U.S. sees eclipse

If you noticed that the sun seemed to dim in the Pampa area late this morning, you were not losing your eyesight.

The last total eclipse to be seen in the United States during this century passed over the area.

A spokesman at the Don Harrington Discovery Center in Amarillo said the eclipse began at 9:18 a.m. and ended at 11:35 a.m. The maximum eclipse occurred at 10:15 a.m. when 75 percent of the sun was blocked.

Meanwhile, Portland, Ore. was plunged into darkness at 8:13 a.m. PST today, but clouds prevented residents from a good view of the eclipse.

Skies began to darken about 7:45 a.m., and complete darkness covered Portland, the largest city in the eclipse's path, by 8:13 a.m. It began to get light again at 8:16 a.m.

Residents had to rely on television pictures taken from planes flying above the thick cloud cover. ABC-TV carried the event live nationally.

East of the Cascades, broken clouds provided some view of the sun as the moon started its west-to-east march across the sky.

A mattress of clouds several thousand feet thick covered most of the area as the moon's shadow made its nationally televised landfall at Agate Beach, Ore., shortly after 8 a.m. (PST).

The skies were saturated with air traffic as observers went aloft to beat the clouds with a view from above.

Other scientists, amateur astronomers and the curious gathered on parking lots, porches, decks and grassy knolls, with their telescopes, homemade pinhole projectors and commercial viewers.

For many, the thick cloud-cover turned the eclipse into the greatest cosmic disappointment since the Comet Kohoutek disappeared into the heavens five years ago without living up to its ballyhooed brilliance.

Repeated admonitions not to look at the sun during the period of the eclipse seemed academic as the grey skies drew a leaden sheet between the viewers and the solar spectacle.

The Federal Aviation Administration duty officer at Boeing Field in Seattle said "the airspace is saturated" with aircraft hoping to carry observers above the clouds for a view of the eclipse.

As a Pacific front pushed the clouds in from the coast, observers aloft were the only eclipse-chasers with a guaranteed chance to see what they came for.

Among groups chartering planes, the Seattle Science Center offered an unobstructed view plus a champagne brunch 35,000 feet above the Columbia River gorge. The ride on a chartered Alaska Airlines 727 jetliner cost $115 to $135 a person.

Today's eclipse was the first total eclipse visible in the United States in nearly nine years and another will not come around until 2017. A total solar eclipse occurs when the moon moves between the sun and Earth.

The 175-mile-wide moon shadow was due to hit the West Coast near Portland, Ore., at 8:13 a.m. PST and cross Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana.

Good afternoon

News in brief

CLEAR

The weather forecast for Pampa calls for fair skies and warm conditions today, with increasing cloudiness tonight. The high today should be in the low 60s, with the low tonight in the mid 30s and the high Tuesday in the mid 50s. South to southwest winds at 15-25 mph this afternoon are predicted to decrease to 15-20 mph tonight. Wind warnings are in effect at area lakes today. Tuesday's weather should be partly cloudy and a little cooler, with a slight chance of showers.

Pampam released from hospital

A Pampa man was released this morning from Highland General Hospital after being treated for injuries received in a fatal truck collision on Bowers City Highway Friday night.

Alan Fletcher, 18, of 1721 Evergreen St. was the driver of the truck struck head on by an auto driven by Robert Silcott, 19, of Pampa. Silcott was killed in the accident.

Three passengers in the Fletcher truck were treated and released at Highland General Friday night.

Commission to hold public hearing

A public hearing concerning the proposed 20-year renewal of Southwestern Public Service Co.'s franchise with the city will be conducted at the regular city commission meeting at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday.

The commission will also consider appointing a new tax assessor-collector, and they will discuss approving a tax service contract with the Pampa Independent School District.

In addition, the commission will consider on first reading an ordinance amending the current city ordinance dealing with natural gas piping.

The commission will also consider appointing a new tax assessor-collector, and they will discuss approving a tax service contract with the Pampa Independent School District.

Major exporter to hike oil prices

NEW YORK (AP) — The price of the fuel oil used to heat some apartments and buildings and to power factories and electrical generators may rise still further as a result of a reported increase in the price of the fuel by a key exporter.

The world's fourth-largest oil producer decided over the weekend to raise the price of some of its oil by 15 percent, according to industry sources.

There was no official confirmation of a price increase.

The oil affected would reportedly be mostly heavy refined oil used for heating some apartment and other buildings and for firing factory boilers. Gasoline prices probably would not be affected by the move because that fuel is a different product.

Venezuela is a key source of heavy oil for the East Coast of the United States. The East Coast imports about 17 times as much of this oil as the rest of the nation.

The Middle East Economic Survey, an authoritative oil publication published in Nicosia, Cyprus, reported today that the increase will take effect March 1 and that it will vary from $2.10 to $2.51 a barrel.

It said the largest increase will be for the lesser polluting, low-sulfur crude oil from $16.49 to $19 with high-sulfur crude rising from $11.40 to $13.50.

The news letter said the Venezuelans also made it clear they have no fuel available for spot sales.

For East Coast fuel-oil customers, whose bills already have risen by about 15 percent this winter, the increase could mean an additional 10 percent rise, according to analysts.

The American Petroleum Institute said the reported increase would affect residual oil, but not such products as gasoline or No. 2 home heating oil, which is used in most homes that heat with oil. The API said it could not confirm the reports.

Not only will that drive home-heating bills up, but it will add to inflation. Factories will be paying more for fuel, an added cost that will eventually be passed to customers. And utilities, which rely strongly on heavy fuel oil to power electrical generating plants, probably could be expected to ask for rate increases to cover the additional costs.

Chavez tries to organize workers

SAN JUAN, Texas (AP) — Cesar Chavez, whose United Farm Workers Union has stalled in previous efforts to organize Texas farm workers, used a day-long pep rally-like convention here to launch a new drive in the state.

A crowd that swelled to upwards of 1,000 here Sunday offered enthusiastic rhythmic applause to a lineup of union leaders and clergymen who told them that a solid union offers the quickest route to a better life.

