Recovery begins

By GREG THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer
WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — Stunned by loss of life and crippled by power outages, Wichita Falls limped toward normal today while its mayor remained fearful of fires and an increase in the number of deaths caused by a mammoth killer tornado.

Mayor Kenneth Hill said power had been restored to about 50 percent of the city's 100,000 residents but water pressure was still too low to fight fires from the city's hydrants.

Hill said the death count remains at 42. But, he said, it still could rise to 100. No more bodies had been found by late this morning, he added.

As many as 8,000 residents were left homeless, the mayor estimated. He said there was no estimate yet as to how many were missing. Hundreds of persons were injured, and power and water in all of the city were knocked out for 24 hours.

Residents in Vernon, where a twister killed 11 and caused heavy property damage, and Harrod, where one died in a tornado, also tried to get their lives and property back in shape.

Dozens of search teams, bolstered by airmen from nearby Sheppard Air Force Base, continued today to comb Wichita Falls' ravaged area, a swath eight miles long and more than a mile wide in some areas through the heavily populated southern sections of the city.

"Maybe I'm speaking more from a standpoint of fear than knowledge. I just don't see how we can keep from having more (deaths). It's a huge area," Hill said.

"We'd been in terrible shape if we had had a fire. We'd just have to let it burn," he said.

An emergency curfew aimed at preventing looting was in effect in the city last night. Hill said three persons — two adults and one juvenile — were arrested and charged with looting.

Except for Red Cross shelters and National Guard jeeps, the downtown area appeared virtually normal today. Traffic signals again were operating, some gas stations were pumping precious fuels and retail businesses were open.

To retire at end of school year

Evans notices changes in education

By EUGENE LAYCOCK
Pampa News Staff
An apple on the corner of the mahogany desk, a ruler or a paddle, hanging inadvertently off its edge, a clean chalkboard and a new stick of chalk, 10 bright, well-groomed and mannered pupils, beaming smiles of curiosity.

A teacher could ask for little else to do her job well.

However, the ideal situation rarely exists in the educational world and Bernyce Evans, third grade teacher at Horace Mann School, is aware of it. She'll retire at the end of the school year.

After ten years of experience, Evans, 62, sees changes in methods of teaching and believes with the increasing number of students that experiments are necessary to find the right way to teach.

"Two counselors come to each school once a week," she said, "and they work with you."

She explained that counselors for reading and math evaluate classes and make suggestions or show ways to improve.

"Teachers need helpers to teach the basics," said Mrs. Evans, whose class consists of 10 girls and 17 boys.

Instructing a small class of about 21 students would enable a teacher to be more effective, added the West Texas State University graduate of 1968.

The principals hand out self-evaluation sheets at the end of the year to encourage a teacher to look at their class and themselves to make improvements, she said.

"It makes you mad," she said, "but it helps."

"The schools also change textbooks every so often to keep up," she said.

However, she said, handwriting books switch a lot and cause some problem in instructing a student to use cursive writing. She added that handwriting styles are always changing.

An increase in pay for teachers would be nice, she said, "but I'm for the student."

The kids need a good facilities and attention, she said.

Television has impaired the learning of the children, she said, "and the parents are responsible for the program selections in their home. She added that some cartoons on Saturday mornings and movies such as Charlotte's Web are all right.

The children are encouraged to read by use of a rather large library and a reading period, she said. The library holds the books of the Sam Houston Elementary School, which is Clarendon College - Pampa Center.

She said that she likes to read biographies and autobiographies as a hobby.

The main concern of teachers in the elementary years is discipline, she said, and teachers are with the children most of the day to watch their habits.

"Some of the boys were mean as the dickens," she said, but they have been managed.

"The kids like social studies and science," she said, and some have shown outside interest by sharing some magazine articles of related subjects with the class.

The students made posters of the different planets after a visit to the Discovery Center in Amarillo, she said.

The learning situation today has changed for the better, she said, for kids are learning the basics and have the extra help of counselors.

They even have a counselor for mixed up kids, she said, but she knew little of the program's results.

"It's been fun," she said, referring to her teaching career, "and the kids have been a joy."

She and her husband, Howard, a 67-year-old radio buff, have returned from a trip to East Texas, where they plan to set up their retiring residence.

Evans said that she will probably substitute teach to keep in contact with the kids.

They will probably need her, because teachers are needed everywhere, she said.

BERNYCE EVANS, third grade teacher at Horace Mann, says that change is harder for stubborn teachers and especially those who have been around a while, as she has. However, she sees change as necessary.

Airport contract awarded

By DAN LACKEY
Pampa News Staff
The Gray County Commissioners Court today awarded a contract to Lewis Construction Company of Dumas for improvements at Perry Lefors Airport. The company entered a revised low bid of $60,505 after low bidding $97,420 for the contract on April 2.

The improvement project is funded by a grant from the Federal Aviation Administration for $60,000, with 20 percent matching funds by the county.

The county has set aside $20,000 in matching funds for the project.

County Engineer Gene Barber said the proposed improvement project had been scaled down to come within the money available from the FAA and county supplementary funds. The improvements called for the resurfacing of 800 feet of the airport's south runway. The reconstruction of the runway has been reduced to 500 feet to fit the county and federal appropriations.

Barber said new bidding was not necessary because the possibility of reducing the project had been cited to contractors in the specifications for the project.

Work on the airport is scheduled to begin this summer.

County money not designated as matching funds for the FAA grant will go toward engineering fees, lighting, painting and added grating work at the airport, Barber said.

Barber said the airport board is considering an application to the Texas Aeronautics Commission for possible improvements at the McLean Airport.

A Texas Aeronautics Commission inspector visited the McLean Airport this week, according to Commissioner Ted Simmons. Simmons said the inspection revealed the need for the repair of cracks in the McLean runway.

In other business the Court tabled for further discussion the possible advertising for bids for a computer balloting and voter registration system.

The Court has heard a proposal from Computer Election Systems for the installation of computer voting devices to replace the present paper balloting system. The new system is priced at approximately $90,000.

Computer Election Systems is apparently the only company licensed in Texas for the sale of the computer devices, although in recent years as many as four companies were licensed in the state.

The Court also voted a resolution to allow the Comprehensive Employment Training Act program to continue in Gray County in the next fiscal year. The program is administered for county residents living outside the city limits of Pampa by the Texas Panhandle Community Action Corporation. According to Clara Jean McLain of Berger, counselor and co-ordinator for the Gray County program, only one person is currently employed under the program in Gray County.

In other action, the Court approved $2450 for the purchase of a mobile radar unit for the Highway Patrol, approved the transfer of $82,000 in county funds to bank time deposits.

The Court also informally discussed the need for a systematic approach to the problem of providing indigent hospital care to county residents.

Bulletin

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter today declared Texas a major disaster area as a result of the tornadoes and other severe storms that hit the state Tuesday and Wednesday.

Carter's declaration, issued by the White House shortly after the president left for an Easter vacation in Georgia, will make federal funds available for relief and recovery efforts in designated areas of the state.

The federal assistance from the president's Disaster Relief Fund will include aid for disaster victims as well as funds for debris removal and the repair of damaged public facilities.

In addition, low-interest-rate loans will be made available by the Small Business Administration and emergency loan aid will be made available by the Farmers Home Administration.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements estimated the cost of rebuilding at up to $300 million.

Pianoman Ned Pryor

By JOHN PRICE
Pampa News Staff
In a world populated by the insensitive, the apathetic and the indifferent, Ned Pryor is a rare individual.

Practically every night for the past several years, Pryor has gone to the Pampa Nursing Center and played piano for the elderly residents there. His only reward is personal satisfaction.

"He's a fellow who likes people, and he makes people feel good," observed an admiring acquaintance of Pryor's.

"I like to do it for them — that's the main thing," Pryor says. "If they enjoy it, then I don't mind doing it."

Ned Pryor is a big, friendly man with a perpetual smile, and a hearty laugh that he uses to punctuate his conversations. He has been an employee of the Phillips Petroleum Co. here for more than 40 years.

Pryor started entertaining nursing home residents about five years ago, when his mother-in-law lived at Leisure Lodge. When she and her roommate moved to the Pampa Nursing Center, Pryor began playing piano there. His mother-in-law has since died, but Pryor continues to regularly visit the home.

"It kind of got to be a habit," he says. "I hardly ever miss a night."

"Some of them used to call me up when I missed. Now I tell them when I'm going to be gone for a while so they don't expect me."

Pryor is a self-taught musician. He has been an amateur pianist since he was a lad.

"I play by ear," he says. "I don't know one note from another. I just play the older songs that they like, and they get a bang out of it."

He limits his musical sessions to 15 or 20 minutes "so I don't wear them out."

"I wear myself out," he admits with a laugh. "I've got a little arthritis in my hands."

Pryor wishes other people could find the time to follow his example.

"Anything they could do — they don't have to play the piano — just talk or anything," he says. "Those (elderly) people would be tickled to death."

"A lot of people just take them out there and leave them and never come back. They think they'll be taken care of. But they need company, and they need people to see about them."

On a typical evening, Pryor will drive out to the home around 6 p.m. He enters and is greeted warmly, as an old friend. Walking around a large living room area, he shakes a few hands, makes a few jokes and asks everyone how they are doing. Enjoyment is obviously a big factor behind his visits.

"I get more of a kick out of it than anyone, just to see their eyes light up," he confesses. "I like to visit with them. They'll tell you their troubles."

As Pryor sits down at the piano and begins pounding out chords, a transformation occurs in the room. People who had previously been lined up in chairs against the wall, almost lifeless in appearance, begin tapping their toes. A few clap along. Eyes begin to sparkle, and soon every chair in the room is full.

"Sometimes they get up and dance if they have someone to dance with," Pryor says.

Up-tempo, cheery tunes like "Jambalaya" and "How Much is That Doggy in the Window?" end to applause. After a while Pryor's wrists begin to ache, so he stops playing. His audience thanks him profusely and he chats with them for a few minutes before leaving.

"They enjoy the talking as much as anything," Pryor says as he walks out the door toward his car. "If they get anything out of it, then it's worth it. And it's not much effort."

"You know, nowadays they build better churches, better schools, better roads, better everything. But we haven't come up with better preparations for getting old."

Panama unfinished business

If anyone thought the controversy over the Panama Canal giveaway had been put to rest, just wait until the House members get a crack at it. The turnover accords were approved by the Senate during March 1978. Ignoring House members' contention that the treaties required action by the full Congress, the administration moved ahead with only Senate approval.

To provide the money and implement the pacts will require approval of both the House and the Senate. Adding fuel to the attitude of House members is the fact that the cost of giving away the canal was underestimated to begin with and it now appears that the total cost will be tremendous.

House members were riled when they were left out of the original treaty approval. Now they are gaining ammunition daily to scuttle the pacts as cost estimates rise with every consideration.

U.S. News and World Report reveals that while the Senate was debating the pacts, treaty negotiators repeatedly assured lawmakers that any costs would be financed from canal revenues or other sources and not from tax funds.

The secretary of state, Cyrus Vance, said flatly, "The treaties require no new appropriations, nor do they add to the burden of the American taxpayer."

Now a deputy in the State Department concedes that "there will be payments by the United States... for things in the interest of the United States." He now takes the position that the secretary's original promise was intended only to mean that no tax money would go to the Panamanian government in connection with the transfer.

We hasten to ask that if that was what was meant, why was it not made clear to all concerned? If it can be made clear now, why couldn't it have been then?

U.S. Comptroller General Elmer B. Staats, head of the General Accounting Office said in his view the costs will approach a billion dollars if lawmakers buy President Carter's plan to terminate interest charges collected by the Treasury on U.S. investments in the canal. These charges, paid by the canal's present operator, the Panama Canal Company, amount to nearly $20 million per year.

A Senate provision tacked onto the treaties called for continued interest charges. Carter accepted this provision during the treaty debate. He since has changed his mind because he is worried about the effect on canal tolls.

As the inevitable fight brews up again and as House members get their chance to take a hand in the matter, another deluge of mail from the people can be expected.

Before it is all over the president and his administration may rue the day they excluded the House members from the original determination. If their reaction was feared then, there is much more to fear as antipathy is spread along with escalated taxpayer costs.

As all these "new" ramifications reach the public, the reaction from citizens may become overwhelming.

Just giving our canal away was bad enough. Now we find that the extra cost of that giving will be enormous. We expect the Congress and the president will be hearing from the people on this one.

Educational developments

Back in 1965, there was no shortage of jobs in teaching.

That was when the postwar baby boom was echoing through the nation's schools, facilities were strained, some schools were on double shifts and the demand for teachers appeared inexhaustible. To meet it more than 20 percent of students entering college intended to become teachers.

We all know what happened within a few years. The baby boom went bust, expensively constructed but now surplus plant had to be closed and the bloom has gone off teaching as a promising profession. Enrollment of would-be teachers has dwindled by some two-thirds.

The current situation is not all bad, however. Contrary to the popular impression of a teacher glut and a job shortage, a recent report in the Council for Basic Education's "Bulletin" notes that the supply-and-demand situation is actually spotty. Many openings are going unfilled in certain specialized fields. This is particularly the case in mathematics and science. Vocational courses, special education and bilingual education are also reported to offer opportunities.

While a new teacher shortage is discounted, an upturn in teaching opportunities is foreseen with a major contributor being the increasing popularity of the "lifelong learning" concept. Demand for continuing adult education in vocational and leisure fields as well as in traditional academic subjects promises to open up a wide-range of new teaching jobs. These will, however, call upon more than the usual basic education skills.

For the professional educator, keeping up with the rapid changes in education is something of an education in itself.

By OSCAR COOLEY

Let the nation "spend its way to prosperity" has been the economic rule since John Maynard Keynes died in 1946, but there are signs that the Keynesian era is now drawing to a close.

Following Keynes' spend theory, the United States government in almost every recent year has spent more dollars than it collected in taxes. Hence, the national debt has grown and grown. Much of it has found its way into the banks, thereby generating more dollars - to enter circulation and be spent, repeatedly, by all of us.

It is this orgy of spending that has created the inflation which is our present number one economic problem. In February, consumer prices rose at an annual rate of 15 percent. This is the fruit of the tree of spending.

Keynesian era is over

Even the Joint Economic Committee of Congress senses that the inflation is fundamentally due to overproduction of money and underproduction of goods. In its annual report, the committee says that as a result of the monetary and fiscal policies of the last several years, "there has been a decided change in the composition of output away from capital investment toward higher levels of consumption."

(That is, less has been saved, more spent, a la Keynes.) "This has contributed significantly to our sluggish productivity performance, which in turn has exacerbated our underlying rate of inflation." Milton Friedman could not have said it better.

The nation has saved too little and spent too much. In the present we have lived high, but at the expense of the future. The government has taxed the savers and profit-makers - profits are a major source of savings - unmercifully.

Meanwhile, it has encouraged everybody to spend freely and has itself set the example by spending not only all it had but billions more which it conjured up. This is the cause of the inflation.

Inflation is not due to drought in the breadbasket states, not due to frost in Florida or Brazil, not due to the OPEC monopoly, not due to businessmen's greed for profits. It is due to profligate spending of overproduced money by the U.S. Treasury. This truth cannot be repeated too often.

The cure for inflation will be an increase in the production of goods and services in relation to the production of dollars to pay for them. The private firm or individual can do nothing to reduce the production of money, but each of us can do our bit to increase the production of goods. Many workers, farmers and entrepreneurs have it within their power to increase their productivity.

Before a firm can greatly increase its production of goods, it must create capital, that is, build more plants and acquire more equipment. This necessitates more investment, which in turn comes from savings.

Recently a hue and cry of pain and protest has gone up because of the reportedly large profit of the nation's corporations. Corporate profits in 1978 totaled 118.7 billion, up 15.8 percent from 1977. In the fourth quarter, profits rose at an even faster rate.

