Apology lacking Ford: Pardon explanation not clear enough

NEW YORK (AP)—Former President Gerald Ford says he was surprised by the negative reaction to his pardon of Richard Nixon, and he blames himself for not explaining better why he granted the pardon.

"I should have emphasized far greater the necessity that I, as president, spend all my time working on the domestic and international problems of the president representing 220 million people," Ford said in a television interview.

Instead, Ford said, he was devoting 25 percent of his time on the legal matters, the tapes, the documents that were in controversy as far as President Nixon was concerned.

Ford also said Nixon's resignation from the presidency "would have been far, far better accepted" if Nixon had apologized to the American people for the Watergate scandal.

The interview was broadcast on Sunday at 10 p.m. EST on NBC-TV's "Weekend" show. Ford said it irked him that some people believe a pardon deal was made with Nixon before he stepped down.

"Unfortunately, some people still don't believe it, but as long as my conscience is clear I have to accept what others may feel," he said.

Ford said that he believed that Nixon's stated reason for resigning—that he had lost necessary support in Congress—was "a highly technical argument."

"I believe... his decision would have been far, far better accepted if he had been contrite, admitted mistakes, errors, and apologized to the American people," Ford said.

He said he had no second thoughts about granting the pardon.

Ford has said that he does not intend to run for president in 1980. "But if circumstances did develop where there was no consensus say in the spring of 1980, and I felt that I could be constructive to the party and to the country, I would not duck the responsibility," he said.

Strickland tells of Davis case action

ABILENE, Texas (AP)—A prosecutor in the Cullen Davis murder conspiracy case said Saturday he seized the millionaire defendant's secret divorce records because District Judge John Barron intended to order them sealed forever.

Assistant District Attorney Jack Strickland of Fort Worth said Barron, before removing himself from the Fort Worth industrialist's divorce trial, had successfully muzzled the attorneys, their employees and the press.

He said Barron intended to upgrade a temporary injunction to a permanent order prohibiting anyone from ever discussing or making public the "in camera" or secret testimony and exhibits.

"That was the straw that broke the camel's back," Strickland told the Associated Press broadcasters' convention. Strickland struck quickly and with no advance warning in seizing the records.

"The district attorney's office subpoenaed the in camera testimony and subpoenaed all the secret exhibits. That, of course, was when Judge Barron had his temper fit," Strickland said.

"We discussed the fact that we were butting heads with a district judge, and that's not a particularly pleasant thing to have to do," Strickland said. "But we decided we had no alternative. Not in my wildest imagination could I have expected Judge Barron to react the way he did."

Barron, a retired Bryan judge, threatened at the time to declare a mistrial in the divorce proceedings and called Strickland "a wet-beared, arrogant, fool prosecutor."

Strickland contended there was no legitimate reason to keep the divorce records from the public.

Three days after Barron's tirade, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported that the judge twice had conducted secret meetings in his hotel room with Davis.

Barron then declared a mistrial and withdrew from the case. A second judge took the proceedings to completion and, on Friday, awarded Priscilla Davis $3.4 million.

"The district attorney's office also was aware, although Judge Barron did not know we were aware, that the secret meetings had been going on in his hotel room with Cullen, as well as some other activities which we considered to be questionable."

Floods kill three in San Antonio; Thousands flee

By The Associated Press
Thousands fled their homes Saturday as the rampaging Pearl River bore down on the small city of Columbia, Miss., and rushing floodwaters threatened property and lives in Texas, North Dakota and Minnesota.

The high water claimed four lives in Texas—three persons swept to their deaths in a car by a flash flood in San Antonio late Friday, and a Houston boy who disappeared in the churning waters of a bayou as he reached for a floating football.

Mississippi civil defense officials estimated statewide damage at nearly $700 million. In the state capital of Jackson, a waste water treatment plant was damaged to the tune of $62 million, authorities said.

Some 3,500 to 4,000 people abandoned their homes in the northern sections of Columbia, a city of 8,000 in Marion County, and worried officials watched clouds darken. The Mississippi Highway Patrol said 6,000 people in all had evacuated their homes in the county.

"I was afraid of that," said Jim Thornhill, Marion County Civil Defense director, as he scanned bulletins predicting the possibility of 3 to 6 inches of rain Saturday and Sunday in the Pearl River basin. "It's going to ruin us," he said. Light rain fell Saturday afternoon.

The National Weather Service predicted a record crest of 29 feet, 12 feet above flood stage, on the Pearl at Columbia on Sunday.

Water stood knee-deep in neighborhoods within two blocks of the Marion County Courthouse on the town square. Health officials said they feared that the flood could sabotage the city's sandbagged sewage pumping station.

About 30 miles upstream at Monticello the river began to recede. It stood at 33.5 feet Saturday morning, down from the crest of 34.1 feet on Friday.

Late Friday, highway officials carved a trench through Highway 98, the main road into Columbia from the east, to free floodwaters dammed by the road. The waters gushed across hundreds of acres of farmland to the south.

Main roads to the south and east of the city were closed and roadblocks ringed the town.

Cleanup operations at Jackson, where 17,000 people were forced from their homes, continued Saturday. Jackson Mayor Dale Danks charged that the National Weather Service and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers gave inadequate predictions of the flood.

Two Jackson men were charged with looting, burglary and larceny Saturday after police arrested them outside a flood supply store. Police Capt. Gary McGee said the arrests were the first on looting charges since the flooding began. The men were held on bonds of $500,000 each.

Heavy thunderstorms rolled across much of south Texas early Saturday, accompanied by near-hurricane force winds and hail. Strong currents in the San Jacinto River forced authorities to permit only one-way traffic on a one-mile stretch of the Houston Ship Channel.

Damage along the San Jacinto will reach $100 million, according to Dick Hawkins, Harris County flood control district coordinator.

Teachers to fight for pay increase

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP)—Criticizing a "reckless campaign to destroy our schools" by Gov. Bill Clements, representatives of Texas' 15 largest urban school districts announced plans Saturday for a grassroots campaign to battle for a 9.8 percent pay hike for teachers in the state.

Rita Potter, president of the Corpus Christi Classroom Teachers Association, was appointed coordinator of the statewide political campaign.

A drive will begin Monday to gather signatures on petitions to Clements asking him to support the higher raises, she said. Teachers' rallies will be held, and a candlelight vigil will be staged outside the governor's mansion "at an appropriate time," she added.

Clements has said teachers should receive only a 5.1 percent pay increase, the same as state employees, and the House Appropriations Committee has made that recommendation, at a cost of $315 million over the next two years.

The full House defied Clements on Friday, however, and voted to raise teachers' pay by 7 percent, in keeping with President Carter's voluntary wage guidelines.

"Our efforts are designed," Mrs. Potter said, "to impress on members of the Legislature that we will support any effort they decide to make to prevent the governor from continuing his reckless campaign to destroy our schools."

That could include mobilizing for the first override in 40 years of a gubernatorial veto in Texas, she said.

Mrs. Potter said she does not know what kind of a compromise can be worked out in the Legislature.

Flood fighter quits battle

EAST GRAND FORKS, Minn. (AP)—Rob Monley says his fight is over with the surging Red Lake River, now spilling four-feet deep into the basement of his duplex home.

"This is it, guy. This is the last flood for me. I'm moving to higher ground," Monley said Saturday.

Monley's home, in a low-lying residential area in this northwestern Minnesota community, has been flooded before. Now it is among homes and businesses threatened by high water in Minnesota and North Dakota.

The river is 200 feet away, but the rising water has spilled over its banks and is draining over sandbags piled four feet high.

"Last night my pump went out," said Monley. "I had it down to four inches inside the dikes, but now it's four feet in the basement. It's too late now to get another pump ad get it out."

A POLICEMAN mans a standing watch as residents of a residential area of the southwest part of Grand Forks, N.D., were evacuated from their homes because of flooding from the English Coulee Saturday. Floods continued to plague the southern United States also, killing three persons in San Antonio and forcing thousands of residents in Mississippi to leave their homes for higher ground.

Dividends or profit?

Business leaders were quick to answer when federal "inflation fighters" condemned industry for large percentage increases in profits. Administration officials had a field day as they banded percentage figures without equating them with any base for logical comparison.

To quote an increased percentage without stating the previous amount of profit or percent of net profit used to figure the increase, is to quote a meaningless figure.

One company might have nearly a thousand percent increase in profit and yet its net profit could be way below average for industry. Another might have only a five percent profit increase and be over the national average for all business.

Without knowing the exact amount of profit or the percent of net profit, there is no base by which anyone can figure what a percentage increase entails.

Officials who project such "percentage increase" figures can most certainly mislead the public. For many a reader will take that figure as the net profit percentage for the business concerned.

When official Washington let loose its blast against business, one percentage increase figure mentioned was 126 percent. It was not long until we heard a staff associate say, "I wonder what company it was that made a profit of 126 percent." Of course, that statement was pretty far out since if a company made 126 percent it would have to have made 26 percent more than all it had taken in. It could not achieve that even if it had no costs of any kind in doing business.

Within all the furor which was started and abetted by the administration was one other factor which was a gross injustice to business generally. Without bothering to check, officials equated the higher percentage of profit figures to "price rises" and even went so far as to use the term a "catastrophe" in relation to holding the line on prices.

There was no connection established between the "increased profit percentages" and prices of products. An assumption was made that guidelines were jumped before any analysis was made. At any rate, the whole silly business was just another chapter in the continuing saga of diverting attention away from the real cause of inflation: printing press money added to the economy with nothing to back it up.

We like the way the Wall Street Journal summed up the latest blast on profits: "If profits were really so great, the stock market would be booming, the economy would be rapidly accumulating capital and productivity growth would be rising rather than falling. The mismeasurement of profits causes real enough economic problems without being employed for political demagoguery. A responsible government would take greater pains to put profits in their proper perspective."

Inflation has been and is a tremendous disruptive factor in every area of our economy. One of many adverse side-effects is that usual accounting methods fail to register inflation's effect on depreciation, replacement of facilities and inventories. This has caused the overpayment of taxes because of overstatement of profits.

According to the Journal, "The incompatibility of traditional accounting practices with inflation raised the 1977 effective tax rate on real capital income to 66 percent, far above the statutory 48 percent rate. Since inflation was greater in 1978 so was the overpayment of taxes, due to the overstatement of profits."

For the average American investor in this nation's industry, inflation is running away ahead of his dividends (profit). Whether he invests for dividends or for interest he is on the losing end. It may be just a little difficult for our great leaders to convince him that he is the recipient of bloated profits.

What about the warranty

For American firms anxious to keep a step ahead in the race to do business with China, a New York importer has come up with the perfect new item of office equipment.

It is a Chinese typewriter, the real thing from Shanghai and equipped with 2,500 characters, presumably sufficient to record all the steel mills, hotels, soft drinks and other Western wonders the mainlanders are so eager to buy.

Available for $1,750, it is capable of writing forward, backward, up and down. At that price, that would seem about the least that ought to be expected of it.

Political competition takes over economic competition

By BERNARD H. SIEGAN

In times past the success of business was dependent upon its acceptability in the economic marketplace. Generally, entrepreneurs who best satisfied consumers prospered, while the less efficient fared poorly, or were forced out of business. Increasingly, this economic competition is being replaced by political competition. Losers in the economic battles seek relief from legislators who have the power to make them winners. One law can offset a hundred inefficiencies.

Numerous examples can be cited. The one I wish to discuss today is the situation in optometry, the subject of a recent U.S. Supreme Court case. Practitioners in that field divide up into "professional" and "commercial" factions. The latter emphasize advertising, volume and speed of service. One organization may own or franchise a number of outlets under a trade name. The "professionals" do not usually rely on modern selling methods, but seem to employ ably, current political techniques.

