguous directions.

For example, the simple instruction "Take before meals" could be confusing. Is that five minutes, half an hour or longer before eating? And what if you skip breakfast or eat four small meals — taking the medicine according to your eating schedule might not fit the three-times-a-day drug regimen the doctor had in mind.

When you take a prescription is important. It can alter the effect on the body. Many medications for example should be swallowed with fruit or vegetable juice or with soda pop since excess acidity might interfere with proper absorption. Taking Tetracycline antibiotics (Achromycin V, Sumycin, Tetrax, etc.) with milk could produce problems since calcium in dairy products may prevent the drug from getting into the blood stream adequately. Ampicillin, Penicillin G and Tetracycline should be taken on an empty stomach. In this case, "before meals" really means at least one hour before or at least two hours after eating.

Drugs that are particularly irritating to the stomach lining should be taken with food or milk. Medications that require special attention in this regard include some potent arthritis or anti-inflammatory agents such as Indocin (Indomethacin), Butazolidin (Phenylbutazone) or Tanderil (Oxyphenbutazone). A few other drugs that should be taken at mealtime include potassium supplements, iron pills, Macro-dantin (Nitrofurantoin) and Flayl (Metronidazole).

When we do not follow through correctly on the prescribed regimen there is a good possibility that the physician's efforts to cure us or prevent future illness will be impaired. Stopping an antibiotic after a few days may allow the infection to recur in a more virulent form. Taking high blood pressure pills only when you "feel" your pressure going up is foolish since it is not possible to "feel" high blood pressure.

How can doctors reduce the problem of drug-taking errors? Well, for one thing, they can improve communication. Candid conversations about the illness, its prognosis, and the rationale for therapy can help allay false fears. Information on how the drug works accompanied by specific instructions can help reduce confusion. When more than one drug is prescribed, written or illustrated material can unambiguously clarify things. Encouraging active patient participation in the treatment program can work wonders.

So the next time your doctor gives you a prescription, why not take a few extra minutes to find out how the medicine works and what your doctor's expectations are. Then it would be a good idea if you followed the instructions as carefully as you can.

Dear Abby

by abigail van buren

DEAR ABBY: Over the years you have advised wives not to phone their husbands at work unless it's absolutely necessary. I disagree.

Nothing brightens a father's day like hearing, "Hi, Dada," from his 2-year-old son whom he hasn't seen for two days because he's had to work overtime.

As for management complaining because it wastes company time, management would be wise to encourage 10-minute "sunshine" calls. It does wonders for their employees' morale.

However, there should be a few rules: Emphasize that your call is not an emergency so your husband isn't interrupted in the middle of something important; if he doesn't work near a phone, put a quarter in his lunchbox so he can call you.

Also, never tell him what the kids did wrong or anything that might upset him. Keep it light and cheery. He'll love it. My husband does.

BETTE M.

DEAR BETTE: Your husband may love your "sunshine calls," but I'll bet his boss doesn't. In business, time is money. Say your husband makes $6 an hour and you babble away with him for 10 minutes a day, that's $1 out of the boss's pocket. If he has 1,000 employees, each making $6 an hour, and each taking 10 minutes a day to discuss domestic trivia, it costs the boss $1,000 a day!

If you MUST chat daily, let hubby call you on his lunch hour. A guy who's on the phone is not on the job—unless he's a bookie.

DEAR ABBY: I am an 11-year-old girl whose parents are divorced. I live with my mother. Mom has her boyfriend living with her and everybody knows they aren't married.

My problem is this. I have a best friend I'll call Debbie. Debbie's parents will let her come to my house and stay all day, but they won't let her sleep overnight. What's the difference?

PUZZLED IN LAS CRUCES

DEAR PUZZLED: Debbie's parents probably fear that if they allow her to spend the night in a home where an unmarried couple are sleeping together, Debbie might think they approve of it—which they do not.

DEAR ABBY: I have a gripe I would like to air. Just before Christmas, I receive a Christmas card with my newspaper: "Merry Christmas from Johnny Jones, your newspaper carrier!"

I also get a Christmas card, "From Elmer Smith, your postman." And another one, "From George Brown, your garbage collector."