"I can assure you it will be much easier for you than it was in 1962," Chavez said, referring to the beginning of the UFW in 1962. "The people were scared then. Nobody should be afraid here."

The UFW effort in Texas has been plagued by a split in the ranks. But, with solidarity as the key word here, the 320 delegates worked themselves into a minor frenzy unanimously approving a resolution calling for "Una Soia Union" — one union.

"We don't want to be confused with that man with the black hat," one speaker said.

The "man with the black hat" is Antonio Orendain — a former Chavez aide who split from the UFW in 1975 and started the Texas Farm Workers Union.

Orendain's group was some 500 miles away — in Dallas on a march to Austin — as the delegates here shouted the "one union" cheer.

At a press conference later, Chavez said he is "open" to allowing the TFWU to re-join the UFW. He said he knows of no philosophical differences between the two organizations.

The solidarity theme carried through the day as some 33 resolutions were approved unanimously. The resolutions call for increased wages, better working conditions, workmen's compensation coverages and other issues.

Chavez also backed resolutions opposing President Carter's seven per cent wage guidelines and the Bracero program.

The longtime farm workers leader said the presidential wage guidelines do not apply to growers and therefore should not be applied to field laborers. The resolution opposing the Bracero program branded the system as "semi-slavery." The Bracero program ended in 1960. For two decades it had allowed Mexicans to work in the U.S.

"It would wreck the entire wage system," Chavez complained.

The union president told the delegates that the Texas branch of the UFW had come a long way.

At the press conference, he said the Texas workers are not ready for a large-scale strike — such as the violence-marred work stoppage now going on in California lettuce fields.

"I think that unless the workers are really educated about the strike and have been able to build solidarity behind one another, and you have money, I mean lots of money, then a strike would be suicide and everybody knows it," he told reporters.

The call for solidarity was echoed by Harry Hubbard, president of the Texas AFL-CIO. He pledged labor support for the UFW and advised the farm workers to become involved in the political process.

A CURIOUS local resident is shown gazing at the eclipse of the sun in Pampa this morning. While it was only a 75 percent eclipse here, it was a total eclipse in other parts of the country. Shown above is a picture of the eclipse in Olympia, Wash. The clouds broke for a few seconds there so residents got a clear view of the event.

Oil strike ends today

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — Union workers at the Gulf Oil Co. refinery here were called back to work today for the first time since Jan. 8.

Striking machinists ratified an agreement with the refinery in a vote Sunday afternoon vote, bringing to an end a 48-day strike that has kept about 2,900 union workers off their jobs.

Gulf had to settle with six different labor groups, and the machinists, with about 160 employees, were the last ones to approve an agreement. A tentative settlement was reached Saturday night, and a vote was held Sunday afternoon.

Union officials said all groups generally got raises of about 8 percent the first year of a two-year contract and a 5 percent hike guaranteed on the second year with the option to reopen wage talks next year.

Notices were being sent out to the refinery's workers Sunday night, telling workers to report beginning with today's 6 a.m.

shift. Supervisory personnel at Gulf have been operating the refinery since office workers, members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers union, set up picket lines Jan. 8. All other unions honored those picket lines.

Office workers, comprising about 150 of Gulf's employees, settled a week ago, but as they signed their two-year contract, the International Association of Machinists called a strike, and the work stoppage continued.

The biggest union, comprising general plant workers, never set up picket lines, but reached agreement Thursday. The chairman of that group, A.T. Lackey, said he was satisfied with the results of the settlements.

"Overall we are satisfied, but we were looking for a whole lot more," he said. "Most workers got a pay raise of 73 cents an hour, which is about 8 percent. We are guaranteed 5 percent in the second year..."

University funding

Rep. against plan

By JOHN PRICE

Pampa News Staff

Pampa's state representative is fighting mad about Gov. Bill Clements' proposal to increase state grant funding of private universities to almost $44 million, and he says most other Texans would be too if only they knew more about it.

"This thing ought to be kicked out," said Rep. Foster Whaley about Clements' proposal. "Funding exceeded $19 million during the last two years, and he wants to increase it by 228 percent."

Clements has called for allocating $44,370,900 to the Tuition Equalization Grant program, an increase from $600 to $900 for each grant going to religious and other private universities. The Legislative Budget Board recommended $23,739,600 for the same program.

Whaley is testifying today against Clements' proposal before the House Higher Education Committee.

The representative said he believes the grant program is unconstitutional to begin with, because checks sent to students attending religious schools are sent directly to the schools. This, he thinks, is a violation of separation-of-church-and-state clauses contained in the state constitution.

He approves of Christian education, Whaley said, but added "people are opposed to spending public money on religious schools."

He said he thinks the grant program may contribute to declining enrollment in the tax-supported state university system.

"Why should we be helping send students to these schools when our state schools are partially empty?" he asked. "We've got gobs of space now."

Whaley also said the funding increase is at odds with Clements' pledge to cut taxes.

"The only way to cut taxes is to cut spending," he said. "You can't cut spending by giving money to private schools. We're throwing $45 million down the drain."

"If you put that thing (the grant program) on the ballot and had it properly explained, it wouldn't get one vote every time it got nine 'no's. It's a bad deal and no one's fighting it. No one knows about it."

He blamed public ignorance and governmental support for the program on a strong lobby known as ICUT — Independent Colleges and Universities of Texas.

If the increase is approved by the legislature, he said he may take it to court or "lead a state movement against it."

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS.
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Looking to Government Builds a prison

If you ask most people whether they are concerned about loss of personal freedoms to government growth, you will get a resounding "yes" as a response.

However, if you say to these same people that they are building their own prisons and robbing themselves of personal freedoms, chances are you will get a dirty look and, depending on the nature of the individual, possibly a punch in the mouth.

More than likely, though, you will get a very stern question on just how they are building this prison.

The answer is simple and can best be described through the story of the hard-working, good-intentioned mason.

Our story has no particular time frame: for the benefit of those needing some point of reference, let's just say our friendly mason lives in today's world.

Concerned and ever-compassionate, our friend mason strives to make a better world for himself, his family and friends.

Because of this concern for himself and others, and because of his compassion for humanity in general, our friend mason withdraws in disgust at some of the hardships and pain he reads and hears about.