The competition between the two factions frequently manifests itself in the state legislatures and the courts. In February of this year, the U.S. Supreme Court sustained in Friedman v. Rogers the constitutionality of a Texas statute that adversely affected the commercial optometrists. This case reflects on our politicized economy, and the position of the federal courts and its interference with economic liberties are at stake.

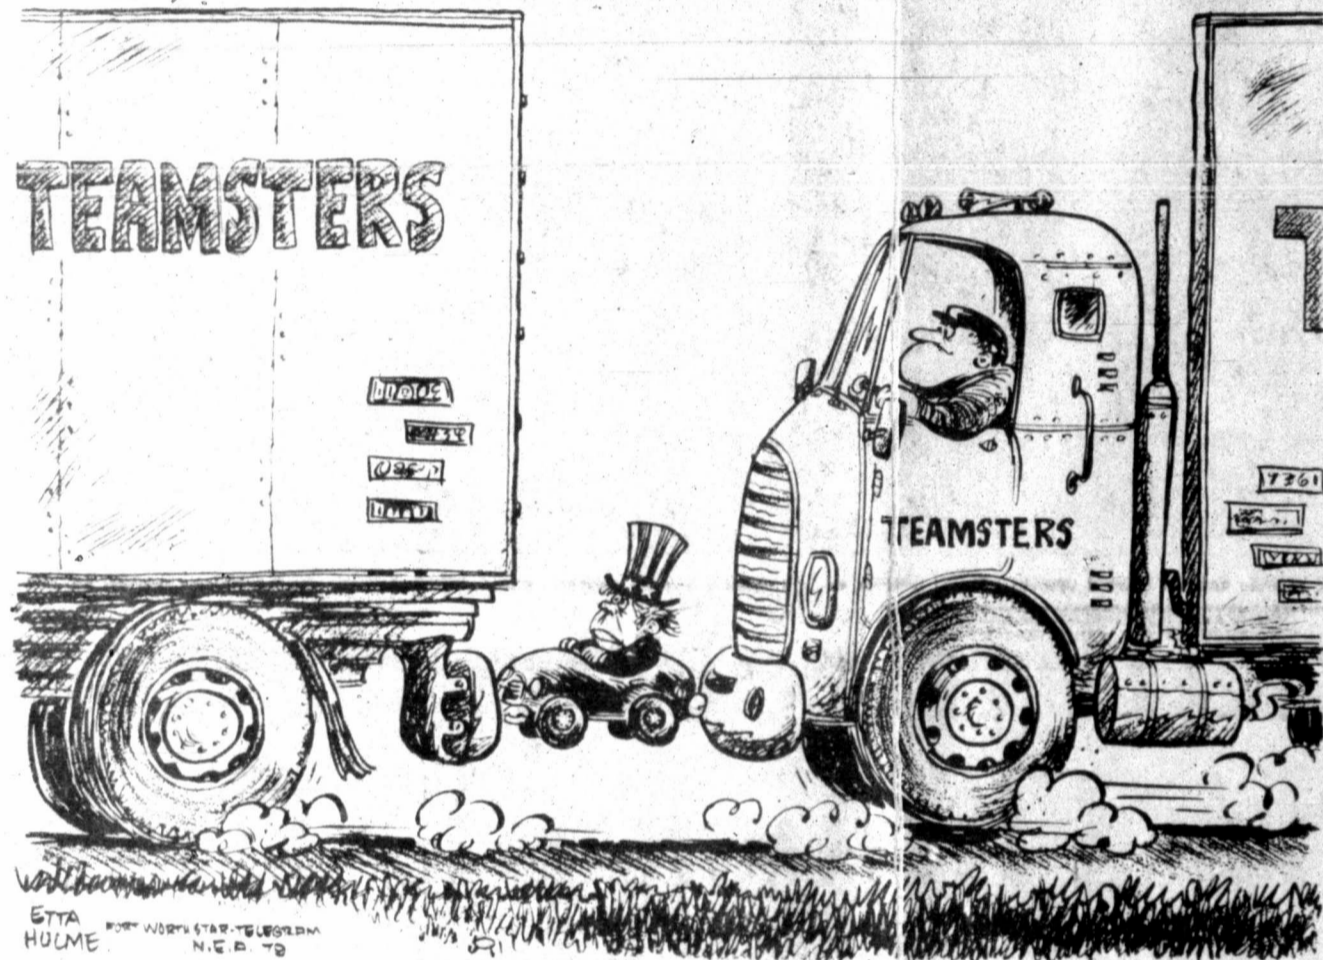

The Texas law prohibits the practice of optometry under a trade name, and requires that four of the six persons on the Texas Optometry Board, which regulates optometry practices in the state, be members of a certain professional organization from which commercial optometrists are excluded. The complainant in the case was N. Jay Rogers, a commercial optometrist, who with associates is connected with more than 100 optometry offices. Rogers has used and desires to continue using the trade name Texas State Optical or TSO. The Texas Senior Citizens Association (TSCA), a consumer group, intervened in the suit on behalf of Rogers. TSCA believes its members are best served when commercial optometrists are allowed to pursue their business interests.

The high court had little difficulty in denying Rogers' complaint that the organization of the optometry board was unfair to commercial optometrists because a majority were members of the other faction. The federal courts generally uphold purely economic restrictions, unless they are, as a wit once observed, written by the legislature in a state of lunacy. According to Justice Lewis F. Powell, who wrote the opinion, the Constitution requires only that an optometrist have a fair and impartial hearing in the event disciplinary proceedings are conducted against him by the Board.

Deceptive And Misleading

The more complex legal issue relates to the barring of trade names. The TSCA contended that this ban violated the right of its members to receive information about the availability and reliability of optometric services. Only Justices Harry Blackmun and Thurgood Marshall adequately deal with the dishonest ones? The more likely explanation is that the restriction reflects the political persuasiveness of the professional optometrists. Legislatures are political bodies, and much of their actions can be explained in terms of political realities. Because of the Supreme Court's position, economic competition will remain beholden to the politicians rather than to the consumers.

There is a political chess game going on between Jimmy Carter and Sen. Ted Kennedy (D-Mass.), and sick people are the pawns.

Nobody likes the high cost of hospitalization so Kennedy, on that issue, may try to capture the White House for himself.

"Put a lid on hospital costs," says Sen. Kennedy.

Hospitals on a diet

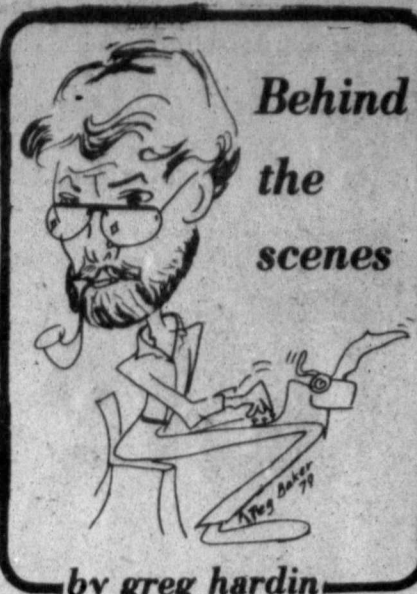

the expense of the efficient ones. But worse, further regulation means more regulators.

The one wasteful, counterproductive extravagance which hospitals have not been able to correct is the average $38.86 per patient per day which is added to your hospital bill just to pay the cost of compliance with the already immense overlay of federal, state and local regulations.

And now the politicians, to get at one another, are willing to add to that cost.

This week I was talking with Joe Gidden from the Southwestern Public Service and he tells me that I was wrong about the utility companies not wanting the rate control in Austin.

Joe told me that SPS just wants to have one boss.

"We don't care if the cities set the rate or if Austin sets it. We just want to have one piece to answer to," Joe said.

Well, there are a few people around that agree with this statement but there are a bunch of people that don't.

After talking with several city fathers they don't feel that is a fair statement.

The people in Pampa feel that the large utility companies do not want the municipalities in control of the rate the companies charge to their customers.

In a man on the street poll of about twenty Pampans most felt that the utility companies are not doing what they should be.

"They keep hiking the rates. I don't mind anyone making a profit but the cost of utilities is nearly unbearable," one Pampa business man said.

Joe told me that the cost was being driven up by the fact that the utility companies (or at least SPS) adds the cost of working for two bosses onto the rates they charge their customers.

It is only fair to pass along any extra cost. No business likes their profit of margin cut into.

There are some deep dark secrets somewhere in this mess though, and I fully intend to get the bottom line on what is going on with the rate routine that is being played on us poor consumers.

I can't help feeling that if it was just a simple matter of wanting just one boss that everyone would quickly agree and end the constant running battle.

I also think that John Q. Public has a right to know what is going on and should be told by the city officials.

If there is nothing kept in the dark then people don't get in quite so much trouble.

This won't be the last column on the subject of utilities I am sure but we hope that people start to get on the band wagon for whatever side they are with and let us all find out what is going on.

Primary bill headed for showdown

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A voice vote of the House Friday apparently guarantees that the tough issue of a presidential primary will become a last-minute legislative issue along with state spending, school finance and tax relief. At the same time, Gov. Bill Clements, who says he has not yet made up his mind, warned that he will not announce his stand on presidential primaries until such a bill reaches his desk. He added Friday that "I think the people of Texas want a presidential primary." Earlier in the week, Sen. Walter Mengden, R-Houston, was quoted as saying Clements would veto any bill that called for a presidential primary on a separate date from the May primary elections. Clements refused to confirm Mengden's statement. "I am positively not going to announce a veto on this subject prior to the time it gets to my desk," he said. "That goes for any special sessions too." House members approved on voice vote, which means their votes are not recorded, an amendment to their version of the general appropriation bill that says no state money can be used to finance a presidential primary unless it is held at the same time as the regular May primary election. Some representatives said they could locate only about 40 votes, out of the 150, against the amendment. This apparently was aimed at efforts of Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Bill Clayton to have Texas hold a presidential primary in March, and become a national opinion molder, before the regular May primary elections. If the House amendment is accepted by the Senate, a separate primary is dead. Otherwise, the House amendment will be one of many differences between the two chambers to be settled by a 10-member conference committee near the session end. Other conference committees likely will be trying to iron out Senate-House differences on school finance, tax relief and other major issues. Clements said he had talked with Hobby and Clayton this week about the presidential primary question. "There wasn't any money in the bill for it anyway," Clayton said after the House vote. "I don't think we will know what the sentiment is on it (a presidential primary bill) until we get it out on the floor and vote on it."

Clayton said he was continuing to consult legislative leaders in Arkansas, Oklahoma and Louisiana about holding separate presidential primaries at the same time in March, ahead of the regular primary elections.

Community Chorale concert scheduled for this afternoon

The Pampa Community Chorale will present its inaugural concert at 3 this afternoon at the Pampa Middle School. The 35-member chorale is under the direction of John Woickowski.

Presented by the Pampa Fine Arts Association, the concert will feature a recital by Woickowski in addition to the chorale.

The chorale will present seven selections, including Handel's

"Glory to God in the Highest" and "Gloria in Excelsis" from Vivaldi's "Gloria."

Woickowski, a baritone, will sing five selections, including Handel's "Arm, Arm Ye Brave" and "Soliloquy" from the Rogers and Hammerstein musical "Carousel."

The group was formed earlier this year and expects to present a number of concerts throughout the coming months.

Gun control battle launched

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gun control advocates, frustrated by President Carter's lack of action, are turning to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy to launch another battle for tougher federal restrictions on handguns.

Kennedy aides say the Massachusetts Democrat plans to introduce a bill that would ban the manufacture and sale of the small, easily concealed handguns used most often in gun crimes.

Although details of the Kennedy proposal are still being drafted, the major thrust resembles legislation drawn up by the Carter administration more than a year ago and now virtually abandoned.

Carter promised during his election campaign to seek new legislation to curb the proliferation of handguns, despite vigorous opposition from the National Rifle Association.

