Carter considering gas sale restrictions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government officials, faced with continuing shortages of Iranian crude oil, are considering a ban on Sunday gasoline sales and a variety of other measures reminiscent of the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo.

Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger said Wednesday the Carter administration will decide by April 1 whether to impose mandatory conservation measures. But he said such actions would not be needed if the public voluntarily saves fuel.

Among the mandatory measures that might be taken are allocating gasoline from refineries to distributors and suspending evening and Sunday sales, government officials said.

Also under consideration is limiting motorists' purchases to alternate days.

Direct rationing has been ruled out, officials said.

So far, Schlesinger said, "the position of the U.S. has not been dramatically affected" by the upheaval in Iran that forced the shah to leave that country. The virtual shutoff of oil exports from Iran "is just beginning to bind now," he said.

The United States normally gets about 5 percent of its crude oil from Iran.

Other oil producing countries, most notably Saudi Arabia, have made up for much of the Iranian loss. But there have been reports the Saudis would produce an average of only 9.5 million barrels a day in the first four months of 1979. The normal daily average is nearly 10.5 million barrels.

Schlesinger said he had seen nothing from Iran that would indicate a return to normalcy is imminent.

Meanwhile, events in Iran continued to make news.

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini returned home to a wildly enthusiastic welcome today and declared his revolution to overthrow Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and install an Islamic republic will not be complete until U.S. influence is expelled from Iran.

Railing against "despotism and colonialism" that he said has perverted Iranian culture, the bearded, Shiite Moslem patriarch said the shah "has made the army follow the orders of another country," and his movement will be successful only "when the roots of colonialism are pulled out."

He did not mention the United States by name, but there was no doubt what country he was talking about.

Khomeini's chartered Air France jumbo jet from Paris circled three times and landed at 9 a.m. as a million jubilant followers lined the 11-mile route he took from the airport to the capital's largest cemetery. Some 50,000 "Islamic police" maintained order all along the route, and more than 100,000 supporters jammed the cemetery.

Shouts of "God is great" and "Welcome Khomeini" greeted the ayatollah, an exile for more than 14 years, as he rode through the throng in the back of a blue Mercedes. Occasionally, the chauffeur accelerated to force the car through the swarming crowd.

Near Tehran University, where more than 40 persons have been killed in the past week in clashes between Khomeini's supporters and the army, a banner read "When evil goes out, the angel comes in."

A selected crowd of 1,000 was admitted to the airport terminal to greet the 78-year-old religious leader. A crush of shouting, shouting mullahs, or Moslem priests, reporters and others mobbed him at the entrance to the reception lounge.

one mullah tried to climb over the backs of reporters, and other mullahs shouted for quiet and chanted from the Koran, the Moslem holy book, to restore order.

"We are succeeding, but this is only the first stage," Khomeini told the welcoming crowd in a loud, firm voice.

He accused forces he did not identify of trying to restore the shah to power but declared:

"The imperialist shah regime is all in the past and cannot be brought back again. Our success is the result of the unity of all the people in this country. They all follow one word (Islam) and even the religious minorities are united with Islam."

The crowd surged forward shouting "Allah Akbar!" (God is Great) as the ayatollah finished his statement, pushing him against a stairway, and aides had to shield him until the crush was pushed back.

Criminals may move to Texas

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sunbelt economic prosperity could have a bad side effect in Texas as younger persons who are more likely to commit crimes move into the state, says prison director W.J. Estelle Jr.

Estelle said Wednesday statisticians have placed the criminal "risk population" at age 17-28 and predict it will peak nationally in 1985-86 and may decline.

"The risk population is the most mobile, however, and with the Sunbelt — especially Texas — offering opportunities, the mobile population will come to this state," said Estelle.

"It (the risk population) may taper off nationally but not in Texas," he said.

Estelle presented the 1980-81 budget request of the Department of Corrections to the Senate Finance Committee.

The department is seeking nearly $220 million, which is approximately $40 million more than recommended by the Legislative Budget Board.

Estelle pleaded with the committee for more money for guards' salaries. He said the 64 percent turnover rate, coupled with the crowded conditions, is as severe a problem as "we have ever faced."

He said he loses as many as 200 guards a month, and he blamed the losses on salaries that are so low sergeants with two children are eligible for food stamps.

Among the differences in the department's request and the board's recommendation is the reduction of 689 proposed positions.

"In my estimation, this is a dangerous cut when you have a climbing prison population," said Estelle.

Texas prisons now hold 24,547 inmates, which is more than any other state, Estelle said.

A total of 105 inmates are on Death Row, and Estelle said "more and more inmates have committed violent crimes."

He noted, too, that only four states commit more people to prison per 100,000 population than Texas.

He said there are six federal prisons in Texas and federal guards make $200 a month more than state guards "although only 75 percent as much work is demanded of them."

Estelle suggested tying the state guards' salaries to that of Department of Public Safety troopers. He said troopers make $175 more a month.

The prison population has grown so fast, Estelle said, that 800 prisoners are sleeping on mattresses on the floor. An additional 890 prisoners are out of prison on bench warrants and could return, he added.

Yet, Estelle said, "for 30 years we have been relatively free of major disturbances and destruction."

There was a record low of three escapes in 1978, he said. The average number of escapes is nine a year, and at least half walk off from work-release programs, he said.

"Our officers," he said, "are the best in the country."

Good afternoon

News in brief

The weather forecast for Pampa today calls for fair skies with slightly warmer temperatures. The high should be near 50 while the low tonight is expected to be in the 20s. Winds are predicted to gust from the southwest at 20-30 mph this afternoon, diminishing to 10-15 mph tonight. Skies are expected to be cloudy Friday and temperatures should drop. The high is predicted to be in the mid-40s.

Cabot to eliminate 12 jobs

The North American Rubber Black Division of Cabot Corp. will consolidate its management in a new division headquarters in Atlanta, Ga. Robert A. Charpie, corporation president, announced today.

Seventeen division management personnel now located in Pampa will move to Atlanta during the summer of 1979.

A Cabot spokesman said that "about 12 jobs will be eliminated by the consolidation, but that Cabot will try to place those people in different jobs with the Cabot facilities in Pampa."

The change will bring the division's manufacturing, marketing, technical service, financial and personnel management into one division headquarters.

Two juveniles arrested

Two juvenile males were released in the custody of their parents yesterday after being picked up on suspicion of attempting to cash a forged $500 check at Citizens Bank. The youths were apprehended by Pampa police at First National Bank.

Local priest sees pope

BY JOHN PRICE
Pampa News Staff

He's a very strong person," said the Rev. Francis Hynes of the former Polish Cardinal Karol Wojtyla, now known as Pope John Paul II. "He has a background as a worker in the army, and he's written three books."

He's respected by the Marxist governments. But at the same time he tells of the evils of Marxism — that you're not going to overcome it by revolution, their forces are too strong, it has to be a peaceful effort, to bring justice to all the people."

Hynes, priest at St. Vincent De Paul Catholic Church in Pampa, returned Tuesday afternoon from a weekend in Mexico City, where he was part of a group that had an audience with the pope. John Paul was in Mexico to attend a conference of the bishops of Latin America.

"It was just a wonderful experience," said Hynes, who had never previously met a pontiff. "I saw him four times — the last time he was maybe four feet away."

Pope John Paul may be the spiritual leader for Hynes and millions of other Catholics around the world, but in Mexico he was just another person, at least officially. Although the Mexican population is almost exclusively Catholic, the Constitution of 1917 limits church activities, and the government has no relations with the Vatican. The church can own no property, Hynes said, and church buildings belong to the state.

"Priests can't wear clerical garb and sisters can't wear habits in public," he said. "They can stop you on the street if you're wearing a clerical collar and make you take it off."

Clerical collars were openly displayed during his visit, Hynes noted.

The religious fervor of the Mexican people, living "in such a non-religious place," fascinated Hynes. A "very, very impressive" throng of people lined the pope's route Friday from the airport into Mexico City, he said.

"It was really very moving to see all the people out there to greet him," Hynes said. Speaking of all people living in countries where the church is suppressed, he said "Persecution makes them stronger."

Saturday afternoon Hynes attended an audience John Paul held for the Mexico City clergy. The pope spoke only in Spanish, which Hynes understands.

"He talked to the priests about their duties and obligations to the people as servants of God," Hynes said. "He stressed the importance of dedication to celibacy, and obedience to bishops and other leaders."

The Pampa priest watched the bishops conference on government television, which he described as "amazing. The coverage was fantastic. They used special photo techniques."

Church policy in Latin America was the primary issue discussed at the conference, the first in more than 10 years. The pope urged participants to seek justice through spiritual means and not "revolutionary tactics," Hynes said. In the last two weeks 10 priests, most of whom were involved in revolutionary movements, have died in Latin America, Hynes said.

"He was there to guide and direct them against becoming too radical instead of obtaining the peace and unity they should be seeking," he said.

"Even at the audience of priests, he brought up the ideas of peace and peaceful means. A lot of priests there have been indoctrinated with Marxist philosophy, and he told them 'I know from experience it will not work. You won't get what you want.'"

Security for the pontiff in crowds was very good, Hynes said. Helicopters scanned the rooftops surrounding John Paul, while guards rode behind him. Some guards actually ran alongside the pope's car, which moved at a steady pace.

"Those guys (the sprinting guards) must have been dead," Hynes said admiringly.

THE REV. FRANCIS HYNES of Pampa displays newspapers from Mexico City depicting the visit of Pope John Paul II. Hynes returned Tuesday from Mexico, where he was a member of a group granted an audience with John Paul, the first non-Italian pope in 450 years.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Who owns coal?

The government's 700-page draft environment statement to spell out coal leasing on federal lands is viewed by the coal industry as a program "to monopolize and control the coal industry."

Charles C. Dietrich, chairman of the Coal Leasing Committee of the American Mining Congress, said, "The federal government owns 60 percent of the coal in the West and because of ownership patterns it controls development of another 20 percent. The government seems to use its dominant position to control the coal industry."

Dietrich said, "The most alarming thing about the system proposed by the Department of Interior is its centralization of decision making in the federal government with the resultant control of large sections of the Western economy."

What particularly bothers Dietrich is the degree of management to be employed by the government and the corresponding reduction in the freedom of action on the part of private industry. The level of new leasing will be directly related to the "government estimate of demand on a region-by-region basis."

New releases could be restricted as to how, when and where the coal could be sold. Viewing the horrendous consequences which could result from such a semi-nationalization of a basic industry, Dietrich asks, "What will happen if the government estimates are wrong, either as to production or consumption?"

We would add that it will not be a question as to "if" the bureaucracy is wrong. It is almost a cinch that such a determination, when left to a federal agency will surely be wrong. Indicators coming from the marketplace as a result of myriad choices in free exchanges can make sound supply-demand determinations. By the time the agency can gather enough information for even a near guess, the time for action on the information has passed. And no one group, especially outside the industry, can be appraised of all the relative information.

The government's coal statement includes one extremely interesting sentence: "Prime recreation sites or campground uses would be considered a value clearly superior to coal production."

Just ponder the idea for a while, it should give even avid campers pause to reflect on the ultimate effects of such a position. For who would be willing to go cold in his home and drastically lower his level of living for 90 percent of the time in order to have camping facilities for a few weeks? In fact, he would not need to be deprived of adequate camping space since mining would, at the most, not utilize even two percent of any available land.

Then too, with little oil and less coal our camper might not have fuel to power his car to take him to a camping spot.

Vacation lands are not in short supply. Minerals, including coal, will always be scarce resources. The stance which bothers us most, as exemplified by the recreation and campground statement, is that playing is of more importance than production. It tells us something about a dead-end trend now quite visible in our nation.

Maybe we were born too soon, but work and productivity has a high priority on our list of importance. Recreation and vacations are nice to anticipate and experience, but they can never be a desirable end in themselves.

A footnote to Sears

Sears, Roebuck may have a lot of company in its lawsuit challenging the chaotic, contradictory mess of "affirmative action" regulations. We've just learned of another court case in which the beneficiaries of these rules are falling out among themselves.

In the case of "Personnel Administrator of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts v. Helen B. Feeney," the U.S. Supreme Court will be asked to strike down a Massachusetts law giving absolute civil service preference to veterans. Miss Feeney has already won her suit in U.S. District Court. Nine women's organizations including NOW and the League of Women Voters, are supporting her in an amicus curiae brief arguing that the statute discriminates against women because the overwhelming majority of veterans are male.

Avoiding junk mail

Good news for junk mail victims: The industry, worried about possible federal regulation in the future, is trying to clean up its own act. At its annual meeting in Washington recently, the Direct Mail-Marketing Association urged member firms to participate in its service allowing recipients of junk mail to get their names taken off all commercial mailing lists.

According to the Washington-based "Privacy Journal," association officers admitted fewer than 10 percent of its member firms now participate in the voluntary name-removal program. But they urged more to sign up, before the government decides to police the industry.

For now, anyone wishing to get off commercial mailing lists can write to Mail Preference Service, 6 East 43 St., New York, N.Y. 10017.

Time out for Switzerland

Time was when time was a real money-maker for the Swiss.

As recently as 1970, their watchmaking industry held 70 percent of the world market. Today, they are down to 30 percent and still losing ground.

The Swiss are having a time of it for two reasons. Japanese and American producers got a jump on them in the introduction of digital and quartz watches and the rapid appreciation of the Swiss franc is pricing Swiss-made timepieces out of the world market.

One response to falling exports of watches has been to export production operations to Hong Kong and similar cheap labor sites, according to a Wall Street Journal report on the situation.