When a family is wiped out by a disaster of nature, he cries for the government to do something to help them now and prevent such tragedies from occurring again.

When he reads about a young man or woman being badly burned because of a malfunction in the production of an automobile, he becomes furious at the company and again screams for protection against such thoughtlessness by industry.

When the inflation rate spirals and his grocery bills become outrageous, again he screams at the government for price controls so that his meager existence will permit survival.

All through these rough times, no one questions our heroic mason; his intentions are beyond reproach, he only wants to help and protect himself and his neighbors.

The point of this little fable is this: While having what appear to be the best of intentions, our mason has laid the foundation for the prison which will eventually rob him of the freedoms he holds precious.

Block-by-block he has laid the foundation by merely giving his sanction to the government to interfere on behalf of himself and others.

Each block could easily be given a name: call the first civil defense or disaster services; call the second consumer protection and the third wage and/or price controls.

The number of blocks will slowly build as our ever-caring mason continues to rebel at the harshness of the world around him.

The system will be repeated and repeated until, before he is even aware of it, the wall he has been creating so slowly will be higher than he.

Escape will be greatly hindered; just seeing over the top of that wall will be a hardship; tearing it down to a workable size impossible.

The point of this little fable is obvious: the next time you scream about government intervention, growth and waste, be sure that you have not given sanction, verbal or otherwise, for such actions.

Instead of screaming for government to do something, seek out private solutions to problems through business, industry, civic groups, churches or individuals.

It has been proven again and again that these organizations can accomplish much more, quicker and at far less cost, than any government agency.

It isn't easy - that is true.

But, you'll have to agree that it is a much better prospect than that of our mason, for who wants to help build the prison walls which separate men from freedom?

After all, if prohibitive walls aren't built today, they won't have to be torn down tomorrow.

Nation's Press

Whack Amtrack? Yes!

(Wall Street Journal)

A few days ago Secretary of Transportation Brock Adams unveiled the administration's plan to slow down Amtrak's drain on the federal treasury. Since the government set up Amtrak in 1971 to run the country's passenger trains, the operation has cost us more than $3 billion in subsidies.

DOT now wants to cut 12,000 miles, or 43 percent, out of the 27,500-mile system. They say the smaller system will still serve 91 percent of the people who've been traveling the old ones. The new network would still cost $552 million in federal subsidies for the coming year, and $4.6 billion through 1984.

The plan didn't come soon enough and it's not tough enough. But it's a real accomplishment and a concrete sign that the Carter administration is serious about its professed intentions to economize and deregulate. Now the question is whether all those born-again budget-cutters in Congress will put their votes where their mouths are.

There was never much to be said for federal maintenance of this huge passenger rail network. There are some places in the country — the Eastern corridor, for instance, and the Chicago area — where the trains can support themselves; but in other places, people still may like them, but they just aren't riding them. It's been mainly Congressmen's local pride and the railway unions' shrewd use of it that have kept the system creaking along.

Unless Congress vetoes the DOT plan in 90 days, it will go into effect. We'll be watching to see which of our representatives are willing to let it be and which of them suddenly start protesting that maybe the existing mess isn't so bad after all.

IN WASHINGTON

by martha angle and robert walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) — If the National Park Service has its way, most of the garages, bars, liquor stores, swimming pools, tennis courts, clothing stores, sandwich shops and car rental agencies soon will be banished from Yosemite National Park.

All that will remain will be the rugged landscape of the towering, snow-capped Sierra Nevada mountains and the scenic grandeur of the lush green meadows, forested ridges, crystal-clear streams and pristine lakes.

It wasn't always that way, however. As recently as the mid-1970s, a coalition of insensitive federal officials and executives of a conglomerate corporation had grandiose plans for the commercial exploitation of Yosemite.

That scheme would have cluttered the breath-taking beauty of the nation's most popular (more than 2.5 million visitors annually) national park. Its collapse is a tribute to the power of an outraged citizenry, aided by a coalition of conservation groups and a group of concerned congressmen.

Back in 1925, the Park Service contracted with the Yosemite Park and Curry Co. to provide nominal amenities, principally overnight lodging facilities and food service, for visitors to the 760,000-acre park in central California.

In late 1973, however, almost all of that company's stock was acquired by MCA Inc., a Los Angeles-based firm described by Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., as "one of the biggies of the American entertainment industry."

Universal Pictures, an MCA subsidiary, was given permission to use Yosemite as the setting for a television series called "Sierra", purportedly depicting the experiences of National Park Service rangers.

"The extent of the Park Service's subservience to Universal," revealed Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., was a decision to promote Yosemite's chief ranger to a $25,500-a-year job, give him an official title of "assistant director-technical consultant" and move him to Los Angeles at government expense "for the sole purpose of providing free consulting service."

Denying charges that MCA was seeking to turn the park into a convention center, MCA Vice President Jay S. Stein claimed group meetings "rarely" attracted more than 100 people and were "always (scheduled during) non-peak seasons."

But a subsequent investigation uncovered dozens of large conventions held in the park, with numerous meetings, occurring during the peak summer months. Optometrists, Rotarians, Porsche owners, grape growers and life insurance salesmen were occupying hundreds of rooms intended for family visitors.

Finally, MCA executives were meeting secretly "as members of the master plan team" with Park Service officials to draft a development plan calling for replacement of 150 rustic, modestly priced "tent-cabins" with more profitable motel-style units.

Citizen requests for copies of the proposed long-range park plan were routinely denied. One irate Yosemite visitor complained to Congress that the park "is now a private playground for the benefit, amusement and profit of MCA."

The National Parks and Conservation Association, Wilderness Society, Sierra Club and other conservation groups mounted a protest, attracting the attention of several congressional committees that conducted an independent investigation.

To avert a potential scandal, the Park Service scrapped five years' work on the Yosemite master plan and began the process anew, this time denying MCA preferential treatment and giving serious consideration to public concerns.

The revised plan, expected to be formally approved in the coming months, calls for dozens of commercial ventures to be removed from the park and relocated at El Portal, just outside Yosemite's boundaries.