"We thought the president was ideally suited for this because he's a Southerner and he's a hunter. But now we have the situation of a president afraid to act," Charles Orasin, executive vice president of Handgun Control Inc., said late last week. The group is a private organization that advocates tougher gun restrictions.

Opera singer gives command performance

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — An opera singer says narcotics officers aimed a gun at him and told him to sing "Ave Maria" at police headquarters after he was picked up while waiting for a trolley.
 "I was told if I had any trouble with the high notes, the gun would help me," Mario D. Rice told reporters.
 Rice, 39, has filed a complaint with the district attorney's office about the alleged March 30 incident. Police say Rice was taken into custody in a drug investigation, but no charges have been filed.
 The police Internal Affairs Bureau is investigating, and a report is expected this week, Capt. Sam Levan said Saturday.
 Rice discussed the incident Friday at a news conference called by Alphonso Deal, a former police officer and head of the North Philadelphia Action branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

MARY ADAIR, director of nurses of the Pampa Nursing Home, was given roses and notes of appreciation Friday by fellow employees for her working dedication. (Pampa News photo)

Weather Texas weather

By The Associated Press
 The heavy flooding that left four persons dead in Southeast Texas and forced hundreds to flee their water-logged homes, has subsided although forecasters say scattered showers may continue until Sunday evening.
 Hardin County Judge Ray Martin said Saturday he would ask President Carter to declare that county a disaster area. He said water rising in Pine Island Bayou at a rate of one inch per hour kept between 100 and 125 families from their homes.
 And waters in Village Creek, north of Kountze, began to rage Saturday, posing an additional threat to several dozen homes.
 "I would say we are looking at two to three days more of rising water at Village Creek," Martin said. "Pine Island Bayou should begin to drain some by Monday."
 A flash flood watch was issued for the Trans Pecos and Big Bend areas of Southwest Texas through Saturday night and radar indicated a line of scattered thundershowers in South Texas and along the Coast.
 A San Antonio woman, her infant son and her companion drowned early Saturday when their car was swept off a road on that city's north side during flash flooding.
 The victims were identified as Rosa Rosales, 25; Olivia Nino, 25; and her one-year-old son, Eric Nino. San Antonio police Lt. Walter Hall said the three were found in their car which had washed about 100 feet from the road.

SHOWERS ARE FORECAST Sunday for an area stretching from northern California into the Pacific Northwest, according to the National Weather Service. Showers are also expected for a large portion of the South and Gulf Coast areas. (AP Laserphoto)

Town clears out for tourists

GALILEE, R.I. (AP) — Soon the cables along the two streets of this village will come down and the fishermen will have to look elsewhere for a place to mend their nets. The tourists are coming.
 "For ten weeks in summer this place gets pretty hectic with tourists," Wayne Durfee said. "The fishermen are understanding, though. They know the other 42 weeks belong to them."
 Just so. White beaches and isolation are certain summertime lures, but so far the vacationing multitudes have left little evidence of their annual assault more lasting than a footprint in the sand.
 What gives this village its character, and has for generations, are muscular boats moored to work-worn docks, gulls wheeling above, nets stretched in the streets, the heady smell of the sea and its bounty, lusty men in rubber boots and slickers cursing the weather over hot coffee at Wayne Durfee's tables.
 Galilee, a snug little refuge on a wind-buffed coast, is a fishing village as true to tradition as its biblical namesake, and Wayne Durfee, for one, wants to keep it that way.
 He is not, himself, a fisherman. Wayne, along with his brother, Richard, and their mother, Edna, runs the village restaurant.
 It is there that the 40 or so Galilee fishermen, druggers, as they call themselves, gather with their crews at sunup — arising, by habit, as early ashore as at sea — to learn the news and spin yarns and keep alive the lore of the sea.
 Wayne knows, for instance, the fisherman's various superstitions:
 Don't whistle; don't mention pig on board; don't shave; don't allow a man with a black bag aboard, much less a woman; don't leave port on a Friday. Violation brings high winds and rough seas; fishing is a hard enough life when it is calm.
 "Fishermen complain about their work, its hazards, their long absences from home," Durfee said, "but they wouldn't change it."
 Wayne Durfee had a boyhood dream of becoming a fisherman but it didn't work out that way.

ALFALFA WEEVILS:

Alfalfa growers need to keep a check on the progress and development of alfalfa weevils. The larvae of the alfalfa weevil cause the most damage to alfalfa. The larvae start feeding on new leaves and buds at the tops of the stems and then work on down to older leaves. Their feeding skeletonizes the leaves. Damaged leaves dry fast and the field takes on a grayish or whitish cast.

The young larvae are yellow with a shiny black head. Full-grown larvae are about 3-8 inches long. Their heads are black, bodies are green and they have a white stripe running down the middle of their backs.

The adult weevils spread their egg laying over several weeks and the larvae feed for 3 to 4 weeks so damage occurs generally during the first and second cuttings.

Chemical control is recommended when 25-30 percent of the terminals are damaged or when 25 or more larvae per square foot are found.

When larvae become abundant a week to 10 days before the crop would normally be cut, it may be advantageous to cut early instead of spraying.

Always cut plants clean and close. Remove all hay from fields as soon as possible. Alfalfa left standing and hay left on the ground offer the weevils food and shelter. Sunlight kills many of the larvae and new adults will leave clean-cut fields. If larvae are still abundant in new regrowth after cutting, then chemical control should be initiated. See MP-1014 Texas Guide for Controlling Insects on Legumes and Grasses for insecticides and rates of application. Insecticides which are recommended are Guthion, Supracide, Sevin, Furadan, Diazinon, Malathion, Methoxychlor, Methyl Parathion, and Parathion.

LAWN FERTILIZATION:

Adequate attention, maintenance and a proper fertilizer program are necessary for attractive lawns throughout the summer. Too frequently, homeowners fail to utilize the proper kind and amount of fertilizer on their lawns.

Soil testing will help you understand the fertility status of your lawn. A soil test reveals the plant nutrient levels, salt content, and reaction (pH) of your soil. A soil test can be obtained through the Extension Soil Testing Laboratory in Lubbock for $2 per sample. For suggestions on soil sampling and mailing, contact the County Extension Agent for Form D-495, "Soil Sample Information Sheet for Lawns, Gardens and Flower Beds." The following suggestions should be helpful to homeowners who have not been able to obtain a soil test.

For established lawns, if you have used a "complete" fertilizer containing nitrogen and phosphorus for several years; then, prior to spring growth, broadcast 6 pounds (6 pints) of ammonium nitrate per 1,000 square feet of area when the grass is dry. After the fertilizer is applied, irrigate your lawn with one inch of water (630 gallons per 1,000 square feet) to move the nitrogen down into the root zone. To maintain desired color and vigor, apply an additional 4 to 5 pounds per 1,000 square feet of ammonium nitrate at 30 to 40-day intervals, if needed. After three to four years, begin the season by applying 12 pounds of 16-20-0 instead of the ammonium nitrate; then, during the growing season, apply the maintenance rate of ammonium nitrate (4 to 5 pounds per 1,000 square feet at 30 to 40-day intervals), if needed.

For establishment of new lawns, apply 12 pounds of 16-20-0 per 1,000 square feet and work 3 to 4 inches deep into the soil prior to seeding or sprigging. After several months when the grass plants are growing vigorously, fertilize as for an established lawn.

Uniform distribution of fertilizer will prevent unsightly streaking and can be accomplished by using an applicator which can be purchased or rented. If an applicator is used, close the outlet to a narrow setting. Make several trips in different directions over the lawn to obtain uniform coverage. The applicator can be stored between uses and will last for years if it is washed out, dried and oiled after each use. It should not be used to distribute insecticides or herbicides.

Iron deficiency is a plant nutritional problem, particularly where lime (caliche) content is high or where previous phosphorus application has been excessive. Obtain L-435, "Iron Chlorosis", from the County Extension Office for symptoms and control measures. CAUTION: Wait until good growing weather before applying iron because bermuda is sensitive to low temperatures and will normally outgrow this condition.

FREE BRUCELLOSIS VACCINATION PROGRAM:

Texas cattlemen may now have their heifer calves vaccinated with Strain-19 brucellosis vaccine free of charge.

The vaccination program is voluntary and is conducted through participating, accredited veterinarians. These veterinarians will be able to obtain the brucellosis vaccine free and will be reimbursed for their services from state and federal funds on completing a vaccination chart.

Only eligible female calves will be vaccinated and will be identified by an ear tag and tattoo. Female calves of dairy breeds from two through six months of age and beef breeds two through ten months are considered eligible.

All the cattlemen has to do is call his local veterinarian and schedule a time for the vaccinations. This vaccination program does not include vaccinating calves at livestock markets.

There are several benefits from the vaccination program, including these:

1. Properly immunized heifers will be more resistant to the organism causing brucellosis.
2. Officially vaccinated calves should sell for higher prices if purchased for replacements.
3. The more animals that are vaccinated, the quicker the spread of brucellosis can be controlled, thereby minimizing the threat of quarantine.

For more information about this program for your herd, contact your local veterinarian.

Tomorrow's war taking shape today

WASHINGTON (NEA) - Historically, military technology has progressed in quantum leaps. First there was the stone, perhaps, then the club, fire, the lance, the bow, gunpowder and the internal combustion engine. The last major breakthrough was undoubtedly the development of the atomic bomb.

Now the world may be on the verge of the next revolutionary jump in battlefield capabilities. And the United States is proposing to lead the plunge. If the administration has its way, nearly $14 billion will be spent on weapons investigation and evaluation next year, $1 billion more than in 1979.

What's more, a thick slice of the increase will apply to exotic weapons research, those of the mind-boggling Star Trekian variety. The Defense Department's Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA) is scheduled to spend $462 million in fiscal year 1980, a sharp 62 percent increase from just two years ago.

The DARPA activity is, of course, classified. Therefore, its precise work is known only to a handful of militarists and government officers. Yet the researchers candidly admit there is nothing secret about their goals; they say they want to develop weapons so dreadful as to make warfare unthinkable.

At present, for example, the scientists say they are working on fuel air explosives (FAE). They have already made a bomb of this sort, and now want artillery shells. An FAE weapon vaporizes fuel over a wide area, explodes and creates a concussion kill of 300 pounds of overpressure per square inch.

And that's only one item in the scientists' briefcases. Researchers say warriors of the future will utilize sensors and infrared devices to strip away darkness, and kinetic energy shells to pierce any armor on earth. Soldiers may even use new forms of microscopic life to despoil the enemy's potentials.

On land, the concept of massed armies may one day give way to small, swift, highly mobile mechanized forces. Two-man tanks may wage the major battles, or the fighting may be left to armored automatons controlled remotely from distant command posts. Machine vs. machine may be the war of tomorrow.

DARPA authorities say the machines will be vulnerable, as are people, but they will be superior fighters. The tiny tanks of the future, as example, will be equipped with laser guns to assure accuracy; and where lasers will not work, the weapons may employ contrivances to shoot at the enemy's heat or sound.

Barnhart to step down from party job

By SUSAN STOLER
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The man who will head the state Republican Party's effort to swing Texas behind the 1980 GOP presidential nominee took no formal part Saturday in the party's state executive committee meeting.

Chet Upham, a Mineral Wells natural gas director, watched from a back row as Ray Barnhart conducted probably his last meeting as state GOP chairman.

Barnhart has been nominated by Gov. Bill Clements as a state highway commissioner and will resign the party post upon Senate confirmation. Upham is Clements' man to succeed the former Pasadena legislator.

Upham is president of the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association (TIPRO) and a longtime party activist.

He believes his selection as chairman-designate came largely because Clements and other top elected Republican officials think he can mend a party left frayed by the 1976 presidential-battle between Ronald Reagan and Gerald Ford.

"Preparing for the 1980 election is our top goal now," said Upham during a meeting break. His wife, Virginia, is an executive committee member.