That, however, is no help to thousands of Swiss back home whose livelihoods have depended on the industry. With companies operating at from 70 to 50 or less percent of capacity, layoffs are increasing.

It's a situation which a number of U.S. industries - textiles, garments, television sets - can well sympathize with. Unfortunately, they can't offer the Swiss any solutions because they haven't been able to come up with any for themselves. Chalk it up to another example of how the economic times are changing.

Apathy or ignorance?

By JOHN WILLSON

One hates to belabor a point. For two decades now we have been inundated with reports of America's declining educational standards. I have long been sick of hearing that Johnny cannot read, perhaps because I know that my own teenagers can. It has also seemed an exaggeration to say that the rising generation cannot count its change in the grocery store. And if SAT scores decline about one more year, they will run out of room at the bottom of the scale. It is all rather tiring, really.

That is, until something dramatic happens. Several weeks ago, Mr. Edwin M. Yoder of the Washington Star lamented that his professional friends "now anticipate the day when typical high school graduates will come to them innocent of any lore at all." When it gets to the point of teaching Milton and being unable to assume that students know what happened in the Garden of Eden, then we are, as Mr. Yoder says, "watching the touchstones vanish." As a teacher of American History to college freshmen, I have had the impression of vanishing touchstones for several years but until very recently had never tested my theories. The other day I did, and herewith present the unhappy results:

Out of thirty-seven freshmen (an admittedly unscientific sample) over one in three have never read the Declaration of Independence. Seven of ten have not read the United States Constitution, and only two have ever even seen a copy of their state constitution. Nearly two thirds have not read the text of any law or any treaty and four out of five have never gazed upon any President's inaugural address. To put it the other way around, only one-third of my students are familiar with any of the basic political documents of the nation's past. Yet every single one has had a course in American History or American Government, or both, in high school.

These horror stories should not be left lying amidst the declining SAT scores. They are not peculiar to my students; advance sample from a Gallup poll done last spring seems to indicate that the national average is considerably below the Hillsdale sample. The Gallup "citizenship test" shows that only one in twenty eighteen-year-olds can identify the three presidents who preceded Gerald Ford. Double that percentage among my students could name Nixon, Johnson and Kennedy (Were you stumped?) Nationwide, only 11 percent could name their state's two U.S. Senators; nearly half of mine could. The results are dismal in either case.

It should be noted that this problem is not brand new. The democratic faith of America has always been bound up with faith in universal public (which is to say, state-run) education. Col. Francis Wayland Parker, one father of the progressive educational movement, said most enthusiastically early in this century:

"I await the regeneration of the world from the teaching of the common schools of America." Despite his messianic optimism, those of his faith are still waiting. On every level of education, performance has failed to reach the ideal, especially in our century. Once, just after the Battle of Bunker Hill, a Harvard student admitted that he was so engrossed in his books that he failed to notice the war. A century and a half later, Knute Rockne, the great Notre Dame coach, advised professors who complained of apathetic students to "make your classes as interesting as football." Apathy or ignorance, the problem seems to be getting worse.

Perhaps this is all a result of everybody going to school nowadays. A public school teacher recently complained to me that compulsory attendance and vastly expanded state university systems throw the masses into education, "and still I'm expected to teach them to read as well as in the days when only the middle class went beyond grammar school." He has a point, although he should have added to his complaint the state and federal educational bureaucracies that strangle our ability to teach and learn, in the name of universal progress. We have made education political. Our schools have become agencies of social experimentation, which has diverted our attention both from our heritage and from decent standards of achievement. One wonders if this does not imply a national death-wish, part of that "Suicide of the West" of which Mr. James Burnham spoke so frighteningly fifteen years ago. How long can a constitutional republic last if three-fourths of its citizens, as they reach voting age, are unfamiliar with its fundamental law?

Guilty until proved innocent

by paul harvey

Suppose I were to tell you that a certain psychiatrist was accused of misusing a woman patient.

Specifically, the woman says that she went to the psychiatrist for treatment and he took advantage of her.

Sexually. What is your initial reaction? "Why," you say indignantly, "that dirty old man ought to be shamed and jailed and have his medical license removed forever!"

All I said was that he was accused by a woman patient, yet your first response is automatic; you assume the woman is telling the truth.

Suppose she is not. This story did cross my desk in early January and I did not use it. The major worldwide wire services did. AP and UPI gave hundred-word prominence to the accusations of this woman.

She was suing the doctor for a million dollars and that made it news - in their judgment.

And the details of her allegation were titillating. That, also, enhances news value - in the judgment of some.

Perhaps it was one word in the story which alerted me - the word "repeatedly."

In her lawsuit the woman stated that this offensive conduct on the part of the psychiatrist had occurred repeatedly, on several occasions, during several visits to his office.

Somehow that sounded to me as though this woman - coming back for more - had forfeited her right to blame him.

But - aside from that - one woman under psychiatric care is making an allegation which, true or false, is going to stain the reputation of that doctor forever.

And I'm wondering if headlines - however carefully hedged - are not being misused to prejudice defendants "guilty" until they prove themselves "innocent."

And when they are proved innocent, do we give that development comparable prominence? Almost never.

So personally I elected to ignore that case at least until it has been adjudicated.

Now there was another situation the very next day.

In this next case, a pediatrician was accused of molesting several teenage girls.

The testimony of the girls was detailed. The New Jersey Board of Medical Examiners - considered the evidence sufficient to summon a hearing.

Who he was, the nature and multiplicity of the accusations, the stature of the tribunal: all these factors lent sufficient weight to the allegations to justify in my view acceptance of the calculated risk of damaging the reputation of an innocent man.

But in the previous instance, the accusation of one woman did not seem to me to justify that risk.

What I am sharing with you is mostly shop talk; mostly to let you know that "freedom of the press" also implies an obligation to shelter innocent targets from less innocent hit-and-run snipers and sickies and snipers.

IN WASHINGTON

Energy priority shifts

martha angle and robert walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) - Buried in the massive new federal budget proposed by President Carter is unmistakable evidence of a profound shift in the search for energy resources to meet the nation's insatiable power requirements.

Nuclear fission, widely promoted for more than a quarter century as the most promising energy source for the future, now faces the prospect of dwindling federal financing at the same time it is falling into disfavor among utility companies.

Solar energy, which only a few years ago had virtually no support in either government or private industry, is rapidly emerging as a leading candidate to provide a sizeable portion of the country's power in the 21st century.

Perhaps the most dramatic evidence of those fast-changing priorities came from Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger, long one of this city's staunchest proponents of nuclear power, when he recently unveiled his department's 1980 budget to reporters and industry officials.

"As demands for (uranium) enrichment services have been reduced, we have been able to free up some $600 million, and that has enabled us to provide additional funding for other energy sources such as solar," said Schlesinger.

Enriched uranium, the principal fuel for commercial nuclear reactors, is produced by the federal government at three gaseous diffusion facilities (in Oak Ridge, Tenn.; Portsmouth, Ohio; and Paducah, Ky.) for sale to public utility firms.

But during the past five years, those utilities have placed new orders for only 37 commercial reactors while cancelling orders for 39 nuclear generating units.

The industry's stagnation was even more obvious last year. Only two new reactors were ordered throughout 1978, while 10 earlier orders were cancelled and construction of another 40 reactors was delayed - as long as two or three years in some cases.

Schlesinger is reliably reported to have originally requested $10.4 billion for his department in 1980. But the White House cut his budget to $8.4 billion next year. Moreover, $211 million of that total is earmarked not for development of new generating technology but for waste management and storage of spent fuel rods.

Compared with that reduction of almost 12 percent, the department's solar budget will increase almost 25 percent, from $559 million this year to $646 million next year.

Expenditures by other government departments will bring the total 1980 federal solar commitment up to $819 million - a figure that is far more than double the amount Carter proposed to spend on solar research and development only one year ago.

(The solar budget proposed by the White House was increased by Congress, and on "Sun Day" last year Carter disclosed that he had instructed Schlesinger to shift another $100 million from nuclear to solar activities.)

The recent developments clearly reflect the president's personal priorities. In his State of the Union speech, for example, he singled out solar energy as a potential source of power to which he was especially committed.

In the same address, Carter reiterated his concern about unchecked global proliferation of nuclear materials, a fear that led him to ban the reprocessing of spent fuel - a step the industry insists is crucial to the economical development of nuclear power.

Nuclear fission is neither being abandoned by the Federal government nor being wholly supplanted by solar energy. "We must continue development of a variety of long-term options so we have a choice among these energy sources," says Eliot R. Cutler, a member of Carter's budget staff.

But the trend is unmistakable: There is growing disenchantment with nuclear power and surprising enthusiasm for solar energy.

Whats in a degree

Canine intelligence varies from breed to breed and individual to individual, but Ph.D. material it is not.

Although there are institutions which apparently think otherwise, a New York legislator charges.

Assemblyman Leonard P. Stavisky of Queens says his ward Shanna, in return for a registration-by-mail fee of $5, has been accepted for the doctoral degree program in recreation management and supervision of Pacific College in Los Angeles. More, a personal letter from the school's president sees great things in Shanna's post-degree future since "talent and experience are going to be recognized sooner or later."

Remittance of an additional $150 would get Shanna her degree, but Stavisky has elected to make her an early dropout since as a six-month-old German shepherd her academic background is limited to a stint at obedience school. She does, however, bark in several languages.

Shanna's brush with academia, set up by Stavisky to publicize his campaign against "unscrupulous degree mills," made a point as to the nonselectivity of diploma-by-mail operations.

It may also have made another one unintentionally about the state of highest education these days. The way their job market has been shrinking of late, a lot of graduate school alumni may be deciding that advanced degrees are for the dogs.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Feb. 1, the 32nd day of 1979. There are 333 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1790, the U.S. Supreme Court held its first session, meeting in the Royal Exchange building in New York City.

On this date: In 1861, Texas voted to secede from the Union.

In 1893, Thomas Edison completed work on the world's first motion picture studio. The cost of the studio in West Orange, N.J., was less than $700,000.

In 1956, Autherine Lucy became the first black to be admitted to the University of Alabama.

In 1965, Martin Luther King Jr. and nearly 800 blacks were arrested during civil rights demonstrations at Selma, Ala.

In 1968, Richard Nixon announced his candidacy for the Republican presidential nomination.

In 1973, Chinese Premier Chou En-lai hailed the ceasefire in the Vietnam War as a great victory for China's Vietnamese allies.

Ten years ago: U.S. air cavalrymen fought off a five-hour attack by hundreds of North Vietnamese soldiers at an American artillery base northwest of Saigon.

Five years ago: A fire that swept through the upper floors of a 25-story bank building in Sao Paulo, Brazil, claimed 189 lives.

Area briefs

Scouting week coming up

Area members will help celebrate the 69th anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America beginning Sunday and lasting to Feb. 10.

Pampa Scouts, which include Cub Scout Packs, Boy Scout Troops and Explorer Posts, will participate in activities to honor the organization, said Buddy Polson, Kiowana District Chairman of the Adobe Walls Council.

The council will honor its board members, Scoutmasters and Scout Commissioners with a birthday party and will hold a rededication ceremony Feb. 8, he said.

Scoutmasters and commissioners will receive a new Scout Handbook as a gift for their voluntary services, said Polson. Scouts will recollect themselves to their various pledges — the Cub Scout Promise, Boy Scout Oath and Explorer Code — to emphasize their standards on citizenship.

character development and physical condition.

The Cub Scouts will have Blue and Gold Dinners to celebrate the festivities.

Junior Scouts will be presented with advancement awards at the Boy Scout Parents' Nights and Courts of Honor.

The oldest group, the Explorers, celebrate the festivities with a program called Parents' Activities, which serves to inform parents about Scouting.

Parts of the handbook will be illustrated by Scouts at the Kiowa District Skills Show March 3.

Some area scouts will give a state report on the organization Feb. 10. A few scouts, who represent their area, go to Austin each year and collect the report, an official said.

A display of the year-round activities of the scouts will be shown at the show window of Lovett Memorial Library Feb. 26 through March 5.

Some area Scouts received awards at the recently held Kiowa District Recognition Banquet at St. Vincent School Cafeteria.

The Kiowa District, which includes the cities of Pampa, Lefors, McLean, Shamrock, Wellington, Memphis, Clarendon and Groom, honored Richard Thompson with the District Patch Design for his service to youth.

District Chairman Buddy Polson and District Commissioner Roy Webb were recognized for their work as area leaders.

Cynthia Cates of Lefors and Allen H. Estlack of Clarendon were given the District Award of Merit, the highest honor that may be given to a Scouter by his district.

MARK FORD has been taking French at Pampa High School for the past two years and says he hopes that he gets selected to be an exchange student in France this year.

Student likes Navy life

By ELENA CALLEN
Pampa News Staff

Growing up with his father in the service has been a good experience for 18 year-old Mark Ford.

Ford said it not only gave him the opportunity to be a part of many different ways of living, but he also learned how to meet and get along with new people.

After 20 years in the Navy, his father retired in Pampa in 1976 because he liked the community and the schools.

His parents, Leonel and Alice Ford, are originally from Colorado and were transferred to many Navy bases including San Diego, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Chicago, Boston and Pampa. However, only recruiting takes place in Pampa.

"There have been many times we had to move and Dad wasn't around because he would be overseas somewhere. Being the oldest, I sort of had to be the man of the house," he said.

Ford has four brothers: Matthew, 16; Martin, 14; Mike, 13; Maurice, 1; one sister, Maxine, who is 10 and a foreign exchange brother, Rafael Ajanguiz who is from Spain.