This is good news, not bad. Many of these profit dollars are being saved and reinvested, creating the additional capital equipment that industry must have in order to increase the production of goods. Profits represent fewer dollars, more dollars saved and invested. The result is more goods selling at lower prices.

George Meany is jealous of the profit-makers. He complains that wage raises are restricted by Carter's wage-price guideline, but profits are not subject to guidelines. Apparently he thinks profits should go up only as fast as wages. Would he, during a recession, have wages fall as far and as fast as profits, which for many firms often become losses? He neglects the fact that there is far more risk involved in profit-making than in wage-earning. In fact, profit is the reward for taking risk, which is very great during a time like the present.

The substantial profits being made by the average corporation are a blessing to wage-earners as well as to stockholders. By stimulating capital growth, they result in more employment and at higher wages.

When the Joint Economic Committee says "the U.S. economy is putting too few of its resources into the expansion of its capital stock," one is justified in concluding that Keynes is through and that there is at least hope we shall get the better of the inflation.

How to become a psychic

by paul harvey

Foretelling the future has become a highly profitable profession. No longer is the "fortune teller" confined to a dollar-a-throw sideshow on the carnival midway.

Today, a large percentage of the publications for sale in the supermarket include one or more articles by persons professing to foretell the future.

You, too, can become a supermarket psychic.

You have heard that some psychic or astrologer foretold the assassination of president Kennedy, the resignation of president Nixon, the earthquake in Guatemala. If so, how did they do it and can you and I do it, too?

The game they play is a form of psychic roulette.

In their day-in-and-day-out columns they make enough predictions so that a few are bound to come true. They then re-remind you only of those that do.

Editor Ralph Blodgett of These Times collected all of the predictions of our nation's 30 leading psychics and astrologers for the year 1978. Then he carefully compared what they predicted with what happened.

One or more of those supermarket psychics predicted:

A new miracle drug that would double the human life span. (That headline sold a lot of tabloid newspapers a year ago last January.)

The ocean liner Queen Elizabeth II would be hijacked.

There would be nuclear war in Egypt. Fire would ravage the White House.

A vaccine for the common cold. Terrorists would destroy the Statue of Liberty.

The stock market would collapse and unemployment soar to 15 percent. Two who thought they knew predicted Queen Elizabeth would resign and five of them said "Charlie's Angels" TV show would be cancelled.

One predicted a dramatic comeback for miniskirts.

Four astrologers predicted last Feb. 24 would be "doomsday" for the world.

Two psychics said Patty Hearst would be kidnapped again.

Predictions included: Ted Kennedy will resign. Egypt's Sadat would resign. President Carter would resign, due to a serious accident. And Billy Carter, hosting his own TV show, would capture top ratings.

Jeanne Dixon, Sybil Leek, Uri Geller, John Manolesco, Robert Ferguson, Anthony Norvell - all were about equally inaccurate.

Out of 250 specific published predictions for 1978 only six came to pass. That's less than 3 percent accuracy. They were 97 percent dead wrong!

I'm betting you and I can do better than that. What do you say, let's try.

You and I are going to predict the following events will take place sometime this year.

Jacqueline Kennedy will remarry. Alabama's former Gov. George Wallace will remarry. Marie Osmond will announce her engagement. An American celebrity will be kidnapped. Gasoline will go to a dollar-plus per gallon. There will be an earthquake of significance in Latin America. Idi Amin will be replaced in Uganda. There will be a crippling strike in the trucking industry. And Ted Kennedy will declare for the Presidency. And Danny White will be traded to Chicago's Bears.

If three of those 10 things come to pass, then our guess is as good as anybody's.

Before Ralph Blodgett began his research he believed that psychics had to be led either by God or by the devil. Since his research he has concluded that they are led by no one at all.

IN WASHINGTON

Let poll reader beware

martha angle and robert walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) - The only thing in life as certain as death and taxes is the existence, somewhere or other, of a poll purporting to measure public opinion about both.

No aspect of modern living, no corner of the American psyche is safe these days from the probing curiosity of the professional pulse-takers.

The pollsters are everywhere, and they're ready and able to prove anything you'd like them to. As the old aphorism goes, figures don't lie but liars sure can figure.

Is president Carter looking for public support for the administration's forthcoming Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty with the Soviets? Then he shall find it - in polls by CBS and the New York Times (63 percent in favor) and by NBC and Associated Press (81 percent support).

Do opponents of a SALT II treaty question such responses? Well, of course they do - and why not, when a survey by George Fine Research, Inc. shows only 20 percent of the public in favor of such a pact?

Should Congress adopt tougher gun control laws? One would think so, judging from Gallup and National Opinion Research Center polls which have shown, for nearly two decades, that upwards of two-thirds of the public favors such a move.

But then again, why be hasty? A new Decision Making Information survey shows an identical two-thirds majority opposed to additional gun controls.

The examples could go on indefinitely. For every poll producing a majority opinion in favor of something, another can be found to yield exactly the opposite result.

Which might be harmless enough fun, not to mention lucrative employment for pollsters, were it not for the tendency of elected public officials and policy makers to put so much faith in survey data.

Politicians, who are past masters of the art of manipulating words to produce a desired response from their audiences, should be the first to recognize myriad ways in which poll questions can be rigged to yield a particular response. Instead, they swallow the results without so much as a grain of salt and happily regurgitate those which buttress their own biases.

Opinion research, notwithstanding the claims of its practitioners, is far from an exact science. While it is indeed possible to select a statistically sound sample that is representative of the population as a whole, it takes more than a fair sample to produce a good poll.

As responsible pollsters will readily acknowledge, the wording of survey questions and the order in which they are presented can drastically alter the responses elicited.

The format of a poll - personal interviews versus telephone queries - can likewise influence the outcome, since complex multiple-choice questions cannot effectively be asked by phone.

A carefully constructed poll conducted for a client such as a newspaper which has no particular axe to grind can be a useful, if limited, guide to public thinking on a particular issue, especially if the same question is asked over a period of years.

So-called "advocacy" polling, undertaken by professional survey firms but using questions dictated in whole or in part by their special interest clients, is far less likely to produce an unbiased result. If you know who commissioned a poll of this sort, you can almost always predict what it will show - without even looking at the data.

Opinion polls make delightful reading for politicians, journalists, businessmen and indeed the general public. But let the reader beware. Polls, like computers, suffer extensively from the "GIGO" syndrome - Garbage In, Garbage Out.

"Notice how, all of a sudden, the media has jumped on the 'dangers of radiation bandwagon?'"

Hospital Board remains

Although Gray County has already closed a contract with Hospital Corporation of America for the lease-purchase of Highland and McLean hospitals, the county hospital board of managers will remain intact as a government body pending legal approval of the transfer of the hospitals by the state Attorney General.

The board will no longer meet on a monthly basis, however, and adjourned Wednesday after approving a resolution favoring the lease-purchase contract.

Attorney Bill Waters, who represented the county in the contract negotiations, said the Attorney General's ruling would probably not be available for another six to eight weeks.

Waters said the county would need to maintain a hospital board even after a favorable opinion from the Attorney General. The county could need the services of a board through the closing of the present facility at Highland General, he said.

The hospital board is presently comprised of Dr. M.C. Overton, Chairman, Royce Gee, Dr. E.C. Hoffer, Warren Chisum, John Haynes, and Jerry Davis.

Regarding the lease-purchase resolution, Waters told the board of managers "your recommendation is not absolutely legally necessary but I think it important that you second it."

Although the corporation has purchased most of the hospitals' current assets and has full management control of the two medical facilities, the county is still responsible for indigent care. Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy told the board that the Commissioners Court would take action soon on budgeting funds for indigent care.

Kennedy also reported that two major changes were made in the hospital contract shortly before the signing of the lease-purchase agreement on April 2.

Kennedy said the corporation had agreed to assume all liability for the maintenance of the Highland General facilities. In addition, he said, the county will not have to assume responsibility for accounts receivable which are over - due one year after the closing of the agreement.

The original contract had called for the county to assume responsibility for the uncollected accounts after one year.

Drown victim surfaces

Another victim of a February 26 boating accident was removed from Lake Meredith Wednesday morning, leaving one person to be found.

The body of Lyle Bruntz, 26, was the third recovered from the lake since the accident that may have taken four Dumas residents' lives, according to a lake public information official.

The National Park Service Land Patrol spotted the body afloat in the Turkey Creek area at 8:05 a.m., said the official.

Bruntz's body was taken to Minton Mortuary after being pronounced dead.

The cause of the accident has not been assessed because no one witnessed the incident, said the official.

The group was seen driving in a new boat at a high rate of speed before the accident, the official said.

The body of Sue Anne Kuzara, 24, was recovered the day of the unexplained tragedy.

N.W. Hudson, 55, was found April 7. Del Bruntz, 21, the wife of Lyle, is still missing after the accident that occurred 45 days ago.

Stanton to speak here tonight

PAT STANTON

Pat Stanton will continue her work in the ministry as she speaks to the Women's Aglow Fellowship of Pampa and other interested area ladies at the Senior Citizens Center at 7:30 tonight.

When she was seven years old, Stanton says that her low blood sugar condition received a tremendous healing on Sept. 9, 1970, after an old man's prayer at the Statler Hilton Hotel in Dallas.

The anointing and baptism of the Holy Spirit also resulted from the prayer, she said, and total healing later became a part of her faith.

"After receiving so much from the Lord," she said, "I had a new desire to share with others about God's healing love."

Since then, she has been sharing with churches and ladies groups the prayer of faith and has gone outside her household duties to begin the Rays of Hope offices in 1975.

The offices are a center for counseling, intercessory prayer and carrying on other general work.

Her ministry has been extended into the television media since July of 1977 when a show started airing on CBN in Dallas.

The face of her organization has been projected from television screens in Texas, Minnesota and Iowa and more recently is being reflected from a CBN Satellite in Portsmouth, Va. to almost all stations in the nation.

Canadian tour set for July 7

CANADIAN — A combined bus, train, and ship excursion, originating in Canadian and extending through Canada, is scheduled to begin on July 7, according to Arleigh Hoobler, acting as travel agent for the venture.

The tour, says Hoobler, combines the best of escorted motorcoach travel with the excitement of a train excursion on the famous Polar Bear Express Train in the North Lake Country of Canada where no highways run.

The two week tour will include eight days in Canada, with overnight stops along the way in Joplin, Mo., Mount Vernon, Ill., Louisville, Ky., and Akron, Ohio. The first Canadian stop will be at the legendary Niagara Falls in Ontario.

The highlight of the trip, says Hoobler, is the Polar Bear Express Ride into Moosonee, Ontario. There is no highway into Moosonee, the place where the Arctic Tidewater begins.

Travelers can enjoy the virgin forest and river banks bordered by rugged forest lands.

Moosonee has been described as a genuine North Indian fur trader pioneer village. The tour will also include a cruise on James and Hudson bays.

Travelers will arrive home on July 23.

Interested persons may receive price information and a prospectus of the tour from Arleigh Hoobler, Box 4, Canadian, Texas 79014; Phone: 806-323-6514.

On the lighter side of the news

Sweet Smellin' Stogie
CINCINNATI (AP) — To anyone who was ever trapped in a smoke-shrouded elevator with a cigar smoker, the nation's leading cigar manufacturer says — relax. The age of the sweet smellin' stogie is upon us.

The Consolidated Cigar Co. unveiled the "aroma-less" cigar Wednesday and expects to market it nationwide within the year. It's available now only in Ohio.

Cigar sales have plummeted in recent years, from 8 billion in 1973 to 4 1/2 billion last year, a company official said. The industry conducted a survey to find out why.

"People said it's the aroma," said Consolidated President Alexander Brainard. "Women don't like it on the drapes, and men are becoming more responsive" to non-smokers' complaints.

Brainard said the non-smelly cigar, called "Flite," has a built-in filter that "captures chemicals that impart aroma."

The cigar still produces a perfumed scent, but not the objectional "cigar smell."

"I don't expect a typical cigar smoker to find it (the new cigar) as enjoyable as his present cigar," he said, "because it's milder in taste."

Oil profits curb threat lacks teeth

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is backing away from President Carter's threat of federal curbs on the use of new oil profits, and officials concede they have no clear idea how such restrictions would even be fashioned.

No legislative proposals or regulatory actions are in the works, say officials at the White House and the Energy and Treasury departments. Some concede it would be difficult to come up with workable ideas.

Carter, in a nationally televised speech last week, pledged to "demand that they (the oil companies) use their new income to develop energy for America, and not to buy such things as department stores and hotels, as some have done in the past."

But that line, a White House official, requesting anonymity, said, was inserted without fully exploring how Carter could enforce investment curbs.

Then, at Tuesday's news conference, the president added specifics and timber lands to the list of oil company investments of which he disapproves.

Carter said oil companies will net $6 billion over the next three years from his decision to lift oil price controls.

Weather

Texas weather

By The Associated Press

Another round of thunderstorm activity is on the menu for Texas later today, according to the National Weather Service.

The weather men say partly cloudy weather is expected today with widely scattered showers in the Panhandle and possible thundershowers in the extreme northeast.

A sandstorm was forecast for the South Plains of West Texas. Skies were mostly fair this morning. Scattered light rain showers lingered during the night in the Panhandle. Visibilities were restricted to 3 to 5 miles by fog and occasional light drizzle at some localities along the coast.

Pre-dawn temperatures ranged from the mid-30s in the Panhandle to the lower 70s along the coast and in the lower Rio Grande Valley.

National weather

Winter weather lingered over the central and northern plains today, while to the south, tornadoes and thundershowers that produced death, injuries and property damage earlier in the week swirled through in several states.

A winter storm warning was in effect today in southeastern Montana. Travelers advisories were posted for most of the Dakotas, eastern Wyoming, northeastern Colorado, northwestern Kansas and the higher mountain passes of far west Texas. Thundershowers spread from central Mississippi, across western Kentucky to northern Lake Michigan.

Rain or snow fell across portions of Nebraska, Iowa and a large section of the Dakotas. A few widely scattered snow showers dampened the western mountains in Utah and western Montana and along the Oregon coast.

Tornadoes have raked the lower and middle Mississippi Valley since Tuesday. Tornadoes were reported in northeastern Texas, Oklahoma, Alabama, Arkansas and Missouri.

RAIN is expected in the forecast period Thursday until Friday morning for most of the East. Rain is also forecast for Minnesota and the eastern Dakotas. Cold weather is forecast for the northern Plains but most of the nation will be mild.

City in Nicaragua under siege

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Anastasio Somoza's national guard laid siege to the northern city of Esteli and used planes and a tank to pound more than 400 leftist guerrillas controlling the city for nearly a week.

Refugees who fled Wednesday despite heavy firing said there were many casualties, but the Red Cross was pinned down in its compound and unable to get to the wounded.

Those who got away said the national guard, Somoza's military and police force, was using a Sherman tank, armored cars and planes against the rebels, who overran Esteli on Saturday.

Red Cross sources estimated that 5,000 of Esteli's 35,000 people had escaped from the city.

It was the second time that Esteli, 90 miles north of Managua, the capital, had become a battleground in the past seven months. There was heavy fighting there last September during an abortive uprising against Somoza in which an estimated 1,500 persons died.

"Shooting between the guerrillas and the national guard ... was heavy and continuous," said Miguel Schibel, the national Red Cross chief, who returned Wednesday night after taking medical supplies to Esteli.

He said the firing prevented the three-car convoy from getting to the San Juan de Dios Hospital, where about 400 persons reportedly have taken refuge.

Firing squads claim five in Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's firing squads executed five more of the shah's men in the provinces today, raising the confirmed total to 106 in two months of Islamic power.