"I'll be neutral and the party will be neutral during the 1980 presidential primary," he said. Upham supported Ford in 1976.

"I think 1980 looks really great if we can keep the party structure together," he said.

The Mineral Wells native says his first political activity was in 1948, when he supported Thomas Dewey for president. Since then, he has been an executive committee member, Palo Pinto County Republican chairman, state finance chairman and a delegate to the 1972 national convention.

Clements to stick by promise

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says he will stick by his pledge to veto any bill passed by the Legislature to raise home mortgage interest, despite complaints from home builders.

"I hear no hue and cry from the electorate that they cannot find any houses to buy," Clements told a news conference Friday. "On the other hand there are a lot of people out there against raising the interest rate — about 85-90 percent according to a poll just made."

He said the poll was paid out of "my political funds," and did not cost the state anything.

Clements said he did not know the results of the poll until after the announced Monday he would veto pending legislative proposals to up home interest rates from 10 to 12 percent.

Published reports Friday quoted Dallas home builders and mortgage bankers as they they can not get mortgage money from out-of-state investors because of Texas' 10 percent interest limit. The reports said national mortgage bankers were channeling million of mortgage dollars out of the state.

"I haven't talked to builders in Dallas and Houston but I have not received any communication they are in any crisis situation," he told a news conference.

Two die in crash of trainer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — An American flight instructor and his Filipino student died in the crash of a T-34 jet trainer at a Philippine air force base, the official Philippine news agency said today.

The agency, quoting Defense Ministry spokesman Col. George Abando, identified the American flier as Happy New, an employee of the Vought Aircraft Corp. The spokesman said New had been in the Philippines since last year, when the air force signed a deal with Vought to buy 25 F-8 jet fighters. His American residence was not known.

The U.S. Embassy said it had not been informed of the incident.

The Filipino student was identified only as 2nd Lt. Bindoy. The plane was on a routine training mission when it crashed Thursday afternoon while landing at the Basa air base in Pampanga, 45 miles northwest of Manila, the agency said.

A look at last week on Wall Street

NEW YORK (AP) — Should the Federal Reserve tighten credit or hold to a steady monetary policy?

To judge by the behavior of the stock market in the past week, Wall Street's answer seems to be: Neither of the above.

On Monday, when many analysts were predicting a new round of credit-tightening, the stock market sold off.

Later in the week, after Fed Chairman G. William Miller insisted that any tightening now might do more harm than good, the market still was going nowhere.

Indeed, analysts said, there is a good deal that is unpleasant about both the choices facing the Fed in its juggling-act assignment of fighting inflation without unduly depressing economic activity.

Any tightening of credit means further increases in interest rates, which traditionally depress stock prices.

But those who argue the country should take that medicine now, no matter how hard it is to swallow, say the alternative is a further deterioration in the inflation outlook.

William Gibson, an analyst at Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., contended in a recent commentary that the Fed has been "immobilized" by conflicting influences.

Pushing the central bank in the easy-money direction, he said, are recent statistics indicating slow growth of the money supply, as well as "a political desire to keep interest rates from going too high."

But pulling it the other way is the desire to make progress in the fight against inflation.

we pay taxes, too... 10-million dollars worth!

At Southwestern Public Service Company, we know that what's good for the communities we serve is also good for SPS. When the communities grow and prosper, so does SPS. The taxes paid by the citizens and SPS contribute to this growth and prosperity. In 1978, Southwestern Public Service Company paid approximately $273,000.00 in ad valorem and street and alley rental taxes in Gray County alone. In the 45,000 square mile area it serves, SPS paid a total of 10-million dollars in these taxes from the revenue we received from our customers. Viets have weakened guerrillas

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Major Vietnamese military thrusts have seriously weakened ousted Cambodian Premier Pol Pot's guerrillas and some analysts believe they are making their last stand along the border with Thailand.

Thousands of Pol Pot loyalists, soldiers and civilians, have fled into Thailand in recent days in the face of pressure from Vietnamese troops and Cambodian soldiers of the new government.

A thousand escaped into Thailand today and nearly 200 wounded struggled across the frontier Friday, joining thousands of civilian refugees. Except for the wounded, most of the would-be refugees are being forced back into Cambodia.

Fighting along the Thai frontier has been concentrated along Highway 5 and south of the key border town of Poipet, areas from which most of the Pol Pot loyalists have fled into Thailand.

Still to be subdued is the region south of Poipet — around the gem mining town of Pailin and the Cardamon Mountains, but Thai military analysts said most of the fighting in Cambodia's central provinces appears to be over.

"The remarkable thing is that the hard core of the Pol Pot people have held together," said one European diplomat this week. "But they are alienated from the masses in Cambodia. When one of them gets killed there won't be any others to replace him."

Cambodian refugees interviewed in Thailand recently unanimously expressed hatred for the Pol Pot regime, even though they distrusted their traditional enemies, the Vietnamese, and regarded the new Cambodian government of President Heng Samrin as a Vietnamese puppet.

Analysts in Bangkok following the situation in Cambodia say Hanoi wants to crush the Pol Pot forces quickly because the four-month-old war is a major drain on Vietnam's meager resources and because the fast-approaching monsoon season would help the guerrillas. Vietnam's Christmas Day invasion of Cambodia also is an issue in the current negotiations aimed at settling the border dispute that led to war between China and Vietnam. China, which supports Pol Pot, is eager to get the Vietnamese out of Cambodia.

When the war ended with China in mid-March, intelligence sources here detected a major Vietnamese reinforcement near the Thai border.

Reliable sources in Bangkok say up to 30,000 Vietnamese troops were deployed in the offensive in western Cambodia and the number of Pol Pot soldiers and civilians wedged against the frontier in the Poipet area are variously estimated at between 20,000 to 50,000.

Thai military sources say they have been contacted by senior Pol Pot officers in recent days who asked that a large number of their troops be allowed to pass through Thai territory to other points inside Cambodia. The Thai government reportedly rejected the requests.

Bid to set world mark nerve wrecking

HARTEBESPOORT, South Africa (AP) — Peter Snyman says his bid to set a record for living in a den of deadly snakes has left him a nervous wreck. As of today, he still has 22 days to go to break the 36-day mark.

"I've already had a violent nervous reaction," Snyman said, speaking slowly and swinging his eyes back and forth across the gravel floor in search of his 24 poisonous companions.

He says part of his challenge is finding out the extent of his self-control under constant emotional strain, like when the serpents crawl over him or curl up to him to bask in his warmth.

One morning at 4 o'clock he awoke and found a 12-foot black mamba on his stomach in a striking position — neck rigid and mouth open.

The reptile obviously had been disturbed by his eyelids opening so he "spread his hood and watched me for 15 minutes," Snyman said from his cot at the Hartebespoort Snake Park, about 65 miles northwest of Johannesburg.

"I guess he was giving me the once over by trying to figure out what I was," said Snyman, who for 18 months trained in keeping still to prepare for his ordeal.

"It may sound strange but I feel affectionately towards some of them," said the bearded 25-year-old carpenter, his eyes bright through a pair of dark-rimmed glasses despite only two or three hours of uneasy sleep a day.

He said he would try to beat by four days the record set by fellow South African Trevor Kruger in 1975.

Snyman moved carefully to the arm of a nearby chair and in slow motion grabbed a handling stick to remove a deadly puff-adder that had crawled into the center of his bed.

"I didn't realize what I had taken on until recently when the black mambas started giving me trouble," Snyman said.

University to lose federal funds

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The University of North Carolina has failed to come up with a desegregation plan suitable to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, so HEW is continuing with administrative steps to cut off federal funds to the university, according to HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr.

An agreement on an acceptable plan to desegregate the university system. Consequently, in order to meet our obligations under the court order in the litigation begun in 1970, Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Constitution of the United States, we must continue the administrative proceedings," said Califano on Friday.

target date deferral of federal funds will commence on May 2.

"I still consider a negotiated settlement to be far more desirable than litigation, for, during the course of litigation — which can last for years — those who suffer most will be the students, not Gov. (Jim) Hunt, (UNC) President (William) Friday or the board of governors," Califano added.

Hunt had offered to ask the state legislature for a $40 million appropriation for improvements on the five UNC predominantly black campuses as part of the settlement. Friday said that with $30 million already appropriated for the black campuses, the university was offering a $70 million package of new programs and buildings.

Inside Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's cities are paying dearly for a series of reductions in government programs in the early 1970s, a high-ranking Interior Department official says.

These cutbacks "forced many painful choices — choices between senior citizens and children; choices between outdoor recreation and indoor heat; choices between this community and that one," said James Joseph, an undersecretary of the interior.

As a result, urban recreation is in virtual crisis state throughout the nation," Joseph told the American Society of Civil Engineers in Snowbird, Utah, on Friday. A text of Joseph's address was made available by the Interior Department.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate panel will hear testimony Tuesday on legislation to increase the government's contribution to premiums paid by retired workers covered by the Retired Federal Employees Health Benefits Act.

The measure has been recommended by officials of the Office of Personnel Management, formerly the Civil Service Commission. They say it will alleviate the hardship that increases in health benefit premiums have created for certain federal retirees.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Petroleum Institute is reporting that demand for gasoline during the first three months of this year increased 3.9 percent compared to the first quarter of 1978.

The institute said its Monthly Statistical Report showed gasoline demand averaged 7.2 million barrels a day compared to 6.9 million barrels a day during the same period last year.

The industry group said one product for which the upward demand trend continued in March was unleaded gasoline. During the month, the institute said, unleaded gasoline demand averaged almost 3 million barrels a day — 21 percent higher than the March 1978 demand of 2.5 million barrels daily.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Signaling further disenchantment with Carter administration policies, the leaders of four large government employee unions are jointly sponsoring a nationwide day of protest.

The four leaders are Kenneth Blaylock of the American Federation of Government Employees, Vincent L. Connelly of the National Treasury Employees Union, Kenneth T. Lyons of the National Association of Government Employees and James M. Peirce of the National Federation of Federal Employees. Their unions represent 1.2 million people.

The union leaders said the June 14 protests will highlight worker opposition to programs designed to place a cap on their pay and the merger of civil service retirement with Social Security.

Overseas...

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union's new census shows that the loss of male life during World War II has not yet been balanced out, the official news agency Tass reported Saturday.

Tass said the male-female gap is "gradually reducing." There are 140 million women to 122.4 million men, or a difference of 18 million, compared to 1959, when there were 22.7 million more women than men. The proportion has equalized in groups younger than 50, the board said.

Tass said the Soviet Central Statistical Board put the national population figure at 262.442 million, up 20.7 million since the last census in 1970.

TURIN, Italy (AP) — A leftist group calling itself the "Territorial Communists" claimed responsibility for a fire at a Fiat plant Saturday in Chivasso outside Turin, officials of the Italian car company said.

Investigators said the fire, which caused $2.2 million in damage, caused no injuries. In a statement, Fiat said the attack was aimed at creating a "climate of insecurity" at the plant because of the national labor contract talks and the campaign for general elections in early June.

HONG KONG (AP) — The Chinese leadership may be meeting to review political and economic developments in the country, according to China analysts here.

Monitored broadcasts show top party leaders have been absent from provincial meetings during the past 10 days, which usually signals attendance at a top-level conference, the analysts said.

Such a meeting would probably review China's economic programs, discuss changes in how the late party chairman Mao Tse-tung should be viewed and discuss recent demands for greater freedom by political activists, the analysts said.

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A homemade bomb exploded in a bookshop in central Athens early Saturday and police blamed right-wing extremists marking the anniversary of the 1967-1974 military dictatorship. There were no injuries.

The military junta seized power in a coup on April 21, 1967, but was forced to give way to a civilian government in 1974. The leaders of the coup are serving jail terms between 10 years and life imprisonment.