What struck Ford most about living in the Chicago area was the closeness of many large buildings.

Around the year he was in the second grade the family moved from Illinois to Pampa where he attended St. Vincent's Catholic School until his fourth grade year.

"We thought the people here were more friendly than most other places. Some students and teachers still remember me from back then," said Ford, a Pampa High School Senior.

From Pampa they were transferred to San Diego which was a move Ford favored.

The Fords had modern Navy quarters in the hills with a beach about a mile away.

"From a distance you could see whales, porpoises and seals out in the ocean. We liked it when the seals would come on the beach," Ford said.

He also enjoyed the many tourist attractions in the area. "Every weekend there was something to do which is one thing I really miss here."

Yet there are many things that he doesn't miss about being a 'Navy brat'.

"I felt that it was hard to get attached to my father while he was in the service because it seemed like he was always overseas or on duty, but we always heard interesting stories when he came back."

Mark said he would join the service only as an alternate to college.

"It's a great experience to face the realities of life," he said.

If the U.S. was drafting again he said he wouldn't mind going, adding that all men should be willing to serve their country if drafted.

Mark heard reports about drug abuse among service men and it makes him wonder at times if it's as great as it once was.

Next year he will be a foreign exchange student, hopefully in France, since he speaks a little French.

Steps for new residents

By DAN LACKEY
Pampa News Staff

You don't have to do too much to become a resident of Gray County if you were born here. However, procedures could be more involved if you're coming from another area.

If you're born here, your birth certificate is sent directly to the Gray County Clerk's office, where it's more or less kept under lock and key.

Birth certificates in Texas are considered non-public documents, a law enacted by the Legislature to ensure the privacy of children, since certificates of children born out of wedlock do not include the name of the father.

County Clerk Wanda Carter says great care is taken in issuing copies since there is a black market in birth certificates, especially among illegal aliens.

Official residency, however, is established by registering to vote. If you have recently moved to the county, you must reside here 30 days before registering, and you must register 30 days prior to an election to qualify as a voter.

Voter registration is in the County Tax Office. According to Jack Back, County Tax Assessor, a new resident is qualified to register 30 days after taking gainful employment.

To remain a voter, you are required to register every two years.

Though you can duck your duty as a citizen by not registering to vote, you have, of course, no choice about registering your car.

This requires a license fee of $12.30 to $30.30, depending on the weight of your vehicle, plus tax at 4 percent of the vehicle's purchase price. New residents, however, who have had their car registered in their name in another state, are taxed at a flat rate of $15. The county gives you credit for tax paid elsewhere.

If you are from out of state, you are required by law to obtain a Texas driver's license within 30 days of residence. Failure to comply is a traffic misdemeanor punishable by up to a $200 fine. Drivers with out-of-state licenses are required to take a written examination. The driving examination is usually waived but can also be required if there has been any significant change in the driver's physical condition since the time of his original test. The driver's license costs $7.

If you've purchased property, you can count on county tax of $1.25 per $100 in assessed value and state tax of 10 cents per $100 of assessed value. Assessed value is 23 percent of property value.

City tax is $2.13 per $100 of 40 percent of the assessed value of your property. And, according to Monty Gordon, assistant city tax assessor, assessments are almost always below the real estate assessment. New home owners might wonder if the city assessment of their property is automatically adjusted to the purchase price. Gordon said the city tax office looks at purchase prices in terms of trends for assessing property value but could not possibly adjust tax on each property at new purchase price.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press

An Arctic high pressure system moved eastward out of Texas today, giving all of Texas a welcome warming trend.

Highs were to reach the 50s and 60s statewide. Overnight lows were expected to remain warmer than usual, in the 30s and 40s early Friday.

The warming trend began after two straight nights of subfreezing temperatures were reported over all of Texas except for the Lower Rio Grande Valley. Early morning lows ranged from 14 at Wichita Falls to 46 at Brownsville.

Forecasts called for increasing cloudiness from the west today with a chance of light rain in South Texas today, spreading northward into central and eastern sections of the state tonight.

Skies were clear early today and southerly winds gusts to 30 mph during the morning.

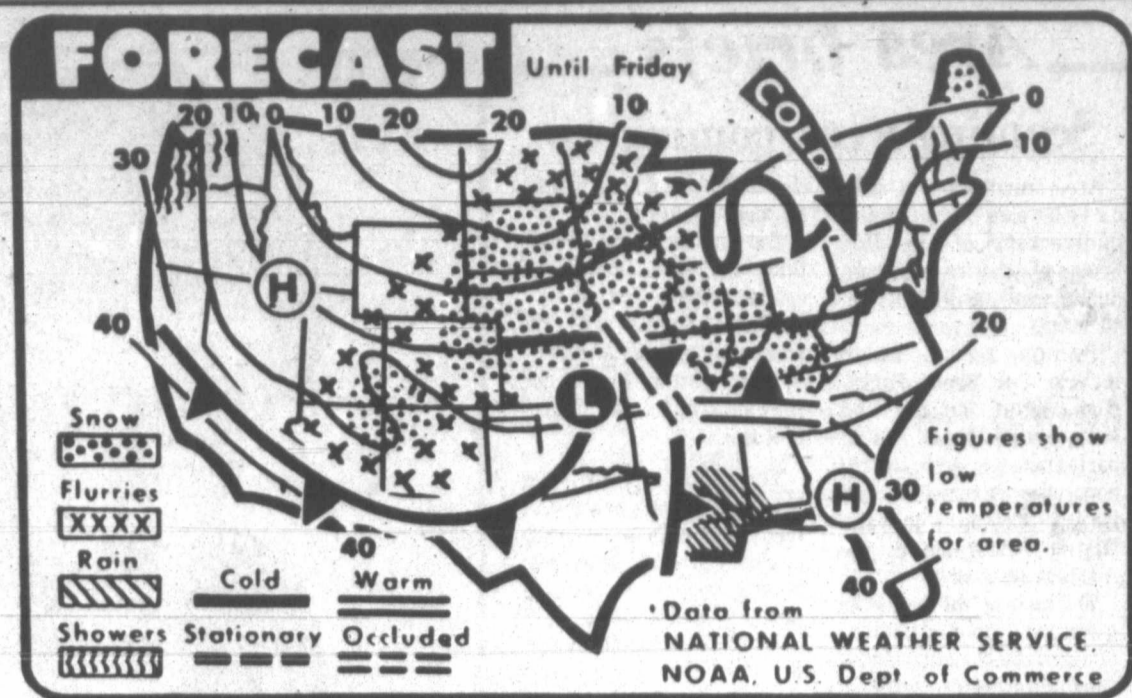

Some early morning temperatures included 17 at Amarillo, 20 at Texarkana, 24 at Dallas-Fort Worth, 29 at Austin, 25 at Lufkin, 29 at Houston, 38 at Corpus Christi, 37 at Del Rio, 24 at San Angelo, 26 at El Paso and 16 at Lubbock.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rain, tornadoes and golf balls size hail whipped and battered Southern California, damaging homes and businesses and paralyzing several communities, while a rare snowfall accumulation stunned residents of others.

Elsewhere, new snow has muffled at least a half-dozen states in the East and the West and bitterly cold temperatures were reported in the Northern Plains.

In San Diego, where more than 2 1/2 inches of rain fell, dozens of persons were rescued from their flooded homes and stranded cars. Nearby National City recorded 4.82 inches of rain in a 24-hour period.

WEATHER FORECAST by the National Weather Service calls for snow and snow flurries from the Southwest through the Plains into the Midwest and reaching down to the western Carolinas. Rain is forecast for the central Gulf. Cold weather is expected across the nation.

FBI: Prints found in victim's car

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — An FBI fingerprint expert has testified that the fingerprints found on the car of a 17-year-old rape-strangulation victim were those of the 27-year-old Argyle man accused in the girl's slaying.

Carol Edele testified Wednesday the prints of John W. McCrory matched those found on the yellow Ford Torino driven by Jeana Melissa Walker. The body of Miss Walker, a member of the Lewisville High School band, was found in a field in rural Denton County just after midnight on June 3.

Denton County Sheriff Kenneth George told the eight-woman, four-man jury that McCrory told officers he had been at the scene of the murder and his fingerprints would be on the victim's car. But, George said, McCrory denied seeing Miss Walker.

McCrory is a first cousin of David McCrory, chief prosecution witness in the murder-conspiracy trial of Cullen Davis, which recently ended in a mistrial in Houston.

Kirk said he would withhold a ruling until today on the admissibility of a statement allegedly made by McCrory and of items taken from McCrory's 1966 Cadillac.

District Judge Stanley Kirk ruled inadmissible one statement taken by Denton County Sheriff's Capt. Dwight Crawford and Texas Ranger Ralph Dadsforth in the office of a Dallas polygraph operator.

Police report

A juvenile female at Pampa Middle School reported that she was assaulted by another female student in the school detention hall. The girl was reportedly struck in the face with a gloved fist after having pepper thrown into her eyes. Charges are expected to be filed.

Anger greets train cut plan

By The Associated Press

A proposal that Texas' two north-south passenger trains be eliminated has drawn angry blasts from Texas officials — although some grudgingly concede the lines offer little economic return.

Transportation Secretary Brock Adams suggested

Wednesday that 11,800 miles be chopped from Amtrak's national route. He cited the railway's "staggering" costs to taxpayers.

Adams asked Congress to approve the cutback, which would do away with the Lone Star, which runs between Houston and Chicago, and the Inter-

American, which runs between Laredo and Chicago. The Sunset Limited, a tri-legions and Los Angeles through Houston and El Paso, would continue in service.

U. S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and U. S. Rep. Jim Wright said they would go along with the requests to cut the service, because of the unprofitability of the lines.

But other Texans greeted the news with anger.

"They're gutting service to the Southwest," said Dan Monaghan of Garland, Texas, an officer of the Texas Association of Railroad Passengers.

He echoed the sentiments of others, who claim the proposal is representative of Transportation Department bias toward the Boston-to-Washington, D.C. corridor.

"It's a northeastern mind set," said Dr. Bill Hamilton, chairman of the Amtrak Committee of the Austin Chamber of Commerce.

"I think primarily Amtrak management is not interested in spending any money except in the Northeast corridor. We seem to think the Northeast corridor is their sacred cow."

Hamilton said 120 trains run daily through the northeastern section of the country, making up 2 percent of the system's route miles but causing 27 percent of the system's deficit.

Adam's proposal would eliminate 43 percent of the system, but he says 91 percent of the railway's business is in the Northeast corridor.

Wright, the House majority leader, said it would be difficult to justify Amtrak's economic losses while trying to cut federal expenditures.

"I'm not going to ask the transportation department to continue service which is costing the taxpayers $22 million a year," Wright said.

Bentsen agreed. "I will support termination of those routes, in Texas and across the country, which cannot be justified on sound economic principals," Bentsen said.

CETA to be overhauled

By OWEN ULLMANN

AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department today announced an overhaul of its CETA public jobs and training program in an attempt to eliminate shoddy management, fraud and other abuses that have plagued the $10 billion program.

Key changes in CETA — which stands for Comprehensive Employment and Training Act — include a shakeup of top management in Washington, improved monitoring of local operations to spot fraud, and new rules that specifically ban nepotism, political patronage and other abuses.

Other changes set tighter eligibility requirements geared more to poor, long-term unemployed people; reduce wage rates; limit employment in a public job to 18 months, and encourage private industry to participate more with the government in creating new jobs.

"CETA's record over the last two years has not been unblemished," Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said in presenting what he dubbed "The New CETA."

"Any program as large, diverse and decentralized as CETA will encounter problems," he said. "But I strongly believe that government can — and should — learn from its mistakes. Particularly in a time of tight budget dollars, we cannot afford to continue wasteful and ineffective programs."

CETA, the largest public jobs program since the Great Depression of the 1930s, has a budget of $10.3 billion this year to create 625,000 jobs and provide other assistance to the unemployed.

Darvon blasted

By JAY PERKINS

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of drug experts says Darvon appears no more effective than common aspirin and says abuse of the popular prescription pain reliever has been implicated in a number of deaths.

The Senate Small Business subcommittee on monopolies was to hear further viewpoints today on the drug, once the most popular pain reliever prescribed by doctors.

The Health Research Group, which was formed by Ralph Nader, has asked the federal government to either ban the use of propoxyphene, a basic ingredient of Darvon and several other compounds using different trade names, or to place federal limits on its availability.

Darvon is a trade name used by Eli Lilly and Company.

Dr. Charles G. Moertel of the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., told the subcommittee Wednesday: "I would seriously question whether the use of Darvon is good medical practice at all."

Eli Lilly officials did not testify Wednesday but the company said in a statement Darvon had given relief to millions of persons during the past 21 years and there was no evidence that propoxyphene products "have ever caused death or serious injury when used as recommended."

Cattle herds reduced

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Cattle producers continued reducing their herds last year and show few signs of starting a significant rebuilding operation, according to the latest government figures.

The Agriculture Department said Tuesday the nation's cattle inventory was 110.9 million head on Jan. 1, smallest in a decade.

Officials had predicted for some months that cattle numbers would drop to about that level.

The annual report said the Jan. 1 cattle inventory was down 5 percent from about 116.4 million a year ago and represented the fourth straight year that herds have been reduced. Cattle numbers peaked at more than 132 million head on Jan. 1, 1975 but have now been reduced about 16 percent as ranchers and farmers sent millions of animals to slaughter in an effort to offset sagging market prices.