The state radio said a new revolutionary court in the northwestern city of Zanjan found army officer Abbas Kahali, 53, guilty at 4:28 a.m. of being "rotten to the core" and had him executed immediately.

In the southwestern oil center of Ahwaz, four others were executed at 4:25 a.m. on the same charge, the radio said. They were the former mayor of the city of Boostan, Shaey Mazrae; Mazrae's brother, Hamid; Ali Reza Shojai, not further identified; and Hossein Rahimi, a military officer involved in energy work.

Eleven others were executed in Tehran Wednesday, the busiest day for the firing squads since Khomeini's forces swept to power Feb. 12 after a year-long revolution that drove Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi from Iran.

Three former policemen also went on trial Wednesday on charges of torture and murder. The trial began in Tehran's Qasr Prison but was shifted to a secret site because of too many spectators and witnesses, the state radio said.

The broadcast said 17 persons also were arrested and held for questioning at Qasr Prison for association with the shah's regime. They were said to include an army general, a former military school classmate of the shah and several army and police colonels.

Looting rampant as Amin retreats

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — Men, women and children ransacked house after house in Kampala today, reportedly joined in the looting by victorious Tanzanian troops.

Cheering thousands rallied at the Parliament building to celebrate the ouster of President Idi Amin from the city.

Amin, believed to have fled ahead of the Tanzanians and Ugandan rebels who took his capital Tuesday night, continued broadcasting from a radio transmitter in eastern Uganda, claiming, "We have got our soldiers controlling the country."

But residents of towns along the eastern escape route used by Amin's soldiers said the troops were looting, harassing residents at gunpoint and stealing cars to help their flight from the Tanzanians.

Bad weather kept members of the newly announced provisional government of anti-Amin exiles from flying to Kampala from the Tanzanian capital of Dar es Salaam. Officials said they now plan to arrive Friday.

Residents said no one was trying to stop the pillagers, and Tanzanians reportedly joined the looting at times.

"They are taking everything," everything," said a foreigner after watching looters strike neighboring houses in central Kampala. "Tables, chairs, desks, everything."

An estimated 10,000 joyous Ugandans gathered in a square before Parliament for the five-hour rally, some lugging goods they had just looted from nearby government offices.

The Uganda National Liberation Front, a coalition of Ugandan exile groups in Tanzania, announced creation of the new government after Kampala fell to the invasion force that fought its way up through southwest Uganda.

Income tax advocates gain ground

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Advocates of a constitutional amendment prohibiting the Legislature from ever passing a personal or corporation income tax lost ground in the House Wednesday.

They could muster only 86 votes for the proposal (HJR102), compared with 99 on Tuesday and the 100 needed to send the constitutional change to the Senate.

The measure remains alive, however, for another vote. Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, chief opponent of the constitutional change, won an 82-51 vote to add a provision allowing an income tax if proceeds were used entirely to replace property taxes.

Bryant also warned the House that if it approved the proposal, the Senate probably would, too, despite Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby's declared opposition.

"Governor Hobby usually craters when he talks tough about these things, and he'll probably crater again," Bryant asserted.

Bryant called the whole idea of forever banning an income tax a "ridiculous, embarrassing joke" and assailed "the absolute political cowardice on the part of many members of the House" who had voted for the measure.

"This childishness of trying to show everybody you are the biggest tax hater of all is absurd," said Bryant, adding that the day might come when Texas needs an income tax as a last resort to finance state government.

Rep. Al Brown, D-San Antonio, the sponsor, said Bryant and others had engaged in "as good a chub as I've seen down here in 32 years" and objected to Bryant's assertion that supporters were "childish."

"Chub" is legislative slang for delaying tactics and other similarly indirect stratagems to defeat legislation.

In Wednesday's long work sessions, senators passed and sent to the House bills that would:

—Allow state-chartered savings and loan associations to offer inducements, such as S&H Green Stamps, for opening or adding to savings accounts.

—Empower county governments to control dogs and other animals on beaches.

—Raise the maximum fine for limiting access to a beach from $200 to $1,000.

—Make it as serious an offense to drive while intoxicated or speed on a beach as on a highway.

Agent tells of shooting during Cuevas testimony

HOUSTON (AP) — An undercover agent on the scene during the final moments of an attempted escape from Huntsville state prison by three inmates said he shot one of them in the head twice from close range to protect a wounded hostage as well as himself.

Winston Padgett, an undercover agent for the Department of Public Safety who testified Wednesday in the retrial of Ignacio Cuevas, described the Aug. 3, 1974, scene for the jury and told why he shot Rudolf Dominguez.

"He was a threat to me. He was a threat to Father (Joseph O'Brien)," said Padgett.

Padgett said police managed to overturn the makeshift shield protecting armed convicts Dominguez, Cuevas, Fred Carrasco and their hostages, and first saw O'Brien, a seriously wounded hostage.

"I shouted a warning to the other officers nearby," Padgett said. "He (Dominguez) started pulling his right hand out from under Father O'Brien and I shot him in the head."

"Dominguez was lying on his back partially under O'Brien," the officer continued. "He moved again, and I shot him again in the head." Carrasco and two women hostages, Julia Standley and Elizabeth Beseda, also were slain during the escape attempt.

Cuevas survived, and was convicted of murder in connection with Mrs. Standley's death in a 1975 trial. He was sentenced to death.

The conviction was overturned by the state Appeals Court because of an error in the jury selection process and a new trial ordered.

Also testifying Wednesday was Willard N. Stewart of the state Department of Corrections. He told the jury about how he freed eight hostages outside the shield who were handcuffed to ropes attached to it.

Stewart said he cut the ropes and led them to a safer area.

"I was as much afraid of being shot by the officers from the mess hall as I was by the armed convicts inside the shield," he said.

Around Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States' public debt has hit a record $801,192,000,000.

Treasury Department officials said Wednesday it is the first time in the nation's history that the debt has surpassed $800 billion. The milestone was reached and passed Monday, but it was not reported until Wednesday because of the routine delay in compiling daily Treasury transactions, officials said. The debt, which has doubled in the last seven years, was at its lowest in 1835 — $37,500. Last week, Congress gave the Treasury permission to continue borrowing through Sept. 30, up to a temporary debt limit of $830 billion.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Metric Board has announced it will hold public hearings May 23 on whether converting gasoline pumps to metric measurement would be a money-saving alternative to changes in pump calculating mechanisms. Such changes will be necessary when the price of gasoline reaches $1 a gallon.

The board, whose job is to coordinate the nation's voluntary changeover to metric measurements, cannot require a change, but it can encourage and assist such conversions. Board members say it will cost about $200 to convert a pump to calculate prices of more than $1 a gallon, while the change to measuring in metric could be made for $50.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Justice Department official says the government is looking into news accounts and State Department cables about a reported South African government effort in 1974 to funnel $11.5 million through a Swiss bank account to purchase The Washington Star.

The Justice Department official, who declined to be identified, said Wednesday there probably would be a decision shortly on whether to launch a formal investigation.

Your money's worth

by sylvia porter

If you are typical of most car drivers, you probably just assume that the most important product you put into the engine of your car is the gasoline. Not true.

The oil you use gets first place, for oil performs at least eight vital functions in the engine, and to get the maximum life out of your car it is imperative that you choose the right oil.

To begin with, bury the outmoded idea that you have to change oil every 2,000 miles (I've just saved a chunk of money writing this one sentence.) This may have been valid a long time ago, but if like me you have been following this practice right up to today, you're just pouring good money and a scarce resource down the sewer.

Today, most manufacturers suggest changing oil every 7,500 miles or so — and forecasts S. Garry Miller, product manager for transportation products of Sun Petroleum Products Co., the recommended oil-drain interval is slated to reach 15,000 miles for 1982 model cars and possibly 25,000 miles for the 1986 models.

But why change oil at all? Because it wears out, breaks down, becomes contaminated, and can no longer perform its eight or more functions.

The first job of motor oil is to lubricate — meaning the oil must form a thin layer on all moving surfaces and thus prevent any unprotected contact between the metals that would cause wear and scoring. Closely related to this is the reduction of friction between the moving parts which would result in a decrease in efficiency.

Oil also acts as a cooling agent. The water or water-anti-freeze mix in the radiator does only about 60 percent of the cooling job, and that in the upper part of the engine only. The rest of the job must be done by the oil.

Oil protects the engine from rust and corrosion, too, by preventing by-products of gasoline combustion from attaching themselves to the cylinders and other parts. It seals the cylinders so that there is adequate pressure for the air-fuel mixture to ignite. Oil prevents a bubbly mixture of air and water which will not carry away heat. Finally, it helps the engine to start quickly.

How, then, do you select the proper oil for your car?

(1) Buy a high-quality oil and stick with it, for as in any other product, quality pays off. Be sure the can of oil you buy carries two designations: a performance classification as determined by the American Petroleum Institute (API) and a viscosity or thickness rating set by the Society of Automotive Engineers (SAE).

The API classifications fall into two groups. The "S" type, which is service station oil — hence the "S" — generally meant for gasoline engines and the "C" type, or commercial, for diesel engines.

(2) Each group is subdivided, based on the oil's performance, and is identified alphabetically, the farther along in the alphabet the second letter is the higher the quality of the oil. The newest classification is SE, which was established a few years ago to meet the warranty requirements of the auto makers. This group provides the maximum protection against oxidation, high-temperature engine deposits, rust and corrosion.

(3) The viscosity ratings of the SAE are identified by numbers. The higher the number, the "thicker" the oil. Winter grades of engine oils are designated by the letter "W" following the number. Summer grades do not carry a letter following the viscosity number.

Thus SAE 5W, 10W, 15W and 20W oils are recommended for use in colder climates where a "thin" oil is needed for an easier start. In the Southwest or in hot midsummer in some Northern states, SAE40 would be required to maintain protective lubrication.

(4) Beware of using a too-thin oil in high temperatures: increased engine wear, excessive oil consumption and low oil pressure can result. Similarly, using too thick an oil in cold weather can result in starting problems and undue engine wear.

(5) Many of today's oils are multigrade. For instance, a designation such as 10W-40 means that the oil can be used in both cold and warm weather — as a winter and summer oil in one.

(6) So-called synthetic oils have several advantages in severe operating conditions such as extremely high or extremely low temperatures. They have better thermal stability, reduce engine deposits and improve oil consumption.

capitol comments

Recently about 65 Legislators were invited by the South Texas and Valley chamber of commerce to visit the coastal and valley area.

We saw many contrasts. We visited some of the most depressed sections in the state, where Mexican Americans are living in near primitive conditions, and we visited McAllen in Hidalgo County, where the agricultural income is over $400 million, the highest agricultural income of any county in the state. By way of comparison, the entire agricultural income of the 10 counties in Legislative district 66 is $250 million.

I had opportunity to visit with quite a few farmers about labor problems and proposed labor legislation coming before the House.

We conferred with representatives of a sugar company about their plans to build a $15 million dollar gasohol plant, using only the by-products of the sugar mill. Company spokesman estimated that the plant could produce gasohol for as little as 7 cents a gallon.

Another interesting visit was to Pan American University in Edinburg, where I saw Wylie McIntire, Jr., of Pampa, who is a student there. Pan American is one of our newest state universities and the Edinburg and Brownsville campuses have a total enrollment of 9,061, with a high percentage of Mexican-Americans. Most of these students walk into good jobs after graduation and remain in the area.

This was an interesting, educational and enjoyable trip for me, since it gave me first hand information about conditions in the valley. To my knowledge, the West Texas area has never sponsored such an event for members of the Legislature.

There are a number of urban and rural Legislators representing other parts of the state who have no understanding of the problems of West Texas. They need to be made aware of the great cultural and economic contributions our area makes to the great State of Texas.

During the interim I'd like nothing better than to see our area host a tour of the state colleges and universities and representative industries in West Texas. A fitting climax to the tour would be a visit to Palo Duro Canyon to see the musical drama, "Texas!"

If you think this idea has any merit, I'd like to hear from you.

Tornado may be fifth worst expert says

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — A tornado specialist at the University of Kansas says the twister which hit Wichita Falls this week is the fifth worst on record in terms of damage.

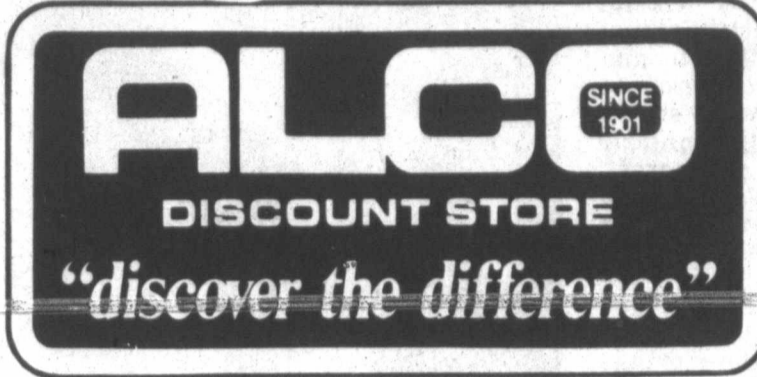

"From what I've heard so far, this ranks behind the tornadoes that hit Topeka in 1966, Lubbock in 1970, Omaha in 1975 and Xenia, Ohio, in 1975," said Joe R. Eagleman, a professor of meteorology.

"It's only the fifth tornado to cause more than $100 million in damage in history," Eagleman said Wednesday night, in an interview with the Kansas City Times.

He said he and his staff had expected tornadic activity in the Wichita Falls area two days before it struck.

Larry Wilson, a meteorologist with the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, said Wichita Falls residents had ample warning.

"We issued the tornado warning for Wichita Falls at 1:55 p.m., four hours before the tornado hit," Wilson said.

Food stamp program may be cut this summer

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Unless Congress provides more money in the next two months, food stamp benefits for about 17.8 million people — approximately 5.6 million families — will be cut by one-third this summer, according to a senior Agriculture Department official.

When Congress overhauled the program in 1977, it estiimated that food prices would rise less than 4 percent a year. But groceries have gone up more than that, meaning food stamp benefits also have exceeded estimates.

The problem involves a ceiling — called a "cap" by politicians — that Congress put on the program based on the estimates at that time — $6.16 billion for this budget year and $6.19 billion for fiscal 1980. The Carter administration initially thought the cap would be reached in August 1980 and asked Congress to raise it or remove it entirely by then.

Assistant Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman told the Senate Special Committee on Aging that the lid may be reached in a few months.

Since the estimates for the cap were made, food prices have increased more than 26 percent and are still rising. Also, more than 1.8 million low-income people who had not sought the aid have requested it since Jan. 1. New rules under the 1977 act, designed to attract them, took effect then.

If the ceiling is still in effect July 1, she said Wednesday, "I am going to have to cut benefits to all recipients by one-third or issue no stamps at all in September," the last month of the fiscal year.

Robert Greenstein, acting head of the Food and Nutrition

Service, which oversees food stamps, said that the rolls are still growing, especially in rural areas, although 7 percent of the able-bodied 1978 recipients under age 65 have been cut.

No action has been taken on the bills to lift the cap. In drafting proposed 1980 spending targets, both congressional budget committees have assumed it will be passed.

"We have a much more serious problem than what you are talking about here," she told the committee. "This hearing is out of synchronization."

The chairman, Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., called the hearing to discuss the impact of the 1977 reforms on the elderly poor, saying many are having their benefits cut even though their food and medical expenses are rising.

Experts from the Congressional Budget Office and Ms.

Foreman's staff presented estimates showing that up to 2.3 percent of the elderly households were cut from the rolls and that 13.6 percent to 29.1 percent lost more than $5 a month in benefits.

Those dropped had incomes over the poverty line, even though they still were low, Greenstein said.

The same charts were used and discussed at length in 1976 and 1977 during committee and floor debate.