Twelve people alleged to be members of the leading pro-junta terrorist group have been jailed in recent weeks, police said.

Priests turned investigators draw strange looks

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Since they normally dress in street clothes, it isn't any surprise two Washington, D.C., priests serving as investigators for the Karen Silkwood estate sometimes get startled or embarrassed looks when they are identified.

"I wanted someone I could trust absolutely," Danny Sheehan, chief counsel for the estate, explained about his investigators.

Bill Davis, 44, a Jesuit, joined the Silkwood staff in 1977. Later, Wally Kasuboski, 32, a Franciscan, signed on.

"Billy is our 'people man' and Wally handles the documents," Sheehan said. "Almost every piece of evidence and nearly every bit of testimony has passed through their hands."

The Silkwood estate is suing the Kerr-McGee Corp. in federal court for $11.5 million alleging negligence in connection with Miss Silkwood's contamination with plutonium. Kerr-McGee claims she was negligent.

Kasuboski said he has been surprised only by the magnitude of the company's alleged wrongdoing.

"It becomes more and more of a horror story as the testimony unfolds," he said. "The most pathetic thing is human life seems to be worthless to a big corporation."

Both Kasuboski and Davis joined their respective Catholic orders as young men.

Kasuboski was born in Rippon, Wis., about 100 miles northwest of Milwaukee. Davis is a native of Harve, Mont., about 40 miles from the Canadian border. Both men have a background in Mexican and Latin American human-rights affairs.

Davis relishes the pursuit of information and likes "meeting people and sizing them up."

To send state budget to Senate this week

Clayton's hope vanishes

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Three days of bombast have put on a good show for the gallery, sent some state agencies "a message" and fattened the House's $20.2 billion appropriation bill.

Speaker Bill Clayton's hope of sending the 1980-81 state budget bill to the Senate by the end of the week vanished as fatigue, indifference and a desire to party or go home emptied the House floor Friday night.

Debate resumes Monday morning. The $370 million left "on the table" for tax relief or special expenditures shrank to about $213 million as the House logrolled and took care of the teachers.

A 93-25 vote Friday showed Gov. Bill Clements the difficulty of holding teachers to the same 5.1 percent annual pay raise as state employees are programmed to get.

The House upped the 5.1 percent teacher salary increases recommended by the House Appropriations Committee to 7 percent a year at a cost of $106 million.

Teacher lobbyists in the gallery smiled but must have known the House vote would not translate into fatter paychecks unless the same pay levels are contained in a separate school finance bill.

And that bill must help school districts cope with rising utility and transportation costs. The alternative, one knowledgeable official said, might be local property tax increases that would be blamed on the Legislature.

House passage of the appropriation bill next week will just be a jumping off point for the rest of the process. Senators still must act. Then a joint conference committee will attempt to blend the two chambers' products into a single bill. And that bill — with no amendments allowed on the floor — must win approval of the House and Senate before the Legislature adjourns May 28.

Lawyer wants state to pay bill

LOS ANGELES (AP).—Michelle Triola Marvin's lawyer says he does not want attorney fees to chew up Miss Marvin's $104,000 award from former lover Lee Marvin. In an epilogue to the love and money lawsuit, he is asking the state to pay $500,000 for his legal services.

Marvin Mitchelson says he will ask Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall, who rendered the verdict in the landmark lawsuit, to award him and his assistants the sum as fees for seven years of work on the alimony-without-marriage case.

"I made new law in this case," Mitchelson said. "It went to the (California) Supreme Court. Michelle won something and that has enabled thousands of other deprived people to pursue their property rights... She certainly needed an attorney to bring the case."

Mitchelson took the case on contingency and is entitled to one third of Miss Marvin's award, which the judge granted to provide for her "rehabilitation" as a career woman following the six-year love affair.

"I don't want to take the award that was made to Michelle," he said. "I have a contract with her but I will relinquish it if the judge awards proper attorneys' fees."

Mitchelson said he would file the motion for payment this week.

The lawyer's expenses are estimated at $60,000. He said the $500,000 figure is based on hours he and his aides have worked since the case was filed in 1972.

Miss Marvin's share of the actor's assets was far less than the $1.8 million she sought.

Meanwhile, attorneys pondered the impact of Marshall's decision as dozens of similar cases wait for their moments in the spotlight.

Most said the acrimonious three-month trial proved that Marvin-type litigation is a rich man's game, and a woman would waste time and money suing any man who earns less than $1 million a year.

"You can't bring this kind of case against the average working man because he can declare bankruptcy and bail out," said attorney Raymond Gloozman, who represents the former live-in girlfriend of comedian Fl Wilson.

Gloozman's client, Kayatana Harrison, a 27-year-old dental assistant, is suing Wilson for $2 million, or half the comic's income during the four years they lived together.

"The people who are going to be affected are going to be the luminaries — celebrities, superstars, people with money," the attorney said of the Marvin decision. "Once that mystique wears off, next in line to be sued will be the professionals — doctors, bankers, dentists — who have substantial income."

In the Marvin case, the actor had acquired an estimated $3.6 million in assets during the six years he lived with Miss Marvin.

One of his lawyers, Mark Goldman, has estimated the Marvin legal team put in $300,000 worth of time plus expenses.

"If a case is going to be fought as bitterly as this one has, and if there isn't a large amount of money involved, it wouldn't be worth litigating," said Goldman. "There would be nothing left after the lawyers' fees."

However, Goldman says the firm of Goldman and Kagon has already had calls from several men facing suits by former girlfriends. They have accepted one client, Wally Findlay, owner of a worldwide chain of art galleries, who faces suit by a woman he lived with for two years.

Mitchelson, meanwhile, has three celebrity cases waiting to be tried.

—Cindy Lang, 27, model and former companion of rock star Alice Cooper, is suing for $3.5 million plus support.

Anarchy on the highways

Truckers wreak high-speed havoc

WASHINGTON (NEA) - When teamster Timothy Andrews drove into a Missouri weigh station a few months ago, to use the lavatory, he was surprised to find the facility closed. Surprised? He was beaucoup enraged, do ya read. And police say he destroyed the $100,000 building with one pass of his truck.

Happily, Andrews was traced and arrested (he left a telltale mudflap at the scene of the crime), but rather than become a disgrace to his profession, he has become its folk hero. Scores of other truck drivers say destroying a weigh station is a patriotic act, and have raised $500 for Andrews' defense.

And so it goes with America's contemporary cowboys, its long haul truckers, rolling down the nation's last frontier, its interstate highways. Once storied for their adherence to the rules of the road, many teamsters today have become little more than thugs with deadly, 18-wheel weapons.

State policemen from the everglades to the Everglades report hair-raising stories regarding the vehicular acrobatics of what appear to be increasing numbers of truckers. And a depressing number of them are not just knocking down weigh stations; they are aiming at other motorists as well.

Recently, a teen-age girl in Florida told authorities of a Mack truck operator who bumped her vehicle three times at 60 mph and made obscene gestures when she stopped. In California, passenger car drivers have complained of being forced off roads by truckers, then verbally harassed or even beaten.

And Frank Nye of Iowa tells a tale of a highway confrontation that is both chilling and common. Nye, a Cedar Rapids newsman, says he angered a trucker on Interstate 80, and as a result: "I was boxed in the inside lane by five trucks, at 70 mph, and I was not allowed to exit for 20 minutes."

Nye says the truck drivers were angry with him because he was driving too slow. Police say this kind of anger probably occurs on every hour of every day. In most cases, truckers quite naturally contain their frustrations; more and more, though, police say they do not.

In Texas, troopers recall a truck driver who got into a hot argument with a motorist by way of Citizens Band radio. When the motorist tried to pass the truck, the teamster abruptly crossed the yellow line, whereupon the driver of the car lost control and was killed in a spectacular overturn.

Not that the Texas incident is necessarily reflective of trucking in general. On the whole, the National Safety Council says truck operators are exceptional drivers: with 28.5 million trucks in operation, the accident rate is less than six per million miles (the non-truck accident rate is 11.05).

Yet the safety statistics are not totally encouraging, particularly those regarding heavy motor carriers. Federal records suggest there are about one million big trucks today, which is only one percent of all vehicles, but they figure in 4,000 deaths a year, or nine percent of all road fatalities.

What's more, the big truck record is especially grisly when small vehicles are involved. Figures show that when heavy trucks collide with other vehicles, 91 of 100 of the fatalities are in the other vehicles. When trucks hit passenger cars, fully 97 percent of the deaths are in the cars.

This means that big trucks, many weighing as much as 130,000 pounds, are far more menacing than other vehicles. And so are the big truck drivers. The accident rate among all motorists is growing at about 1.2 percent a year, but the rate among long haul truckers is nearly 14 times as high.

It should be said that most heavy truck operators dispute these figures. They claim the majority of their accidents are beyond their control, hence the accident figures are misleading. Truckers say four-wheel drivers cause most trucking mishaps; also, they insist their job itself is responsible.

Police admit the truckers are right about faulty motorists (studies indicate as many as 14 million Americans drive without valid licenses). And the teamsters may also be right about the killing nature of their work; to some extent commercial trucking and safe trucking are a contradiction of terms.

For one thing, the cab of a motor carrier can be a torture chamber. The noise reaches levels above that of jetliners, and the air is filled with toxic gases. When laboratory animals are put in cab conditions, the result is a proliferation of such ailments as bleeding ulcers and anemia.

Then there is the lonely monotony of the road. Some operators are away from their families for 250-300 days a year. "And pressure?" says one driver. "You don't know what worry is unless you get a load of pears to get to Cleveland by Friday, and you break down all day Thursday in Miles City."

True, most truckers take pride in the burdens of their work, but many pay dearly for it. One study of union drivers reveals that most chain smoke, many drink coffee by the quart, and one in four have impaired physical or emotional health. Says the researcher: "These are not relaxed men."

Neither are truckers patient men. Police say there is probably no operator in America, "not one," who obeys the 55 mph limit. Sixty-three mph is the national average, according to federal investigators. And in

Textbook Committee chosen by state

The State Board of Education appointed 15 public school teachers and administrators from all areas of Texas to the 1979 Textbook Committee.

The committee will work all through the year to provide books to the system, according to a Texas Education Agency report.

Laura Lee Johnson, an Amarillo teacher, was appointed to the committee.

She and other appointees will be will have several meetings until the adoption of books set for Nov. 10. Preceding the adoption, a final public hearing will be held Nov. 8.

Copies of material submitted by the nation's publishers will be available to the public at any of the state's 20 regional education service centers.

Dr. M.L. Brockett, Texas Commissioner of Education, and the State Textbook Committee, will hold the first joint public hearing August 13-17 at Austin.

Si and yes at Baker Headstart

A mixture of English and Spanish are used at Baker Headstart to teach four-year-old children lessons on everyday life.

The Headstart program was designed for underprivileged children in the Pampa area to give them a boost before they begin climbing the education ladder.

Some children speak mostly Spanish when they begin school, said Mrs. Leroy Thornburg, a teacher at Headstart, but they usually know a little English.

Spanish-speaking aides are available, she said, and can assist in communications between the child and teacher or with parents.

In the past some parents could speak little English, she said, and the aides were used for communicating with them.

The aides, Olivia Hernandez and Conchas Diaz, are now loaned out to where they are needed, she said.

More Mexican-American parents are able to speak communicative English, she said, and some parents have participated in the school's activities.

Three Mexican-American mothers sat in on a recent cooking demonstration, which was done in Spanish and English, she said.

In the class the children and mothers were asked to repeat the names of various cooking utensils and foods in Spanish and English, she said.

Several of the other programs, such as the centers for art, manipulative processes, woodworking and planting of vegetation, are taught in both languages.

These programs enable English-speaking children to better understand the difficulties of learning in an unfamiliar language, she said.

The school has a story-reading time in the two languages, she said, and children are encouraged to participate in both.