But cattle prices have risen sharply the past year as a result of the herd reductions. That has triggered higher beef prices at supermarkets — along with other meat and poultry — and experts say it will be several years, at least, before cattle herds can be rebuilt.

In a related report, the department said livestock producers can look forward to further gains in gross sales receipts this year but that rising expenses will eat into profits.

According to USDA records, the Jan. 1 inventory was the smallest since 110 million head were reported at the start of 1969.

The cattle inventory includes all types, from milk cows to calves.

Beef cow numbers, which are the nucleus of future beef supplies, dropped 5 percent to 37 million head from 38.8 million a year ago, the report said.

Milk cows declined 1 percent to 10.85 million from 10.94 million head a year ago.

In a new analysis of the general farm situation, the department said farmers' net income, which soared 40 percent last year, will level off in 1979 and could drop sharply because of inflation and other factors.

Net farm income — the amount left after paying production expenses — jumped to $20.1 billion last year from $20.1 billion in 1977, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said last week.

According to the latest figures, included in a summary of a report due out later next month, net farm income in 1979 could range between $23 billion and $29 billion.

"Uncertainties such as weather, inflation, global economic conditions and price and availability of energy, mandate caution in forecasting U.S. farm income during 1979," the report said.

"Although cash receipts are likely to increase, particularly for livestock producers, inflation will continue to push up the cost of production inputs as well as family living costs and eliminate much of producers' real purchasing power," it said.

"Thus, it will be difficult for 1979 net farm income to match levels achieved in 1978."

The annual cattle inventory report said the number of heifers weighing 500 pounds or more totaled 16.9 million head on Jan. 1, down 5 percent from a year ago.

Of the total, there were 5.52 million beef replacement heifers, a 6 percent decline from Jan. 1, 1978, it said.

But the number of milk replacement heifers, at 3.94 million head, was up 1 percent from a year ago.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Recent high beef prices have been a big inducement for many dairy operators to reduce their milking herds or sell out altogether, says Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland.

And Bergland says he can't blame anybody who does that.

The high market prices for cow beef used to make hamburger has been "really cutting in on the dairy industry," Bergland told reporters this week.

Bergland, who farmed in northern Minnesota before joining the cabinet two years ago, said that relatively low feed expenses and high milk prices are meaning some profits for dairy farmers.

"They're making money in the dairy business, and they ought to because it's pure slavery from my point of view," he said. "I used to milk 10 cows by hand, and I said if I ever get out of this mess I'll never milk cows again — and I kept my word."

Noting that the number of milk cows continued to decline last year, Bergland said the high prices for "canners and cutters" to make hamburger have helped take a toll.

Women called autocratic

NEW YORK (AP) — As women rise in the corporate world they are accused of being autocratic — of being subjective, of making arbitrary decisions, of seeking to centralize power in themselves.

The "autocratic" label, meant as a putdown, is accepted as accurate by many women, who justify their behavior as being necessary in the pressure cooker of top management. It was forced on them, they say.

Men often disagree, claiming females are basically autocratic as a consequence of motherly or nesting instincts. Freed from constraints, the men say, women are merely showing their true nature.

Nonsense, says Prof. Eugene

Jennings, analyst of corporate mobility. He doesn't accept either version, primarily because he's so used to hearing it applied to men or women who swiftly move up the ladder.

"The very nature of the corporate pyramid attracts men and women who have a strong drive for authority and power," he says. Whatever the explanation for their autocratic ways, they flock to executive jobs.

Moreover, says Jennings, there is nothing wrong with an autocratic style; it is even desirable. "It is questionable if you could reach the top without a flair for unilateral decision-making," he says.

Jennings, who besides teaching graduate students at Michigan State University is a confidential adviser to top corporate chairmen and presidents, wants women to know that the accusation is traditional.

The autocratic label, he says, has bedeviled everyone, especially minorities. It is a general putdown, but applied to the latter, it is meant to be especially pejorative — to suggest grossness.

The response is not to adopt a more permissive style, says Jennings, a psychologist as well as management authority, but to offset the autocratic behavior with logic, fairness, consideration, grace, tact.

The people's pharmacy

by joe graedon

People everywhere are suckers for fads, but we Americans seem to be particularly susceptible, especially when it comes to health.

Jogging is now a national pastime and while I am all for keeping fit, I get more than a little nervous when some evangelist promises eternal youth, a better sex life and joy forever if I will only take up running ten miles each day. After trekking that far about all I would want to do is roll over and die peacefully.

Dieting is another craze that Americans take up with great regularity. There is the super-energy diet, the liquid protein diet, the drinking man's diet, the Scarsdale Diet, the Dieter's Guide to Weight Loss During Sex, the grapefruit diet, and The Last Chance Diet.

With so many diets available you would think that everyone would be thin by now. Unfortunately, it looks to me like the more diets there are the more rapidly they reproduce. The only catch is that no one seems to be much trimmer.

Another trend that has turned into an obsession for many folks is taking vitamins. I certainly agree that our diets often leave a lot to be desired and I must acknowledge that I do occasionally take a multivitamin supplement. I am also a regular vitamin C and E consumer, but compared to some I am just a rank amateur.

There are people who gulp down huge quantities of vitamins every hour on the hour. One well known media personality ingests around one hundred vitamin pills every day.

The latest craze is Pangamic Acid, otherwise known as vitamin B-15. Last March an article appeared in "New York Magazine" titled, "Will Vitamin B-15 Cure What Ails You?" No sooner did the magazine hit the newsstands than there was a run on Pangamic Acid in health food stores across the country.

And no wonder. It was reported by the true believers that this marvelous preparation would rejuvenate weary bodies, help joggers run farther, improve your sex life, cure hangovers, improve vision, and generally increase body tone. Pangamic Acid was recommended for the treatment of high blood pressure, diabetes, mental illness, cancer, heart disease, aging, alcoholism, allergies and almost anything else that ails you.

Well if vitamin B-15 is so terrific why shouldn't we all rush out and start taking it? For one thing, there is serious doubt that it is even a vitamin. No one has demonstrated that Pangamic Acid is essential to the diet or that if you did without it you would suffer any adverse effects. The product was first extracted from apricot pits in 1951. During the 60s the Russians picked up on the substance and have done most of the research on it. Soviet athletes are reported to gobble down B-15 like it was candy.

While some of their claims are extraordinary to say the least, careful reading of the Russian research indicates that well-designed experiments have not been carried out. Until controlled investigations are done and long-term studies followed up we have no evidence that vitamin B-15 is any more effective than a copper bracelet or a garlic necklace. That is not to say it won't live up to all the claims, just that we don't have proof it will.

While there is no reason to believe that Pangamic Acid is dangerous, there is no reason to believe it is completely harmless either. But even if this stuff is all that it is cracked up to be, one of the biggest problems is that what you buy under the label vitamin B-15 may not be vitamin B-15 at all.

According to the January 1979 FDA Drug Bulletin, samples that were tested by the Food and Drug Administration contained calcium gluconate, dimethyl glycine, dichloroacetate, and di-isopropyl amine. The only thing the samples didn't contain was the magical B-15.

So the next time you want to hop on the latest bandwagon, whether it be a diet, an aphrodisiac, or a vitamin, at least make sure it's the real thing and not some flaky imitation.

Dear Abby

by abigail van buren

DEAR ABBY: MISERABLE IN OHIO was miserable with good reason. He had struck a 12-year-old boy on a bicycle and wrote to express his anguish as he waited six hours for the lad to come out of surgery.

He said: "I wasn't going very fast, but it was night and the poor kid was wearing dark clothes and there wasn't a light anywhere on his bike. I didn't even see him until I hit him. I was told that his chances for survival were slim. You can't help me—or the boy—but if you print this, maybe parents will see it and make sure their kids have the proper lights on their bikes so accidents like this can be avoided."

Abby, you are to be commended for printing that letter, but I submit this as a follow up:

"Dear Miserable: Since your letter appeared in my column last October, hundreds more pedestrians and bicyclists have been struck and killed or injured by motorists—mostly at night because the drivers couldn't see them in time to stop.

This is senseless and needless because there are many reflective materials on the market today to make people more visible at night.

Sew-on trim for clothing, or entire garments made of fabric that glows in the dark are available at many retail stores. If you can't find them where you shop, ask for them. Insistent consumer demand can help make this life-saving feature easily available to all who need it.

J.K.G. IN ST. PAUL

DEAR J.K.G.: Thanks for an illuminating letter.

DEAR ABBY: I went shopping for a dress but couldn't find anything I wanted to buy.

I told my friend about it, and she said, "Oh, when you get our age, nobody looks at you or cares how you look anyway."

Abby, is that the way most people feel about us old folks? We are both in our 70s, but I always notice how people are dressed regardless of how old they are.

Maybe I'm just an old fool to feel as I do, and should quit caring how I look. I'd like your opinion.

GRACE

DEAR GRACE: Your friend can speak only for herself. She certainly doesn't speak for any of the older folks I know. Don't ever stop caring how you look, dear. Pride in one's appearance is the hallmark of self-respect.

DEAR ABBY: What do you do with a guy who seldom brushes his teeth and hates to shower?

VAL

DEAR VAL: Nothing.

Are you the lonely face in the crowd? Friends make you a winner, and Abby tells you how to win them in her booklet, "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

by lawrence lamb m.d.

DEAR DR. LAMB—Is it always true that consuming more food than is necessary for the upkeep of your body causes overweight? I am a small eater and I have a medium-large frame. I am 5 feet 6 but I don't seem to be able to lose any weight. I don't drink beer and I eat very little bread, potatoes or peanut butter. What else can I do?

DEAR READER—You need to learn to evaluate properly how many calories are in the foods you eat. I see you avoid starches, sweets and, apparently, alcohol.

The other major source of calories in the diet is fat. There are nine calories for every gram of fat as opposed to only four calories for every gram of carbohydrate or protein. If you want to limit your calories, I suggest you limit your fat.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet, to give you some basic information on how to plan a balanced diet that is limited in calories. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

This diet will give you between 1,200 and 1,300 calories a day. I don't like to see people go on a diet that is much more restricted than this one unless they are under careful medical supervision. A person shouldn't stay on a strict diet more than two to six weeks, depending upon how severe it is. Such diets may cause serious problems.

Yes, it's always true that your body acts like a checking account. If you deposit more than you can use, the balance will accumulate. The balance in this instance isn't quite so attractive because it's deposited as fat.

The other side of the basic balance system is how many calories you are using. I might ask if your lifestyle permits you to use enough calories.

If you are not physically active, you might try to gradually develop a physical fitness program—even if that is walking an hour a day. You can divide such a walk into two parts if you don't want to walk too much at a time. You can decrease your balance (fat tissue) by spending more calories.

DEAR POLLY—Fragments of a paper towel are stuck to the center of my pecan wood dining table. I tried using spray furniture polish and lemon oil but neither worked. What else could I try? —DOTTIE

DEAR DOTTIE—You used the right thing but doubtless did not leave it on long enough. The usual procedure for removing paper stuck to furniture is to dampen paper with liquid furniture polish and leave it on overnight. In the morning rub the paper off with a soft cloth. —POLLY

DEAR POLLY—Nothing is more frustrating to both mother and child than struggling to get winter boots on over shoes. Now I put plastic sandwich bags over my kindergarten's shoes before putting on his boots and they slide right on. Also his shoes do not get marred or wet in case of a small leak in the boots. —SUZANNE

Gardening by Moon Signs

by lois boynton

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This column by Lois Boynton appears monthly in the Pampa News. She reports here on gardening tips for February.)

The Moon will be increasing: 1-11; 27-28. The Moon will be decreasing: 12-26.

The Fruitful Signs are: From 10:00 a.m. the 7th through the 9th (Cancer). From 10:00 a.m. the 17th through the 19th (Scorpio). 26-27 (Pisces).

The Semi-Fruitful Signs are: 3-4 (Taurus); 15-16 (Libra); 22-23 (Capricorn). The Barren Signs are: 1-2 (Aries); 5-6 (Gemini); 10-11 (Leo); 12-14 (Virgo); 20-21 (Sagittarius); 24-25 (Aquarius); 28 (Aries).

The Fruitful Signs are the WET SIGNS. THE BARREN SIGNS ARE THE DRY SIGNS. The Fixed Signs are: Taurus, Leo, Scorpio, and Aquarius. The Moveable Signs are: Cancer, Gemini, Libra, and Pisces. The Moveable Signs are used for transplanting.

February may well challenge January as being the coldest month, and we will probably have more snow.

But at least the days are slowly getting longer, and the sun shines a little more each day. And soon the little snowdrops and other early spring bulbs will be blooming.

This is the month for forcing branches of flowering trees and shrubs, which include forsythia, spirea, Japanese quince, apple, plum, pear, peach, pussy willow, redbud and others. Perhaps the reason you do not have success with forcing branches, is that you want to force the flowers too quickly in a warm room, so that the buds dehydrate instead of opening. There is a way to avoid this. First, wrap bunches of stems of the same kind in several layers of damp newspaper. Then set them into a deep pail of water, in a cool, light but not sunny room. The buds will stay moist and will open to their fullest beauty.

When we have a nice warm day, continue to prune grapes and fruit trees.

We have been so disappointed in our plants the last two or three years, we are going to raise our own plants this year.

The seed we will be using is Miss Society and New Hamburger (big red) from Earl May Seed & Nursery Co., Shenandoah, Iowa, 51603.

These will be planted the 17th, 18th or 19th of this month, in shallow flats filled with potting soil. The seed will be lightly covered with sifted milled sphagnum moss. The flats will be set in a pan of water for about two hours or until the sphagnum has darkened.

