

China trade advantages 'substantial' official says

By JOHN PRICE
Pampa News Staff

AMARILLO — The economic advantages of trade with China are "potentially substantial" for the Panhandle, a state department official said Thursday in a press conference here. But it will be agricultural producers and not the beef industry that benefits, he added.

A "near-term gain in sales of agricultural commodities" resulting from U.S. relations with China is predicted by Donald Tice, executive assistant to the State Department undersecretary for political affairs. Tice was in Amarillo to deliver a speech on China Thursday night at Amarillo College.

The Chinese have indicated an interest in joint business ventures, Tice said.

"Given the size of the market, any American company that doesn't get its fanny over there and look into its futures isn't using its head," he said. "Consumption of everything in China will grow with modernization."

The Chinese purchased an estimated $600 million worth of agricultural commodities from the U.S. in 1978, Tice said. The projected government estimate of purchases for 1979 totals around $1.2 billion, he said.

"Up until normalization of relations, the U.S. had been a source of last resort for agricultural commodities" for China, Tice said. "Now we'll be on an equal footing with other countries."

China's largest commodity purchases are wheat and soybeans, he said. Noting that the Chinese diet has traditionally consisted mainly of rice, fish and vegetables, Tice said he doubts if that country will import much beef from the U.S.

"It wouldn't be good economic management" for the Chinese to spend their limited reserves on meat, he said.

Although the U.S. will be competing heavily with Japan for the China trade, Tice said he doesn't see any "immediate problems" or conflicts arising between the Americans and the Japanese.

Comparing the two communist giants, Tice said "The Chinese seem more pragmatic than the Soviets" in their dealings with the U.S.

"China makes no claim to being a developed country," he said. The Soviets, he observed, have a "psychological problem" because they feel they have to deal as equals.

Asked why the U.S. has recognized the Communist Chinese regime after virtually ignoring it for 30 years, Tice replied "the realities of world politics as much as anything — the recognition that we were living a fiction" in believing the Nationalist Chinese in Taiwan would eventually reconquer the mainland.

The U.S. was "blinded by Vietnam" and the mistaken belief that the Chinese were helping the North Vietnamese fight Americans, Tice said.

"I think we would have recognized China much earlier had it not been for Vietnam," he said. "Mao (Tse-tung, former Communist Chinese leader) tried like hell to open an avenue of communication to us in 1950-51."

Mao's overture was rejected, Tice said, because "we had this blind opposition" at the time to dealing with any revolutionary communist government. The U.S. is now more realistic about its interests, he said.

"We're the products of a revolution, yet we've always had this opposition to any kind of revolution," Tice said. "We're beginning to realize that change isn't always bad."

Asked about the possibility of China attacking Taiwan, he responded "As a practical matter the mainland Chinese can't invade Taiwan."

The Chinese army "is huge and doesn't have any shoes and doesn't have many guns, and no aircraft that can reach Taiwan and come back," Tice said. "We intend to continue to supply arms to Taiwan so that their defense remains viable."

Other western nations may sell arms to China, he said, but "we have made it quite clear that we are not going to sell military weapons to either China or the Soviet Union."

Turning to the Middle East, Tice remarked "In a sense, the (Carter) administration gets a bum rap on Iran."

(People claim) "Carter lost Iran," Tice said. "Who in the hell said Iran was ours to lose in the first place?"

U.S. policy in Iran could conceivably be considered a success, he said, because it helped provide that country with 30 years of stability. The new Iranian government has indicated it is prepared to be pragmatic about relations with the U.S., he added.

"They don't want to be under the domination of the Soviet Union," Tice said. "They know we're not going to dominate them. There's a definite need in the future for relations between us."

The 47-year-old Tice has been associated with the State Department since 1957, and is a specialist in Eastern European affairs. He said the Soviet Union cannot rely on troops from its Eastern European satellites in the event of a war against the NATO countries.

"If you look at the world through Russian eyes, you see a very different world," he said. "The thing the Soviets are more afraid of than anything else is a reunited Germany."

Referring to Soviet military ventures in Africa, Tice said "The Russians are at the same colonial stage that we were at at the turn of the century. They're testing their wings in Africa."

Five sentenced in stabbing death

By DAN LACKEY
Pampa News Staff

Five Pampa brothers, charged with murder and aggravated assault in connection with the February 17 stabbing death of Roberto Lira and the injury of three others during a fight at the Frontier Lounge on Tyng Street, were sentenced Thursday in 31st District Court.

The five waived jury trial after pleading guilty to reduced charges through plea bargaining arrangements.

Marcial Rodriguez was sentenced to 12 years in the Texas Department of Corrections after pleading guilty to voluntary manslaughter in the death of Lira.

Benito and Guadalupe Rodriguez received seven year suspended sentences, were placed on probation, and fined $500, both pleading guilty to aggravated assault in connection with Lira's death.

Victor and Jose Rodriguez received six year suspended sentences, were placed on probation, and fined $350 after pleading guilty to aggravated assault in connection with the injury of Hipolito Montalio.

Lira was stabbed to death during a brawl at the lounge which involved several fights and as many as 16 people, according to police reports. In brief testimony at Thursday's trial, Marcial said that he had carried a knife to the lounge but had no intention of using it.

Marcial said Lira had been arguing with one of his (Rodriguez's) brothers during a pool game. He said he attacked Lira because "I thought he was going to hurt one of my brothers."

He said he did not know how many times he had stabbed Lira but said "it was more than once."

District attorney Harold Comer said today that the actual details of the altercation were still not clear. "You do as much as you can to sort out a fight which involved 15 or 16 people," he said. "But a lot of things were happening at the same time and it's hard to sort it all out."

Comer said that Marcial had admitted the intention to kill Lira. "The voluntary manslaughter charge was recommended because we believe it was something done in intense passion and anger," he said.

Three men, Montalio, Mike Durham, and Robert Vasquez, suffered stab wounds after the fatal stabbing of Lira. Durham and Montalio were treated and released at Highland General Hospital. Vasquez underwent surgery for abdominal wounds.

Testimony indicated that Marcial was apparently responsible for all of the stabbings but the other brothers testified that they participated in the fighting.

Victor Rodriguez said he had struck Montalio "two or three times" with his belt which held a large buckle. The other brothers testified that they did not use any weapons.

Marcial Rodriguez, who said he was employed by a Canadian lumber mill at the time of the incident, was convicted in 1975 of carrying a weapon on premises licensed for the sale of alcoholic beverages. His probation for that conviction was revoked after his arrest on the Lira murder charge.

Judge Grainger McIlhenny ruled that Rodriguez would serve the 5 year sentence for the firearms violation concurrently with the murder sentence.

All five brothers were indicted in connection with the Lira stabbing. Marcial was also charged with the aggravated assault of the three injured men.

Comer said the reduced charges of aggravated assault against Benito and Guadalupe Rodriguez were warranted because he didn't believe the two "knew that Marcial was going to stab him. They didn't know he intended to commit murder."

Marcial Rodriguez is being held in Gray County Jail under $50,000 bond, awaiting transfer to TDC. The others have been released under the terms of their probation.

Carter's energy plan facing stiff opposition

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's new energy plan to couple higher domestic oil and gasoline prices with a "windfall profits tax" is already facing stiff opposition in Congress.

Top administration allies on Capitol Hill predicted an uphill battle for the tax proposal the president announced Thursday night.

"It's going to be tough," said Senate Energy Committee Chairman Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash.

In a nationally broadcast address, the president said he would gradually lift price lids on domestically produced crude oil, leading to total decontrol by mid-1981 — a goal long sought by the U.S. oil industry.

Administration officials said the plan would add 4 to 5 cents a gallon to the price of gasoline and other petroleum products by mid-1981. But other unofficial estimates put the total increase at up to 15 cents a gallon.

Carter's address came two years after he sent his first energy plan to Congress as "the moral equivalent of war," a package of proposals that took Congress until last fall to pass.

Carter said the action would help conserve oil by making it more expensive and also would provide a financial incentive to U.S. oil companies to seek and develop new oil fields.

And he told Americans: "Each of you will have to use less oil and pay more for it." He said this would help move the nation away from its heavy reliance on imported oil.

To keep oil companies from getting too rich from decontrol, Carter proposed the "windfall profits tax" on half the extra revenues that oil companies would get from higher prices.

Proceeds would be used to aid poor families, for mass transit projects and to help develop new energy sources.

Continues at four year low

Unemployed rate same

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate remained at a 4½-year low of 5.7 percent in March, while the number of persons who have abandoned the search for jobs fell to the lowest level since 1974, the Labor Department said today.

The department said there were 725,000 so-called "discouraged workers" in the first three months of the year — those who want jobs but have given up looking for them because they believe none is available.

The March employment report showed the economy is maintaining sufficient strength to provide jobs for newcomers to the labor force, although the economy did not make any further dent in the number of previously jobless persons.

The Labor Department said total employment increased by about 200,000 during March, to a total of 96.8 million, while unemployment remained at the February level of 5.9 million.

The unemployment rate of 5.7 percent, the same as in February, was the lowest since August 1974, when it was 5.4 percent. The number of discouraged workers was the lowest since the third quarter of 1974, when it was 617,000.

The increase in employment of 200,000 in March compared with substantially larger gains in the first two months of the year and appeared to reflect a slowdown in economic growth that the Carter administration says is necessary to help control inflation.

Most of the March job gains occurred among adult women, the department said. It reported a big increase in jobs in wholesale and retail trade. And it said there was a gain of 70,000 jobs in manufacturing industries, notably in electrical and transportation equipment and machinery.

The department said the number of persons in the labor force increased by 190,000 during March to a record 102.7 million. The labor force includes both persons with jobs and those who are seeking them.

The Carter administration has been trying to slow the economy's growth to help restrain inflation. That, according to the scenario most economists follow, should mean a rise in unemployment.

Although a decline in joblessness would seem to be good news, the administration has reacted with less than complete enthusiasm. It feels the jobless rate has been at a level that reflects inflationary conditions.

Laugh and live longer

About the time the oil "crisis" first hit a few years back, a good many people began to notice they were not talking or laughing as much as they had.

Things got real serious.

It wasn't so much the fact there were long lines for gas or that the winter was so cold — although surely they aided and abetted — but the prospect of no pay coming in to the unemployed and bills continuing to pile up.

In such a situation, it doesn't take long for the old pumper to know that stress is dragging it down.