Abby, I never see any of these people during the year, but there were times when I would have liked to see them to ask why my newspaper was late again, or why I find so many letters in my box that aren't addressed to me. Or why my garbage cans are never put back where they belong!

I don't mind tipping for extra service, but it bugs me to get a "bill" for mediocre service that I've already paid too much for.

STEAMED IN PALO ALTO

DEAR STEAMED: Those aren't greetings, they're warnings.

Dr. Lamb

by lawrence lamb m.d.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am trying to become pregnant and there seems to be a problem. My husband and I are both 31. We have one daughter 7 years old and I lost a baby at birth five years ago, so I know I can get pregnant. We've been trying for over three years and I am going through many days of depression and having arguments with my husband over whose fault it is.

He did go to a urologist three years ago and his examination showed he had a sperm count of 44 million, which I understand is OK but is only one-third of the normal.

I have RH negative blood and had a Cesarean section with my last pregnancy. Does this have any bearing on a conception? When does the doctor prescribe fertility pills to women? Is this to regulate their menstrual cycles or does it help them to get pregnant?

DEAR READER: Science is making very rapid strides but it still takes two to produce a baby, even if it's a test-tube baby. That means that when a couple has a problem in fertility, both partners need to be examined.

A lot can happen in three years, and since it's during this period of time that you have been trying to get pregnant, there would be nothing wrong with your husband having another examination.

It would be good if the two of you could go to a fertility clinic. That way, more information could be obtained on you.

Daily temperature curves

DEAR POLLY: In summer when my gas and electric bills are smaller I stock my pantry shelves with canned goods and other non-perishables so as to cut down on food bills when I have large utility bills.

If you save a penny a day at the end of the year you will have $3.65. If you save a nickel a day you will save $17.95 and if each member of a family of four saves a nickel a day at the end of the year they will have saved $99.00. — M.R.T.

DEAR POLLY: When melting butter I add a few drops of cooking oil to keep the butter from burning or getting too brown. — ELLY might point out whether you are ovulating regularly or not. If you are not, then your doctor might wish to prescribe a fertility pill. They are not used to regulate menstrual cycles but rather to stimulate the ovaries to release ova.

When the stimulation has been too successful and released a lot of ova simultaneously, a number of women have had multiple births. Regulating the dosage and the medicine used helps to minimize that possibility.

Your husband might be greatly surprised to learn that in some men with low sperm counts the fertility pill that is used to cause ovaries to release ova can also stimulate the man to produce more sperm, thereby increasing his fertility. If the man's fertility can be improved in these situations, there isn't any reason why it shouldn't be done.

A number of causes can contribute to infertility in both the male and the female. It is true that in some instances a woman may develop an immune or sort of allergic reaction to the husband's sperm cells. When this proves to be the case, then methods can be devised to minimize the reaction and help promote the probability of pregnancy.

It won't help to fight with your husband and it is really not a question of whose fault it is. The important point is what will work best for the two of you to enable you to have another pregnancy if that is what you want. It takes two to tango and two to produce a baby. Either one is more fun than fighting.

Beauty improvement plan

by josephine lowman

DON'T BE A DIET DROPOUT

(This is the eleventh in a series of 15 articles in which Josephine Lowman, author of "Why Grow Old?" and leading authority on health and beauty, tells you exactly what to do to lose 20 pounds in eight weeks. You may want to save these menus and exercises to refer back to during the eight week period.)

Are you a diet dropout? If so, do not let it discourage you. Gather your extra pounds around you and begin again. It is disastrous to feel guilty. Think positively! Some of the most successful reducers have experienced one or more false starts—because of some life situation or a temporary willpower blackout.

Those of you who have been with me from the beginning of my eight-week Beauty Improvement Plan (BIP) are now past the halfway mark in this course and should be feeling pretty happy as your clothes become looser. Nevertheless, this is the phase when there is danger of becoming discouraged.

This is apt to be the time when the scales appear to be stuck permanently. You may have been very successful for the first few weeks but have now reached a plateau and cannot lose another pound. Do not despair! This is an expected part of any reducing program. Continue counting your calories and the scales soon will give you happy news again. I hope those of you who have not already reached the halfway point will remember this when you do.