The seed will germinate quickly. They resemble small blades of grass. The little green spears will be clipped back to 2 or 3 inches tall. They will grow on until they are ready to move into the garden in late March or early April. A slight freeze they do not mind. A heavy freeze will set them back, but probably not kill them.

We will grow ours in the green house, but an east or south window will work fine for this method.

Sun scald is a very common problem for young trees. It causes a wide vertical strip of bark on a young tree's trunk, the side facing the southern exposure, to peel and die, exposing the inner cambium to the harmful sun rays. This also gives easy access for insects and disease to enter.

Protecting the young trees from this sun scald is easy. Just wrap the trunk with overlapping rounds of commercially available tree wrap paper or aluminum foil. Start at the ground and wind your way up the trunk to the branches. Finish wrapping and tie the top with string and seal the edges with tape. This will need to be repeated each fall for the next two to four years. The wrap will give to the growth of the tree so it will not be harmful to its growth.

On days when the temperature doesn't fall below 45 degrees, spray fruit trees with a 3 percent miscible oil. This helps to destroy insect eggs deposited in the bark.

Wood ashes spread on the soil around fruit trees, stimulate growth and encourage healthier fruits.

Don't let heavy snow weigh down evergreen or other ornamentals so they become deformed, or the branches may snap from the weight. Gently brush the snow off branches with a broom.

Sow seeds of geraniums and begonias this month in containers filled with potting soil. Press the seed into the soil and cover with sifted sphagnum moss. It can take several weeks for these to sprout. They will be faster if you provide bottom heat for the containers. Keep the seedlings in a sunny window and transplant them to a larger pot as they grow. As the soil warms up in late May, they can be planted outside, where they will bloom and provide bright color for you until frost. They can be potted up and brought inside where they will continue to bloom. These plants can be bought from your Garden Store, but there is so much joy and satisfaction in raising your own.

Try some of All-America Seed Selections for 1979: snap peas (the pod and all is eaten), Saladini cucumber, Grand Duke kohlrabi, Dutch Treat, sweet pepper, Sweet Mama, winter squash, Early butternut, winter squash, Queen Sophia, marigold, Nicki - Red, nicotiana, Orange prince, pansy, Holiday Cheer, Ornamental pepper, Gold Sun, Zinnia, and Peter-Pan Gold Zinnia. These of course are all hybrids and should give good performance.

As you plant your vegetable garden, you should remember that you will have a fresh supply of minerals and vitamins for your eating pleasure. It is true, they may not be had at a saving to you, what with the high cost of fertilizers and water, but when they are picked fresh from your garden they have a higher content of vitamins and minerals, than those bought from the market place and they should be free from harmful sprays.

The only important vitamin you do not get directly from food you grow is one you get indirectly from gardening. It is Vitamin D, its principal source being the sun. So as you work in your garden, you're getting your Vitamin D.

Vitamin A is present in leafy vegetables: carrots, parsley, pepper, squash and watercress.

Vitamin B is actually a consortium of sub - vitamins. The key ones, B-1, B-2, and niacin are present in artichokes, asparagus, beans, corn, endive, leafy vegetables, peas and potatoes.

Vitamin C is present in all citrus fruits, also in beans, leafy vegetables, squash, tomatoes and peas.

Vitamin E is present in the leaves of most plants and in oils made from seeds.

Vitamin K is present in alfalfa. Many are using the sprouts from alfalfa seeds for a delightful addition to salads and other dishes.

Vitamin P is a new one, present in citrus fruits and paprika.

Collection focuses on mementos of Thrid Reich

SEMBACH AIR BASE, West Germany (AP)—Hitler was so confident of an air victory in the famous Battle of Britain, he commissioned several European engravers to produce an appropriate award for presentation to Reichsmarshal Herman Wilhelm Goering following his Luftwaffe's defeat of the Royal Air Force.

With several acceptable prototypes of the medal already struck, the first German air-their medal collections as well. Since I didn't have enough money to obtain the firearms I wanted, I began collecting medals.

"Each one has a history and a story behind it, and when I started to dig into the facts behind why each was awarded, I was bitten by the 'bug.' I've been searching for Thrid Reich medals ever since."

After joining the U.S. Air Force in 1963, Dinsmore was ing to the collector.

Among his finds are tank assault badges, including one with the figure 200 on it. Early designs for this award called for 25, 50, 75 and 100 assault designations, according to Dinsmore, who believes his 200-assault badge must have been awarded very near the war's end. It was picked up in combat by an acquaintance of the collector during operations with General Patton in Bavaria in the late spring of 1945.

The results of Dinsmore's 18-year quest are in display cases throughout his home here. Included are various degrees of the German National Badge for physical training, eight awards for Luftwaffen service, various Army and Navy badges, the anti-partisan war badge in silver and gold, a 25-year SS service badge and several destroyer, coastal artillery, mine sweeper and defense awards. One display is set off by several significant sashes, eagle order. Across the top of this case Dinsmore displays a portion of one of the original sashes for the Grand Cross of the Order of the German Eagle (1937) in gold with diamonds. This sash, he says, belonged to Mussolini, the award's only recipient.

"To the uninitiated, Germany might sound like a Thrid Reich collector's dream; quite the contrary," Dinsmore says. "If I could find a way to dig through 30 years of garbage and trash at all of Germany's garbage dumps, that might be the case. I'd be willing to bet there are hundreds of thousands of dollars in bronze, silver, gold and diamonds which were thrown out or discarded after the war's end."

Most Thrid Reich awards display a swastika and that symbol was not, and still isn't, too popular in post-war Germany, he notes.

"I do the best I can, though; and little by little, I'm getting the things I want and need," he says. "And every day I run into something new. Sometimes I run into something that is not so new to me also."

Reaching into one of his several display cases, Dinsmore extracted a Coastal Artillery Badge.

craft lifted off for that air force's ill-fated plunge into British airspace. As the few survivors returned to German soil, the Thrid Reich scrubbed the effort to produce a fitting remembrance of that victory, leaving the "Star of the Iron Cross" to fade into obscurity on some jeweler's shelf.

Now, more than 35 years later, one of the prototypes for that award has taken its place among the collection of Thrid Reich medals and awards owned by U.S. Air Force Staff Sgt. Gayle W. Dinsmore, 38, of Lexington, Ky.

Dinsmore, assigned to the 601st Tactical Control Wing's Supply Squadron here, began his quest for Nazi-period artifacts while attending the University of Kentucky in 1960.

"At the time, I was mainly concerned with the weaponry used by the Germans during World War II," he said. "I went to quite a few gun shows, where collectors often displayed not only their guns, but assigned to a unit in the United Kingdom.

"At the time England was a bonanza for military collectors," he recalls. "I found medals after medals in small obscure shops throughout the country—particularly in London."

One of Dinsmore's most prized possessions is his Auxiliary Crusier Badge with Diamonds. Topped by a representation of the German eagle perched on 15 sparkling diamonds forming a swastika, the medal displays a Viking ship sailing out of the north over the globe. The badge was awarded only to commanders of Germany's nine cruisers during World War II.

Another of Dinsmore's favorites is the Grand Cross of the Knight's Cross, which Hitler presented to Reichsmarshal Goering in honor of his Luftwaffe's victory in the battle of France. It was given only to Goering, who had between nine and 12 copies made for wear with various uniforms, accord-

Brown and the Presidency

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Jerry Brown, carrying an increasingly conservative banner, no longer uses the word "remote" when talking about a run for the presidency in 1980.

Instead, the California governor says he's giving a lot of thought to challenging President Carter in the primaries but an announcement would be "premature."

Some of his actions, though, seem beyond the "thinking" stage.

—Recently he won nationwide attention with endorsement of a convention to require a balanced federal budget.

—He is strongly criticizing Carter on inflation.

—He has asked a national labor leader what his chances of a AFL-CIO endorsement would be.

At the same time, the 40-year-old Brown has stopped talking of an "era of limits" — his phrase for the need to save the environment and resources. And gone, too, are references to Zen and other counter-culture trappings that made the nation notice this odd Democrat.

It is time, he says, for America to get back to balanced budgets, less government, less meddling in the affairs of distant nations, and more belief in the country's fundamental soundness and future.

"America right now is not building for the future. It is stealing from it," says Brown, who defeated Carter in three 1976 primaries and challenged him in two others. "What we're seeing today is decline abroad and decadence at home."

And Brown comments: "I see a lack of faith in the future on the part of people about to retire. I see frustration at the supermarket. And obviously it's time for some kind of change."

This all has a populist ring reminiscent of the anti-government exhortations of Huey Long, George Wallace, Howard Jarvis and — on occasion — Jimmy Carter. And it is the sort of talk Brown has used since his political debut on a Los Angeles school board 10 years ago.

At a December meeting with labor leaders, which Brown says labor requested, he says he asked Al Barkan, national political director of the AFL-CIO, if organized labor would support him or Sen. Edward Kennedy. He said he got no commitment from Barkan.

Meanwhile, he works away at the issue he believes can be used to challenge both Carter and Kennedy. That is the proposal he embraced in a January speech for a constitutional convention to draft an amendment requiring a balanced federal budget.

Federal deficits, Brown says, are a root cause of inflation. Although Carter's 1980 budget proposal trims the deficit to $29 billion, Brown says it is still inflationary and unacceptable.

Brown is a late supporter of this convention, which has been endorsed by 24 states and needs 10 more states to be convened. But Brown is in the battle just as the proposal is gaining momentum.

This campaign also allows Brown to use the same tactic both he and Carter have used successfully in the past — to align himself with frustrated voters against government.

"The fiscal excess by the federal government is recognized by 75 percent of the American people . . ." he says. "So the only people who can't recognize this seem to be a rather limited group of experts that dwells in Washington."

Carter called a constitutional convention on the budget proposal a "dangerous" idea that might open the door to other amendments restricting civil liberties. Brown says this is a "scare tactic."

"I had never thought that balancing the federal budget was an unusual idea, or even a radical proposal. But given the reaction in Washington, it was as though I'd proposed a different form of government. Perhaps I had," Brown says.

Reaction in California to Brown's maneuvering is mixed. Some liberal Democrats are enraged by his adoption of a cause championed mostly by conservatives and by the tight state budget he unveiled in January.

"This man thinks he can become president of the United States by having Herbert Hoover capture the Democratic Party," said David Roberti, Democratic floor leader of the state Senate.

And state Sen. Barry Keene, a Democrat allied with Brown in the past, adds that he cannot support a candidate "who rides into the White House on a constitutional crisis . . . he has perpetrated."

Some newspapers also have had critical editorials. The Los Angeles Times termed Brown's call for a constitutional convention "a clumsy grab for national attention." The Washington Post said it "dispelled any lingering suspicions . . . he might be fit for national leadership."

Brown, meanwhile, doesn't act as if he is bothered by the criticism. He goes along practicing his favorite approach — moving both left and right, seeking support from liberals and conservatives.

He opposed Proposition 13's property tax cuts until its landslide adoption by voters. Then, during his successful re-election campaign for a second term, he embraced it as the will of the people and declared himself "a born-again tax-cutter."

Brown hopes to sell the balanced budget idea to liberals. If President Johnson had been forced to balance his budget, he says, Vietnam would have been avoided. And today's budget deficits finance foreign aid that props up repressive governments.

Brown used that argument at the liberal-dominated state Democratic Party convention. He was greeted with boos, but by the end of his 45-minute address, he received a standing ovation.

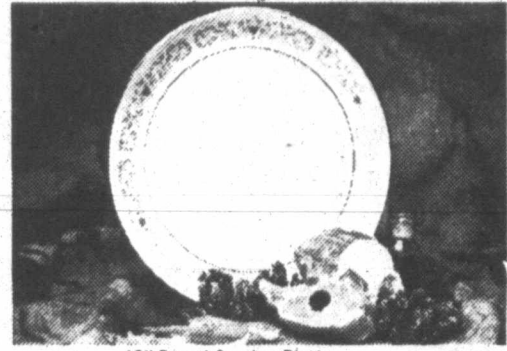

It was another example of the balancing act between left and right that the bachelor governor has used throughout his political career.

Brown described it in his campaign: "People ask me, 'Are you a liberal? A conservative?' I think you can do both."

Words govern men

WASHINGTON (AP) — "With words we govern men," wrote Benjamin Disraeli, British novelist, prime minister and governor of men by words.

It is the favorite quote of William Safire, pundit, columnist, lancer of Bert Lance, former television producer, reformed press agent, ex-speech writer for Richard Nixon and the only working lexicographer in the Washington press corps.

Words, particularly the words that govern men, are a passion and a pastime with this Pulitzer Prize winner, who pounces on a neologism — the introduction of a new word or usage into the language — the way Vladimir Nabokov used to flit after rare butterflies in Alpine meadows.

Safire has been known to whip out a 3-by-5 file card in a crowded cocktail party upon hearing a U.S. senator complain that he is being "Rafshooned."

"Rafshooned," explained the eminent lexicographer of mots politiqués at lunch the other day, "means being pressured by a publicity blitz, a high p.r.

gloss, after the manner of Gerald Rafshoon, the presidential image maker. It is one of the new expressions of the Carter administration, like born again, just in my heart, zero-base budgeting and the three-martini lunch."

Safire can and does chronicle the history of the Republic in the ringing rhetoric of her politicians. Catalogued in "Safire's Political Dictionary," now in its third, enlarged and updated edition, are some 450,000 words that have governed people and the words that politicians have had to eat down through the decades.