Back then, unemployment lines spread out like taffy and people with back-breaking worries got down on their knees and prayed.

We tend to forget.

Now that the oil shortage is beginning to rear its head again, one can't help wondering about those days gone by and whether or not they will come again.

The average American is a prime candidate for stress attack. He is mortgaged to his nostrils, overextending his physical body and bound to have a cigarette before he goes mumbly off to the funny farm. Throw in the prospect of losing his job, and if stress doesn't get him, a heart attack will.

You can do something about stress.

You can laugh at it. That's right. Laugh at it.

A clinical psychologist, Dr. Jack McCall of Raleigh, N.C., says "laughter is one of the best universal stress relievers. And since nearly everybody has a stress condition of one degree or another, the best thing to do is to learn how to laugh.

"The most dangerous thing about stress," he says, "is that we can be under stress and not be aware of it." And living at a continual level of stress can be detrimental to one's health.

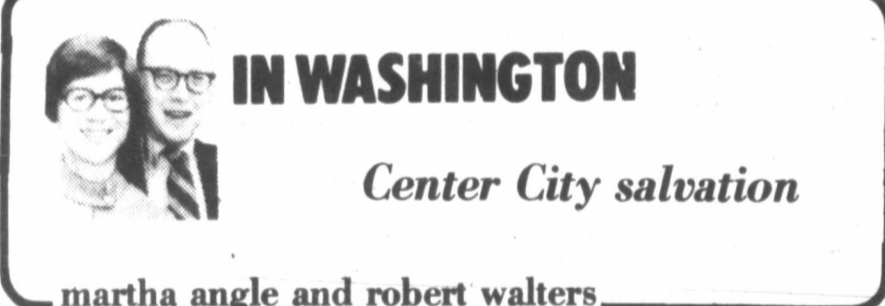

The doctor says stress comes from the inability to laugh and just say the heck with it.

Maybe the doctor has a list of handy dandy things to laugh at. That would be nice. And then, when our stress threshold narrows, we can go to the list, punch that into our psyche and come out laughing like a winning gambler counting his money.

The world seems to be on a strange tilt. Our country is being pushed and shoved by two-bit sheikdoms, and there seems to be little we can do about it. It didn't used to be that way.

See? There's a real worry.

How can you get up a good, uproarious hee-haw over thoughts like that? Pardon us while we sit down and take consolation in the thought that most of the things we worry about don't happen, after all.

IN WASHINGTON

Center City salvation

martha angle and robert walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) — One brave soul finally has mustered the courage to tell the awful truth about the mega-structures currently being touted as the salvation of the decaying downtown cores of the nation's major cities.

Offering a candid, critical appraisal of those oversized complexes is a chancy undertaking because business and civic leaders in cities from coast to coast have staked both their reputations and their fortunes on the success of the urban beaemoths.

In Detroit, the Renaissance Center is advertised as the cornerstone of local efforts to revive a depressed central city. In Houston, a similar commercial complex is known as the Houston Center.

In Los Angeles, another mammoth development is supposed to provide the downtown area with vitality matching that of Beverly Hills. Westwood and other communities on the city's west side.

Once inside, however, "you're not sure what city you're in — or whether you're in a city or at an airport," urban planner William H. Whyte Jr. explained at a recent Washington convocation sponsored by the Conservation Foundation.

Author of "The Organization Man," still widely read 22 years after it was first published, Whyte now is director of New York City's Street Life Project.

Perhaps most important in Whyte's catalog of distinguishing characteristics — few of them especially attractive to people — of the sterile buildings was the fact that their dominant architectural characteristics belie their purported mission.

Although ostensibly built to infuse a declining urban area with new life, their massive concrete walls, artificial moats and limited entry portals present a highly inhospitable facade to the "outside world."

Inside a typical complex, a visitor escapes from urban life rather than participating in it. "I can spend a whole day in the Houston Center without going to Houston at all," quipped Whyte.

The oversized structures have their own life-support systems, including recycled air that even smells artificial. Their completely closed environment and windowless walls prevent visitors from knowing whether there's a heat wave or snow storm outside.

Heavy security, another hallmark cited by Whyte, includes both armed guards and hidden television cameras for electronic surveillance. Entry is geared to auto drivers and passengers, but not pedestrians.

Finally, the lack of respect for detail, texture and scale invariably provokes refugees from the stark concrete-and-steel structures to characterize their experience as depersonalizing.

In another presentation to the Conservation Foundation conference, James W. Rouse, probably the country's most imaginative and innovative real estate developer, offered a far more sensible alternative.

Board chairman of the Rouse Company, he probably is best known as the developer of the thriving "new town" of Columbia, Md. In recent years, however, Rouse has devoted considerable time and thought to center city rehabilitation.

His successes include commercial projects that have attracted both retailers and customers to once-blighted downtown areas of Philadelphia and Boston, with a similar project under way in Baltimore.

Rouse relies heavily on rehabilitating old stores, abandoned warehouses and other existing structures. His shopping area is integrated with the surrounding neighborhood, not isolated from it. The relatively modest scale makes people feel comfortable with their surroundings, not threatened by them.

"In the 1980s and 1990s, the transformation of the center cities will be even more dramatic than the growth of the suburbs in the 1950s and 1960s," he predicted.

But the salvation of the cities surely won't be found in the convention center-hotel-office building-shopping arcade combination Whyte caustically described as "the last convulsive emblems of an era whose time has passed."

The nation's economic policy has long been troubled by a schizophrenic outlook. On the one hand, the country has extolled a competitive enterprise system as exemplified by the passage of various antitrust statutes. These laws were intended to prevent accretions of economic power detrimental to the consumer. On the other hand, recent decades have witnessed the imposition of vast amounts of regulation over industry limiting competition by restricting prices, entry and output. Nevertheless, the antitrust agencies generally make no effort to upset these anticompetitive restraints.

According to Prof. Harold Demsetz, chairman of the UCLA Department of Economics, the total sum of monopoly power originating in the purely private sector is minuscule compared to that which emanates from the federal and state capitals of the nation. He proposes that the antitrust division of the Justice Department critically police the existing regulation of industry because that is the major source of monopoly problems.

Demsetz presented these conclusions in a speech on the "Crisis in Antitrust" delivered in New York City on March 1 to the Conference Board, whose membership consists of the executives of the nation's 600 leading corporations. His analysis is a noteworthy contribution to the current, debate over antitrust policy.

Criticizing the current antitrust policy, which is directed largely at the private sector, Demsetz stated: "The present pattern of use of antitrust resources will at best impinge on the least important and least permanent sources of monopoly. The same resources directed against the regulation of economic activity can yield bountiful results in increased competition. There is thus much for the public to gain from an imaginative attack on regulation of economic activity can yield bountiful results in increased competition. There is thus much for the public to gain from an imaginative attack on regulation by our antitrust agencies."

The professor asserted that two crises presently exist in antitrust: one intellectual, the other political. The former has arisen as some of the beliefs that have fostered antitrust policy were found wanting by a growing number of economists. The political crisis is the result of regulation that is basically destructive of antitrust.

Demsetz believes many economists would now limit antitrust involvement in the instances of (1) market concentration (2) restrictions by manufacturers on distributors, and (3) alleged predatory pricing. Contemporary economic research has challenged long held notions about monopolistic behavior in these areas.

Thus, to many, economic theory suggested that collusion between manufacturers would be more successful in concentrated industries where the producers were relatively few and large. Support for this view was found in many statistical studies that showed concentrated industries tended to report higher profit rates than nonconcentrated ones.

Demsetz notes that these conclusions have been disputed by new theories and empirical work produced by economists during the last ten years. Several studies have uncovered evidence that concentration has arisen because of greater efficiency or innovative success by firms that as a result became relatively large in their industry. Evidence exists that increases in industrial concentration has been accompanied by relative declines in both product prices and unit costs.

Greater understanding has also emerged as to why manufacturers impose contractual limitations upon their distributors, such as tie-in sales, and territorial and price restrictions. While antitrust theory has traditionally frowned on such acts, they can be considered now as nondetrimental to competition.

Nor are the apprehensions about predatory pricing justified. Predatory pricing relates to the practice of cutting prices to achieve or maintain a monopoly. Demsetz states that a number of studies of alleged predatory pricing reveals there are only a few cases in which recorded facts suggest its use. The inherent conceptual and factual difficulties of disentangling pricing to compete and pricing to monopolize — both of which yield greater market shares to the price-cutting firm — make unwise a policy of trying to apply a belief in predation to antitrust enforcement.

In discussing the political crisis in antitrust, the UCLA economist criticized a renewed effort to deconcentrate industry that is supposed to be supportive of competition but in reality will undercut it by increasing regulation. Proponents of this position, which includes some prominent Democratic senators, call for a "one-time only" reorganization of industry to reduce the size of firms.

Demsetz points out that such reorganization will not lower prices if, as now seems likely, industrial concentration has resulted from economies of scale or superior managerial, marketing or technological skills. He told his audience "One time only deconcentration can have only a transitory effect on market structure when such basic causes are at work. Concentration will soon re-emerge, and the Industrial Reorganization Commission will be called upon to act again, and so on, until de facto continuing regulation of industry structure replaces rivalry in the market place."

Peak suicide season

By Peter C. Whybrow

Spring is a time of flowering and rebirth. Poets have celebrated it as such for centuries.

But for many, spring can also be a period of anxiety and dread. Medical practitioners have known this darker side of the season since the time of the ancient Greeks.

Suicides and admissions to mental hospitals are higher in spring than at any other time of year. Self-inflicted death in my own state of New Hampshire, for instance, occurs about 25 percent more frequently in spring than the annual average. Suicide in upstate New York typically occurs between 12 and 20 percent more frequently in spring than the annual average.

the number of patients seeking professional help for depression, alcoholism and mania.

This is no isolated phenomenon. A 1966 World Health Organization study found that suicides reached their peak in the spring in every one of the 16 Northern Hemisphere countries it looked at. A separate study found the same true during the spring of Southern Hemisphere countries such as Australia and New Zealand.

As each morning's sunrise attests, we live in a periodic environment. Through evolution, animals including man have developed clock-like mechanisms to assure proper functioning under predictable but constantly changing conditions.

Usually we're oblivious to their presence, but from time to time they make themselves uncomfortably felt. Leaping too many time zones, for instance, confuses our internal oscillators. Jet lag, that most modern of ailments, is the result.