That dramatic change is a defeat for MCA but a victory for those who care about preserving the stunning beauty, incomparable vistas and spectacular landscape of Yosemite.

THE U.S. AND YOU

Good ideas from abroad

by william steif

When Mrs. Ruth Mine of Millington, N.J., returned from a vacation in Sweden last August she wrote George G. Wynne, editor of a Washington newsletter with a circulation of 9,000.

She wanted to tell him that in all Swedish subway stations, or wherever an escalator is used, the escalators don't operate until "triggered" at the top or bottom step by a person passing an electric eye.

"We thought this was a fine way to conserve energy," Mrs. Mine wrote, "and hope it can be used in the U.S."

She wrote Wynne because his newsletter "Urban Innovation Abroad," goes to local officials all over the nation. It's one of the services of the two and one-half year-old Council of International Urban Liaison provides to promote good, new ideas to improve American life.

CIUL is non-profit and is run by John Garvey Jr., a former city manager of Richmond, Calif. In addition to Garvey and Wynne, there's one other professional, a couple of secretaries and one man in Europe. That's all.

Among ideas CIUL has promoted in the past two years:

— Audible traffic signals for the blind. The idea came from Japan. The signals now operate in Helena, Mont., and are under consideration elsewhere.

— Portable housing for the elderly so they can live near their children. The structures, known as "Granny flats" in Australia where they originated, are about to go up in Santa Maria, Calif.

— Verglinit, a Swiss substance which, when mixed with road-surfacing material, raises a road's surface temperature 16 degrees and eliminates need for salting. Verglinit is used on bridges and overpasses, which ice up quickly. Wynne's had more than 102 inquiries already.

— A West German swimming pool whose hydraulic system adjusts the pool's floor for the benefit of the handicapped. There are 600 such pools in Germany, Lakewood, Ohio, Erie, Pa., and a dozen other U.S. towns have built or are building such pools.

In the current newsletter, Wynne reports on one of the largest, most modern public transit systems in the world, that of Paris. The Parisian system has fewer financial worries than almost any other because of an "ingenious piece of legislation," a transit payroll tax on all Paris-area employers with 12 or more workers.

The levy, just over 1 percent, collected more than $500 million last year, which amounts to 20 percent of the cost of operating all buses, subway lines and commuter trains in a metro area of 12 million people. It's kept autos out of the downtown, provided lower fares, accelerated capital investment in new equipment, and is liked by employers because it gives them a wider labor market to draw on.

That's not going to happen right away in the United States because no state has an employer-paid transit tax. But it's a possibility for the future.

A more likely immediate model for the United States is the Federal Garden show of West Germany, held every two years since 1951 in a major city. This draws millions of visitors and has left host cities with legacies of greenbelts, new public buildings and parks.

A Cleveland group, the National Parks and Recreation Association, and Rep. George Brown, D-Calif., are exploring the idea, and it'll get more exposure at an "urban innovations field day" planned at Tacoma, Wash., March 16.

The ideas have to start somewhere, and that's where you come in, Wynne says there are two things citizens like New Jersey's Mrs. Mine, can do:

— "When you travel abroad (more than 12 million Americans do yearly) keep your eyes open" and write him with ideas in care of CIUL, 818 18th Street, NW, Washington, D.C. 20006, or phone him 202-223-1434 on your return.

— Press your mayor, city manager, local college, Kiwanis, Rotary or other civic clubs to subscribe to "Urban Innovation Abroad." At $24 a year, it's not going to break anyone, and it might furnish an idea to improve life in your area.

Getting ready for VAT

Heard much about VAT lately?

If not, if by chance you haven't as yet even been introduced to the subject, prepare yourself. You will be.

VAT stands for "value added tax," a revenue-raising idea whose time may rapidly be coming in the United States. It came about 10 years ago in Western Europe, and the ease with which it has poured funds into treasuries there has more than piqued Washington's interest.

Basically, VAT is a sales tax levied progressively, at each state of the production and marketing process, rather than all at once on the actual sale of finished products. Each manufacturer and distributor in the chain subtracts payments for materials received from the proceeds realized in passing products on to the next link and pays tax on the difference. By the time the finished item reaches the consumer, the total tax made of many separate taxes already paid is totally camouflaged in the retail price. There is no "plus tax" entry on the sales slip.

That's part of the beauty of it, according to Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal: "Politicians like it because it's a tax you can't see, although you do feel it." Blumenthal has put the administration on record as favoring serious consideration of adding VAT to the U.S. tax system. There should be no trouble getting Congress to agree since both Sen. Russell Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, are already favorably disposed. The subject is thus virtually certain to come up during the current Congress.

Action on it, however, may be somewhat delayed since there are some objections to VAT that could provoke prolonged debate. For one thing, as a tax on consumption it has been criticized as regressive - it would hit the less-affluent, who spend a larger share of income on consumption of necessities, than it would the rich. Also, it could have an inflationary impact since by being built into consumer goods prices it would tend to raise them.

On the other hand, it would be easier to collect. And because it would tap fairly consistent consumption rather than fluctuating incomes, it would be a steadier revenue producer for government through good economic times and bad. Easing the tax load on the better off and on investment is an advantage from the business point of view, since it would encourage capital formation.

And Blumenthal, who sees congressional action on VAT by 1981, believes that regressive effect could be limited by exempting some items and taxing luxuries at higher rates.

VAT would not replace other taxes, but would be included in a general mix that would permit reduction of existing rates on incomes and possibly property. Blumenthal suggests a federal split of one-half of revenues from VAT and half from incomes.

VAT also appeals to many in Washington as a possible way out of the unpopular upward trend in Social Security taxes.

There is one aspect of VAT about which there is no debate. It would not make taxes any lighter, only spread them around a bit differently, and, as Blumenthal notes, reduce visibility.

As poet Gertrude Stein could have said, a tax is a tax is a tax. And as any taxpayer can say, payment in the end always comes from the same source - the public.

Berry's World

"You didn't look at the eclipse, did you?"

Texas delegation in capital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas delegation notes: The Democrats lost the brain battle. But so did the Republicans.