For 12 years now, Safire confesses, he has been a closet scholar studying where our political expressions came from and how they got into the language.

Al Smith's "Happy Warrior" is from the poet William Wordsworth. Shakespeare coined "strange bedfellows." Herbert Hoover, regretting a Republican slogan used against him, denied ever promising "a chicken in every pot," but King Henry IV of France did back in the 16th century.

Government wants programs upheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government says voluntary affirmative action programs designed to end apparent discrimination are valid. And it urges the Supreme Court to uphold a program that guaranteed half the positions in a factory retraining program to blacks.

The government's position was outlined in a legal brief submitted Tuesday concerning a program at the Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical plant in Gramercy, La. The program was challenged by Brian F. Weber, a white worker at the plant.

Too fat to adopt a child

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Barbara and Ray Gordon want to adopt a child, but they can't. The state claims they're too fat to become parents, the couple says.

"We started this thing and we're not the type of people to give up on it," said Barbara, who stands 5-foot-9 and weighs 210 pounds.

Gordon, a 6-foot-2, 215-pound shipping clerk at the University of Wisconsin, said they began state adoption proceedings two years ago when doctors said it was unlikely they would ever have children.

When the state Department of Health and Social Services said they would have to wait five or six years for an infant, the Rays said they would rather have a child 5 to 10 years old right away.

Then the couple, both 28, ran into the department's informal guidelines barring adoptions for health reasons.

"They wrote and told us we were obese and could not adopt until we had a substantial weight loss," Gordon said. "Basically, the problem is with my wife, but they told me I should lose, too."

Social workers told Barbara she had to get down to 190 pounds and she did within three months. But then they lowered the weight to 170 pounds, she said.

Jane Thompson, a state social worker who the Rays said had been assigned to their case, refused comment on the case.

Gordon said there were no specific guidelines, and the social workers made the decision according to an insurance company's preferred height-weight chart.

"I think it's just discrimination," he said. "If you were to meet us, you wouldn't say we're obese."

The Rays enlisted state Sen. Peter Bear, who said he is awaiting more information from state officials to determine if the obesity rule is legal.

"It seems ridiculous to me," Bear said. "I don't know how a state agency can deny adoption eligibility on the basis of the prospective parents' weight, especially in the absence of definitions or proof that a health problem exists."

Gordon said he and his wife have been certified in good health by their doctors, and are active in many sports. He said he and his wife, married seven years, own a home and are saving to build a house in the country some day.

"The child is the most important thing in the world to us," said Barbara, a statistics clerk in the Dane County Mental Health agency.

She said her family has a history of being large-boned and overweight, but also of longevity.

"I could lose the weight if I really wanted to, but why do it just until the adoption goes through and then go back to my normal weight? It's the principle of the thing. I've been this weight for years, since high school, and I'm comfortable. This is me," Barbara said.

The Rays say they will go to a private adoption agency only as a last resort.

"This is a state agency," Gordon said. "I pay to run that agency with my taxes. Why should I go somewhere else?"

THE WISCONSIN Department of Health and Special Services says Gordon and Barbara Ray, both 28, are too fat to adopt a child.

Farmers need to save top soil

Would you rather keep your topsoil 36 years or 2,000 years?

A foolish question? Not according to conservationists with the U.S. Soil Conservation Service, who say it is relevant to land management practices in the United States today.

"We know that continuously cultivating certain row crops up and down the hill with no soil cover can cause a loss of an inch of topsoil in less than five years," Lee McDonald, district conservationist for SCS of Pampa said. "This may not sound like much, but at this rate eight inches will be lost in 36 years. This is more topsoil than most Gray County farms have," he added.

"On the other hand," McDonald said, "there are proven, practical conservation methods that can be used on this same land producing the same crop, which will extend the life of the eight inches of topsoil indefinitely."

How does the SCS estimate soil losses and come up with such widely-separated predictions?

"Conservationists can take known conditions — soil type, rainfall, steepness of slope, length of slope, and so forth — and feed them into a 'Universal Soil Loss Equation,' and come up with a reasonable prediction of soil losses," McDonald explained.

"This method is not theoretical, but is based on 50 years of research by the USDA's Science and Education Administration and State Agricultural Experiment Stations, plus the accumulated experience of the Soil Conservation Service," McDonald said.

"The Universal Soil Loss Equation was developed so conservationists can have a systematic means of helping landowners decide on management of soil under various conditions," McDonald continued.

"The management shown on line A of the table is just about as bad as you can do," McDonald said. By adding terraces and contouring, as shown on the second line, we can extend the soil's useful life up to 104 years.

"But look at the difference crop residue can make. Line C shows what happens when we use minimum tillage methods which leave about a ton per acre of straw, stems, and leaves on the surface. This procedure extends the expected life of the topsoil to 176 years.

"But if all known practical conservation methods are used, as shown on the last line, the topsoil will last 2,224 years. Naturally, we think that in this length of time, by the use of crop residues and through normal processes, the soil will not really be lost at all, but will be usable indefinitely," McDonald said.

"Of course, soil erosion is always more damaging than we realize because erosion is just the first step in environmental and social degradation," McDonald said. "Every farmer knows that it takes more power and more fertilizer to try to maintain production on an eroded soil. The inevitable result of erosion is lower yields, higher production costs, and higher prices in the marketplace."

"We should also remember that the eroded soil doesn't just disappear. It goes someplace. When we see sediment on streets and in bottomlands, muddy water in streams, or dust in the air, we are seeing how erosion hurts all of us no matter where we live or work."

"The Universal Soil Loss Equation was developed so trained conservationists can have a systematic means of helping landowners decide on management of soil under various conditions," McDonald continued. "In other words, it is not a technical trick, but a scientific approach to conservation planning. We need to remember, too, that while we stand behind our estimates in the Soil Loss Equation, they are still just that — estimates."

"The equation reinforces the other planning methods that we have," McDonald said. "It enhances the use of the soil survey and the value of the conservationist's training and experience."

For further details on the use of the Universal Soil Loss Equation or for assistance in conservation planning or erosion problems, contact the Soil Conservation Service, Gray County Courthouse Annex, Pampa, Texas, telephone number 665-1751.

Burros roam freely

WASHINGTON (AP) — Burros roaming freely in the Grand Canyon National Park may be in for some trouble from the National Park Service.

In a draft environmental impact statement, the park service said Tuesday it would like to shoot about two-thirds of the 300 burros inside the park because of their threat to plants and other animals.

Fishermen killed

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Two elderly fishermen were killed when a 54-foot chartered fishing boat sliced into their smaller craft as it rode at anchor, authorities said.

Police said the captain and three fishermen on the smaller boat were rescued from the ocean by passengers and crew aboard the larger boat. No injury was reported among those on the larger craft. The smaller boat, the 23-foot Nancy IV, sank immediately after the collision with the Coni M III. The victims were identified as Alex Hanson, 71, and Morris Goldstein, 72, both of Miami Beach.

Woman finds what she wanted

HOUSTON (AP) — Clerks paid no particular attention to one female shopper at the Neiman Marcus specialty store.

She apparently found what she wanted — $150,000 in jewelry — without a clerk's helping hand. She also didn't bother to stop at a cash register. Police said the woman evidently pried up prongs holding a protective glass case, then lifted the top to get the jewelry. A surveillance camera caught a woman standing near the case, but the film was fuzzy.

Quake hits East coast

PERTH AMBOY, N.J. (AP) — Parts of New Jersey and the New York metropolitan area were jolted by a minor earthquake that seismologists said registered 3.5 on the Richter scale. No injury or major damage was reported. The tremor was felt for three to five seconds and the center was registered south of this industrial community on Raritan Bay.

Movie character boasts of killing

By JERRY BUCK AP Television Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Tom Horn led enough lives to keep an entire series going. Two of those lives are the basis for a two-part CBS movie, "Mr. Horn."
 Horn tracked down the Apache chief Geronimo in the 1880s, was a cavalry scout, champion rodeo cowboy, Pinkerton detective, soldier in the Spanish-American War and bounty hunter. The first and the last form the foundation for "Mr. Horn."
 As a Pinkerton agent he brought in some of the West's most notorious desperadoes, but quit because he said it was too tiring. He boasted about killing, saying: "I look at it as a business proposition and I think I have a corner on the market."
 David Carradine stars as the icy, enigmatic Tom Horn in the four-hour, two-part movie that airs Thursday and Saturday nights on CBS. The hard-drinking, closed-mouth Horn makes Gary Cooper sound like a chatterbox.
 The part originally was written for Robert Redford by William Goldman, but Redford decided not to do it. It marks the television debut of Goldman, who won Academy Awards for writing "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" and "All the President's Men."
 The original script was used unchanged for television, and Jack Starrett directed it like a theatrical feature — with numerous long shots, breathtaking views and a leisurely pace. And that may be the movie's undoing, because it starts very slowly and doesn't build a head of steam until halfway into the first part.

 Except for Richard Widmark's remarkable performance as Indian scout Al Sieber, the entire first episode on the capture of Geronimo might have better served as a pre-amble to the second half. The Saturday chapter, in which Horn turns bounty hunter and is disposed of when he outlives his usefulness, is by far the best.
 Karen Black stars as Ernestina, who has a brief affair with Horn when she comes to Arizona to claim the body of her brother, killed in the hunt for Geronimo. She reappears 17 years later, widowed and running a rooming house in Cheyenne, Wyo., where Horn is summoned to wipe out the cattle rustlers.
 Horn does his job too well. He finally becomes an embarrassment to the cattle barons who hired him, and when he mistakenly kills a sheepherder's son, it provides a convenient excuse to hang him.
 "He developed it for Redford," said Robert L. Jacks, who produced the movie for Lorimar Productions.

Phone problems solved

DENVER (AP) — He calls himself High-Rise Joe.
 As a kid, Joe Engressia set goals for himself: To be a "phone man" and live in a towering apartment building with an indoor swimming pool.
 At 29, he's reached those goals. Yet High-Rise Joe has been blind since birth.
 He made his first phone call at age 4 when, he says, he "figured out the hole numbers."
 "I got an encyclopedia salesman on the line," Engressia recalls. He laughed, he says, but his parents didn't. They wound up buying an encyclopedia.
 As a youngster he was enraptured by telephone systems. He trained himself. Now his mind is an encyclopedia of communications technology.
 At age 8, Engressia remembers, he called the phone company in Memphis, Tenn., and said, "There's a broken rotary pawl." Technicians discovered he was right.
 Now a trouble analyst and consultant for Mountain Bell, he's solved thousands of phone problems, using his knowledge of communications systems, logic and his super-sharp sense of hearing. Often he can spot trouble merely by noting a peculiar click on the phone.
 He gets calls from phone companies throughout the country when peculiar problems pop up.
 When Mountain Bell sets up a new office in a Colorado town, Engressia conducts as many as 4,000 tests.
 "There's a lot of alphabet-soup terminology in phone systems," he says. He named his cane EDITH, for "extended device for identification by touch of hazards."
 The telephone is Engressia's work, hobby and friend.
 He runs his own Dial a Friendly Conversation Service in his high-rise apartment. His favorite callers are lonely nursing home residents.
 He's also booked solid most of the time for speeches before service clubs and for appearances on talk shows.
 An Engressia one liner: "I can't really feel colors but sometimes I do feel blue."

Top 100 high school gridders eyed

NCAA investigators watch for violators

By DOUG TUCKER
AP Sports Writer
MISSION, Kan. (AP) — Armed with a list of the nation's top 100 high school football players, NCAA investigators are fanning out across the country this week in hopes of catching cheating recruiters red-handed.
This is a radical departure from past NCAA procedures and an NCAA spokesman said privately it was "already bearing fruit."

College coaches, just now entering the frantic final weeks of the football recruiting season, were not told investigators would be in the field with them.
"It really is a dramatic change in procedures," David Berst, director of the NCAA enforcement department, told The Associated Press. "We may be noticed by some schools out there. They may find themselves tripping over us on their way to violate a rule. The next knock on the door could be us."

All pending infractions cases and investigations have been halted while the NCAA pours all its energy into the new program. The national signing date for football recruits is Feb. 21.

"We're going to get after it," Berst said. "In effect, we're tired of just building cases. We want to go on the offense a little bit. We're just like another college coaching staff, figuring out who the great prospects are and going out there to talk to them."
Berst said the NCAA compiled a list of the top 100 prospects, including junior college players, about three weeks ago and plans to do the same when basketball recruiting season reaches its climax in April.

"We want to do more than just react to old charges, react to things that filter in to us a year or two after the fact," Berst said. "For instance, we're going to University X and talking to them about all the people they think are cheating right now."
Berst admitted the NCAA's eight field investigators may have difficulty checking up on 100 players between now and Feb. 21.
"I think we're already to the

"Then we go to University Y and ask them the same questions. Then we get an overlap on various schools and find out the ones we ought to be watching."
Berst declined to identify the "hotbeds," but Texas, California, Florida, Pennsylvania and Ohio annually turn out the lion's share of outstanding players.

Investigators are talking to college and high school coaches and mothers, fathers and girlfriends of players now being recruited.
"We're also talking to the kids," Berst said. "That's as important as anything we do. It may be educational for them as well as helpful to us."

Blow by blow

by Joe Blobaum, sports editor

Garet von Netzer and I are in complete agreement. The West Texas State University Board of Regents fumbled when deciding the fate of athletics at the Canyon school Monday.
Most of the deficit in the athletic budget was caused by football, a sport that costs a lot to run on a major college level. Unfortunately for WT, the Buffs never attracted much of an audience, even when they won the Missouri Valley Conference title in 1977.
So instead of simply dropping football — and allowing those gridders presently attending WT to be eligible for immediate transfer to another school — the Regents decided to cut down expenditures in all men's athletic programs.