A similar but more debilitating confusion of internal rhythms underlies most serious mental illnesses. Even genetically determined disorders are usually precipitated by environmental stress. It is here — with its demented temperatures and wealth of mud and glaring sunshine — that spring plays its villainous role.

Spring is a period of emotional as well as climatic transition, and the adjustment for some is difficult.

Spring is a period of emotional as well as climatic transition, and the adjustment for some is difficult. About three percent of the population suffers severe depression characterized by loss of concentration, lack of ability to make decisions, withdrawal from social contact, and at the extreme, suicide.

Let's make us gloomy, however, we should note that for most spring is a time of peak intellectual and psychological capability. Studies have long shown that students' marks at Annapolis and West Point, applications for patents, and the percentage of people passing the civil service exam all reach their zenith as the sun inches its way from vernal equinox to summer solstice.

Whatever spring's effects on each of us, it brings a yearly lesson that, ensonced in our heated and air-conditioned micro-climates, we too often overlook: despite all of our technological sophistication, we are not masters of our planet but subjects marching still to the ebb and flow of nature's rhythms.

Triumph into tragedy

By DON GRAFF

The plot in South Africa's opinion-manipulation scandal thickens — and thickens and thickens.

It already has reached into the highest political levels of that country, shaking the once rock-like stability of the Afrikaner-dominated government. Now it is nibbling at the fringes of U.S. politics.

Congressional ethics committees have taken a preliminary look into the possibility that South African funds may have been used to influence several recent campaigns, without finding anything sufficiently conclusive to justify a full-scale inquiry. But the way this byzantine affair has been developing day by day, that situation could be subject to very sudden change.

The key figure is Eschel M. Rhodie, cashiered Information Ministry official who directed a secretly funded multimillion-dollar project to buy a better image for South Africa and its racial policies. Much of the money is reported to have gone into bribes to supposed "opinion makers" in the United States and Western Europe, and much is suspected of having gone into private South African pockets. The flaming issue in South Africa is who in the government knew how much of what was going on.

On this subject, Rhodie, who is in cushy exile in Europe, apparently knows where enough bodies are buried to start his own cemetery. His piecemeal revelation of embarrassing details has political leader back home at each others' throats and guarantees a continuing press, at home and abroad.

It was the South African press that initially brought the scandal out of the closets of Pretoria into the full light of public scrutiny. In this respect, the affair does justify the frequent comparisons to Watergate. In both cases, the press has pursued inquiries into suspected irregularities in high places despite determined official opposition.

But there is a crucial difference. The efforts of the American press to inquire and publish may have been opposed, but the right to do so was never in question. This has the backing of law rooted in the Constitution. The South African press is not in so advantageous a position. The weight of South African law affecting the press tilts heavily to the government's advantage.

While on occasion publication of scandal developments has been suppressed, the real wonder may be that the government has not employed its legal weapons more often. It continues, however, to threaten the press with dire consequences should the revelations continue.

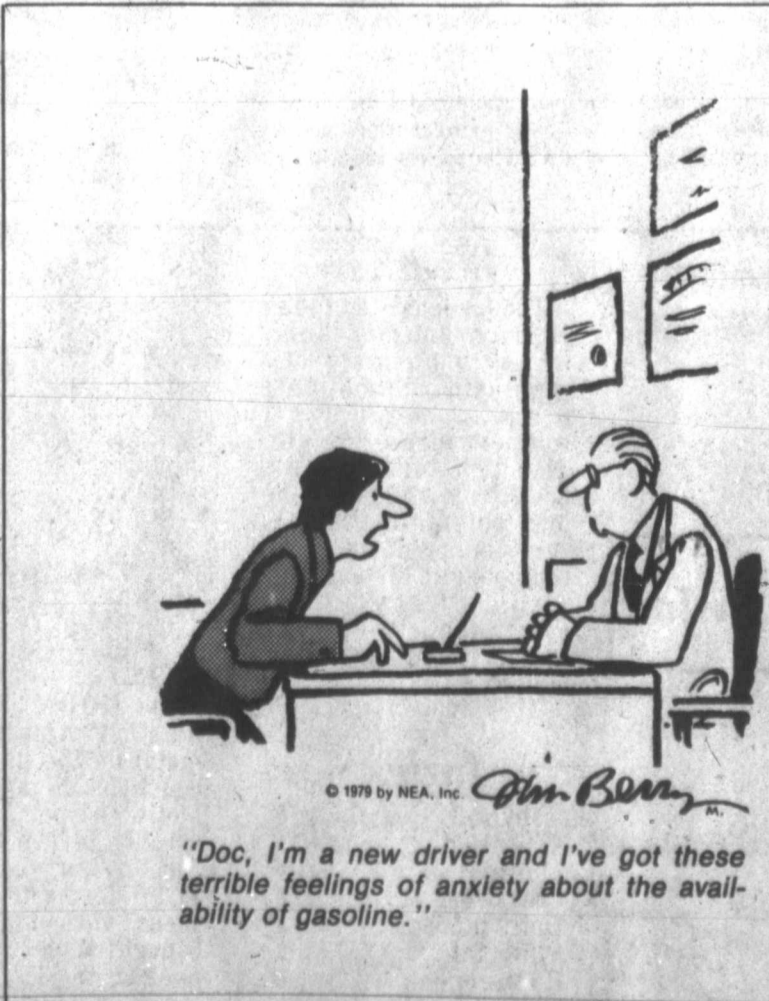

Under the circumstances, the unfolding of the scandal is a remarkable demonstration of what a partially free but determined press can accomplish. The English-language press has, in fact, been the most potent obstacle to the establishment of a fully authoritarian system in South Africa during the 30-year reign of the Nationalist party. It has emerged as the real democratic opposition as other parties have been reduced to token representation in parliament.

In the current confrontation, the English-language papers are as usual in the forefront, particularly the Rand Daily Mail of Johannesburg. What is unusual is that that of the Afrikaners press is also disturbed by evidence of corruption at the top and is questioning the propriety of a government it has been accustomed to supporting unreservedly. In a society such as Afrikanerdom where moral rectitude is institutionalized, the political repercussions are serious.

The scandal is unlikely to topple the government. But it may force an early election in which it would be the preeminent issue, the strongest one the opposition has had against the Nationalists in three decades.

Another consequence may well be that the government will follow through on its threats of retaliation, tightening restrictions on the press. Legislation has already been drafted. In such an event, the revelation of the information scandal may turn out to be a victory for freedom of information, but a Pyrrhic one, with the real loser being not the press but South Africa.

Mechanic still working despite blindness

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Valeriano Silva is a darn good auto mechanic but you'll have to forgive him if he takes a bit long to fix your late model car.

The 68-year-old South Texan admits the newer cars give him a little trouble. He's more comfortable working on older vehicles. But that's understandable for a man who has not seen a car since Detroit introduced its 1948 models.

"I always worked long hours, day and night. Little by little I just went blind. The doctors said they didn't know why," Silva said as he worked on a car in the garage behind his home.

Silva has been working on cars since he was 14. He's been working on them ever since — save for the year after he went blind.

"I didn't feel like doing anything for a while," he recalled as his stubby hands cleaned a sparkplug.

"But when you do something for a long time you don't forget it. There's that thing in the mind," he said, groping for the right word. "It's like a recorder. If you have a good mind you can recall how to do it."

So now Silva relies on his other senses to tell him what's wrong with a car. His acute hearing can detect starter problems, bad spark plug wires and a variety of other auto maladies.

"I listen and I feel," he said.

He enjoys older cars because he can remember what the engines look like. Some of the new-fangled gadgets on newer cars can be confusing, he said. But he tries to keep current by having people read to him from new auto repair manuals.

At least one state agency tried to work with Silva after he lost his sight. But Virginia Garvey, a vocational rehabilitation counselor for the Texas Commission for the Blind in Harlingen, recalled that Silva said "he was too busy" for rehabilitation.

Silva said he did not need special training — and the lineup of cars waiting for repairs at his garage stand as testimony to that.

"I went to San Antonio and they wanted me to make those things you put pencils in. I kept dropping the needle. These hands can't do that kind of work," he said, shaking the hands calloused by a half-century of tinkering with engines and exhaust systems.

The mechanic says he takes on less work — and depends more on his sons to help — as he gets older. But he never plans to give it all up.

"I want to keep going. I got to do something," he says as he puts the last spark plug back into the car he's working on.

"I do all kinds of work here. We even go out and do road service ... my wife drives," he said as a pickup truck towed an old car to the rear of the line of parked cars awaiting service.

There is at least one advantage to being a blind mechanic, said the man who can detect only light and dark.

"I can work at night without the lights on," he said. "Saves money."

Flash fire injures seven

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Eldridge Tidwell lay in the hospital bed, his burned, red face swathed in white ointment and his hands covered by ointment-filled plastic bags.

"I don't know what caused the explosion. The thing I know, I got some boys hurt," said the 36-year-old work crew foreman for the Lower Colorado River Authority.

Tidwell and six others were installing new cable about 5 p.m. Thursday in a 30-foot by 50-foot control room at Mansfield Dam on Lake Travis when live electrical wires touched water, setting off an arc of about 12,500 volts.

Water which had seeped into a metal cabinet came into contact with the wires, and the equipment "exploded in a ball of fire" before the men knew what was happening. Travis County Sheriff's Deputy Tom Shank said.

Tidwell suffered first and second degree burns on his face and hands as he repeatedly entered the burning control room and dragged out four of the six other workers.

"When a situation like that happens, you've got to get them out. You can't just leave them in there," Tidwell said from his bed at Brackenridge Hospital.

Wendell Lind, 29, of Manor and Dennis Crumley, 23, of Austin were taken to the burns treatment center at Brooke Army Medical Center at San Antonio.

Crumley had second-degree burns over 40 percent of his body, and Lind had second and third degree burns over 60 percent of his body.

Tidwell and three others were listed in fair condition — at Brackenridge, with first-degree burns. One other worker, who suffered no burns, was treated and released.

Several thousand persons in northwest Austin and the Lake Travis area were without power for as much as an hour after the accident as LCRA personnel cut off three major transformers near the power house to avert an explosion.

About 10,000 customers of the Pedernales Electric Coop lost their power. The blackout included Jonestown, Cedar Park, Balcones, Leander and the northwest part of far north Austin, a spokesman for Pedernales Electric Coop said.