After the taping of a "celebrity special" version of the television quiz show "It's Academic," the final scores read: Democrats 360, Republicans 480, Reporters 500.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen joined fellow Democratic Sens. Daniel Moynihan of New York and Alan Cranston of California. Sens. Lowell Weicker of Connecticut, John Danforth of Missouri and H.J. Heinz III of Pennsylvania represented the GOP.

The victorious media team consisted of columnist Art Buchwald, NBC's Jessica Savitch and The Washington Post's David Broder.

The real winner, however, was a center for abused children. Each team's score was converted into dollars and a local food chain upped the ante to an even $1,800 contribution.

Bentsen is gearing up for another bout with the bureaucracy. Last week, he asked the General Accounting Office to continue its study of the "government paperwork burden."

"My purpose, of course, is to lay the groundwork for legislation to reduce or eliminate unnecessary paperwork," said Bentsen.

With that goal in mind, the senator has introduced four bills designed to reduce "excessive government regulation and paperwork."

Two Bentsen bills along the same lines were signed into law last year.

The GAO, congress' investigative agency, said last year that federal paperwork costs businesses more than $1 billion.

This country's military strength received critical reviews from two Texans last week.

After a tour of six NATO nations, Sen. John Tower concluded that "U.S.

prestige and credibility of commitment is low. There is a question whether U.S. forces are adequate to back our policies and commitments."

Freshman Democrat Rep. Joe Wyatt, a member of the House Armed Services Committee, said recent briefings by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Defense Department and the CIA have led him to believe "that we are probably still the strongest nation in the world, but that other nations, most notably the Soviet Union, are moving up faster than anyone thought possible a few years ago."

Fire kills 2

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Fire roared through the apartment of a firefighter here Sunday, killing his wife and son and critically injuring another son, fire department officials said. The fireman, Pedro Martinez, a six-year veteran, had gone to a store when fire broke out in his apartment shortly before 8 a.m.

Connally issues capital invitation

FLORESVILLE, Texas (AP) — John Connally's hometown supporters had something to look forward to today.

They've been invited to a picnic on the White House lawn.

The candidate for the Republican presidential nomination made the offer Sunday as close to 1,000 neighbors and friends turned out for a courthouse square birthday honoring him and his wife, Nellie.

Mrs. Connally's 60th birthday was Saturday and the former Texas governor and former secretary of treasury will be 62 on Tuesday.

Monday morning, Connally was to appear at a breakfast in McAllen, then travel to Corpus Christi and Dallas today.

Juanita Mosher, a leader in the local Connally drive, reported that 2,000 persons in Floresville, which has a listed population of 4,026, had signed a petition saying they would support Connally in the next presidential election.

"The rest of you all better get on that petition," Connally shouted. "Cause I'm going to have everybody that signs up for a get-together on the South Lawn of the White House."

City and State news

Actor provides wit, actresses lack it

"Butterflies Are Free", a three-act comedy by Leonard Gershe, is your usual boy-meets-girl, boy-loses-girl, boy-gets-girl kind of play, with the twist that the boy in this case happens to be blind.

The play is being performed at the Country Squire Dinner Theater in Amarillo through March 17.

The young man, Don Baker (played by Paul Preece) has moved out of his wealthy widowed mother's home in Scarsdale into a small apartment on the lower east side of New York. Don is conducting an experiment in self reliance, and his utterly overbearing mother is supposed to give the test two months. Of course, this being a play and a play needing a conflict, Mom's own will caves in after a month and she barges in unexpectedly on Don's budding romance with, uh, the girl next door.

he uses to good advantage as Don Richard Privitt is good in his brief appearance as the director.

I didn't like the ladies so well, Freda Williams doesn't give us an excuse in the world for liking Jill Tanner and the character comes out shallow and shrill. Karen Hastings as the mother has some good moments late in the play but the drill sergeant sing-song voice she adopts for the character introduces old Mom as a caricature.

Still, a dinner theater is much more than the play. It's the play, the food, the pre-play entertainment, the accomplished waiters and waitresses, all rolled into a single package.

The package at the Country Squire is pretty good. And even if you're not all that hot about the play, it's really a amiable place to kill about five hours with friends.

Entertainment before the show is by a band called the Country Rogues. And the evening is managed by a personable lady named Janice Perkins, who also sings with the Rogues.

Most often asked Questions On Nutrition
BY: KATRINA BIGHAM

Q. Will eating eggs raise your cholesterol level?

A. Linda Clark in "Know Your Nutrition" states unequivocally that one of the biggest myths and the biggest scares is that you shouldn't eat eggs for fear that they will raise your cholesterol level. As it turns out, eggs contain a cholesterol dissolver, called lecithin (pronounced "less-i-thin"). Studies have shown that persons eating as many as twelve eggs a day showed no increase in cholesterol level.

Prominent author and nutritionist Roger J. Williams, Ph. D. says that persons worried about their cholesterol level should not shun cholesterol foods (such as eggs), but consume more lecithin. He cites the work of Lester M. Morrison, M.D. who found that blood cholesterol levels in twelve patients were lowered when they consumed about an ounce of lecithin daily for three months.

Weather

Texas weather
 By The Associated Press
 Temperatures dipped below the freezing mark overnight along the Red River and in parts of West Texas. But forecasters predicted a general warming trend would continue today.
 Early morning readings west of a line extending from Mineral Wells through Junction to Del Rio were in the 20s. Marfa reported a 30 degree reading. Wink and Junction had 26 and Dalhart had a 27.
 Central Texas had readings in the 30s, and along the coast the temperature climbed into the 40s.
 Forecasters predicted fair and warmer weather of all Texas today, with temperatures from the upper 50s in the northeast to the middle 70s in along the Rio Grande.

National

The winter-weary Midwest staggered under another fierce snowstorm that moved eastward today, while heavy rains pushed streams and rivers to flood stage from North Carolina through New England.
 At least six deaths were blamed on the storms. Evacuations were under way in Maryland and Virginia, and rescue crews were on alert all along the Atlantic Coast.
 Authorities evacuated the residents of tiny Brems Bluff in central Virginia as the James, Shenandoah, Roanoke and Dan rivers rose. A 20-year-old Richmond, Va., man drowned Saturday when he tried to jump from the roof of a car trapped in the raging waters of Gillie Creek.
 Evacuations continued up the coast. Some residents of Greensboro, Md., were asked to leave their homes when the Choptank River overran its banks, while in Federalsburg Police Chief Joseph Koski imposed a 10-hour curfew Sunday night.