The women's budget was increased (as per Title IX), but that was an expected — and much wiser — decision than cutting the guts out of the men's program and telling the coaches they were still expected to compete in the MVC.
With only four scholarships available, how is track coach Bob Kitchens supposed to maintain what has been WT's most successful program over the past five years? The Buffs were a name to be reckoned with in cross country and track a week ago. Whether they'll ever pose a threat again is questionable.
There would have been some howling had the Regents decided to drop football, but it would have been better than the screaming you'll here when it becomes obvious WT can't compete with schools that have more money and a more normal number of scholarships available.

Give those regents a hand. Instead of cutting out one program (football) and getting behind all the others, they've probably struck the blow that will keep WT athletics in the woods for years.
On Pampa basketball — The girls host Tascosa tonight in the windup to their first half of play in District 3-AAAA. The Lady Harvesters — we'll get to the name game later — are 0-3 in league play so far and have lost their last four, so this would be a good time to regain their winning form. After all, with the exception of its season record, this game really doesn't mean anything else to Pampa. So why not the best?
Tascosa, by the way, beat Pampa's girls 49-48 in the second round of the Hereford Tournament. That was Dec. 8, almost two months ago.
As for the boys, their whole season could be on the line at The Green Pit Friday night. It seems obvious enough that Pampa is going to have to beat Tascosa — nobody else is going to do it for them, at least according to what happened in the first half of district play.
So what does Pampa need to beat the Rebs? You name it. They'll have to play some superior basketball for four quarters. Perhaps the best analogy would be to take the first quarter against Caprock Tuesday night (when Pampa sank 14 of 17 field goal tries) and multiply it by four.

The Harvesters can't afford a breakdown like they had against the Longhorns Monday night, because the Rebels won't wind up seven points short on their comeback.
Four quarters of consistent offense, four quarters of scrappy defense and a large crowd for the last home game of the season are the Harvesters' best chances against a team that is deeper, taller and probably a little better than they are.
So What's In It Department — The name game on the girls basketball team reached a peak last week when D'Conway christened them "The Hustlin' Lady Harvesters" in the Little Harvester sports pages. I'd been struggling with it all year, calling them the Harvester girls or simply the Harvesters when I got lazy.
But The Hustlin' Lady Harvesters? Maybe it's because I'm a foreigner to West Texas, but that name makes me think of a gal hiking up her skirt to enhance her chances of thumbing a ride along the highway. For the time being, I'll stick with three-fourths of D's suggestion and call them the Lady Harvesters — and hope they keep hustling.

Horned Frogs grab rare win over Houston, 77-71

By GARY GARRISON
Associated Press Writer
Basketball victories over anyone, much less over the once-powerful Houston Cougars, have been hard to come by for the Texas Christian University Horned Frogs.
The Frogs got one Wednesday night, beating Houston, 77-71, at Fort Worth. It was only the third TCU victory over Houston in 20 games, including the era before the Cougars joined the Southwest Conference.

In other SWC action, Texas A&M got revenge for an earlier loss by romping to an easy 92-56 victory over slumping Southern Methodist.
The word "showdown" perhaps is used too often in sports, but another SWC "showdown" is on tap at Austin tonight when the Arkansas Razorbacks visit the Super Drum for an encounter with Abe Lemons' Longhorns.
Texas has never lost in the Super Drum and needs the victory tonight to regain their full one-game lead over the Aggies, who pulled to within one half game again with the victory over SMU.
Freshmen Ed Weinger and Jon Mansbury combined for 42 points in leading TCU to the upset victory over Houston. The Horned Frogs are now 1-8 in SWC play and 6-13 overall. The Cougars, winners of last year's conference post-season tournament, dropped to 3-7 in league play and 11-11 overall.

Weinger had a career high 23 points and Mansbury dropped in 19.
Speaking of the freshman-laden team, TCU coach Tim Somerville said "It's been tough for our freshmen coming into a situation where we haven't been a winner in a while, but they are mentally tough. They believe they can win."
Houston coach Guy Lewis said "We didn't expect it to be easy. I've been here before with good teams and it hasn't been easy."
Texas A&M moved to within striking distance of the conference lead with bench help from David Britton, who scored 13 to lead the Aggies to the easy victory over the Mustangs.

Free agents to stay with Pokes, Oilers

By The Associated Press
Ed "Too Tall" Jones of the Dallas Cowboys and five Houston Oilers became free agents today, but all are expected to be back in their same uniforms next season.
National Football League players who did not sign contracts with their clubs last season became free agents at 12:01 a.m. today under terms of the collective bargaining agreement.
Free agents can negotiate with other NFL teams until April 15. The Oilers and Cowboys, shown the best contract offer of one of the players by another team, could still retain the rights to the player by matching the offer.
Joining the free agent ranks from the Oilers were cornerback Greg Sterrick, safety Mike Reinfeldt and guard Ed Fisher, all starters, and reserve runningback Ronnie Coleman, and defensive back Kurt Knoff.
Jones was the only Cowboy who played last season without a contract, and by midnight Wednesday he still hadn't inked a contract.
Tex Schramm, president and general manager of the Cowboys, said he is optimistic about the prospects of Jones remaining with the organization.

Moore adds to staff at NTSU

DENTON, Texas (AP) — North Texas State has added two more coaches to the staff of new head coach Jerry Moore.
Harold Richardson of TCU was named Wednesday as defensive coordinator, and John Levra of Kansas was named offensive coordinator for Moore, who became head coach here Jan. 5 after six years at Nebraska.
Richardson, 34, played tight end on SMU's Southwest Conference championship team when Moore was an assistant coach at the school. He is a graduate of Houston Jones High School. Richardson coached at SMU, Oklahoma State and TCU.
Levra was head coach at Stephen F. Austin at Nacogdoches from 1971-74, then went to Kansas, where he was offensive coordinator the past four years.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

February 2, 1979

The types of changes you've been wanting to make in your basic lifestyle are likely to be brought about this coming year. That which held you back formerly is no longer existent.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Members of your family may find you a shade 100 opinionated today. This could cause some rumbles on the home front. Respect their views if you want them to respect yours. Find out which signs you are compatible with by sending for your copy of the all-new Astro-Graph Letter for 1979. Mail $1 for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Co-workers will resent you today if you try to con them into doing your work. Production should be your purpose, not flowery prattle.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Things in general will come easily for you today. That could work to your disadvantage. You might take an opportunity for granted and fail to exploit it properly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You know what needs doing today, but you may have problems in getting your initiative into high gear. Be lively, not lethargic.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It's best to let others boast of your accomplishments today, rather than tooting your own horn. If you've done something worthy they'll mention it, so relax.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Even though you'll be money-conscious today, you're still likely to spend beyond your means for things which aren't necessities -- and feel guilty in the process.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) In competitive situations it will take more than your charm and good looks to get by today. If you coast, your competition will glide past you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Normally you make cautious assessments before you involve yourself. Today, however, you may ignore this procedure and do something impulsive.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Take care today not to labor under the illusion that an influential contact is prepared to pull off all types of miracles for you. Unfortunately, he can't.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) An associate may not feel the same urgency that you do today regarding a collective objective. If it means that much to you, go it alone.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Instead of being your usual industrious self, you're more prone to rationalizing and postponing things today. Neglected tasks will plague you later.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't attempt to manage something for another today where you feel inept. You could cause all concerned unnecessary problems.

NCAA investigators watch for violators

By DOUG TUCKER
AP Sports Writer
MISSION, Kan. (AP) — Armed with a list of the nation's top 100 high school football players, NCAA investigators are fanning out across the country this week in hopes of catching cheating recruiters red-handed.

This is a radical departure from past NCAA procedures and an NCAA spokesman said

privately it was "already bearing fruit."

College coaches, just now entering the frantic final weeks of the football recruiting season, were not told investigators would be in the field with them.

"It really is a dramatic change in procedures," David Berst, director of the NCAA enforcement department, told The Associated Press. "We may be noticed by some schools out there. They may find themselves tripping over us on their way to violate a rule. The next knock on the door could be us."

All pending infractions cases and investigations have been halted while the NCAA pours all its energy into the new program. The national signing date for football recruits is Feb. 21.

"We're going to get after it," Berst said. "In effect, we're tired of just building cases. We want to go on the offense a little bit. We're just like another college coaching staff, figuring out who the great prospects are and going out there to talk to them."

Berst said the NCAA compiled a list of the top 100 prospects, including junior college players, about three weeks ago and plans to do the same when basketball recruiting season reaches its climax in April.

"We want to do more than just react to old charges, react to things that filter in to us a year or two after the fact," Berst said. "For instance, we're going to University X and talking to them about all the people they think are cheating right now."

"Then we go to University Y and ask them the same questions. Then we get an overlap on various schools and find out the ones we ought to be watching."

Berst admitted the NCAA's eight field investigators may have difficulty checking up on 100 players between now and Feb. 21.

"I think we're already to the point where we have to make some judgments on where there is likely to be cheating and try to get in on those situations," he said. "There are some hotbeds around the country in football recruiting where we may concentrate on."

Berst declined to identify the "hotbeds," but Texas, California, Florida, Pennsylvania and Ohio annually turn out the lion's share of outstanding players.

Investigators are talking to college and high school coaches and mothers, fathers and girlfriends of players now being recruited.

"We're also talking to the kids," Berst said. "That's as important as anything we do. It may be educational for them as well as helpful to us."

Moore adds to staff at NTSU

DENTON, Texas (AP) — North Texas State has added two more coaches to the staff of new head coach Jerry Moore.

Harold Richardson of TCU was named Wednesday as defensive coordinator, and John Levra of Kansas was named offensive coordinator for Moore, who became head coach here Jan. 5 after six years at Nebraska.

Richardson, 34, played tight end on SMU's Southwest Conference championship team when Moore was an assistant coach at the school. He is a graduate of Houston Jones High School. Richardson coached at SMU, Oklahoma State and TCU.

Levra was head coach at Stephen F. Austin at Nacogdoches from 1971-74, then went to Kansas, where he was offensive coordinator the past four years.

Blow by blow

by Joe Blobaum, sports editor

Garet von Netzer and I are in complete agreement. The West Texas State University Board of Regents fumbled when deciding the fate of athletics at the Canyon school Monday.

Most of the deficit in the athletic budget was caused by football, a sport that costs a lot to run on a major college level. Unfortunately for WT, the Buffs never attracted much of an audience, even when they won the Missouri Valley Conference title in 1977.

So instead of simply dropping football — and allowing those gridders presently attending WT to be eligible for immediate transfer to another school — the Regents decided to cut down expenditures in all men's athletic programs.

The women's budget was increased (as per Title IX), but that was an expected — and much wiser — decision than cutting the guts out of the men's program and telling the coaches they were still expected to compete in the MVC.

With only four scholarships available, how is track coach Bob Kitchens supposed to maintain what has been WT's most successful program over the past five years? The Buffs were a name to be reckoned with in cross country and track a week ago. Whether they'll ever pose a threat again is questionable.

There would have been some howling had the Regents decided to drop football, but it would have been better than the screaming you'll here when it becomes obvious WT can't compete with schools that have more money and a more normal number of scholarships available.

Give those regents a hand. Instead of cutting out one program (football) and getting behind all the others, they've probably struck the blow that will keep WT athletics in the woods for years.

On Pampa basketball — The girls host Tascosa tonight in the windup to their first half of play in District 3-AAAA. The Lady Harvesters — we'll get to the name game later — are 0-3 in league play so far and have lost their last four, so this would be a good time to regain their winning form. After all, with the exception of its season record, this game really doesn't mean anything else to Pampa. So why not the best?

Tascosa, by the way, beat Pampa's girls 49-48 in the second round of the Hereford Tournament. That was Dec. 8, almost two months ago.

As for the boys, their whole season could be on the line at The Green Pit Friday night. It seems obvious enough that Pampa is going to have to beat Tascosa — nobody else is going to do it for them, at least according to what happened in the first half of district play.

So what does Pampa need to beat the Rebs? You name it. They'll have to play some superior basketball for four quarters. Perhaps the best analogy would be to take the first quarter against Caprock Tuesday night (when Pampa sank 14 of 17 field goal tries) and multiply it by four.

The Harvesters can't afford a breakdown like they had against the Longhorns Monday night, because the Rebels won't wind up seven points short on their comeback.

Four quarters of consistent offense, four quarters of scrappy defense and a large crowd for the last home game of the season are the Harvesters' best chances against a team that is deeper, taller and probably a little better than they are.

So What's In It Department — The name game on the girls basketball team reached a peak last week when D'Conway christened them "The Hustlin' Lady Harvesters" in the Little Harvester sports pages. I'd been struggling with it all year, calling them the Harvester girls or simply the Harvesters when I got lazy.

But The Hustlin' Lady Harvesters? Maybe it's because I'm a foreigner to West Texas, but that name makes me think of a gal hiking up her skirt to enhance her chances of thumbing a ride along the highway. For the time being, I'll stick with three-fourths of D's suggestion and call them the Lady Harvesters — and hope they keep hustling.

Horned Frogs grab rare win over Houston, 77-71

By GARY GARRISON
Associated Press Writer

Basketball victories over any one, much less over the once-powerful Houston Cougars, have been hard to come by for the Texas Christian University Horned Frogs.