Auto dealers next target

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas automobile dealers appear the target of Sen. Lloyd Doggett's next filibuster.

Doggett, D-Austin, led a 15-hour attack Tuesday night and Wednesday against changes he said would dilute the Consumer Protection Act.

He donned his tennis shoes again Thursday in preparation for a blast against letting auto dealers charge $35 for paperwork in car sales. But the youngest senator agreed to postpone his performance until Monday, giving senators a weekend break.

"There is absolutely no reason to add this on," Doggett, 32, said after the Senate adjourned for the weekend. "The tax collectors are only getting paid 65 cents for this work. For what reason should we put on $35 except that Gene Fondren wants it passed?"

Fondren is chief lobbyist for the Texas

Automobile Dealers Association. Sen. Tom Creighton, D-Mineral Wells, said the auto dealers asked him to introduce the bill authorizing a $35 documentary fee.

"For some years, both state and federal authorities recognized the authority of auto dealers to make these charges," Creighton said. "But a couple years ago the documentary charges were found to be in violation of the federal Truth in Lending Act."

It helps the consumer if a dealer does all the paperwork connected with title transfer, registration and license fees, the sponsor added. "People and paper cost money in this day and time," Creighton said.

"If this bill passes, it would raise the amount of money you have to pay down on a car," objected Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur.

Physician indicted in death for hire case

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A Pasadena physician has been named in a sealed indictment alleging he offered $15,000 for the death of a man who might provide damaging testimony against the doctor in a kidnapping case.

The indictment returned here Thursday charged that Dr. Archie Herman Burkhalter hired a hit man to kill John W. Hensley of South Padre Island.

Hensley, 40, was blinded when a single shot, fired from the truck of a specially equipped Cadillac, ripped through his skull on Feb. 15.

The indictment also named S.J. Wilburn, 56, and Scott David Minnick, 21, both of Pasadena.

A source close to the investigation, who asked not to be identified, confirmed that Pasadena-area officials were looking for Burkhalter late Thursday. The source also confirmed information contained in an unsigned copy of the sealed indictment obtained by The Associated Press.

Pasadena police detectives said late Thursday night they had been unable to locate Burkhalter.

Hensley is married to Burkhalter's ex-wife. The doctor had previously been indicted for kidnapping his ex-wife, Laurita, from South Padre Island in October. The 42-year-old woman allegedly was taken to a Pasadena hospital owned by Burkhalter. She was later released unharmed.

The latest indictment claims that Wilburn tried to kill Hensley "for remuneration" from Burkhalter. The doctor and Minnick acted "with intent to promote and assist the commission of the offense," according to the sealed indictment.

Minnick and Wilburn were arrested shortly after the shooting that took place on South Padre Island near Hensley's apartment.

Both have been jailed since the arrest. Until the latest indictment, Burkhalter had been free on a $100,000 bond on the kidnapping charge.

Burkhalter was called before the grand jury here last week. He reportedly cited the Fifth Amendment and declined to answer all questions.

Return to the Draft?

In Europe during the Middle Ages, warfare was reserved for nobles, who considered it a privilege to fight, and mercenaries, who fought for money. But in other places and times, nations often have drafted young men, when they needed larger military forces than volunteers could fill. Until 1950, the United States had only used the draft during wars. But the draft was continuous throughout the Cold War and Vietnam War. Since 1973, volunteers have made up the military forces. Government officials now are considering a return to draft registration, to provide sufficient military forces in case of a future emergency.

Manager says government pulled many inspections

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - Federal inspectors pulled many surprise inspections at Kerr-McGee Corp.'s nuclear fuel plant, its current manager testified in the $11.5 million Karen Silkwood plutonium contamination trial.
 Earlier witnesses had said Kerr-McGee always had advance notice when Atomic Energy Commission inspectors were coming.
 However, Wayne Norwood, Kerr-McGee's first defense witness, testified Thursday: "The majority of them were not announced. If they hadn't shown up for several months, you began to feel in your bones they were coming. There were some inspections that were announced, but there were a lot that weren't."
 Norwood, 51, of Oklahoma City, said some types of inspections, such as at inventory time, were announced.
 In the suit against Kerr-McGee, the Silkwood estate is alleging negligence in connection with the contamination of Miss Silkwood and her apartment in November 1974 with poisonous, highly radioactive plutonium.
 The company claims she contaminated herself, possibly to dramatize claims about working conditions at the plant. Miss Silkwood was a Kerr-McGee lab technician at the time of her death in a Nov. 13, 1974, auto crash.
 Norwood, who was the health and safety supervisor for Kerr-McGee's uranium and plutonium plants near Crescent in 1974, was involved in decontaminating Miss Silkwood and her apartment.

 Persons living in Ward Three are to vote at the Optimist Boys Club, under the supervision of Mrs. H.L. Engle and Mrs. R.W. Roney. Voters in Ward Four will cast ballots at the South Fire Sub - Station, where H.H. Boynton will serve as judge. Mrs. B.B. Altman will be the alternate.
 The polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Weather Texas weather

By The Associated Press
 Clear skies and warming temperatures dominated the Texas weather scene today.
 Forecasts called for mostly pleasant weekend weather.
 Highs today ranged from the 70s in the northern half of the state to the 80s in southern sections and into the lower 90s in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas.
 Patchy fog cut visibility to about a mile near Victoria early today and fog was also reported along the coast.
 Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 40s and 50s. Extremes ranged from 38 at Marfa and 41 at Dalhart to 62 at McAllen.

National weather

Wind gusts up to 90 mph tore down power lines and trees, damaged buildings and darkened thousands of homes in northern and east-central Illinois, while frigid winds brought near-blizzard conditions to the Great Lakes region early today.
 At least four deaths were blamed on the weather.
 About 50,000 Commonwealth Edison customers in the Chicago metropolitan area, including 40,000 in the northern and western suburbs, lost electrical power for up to several hours because of downed lines. Many other areas of the state also experienced power interruptions.
 Stuart Lewis, a Federal Aviation Administration duty officer, said winds forced some operational delays at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport.
 Winds slashing across Lake Michigan north of Chicago reached between 80 and 90 mph, whipping up some 15-foot waves, according to the Coast Guard at Wilmette, Ill. There were no reports of damage or injury.

WARM WEATHER is expected in the forecast period, Friday until Saturday morning, from California across the southern Plains to the Gulf and Florida. Cool to cold weather is expected elsewhere. Showers are forecast for the northern Rockies and part of the Midwest and Arkansas. Snow flurries and snow are forecast for New England. (AP Laserphoto)

Senator wants drinking age raised

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Sen. Walter Mengden ended up Thursday defending his bill to raise the state's drinking age to 19 against attacks it would contribute to teen-age unemployment.
 "There are a lot of 18-year-old high school seniors and college freshmen trying to work their way through school, but under this they couldn't work in a restaurant that serves beer," said Sen. Gene Jones, D-Houston.
 Mengden, R-Houston, told the Senate that school teachers and administrators have complained of drunk students attending classes and showing up intoxicated at school-sponsored activities.
 "All the education associations in this state favor a higher drinking age," Mengden said.
 His bill would raise the state drinking age from 18 to 19. The legal limit was lowered in 1973 from 21 to 18.
 "This is the Unemployment Act of Texas of 1979," quipped Sen. Oscar Maury, D-Dallas.
 Even before the drinking age was lowered from 21, Jones said 18-year-olds could work in places that served alcoholic beverages. Mengden's bill had been reported favorably from the Senate State Affairs Committee.

 But committee member Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, said employment restrictions never were discussed.
 "I don't believe the question of employment opportunities ever came up," Brooks said.
 The sponsor agreed to postpone Senate consideration until Tuesday to allow him to remove the work restrictions.
 However, some senators opposed the entire concept.
 "It would make a second-class citizen of someone in one area," said Sen. Jack Ogg, D-Houston.
 "It's not equal, it's not just and it's unequal protection," Ogg continued. "It's putting every other area of responsibility on them but saying in this one area, we don't trust you."
 Eighteen-year-olds can be drafted and die for their country, can get married and can enter legal contracts, he added.
 "If there's a serious problem of drinking at the high schools, there are other methods of administrative discipline ... or the laws against public intoxication to handle it," agreed Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin.

Bank robber alive, well and working

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - Somewhere in southeastern Oklahoma may live a 42-year-old father of three named Willie Foster Sellers.
 His neighbors may know him as a faithful husband and family man, a pilot and an expert outdoorsman who doesn't smoke or drink.
 But Sellers actually carries home an estimated annual income of $300,000, is a federal escapee and has been labeled by the FBI as perhaps the best bank robber in the United States.
 "This guy may be the best outright bank robber going, and he is at least the most sought-after," said agent John Warren, FBI spokesman here.
 Federal authorities believe Sellers, currently one of the Ten Most Wanted fugitives in the country, may be using the state's southeastern sector as a base to rob banks in Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas.
 FBI agents began a concentrated hunt for Sellers after he cut his way out of the Fulton County Jail in Atlanta on March 17, 1977.
 Convicted of bank robbery, forgery and federal firearms violations, Sellers currently is wanted on an interstate flight count.
 Agents tracking the elusive fugitive know almost as much about him as they would a family member. Except where he is.

Dear Abby

by abigail van buren

DEAR ABBY: How does a 28-year-old man get rid of a 30-year-old woman who refuses to take no for an answer? I took Alice (made up name) to Aspen for a weekend of skiing because the girl I had planned to take got the flu and couldn't go. The hotel reservations were paid for in advance and I didn't feel like going alone.

Well, Alice took the weekend far too seriously, and now she insists she's "in love" with me even though I never told her I loved her. In fact, I told her up front I didn't want any serious commitments.

As soon as we returned, Alice started calling and writing me love letters. In order to discourage her, I told her I was engaged to a girl in California. (Not true.) She kept after me, so I told her I was gay and went both ways, but she said she didn't care.

Abby, I have absolutely no interest in this woman. I only went to bed with her in Aspen because she expected me to and I didn't want to disappoint her. Any suggestions. She's making me crazy.

STUPID IN DENVER

DEAR STUPID: If Alice reads the Rocky Mountain News, you could be off the hook by nightfall. If not, be a man and tell her that what happened in Aspen did not mean to YOU what it meant to HER, that the chemistry is not right for a lasting love affair, and to cool it. Be gentle—but firm.