"We try to be versatile - to treat each child," she said, "because his needs may be different from everyone else's."

One child spends half of his school day in a kindergarten class and the other part in first grade to treat his situation, she said.

A large part of a person's vocabulary is learned at a young age, she said, and teaching the children both languages in a program such as Headstart would be a good idea.

The Mexican-American children have to learn English before they begin elementary school because Pampa is ineligible for state or federally funded bilingual programs.

The state will allocate $15 million for the programs during the 1979-80 school year, according to a release from the Texas Education Agency.

Bilingual programs are required in districts with 20 or more children of limited English speaking ability in a single grade level from kindergarten through the third grade, according to the report. These children must also speak one primary language.

About four children per school have an English problem, according to the principals of Lamar, Baker and Wilson, and the schools are able to work with those students.

Many of the children are natives of the area, said the principals, and translators have not been needed for some time.

Most of the children have been prepared by the Headstart Program, said the principals, and many of the parents know more English than they did several years ago.

Headstart is a program for low-income parents, said Thornburg, and the possibility of a Spanish-speaking child being unable to qualify for tutoring at an early age because his parents have money exists.

resources, said a report from researchers at the U.S. Department of Agriculture Forest Service and Texas Tech University.

When weather permits, playa lakes in the South Plains host about one million migratory game birds representing 20 species, and several big game animals, said Dr. Fred A. Stormer, scientist in the Great Plains Wildlife Research Laboratory of the Rocky Mountain Forest and Range Experiment Station.

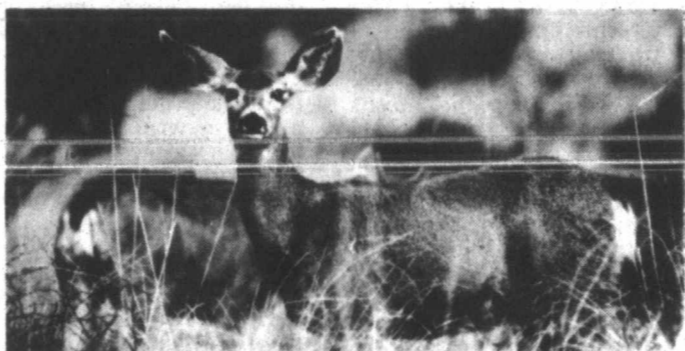

A playa lake is the flat-floored bottom of a desert basin, which provides as much as a quarter million surface acres of water in the South Plains when the conditions are right, he said.

Hunting rights return $1 and $3 per acre a year to landowners, said the Texas Tech report, and in special circumstances could mean as much as $20.

The report said that the overall mortality rate for game is not expected to increase because hunting preempts natural mortality with many game species.

The College of Agricultural Sciences of Texas Tech has been studying the region since 1977 and has chosen the target animals: They will be the waterfowl, ring-necked pheasant, mule deer and pronghorn antelope.

MULE DEER may be a source of recreation for some and financing for farmers if Texas Tech's consideration of leasing land for hunting grounds as income when water levels threaten crops, is taken seriously.

Rally in seventh Pampa tops district play at half

By JERRY GUNTER
Pampa News Sports Editor

For awhile Friday afternoon it appeared that lady luck was not on the side of the Pampa Harvesters—but then the tide changed.

The Harvesters seemed able to do no wrong in the final three innings as the Pampa squad came from behind to down the Amarillo Sandies 6-5 to capture the first-half title in District 3-AAAA baseball.

While the Harvesters played well in each of those final three innings, none compared to that dramatic seventh inning.

With the score tied at 3-3 at the end of six frames, the defending champion Sandies scored twice in the top of the seventh for what looked to be a secure edge.

But the always tough Harvesters would not be denied as they came storming back in the final half-inning of the contest.

The first Harvester run of that inning came by way of a Sandie error when third baseman David Swafford mishandled a routine ball hit to him by Rick Dougherty. The ball rolled out into left field, allowing Steve McDougall to score from second base. That cut the Sandie lead to 5-4.

The Harvesters scored again on a throwing error by Amarillo High catcher Jeff McMennay. Jennings, thus came in to score to knot the count at 5-5.

Then with Dougherty on third base and two outs, Keanan Henderson slapped a hard hit ball to the Sandies' Swafford. He had a difficult time in retrieving the ball, thus allowing Dougherty to score the winning run from third base.

A very happy coach Steve Scott seemed very relieved after the game and said, "Our kids really played well today. Those errors in the last inning really did help us alot. I am proud of how our kids came back. I said that if we were to win, we would have to have at least two on before we got two outs—and fortunately we did."

But while the Sandies had their share of errors in that costly seventh inning, in the early going, the miscues were on the side of the Harvesters.

After two innings of scoreless baseball, the Sandies scored three times in the third frame.

But that third inning didn't start out bad as winning pitcher Steve Stout, who fanned 14 Sandies for the day, struck out his first two opponents in succession.

However, Mark Hottman got the Sandies going with a single to center. He stole second, before teammate Jeff McMennay walked. Both base runner then advanced to second and third respectively on a passed ball.

Then Todd Gower lined a hard shot to Pampa third baseman Greg Quarles. He had to make an extra long throw to first and it was too late. Meanwhile, Hottman scored to give the Sandies the early lead.

The second run came in when Pampa left fielder Greg Koch couldn't hold on to a high fly ball by Amarillo High's Brad Lancaster. Then the third run of the frame came by way of an infield hit by the Sandies' David Duncan.

There was no more scoring at all until the bottom half of the fifth. Pampa got untracked as Quarles smashed a double down the left field line. Steve McDougall then chased Quarles home on a single to left. McDougall later came home to narrow the score to 3-2 when Mark Jennings belted a one-base hit to left.

In the home half of the sixth, the Harvesters were able to tie the score at 3-3. That came when Quarles smashed a long sacrifice fly to left field. That allowed teammate Keanan Henderson to score from third.

That led up to the big two-run inning in the seventh by the Sandies as it appeared maybe it just wasn't meant for the Harvesters to win. But such was not the case as the Harvesters came back to take the victory.

Both teams picked up seven hits apiece for the day and indeed errors did play a big part for each of the squads.

Stout had an outstanding day with his amazing 14 strike outs. He also picked up his sixth win against no losses.

Pampa finishes the first half with a perfect 4-0 mark. They will play again Tuesday at Caprock at 4 p.m. in the first game of the second-half chase.

Rebels win 3 - AAAA track title

By JERRY GUNTER
Pampa News Sports Editor

AMARILLO—Tascosa used its depth to race to the team title in the District 3-AAAA track meet held Saturday afternoon at Dick Bivins Stadium.

As a result, the Rebels rolled up 183 points to easily outdistance second place Amarillo High (118 points) for the team championship. Pampa had its problems for the day as the Harvesters came in last place with 32 markers.

Only one Harvester qualified for the upcoming regional track meet, which is scheduled next weekend in Lubbock. That lone individual is Kyle Bradford. He won first place in the high jump with a leap of 6-6.

The final team totals saw Tascosa finish on top with Amarillo High second. Palo Duro finished third with 91 points with Caprock taking fourth with 60.

Two Harvesters just missed on a chance of qualifying for the regional competition. In the 120 high hurdles, Mark Hutchinson had a strong finish, but was nipped at the tape by Kevin Wagner of Amarillo High. Hutchinson came in with a clocking of 14.89, while Wagner was timed at 14.8. Winning the event with a time of 14.6 was Marty Leet of Tascosa.

In the 880, Joe Murray finished third in a close finish at the end. Murray was timed at 2:04.1, while Scott Henderson finished just ahead of him at 2:03.5. The winner with a clocking of 2:01.3 was Matt Minson of Amarillo High.

Other finishes for the Harvesters saw Danny Buzzard take fifth in both the shot put and the discus. He threw the shot 49-0 and then hurled the discus 143-7. Also, Arthur Williams took fourth in the long jump with a leap of 19-7 1/2.

In the 440, Steve Kotara took fourth with a 52.5, while the 440 relay team finished fifth at 45.1. Members of that relay are Billy Grimes, Mark Hutchinson, Doug Smith and Arthur Williams.

While the varsity had its problems, the junior varsity did quite well for the day as they finished second to Amarillo High with 127 points. The Sandies won with 141. Tascosa took third place with 113 points with Palo Duro next at 61. Caprock scored 28 points.

Pampa got three first place finishes for the day. Brad Mathis won the high jump with a clearance of 5-10, while in the 100, Mark Kotara was the winner at 10.6. He also was victorious in the 220 at 23.7.

Other finishes for the JV saw Roy Britt take second in the high jump at 5-8, while James Bogart was a runner-up in the long jump with a 18-6 1/2. Jim Agan took third in the discus at 129-9 with Ruben Ambrez getting fifth at 116-11.

In the shot put, Agan finished second at 42-4 1/2 and Ambrez was third with a 41-9 1/2. Fourth place in that event went to Randy Slaybough at 40-7 1/2.

Danny Combs took second in the mile run with a 4:53.0, while teammate Neil Braswell finished sixth at 5:17.4. Calvin Coleman placed second in the 440 at 53.8 and in the 440 relay. Pampa was second with a 45.61. Ricky Kupunas was second in the 880 at 2:10.1 and in the mile relay. The Harvesters took second at 3:39.5.

Douglass finishes season

Pampa High School's first representative in regional tennis play in 46 years lost a close struggle this weekend at the Coronado High School courts in Lubbock.

Ending her school season, Kris Douglass fell Friday to Cathy Lawson of El Paso -

Eastwood 6-4, 5-7, 6-4.

Douglass finished the season with several successes in area tournaments and in district competition. She took first place at the Snyder Tournament and second in the Berger tournament.

The senior has worked real hard during the year to develop into a real fine tennis player, said the Coach Martin.

Regional play ended Saturday, and winners will be advancing to the state competition, the stepping stone for nationals.

RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (AP) — Front-running Tom Watson dropped a 6-foot par putt on the final hole and, with a hard-won round of 70, retained a 3-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $300,000 Tournament of Champions.

Watson, the leader all the way in this exclusive event that brings together only the winners of PGA Tour titles from the past 12 months, had a 54-hole total of 205, 11 strokes under par on the 6,889-yard La Costa Country Club course.

Smooth Jerry Pate scored eight birdies on the way to a spectacular, 7-under-par 65 — the best round of the tournament and only one off the course record — to move into a tie for second at 208.

He shared the second spot with cross-handed putter Bruce Lietzke, who had a third round 70 in the warm, sunny, windy weather.

They appeared to be the only men in the select field of 28 champions with any chance of catching Watson, who led by one at the end of the first round, and by 3 at the end of 36 holes.

It was 4 more shots back to Larry Nelson and Lee Trevino, tied at 212, 7 strokes back of Watson. Trevino matched par 72 in the third round and Nelson, who scored an eagle-3, shot 68.

Lee Elder and Tom Kite were at 213. Elder birdied his last three holes for a 68. Kite had the same.

Gary Player of South Africa, the defending champion, was the only other man under par for three rounds. He shot a 74 — despite great difficulty with short putts — and was at 2-under 214.

Jack Nicklaus, a five-time winner of this event, took himself out of title contention with a fat 77. He played the last four holes 4 over par and finished the day with a 221 total.

U.S. Open champ Andy North was 71-222 and Fuzzy Zoeller, who beat Watson in a playoff for the Masters crown last week, shot 74-223.

Tallahassee Open begins third

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Bobby Wadkins, repeating his 1978 third-round performance here, drilled a 7-under 65 Saturday to tie the fan favorite Chi Chi Rodriguez going into the final round of the Tallahassee Open.

Wadkins bogeyed the fourth hole to go to 6-under in the tournament before reeling off seven birdies to total a 14-under 202. Rodriguez birdied four of the first seven holes to break a three-way tie with Bob Mann and Tim Simpson.