The Frogs got one Wednesday night, beating Houston, 77-71, at Fort Worth. It was only the third TCU victory over Houston in 20 games, including the era before the Cougars joined the Southwest Conference.

In other SWC action, Texas A&M got revenge for an earlier loss by romping to an easy 92-56 victory over slumping Southern Methodist.

The word "showdown" perhaps is used too often in sports, but another SWC "showdown" is on tap at Austin tonight when the Arkansas Razorbacks visit the Super Drum for an encounter with Abe Lemons' Longhorns.

Texas has never lost in the Super Drum and needs the victory tonight to regain their full one-game lead over the Aggies, who pulled to within one half game again with the victory over SMU.

Freshmen Ed Weinger and Jon Mansbury combined for 42 points in leading TCU to the upset victory over Houston. The Horned Frogs are now 1-8 in SWC play and 6-13 overall. The

Free agents to stay with Pokes, Oilers

By The Associated Press

Ed "Too Tall" Jones of the Dallas Cowboys and five Houston Oilers became free agents today, but all are expected to be back in their same uniforms next season.

National Football League players who did not sign contracts with their clubs last season became free agents at 12:01 a.m. today under terms of the collective bargaining agreement.

Free agents can negotiate with other NFL teams until April 15. The Oilers and Cowboys, shown the best contract offered one of their players by another team, could still retain the rights to the player by matching the offer.

Joining the free agent ranks from the Oilers were cornerback Greg Sternick, safety Mike Reinfield and guard Ed Fisher, all starting and reserve runnersback Ronnie Coleman and defensive back Kurt Knoff.

Jones was the only Cowboy who played last season without a contract, and by midnight Wednesday he still hadn't inked a contract.

Tex Schramm, president and general manager of the Cowboys, said he is optimistic about the prospects of Jones remaining with the organization.

Hearst released

By JACK SCHREIBMAN
Associated Press Writer
PLEASANTON, Calif. (AP) — Patricia Hearst walked out of prison into bright sunshine this morning on the arm of her attorney, a free woman after a five-year odyssey of kidnap, crime and punishment.

Miss Hearst was met at the prison by attorney George Martinez and her fiancé, police officer Bernard Shaw, while a strengthened security force patrolled the area and a California Highway Patrol helicopter hovered overhead.

The family's last reunion outside the prison was May 15, 1977, when Miss Hearst was sent to Pleasanton after unsuccessful appeals of her bank robbery conviction.

Her release was three days before the fifth anniversary of her kidnapping by the Symbionese Liberation Army, and three days after President Carter commuted her seven-year sentence for joining the SLA in a San Francisco bank robbery.

Miss Hearst, who marks her 25th birthday Feb. 20, served a total of 23 months behind bars.

George Martinez, Miss Hearst's attorney, said she sent her personal belongings home Wednesday in three cardboard boxes. Included was a flowered afghan she crocheted in prison and dubbed her "emergency blanket" as she hoped for release by Christmas, he said.

Shaw said the couple would soon begin planning an April wedding that probably will take place in a chapel on a military base. He said the military base wedding was planned for security reasons.

Miss Hearst will remain under Justice Department supervision for one year — barred from possessing weapons, associating with known criminals or leaving the country without the attorney general's approval.

Her release follows months of work by her family and others to win her freedom. She would have been eligible for parole in July.

Miss Hearst was a student at the University of California when she was abducted by the SLA on Feb. 4, 1974. Three days later, her parents received a tape saying she was a "prisoner of war."

Then the SLA told Miss Hearst's father, Randolph, president of the San Francisco Examiner, to provide $70 worth of food for each needy California resident. The giveaway plan he came up with totaled $2 million, but did not trigger his daughter's release.

In early April, Miss Hearst said in a recording that she had been offered freedom, but decided to "stay and fight." Days later, she was photographed during a $10,000 SLA bank robbery in San Francisco.

Sought by the FBI, she went underground. Her flight ended with her arrest in San Francisco on Sept. 15, 1975.

THE LAS Pampas chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR) sponsored an American history essay contest for fifth and sixth graders in Pampa. Gayle Collier, of Woodrow Wilson Elementary School, wrote her essay based on the theme, "Travel in the 13 Colonies". Gayle, who is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Collier, will receive a silver medal from the DAR Saturday at the Senior Citizens Center.

Deportation threat ends for now

SEMINOLE, Texas (AP) — A last-minute plea on behalf of about 550 Mennonites by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, has temporarily removed the threat of deportation for the religious farming community, whose temporary residence status expires today.

Bentsen asked immigration officials Wednesday to postpone action against the group until he has a chance to reintroduce a bill in Congress allowing the sect to stay in West Texas.

The group moved here from Canada and Mexico almost two years ago hoping to settle a farming community on 6,400 acres of land purchased through their church. But the land purchase alone did not guarantee them permanent resident status, despite what real estate salesmen told them. Subsequent efforts to upgrade their temporary visas have failed.

"I will not stand idly by while the United States government, which has so much trouble deporting Iranian students and others who have shown a violent disregard for our laws, prepares to kick out of our country members of this peaceable, hard-working community," Bentsen said in a letter to Leonel Castillo, head of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

"The alternative is to turn our backs on a community of people who will be faced with the specter of immediate deportation, bereft of financial resources," the letter continued.

An INS spokesman later said no action will be taken until immigration officials talk with Bentsen about the situation.

To qualify for permanent resident visas, the heads of Mennonite households must have skilled jobs as welders, carpenters, machinists or similar vocations. By taking the jobs, they must not be depriving American citizens of work.

Peter Berger, president of the Old Colony Mennonite Church, said many have found jobs to make them eligible to stay, "but between 60 and 80 (heads of) families have not. If they could have a little more time they'll find sponsors."

Study furthers smoking, death link

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — An 11-year study of 4,004 people has failed to turn up any support for the tobacco industry's argument that smokers die younger because of some hidden weakness other than cigarettes, researchers say.

Gary D. Friedman, who directed the study, said, "I think this adds more evidence that smoking is indeed a causal factor leading to death."

Tobacco industry supporters, among others, have argued that smokers may have a higher death rate than non-smokers because of unidentified genetic or environmental differences, not the cigarettes themselves.

"We set about to try to test that idea by looking at as many characteristics as we could of smokers as compared to non-smokers," Friedman said. "We wanted to see if they could explain the relationship that we found between smoking and mortality, and they did not."

A report on the research, conducted at the Kaiser-Permanente Medical Care Program in Oakland, Calif., was published in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The study was funded by the Council for Tobacco Research-U.S.A., an organization financed by tobacco companies.

The researchers kept track of 4,004 middle-aged men and women for 11 years. They found that overall, the death rate among the smokers was 2.6 times higher than among non-smokers.

Justice, Commerce and Judiciary, on which Hightower will also serve, controls the purse strings of the State Department, the Department of Justice, the Judiciary, and the department of Commerce and their related agencies.

"I can think of no two subcommittees that complement each other so well as the matter of these two subcommittees," Hightower said. "A part of our problem in agriculture can often be traced back to the State Department not playing the role they should overseas in dealing with foreign nations. Increasing exports at a fair return for American producers of all goods is vital to this country's well being."

The Department of Commerce can play an even greater role trying to see that government actions and policy have a positive effect on the economy of this country. It is important that these two agencies are useful to our national interest and are making the best use of the tax dollar. I hope I can effect positive measures through the appropriations process," Hightower added.

Such agencies as the Small Business Administration and the International Trade Commission and the Federal Trade Commission budgets all come under the scrutiny of the latter subcommittee.

- CARD OF THANKS
- CLARENCE C. MORTIMER NOW HE IS WELL
Now he is well, although he closed his eyes on earth and opened them in Paradise. Death is the best friend who ever came to knock upon his door and call his name. So long he has been in hand with grief, pain was his visitor, without relief, but now at last he lives, he speaks, he knows a place of peace where Heaven's sunlight glows. In memory of Clarence C. Mortimer from the Beck families who lived with and around him for 22 years. They came from far and near, who loved him dearly, at his request to see him in the hospital, Verna Beck Mortimer; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Beck, McAllen, TX.; Dean and Pat Reed, Grove, Okla.; Debbie Beck Walsh, Houston, TX.; Dale and Bobby Haynes, White Deer; Stan Beck, Pampa; Wayne and Eunice McClure, Pampa; and Mrs. Paul Nash, White Deer.
- TRUST
Let me bear my sorrow in silence. Let me carry the ache in my breast. Let me trust and have faith in tomorrow, that all things will work out for the best. Let me look up toward Heaven where I pray that my dear husband and wife and trust that someday I'll meet him, when this life here on Earth is spent.

GOP still obsessed with Watergate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard M. Nixon is back in Washington and he might be somewhat dismayed to discover the Republican Party is still obsessed with Watergate.

Get a bunch of Republicans together and pretty soon someone will use a Watergate one-liner to make a point.

Recently, the Republican National Committee met in a local hotel to decide where to hold the party's 1980 national convention.

The selection committee recommended holding the convention in Detroit, a choice that drew howls of protest from many members of the national committee.

Motions were made to overturn the recommendation, which prompted GOP Chairman Bill Brock to quip: "The last time the selection committee was overruled was when someone in the White House decided we ought to go to San Diego."

Brock was referring to an incident, disclosed during Watergate, in which a large corporate contribution played a key role in the choice of the California city. The convention eventually ended up in Miami.

The day after Brock's quip, John B. Connally announced he was running for the GOP's presidential nomination. One of Connally's political problems is that he was indicted in a Watergate-related case. Connally stood trial and was acquitted.

When Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee, who also aspires to the White House, was asked about the Connally candidacy, he commented: "He's had his trials and tribulations."

When President Carter named retired Gen. George Seignious to head the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, some members of Congress expressed reservations about the choice of a military man for the post.

One was Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I. Seignious appeared before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee last week and Pell said he supports a bill to forbid military officers from holding the post.

"You've just heard from Capt. Pell," said Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C. "Capt. Pell, a Coast Guard Reserve captain, had tears in his eyes last summer when he told fellow senators about his retirement from the Coast Guard Reserve."

Hollings looked at former astronaut and Air Force Col. John Glenn, now a senator from Ohio, and said that maybe the bill should be broadened to forbid retired military officers from serving in the Senate.

"I look over there at Col. Glenn and we've just heard from Gen. Thurmond (Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C.) and after I leave here, I'm going to the Commerce Committee which is presided over by Gen. Cannon (Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev.) and I'm certain that Gen. Goldwater (Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz.) will be there," said Hollings.

Spain recognized the independence of Mexico in 1863, more than 40 years after Mexicans first defied the rule of the mother country.

Weather Forecaster

Inhabitants of the northern United States, who are tired of shivering and shoveling snow, may get some good news tomorrow from a gray, furry member of the squirrel family. On February 2, the woodchuck, or ground hog, is supposed to awaken from its winter sleep. According to a custom from Germany and Great Britain, if the ground hog sees its shadow tomorrow, it returns to its hole, because it knows that six more weeks of winter weather will follow. If its shadow does not appear, the ground hog supposedly stays above the ground, a sign that mild spring weather will soon be on the way.

DO YOU KNOW — What word describes the sleep-like state in which some animals spend the winter?
WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — March was named after the Roman god Mars.

Rocky, HHH shared a dream

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — Hubert H. Humphrey called his the politics of joy. Nelson A. Rockefeller didn't give it a name, but he campaigned with the same verve, for the same elusive goal.

They spanned the same political generation, and they died a year apart. They both wanted to be presidents. They both got to be vice presidents.

A rival once scorned Rockefeller's campaign style as that of a back-slapping, baby-kissing, blintz-eating politician. Rockefeller was all of that.

For nearly 20 years, Republican Rockefeller and Democrat

Humphrey were fixtures of their party's presidential campaigns, either running or considering it.

Humphrey's problem was that, much as most Democrats liked him, they usually liked someone else better. He was everybody's second choice, except in 1968, when he gained nomination as the candidate of a sharply divided party.

But Rockefeller was, from his political beginning 20 years ago, the symbol of liberalism in a party dominated by conservatives at presidential nominating time.

Never mind his crackdown on welfare abuse, his law-and-order stance, his essentially conservative foreign policy. To the conservatives who often bestow, and always can deny a Republican presidential nomination, he was the liberal, big-government governor of New York.

That was obstacle enough. But Rockefeller added some political miscalculations of his own.

The early reckoning of the 1960 Republican presidential campaign ranked him a potential, and formidable challenger to then-Vice President Richard M. Nixon. He had just won the first of his four elections as governor of New York. He was a fresh face, a winner, and an option for Republicans who didn't care for Nixon.

Some of them set about organizing for Rockefeller, quietly because the GOP establishment was Nixon's. That put them on a limb, and Rockefeller cut it off by announcing late in 1959 that he wouldn't run. One of those groups was meeting in Woodstock, Vt., to plan a campaign for Rockefeller when word came that he had announced publicly he wouldn't be a candidate.

Two campaigns later, then-Maryland Gov. Spiro T. Agnew set up a committee to draft the New York governor for presidential nomination.

Then Agnew watched in embarrassment as Rockefeller announced that he wasn't going to run.

In 1973, after 15 years as governor, Rockefeller resigned. The move was widely read as a step toward another presidential campaign in 1976.

It never happened, but Rockefeller did become vice president by appointment. He yielded his position on the 1976 ticket, a move Gerald R. Ford's strategists thought would help them gain conservative support.

He didn't complain publicly, but he told Ford's political advisers that his departure would not satisfy the conservatives, not with Ronald Reagan available to challenge the president.