The losses — below average for the caseload as a whole — stem from detailed provisions in the law designed to limit the grocery-buying aid to families at or below U.S. poverty lines.

Medical bills, for example, no longer can be deducted in figuring the net income on which benefits are based. A series of itemized shelter-cost exemptions have been replaced by standard deductions for all families.

Ms. Foreman reminded the panel that the standard deductions, given to all families regardless of expenses, are larger than the average deductions the elderly poor were taking under the old rules. Only 3.5 percent of the elderly or disabled recipients have medical expenses above the standard deduction of $65 a month, Greenstein said.

"Overall, the data we have available shows that the new law generally benefits the elderly" by making stamps more available to more of them, Ms. Foreman said. She opposed a host of bills that would either bring back more deductions or make special exceptions for people over age 60.

"We can't afford to deal with averages," Chiles replied. "Those who are being hurt are those with chronic illnesses."

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new Agriculture Department program to help build additional grain storage facilities, mainly in the Northeast, should help farmers have adequate feed supplies when transportation systems are unable to keep up with demand.

Ray Fitzgerald, administrator of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said Wednesday operators who build or expand storage facilities in qualified areas will be guaranteed that most of the additional capacity will be used for corn and other feed grains.

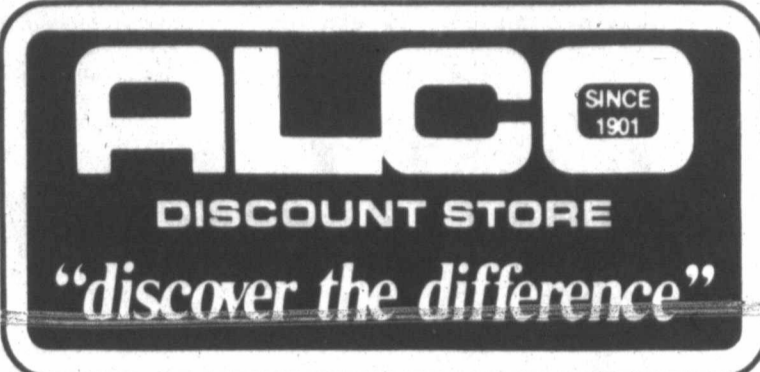

"Periodically, transportation problems will cause farmers in storage-short areas to run out of feed for their livestock and poultry," he said. "This happens most frequently in the Northeast in winter, but parts of the South and West have similar situations."

Complaints have been received by the agency that because of inadequate reserves of stored grain, some price gouging has occurred when supplies run low. The program also is intended to remedy that by making more grain available.

Some of the most critical problems are in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts and Connecticut, officials said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $4.3 million pilot project to help curb water pollution on farms will be operated in selected counties in 20 states and Puerto Rico, says Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland.

The project will be carried out as part of the department's $190 million Agricultural Conservation Program (ACP), officials said. It is intended as part of a broader goal of improving the nation's water quality.

NBC has restocked schedule

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC, that giant supermarket of TV shows, has restocked its schedule yet again. This week's specials: a revamped "Supertrain" and a pair of debut series called "Whodunnit?" and "Highcliffe Manor."

Following a tradition NBC established in its several miniseries this year, most of the new shows in the spring season were unavailable for early preview. But "Highcliffe Manor" was. It was a fortunate circumstance.

This is a Gothic sitcom about a mansion full of looney scientists. Its aim is absurdity, its humor off-the-wall. The loose structure of the story goes something like this:

One Berkeley Blackie, founder of an island hideaway think-tank, has passed on from this world, leaving his foundation in the hands of his cute and naive widow, Shelley Fabares. This foils the plans of the resident scientists, who'd wanted control of the foundation so they could implement their plan to clone the world's leaders.

It's a tongue-in-cheek spoof, a parody of bad guys and sweet widows and sitcoms themselves. It doesn't try to present even a thread of plausibility, which allows for fuller enjoyment of the crazy humor. And these folks are nuts.

Jim Verden makes presence known

LUBBOCK - Like an unwanted mother-in-law, Jim Verden arrived early.

The unexpected became commonplace in the Texas Tech football program last year, and fensive tackle Verden is characteristic of the positive situations which resulted in a successful season.

The 6-3, 240 pound sophomore from Wheeler had the physical tools to become an excellent defensive lineman, but the consensus opinion was that it would be at least a year before he blossomed and realized his full potential. But Verden became one of the top defensive linemen on the team; however, his past gave some indication of that occurrence.

He competed in football, basketball, and track at Wheeler High School, winning the state Class B Championship in the shot put and discus the three the discuss 183-5 feet to break the Class B record by more than 20 feet and put the shot 54-4 1/2 to win the state meet by almost 2 feet. Verden also played in the Texas High school Coaches All-Star Basketball Game.

Last season, he missed part of spring training, but returned for the spring game, and played a large part in the White team pulling of a 16-0 win. His importance to the team escalated as the season progressed.

According to Tech coaches, Verden has good size, quickness, and strength. But Verden states, "It was my size that determined my playing football in college. I compete in track and field now and then, but I don't have the size for basketball."

Attending Tech was almost natural for Jim.

"I lived next door to Don Reeves, who played for Tech, and my dad wanted me to come here," says Verden. "Of all the schools that recruited me, this was really the only place I considered attending."

Verden played in a limited role for the varsity as a freshman, and feels he developed most during that year.

"I think I developed most as a player during my freshman year," says Verden. "I completed the things that were needed to play and grew as far as strength, fundamentals, and lateral quickness, which I feel is my major asset."

He is most comfortable at defensive tackle, but was tried at noseguard last fall.

During his first season as a Red Raider, Verden had to make a big adjustment to college ball.

"There are a lot more quality athletes here than in Class B," says Verden. "College was a big step - I was used to pushing my way around, but had to learn technique here, which I didn't need in high school."

This will be Jim's second spring training, and like most players, he thinks only of surviving it.

"Spring training is something we must go through to get ready for the season," says Verden. "I didn't come into this spring in great shape because I didn't do a lot of off season work; so I'll work on getting in shape, becoming a better player and learning fundamentals."

Verden sees a definite opportunity for Tech to reach the Cotton Bowl this year.

"If we can stay healthy and get some breaks, we can go to the Cotton Bowl," says Verden.

"We've got the material, but must stick together as a team. Personally, I just want to help the team out. Whatever comes after that, is fine."

"If we do go all the way, Coach Dockery will be a major reason. He's a good coach who doesn't mind getting in and workin' with the players. He'll take you off to the side and correct you, whereas some coaches merely oversee practice."

Verden has half his college career ahead of pro football dance in his head.

"I have thought about pro ball," says Verden. "But I'm not worrying about it."

Whether he does or not, one thing is certain - Jim Verden has arrived.

Harvesters grab doubleheader victory

LIBERAL, Kan. — The Pampa Harvesters grabbed a sweep of Wednesday's doubleheader with Liberal as the Green and Gold won the first game 5-1 and then came back to capture the second contest, 8-7.

In both games, the Harvesters took early leads and were never headed the rest of the way. The two victories give coach Steve Scott's team a record of 14-3.

It was the final non-district action of the year for the Harvesters, who stand 2-0 in District 3-AAAA action. They will resume district action next Tuesday in a game at Palo Duro at 4 p.m.

In the first game, Steve Stout went the distance as he picked up his sixth win against no losses. He gave up only four base hits. The lone run scored by Liberal came in the bottom half of the sixth inning.

While Liberal was having its problems in hitting the ball, Pampa, too, was having trouble in getting on base. The Harvesters only managed three base hits in that first game.

Getting the only extra base hit of the game was Keenan Henderson. He headed the Pampa win with a triple.

Pampa took the lead with four big runs in the third inning as the Harvesters broke a scoreless tie. That score held up until the sixth when the Harvesters tallied one more time.

Pampa was aided in that first win by seven costly errors by the Liberal team. Meanwhile, the Harvesters failed to make any miscues.

The second contest proved to be quite a bit closer as a total of 16 base hits were achieved by the two teams combined.

Picking up the win for the Harvesters was Rick Dougherty. The win gives him a season record of 6-0. His team aided him with 10 base hits in that contest.

The Harvesters wasted little time in getting started as they scored three times in the top half of the first inning. They never trailed though Liberal was able to tie the score in the fourth frame.

Following that three run production in the first inning, the Harvesters upped that lead to 4-0 with a run in the third frame.

But Liberal was not to be denied as it came up with four big runs in the home half of the fourth to tie the score at 4-4.

The Harvesters came roaring back with single runs in the fifth and then added three more in the seventh for what looked to be a comfortable 8-4 advantage.

But Liberal again refused to die as it came up with three runs in the bottom half of the seventh and final inning to draw within one run of sending the game into extra innings.

In that contest, Richard Wuest, Greg Koch and Doug Baird all were able to get two base hits for the Harvesters. Liberal also was able to connect in that second game as Kelly Sumner, Mark Hall and Doug Smith all pounded out doubles for their team. In addition, Larry Mastellar got two home runs for Liberal.

The two wins keeps the Pampa crew on its current win streak as the Harvesters team resumes district play. The Pampa crew has not lost a game since bowing to Canyon in a non-district contest several weeks ago.

Following next Tuesday's District 3-AAAA contest with Palo Duro, the Harvesters will return to Optimist Park to host the defending champion Amarillo High Sandies. The Harvesters do not have any games scheduled this week.

Schmidt powers Phillies

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Sports Writer

National League pitchers are not likely to walk Greg Luzinski intentionally to get to Mike Schmidt much more this season.

The Pittsburgh Pirates tried it twice Wednesday night — and both times the strategy backfired.

The Philadelphia Phillies' captain singled home a run in the first inning. Then Schmidt delivered another run with a sacrifice fly in the fifth.

And to cap his big game, Schmidt — batting with the bases empty in the seventh — drove a Bert Blyleven fast ball over the 371-foot sign in left-centerfield for a tie-breaking homer that gave the Phillies a 5-4 victory.

In other NL games, the Houston Astros trounced the Los Angeles Dodgers 10-3, the Cincinnati Reds whipped the Atlanta Braves 9-5, the San Diego Padres downed the San Francisco Giants 4-1, the Montreal Expos edged the New York Mets 3-2 in 11 innings.

The Chicago at 4St. Louis game was rained out.

Steve Carlton pitched a complete game for the Phils, scattering nine hits, including Phil Garner's two-run homer, for his eight victory in nine decisions over Pittsburgh since 1977.

Astros 10, Dodgers 3

Houston's Ken Forsch, in his first start since his no-hitter against Atlanta last week, had his chance for a second straight no-hitter erased quickly, as Davey Lopes lined his third pitch of the game for a single. Forsch allowed nine more hits, but not many were damaging, and he was the beneficiary of the Astros' biggest offensive outburst of the young season as Houston won its fifth game.

Reds 9, Braves 5

Cincinnati's Dave Concepcion, weakened by chicken pox shortly before the end of spring training, apparently has regained his strength. Concepcion unleashed his power against Atlanta, connecting for a grand slam homer, a 380-foot drive over the centerfield fence in the fifth inning as the Reds handed the Braves their fifth loss in six games. Ray Knight, who had three hits, and George Foster each had two RBI for the Reds.

Padres 4, Giants 1

Randy Jones, shelled in his 1979 debut last week, and Rollie Fingers combined on a five-hitter, pitching the Padres past the Giants.

Dave Winfield stroked three hits for San Diego, and Fernando Gonzalez drove in two runs with a single and a double.

Expos 3, Mets 2

Tony Perez' 11th inning homer off Skip Locwood gave the Expos their third extra-inning victory in three games. Montreal has played five games, all of which have been decided by one run, and won four.

The game was enlivened by a bench-clearing brawl in the ninth inning. The fisticuffs started when Montreal's Gary Carter tried to score from first on pitcher Pete Falcone's wild throw to first on a grounder.

ALAN ASHBY of the Houston Astros raises his hands high in the air as teammate Jose Cruz (25) crosses the plate after Art Howe had hit a sacrifice fly to center Wednesday night. The Astros beat the Dodgers, 10-4. (AP Laserphoto)

Lyle sparks Rangers to victory

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Sparky Lyle sure hates spring training — you could tell by his performance this year.

"I wasn't digging it too much," says the 1977 Cy Young Award winner, who had a typically poor exhibition season.

During the regular season, however, it's usually a different ball game for him — like Wednesday night, during the Rangers' 4-0 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Making his first appearance of 1979, the star reliever made it a good one with two spotless innings in back of Steve Comer's sparkling one-hit pitching.

"I couldn't do a thing in the bullpen tonight," said Lyle,

"but something happened between the bullpen and the mound."

Lyle, acquired from the New York Yankees in an off-season trade, helped support a Texas shutout string that has now reached 23 innings.

In other AL games, the Baltimore Orioles nipped the New York Yankees 6-5 in 10 innings; the California Angels turned back the Minnesota Twins 11-2; the Kansas City Royals hammered the Detroit Tigers 10-3 and the Oakland A's outscored the Seattle Mariners 14-7.

Rain postponed the Chicago-Toronto game.

Orioles 6, Yankees 5

Rick Dempsey's bases-loaded single in the 10th led Baltimore over New York, Baltimore, which had tied the game at 5-5 with a three-run ninth, loaded the bases in the 10th off Yankees reliever Rich Gossage on a single by Ken Singleton and two walks.

Angels 11, Twins 2

Nolan Ryan fired a three-hitter, striking out 10, and Don Baylor knocked in five runs to lead California over Minnesota. Loser Dave Goltz departed in the seventh inning when the Angels rallied for six runs, two on a double by Baylor, to put the game out of reach.

Royals 10, Tigers 3

Shortstop Alan Trammell's error on a potential double-play ball let two runs score and Fred Patek, George Brett and Hal McRae lashed consecutive doubles as Kansas City rallied for seven runs in the eighth inning to beat Detroit.

Patek's two-run double capped a 4-for-4 night for the Kansas City shortstop.

A's 14, Mariners 7

Dave Revering scored three runs and accounted for two more with his first homer of the season as Oakland beat Seattle.

The A's broke a 7-7 tie in a four-run seventh keyed by Jeff Newman's two-run single. Dwayne Murphy singled in the first run and Miguel Dilone drew a walk to force in the fourth.

Jim Todd, a former Mariner, got the victory in relief. The loser was Rick Honeycutt.

SWC teams announce signings

By The Associated Press

Texas Tech lured a Mississippi all-stater, Texas signed a 7-footer and Southern Methodist outdueled several schools for a Kansas all-stater as Southwest Conference basketball coaches inked players

Wednesday to national letters of intent.

Texas Tech's prize was 6-6 forward Joe Washington of Tupelo, Miss., who averaged 18.5 points and 11 rebounds per game. Washington, a three-time all-stater, was courted by Mis-issippi, Mississippi State and Alcorn A&M and led his team to a 31-3 record.

Texas Coach Abe Lemons, who desperately needed a large, dominating center this past season in tying Arkansas for the SWC championship, landed 7-foot, 1-inch Steve Frederick of Pasadena, Dobbie, Frederick, a two-time all-district player, averaged 17 points and 10 rebounds a game his senior year and had a game high of 40 points. SMU hauled in a big catch in 6-2 guard Dave Piehler of Newton, Kan., who was pursued hotly by Oklahoma, Arkansas and Kansas. Piehler averaged 28.5 points for a team that won the Kansas state title with a 20-4 ledger.

Just a thought....

There is hardly anything in the world that some man
cannot make a little worse
and sell a little cheaper, and the people
who consider price only are this man's lawful prey!

Masters opens today

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer
AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Defending champion Gary Player was pleased with his preparation entering today's opening round of the 43rd Masters Golf Championship, but he also is realistic.