Yankees start feuding again

NEW YORK (AP) — The frequently feuding New York Yankees are at it again and this time a dressing room fight has cost the world champions the services of ace reliever Rich Gossage.

Gossage will be out of action for at least a week with a sprained thumb after battling reserve catcher Cliff Johnson in the clubhouse following Thursday's 6-3 loss to Baltimore.

Both players face fines from the club for the incident, which was announced late in Friday night's game against Texas. At just about the time Yankee followers might have expected to see Gossage warming up with the bullpen ace sidelined, New York used Dick Tidrow to nail down Ed Figueroa's 5-3 victory over the Rangers.

"They have guaranteed contracts," said Yankee President Al Rosen, acknowledging that the players would be fined. "And if you have a guaranteed contract and can't perform, you don't get paid. I don't care if players fight all they want, but you have to be able to perform."

The Gossage-Johnson fight reportedly developed because the catcher was angry after sitting out the Baltimore game. Regular Thurman Munson was rested in that contest and the Yankees used rookie Jerry Narron to catch instead of Johnson.

Apparently, Gossage started needing Johnson in the dressing room and what started out as good natured ribbing escalated into a full fledged fight between the 6-foot-3, 215-pound pitcher and the 6-4, 225-pound catcher.

Higuera gains WCT finals

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — Seventh-seeded Jose Higuera of Spain dismantled Roscoe Tanner's blazing serve and reeled off an easy 6-2, 6-2 victory Saturday to gain the finals in the $175,000 World Championship Tennis tournament.

Gene Mayer of the U.S. took advantage of a rusty performance by Spain's Manuel Orantes for a 7-6, 6-3 victory in the other semifinals match. The winners meet Sunday for the $30,200 first prize in the final WCT event prior to the WCT Championship Finals April 30-May 6 at Dallas.

Mayer, who defeated top-seeded Harold Solomon in the first round, was the giant killer again, keeping pressure on Orantes throughout the match. Mayer fought off three set points in the 10th game of the first set, broke Orantes in the 11th game and then won a tie-breaker game 7-1.

Orantes had been the aggressor early in the match, breaking Mayer in the second game and taking a 3-0 lead. But Orantes, recovering from knee and elbow ailments, was playing with a faulty backhand and an inconsistent touch game that failed him repeatedly. Mayer, who will be playing

Sunday in his first final of the year, broke Orantes in the sixth game to take control of the second set.

Higuera completely mastered Tanner from the start, losing only one point on his serve the first set. Higuera broke Tanner in the first and fifth games of the opening set.

CART drivers may sit out Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A reconciliation between the U.S. Auto Club and Championship Auto Racing Teams still is possible, but many of the CART drivers insist they are prepared to sit out the May 27 Indianapolis 500 if they have to.

USAC rejected 19 entries from six CART teams on Friday but indicated the drivers still could seek rides with other teams. "The door has always been open," said USAC president Dick King. "If we could sit down and work out an agreement which would be equitable to USAC and to the car owners we definitely would be interested."

"But it takes two to tango. There have been several attempts to get a neutral mediator and all were rejected, not by USAC but by the car owners," he said.

King, who voted with the other USAC directors to exclude the six CART teams, said USAC is "prepared to go as far as necessary" to defend its actions legally.

CART president Pat Patrick promised to fight the exclusion, but he did not say what steps the breakaway organization might take. CART's attorney John Frasco said, "The legal implications are numerous but we aren't going to do anything until the proper time and only after we've arrived at some concrete decisions."

All of the CART owners and drivers were in Atlanta for practice and qualifications for Sunday's Twin Dixie 150-mile race.

"I can afford to miss Indianapolis, and I certainly will if (car owner) Roger Penske isn't there," said two-time Indy winner Bobby Unser. "But I'm not as concerned as most people are. If they (USAC and the Indianapolis Motor Speedway) are tampering with my right to make a living, then my lawyer will inform me."

Unser's younger brother, Al, a three-time Indy winner and the defending champion, said: "I think the Speedway should step in and stop this madness. They've been saying throughout this thing that they're in the middle of the road, but if they want to keep some merit in this race they better make a move."

Johnny Rutherford, another two-time Indianapolis winner, said: "I can't believe they did something this stupid. This makes a guy feel like quitting because it's so senseless."

Philadelphia, Lakers record NBA win

By The Associated Press
The home court proved the remedy for Philadelphia, Los Angeles and Kansas City in the National Basketball Association playoffs, but it didn't do much for the Atlanta Hawks.

Beaten two straight on the road, Philadelphia and Los Angeles recovered nicely in the friendly environment of their own buildings Friday night. The 76ers used 39 points from Julius Erving to defeat San Antonio 123-115, and the Lakers needed an overtime to defeat Seattle 118-112 as Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 32 points and blocked six shots. The Spurs and SuperSonics still lead their best-of-seven quarter-finals 2-1.

Kansas City returned home and tied its series against Phoenix at 1-1 by ripping the Suns 111-91.

But the home court hex didn't work for Atlanta, the team that might have expected the most cooperation from it. The Hawks had won 17 straight at home but the streak was snapped by defending champion Washington, 89-77. The Bullets' victory gave them a 2-1 edge in their series.

All four series resume Sunday.

Mitch Kupchak was the hero for Washington in its low-scoring game against Atlanta. Kupchak scored five points in a 2 1/2-minute stretch of the fourth quarter to put the Bullets in command as they outscored the Hawks 12-4 to break a 69-69 tie. Elvin Hayes pitched in with 19 points and 14 rebounds.

Hubie Brown, coach of the Hawks, was frustrated by the loss in his team's building.

"We beat ourselves in our own gym with only 77 points, 37 percent shooting and 20 turnovers," he said. "I'm so exasperated. Going on the road doesn't mean anything to them. They are a proven team."

Brown, though, saw a silver lining in the defeat.

"We have to be concerned that nobody gets depressed over this loss," he said. "They held these guys to 89 points. That's something. If we can continue to keep them around the number we have, we should have the opportunity to win."

After losing in overtime to Los Angeles, Seattle was thinking how close it had come to an overwhelming 3-0 lead in its series with the Lakers.

"This was a tough game to lose," said Sonics center Jack Sikma. "We definitely had a chance to win it, we should have won it... but it didn't happen."

Phoenix came away impressed with the Kansas City, which effectively bottled up the Suns' attack and forced 28 turnovers.

"We never got a streak going," said Phoenix Coach John MacLeod. "You've got to credit their defense."

Philadelphia's Darryl Dawkins, limited to four points for three quarters, exploded for 10 fourth quarter points to help Erving destroy San Antonio.

That came after a halftime pep talk from Dr. J.

PHS golfers third

AMARILLO—Amarillo High had little trouble in holding onto its lead in the final round of the District 3-AAAA golf tournament as the Sandies won the title with a final total of 632.

Pampa just missed a chance of qualifying for next week's regional meet as the Harvesters came in third at 667. Finishing just ahead of Pampa was Tascosa at 659.

In the medalist race, Pampa's Barry Terrell qualified for regional competition in Lubbock with a 155. That gave him a second place finish. Winning

Jesse Owens recalls 1936 Olympics at Berlin

By HAL BOCK AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — It has been 43 years since Berlin and the 1936 Olympics, when Jesse Owens indelibly etched his name in track and field history by winning four gold medals.

The setting and the circumstances under which he competed, running and winning in the face of Hitler's twisted philosophy of Aryan superiority, combined to make Owens one of the magic names in Olympic lore.

"I was a symbol, an athlete fortunate enough to win medals under the most public type of hate and discrimination," he says.

The four medals came in eight days as Owens mowed down the world's best runners at 100 meters and 200 meters, then ran on America's 400-meter relay team and captured the broad jump as well. Four events. Four gold medals.

Owens, who serves as the host for the upcoming 10-part Home Box Office cable television series on the Olympics, treasures all the medals, but to be very honest, he has a favorite. It is the gold he won for the 100-meter dash—the official certification that in 1936, he was the fastest man in the world.

"That was the one I wanted," he said. "That was the one I had worked for. I wanted to be known as the world's fastest human and that went with the 100-meter title."

So come along now for one more dash down that track with the man who wrote Olympic history in Berlin.

Running against the top sprinters of the day, Owens experienced the kind of pre-race jitters you would expect of a 22-year-old competing at the center of the world stage.

"Your mouth goes as dry as cotton. Your palms are wet with perspiration. Your stomach is jumping. You feel as if your legs can't support your body. You feel all those things in a flash, an instant."

Now the starter shouts "Set!" and the runners get on their marks.

"Your mind fills with all you've been taught, all of your training," Owens said.

Then the gun sounds and the race is on.

"Nine years of work and it's all over in 10 seconds. Your arms, your legs, your knee action... that's what you think of in those 10 seconds. You must keep them working together. You can't worry about the guy at your side or the guy behind you. You've got to get in front and they've got to catch you if they can. You've been trained for this. You can't let them catch you. They must not catch you."

"Then you hit the tape and all the joy flows. It comes through all at once. On that day, the dream is complete. A dream you've had for nine years."

"And when you step on the victory platform and watch your flag raised above the others and you hear the crescendo of your national anthem being played, you say to yourself, 'Today I was the best.'"

And for an athlete, that simple phrase tells it all.

Mending mature marriage

by louise pierce

Most couples are troubled by long years of marriage, sometimes a little, more often a lot. But we don't have to wrinkle our noses or sigh over our advanced togetherness. We are important to our society for the first time ever. We need to cope with our new status, after we learn to cope happily with our mates.

Our word today is LAUGH. Too many senior - citizen couples seldom laugh, at least not when they are alone together. They are no fun to be with, singly, in pairs or in contemporary groups.

Leta S. wrote me. "My childhood was dull as dishwater - and marriage didn't change it. Jim insisted I help him in his bill - collecting business. I hated asking people for money - but I did it for 29 years. By then I was so unhappy that I never laughed with him, never even smiled at him. He didn't notice because he hadn't smiled at me in years. He didn't consult me about the business and more because he knew I wasn't really interested. And I resented his not noticing our good meals, or clean house, my pride in having beautiful hairdos and clothes that were always in the best taste. We reached the point of no fun in our marriage. So I said, 'I've had it up to here,' and I walked out. I'm not a happy divorcee, but I'm happier than I was with Jim."

You know what I wrote her. I said they separated because they had stopped laughing together. And you've got to share smiles to walk your miles hand - in - hand. I don't know any middle - aged divorced person who doesn't wonder, many times, whether he, she and the once - cherished mate might have made it if they'd tried harder. And when they tell you their unhappy stories, there is always a nostalgic cloud on their faces, often tears in their eyes and a muted wish for the laughing happiness they lost.

Let me tell you how Otis and I solved this problem. After a bit of boredom in our suddenly - routine existence after 60 we talked it over and decided that a lot of years stretched ahead of us and they might as well be merry ones.

I'm frightfully absent - minded and this used to annoy him greatly. He backtracked to retrieve my purses and pens for years, our packing, usually omitting some needed item in the suitcase. He used to say, "How stupid can you get? I'm meeting a client with big sales possibilities - and you forgot my favorite tie!" (I ran pell - mell to the closest clothes and brought back a tie for my still - scowling spouse.)

Then we decided to make light of our annoyances. When he shoveled snow onto our front window, I wanted to shout, "You idiot! Couldn't you tell I'd just washed that pane?" But I bit my lips and quipped, "Hey, let's write our names on the glass." We did. And we laughed.

A month later I packed a supply of undershirts for an overnight trip but neglected to include any shorts. A blizzard forced us to stay three days, and our motel just didn't have enough heat to dry drawers between midnight and morning. So Pappy went long on showers and male perfume. "The next week I took plenty of underwear but forgot his pajamas. He slept in his shorts. The following week I forgot my pajamas, so I slept in his shorts.

And he didn't scold or even growl. He only said, "One of life's little surprises is opening your suitcase and searching for your sleepwear, if any."