WEATHER FORECAST by the National Weather Service calls for snow and rain in the Northeast. However, sunny skies are expected for most of the nation. Some warming is predicted for the Southwest but most of the country will be seasonably cold.

Chinese offensive predicted

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Sources in Peking predict a big Chinese offensive in the Vietnam border war in a few days. Japan's Kyodo news service reported, while Hanoi claimed China is sending in more reinforcements after losing 4,000 troops in four Vietnamese counter-attacks.

Kyodo said sources in the Chinese capital told it the goal of the intensified "punitive action" against Vietnam would be to destroy at least one Vietnamese army division and military bases and artillery emplacements near the border.
 But British reporters in Peking said Vice Premier Wang

Chen told them the Chinese invasion force would not try to advance down the Red River valley toward Hanoi.
 Kyodo said Peking Radio reported Chinese troops had engaged Vietnamese army regulars in hand-to-hand fighting near the village of Dong Dang, seven miles from the key northeast town of Lang Son. The broadcast said a Chinese battalion overran five hilltop positions near Dong Dang but gave no casualty figures and did not say when the battle occurred.

 Hanoi Radio claimed counter-attacking troops killed almost 4,000 Chinese and destroyed 160 tanks in weekend battles. It claimed a total of 16,000 Chinese killed since the invasion began Feb. 17.

Price co-sponsors bill

State Sen. Bob Price of Pampa announced Saturday he is co-sponsoring a bill that would provide for state participation in the construction of long-term disposal facilities for nuclear wastes.
 The legislation, Senate Bill 664, covers nuclear waste materials which require licensing for storage by the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission. It would establish a review process by which the Texas Natural Resources Council would be a part of any site study conducted by the federal government.

 Price also announced he is sponsoring legislation to implement the Red River Compact, which would govern the use, control and distribution of interstate Red River water. The compact was created last year between Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas.

Dear Abby

by abigail van buren

DEAR ABBY: I just lost the only man I ever loved. When I came home last evening I found a note from Jimmy saying, "Goodbye"—after we lived together for a year.

In his note he said that my job was changing me into a hard person, and he couldn't ask me to quit because he thought it was what I really wanted to do. (It's not true. I hate my work, but the money is too good to pass up.)

Abby, I am a prostitute. The money helped pay our bills. Jimmy's job didn't pay much, and we needed the bread. I know there will never be another man in my life like Jimmy. He loved the real me—not just my body.

Should I quit my profession and go after him? I know he still loves me.

Please don't say where this letter is from. My father is a minister and my folks don't know what I do for a living.

WORKING GIRL

DEAR GIRL: Quit your job and go after him. Jesus forgave a woman in your profession. Could Jimmy do less?

DEAR ABBY: Your advice to SPARKLING, who feels that her engagement ring is "on loan," disturbed me. (The ring was purchased by her fiance's mother and given to her with the understanding that in the event of a divorce, it would be returned.)

Abby, a marriage that begins by working out a possible divorce settlement doesn't sound like it has too much going for it. And returning Mama's ring—as you suggest—just might speed up a split.

The first year of marriage is hard enough without playing hot potato with an engagement ring.

I say SPARKLING should keep the ring. It, like her husband, now belongs to her—not Mama.

LONG ISLAND LAURIE

DEAR LAURIE: A marriage with the divorce settlement worked out in advance is sometimes preferable to one without, should the couple split. (And today, one in three do.) I still think since SPARKLING feels that her engagement ring is "on loan" she should return it and do without until her husband can buy her one.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the letter from the woman who was disgusted with stupid TV commercials: She asked, "What ever happened to those wonderful free samples companies used to send out to acquaint people with their products?"

Well, I know what happened to several cases of free samples that should have been delivered but weren't. They were taken home and kept in the family.

DISGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: If you are absolutely sure of your facts, the person responsible for delivering those free samples should be reported.

DEAR ABBY: Do you happen to know what the Alcoholics Anonymous credo is? It starts, "Oh, God, grant me the ability to accept the things I cannot change..."

DEFRESSED IN DES PLAINES

DEAR DEPRESSED:

"God grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change, courage to change the things I can, and wisdom to know the difference."

Dr. Lamb

by lawrence lamb m.d.

DEAR DR. LAMB—I am a 59-year-old man and am very active. There must be an obstruction of my urinary tract or my bladder or my kidneys aren't functioning properly. I drink a lot of fluids, consisting of water, milk, iced tea and a six-pack of beer once or twice a week, but very little coffee.

When I relieve myself I have to keep making trips to the bathroom and have to go immediately for I can't put it off. I have a hernia and have put the repair job off and am wondering if there may be pressure from the hernia that is affecting the bladder or kidneys. Is there any medicine that could relieve this condition? I don't recall having this problem when I was younger.

DEAR READER—Many people develop problems they didn't have earlier. Of course, you'll have to have an examination to find out exactly what is wrong. You could have a urinary tract infection. Another very likely probability is that you have an enlarged prostate.

The prostate gland surrounds the urethra and can obstruct the outflow from the bladder. That's the main reason many men have to have a prostate operation. Your description of your difficulties isn't sufficiently detailed for me to have a very good idea if this is the problem or not.

A person with an enlarged prostate usually has trouble starting his stream and may have trouble stopping it. The stream is often small as opposed to the large easy flow of younger years.

If there is a lot of trouble in passing urine, the bladder may be overdistended with retained urine, often causing a person to urinate frequently. The overfilled bladder keeps signaling that it needs to be emptied, but the person never succeeds in emptying it because of the obstruction from the enlarged prostate gland.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-6, Prostate Gland, to give you a better idea of how this can affect you and what can be done about it. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Now regarding your hernia, if you're talking about a hernia in the groin, the pressure from such a hernia, if there is any at all, isn't near the urethra or bladder area.