"I've been playing well in practice rounds," the diminutive South African said Wednesday. "But shadow boxing is not the answer here."

Player, only foreigner ever to win this prestigious invitational event, is well down the list of favorites, with oddsmakers establishing 1977 Masters champion and this year's leading money-winner, Tom Watson, as the golfer to beat.

"Watson is playing well, and deserves to be the favorite," Player said. "But predictions are not the thing that matters. It's the score. There are too many good players to predict that I will win. All I can do is my best."

The 5-foot-7, 150-pounder has played in only three tournaments in the last five months, spending most of his time on his 4,000-acre thoroughbred horse farm in South Africa. He failed to make the cut at the Tournament of Champions and the Heritage Classic, but stormed to a second-place finish in the Greater Greensboro Open last week.

Player predicted low scores this week over the picturesque 7,040-yard, par 72 Augusta National Golf Club course, but only if the weather is ideal, and the early forecast called for a 60 percent chance of showers today.

The 29-year-old Watson used his Masters triumph two years ago as a springboard to the top of this game, claiming 10 of his 12 tour titles in the last two seasons, both times ranking No. 1 on the money list. He won the Heritage two weeks ago by 5 shots in a tuneup for the Masters, which has an international field of 72 players.

Jack Nicklaus, who holds a record five Masters titles among his 16 major championships, finds himself in a 'strange situation — that of not being favored.

The tournament was scheduled for a 9 a.m. EST start, with veteran Gene Littler and Leonard Thompson forming the first of 36 twosomes.

Most of the opening round attention was expected to center on Watson and his playing partner, the long-hitting Spaniard, Seve Ballesteros, who finished 18th here last year.

Atlanta trims Rockets, 109-106

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Rockets guard Mike Newlin has it all figured out—the Rockets have the Atlanta Hawks right where they want them in their National Basketball Association playoff series.

"We don't live with prosperity very well," Newlin said. "It's only when we are presented with a futile situation that we seem to come out and play our best."

That must be the reason the Rockets allowed the Hawks to come into the Summit and walk away with a 109-106 victory in the first game of the best of three mini-series.

Atlanta's victory eliminates the home court privilege the Rockets worked so hard for in the last seven games of the regular season and sends the second game to Atlanta's Omni, where the Hawks have a 34-7 record, including 18 in a row.

Now that's futile, right? Not so, says Newlin.

"After this game you'll see us ready to play Friday night," said Newlin.

But Atlanta Coach Hubie Brown isn't ready to call it a series.

"We don't think this is a one-game series because we won," Brown said. "They could come to our place Friday and do a great job."

Houston, which has lost four of five games to the Hawks this season, seemed to have the situation under control in the first half when taking a 57-50 half-time lead.

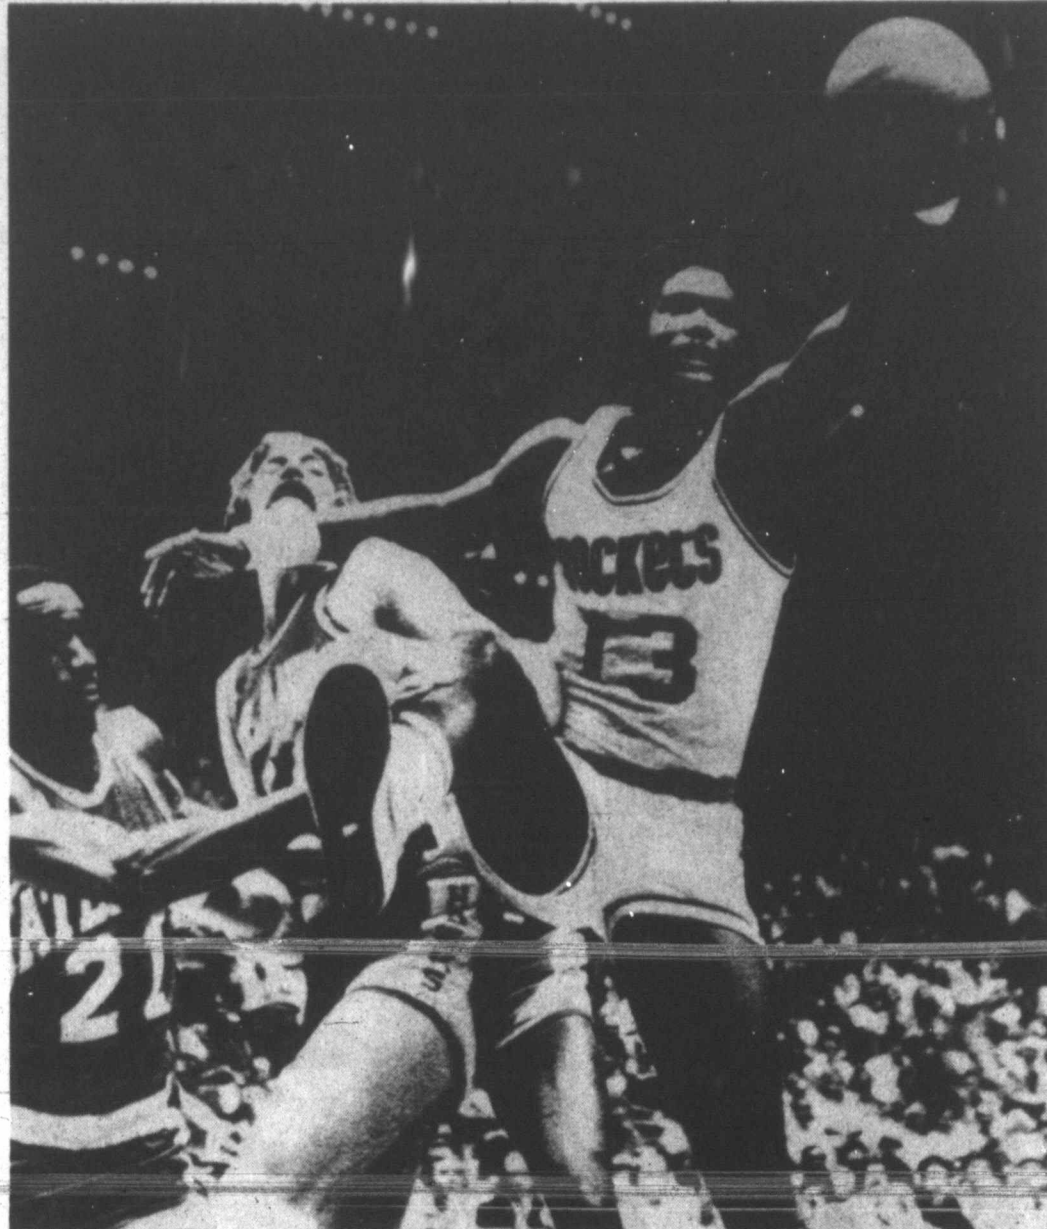

The Rockets, who won five of their last seven games to earn the home court advantage against the Hawks, edged to a seven-point lead, 26-19 with 2:31 to go in the first quarter.

But Brown was charged with a technical foul following a confrontation with referee Darell Garretson. Brown claimed Houston's Rudy Tomjanovich did not go up for a jump ball and instead dropped back and got the tip.

"Coach was trying to argue that Rudy didn't jump," Hill said. "The game got kind of exciting then and they (officials) started calling fouls real close and we got out of our patterns."

The Hawks were back in form to start the second half however, outscoring the Rockets 16-6 to start the third quarter to take the lead they never lost.

DWIGHT JONES (13) of the Houston Rockets kicks high to block out Atlanta's Jack Givens (21) and Tom McMillen (54) Wednesday night in NBA playoff action. Atlanta won, 109-106.

LUBBOCK - Easter weekend seems to herald the appearance of more local parks visitors with many state parks overflowing by mid-afternoon.

"The picnic tables are usually full by 2 p.m. and traffic control is really a problem at Palo Duro State Park near Canyon in the Texas Panhandle," said Leonard Winstead, regional park director for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

"All the parks superintendents recommend that Easter day visitors go early if they want a picnic table and if they are staying overnight, make reservations," Winstead continued.

The state parks are preparing for the expected increase this weekend including: Copper Breaks near Quanah; Caprock Canyons north of Quitaque; Palo Duro east of Canyon; an all the recreation areas at Abilene; Big Spring; Lake Arrowhead near Wichita Falls; and Possum Kingdom near Caddo.

More facts about state parks are listed in the new parks information leaflet available at all P&WD offices.

Additional information can be obtained by calling toll-free 800-252-9327.

Steps in registering your boat

LUBBOCK - Many Texas boat owners are still not familiar with the boat and motor titling rules administered by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Even though the Texas certificate of title law became effective over three years ago, Texas game wardens are still finding unregistered boats on public lakes in Texas.

All motorboats in excess of 14 feet in length, and new outboard motors of 12 or more horsepower are required to be titled when bought, transferred or sold.

Title applications on a manufacturer's statement of origin must accompany a request for boat titling for new boats and outboard motors.

All out hulls (new or old) less than 14 feet in length and outboard motors (new or old) less than 12 horsepower are not required to title, but may title if the owner so desires.

There is a procedure for the seller and buyer to follow.

The lowercase must: (1) execute bills of sale if titles for boat and outboard motor have not been issued; (2) properly assign titles to purchaser if titles have been issued. Licensed marine dealers must use dealer assignments and show current dealer number. All must notify the P&WD within 15 days from date of sale.

The buyer must obtain the fillout applications for title (boat and motor) and mail or bring to the P&WD office applications, assigned titles are notarized bill of sale with the required fees (title fee $3.50 for each boat or outboard motor in addition to a transfer fee of $1). Application forms may be obtained from the P&WD offices or the marine dealers.

In addition to obtaining a certificate of title for boats over 14 feet in length and outboard motors over 12 horsepower, all motorboats operating on public waters must be issued a certificate of number. This number regulation has been required for 11 years in Texas.

Boaters cannot operate their motorboats without this certificate of number on board, therefore, boaters should exercise care not to lose this certificate.

If you lose or accidentally destroy this certificate, a duplicate can be obtained by filling out form PWD-309 and mailing the form together with a statutory fee of $1 to the P&WD, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, Texas, 78744.

All boats are required to display the assigned number on both sides of the bow. Only this assigned number can be displayed along with the validation decal.

Additional information about the lawful operation of your motorboat is included in the Digest of the Texas Water Safety Act available at all P&WD offices of Texas game wardens.

For blacks

Jobless rate evidence programs have failed?

By JOHN CUNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The jobless rate for blacks, more than twice that for whites, is often cited as evidence that employment discrimination continues and that government and private policies have failed.

The statistics seems to support the notion, because the March jobless rate for black men was 8.8 percent, or 2.6 times that of white men, and that for black women was 9.8 percent, or double that for whites.

headway than whites, regardless of what those jobless rates say. The jobless rate isn't the only indicator. Important too is the rate at which blacks have been finding jobs and the numbers of blacks that now hold them. In that respect, the figures are improving.

When a person actively seeks, he or she is said to be a labor force member, albeit an unemployed one. The mere act of looking, it is said, means they feel opportunities exist where they didn't before.

Twisters leave path of destruction

CARS AND TRUCKS like the one pictured above were tossed around like toys Tuesday when tornados struck several West Texas towns. Officials termed the destructive force of the storms as "the most complete" ever seen by most. Farm equipment, barns and homes were tossed in the winds that left 60 dead and more than 800 injured.

Garage becomes morgue

By GREG THOMPSON Associated Press Writer WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — Jerry Van Loh's voice cracked with emotion and weariness as he surveyed what had once been the garage of his funeral home. It was now a blood-spattered morgue, lined with shrouded bodies.

"We had no other place to put them. I never thought the garage would be used for this. I hope it won't be again," said the owner of Owens-Brumley Funeral Home, one of two local funeral homes where the dozens of victims of Tuesday's deadly tornado were taken.

He cast another look at the 17 bodies on the concrete floor, some swaddled in blood-speckled sheets, others zipped up in plastic body bags. The floor was marred by blood stains where other bodies had been.

"It's so overwhelming. These are just people. People like you and me. People you meet on the streets every day. When they died, especially those in the shopping centers, they were doing the things we do every day."

His voice choked. "All of a sudden ... they can't, they aren't allowed to do them any more," he said as his voice trailed off. He hadn't slept for 38 hours.

The first victim arrived at 7 p.m. Tuesday, a mere 45 minutes after the twister cut through the heavily populated southern section of this North Texas city of 100,000.

Twenty-four others arrived, and Van Loh and his staff worked on the embalming tables for the next 20 hours.

Weather hammers cleanup operation

By GREG HARDIN
Pampa News Managing Editor

VERNON - The relentless Texas weather hammered away at rescue workers and cleanup crews here as blowing dust and 60 mile-per-hour winds hampered cleanup activities of a killer tornado.

Several tornadoes touched down in Vernon and Wichita Falls Tuesday, leaving in their wake a trail of death and destruction termed the worst disaster in Texas in the past 25 years.

"We were lucky," Vernon Police Chief Wayne Hendrix said. "It just caught the edges of town. It could have been much worse if it was a half-mile closer."

Hendrix confirmed 11 dead in Vernon and another 66 injured from the tornado that did an estimated $20 million damage in this West Texas town.

"We don't know how high the death toll will go from the storm," Hendrix said. "We have some people that are in pretty bad shape."

Although it lasted less than 10 minutes, the tornado devastated an area one mile wide and 4 miles long on the outskirts of Vernon.

"It flattened a motel and restaurant, a butane distributor, a plastic wholesale company, the 4-H barn, another small restaurant - not to mention all the residential property that was destroyed," Hendrix said. "The loss of life could have been much greater if the twister had hit an hour earlier when most of the people were at work."

The police chief said the town was bouncing back from the storm and that the cleanup operation was well underway.

"I sure learned one thing from this storm," the chief said. "If you don't want help - don't ask for it."

"Within two hours we had Oklahoma Highway Patrol Troopers here asking what they could do to help," Hendrix said. "People from all over this part of the state and Oklahoma have come in bringing supplies and aid."

"You really don't know who your friends are until something like this happens," Hendrix continued. "Vernon sure has a lot of friends."

In Wichita Falls, three tornadoes brought the city to its knees. Forty-four people are confirmed dead and more than 800 were injured by the swirling cloud masses.

U. S. Senator Jack Hightower, after viewing the devastation from the air, called it "the worst natural disaster I have ever seen. The destruction is complete."

The mayor of Wichita Falls declared a 9 p.m. curfew after the National Guard was activated to help control looting in the destroyed parts of the city.

The twisters cut a path one and one half miles wide and eight miles long through the southern portion of the city, destroying shopping centers and residential areas totally.

Governor Bill Clements said he would ask President Carter to declare Vernon and Wichita Falls a disaster area.

"He can't do anything but declare it a disaster area," one victim of the storm said. "Hell, that's the only thing you can call something like this."

Wichita Falls was without power, gas or telephone service Wednesday night, but repair crews from around the state were working to restore limited utilities to the storm victims.

"Everyone here is a victim," a National Guard soldier said. "If the storm didn't kill you then someone you love or know was hurt. The whole town is suffering from this thing."

Officials estimated the damage in Wichita Falls to run between 200 million to one billion dollars.