In reducing programs, as well as in life, it is a good idea to stop midway and take stock of your progress to see where you are going. If you had hoped to lose more by this time, try to discover why you didn't. Locate your calorie traps so that you can be forewarned and avoid them or prepare to fight them. Remember that people reduce at different speeds. Their individual metabolism and physical activity are factors.

The way you prepare food can make a startling difference in its calorie count. The simplest items can be turned into calorie nightmares. Often, the trimmings have more calories than the food. The careful preparation of food and the substitutions made for a reducer also boost health since they lower the fat, cholesterol, sugar and salt intake. Hopefully these will become lifetime habits.

EXAMPLES:

POTATOES

Boiled, diced, no fat added: 1/2 cup 55
Mashed, milk and fat added: 1/2 cup 100
Hashed-browned: 1/2 cup 175
French fried, 10 pieces, 3 1/2 to 4 inches long 215
Pan-fried, beginning with raw potatoes: 1/2 cup 230

Tomato and lettuce salad: one medium tomato and two leaves of lettuce

Without dressing 25
With 1 tablespoon mayonnaise 125

Heed the following simple guidelines. As a habit, substitute skim or powdered fat-free milk for whole milk. Broil, boil or bake food. Do not fry it or, if you must, use one of the pans that does not require fat. Forget rich desserts (except occasionally) and substitute fresh or water-packed fruits. Enjoy clear soups instead of cream soups. Salt foods very lightly. Salt encourages water retention in the tissues.

Eat more fish and poultry and less beef. Learn to enjoy raw vegetables unless there is some medical reason for not doing so. Cook a roast the night before, refrigerate it, and remove the hardened fat the next day. Broil meat on a rack so the fat can drip away. Avoid gravy. Use boillon or wine and herbs as seasoning. Sweeten cereal with fruit. Whole wheat products are bursting with health value.

Don't forget herbs; there is such great variety and they are delightful substitutes for the rich seasonings we have been accustomed to. It is fun to experiment with different herbs on different dishes. Vinegar and lemon juice also can be used to advantage.

Want to get ready for spring clothes? You still can join thousands of other women for a loss of from 15 to 20 pounds in the next eight weeks. The BIP kit tells you how. It also contains a calorie chart, slimming exercises, two full weeks of NEW reducing menus, weight and height chart and a wall chart on which to plot your progress and see your beauty line rise as your weight line drops. If you would like to have the kit, send $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for the BIP kit to Josephine Lowman, in care of this newspaper.

The Double Cross does so many things for the figure! It slims the waist, hips and thighs, and is a mild abdominal exercise. Lie on the floor on your back with your legs straight and your arms extending out from your shoulders, palms toward the floor. With a stiff knee raise your right leg and swing it across your body, trying to touch your right toe to your left hand. Swing leg back. Swing your left leg across your body and try to touch your left toe to your right hand. Swing back. Continue alternating. It is important to cling to the floor with your hands and let your hips roll.

The Bacall - Sinatra affair

When Frank Sinatra dumped Lauren Bacall days after proposing, she says she spent "night after night in tears." But now Bacall says in a Family Circle excerpt of her forthcoming autobiography, "Lauren Bacall By Myself," "Frank did me a great favor — he saved me from the disaster our marriage would have been."

Sinatra apparently was convinced Bacall broke the news, and told her over the phone. "We'll have to lay low for a while, not see each other for a while."

Then, six years later they met at a party given by none other than Lazar. Bacall describes the scene:

Lauren Bacall

The two stars became an item a few months after Humphrey Bogart died. The trouble started when they decided to get married and Sinatra made Bacall swear to keep it a secret.

But they did tell agent Swift Lazar, who soon dropped a hint in gossip columnist Louella Parsons' lap. Soon the whole world knew of the wedding plans.

"We exchanged superficial words. He drank a lot and became furious with Swiftly ... he pulled the tablecloth out from under the glasses and plates, and amid the crash and spillage he shouted furiously at Swiftly, 'You — you were responsible for what happened between her and me!'"

"I almost laughed. It was Frank's way of finally admitting that he did know it was Swiftly and not me who'd spilled the beans."