DEAR ABBY: I'm an eighth-grade teacher who thought your column, "Rules for Baby-sitters" was so valuable that I had copies made for all my students. We discussed your rules in class, and one boy suggested this additional rule: "Write down the address of the house where you're sitting and keep it next to the telephone in case you have to call the police or fire department."

Oftentimes sitters know how to get to a house but don't know the address. This is very important when calling the police or fire department.

INDIANA TEACHER

DEAR TEACHER: Thanks for an excellent addition. Here's another from Portland, Ore.

"The parent (or guardian) should leave written permission with the sitter giving the doctor or emergency hospital the right to treat a child in case of illness or accident. Without written permission, a minor cannot be treated."

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are planning to take our first vacation away from our children. We have a 17-year-old son and two daughters, 8 and 11.

We're leaving the girls with relatives, and our problem is what to do about our son. He assures us he is able to stay home alone, and wants to.

We trust our son, but I tend to be on the nervous side and don't know if I could handle it if anything were to happen to him while we were away. He's a good kid who does what he's told—if I'm around to check on him. His father has always left the discipline and raising of the kids to me, but Dad has a short fuse and, if anything goes wrong, it's my fault.

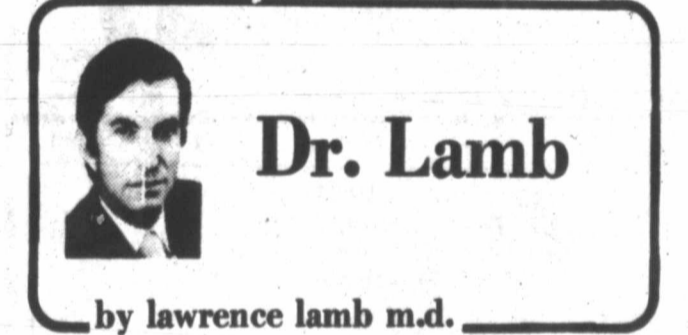

In your opinion, should we leave our son alone in the house for 10 days.

UNDECIDED

DEAR UNDECIDED: Your letter suggests that you lack sufficient confidence in your son to insure a worry-free vacation—otherwise why would you have written to me?

A good rule to follow: When in doubt—DONT.

The teen years are the questioning years. Abby has the answers to all your questions in her booklet, "What Teenagers Want to Know." Enclose $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope.

by lawrence lamb m.d.

DEAR DR. LAMB:— Every so often I wake up during the night choking, I belch while I am sound asleep on my back. This blocks my windpipe and I cannot get my air. My wife will slap my back but it seems to take forever before I can get air. It's terrible. It seems like the end of me. When I finally get air, it takes awhile before I'm breathing normally and I am afraid to go back to bed until I can.

I do not eat or snack before going to bed so this does not cause it. Can you help me? What causes this? What can we do when it does happen? What can I do to prevent this in the future? Believe me, it's quite scary. I've heard of people choking to death on food and I'm very concerned.

DEAR READER:— You can't choke unless you have something to choke on. I suspect you are regurgitating food from your stomach into the back of your mouth. We call this an esophageal reflux.

It's a good thing you don't have a snack before you go to bed, but that doesn't necessarily mean your stomach is empty. The stomach is a food reservoir, storing the food you've eaten. It doesn't pass it into the small intestine until after it's been churned and essentially liquefied. This process doesn't happen instantaneously.

If you've eaten a good fatty meal, it may be 12 hours or more before the stomach is empty. Carbohydrates are emptied the fastest and proteins in between.

Of course, how the food you've eaten is packaged makes a difference. If your carbohydrates are in the form of raw fruits or vegetables, they'll be solids and the stomach will have to work on them to liquify them. On the other hand, if your carbohydrate is a sweet drink, it may be only a matter of minutes until it starts emptying into the small intestine. The classic example here is drinking sugar water for a glucose tolerance test.

You probably have a faulty closure mechanism at the top of your stomach where it joins the esophagus (food tube). In a normal person the top of the stomach is closed and when one lies down, there is no way that the acid digestive material and food can leak up into the esophagus.

Faulty closure may be the only abnormal function, but many people who have a hernia of the small portion of the stomach through the diaphragm (hiatal hernia) will have an associated esophageal reflux. To give you more detailed information, I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-8, Hiatal Hernia, Esophageal Reflux. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1561, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

You should make sure you have a very light evening meal with as little fat as you can manage. Be sure to eat early enough so your stomach can completely digest what you eat.

The Health Letter I am sending you will give you other tips to follow. You might find it very helpful to have the head of your bed elevated so you are not lying flat on your back. That helps prevent the food from leaking into the lower esophagus.

Make an appointment with your doctor and have an examination to see if you have a hiatal hernia. If you do, a good sound program with attention to your daily habits along the lines I've suggested here and in The Health Letter should pretty well eliminate your problem and prevent future attacks.

Visions from 'land of enchantment'

By Norman Nadel

SANTA FE, N.M. (NEA)— "New Mexico in Toronto" sounds as unlikely as June in January or snow in the Key West, but it represents an explicit project aimed at bringing a wider awareness, not to mention a broader market, to regional painters and sculptors.

It is the title of an exhibition of 86 pieces by 26 artists, presented by the Linda Durham Gallery of Santa Fe at the Hazleton Lanes Gallery in Toronto last May. Twenty works were sold, which isn't bad, considering that most of the artists had been unfamiliar to the Canadians. Also, it was the first solo venture in the art world for Mrs. Durham, who had been operating her own gallery for only a few months.

Nevertheless, it is to be followed by "New Mexico in the Bay Area" at Palo Alto, Calif., and negotiations are under way for "New Mexico in Houston" and "New Mexico in North Carolina." What works for the artists in this Southwestern state assumed could work for other artists from other regions.

American buyers of paintings and sculptures generally don't pay much attention to where the artist did his work, which is as it should be. But collectors, including those who might buy something only once in a blue moon, tend to favor scenes and subjects which are familiar to them.

While cowboy art is popular everywhere, including abroad, far more of it is to be found in Oklahoma, Texas and that area than anywhere else. New Englanders tend to like New England subjects, just as Californians lean toward work which reveals the atmosphere in which they live.

But because of this, artists who are indeed doing rather well in their own back yard, so to speak, are not well enough known further afield. Mrs. Durham reasoned that people in Southeastern Canada wouldn't be familiar with Carl Johansen, Dennis Larkins, George Wooliver, Donald Wright, Dick Mason and Paul Sarkisian, among many others. A few, such as Georgia O'Keeffe, have international reputations. Others such as Paul Pletka, who paints Indians, and Larry Bell, have dealers and had exhibitions in New York and elsewhere. They are the exceptions.

Most of the artists in the aptly nicknamed "land of enchantment" are not native New Mexicans, Mrs. Durham points out, adding: "except that now they make their homes here and are inspired by the area to create whatever it is they are currently doing."

"They are drawn here by a variety of reasons. The quality of light is wonderful, there is a great deal more space, the pace may be conducive to a lot of creative processes, the pulse is different. They call it the land of enchantment; there must be something to that."

"Many have come from the very big art centers in New York, the West Coast, Chicago. They seem to reach the point in their development where they no longer need the kind of stimulation that one finds in New York, for example, and move here where it is more quiet and more private. The artist has more opportunity to reach into his own deeper creative areas in a different way. The sunlight has a great deal to do with it for many of the artists."

As might be expected, landscape artists and others out here who depict the area scene in representational art can only rave about the clarity, the richness of color, the luminosity of the light. You don't have to be an artist in New Mexico to be stunned by all that your eyes discover.

But abstract artists, as well, find the region a stimulus for work which, an observer might reasonably assume, could be done as well anywhere else. Allan Graham does what one critic has termed "draftsmanly paintings," which have the tidy organization and the specificity of drawings. Abstractions of lines and subtle texturing, they usually are untitled and do not represent anything familiar. They are adventures for the eye and spirit, as all good abstraction should be.

Even so, Graham, who lives in Albuquerque, relates them to the physical setting: "There's a physicalness that exists, living here. I don't know how to really describe it. The type of painting I do I really relate to living in this area. I couldn't imagine doing the same things elsewhere. My eye has never dulled to the things that happen around here. It wakes you up; you don't walk around staring at the ground."

For Dick Mason, the scenic riches can threaten as well as inspire the artist: "New Mexico's overwhelming beauty and energy can be as deadening to the senses as they are inspiring. One can become visually lazy and callous to one's surroundings unless 'plugged into' that energy, thus becoming a part of it. For me, to 'plug in' involves painting with a keener vision that makes another person stop, enabling one to re-evaluate what one sees and ordinarily takes for granted."

Peaches and Herb are a big hit once again

By MARY CAMPBELL, AP Newsfeatures Writer
 Peaches and Herb are back. Well, Herb is back with a new Peaches. And both are very happy.

They have a disco hit, "Shake Your Groove Thing," No. 5 and climbing on the best-selling singles chart of March 17, and an LP hit, "2 Hot!" No. 11 and climbing on that day's chart.

They're on MYP Records, distributed by Polydor.

Peaches is Linda Greene of Washington, D.C. She's happy as a fairy tale princess, happy about the singing and the success, former frustrations forgotten, loving her new nickname.

Herb is Herb Fame, whose real name, Herbert Feenster, was changed when he began to record in 1965, because so many people mispronounced and misspelled it. He got tired of the traveling and aggravations and broke up Peaches and Herb in 1970. "I never asked her," he says. "I just quit. I'm that way."

Peaches says, "I hope you're not going to do that now."

"I'm not going through the same aggravation now," Herb replies.

The first Peaches and Herb started when Herb, a record-store salesman in Washington, sang for producer Van McCoy. McCoy booked three evenings in a New York recording studio and drove Herb and a D.C. female trio, the Sweet Things, to New York. On the way, everybody sang.

So McCoy used one session for the Sweet Things, one for Herb Fame and one for the trio's lead singer, Francine Barker, known as Peaches since babyhood, and Herb. The group record and the solo record were stiffs. "Let's Fall in Love" was backed by "We're in This Thing Together" on the Peaches and Herb record. Herb says that somebody at radio station KATZ in St. Louis turned it over and played the B side "and that's when it really started to do something."

Herb explains that in those days a black act was allowed to cut three sides. Two were put together and released as a single. If it was a hit, the act quickly cut one more side which was put out with the first session's discard. If the second single was a hit, the act could make an album.