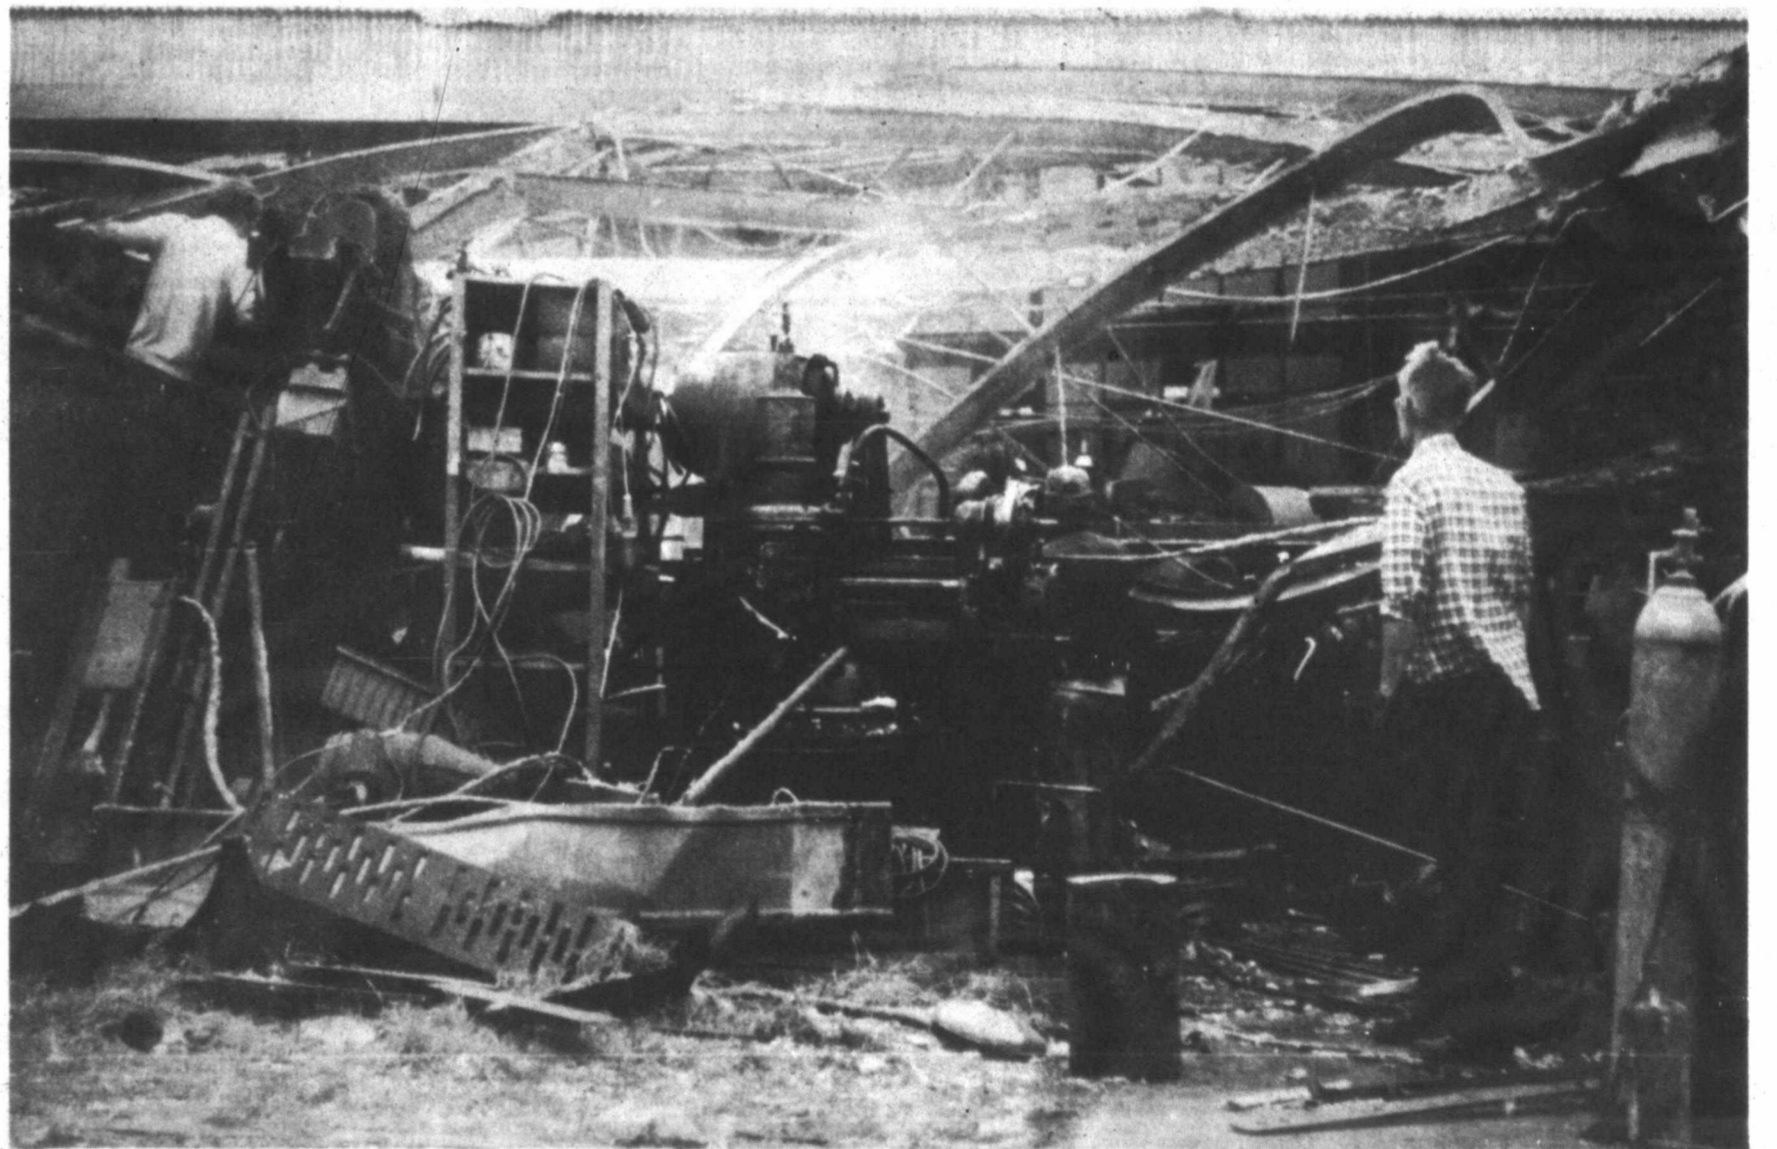

"To put it quite frankly there isn't a town left here anymore," a DPS trooper said. "Everything will have to be rebuilt."

Officials warned residents not to enter the streets of Wichita Falls or Vernon after dark.

"National Guard troops were patrolling the area with law enforcement officers to apprehend looters," the DPS trooper said. "Anyone in the area after curfew is going to be treated like looter."

Red Cross officials stated that residents of Wichita Falls were in need of food, blankets, flashlights and portable stoves.

"We can use anything that people want to give us," a Red Cross spokesman said.

DONNA ANDERSON of Pampa is alive and kicking. Since the casualty lists were released of the victims of the tornado in Wichita Falls Anderson has received several calls from people thinking that she was a victim of the tragedy - she wasn't. People should not assume a friend or relative has been injured until they have been notified officially. This will save a lot of heartache and confusion.

Dear Abby

by abigail van buren

DEAR ABBY: I have a daughter who will be 20 soon. Her boyfriend, with whom she has grown up, is in the Air Force and is stationed in Florida. He's asked her to marry him in June of 1980, but he wants her to come to Florida and share a two-bedroom apartment with him for two months.

Our daughter was taught that premarital sex was wrong. She says she honestly thinks she can live with this guy for two months without having sex with him. She insists she would never give in to him, and says she's made that clear to him.

I still maintain that when two people are in love, plan to marry and are thrown into a situation of that kind, they will find it impossible to resist the temptation of sex.

We've always been a church-going family and I can't understand her reasoning. She wants my blessing, but says if I don't give it to her, she'll go anyway and I can't stop her. Am I old-fashioned? Or do you honestly believe they can live together for two months and not have sex?

DOUBTING MOTHER

DEAR DOUBTING: If they exercise the strictest kind of self-discipline, it's possible. However, a person who's opposed to premarital sex should not go in for premarital living together.

DEAR ABBY: A lady I knew (not well) passed away, leaving a husband and two children. I want to express my sympathy to the husband and let him know that I'm available to do whatever I can to help him through his time of sorrow. I know him only to say "hi" to. He is very well fixed financially. Attractive, too, so I'm sure there will be a lot of women after him.

I'm a divorcee, new in town, and I don't want to appear too forward or he might get the wrong idea.

I would like to write him a sympathy note that will be out of the ordinary. Something witty or eloquent. Any suggestions along that line?

VIRGO LADY

DEAR VIRGO: If you didn't know the lady well, and know her husband only to say "hi" to, write a brief condolence note. Don't try for wit or eloquence. And please restrain your eagerness to help him through his time of sorrow, or it won't be the "wrong" idea but the right one that might cause him to think you're after him, too.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married 46 years. We live modestly and have never been big spenders. We have a comfortable income and bank account and my husband is an honest and decent man, but here is my problem:

He hides money all over the house. I find it when housecleaning.

Last month I found a surprising amount in the cellar. I asked him why. He never answered. I tried to get him to put that money in the bank because the bills were getting moldy, but he wouldn't do it. He just took it to hide somewhere else.

Today I found some more money under the sofa cushions, and I am feeling very depressed.

Please don't write me a personal letter as my husband gets the mail first since he is now retired. Thank you.

WORRIED SICK

DEAR WORRIED: Get your husband to a doctor for a "routine" checkup as soon as possible. And be sure to tell the doctor (quietly in advance) what you have told me. Your husband needs help.

Dr. Lamb

by lawrence lamb m.d.

DEAR DR. LAMB: My future will depend on your answer. Five years ago I had a tubal ligation because I was unable to use birth control pills, diaphragms or IUDs. I had two children so it seemed like a good idea. Two years ago I lost my children and my husband. Now I'm engaged to a wonderful man who would love a family. He read awhile back that experiments have been successfully completed in reversing a tubal ligation. I'm 28 and in excellent health. Have these experiments been successful? I really would like to start another family but I'm afraid that my tubal ligation is totally irreversible.

DEAR READER: Yes. Some women have had their tubal ligations reversed. It's the older operations that are the easiest ones to reverse. The newer more simplified techniques may involve electrical coagulation of the little tiny tube. This often means a much larger area of destruction of tissue. Makes it much more difficult to reconstruct the tubes if they can be reconstructed at all.

So the answer to your question rests in part with how much tubal damage was incurred when you induced sterilization. Even in the older methods when the tube was simply severed and tied, the reconstruction process is not always successful. I would suggest that you see a gynecologist and review with him the type of tubal ligation you had and perhaps with tests he can get some idea as to what your chances might be of obtaining a reversal at this time.

I know that circumstances often change and this is sometimes a very good reason for changing your mind about whether you want to be sterile or not but I do wish that everyone who contemplates a surgical procedure to induce sterility, either male or female, would really consider the operation as permanent. I don't think a person should have such a procedure without being absolutely certain that there's no chance whatsoever in the future that he or she will want to have the procedure reversed.

I suppose I might change my mind on that if the sterilization operations became simplified and of such a nature that the reversal procedure itself was fairly simple to achieve.

New textured ceiling designs provide choices

New textured ceiling designs provide today's style-conscious homeowner with expanded decorating choices. Because texture creates interest in unexpected areas, its use has become increasingly important in good room design. Current among decorating trends is the embellishment of bare, white ceilings with patterns and textures to complement or accent existing furnishings. Contemporary geometric designs, tinted and deeply embossed tile and panel patterns, with or without acoustical properties, are now available to update drab ceilings. Textured ceilings can be installed over the present surface or on suspended grids for lowered ceilings.

Tracy Caulkins: she is swimmingly successful

By Ellie Grossman

kins usually spent one week-end a month traveling to local AAU competitions, paying their own room and board, entry fees, etc. Saturday and Sunday they'd watch Tracy swim seven or eight times against "maybe 30 to 60 girls in her age group."

The better she swam, the farther they went after stiffer competition, so the more it cost what with fees at the Nashville Aquatic Club ($75 yearly membership, $40 monthly to work out) and all. "We don't want to know how much we've spent," Mrs. Caulkins says, "but it's been worth every penny of it. The friends we met that Tracy makes. The travel. She's competed in Australia and Russia which the AAU paid for because she's on the national team. She knows kids all over the world and people know her." Mrs. Caulkins beams.

Besides that, swimming to win helps in regular life. "It prepares you for anything else you decide to do," she says, although neither she nor her husband, Thomas, an educational researcher, was ever a competitor. "If Tracy works half as hard in any profession, she'll be guaranteed success," she says. "She knows how to dedicate herself and isn't afraid to hurt a bit (she suffers elbow tendonitis occasionally)."

The bathroom door opens and Tracy enters. Damp, pale, with curly brown hair and braces on her teeth, she's 5-foot-9, 125 pounds. She sits on the bed her mother vacates and says she swims because "I like it. It's hard to swim well when you don't want to," although, yes, "I'd feel like I'd let a lot of people down if I stopped. But she doesn't want to. There's so much to be gained later on, although it's hard to pinpoint. I haven't thought much about a career," she says. "I'll probably swim through college because college swimming is getting better. They're offering more scholarships."

"And swimming helps you learn things," she says, like how to handle pressure, which Tracy does by...? She looks at her mother and shrugs. "I don't let it bother me."

"And you learn self-discipline," she adds. That's essential in her way of life. Weekdays she gets up at five, has cereal or eggs for breakfast ("She has to watch her weight now," her mother interrupts, smiling), and swims at the club from 5:45 a.m. until 8.

"Then I go to school until 3:15 — I'm in tenth grade at Harpeth Hall Academy — and we swim again from 3:45 until 7:00." She's home at 7:45, eats dinner, does her homework and goes to bed. She rarely watches television and doesn't read, she says, but she doesn't feel at all confined or limited.

"We've got time, I guess, for other things. We don't practice Saturday night or Sundays."

So Sunday she, well, does what? Tracy looks at her mother and says, "Sundays I do what? Sleep late," she says, answering herself.

And Saturday night? She shrugs. "I get together with my friends or something." Her voice trails off and she looks down. Well, the important thing now is training for the 1980 Summer Olympics. She'll have to qualify in the trial meets held a couple of months before, but that shouldn't be a problem, especially in the individual medley category. That's Tracy's strength. She enjoys swimming backstroke, breaststroke, butterfly and free style which is what the medley is.

And by now she's used to training and being yelled at by coaches which is what coaches do sometimes, she says.

"The first one when I was 8 was really loud and always yelling and that scared me," she says.

"It was just his personality," Mrs. Caulkins intercedes, "and they came to accept that. After all, Tracy's dad yells at her too," she says laughing.

It's just part of the routine, and the routine — all those laps back and forth — is worth so much to a person.

The people's pharmacy

by Joe Graedon

While standing in line at the check-out counter for the local supermarket the other day one of our associates came across the inevitable tabloid with the inevitable headline announcing yet another miracle cure. The claim was for a doctor's wonder serum - "It can cure arthritis, it may beat cancer, it boosts your sex life."

Bull! Nothing drives a pharmacist faster than the announcement of another untested wonder drug. This claim was no exception. According to the article, a doctor in France had discovered "The Fountain of Life." It "has halted crippling arthritis, rheumatism and skin diseases. And kept the horrors of old age at bay." As if that were not enough, another benefit of the treatment "is virility; sex!"

So what's the matter with this kind of article? Something this fantastic should have us all packing our bags and heading for France in order to cure our ills, improve our love life and stay young forever.

Well, folks, the reason that doctors and pharmacologists get so angry when they read this kind of story is because it represents the worst kind of exploitation there is. Not only does it play upon people's misery and pain but it can lead to false hopes. The hype may sell papers, but it does little to resolve people's health problems.

It would be wonderful if some secret formula would cure arthritis, beat cancer, improve virility and restore youth. But the likelihood that such a magic bullet exists or could be discovered is remote. Our limited understanding of disease now makes most researchers think that there is no one single unifying theory that can explain or singlehandedly cure all these complicated medical problems.