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Think twice. Reconsider what your major goals are today. What appears to be top priority at first may not be all that important.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Any confusion resulting from the early day's problems can be quickly overcome by relying on what your instincts are trying to tell you to do.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Although you may at first feel the world is against you today, you'll soon change your mind when a friend does something nice for you quite unexpectedly.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't expect any pals on the back for giving a lick and a promise to things you do today. In fact, halfway measures could get you into big trouble.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A co-worker's feelings could be hurt through a misunderstanding of facts you present today. Make sure you communicate accurately.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Again today you had better have your wits about you in commercial dealings. One whose standards aren't too high could try to snow you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Out of the goodness of your heart you may agree to something today that you shouldn't have. Some fast thinking could get you out of it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Things may go wrong at work today, but when a little windfall comes your way you'll forget all about the earlier troubles.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It's quite possible you may feel used by one you consider to be an old and trusted friend. Get all the facts before passing judgment. You'll find you were wrong.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't ignore what your nobler instincts are telling you to do today. Keep your standards high and no one can harm you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Pessimistic friends could put a damper on your day if you let them. It would be best to seek out your more positive pals. Shun negative thoughts.

Unitas, Butkus into Football Hall

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Johnny Unitas, Dick Butkus, Hon. Earl A. Young and the 1979 class joining the Pro Football Hall of Fame, it was announced today.

Unitas, the rags-to-riches quarterback of the Baltimore Colts, and Butkus, the Chicago Bears' linebacking great, enter the hall in the first year after their five seasons of retirement.

Mix, a perennial All-American Football League offensive tackle with the San Diego Chargers, retired in 1971 after one year with the Oakland Raiders. Lary was a league-leading punter, star defensive back and punt return specialist for the Detroit Lions before retiring in 1963.

The four were chosen by the 29-member board of selectors. They will be formally enshrined Saturday, July 28, in Canton in ceremonies before an exhibition between the Dallas Cowboys and Oakland Raiders.

Their selection brings to 102 the number enshrined in the Hall of Fame. Unitas, cut by the Pittsburgh Steelers in 1955, jumped from a $6 a game semi-pro quarterback to regular status with the Colts the next season. He would go on to lead Baltimore to National Football League titles in 1958 and 1959.

The 6-foot-1, 195-pound University of Louisville graduate showcased his talents in the 1958 championship game. He completed 26 of 40 passes for 361 yards, guided the Colts to a game-tying touchdown at the end of regulation and took them on an 80-yard march to beat the New York Giants 23-17 in overtime.

His 18-year career accomplishments are staggering: 2,830 completions in 5,186 passes for 40,239 yards — almost 24 miles — and 290 touchdowns. When he retired, no other passer had even remotely approached those massive totals.

One of his NFL records probably never will be broken. Unitas threw at least one touchdown pass in 47 straight games, a streak that started in 1956 and ended in 1960. He played his last year with the Chargers before quitting.

Butkus, who played at 6-3 and 245 pounds, was notorious for his vicious hitting as a middle linebacker in nine injury-shortened seasons. He becomes the 17th Bears' player to join the shrine.

all-NFL acclaim eight times and played in eight Pro Bowls. A severe knee injury in his final season in 1973 shortened Butkus' career.

Unlike most defensive stars, the Chicago native shows up in several statistical categories. He had 22 interceptions and 25 fumble recoveries, the latter still ranking as the league's second best all-time total. He had more than 1,000 tackles and 500 assists.

The 6-4, 250-pound Mix, an All-American at Southern California, joins San Diego teammate Lance Alworth as the only AFL players to achieve immortality. Mix was considered the best offensive tackle in the old league from 1960 through 1969.

Mix was both a first-round NFL draft selection of the Colts and Boston in the AFL. Boston swapped his negotiation rights to the Chargers and he opted to play in his native California.

He was an all-AFL choice his first nine seasons, eight as a tackle and once as a guard. He played in seven AFL All-Star Games.

One San Diego coach described Mix as "a pro's pro, a disciplined technician, a perfectionist." The key man in the Chargers' line was assessed just two holding penalties in his first nine pro seasons.

Lary, twice All-Southwest Conference at Texas A&M, joined the Lions as a third-round draft choice in 1952, just as Detroit was emerging as an NFL power.