Peaches and Herb made four albums, on Date, a subsidiary of Columbia, and had seven hit singles, the two biggest being "Close Your Eyes" and "Love Is Strange."

Herb has a wife and four children, who range in age now from 15 to 20. It was difficult to support them, Herb says.

"There was a lot of traveling. There was competition from English groups. I would see white groups come out and have one hit record and get major concerts and TV shows. We, as a black act, always were looked over."

"That is part of the aggravation I could not take any more. To a certain degree, it is still going on. If it wasn't, we wouldn't have both rhythm 'n' blues and pop radio stations, which really hold black artists back."

"It was driving me up the wall. One day we were off work and I was riding down the street in Washington. I went in and took the exam for the Police Department. When they told me I had the job, I just quit Peaches and Herb and went to work for the city July 20, 1970."

"But I missed singing. That's why I'm back. In 1976 I started thinking Peaches and Herb could come back."

Peaches, who has had classical piano training, played and sang at piano bars and had done modeling, was back home in Washington in 1976. "I bumped into Van McCoy," she says, "and told him I was at home now and wished I could get into the record business. I thought I was ready to handle something like that."

"Van ran into Paul Cohn, Herb's manager, and dropped my name and they contacted me."

Peaches says, "I felt I was ready to be the next whoever. I thought I was as good as anybody out there singing. I never thought I could meet anyone who could make it come true for me. I feel sorry for women who think it's easy. I pray for them."

"From the time I heard Marvin Gaye and Tammi Terrell, I was positive a duo would be natural for me. I have a natural tone for harmony. Sure enough, Herb and I sing good together. And his wife says this is the best time in his life."

As for the new nickname, she says, "It is fun being Peaches. When I became Peaches, it really brought out my personality. Women who play piano in bars hide behind the piano. You walk through the world like you're invisible. You don't want those customers to look at you."

"Being Peaches helped me come out of that. I became everything a peach should be. I felt it was a natural part for me. Now I can hardly remember any of the struggles or problems before I signed with these guys. My whole life has become like a storybook since then. The past, to me, is irrelevant."

Herb left the Washington Police Department in August 1978. A first album, "Peaches and Herb," was on MCA Records last year. The current, hit one, is this duo's second. Unlike Peaches, Herb doesn't forget the past. He says, "I remember. You burn me, I got you in my mind forever." He adds that he enjoys "being back in singing. A policeman sees too much of the negative things in people's lives. I enjoy people again."

Peaches says, "I don't know if I've got a mission in life. But I'd like to unite black and white, old and young."

Wood permits a carver few errors

By John Spragens Jr.

HUBBARD, Tex. (NEA)— "When you make a mistake, you just cry a little."

That's Texas woodcarver Ernie Roche explaining just how difficult and unforgiving a medium he has chosen.

"You can't make a mistake. The wood's going to look just like you cut it," he says, then jokingly points to the wood stove that heats his combination studio and showroom. "I burn a few."

Roche has been carving most of his life. In a back corner of a display case is the totem pole he carved for a Boy Scout project when he was 12.

But it was only when his health forced him out of the drive-in restaurant business six years ago that he decided to see if he could make a living from his wood relief carvings and sculptures.

"It's not all that lucrative, but it's very satisfying," he says. "I get a little hungry sometimes, but my work has been well received and it commands a good price."

His relief carvings begin at $35, while his large wood sculptures go for as much as $3,000.

"I don't think people really realize how many hours are spent working on these," says Roche, who disciplines himself to put in a full workday. And there is more to his work than whittling.

His relief carvings of rustic gates, gnarled trees and tumbled-down barns and farmhouses are born during back-road drives. When a scene catches his eye, he stops to sketch it. (He takes a photograph if historical accuracy is especially important.)

Back at his shop, called The Woodshed, Roche transfers his sketches to pine boards.

"You have to have good composition and perspective," he explains. "It's important to frame and compose a good picture."

His next step is making a "stop cut" around the major outlines of the drawing. Then he goes to work with his razor-sharp chisels and gouges, shaving wood out of the background sections.

"Learning the mechanics doesn't take long," he says.

"The speed comes with practice. First you have to teach people to sharpen their tools. If you can't shave with it, you can't carve with it."

As he works, he must be sensitive to the changing direction of the grain. If he cuts against it, the wood chips out, leaving an unsightly scar.

When he has cut the wood away from the foreground objects, he sketches in the background and repeats the process. Then he rounds and shapes the trees, fence posts and barns.

To finish the carvings, he uses a stain of his own formulation, made with plenty of oil so it will soak into the wood slowly. That allows him to control the effects of light and shadow more carefully.

Once the stain dries, Roche seals each piece with a coat of clear lacquer.

"I like to stress that what I do is my own thing," Roche says of the carvings. "I'm fortunate that what people like is what I innovated."

Like the relief carvings, the more elaborate sculptures begin with sketches, but on clay rather than board. Roche uses homemade wooden calipers to transfer the main proportions to the figure he carves from wood.

It is in roughing the first form that mistakes are made, he says. Then the "hard part" is done and only the fine details remain.

Roche uses basswood for the sculptures because of its ability to hold those fine details. He goes to western Arkansas to pick out rough-cut untreated railroad ties, which he ages for at least a year in a storeroom next to the studio.

Linden, the family of trees to which basswood belongs, has been the carver's wood for centuries, Roche says. That is because it is dense enough to hold details while being soft and easy to work.

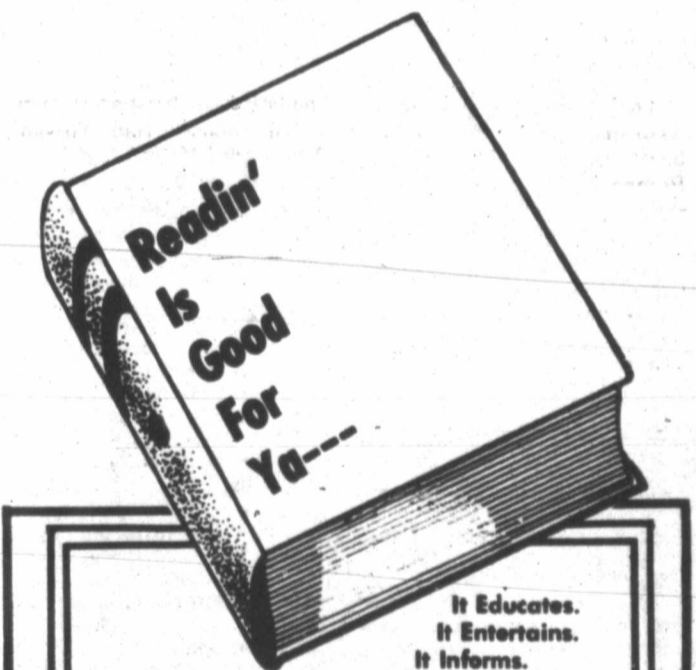

Roche works occasionally in walnut and mahogany. And he sometimes finds a tree limb that suggests what he calls a "natural figure," usually a face with long hair flowing back into the original shape of the limb.

"Country-Western" is the term Roche uses to describe his relief carvings and sculptures.

But he says that when he began teaching himself the techniques of wood sculpture, he had to read books on the subject from Europe since none were published in the United States. Rather than reflecting the European style, however, he wanted to make his art strictly American.

That is why he is so painstaking in his research. For instance, a sculpture of a post-Civil War homesteader sits half-finished, waiting until Roche can visit the library to check the style of suspenders the man would have worn.

He explains that the figure is a former Confederate soldier who came to Texas to homestead after being driven from Georgia or Alabama by carpetbaggers.

Parents help to make baseball safer

NEW YORK (AP)— Parents of young baseball players can help prevent injuries by making sure that all equipment passes a safety check and that the child is in good physical condition before "spring training" begins, says a man who has been associated with professional baseball for 26 years.

The advice comes from Sparky Anderson, one-time player, and former manager of the Cincinnati Reds, who is national spokesman for "Pitch, Hit & Run," major-league baseball's official youth program.

Anderson says parents can set a few ground rules concerning equipment to help cut down on common injuries:

— The webbing of the glove, which receives most of the impact from a thrown or batted ball, should be checked regularly for worn or torn lacing. A tight webbing will prevent the ball from coming through and hitting the player in the face.

— The bat should be of the proper size and weight for the youngster's age to avoid strain on the arms and shoulders. A sporting-goods retailer, physical-education instructor or Little League coach can help make the right selection.

— As with off-the-field shoes, baseball footwear should be properly fitted to prevent ankle and foot injuries. Cleats, which bear the player's full weight, should be checked regularly.

— If a youngster wears eyeglasses, an eye doctor should be consulted about whether special shatter-proof lenses are needed.

The youth program, sponsored by Burger King Corp., is supported by the National Recreation and Park Association and by the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports, which gives these conditioning tips:

— Make sure children get into shape gradually, exercising hard enough to make the effort worthwhile, increasing exercise at a comfortable pace and starting a regular routine of muscle-building situps and pushups and a running or jogging program.

Anderson adds:

— Parents should tell a child that arm strain can be prevented through proper warm-ups. A player should begin by playing catch with a teammate standing 9-10 feet away. The distance can be increased as the arm loosens.

— Sliding into a base is a major cause of baseball injuries. Parents should emphasize that sliding should be practiced on a

District action hot and heavy in Pampa

By JOE BLOBAUM
Pampa News Staff

If District 3-AAAA sports action is what you crave, Pampa's the place to be Friday and Saturday.

Today's events included the second round of district girls golf competition at the Pampa Country Club and the opening rounds of the loop tennis tournament. Saturday brings the district girls track meet to Randy Matson Track, with the tennis tournament finishing up just across the street at the Pampa High courts.

Amarillo High, Tascosa and Palo Duro loomed as the teams to beat in golf, tennis and track (respectively), but a few individual Pampa performers were expected to be in the thick of the chase for track and tennis honors.

The Sandies carried an 18-stroke advantage over Tascosa going into today's district girls golf finale, thanks in part to Tricia Harris. She carded an 88 at Ross Rogers Municipal Golf Course in the district's first round, which gave her a one-shot lead over Tascosa

Team totals going into today's round included AHS' 380, Tascosa 398, Palo Duro 450, Amarillo High B 465, Caprock 489 and Pampa 499.