Even if a particular potion has something to offer, the chances are good that it would remain unavailable for the majority of the people for a very long time. Carefully controlled scientific testing would be necessary to demonstrate true effectiveness and adequate safety.

Stories in scandal sheets or tabloids generally rely upon "testimonial" reports. That is, someone relates an experience - he was crippled, but after receiving the miraculous remedy he threw away his crutches and walked; she was blind and now she can see again.

But such claims have been with us since before the traveling medicine show and will doubtless be bannered in headlines as long as journalists capitalize upon people's infirmities.

If these reports were merely entertaining, they would only be aggravating. But many people are left believing that somewhere a cure exists that will solve all their medical woes.

A few desperate souls, following the example of Ponce de Leon, might even pack up and travel in search of the wonder drug. Not only will they probably be blowing hard earned money, they might discontinue other treatments that were beneficial.

So where does all this leave you, the health consumer? In order to reduce some of the confusion and put all this into perspective, we have come up with some "People's Pharmacy Guidelines" that may help you the next time you read about another "miracle cure."

First, check carefully for the source of the report. If the investigators are working at a reputable research center and if their study was originally published in a major medical journal, there is cause for optimism. If it's a single practitioner working independently and unwilling to share his "secret," be wary.

Check the article to see if other researchers have confirmed, or at least commented upon the new discovery. See if there is any mention made of adverse reactions. All drugs, even wonder drugs, have the potential for causing some side effects.

Try to track down the original medical report. Researchers usually supply a reprint on request. Even if it is written in technical language that is difficult to understand, you can always relay the article to your physician or another health worker whom you trust for their evaluation.

Finally, maintain a healthy skepticism whenever you hear about a miraculous potion. Before you pack your bags and hop on the bandwagon be sure you know it will make the trip.

I desperately need some advice. I'm a successful executive who has worked hard and provided well for my family. Except for some flab and a little bulge around the middle I have always been in good health, until lately that is. My doctor recently diagnosed borderline high blood pressure (140-90) and put me on a drug called Aldoril. I never used to have headaches, but now they come almost every other day. I feel sluggish and slow at work. Worst of all, my sex life has suffered. I'm less interested in making love and sometimes I have trouble with impotence.

According to my doctor I will have to take this medicine the rest of my life. I'm too young to give up sex (43 years old). Aren't there any alternatives for my blood pressure problem?

It's too bad that some doctors first tend to seek solutions to people's problems with a prescription. While drugs save lives they also have side effects and sometimes the benefits are not worth the risks. There is no doubt that hypertension is dangerous and deserves treatment, but there are some alternatives that can be tried, especially if the blood pressure reading is borderline as yours is.

Many medical investigators are convinced that excessive salt intake is a major cause of high blood pressure in our country. Not only are we too heavy with the salt shaker at the dinner table, but most prepared foods are saturated with the stuff.

There are other things you can try. Getting rid of that spare tire can also reduce hypertension. An exercise program that is tailored to your individual needs by a competent professional could make a huge difference in your feeling of well being. Finally, it would probably help if you could learn some way to deal with the stress that is almost always a part of the successful executive's life. Plan some time everyday for mental relaxation or meditation.

You may also want to monitor your own progress by purchasing a reliable blood pressure testing kit. (Consumer Reports recently evaluated different brands.)

But, before you begin to make any changes in your medical routine, and that includes the alternatives, check first with your doctor to be sure the steps you intend to take are okay. And, by all means, explain the problems you are having with headaches and low sex drive. He may want to change your medication to avoid the side effects.

And by all means don't forget - we are suggesting that you take an active role in your own health care.

Q. My doctor recently prescribed a drug called Tranxene (Clorazepate) to calm my nerves. He called it a tranquilizer. A few years back a different doctor prescribed Librium and called it an anti-anxiety agent.

What exactly is a tranquilizer? That may sound like a simple minded question but I would like to know the difference between tranquilizers, sedatives and anti-anxiety agents.

It's no wonder you're confused. Different doctors use different jargon and often they mean the same thing. All three of those words have been used interchangeably. They basically refer to a class of drugs used to allay apprehension, relax, soothe, quiet and otherwise calm the nerves of an anxious or excited patient. We tend to lump medications like Valium (Diazepam), Librium (Chlordiazepoxide), Miltown and Equanil (Meproamate) into this category.

Unfortunately, "tranquillizer" is a very misleading term. That is because it has been used to refer to two very different classes of drugs. People sometimes use the words "major tranquilizers" when they talk about antipsychotic medications used to treat severe psychological disorders such as schizophrenia. Medicines such as Thorazine (Chlorpromazine), Stelazine (Trifluoperazine) and Compazine (Prochlorperazine) should not be confused with "minor tranquilizers" or anti-anxiety agents like Valium or Tranxene.

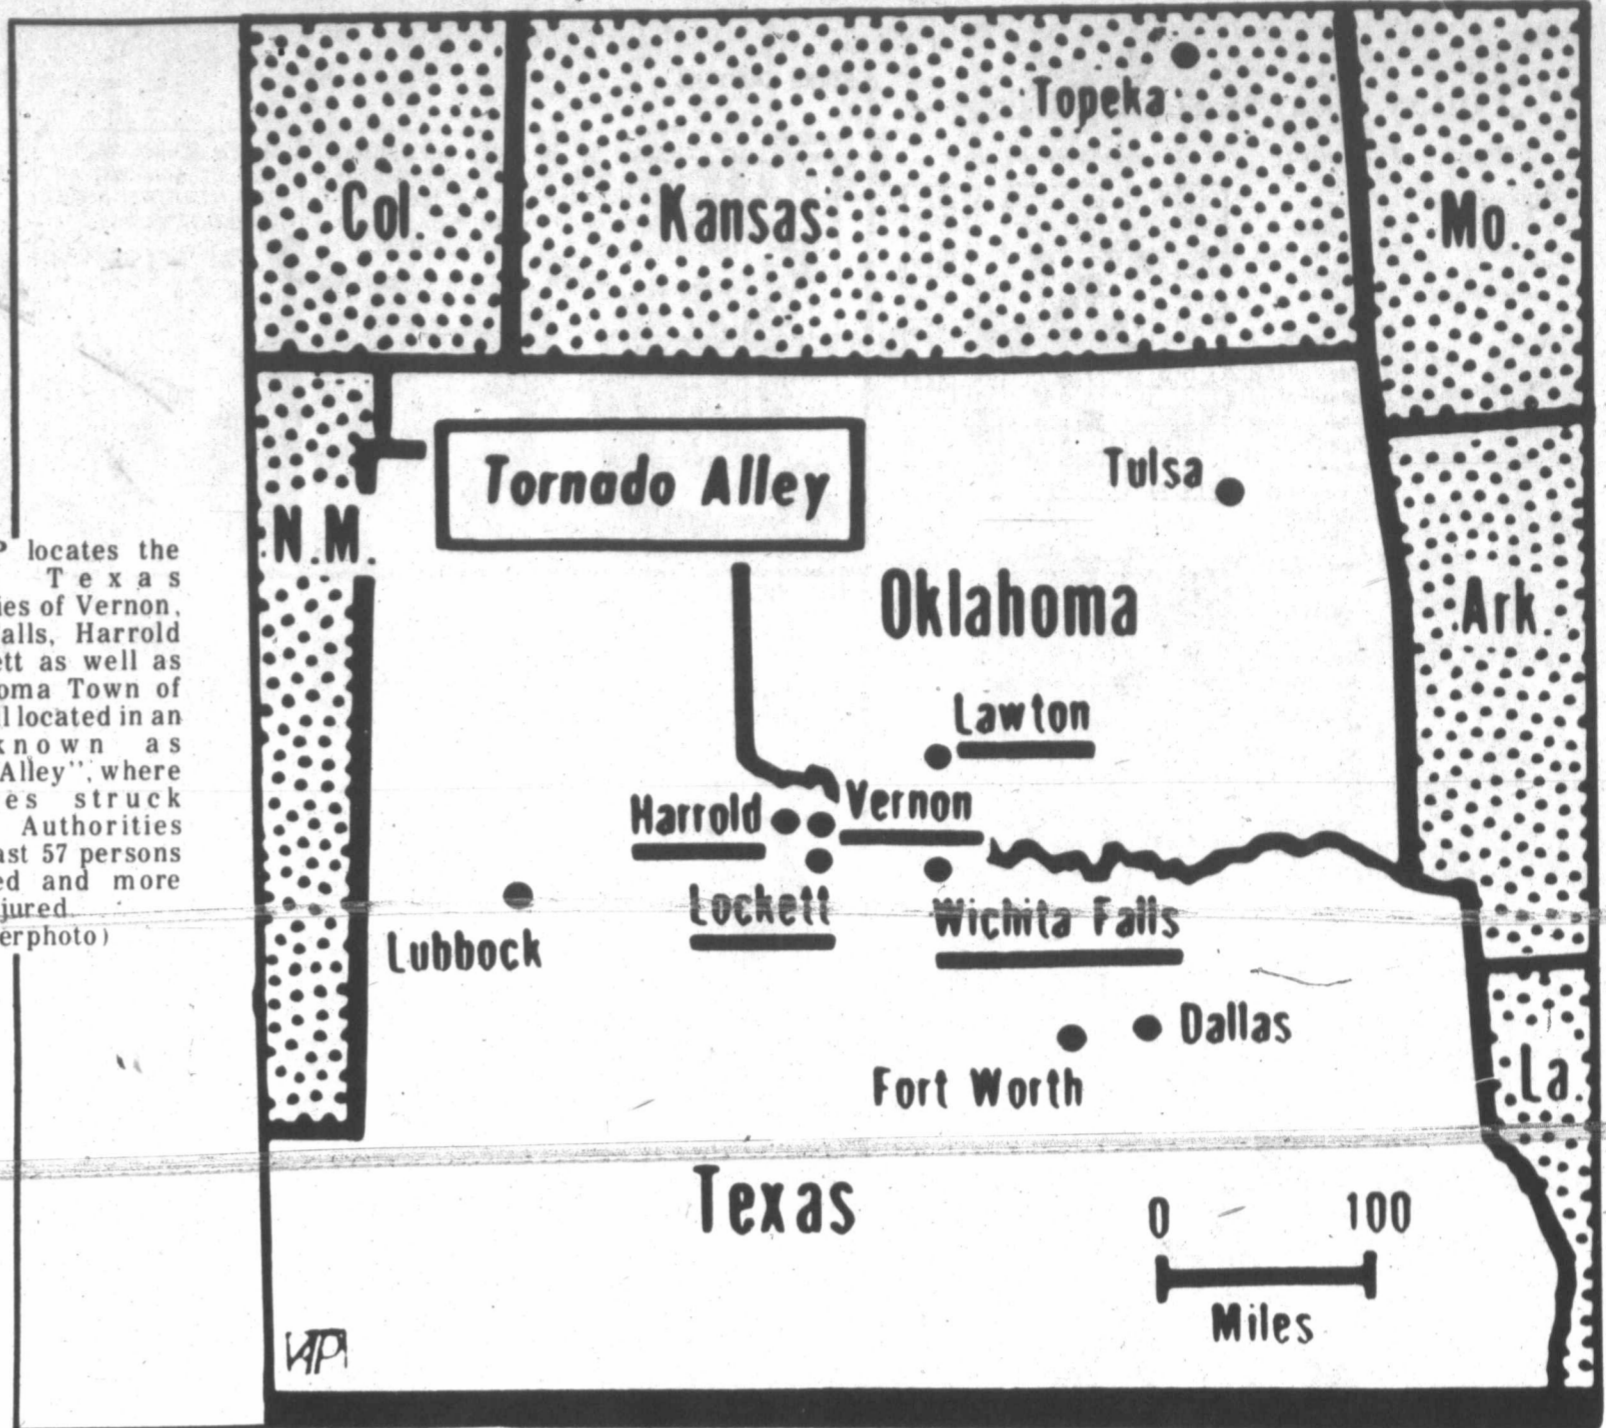

If all this sounds confusing, it is, and you have barely scratched the surface. Doctors also use words like mood stabilizers, anxiolytics, hypnotics and antidepressants. Many of these terms overlap and create more chaos than clarity.

So insist that your doctor explain exactly why he prescribed the drug, what is expectations are, what the benefits of treatment should be and what side effects to be alert for. That way you won't get nervous trying to figure out what he means when he says tranquilizer, sedative or anti-anxiety agent.

Search for judge continues

HOUSTON (AP) — District Judge Wallace "Pete" Moore is finding it hard to come up with a fellow judge willing to take on the Herculean task of presiding over the trial of Cullen Davis.

Moore scheduled a hearing Friday to let attorneys present testimony and evidence for and against moving the murder-for-hire trial from Houston, where it ended January in an 8-4 deadlock after three months.

Defense attorneys want it moved, but Tarrant County prosecutors want to keep it in Houston. It originated in Fort Worth and was moved here due to the large amount of publicity it received. The Fort Worth millionaire is accused of hiring someone to kill the judge presiding in his divorce case.

After receiving a telephone call from District Judge Herman Jones of Austin declining the case, Moore said, "I cannot imagine it would be retried here. We'll find someplace to try it."

Moore said Jones declined the case because of space and time reasons.

Tower says destruction complete

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, who has seen the damage inflicted by three hurricanes, the Lubbock tornado of 1970 and American bombers in Japan, returned to his tornado-ravaged hometown Wednesday and said the devastation was the worst he had seen since World War II.

Tower said he was a member of the American Occupation Force in September 1945 that took over Aomori, Japan, a city of 100,000 that was heavily damaged by American bombers.

"This is reminiscent of what our bombers did to that town," Tower said after reviewing the city. "I've seen the damage from Hurricanes Carla, Beulah and Celia, and the tornado in Lubbock."

"But I've never seen one to equal this — including the hurricanes — in terms of wind damage. Of course there was water damage with the hurricane," he said.

Tower a former professor at Midwestern State University near the devastated southern section of Wichita Falls, no longer owns any property in his hometown.

Women at Sea

Last November, the U.S. Navy ended a 200-year-old tradition, when this woman and seven others reported for sea duty aboard the repair ship U.S.S. Vulcan. During the next five years, the Navy hopes to assign at least 5,000 more women to jobs on noncombat ships. At sea, the women perform most of the same duties as men, except heavy repair work. Women now stand watch, handle boats and lines, slice onions, read instruments, and sometimes give orders to other "crewpersons" — men as well as women. As one Navy captain remarked about the new women at sea, "We want to use the full resources of our country, not just half."

Brounaha brewing in Boston

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — For most of the last century, while George and Martha Washington hung sedately in the back hall of the Museum of Fine Arts, the Athenaeum sat in quiet obscurity as a last toehold of the proper Bostonian.
Now, George and Martha are the center of a spirited brouhaha over where they will reside for the next century or so, and the Boston Athenaeum is suddenly in the undignified position of having its finances aired in public.

The paintings were done by Gilbert Stuart, and the one of George is among the most familiar in existence. Because the left side and the bottom are unfinished, it looks as though the somber-faced president is rising from a cloud. Copies of the portrait hang in classrooms across America.

The Athenaeum loaned the pair to the museum in 1876. For the first 100 years, they hung in a hallway until the museum moved them to a more prominent spot upstairs during the Bicentennial.

Last week, both the paintings and the Athenaeum emerged from the shadows when word leaked out that the private library on Beacon Hill was selling the portraits to the National Portrait Gallery of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington for $5 million.