ST. MATTHEW'S EPISCOPAL CHURCH will hold its 26th annual Shrove Tuesday Pancake Supper in the parish hall on Feb. 27 from 5 to 8 p.m. All proceeds from the event will go to St. Matthew's Day School. Pictured above making advance preparations are, from left to right, Bill Ragsdale, the Rev. E. Dennis Smart, and Will Ellis. Tickets may be purchased from the Church office. Children under five are admitted free.

Beauty improvement plan

by josephine lowman

KEEP YOUR NEW FIGURE (This is the last in a series of 15 articles in which Josephine Lowman, author of "Why Grow Old?" and leading authority on health and beauty, tells you exactly what to do to lose 20 pounds in eight weeks. You may want to save these menus and exercises to refer back to during the eight-week period.)

Beautiful women are not born that way. They are self-made. They, like those of you who are following the Beauty Improvement Plan (BIP), have invested in self-discipline with determination and enthusiasm. They accepted the challenge of self-improvement and were not willing to settle for less than the best.

This is the last week of BIP, and congratulations are in order for thousands of my readers. Isn't it great to be rid of those rolls and bulges, and isn't shopping fun? Along with your new silhouette I am sure you have a new outlook and lots more energy.

Not all of you started at the beginning of this slimming course. Many still have more to go. I am sure all of you will want to know how to keep your new figure once you reach your ideal weight. The number of calories you require daily is influenced by your size, age and sex. Men and large persons need more calories because of their greater stature and older persons require fewer.

You can get a fairly accurate idea of how many calories you should have each day by multiplying your ideal weight by 18 if you are a man and by 16 if you are a woman and are moderately active. If you are very vigorous you will need more calories than this method gives you, and if you are inactive or an older adult you will require fewer.

Don't sabotage your hard won figure by returning to the habits in food that piled on the extra pounds in the first place. Follow a few simple rules and you will never again have to cope with the problem of overweight.

You have now formed the habit of small portions. Keep them moderate and do not have seconds. Make the rich calorie-packed items a once-in-a-while happening.

Weigh every single week. Do not miss one week. If you begin gaining, go after the first five pounds, and do not allow that to increase. It will unless you watch it.

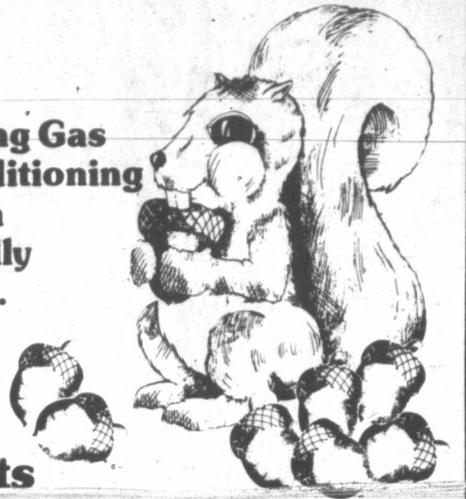

This exercise is slimming to the waistline. Stand tall with your feet separated. Pull tummy in and tuck your hips under. Raise your arms overhead. Touch the fingers of your hands together and keep them that way (elbows straight) as you bend to the left. Raise your trunk and bend to the right. Raise trunk and continue alternating left and right.

The people's pharmacy

by Joe Graedon

Q. I am basically a shy person. When I visit my doctor the waiting room is usually filled with people. It always takes a long time to see the doctor and when I do get into the examining room he's usually in a hurry. By the time he gives me a prescription I feel too intimidated to ask any questions about the medicine because I am afraid to take up any extra time.

Last week when I went through this procedure I received a drug called Indocin (Indomethacin) for my arthritis. My doctor didn't say much except to take it with meals. Is there anything else I should know about?

A. Indocin is a potent anti-inflammatory drug used for arthritis-type problems. The reason your doctor told you to take it with meals is because Indocin can be very irritating to the digestive tract and food may lessen this problem.

Some of the side effects to be alert for include abdominal pain, nausea, vomiting, loss of appetite, indigestion, diarrhea, and inflammation of the mouth.

Other adverse reactions that you should be aware of include headache, confusion, drowsiness, blurred vision, skin problems and blood disorders. Hopefully, you won't experience any of these side effects but forewarned is forearmed, and if one occurs you will be better able to recognize it and contact your doctor.

As for being shy, that's understandable. But most doctors should be glad to take the time to answer your questions about the side effects of any medicine he prescribes. Drugs cure us when we are sick and relieve pain, but they can also do serious damage. Next time you visit your doctor make darn sure you know what problems you may run into when you receive a drug.

Q. I have had it with this cold winter. I am going on a cruise to get away from it all. What I want to know is how to avoid a bad sunburn. I take some prescription drugs (Hydrodiuril for blood pressure, Orinase for diabetes) and I've heard that these medicines will somehow make my skin more sensitive to the beautiful beaches. Any recommendations?

A. It's a good thing you are planning ahead. Because it's winter, we tend to forget that certain prescription drugs can sensitize the skin to the sun's rays. Both Hydrodiuril (Hydrochlorothiazide) and Orinase (Tolbutamide) may lead to severe sunburn if you are not very careful. This "phototoxic" reaction can be prevented if you take along an effective sunscreen. Look for lotions that contain the ingredient PABA (Para-aminobenzoic acid).

These are other medications that can also cause a severe burn by sensitizing the skin to the sun's rays. Sulfa drugs in general can be a problem as can tetracycline and the major tranquilizers.

Musical returns to Texas

HOUSTON (AP) — Every television and radio station in Houston may be bleeping out the key word in advertisements of "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," but that hasn't kept people away.

A packed house Sunday night welcomed the musical home from a successful Broadway run with a big Lone Star howdy.

The Texas company of the comedy, still running in New York, opened to a bit of irony — a benefit performance for Planned Parenthood of Houston.

The musical is built around a tall, but true, Texas tale. It's the story of the very old and very famous house of ill repute that captured the attention of the entire state back in 1973 in the little southeast Texas town of La Grange.