The 5-11, 189-pound Lary, with a 44.28-yard average, ranks less than 1 yard behind Sammy Baugh, the NFL's all-time punting leader.

DICK BUTKUS, former All-Pro middle linebacker for the Chicago Bears, was one of four men named as 1979 inductees to the Pro Football Hall of Fame Monday. (AP Laserphoto)

Four home games for Harvies this week

Harvester Field House will be the scene for some heavy basketball action this week, as no less than four varsity contests will be played in the Green Pit.

Pampa's Lady Harvesters will host Caprock tonight for varsity and JV contests, the Hustling Harvesters will take on the Longhorns Tuesday night, the Tascosa Rebs will be in town Thursday night for girls play and the boys will close the busy week by hosting Tascosa Friday night.

Caprock's girls come into tonight's contest with the best overall record in District 3-AAAA (13-7). But the Longhorn girls have lost both of their league games and are tied with Pampa at the bottom of the first half district standings.

Amarillo High has a lock on the first half girls crown. The Sandies are 3-0 and close their first-half schedule against Caprock Thursday night. Pampa, still looking for its first district victory ever, carries a 10-12 mark into tonight's game.

The boys will open the second half of their district slate with a pair of home games. The Harvesters downed Caprock 67-57 Jan. 12 in Amarillo, but lost to Tascosa 70-53 on Jan. 16 after leading 38-35 at halftime.

The Rebs went on to take the first-half title with a 4-0 slate.

while Pampa finished at 3-1 for second. Caprock went 0-4 and brings a 4-16 season mark into Tuesday night's game. Pampa is 12-12 on the year, the first time the Harvies have been at 500 since Nov. 25, when they were 1-1.

In junior high basketball, all the Pampa teams are entering their final two weeks of competition. District tournaments are scheduled Feb. 9-10 in Borger (ninth grade boys), Plainview (eighth grade boys), Hereford (eighth grade girls) and Pampa (ninth grade girls).

Mike Eckhart's swimmers will be in Amarillo Friday and Saturday for the Amarillo Invitational, their last competition before the District Meet in Amarillo Feb. 13.

Here is this week's high school sports schedule:

ANDY WILLIAMS

Zoeller takes San Diego crown

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Fuzzy Zoeller had arranged his playing schedule carefully this year, keeping clear the two middle weeks of April.

"My wife's expecting our first child in the middle of April," Zoeller said. "That's the most exciting, best thing that's ever happened to me."

"I'm committed for everything up until then, but I had arranged it to be home when she's due. Now, it looks like I won't be there."

His first career victory on the PGA Tour came in wind, rain, a few flurries of snow, cold and hail Sunday at the Andy Williams-San Diego Open. And it suddenly made him eligible for two of golf's premier events, the Masters and Tournament of Champions. He has never before played in either. There come on consecutive weeks in the middle of April — "just about my wife's due date," Zoeller said.

Zoeller, one of the game's longest hitters and more noted free spirits, nailed down his first tour title in something approaching ease. He started the day two shots in front of the pack, was three ahead most of the stormy day and eventually won by five after scoring a meaningless birdie on the final hole of the South course at Torrey Pines.

He finished with a round of par 72 — one of only five scores at par or better in brutal weather — and claimed $45,000 from the total purse of $250,000 with his 282 total, six under par.

"This is going to help me," he said. "It's going to be great for my confidence. There are two questions everyone has to answer when they come out on the tour: 'Can I make it? Then, if I make it, can I win?' You have to prove it. Now I've proved it. That will help. That will make the second one come easier."

Tom Watson, the Player of the Year for the past two seasons, made his first start of 1979 a good one. Prepping for the defense of his title in the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am this week, Watson played his last nine in 33. That gave him 71 and a tie for second at 287.

He shared second with Bill Kratzert, Artie McNickle and Wayne Levi. Levi had the day's best round, 68. McNickle shot 72 and Kratzert 74.

Jerry McGee, the second-round leader, took himself out of it with a double bogey on the 14th hole. He had to birdie No. 18 to salvage 76 and a tie at 288 with Lee Trevino, Victor Regalado and Jerry Pate, all with 74.