The Sandies, who finished eighth at the state AAAA meet last year, have won the tournament the past two years. In fact, the Amarillo High B team has been second the past two years. The top two teams will advance to the Region I-AAAA tourney April 19-20 in Lubbock.

Tascosa, meanwhile, appeared to have all the cards in hand for a district championship. The Rebels owned five of the nine seeded positions in the tournament, to be staged at the Pampa High and Pampa Country Club courts.

The Rebels have the top seed in boys singles (Frank Guengerich), the No. 1 boys doubles team (Victor Hands and Donald Fong) and the Sutherland girls (Sue and Pam) in the catbird seat for girls doubles.

Tascosa also has the No. 2 seeded boy (David Wright) and the second-best girls doubles duo of Cheryl Hall and Megan Neely. But the other district coaches are hardly conceding the title to the Rebels.

Kris Douglass of Pampa is rated just behind top girls seed Kim Clark of AHS and will play Palo Duro's Pacino in the second round. Harvester Kurt Krause, meanwhile, was unseeded but received a good draw, according to PHS coach David Martin. He'll play Todd Conklin of Amarillo High in his first-round match.

Should Krasue defeat Conklin, chances are he'd face third-seeded Rod Youree of Caprock, according to Martin. Pampa's other boys singles entry is Jack Redus, who will face the task of playing Guengerich if he wins his first-round encounter with Parson of Amarillo.

Cheryl Kessel and Kathy Wall will team up for Pampa in girls doubles, as will Susan Lane and Laura Johnson. Misses Kessel and Wall got a good draw, including a first-round bye, and will take on Amarillo High's number two team in the second round.

Misses Lane and Johnson weren't as lucky and will face the Sutherlands in the second round of action. In boys' doubles, Greg Trollingier and Mark Spence received a first-round bye and will face Caprock's Jimmy Shelton and Brian Kloos in the second round.

Saturday's track meet could turn into a romp for Palo Duro, which had little trouble winning the Amarillo Relays last weekend. But all five 3-AAAA teams figure to qualify at least a few girls for the Region I-AAAA meet in Lubbock April 20-21.

Pampa's brightest hopes in the varsity division appear to lie in the 80-yard hurdles and the shot put. Becky Davis (11.0) and Kellye Richardson (11.2) have performed well in the hurdles this year, while Carmela Caldwell's 37-2 effort in the shot put ties her for second place among the district's weight specialists.

Saturday morning's running preliminaries begin at 10:30. Field events will begin at 10, with running finals scheduled for 3 Saturday afternoon.

PSU names basketball coach

GOODWELL, Okla. — Dennis Aye has been hired as head basketball coach at Panhandle State University, subject to approval by the school's Board of Regents.

The 27-year-old Aye is presently head basketball coach at Murray State College in Tishamingo, Okla., where he served for one year.

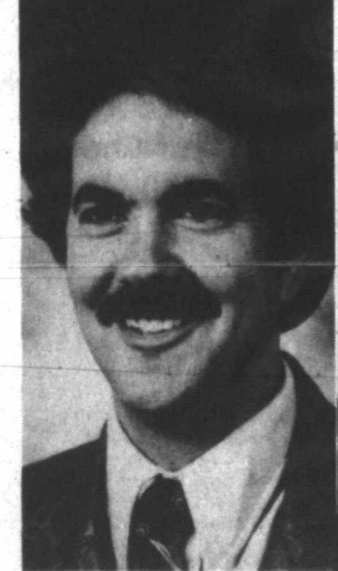

Aye's team at Murray posted a 10-17 mark, quite an accomplishment considering what he was given to work with.

and college ball at Simpson College and St. Ambrose College, both in Iowa. He received his master's degree from the University of Connecticut in 1974.

Aye and his wife Wendy have a two-year-old son and are expecting their second child in November.

According to J. Phillip Traugher, dean at Murray State, "When Coach Aye came to Murray, he was faced with a situation where little or no recruitment of players had been done by his predecessor. Even with that handicap he was able to put together a satisfactory season. Given sufficient recruiting time, he has the personality and drive to put together a winning team."

Aye played high school basketball in Davenport, Iowa

Texas Relays set

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Rarely do the field events take the spotlight away from the running events but the 52nd Texas Relays beginning tonight may be the exception.

Such talent as Earl Bell, Larry Jessee, Ralph Haynie and Terry Porter will meet in the pole vault.

There's Hreinn Halldorsson of Iceland and Sam Walker in the shot not to mention the appearance of schoolboy sensation Michael Carter of Dallas Jefferson, a national record holder in the shot and discus.

"It's one of the best fields we've had for the field events," said Cleburne Price, who doubles as Texas track coach and director of the Relays.

Price said, "The year preceding the Olympics everybody gets up."

Of course, there is major interest in the confrontation between Texas A&M's Curtis Dickey and Olympian Johnny Lam Jones in the 100-meter open invitational.

Jones is away from school this spring recovering from the rigors of football at the University of Texas. He has run a 9.85, manual-timed 100-meter dash.

Dickey, the NCAA Indoor 60-yard champion and star tailback of the Texas A&M football team, and Olympian Jones, who earned a gold medal on America's sprint relay team in the 1976 Olympics, meet Friday night in Memorial Stadium.

Dickey was named the Relays' outstanding performer last year after winning the Invitational 100-meter dash in 10.22 seconds and anchoring the Aggies' winning 400-meter relay team which was clocked in 39.95 seconds.

He breezed to victory in 9.5 seconds last week over a mediocre field at the Dallas Invitational in the 100-yard dash. Dickey has a powerful, effortless stride but has trouble getting out of the blocks—something which has haunted Jones throughout his track career.

Others running in the open 100-meter dashes include Bill Collins of the Philadelphia Pioneers Club, Don Collins, John Garrison and John Lee.

Astros open play tonight

HOUSTON (AP) — Amateur umpire Murray Strey has one game of major league baseball experience but he says there won't be a drop off in officiating tonight in the National League opener in the Astrodome between the Houston Astros and Atlanta Braves.

"It's feeling that we can do the job," said Strey, one of three amateur umps scheduled to fill in tonight for the striking National League umpires. "I've never known of a game being lost by an umpire yet."

J.R. Richard will oppose Atlanta's Phil Niekro in the opener. Mayor Jim McConn will throw out the first ball before an estimated crowd of 30,000 and the Astros will pass out baseball hats as long as they last.

But all eyes will be on the amateur umpiring crew headed by Class AAA umpire Steve Fields, 38, of Alexandria, Va.

"I'm very excited about it right now," said Strey, an SWC umpire who will be on hand for Houston's six-game home stand. "That'll all go away once we get on the field. It's really quite an honor to be asked as a non-professional to call the game."

A healthy Cesar Cedeno in centerfield plus a newcomers

Alan Ashby at catcher and shortstop Craig Reynolds should add strength to the Astros lineup although the team is generally picked for a second division finish.

Reynolds will bat No. 2 in the Astros lineup behind leadoff man Terry Puhl and batting coach Deacon Jones is looking forward to their teamwork.

"Terry and Craig already have signs with each other when Terry is on base and Craig is at the plate," Jones said. "If they work together, they'll be just that much more effective."

Pro football schedules out

HOUSTON (AP) — A resumption of their duel with Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh and a rematch with Super Bowl finalist Dallas highlights the Houston Oilers' 1979 schedule, team officials announced Thursday.

The rejuvenated Oilers, who lost to the Steelers in the American Football Conference title game last season, will play the Cowboys in Texas Stadium on Nov. 22. Thanksgiving Day. Houston plays Pittsburgh Sept. 9 in Pittsburgh and Dec. 10 in the Astrodome.

Houston's regular season schedule includes: Sept. 2, at Washington; Sept. 9, at Pittsburgh; Sept. 16, Kansas City; Sept. 23, at Cincinnati; Sept. 30, Cleveland; Oct. 7, St. Louis; Oct. 14, at Baltimore;

Oct. 21, at Seattle; Oct. 28, New York Jets; Nov. 5, at Miami; Nov. 11, Oakland; Nov. 18, Cincinnati; Nov. 22, at Dallas; Dec. 2, at Cleveland; Dec. 10, Pittsburgh and Dec. 16, Philadelphia.

Eleven of the 16 Dallas Cowboys games next fall will be nationally televised, team officials announced Thursday in releasing their 1979 football schedule.

Among the Cowboy opponents are six teams which made the playoffs last season, including the Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers and the Houston Oilers.

The Cowboys also will meet both Pittsburgh and Houston in pre-season exhibition play.

Religious roundup

NASHVILLE (AP) — The first film on evangelism produced in the United Methodist Church in 20 years won't be available this spring as expected because of criticisms aroused at its premiere.

The objections came when the 32-minute film, "Finding the Way Forward," was shown to the church's 95-member Board of Discipleship.

Several ethnic minority members said the film did not portray their respective groups adequately. Others complained that it was "too upper middle class" and reflected no women in leadership roles.

The film, stressing "contagious United Methodist congregational life," features white congregations in Darien, Conn.; Montgomery, Ala., and Richland, Wash., a predominantly black congregation in Atlanta, and a multi-racial congregation in Los Angeles.

The Rev. George G. Hunter, executive of the board's evangelism section which produced the film, says revisions can't be made in time for use at church conferences this spring as planned.

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — After four years work on it, Minnesota's seven Roman Catholic bishops have issued a call for a larger and more just role for women in society and in the church.

They condemned "all unjust discrimination" against women and pledged themselves to "work for a future when injustice will be recognized and abolished, when equality for women eventually will be accomplished."

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — In the late 1930's, a youthful Billy Graham preached his first sermon on what was then "skid row" in downtown Tampa.

Forty years later, he returned for a five-day crusade last month at Tampa Stadium, preaching to an average 35,000 persons each night.

Tampa's Mayor Bill Poe called it the "largest religious event ever on the west coast of Florida. There has never been anything like it. There has been an electricity going throughout our city as a result."

HERE IS THE PATH

In a world where order depends heavily on regulation, we have learned to rely on signs for direction. Sometimes, however, the signs seem to point in completely opposite ways.

How often we have heard a political candidate point out for us his way, all the while assuring us it is the only way. His opponent, meanwhile, diligently attempts to convince us that success lies in the opposite direction. The most confusing factor is that they may both be right in some degree. Before we can make a choice, we must consider the signs and utilize them in reaching our conclusions.