It was a tidy, shuttered farmhouse called the Chicken Ranch because, when pickings were slimmer in earlier times, poultry was taken in return for a little countrified carnality.

Cattle imports soar to record

WASHINGTON (AP) — Live cattle and hog imports soared to record levels last year, according to the latest government figures.

The Agriculture Department says in an annual review that cattle imports rose 11 percent to 1,252,740 head from 1,133,279 in 1977. The previous cattle-import record was 1,250,029 head in 1962, according to department records.

Imports of live hogs jumped to 202,109 head last year from only 42,995 in 1977.

Sheep and lamb imports, at 11,195 head, rose 31 percent from 8,530 in 1977 and were the most since 1972.

Mexico was the biggest supplier of cattle last year with 815,015 head, up 37 percent from 594,020 in 1977. Canada supplied 437,559 live cattle, a 19 percent decline from 538,686 in 1977.

Other countries, which were not listed, supplied the remainder of the imports.

Cattle imports include breeding stock and some animals for slaughter, but in the case of Mexico, particularly, lighter-weight feeder cattle destined for U.S. feedlots have traditionally been a brisk business.

According to department officials, a severe drought in northern Mexico last year forced larger shipments of live cattle across the border.

Meanwhile, imports of beef from Mexico last year totaled only about 62.7 million pounds, short of its 1978 allocation of 72.9 million pounds that could have been shipped into the U.S. market.

Part of the reason for the reduced Mexican beef shipments was a recurring problem with pesticide residues showing up, meaning that the meat could not enter the U.S. consumer pipeline.

Another factor, according to USDA, is that beef prices have risen sharply in Mexico. The Mexican government on Jan. 17 banned further exports of live cattle and beef. The ban on live cattle was lifted a few days later but the lid on beef shipments was still in place as of late last week.

One further reason for more livestock being imported is that U.S. prices also are high and are

Government subsidizes many books

WASHINGTON (AP) — No one exactly planned it — and the Founding Fathers might have recoiled from the idea — but in a substantial way the government has become a patron of the loneliest art, the process of writing a book.

Ever more frequently books are being issued with an author's acknowledgement along these lines: "This book was made possible through a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities" or "My thanks to the National Endowment for the Arts."

Just published is "Gritty Cities," a handsome book of photographs of the old industrial cities of the Northeast.

Also recently out is a $200, four-volume, 1,900-page, "Encyclopedia of Bioethics," which probes ethical questions raised by life-science technology.

And in Charlottesville, Va., historian Dumas Malone has been plugging away since 1943 on a six-volume biography of Thomas Jefferson.

In each case, the government subsidized these enterprises. Without government support, they probably would not have been undertaken.

And government officials say they are sensitive to the fear that they might create a collection of books reflecting any sort of official government "line." They stress that government financing does not mean interference, control or censorship.

Each year the National Endowment for the Humanities and the National Endowment for the Arts put millions of dollars into underwriting authors. The NEA also subsidizes small literary magazines and the small presses where authors often first break into print.

When the humanities endowment asked its librarian, Jeanette Coletti, to round up all the books which resulted from NEH grants, she managed to find 839 of them.

At the NEA, 3,000 to 4,000 writers, playwrights, essayists and poets are competing for 218 fellowships of $10,000 to enable them to keep on writing. William Gaddis wrote his prize-winning novel, "JR," on an NEA grant.

Many government-backed books are studies with limited audiences and no profit potential. "The Relevance of Natural Science to Theology" or "Vietnamese Folk Poetry" or "Mark Twain's Letters to His Publisher, 1867-1894."

But not always. Inside the paperback cover of "Fear of Flying" is this description: "Erica Jong's gloriously wicked, sexy novel about the way things ought to be for a woman."

A few pages later, in her acknowledgements, Ms. Jong writes: "And thanks to the National Endowment for the Arts for a grant which helped."

Ms. Jong received $5,000 from the NEA to meet her living expenses while she wrote the novel.

When it appeared, eyebrows were raised in Congress but the fuss was surprisingly short-lived.

Livingston Biddle Jr., chairman of the arts endowment, smiles away criticism. He says Ms. Jong earned so much in royalties and paid so much in taxes, "that the taxpayer got his money back."

Leonard Randolph, who ran the endowment's literature program since 1970, is more defensive about underwriting "Fear of Flying."

"I will go to my grave saying it was a damn good book," he says. "If a man had written it, no one would have said a word about the language."

Biddle says the endowment is careful to recognize that there is a risk of creating a body of government-sponsored literature, with judges shying away from supporting authors who can be counted on to bite their patron's hand.

He cites precautions. The panels which recommend awards are composed of people from outside the government and the applicants are asked to submit examples of their past writings (to prove their talent) but are not even asked for an outline of what they intend to produce under government funding. Ms. Jong won her grant on the strength of her poetry.

Karen Kennerly, executive secretary of the writers' organization PEN, says, "I don't know of anyone who has put in for a grant for a dicey book and not gotten it for that reason."

A New York writer and editor, contending that after 10 years it might be well to review government-author relations, says, "We really don't know. Writers here and there are beginning to wonder if they have — perhaps subliminally — been influenced."

Surely when the First Amendment was drafted, instructing the government to keep hands off those who write, no one expected that those who write would be lining up for government money.

In 1947, the Greek ship Himeria hit a mine off Athens, and 392 died.

FOCUS

John Steinbeck
USA 15c

Leaving Tracks

"In 60 years," John Steinbeck wrote in 1962, "I've left a lot of tracks." Among the "tracks" he left behind were 29 novels and plays, which attracted millions of readers. Steinbeck was the sixth American to be awarded the Nobel prize for literature. Writing was the most natural way for Steinbeck to communicate with other people. Partly because he was shy and hated telephones, he usually wrote letters to keep in touch with friends. Often he wrote letters in the morning, to "warm up" for a day's work. Tomorrow the U.S. Postal Service issues a new stamp honoring Steinbeck on the 77th anniversary of his birth. The stamp is the first in a new Literary Arts Series.

DO YOU KNOW — In which book does Steinbeck describe a journey across America with his dog?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — Beth Heiden's brother, Eric, is the men's World Speed Skating Champion.