Zoeller, 27 and carrying a sturdy 190 pounds on a 5-foot-10 frame, ranks among the game's longest hitters. He has shown improvement in his four previous years on the tour, winning more than $100,000 last year.

The improvement, he said, was due to his wife.

"I used to do my share of drinking — imbibing, getting drunk — whatever you want to call it. About four nights a week. When we got engaged, I figured I had to straighten up my act a little."

His victory, nailed down on a string of 11 pars, really hasn't hit home, Zoeller said, but he is convinced it is "the second most important thing that's happened to me."

Defense could control Pro Bowl

By KEN PETERS
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With people like Earl Campbell, Terry Bradshaw, Lynn Swann, Walter Payton, Roger Staubach and Harold Carmichael in the game, tonight's Pro Bowl would figure to be a wild and crazy offensive show.

But that "figuring" doesn't take into account the defensive stars in the annual clash between the National Football League All-Stars.

When the AFC's Campbell carries the ball, or Bradshaw looks for favorite receiver Swann, they'll have to contend with NFC defenders like Bill Bergey, Jack Youngblood, Al Baker and Cliff Harris.

And when Payton, Staubach and Carmichael are trying to move the AFC offense, they'll be looking at an NFC defense that includes Lyle Alzado, Joe Greene, Randy Gradishar and Louis Wright.

Since the teams have just one week of practice together, the NFL has given some edge to the offenses by writing in special Pro Bowl rules that restrict the defenses.

The rules dictate that the defense must always be in a 4-3-4 set, play a man-for-man with a free safety, and cannot blitz unless the situation is third down and less than three yards to go.

That, of course, means the respective offenses won't have to worry about making a lot of adjustments, and that the quarterbacks can essentially forget about being blitzed.

"That doesn't exactly mean the quarterback's in a rocking chair," said Staubach, "but it does give you one less thing to worry about."

The first Pro Bowl game, which matched the NFL East and West All-Stars, was held in 1951 at the site of this renewal, the Coliseum. In the eight meetings of the AFC and NFC, each team has four victories.

Tonight's game has a slight flavor of a Pittsburgh-Dallas rematch. Steelers on the AFC squad include Bradshaw, Swann, Greene, Franco Harris, Mike Webster, Mel Blount, Jack Ham, L.C. Greenwood, JACK Lambert and Donnie Shell.

Dallas is represented by Staubach, Harris, Tony Hill, Tony Dorsett, Billy Joe DuPree, Thomas Henderson and Charlie Waters. The Cowboys' Harvey Martin and Randy White were also selected for the game, but are injured and won't participate.

Kickoff time for the nationally televised contest is 9 p.m. EST.

Longhorns eye another title

By The Associated Press
No one seems surprised that the eyes of Texas are casting a covetous glance at yet another Southwest Conference basketball championship.

But the preseason favorite and 17th-ranked Longhorns still have a couple of tall hurdles left in their path for the conference crown.

Texas emerged victorious in showdown clashes with Texas A&M and Baylor last week and blasted Southern Methodist 98-

62 Saturday night. And that win left Mustang Coach Sonny Allen shaking his head.

"It was not as close as the score indicated," lamented Allen.

The Longhorns seem unbeatable at home in the Super Drum, where they have now won 25 in a row, and they are playing at the form that took Coach Abe Lemons' crew to the National Invitation Tournament title in New York City last March.

However, the Longhorns have a hazardous Feb. 12 date at Texas A&M still on their schedule.

Right now it appears the Aggies are the only ones with a chance to overhaul the Longhorns in the second half of the SWC season.

Texas is 7-1 and the Aggies are 6-2.

Arkansas and much-improved Baylor have outside chances at 5-3 while Texas Tech appears out of the running for a regular season championship at 4-4.

Texas has two games at home this week, hosting Houston Monday night and entertaining always-dangerous Arkansas Thursday night.

Texas defeated both Houston and Arkansas on the road, but the Razorbacks played well and can give the Longhorns trouble.

Texas A&M whipped Rice 81-62. Baylor defeated Texas Christian 77-69 and Arkansas outlasted Texas Tech 63-57 Saturday night, despite a frantic Red Raider second half rally.