The decision we make when we cast our vote is vital to our future. Let us examine the issues with great care. Exercise our best judgment. And most important of all, let's be sure we follow one sign without fail—the sign that says "VOTE."

FOLLOW THE SIGNS

LIBERTY AND JUSTICE FOR ALL

SUPPORT AMERICA

Our priceless heritage embodied in the flag of the United States, is as alive today as it was when written for the ages in the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution. It stands for all the world to see and for all Americans to cherish. And in the tradition of Washington, Jefferson, and Hamilton, we, too, have a privilege, a right, and a duty. While we may disagree as to the methods, we should not disagree as to the goal—that of preserving the greatest democratic society the world has ever known.

Our flag is a symbol, not of sentiment, but of history, the history of men and women willing to live and die for it. Surely this willingness is with us still, because daily we experience more of the blessings that are ours—ours because we are Americans.

Loans from Farm Credit System sets record

WASHINGTON (AP) — Loans by member units of the Farm Credit System set records in 1978 and are expected to increase further this year, according to its top officials.

Donald E. Wilkinson, governor of the Farm Credit Administration, says the continued growth in lending will be due in part to "continued improvement" in the general farm economy, including a williness by many farmers to buy additional land.

Net farm income jumped about 40 percent last year to about $28.2 billion from $20.1 billion in 1977. The Agriculture Department says a further gain is expected this year, perhaps to around $31 billion.

The FCA is an independent federal agency that oversees the Farm Credit System, which includes federal land banks, production credit associations and banks for cooperatives.

In an annual review the FCA reported that total lending by the system last year was a record $45.1 billion, up 15.9 percent from $38.9 billion in 1977.

Wilkinson said strong demand for loans developed in the second half of last year — coinciding with rising prices for livestock and generally improved prospects for many other commodities.

"New loans by the federal land banks during the fourth quarter of 1978 were up 27.6 percent over the same period in 1977, the highest fourth-quarter growth rate in four years," the report said.

No federal money is involved in the system's loan operations. Funds are raised in the commercial market from the sale of bonds and other securities.

Sales of those totaled $50.9 billion last year, up 30.2 percent from $39.1 billion in 1977. Securities left outstanding at the end of the year were $41.7 billion, compared with $36.8 billion at the end of 1977.

Last year's business by units of the system included:

- Federal land banks loaned $6.4 billion, up 12.3 percent from $5.7 billion in 1977. Loans outstanding on Dec. 31 were $25.6 billion, up 15.8 percent from $22.1 billion a year earlier.
- Production credit associations, which make short-term loans to help farmers cover production costs, loaned $23.4 billion last year, up 15.8 percent from $20.2 billion in 1977. Loans left outstanding totaled $15.1 billion, up 11 percent from a year earlier.
- Banks for cooperatives loaned $14.1 billion last year, up 15.6 percent from 1977, with $6.1 billion left outstanding as of Dec. 31, up 8.9 percent from the end of 1977.

Those do not include loans last year for rural housing and to commercial fishermen, rural electric cooperatives and to other financial institutions which are not part of the system.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has been asked by one of the world's largest grain exporting companies to help collect $80 million it says is owed by Turkey on a four-year-old wheat deal.

Clarence D. Palmby, vice president of Continental Grain Co., New York, told a Senate appropriations subcommittee Thursday that U.S. aid to Turkey should be withheld until it pays up.

Palmby said Turkey signed a contract for the grain on Nov. 1, 1974, with deliveries to begin the following May.

But world grain prices dropped below the amount Turkey had agreed to pay and it refused to go through with the deal, he said.

The contract called for sale of 350,000 to 385,000 metric tons of wheat by Continental's wholly-owned subsidiary, Finagrain, to Toprak Mahsulleri Ofisi, the Turkish government's grain organization.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds. The deal involved between 12.8 million and 14.1 million bushels.

In arbitration proceedings and later in British courts, Continental's claim against Turkey was upheld. On Feb. 27, the company announced that Britain's highest court upheld the earlier decisions and denied Turkey a further appeal.

Palmby said federal law requires that "no U.S. assistance can be furnished to any country which has taken steps to repudiate or nullify existing contracts or agreements with a U.S. company or its subsidiaries" and failed to pay "the necessary compensation" to that company.

The grain company official said also that similar statutes exist "which prevent the U.S. from joining in World Bank loans to Turkey and extending trade preferences" while the default continues.

Palmby said a precedent for this type of action occurred in 1962, when Ceylon nationalized U.S. oil companies without compensation. All bilateral U.S. aid programs in Ceylon were suspended until that country signed a compensation agreement with the companies in 1965, he said.

If a buyer of products "can renege every time the world market price goes down," or when it goes up, then "chaos will replace order and reliability in world trade," Palmby said.

U.S. seems to love those in debt

NEW YORK (AP) — The country seems to love debtors. Uncle Sam, feeling kinship perhaps, gives the borrower every break in the Internal Revenue Service code. Life insurers cater to him. Banks, too.

Your identity might even depend on your debts. Your good name, your reputation, your self respect might accompany you on a trip, but if you have no credit card you might not be able to cash a check.

You might not even get on the road in the first place. Try renting an automobile without a plastic credit card. Your money means nothing to a car renter. Your debt potential does.

The IRS allows the borrower to deduct interest costs on his or her tax return, in effect subsidizing debt. The practice is challenged from time to time but it gets nowhere, because too many debtors.

Turned down for life insurance? Take out a personal loan and almost have it forced on you. It's low-cost insurance too, and you're not likely to be asked about your physical problems either.

But you need more coverage? In that case, determine if your bank offers mortgage insurance, then see if you can get in on it. Mortgage the house. Lots of people get $40,000 of coverage that way.

Banks almost always love debtors, as you would too if somebody agreed in contract to give you back money you lent them. Sometimes the more you borrow and the more you owe, the more they love you.

Recognizing that such romances might be based on flimsy credentials, some sharp borrowers go into debt over and over again to build their reputations for the day when they might really need a sizable sum.

They do it this way: They request a $3,000 loan for two years. They put the money into a 90-day account. Then they repay the loan early. It costs them a bit, but how can you price tag a good reputation?

Sometime thereafter they apply anew. This time they seek twice as much. Impressed by the repayment record, the bank officer feels his customer is worth the risk. And on it goes to a really big name.

On many a Main Street, acknowledged as among the most important people in town, strut some of the county's biggest debtors. They may be more honored than the biggest saver. Savers are idlers; debtors are doers.

Pilot credited for saving passengers

DETROIT (AP) — The 80 passengers aboard the TWA flight from New York to Minneapolis had just eaten a mid-air snack when they felt the craft begin to vibrate.

Suddenly, the plane swerved to the right, completed a 360-degree barrel roll and nosedived from 39,000 to 12,000 feet — 5 miles — in a matter of seconds at a speed apparently exceeding that of sound.

"You could feel your face pressed back and the blood rush to your head," said 22-year-old Chell Roberts, a University of Utah student who was aboard. "Everyone was screaming. I thought it was over."

"We were just through eating when it happened ... People started to scream and a flight attendant started to cry," he said. "It's really a funny feeling to see what everybody does before they think they are going to die."

But nobody died Wednesday night. Only three people aboard suffered minor injuries.

Federal Aviation Administration inspectors said it was "miraculous" and "unprecedented" that the Boeing 727 jetliner survived such mid-air trauma before being brought under control in a desperation maneuver. Langhorne Bond, head of the FAA, commended the pilot, identified only as H. Gibson of Chicago.

Bond and other FAA officials flew in from Washington to survey the damaged craft at Detroit Metropolitan Airport. The plane, with a seven-member crew, made an emergency landing at 10:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Propped up by jacks, the plane sat on an airport side runway as mechanics, FAA officials and reporters examined the damage. Flaps on the right wing were ripped off during the descent. Pieces of metal hung from that wing and from the fuselage around the landing gear doors on both sides. Inside the airliner, newspapers and magazines were strewn on the floor. A large sack of used airsickness bags stood in the aisle.

Preliminary evidence, Bond said, indicated that the flight was "very routine in clear weather" when the plane "began to vibrate, went out of cruise control, rolled to the right, did a complete turnover and dove to the ground."

"We don't know what caused it at this time," Bond said.

Chuck Foster, associate administrator of the FAA for aviation standards, said the plane was flying about 500 mph before the trouble hit, but in the dive apparently exceeded 650 mph — above the speed of sound at that altitude and temperature.

"I've been told that the airspeed indicator was pegged all the way over to the edge," Foster said. "If that proves to be the case, it will be the first time in FAA history that an airplane (not designed for it) had exceeded those speeds and survived."

According to the airline, two of three passengers who reportedly suffered bruises and minor injuries did not require immediate treatment. The third was treated at an area hospital and released.

All the passengers but one continued to Minneapolis on a Northwest Airlines flight.

around the nation

SEATTLE (AP) — It has been 30 years since a ship flying the Chinese flag docked here, but officials say that will end April 18 when the freighter Liu Lin Hai arrives to pick up a load of corn.

The announcement was made by the National Council for United States-China Trade, Lykes Bros. Steamship Co. and the Port of Seattle. Lykes spokesman Dave Wenger said the company intends to develop a monthly call to the Port of Shanghai, where the Liu Lin Hai will deliver the first load of corn.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A one-vote margin was all a Tennessee House committee needed to delay until next year action on a resolution calling for a U.S. constitutional convention to outlaw abortions.

The House Calendar Committee voted 18-17 on Thursday to defer action on the resolution, which had already passed the Senate. Rep. James McKinney, D-Nashville, called for the postponement to give the state attorney general's staff time to determine if a convention could be limited to one subject.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Of the 348 cases of property tax scofflaws in this neighbor city to Boston, one in particular has gotten lots of publicity — the mayor's.

Mayor Thomas Danahy owes the city about $40,000, says tax official Michael Moreau. Danahy said: "It's not that easy to come up with that kind of money." Moreau says the taxes were accumulated over five years by Danahy and his brother, John L. Moreau, a Middlesex County commissioner. The tax man also said the city will put a lien on two pieces of commercial property owned by the brothers if the debt is not erased within two weeks.

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A lower court ruling that pilot error was responsible for a 1974 jetliner crash that killed 92 people has been upheld by a federal appeals court, which agreed that the widows of the pilot and co-pilot should be denied damages.