On Wednesday, four politicians and two newspaper publishers stood beneath George's picture in the mural-covered rotunda of the museum.
As five television cameras rolled, 10 newspaper photographers snapped and 40 reporters scribbled. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., stepped to a microphone and announced "the SOS campaign — Save Our Stuarts."
Mayor Kevin H. White added it would be a big public fund-raising drive to keep the pictures in Boston. He said he wanted the Athenaeum and the Smithsonian to hold off on the deal for six months.
All of this is painful for the Athenaeum, a dignified place that takes pride in its tranquility and reserved ambience of old Boston.

1807, was once Boston's major art museum and only library. When the Museum of Fine Arts was started, the library loaned it some of its best paintings and sculpture.
But inflation has eaten into the library's income, and it was discovered that its 130-year-old building needed about $1 million worth of repairs. And the library needed cash.
"The majority of people who use the Athenaeum are outside scholars," said Rodney Armstrong, the library's director. "We have our little family of members, but that's a very limited group to appeal to for funds."
So the Athenaeum's trustees, whose names read like a roll call of Brahmin Boston, voted to sell the art on loan to the museum.

This was to be year of pushing

WASHINGTON (AP) — This was going to be the year of the administration's push for public financing of House and Senate election campaigns but so far, Republican opponents seem to be doing most of the pushing.

They argue the bill is discriminatory and a threat to the two-party system — particularly their share of it. As long as the Republicans maintain their nearly solid front against the measure, it faces a difficult test in the House and a probably fatal Senate filibuster.

President Carter supports public financing of congressional campaigns and recommended it in an election reform message to the last Congress. He left the specifics to congressional draftsmen, but the bills they produced were blocked in the House and scuttled by a filibuster in the Senate.

Administration officials said efforts would intensify to gain approval of a bill this year but they don't seem to have started yet. A campaign finance bill may be ready for the House by late spring. It already is snarled in controversy, not only in the House but also in the Federal Election Commission, which would have to run the system.

Advocates of publicly financed congressional election campaigns say the bill is essential to curb the impact of special interest money in House and Senate campaigns. Vice President Walter Mondale argues that special interest spending has reached "exceedingly dangerous proportions."

Political action committees, set up by business, labor and other interests, spent $31.2 million on congressional election campaigns last year. The biggest share, $18.2 million, went into the campaigns of incumbent members of Congress.

A campaign finance bill now before the House Administration Committee would permit candidates for House seats to claim up to $60,000 in federal aid to match private contributions in increments of $100 or less.

It would go to the nominee of any party, major or minor, whose candidate qualified by raising $1,000 in small donations. In addition, the candidate would have to sign an agreement to limit campaign spending to $150,000.

"This proposal to spread federal campaign money around without regard to party affiliation or anything more than the demonstrated ability of a candidate to raise ten $100 contributions strikes me as at best ill-considered, at worst, malicious, and in any event, probably fatal to our two-party system," said Bill Brock, chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Brock said the bill would make inevitable the rise of third-party and single-issue candidates. He said the proposed qualifying rules for congressional campaign aid would even allow students at a middle-size university to qualify candidates as a prank.

Pulse beat

Carter begins to tackle new task

SAPELO ISLAND, Ga. (AP) — President Carter, who is settling in here today for an eight-day vacation, will have lots of time to work on his pulse rate.

That's right. Pulse rate.

White House press secretary Jody Powell started the sedentary set last week with an announcement that Carter's pulse rate at rest had dropped to 40 heart beats per minute from 60 a year earlier.

Powell attributed the dramatic decline to the president's passion for jogging.

When a reporter asked if that figure could possibly be correct, Powell snapped.

"What's wrong with that. Bjorn Borg's is 35 — and Hamilton's is 89."

Borg is, of course, one of the world's foremost professional tennis players. Hamilton Jordan, Carter's principal assistant, is a tennis amateur, better known for his participation in celebrity tournaments than for his skill on the court.

Although Powell may well have plucked Borg's and Jordan's pulse rates from the air, presidential physician William M. Lukash confirms Carter's pulse rate at rest indeed is 40.

Lukash, a Navy rear admiral and dedicated jogger, also attributes the president's slower pulse to almost daily running. He said the president is "pretty religious" about running for a half hour each day.

The White House doctor said it's a physiological fact that men who follow a regimen of exercise similar to Carter's normally have pulse rates ranging between 36 and 40 beats per minute.

On this remote Atlantic Coast island, the president will have ample opportunity for jogging on the beach.

Wife Rosalynn Carter is expanding her own capacity for distance running. Last Sunday, at Camp David, Md., the first lady ran nearly four miles with her husband to a nearby tourist attraction, Cunningham Falls.

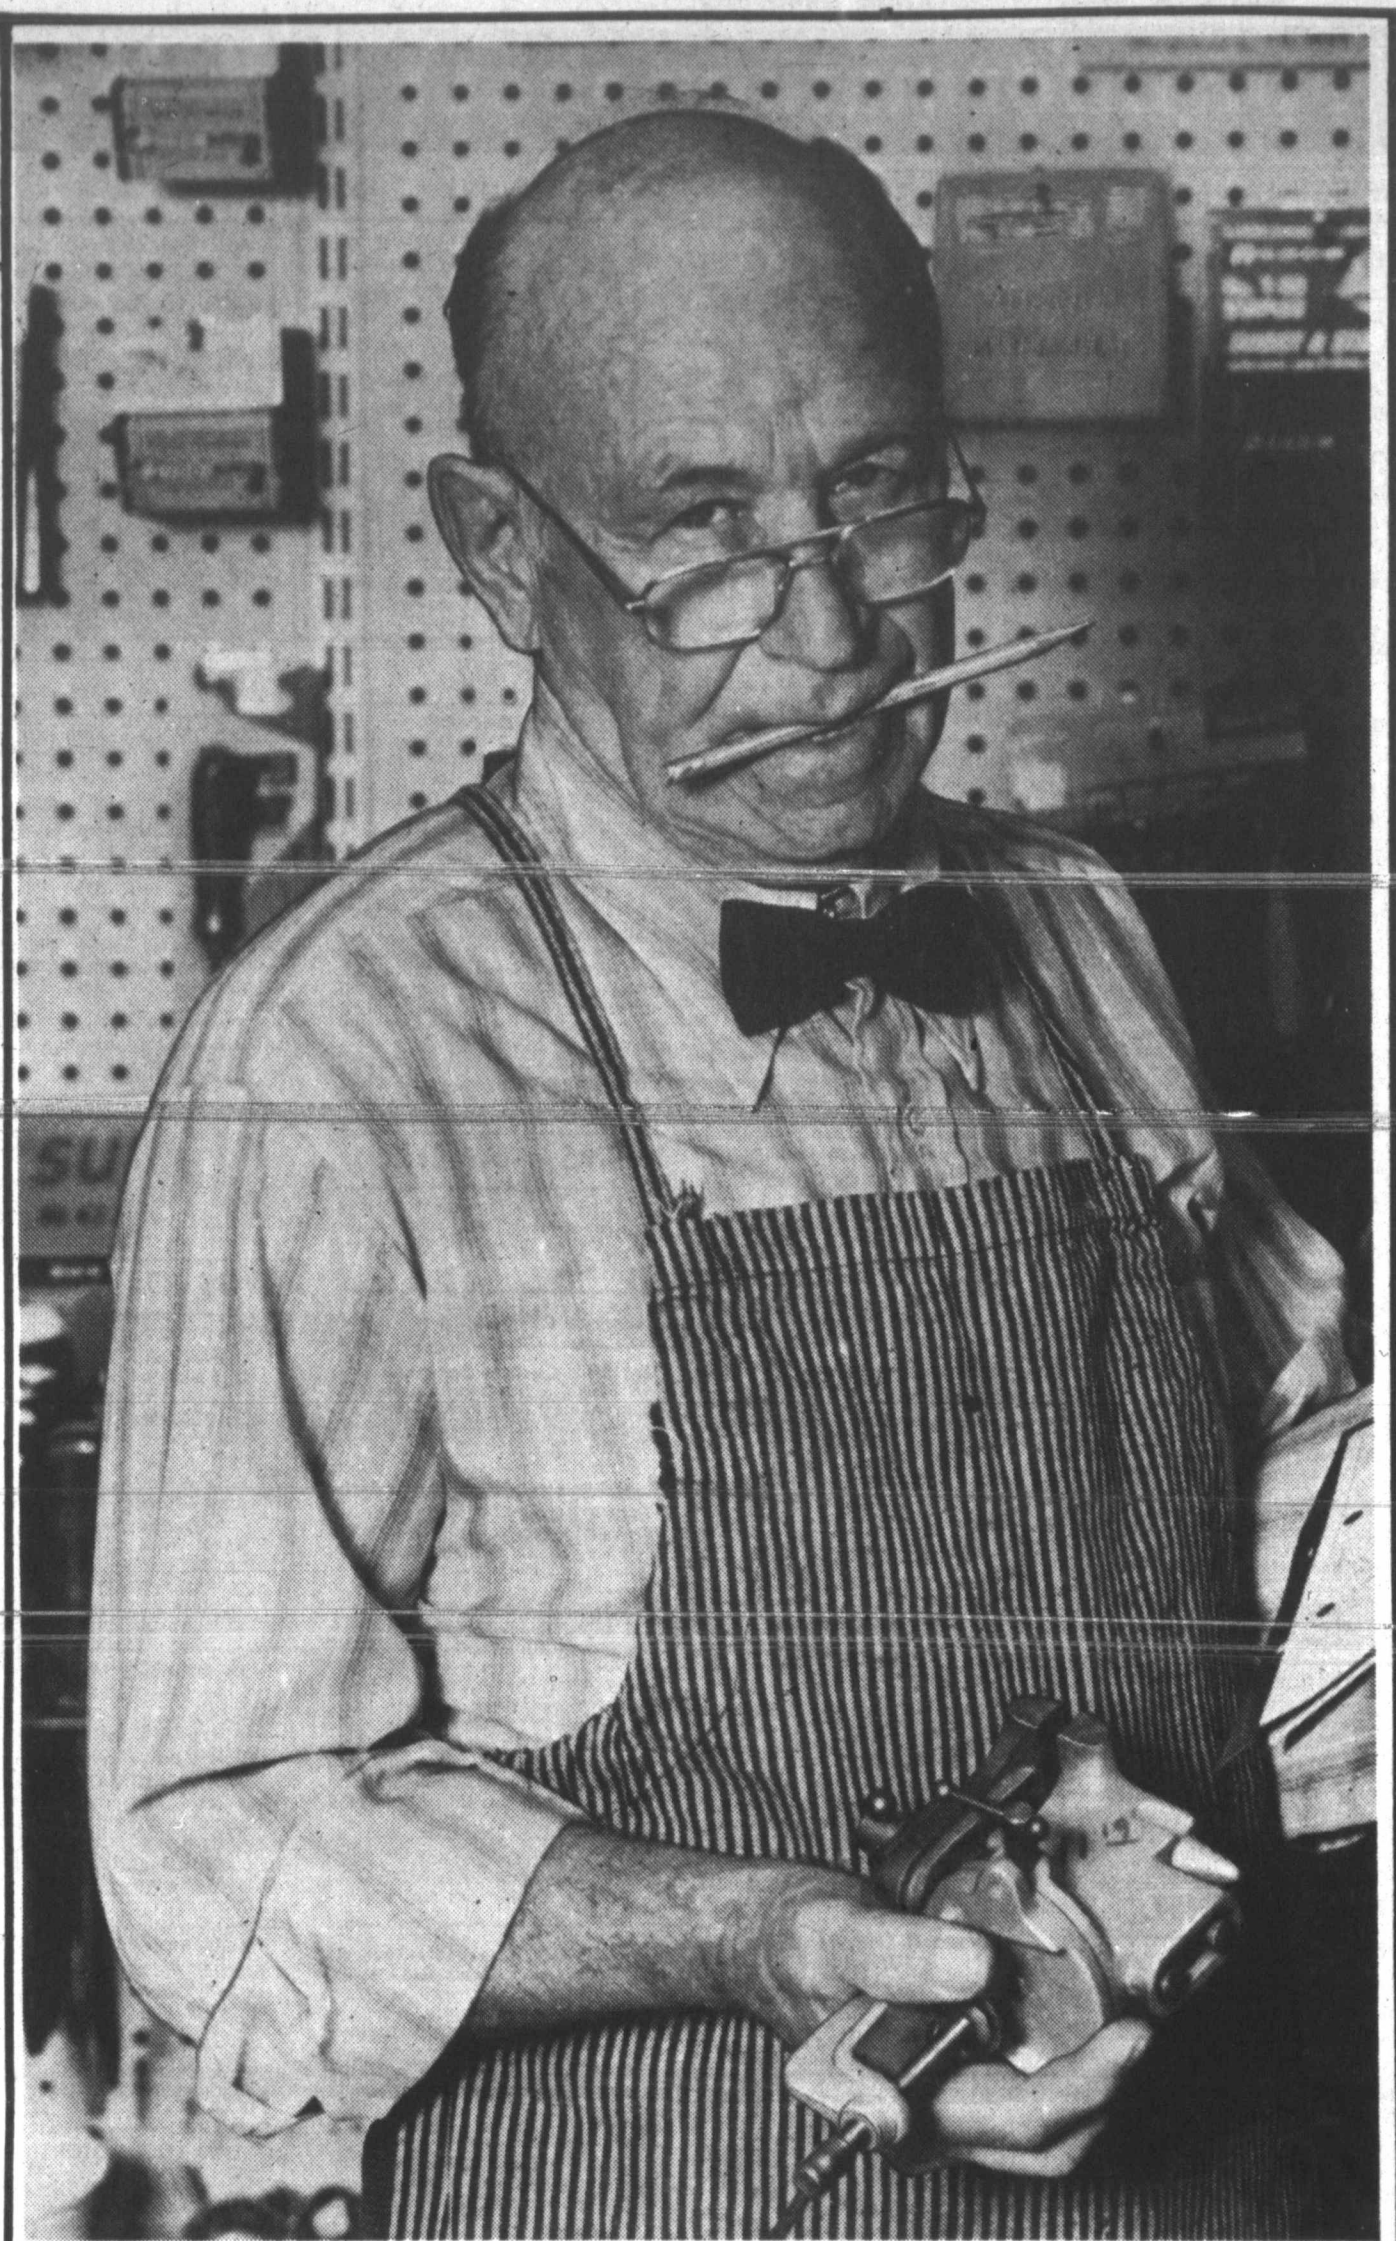

An aide said Mrs. Carter's previous distance record was about two miles.

Worth noting, perhaps, is the fact that the run from Camp David to the falls is mostly downhill. The Carters were driven back up the mountain.

While on Sapelo Island, Carter plans to jog, sun, swim, fish and play tennis. There is one so-so asphalt tennis court at the University of Georgia Marine Institute where he is staying.

The president and his wife are renting quarters in a large, old house that has been converted into a dormitory for institute students, who will be enjoying their own Easter holiday while the Carters are in residence.

A presidential advance man who inspected the Sapelo Island "White House" likened it to a European-style youth hostel.

Playboy being sued by agent

BROWNSVILLE, Gtexas (AP) — Playboy Enterprises, Inc., publishers of Playboy magazine, is being sued for $350,000 by a former U.S. customs agent along the Texas-Mexico border.

The libel suit claims the magazine's February issue said Thelma Meyers Torres was convicted of planting marijuana in cars crossing the border.

Although the article does not name the woman, the suit states, Mrs. Torres was the only female ever to be employed as an agent there.

Residents of the area therefore would be able to identify her, the suit claims.

A Word to the Wise...

CLASSIFIED ADS REALLY MEASURE UP

When you're in business, the more people that know about you... the more business you'll have. Don't sell our Classifieds short. They can prove a vital selling force for you. Other advertising mediums just don't measure up to the sizable audience and quick response our Want Ads can bring you... and at the most reasonable prices.