Best of all, he laughed. And when I saw that his laugh was sincere, I joined it.

Everybody can annoy those closest to him. This is especially true to seniors who are spending more time in each other's company than ever before. But if good nature can prevail, we've all got it made.

Learn to laugh together.
And write your experiences to "Dear Louise."

Gerald L. (Sandy) Sanders

Gerald L. Sanders named Artist of Year

The Pampa Fine Arts Association named Gerald L. (Sandy) Sanders as Artist of the Year at its annual banquet last night at the Pampa Country Club.

Sanders' career as a sculptor began in 1976 when he showed a piece of his work to Tulsa artist Kenneth Wyatt. Wyatt told him he had talent, and that instead of using stag horn he should be carving in either wax or clay which could then be cast in bronze.

Sanders entered his first open competition in Sept. 1977, at the National Juried Artist Studio Exhibition in Amarillo, where he won three top awards. He then appeared as guest artist at an art show in Pagosa Springs, Colo., and so began his career as a sculptor.

Although he does not have any formal art training, Sanders says "It comes easy to me, it is a God given talent."

As a boy growing up in East Texas, he spent a good deal of his time whittling. He carved small horses, boot, saddles, and other western paraphernalia.

An avid sportsman, he always loved the lore of the west. His love of nature, and the knowledge he has of the old west, clearly shows up in each piece of his work.

Sanders was not able to attend last night's banquet as he was in Dallas showing his work at an art show sponsored by Christian School, Inc.

Dr. Overton has decided to retire after 47 years of practicing medicine in Pampa. He will be greatly missed. He has kept a gruelling schedule over the years, starting his day at the hospital at 4:30 a.m., seeing his first patient at 6 a.m. and, on a quiet day, getting home by 8:30 p.m. It seems the good doctor now spends too much time filling in forms instead of helping people. So he and Dottie are going to hop a freighter, go to Kenya and Rhodesia and maybe the Panama Canal.

Electronic jewelry plays a role in medical monitors

NEW YORK (AP) — Precious gems were once thought to have remarkable curative powers, but today jewelry actually is playing a role in medical science, reports the Jewelry Industry Council.

While pearls were once ground up and consumed to combat heart trouble, now jeweled electronic bracelets are monitoring the pulse and elegant pendants serve as portable electrocardiographs. The functional jewelry warns the wearer of extreme pulse rate and heart-pattern changes.

Old soothsayer remedies such as wearing a topaz to combat jaundice may have been abandoned, but electronic body-monitoring jewelry is a modern medical device important to many people, the Council points out.

Handsome necklaces, bracelets and belts in gold, silver and stainless steel, equipped with out-of-sight, sensitive, electronic devices, can perform such medical chores as monitoring the heartbeat and blood pressure or even warning an asthmatic wearer of dangerous air pollution.

These body-monitoring prototypes have been created by contemporary designer Mary Ann Scherr, who has also made a special necklace to conceal a tracheotomy opening with a jeweled centerpiece. Part of the necklace is a breathing and speaking tube that fits into the trachea.

All of these pieces have the support of medical authorities with whom Mrs. Scherr worked to perfect her functional jewelry, the Council says.

The necklace with the heart-beat-display medallion is in sterling silver, with a liquid crystal color display. The monitoring electrodes attached to the body are hidden under the wearer's clothing. The medallion is hung on a clear plastic choker necklace and gold chains and beads.

The pulse sensor is a cuff bracelet in gold with silver applique and an engraved surface, and serves as a container for the electronic equipment.

The sensor relays the pulse beat to a circuitry that activates a light-emitting diode. Extreme changes in the heart-beat rate trigger a ringing to alert the wearer.

In addition to rendering an important medical service, Mrs. Scherr says, "I want my designs to enable the wearers to look elegant in their necessary lifesaving devices, rather than appearing to be 'wired for sound'."

Mrs. Scherr, an award-winning designer, is professor of art and jewelry design at Kent State University, Kent, Ohio, and is on leave to teach her craft at Parsons School of Design in New York City.

Her jewelry designs are in the Yale University Museum, the Smithsonian Institution, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Vatican Museum, New York's Museum of Contemporary Crafts and many private collections. She has taught in Seoul, Korea, lectured in many countries and has exhibited in Russia, Japan, Korea, South America and Europe.

VICKIE MOOSE received a Texas Distinguished Service Award for Women Saturday at a luncheon at West Texas State University. Sponsored by the school's Office of Programs for Women, the awards luncheon honored 173 women from Texas Panhandle communities.

Vickie Moose honored with Service Award

At 29, Vickie Moose has already given a lifetime of service to the Pampa community.

That's why she was selected as one of the recipients of the West Texas State University Office of Programs for Women's Distinguished Service Awards.

The awards luncheon, held Saturday afternoon at the WTSU East Dining Hall, honored 173 women from 37 Texas Panhandle communities.

Mrs. Moose has worked with the Red Cross for 16 years, including the last four years on the Advisory Board. She has also served on the Executive Board for the Gray County chapter and has traveled throughout the Panhandle teaching first aid.

She is serving her third year on the National Red Cross Volunteer Disaster Team, and has been reappointed for a fourth term as a volunteer coordinator. Included in her efforts was a six week stint of daily work after the Lefors tornado.

Her community activities are numerous enough to keep three people busy. She has served as co-chairman for the city's door to door Heart Fund campaign and as Publicity Chairman for Heart Month.

She has been a United Fund Captain for the past four years, has worked to fight Multiple Sclerosis and has volunteered her efforts to the Cancer Society and March of Dimes.

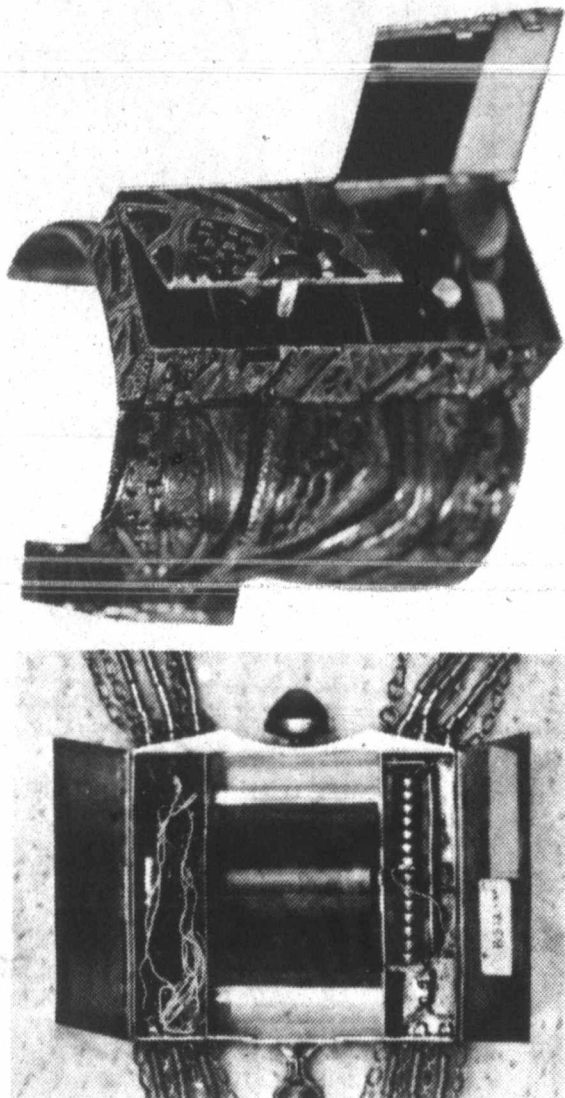

Not surprisingly, children are one of her major concerns. She has been of the Community Day Care Center's Board of Directors, done volunteer work at the center and even finds time to be a room mother in the Pampa school system.

A member of the First Christian Church, Mrs. Moose has served on the church's Worship Committee and has directed and produced several Christmas pageants and plays for the church.

But the activities mentioned above only scratch the service of her efforts for Pampa. The honor granted her Saturday was not one she set out to achieve — but obviously, it was one she deserved.

Big hand
CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Some art lovers might like to give a big hand to an unidentified Massachusetts Institute of Technology student. The student, with the owner's permission, has carved a 15-foot-tall tree stump in a backyard here into a huge hand, with the fingers opening toward the sky.

It May Look like a handsomely ornate chain pendant, but its function is more than fashion, reports the Jewelry Industry Council. Those gold chains and beads support a portable device that monitors the wearer's heart with a liquid crystal heartbeat display; closeup, bottom right, shows the intricate wiring and transistor sensors concealed inside the pendant. Top right, elegant gold carved bracelet with modernistic design, open to show complicated electronic system that monitors wearer's pulse. Jewelry pieces were created by designer Mary Ann Scherr for medical use.

DECORATING TRENDS... Charlie's

MORE LIGHT on the matter of choosing lamps for your home. Have you noticed how warm and inviting a home looks when you drive by at night and look at the glowing windows? That is one of the purposes of proper lighting...and this charm should carry into the home and stand up under close inspection.

Proportion is one of the secrets of charm in a lamp. Be sure that the lamp and shade are in proportion. A large lamp with a too-small shade looks something like the clown wearing a tiny hat. And a too-large shade will make a lamp look top-heavy, ready to fall over or be "crushed" by the weight of the shade.

Match the lamp to the table it stands on, too. A light-weight, fragile-looking table may be in fact physically strong enough to carry a very tall or heavy lamp, but the combination will look all wrong. Tall lamps look best on low, sturdy tables.

As to styling, your taste must be your guide. If in doubt, rely on the classic shapes — the urn or pottery vase, with white the safest color for the shade. Stop in and look over our stunning lamp selection...and we'll be glad to help you select styles appropriate to your decor.

Crafty Cooking

by
sally shaffer miller

A couple of weeks ago, my husband and I had to make a rush business trip to Dallas, a road we know well in any weather - ice, snow, rain, you name it.

But this trip was really strange. The weather had nothing to do with it. To start with, we almost missed the 287 turn-off. A little ways outside of Alvord, we were visited by a legalized magical bubblegum machine. After that we missed the "clearly marked" turn-off to Highway 380. ("Clearly marked" means the sign is at least 60 feet or more past the turn-off.) So we took a scenic tour of Decatur. No incidents until Dallas. It was late and we were hungry, but again we missed our turn and wound up eating a hamburger at Denny's.

We conducted our business the next morning without making any wrong turns at all. We went back to the motel and decided to try their restaurant. The service wasn't bad; it was horrible. The food? Well, the butter was rancid, the rolls stale and hard, and the potatoes must have been 80 years old. It wasn't five minutes before I was sick.

To assuage ourselves, we decided to go to a shopping center called Town East. East, remember that. We found ourselves, after a complicated maze of highways, on the road to Denton, which is North!

Well, except for the fact that we were trapped in the motel elevator for a while, our evening was lovely.

Sunday, we left to come home. We wanted to take an alternate route back to Denton, sure enough, took a wrong turn, and found ourselves on the way to Fort Worth. We were forced to take a brief jaunt through a town called Ponder. Once back on the right road, everything was fine.

On the return trip, only one thing happened. My husband's unflinching sense of direction and his impeccable memory for turn-offs, via landmarks, had been severely shaken, almost shattered. It would be an understatement to say he was grumpy.

So, seeking to distract him from his anger at himself, I asked him to help me plan this week's menus. I named several things and got no response. Finally, he looked at me and smiled. "Do that cabbage thing! I like that!"

So, for hurt pride, I'll do THAT CABBAGE THING. HAVE ON HAND:

- 1 tsp. very light salad oil
- 4 c. shredded or finely chopped cabbage (I use the green kind)
- 1 c. diced celery
- 1 tsp. chopped onion
- 3/4 c. chicken stock (Here you may substitute 1/2 c. chicken stock with 1/4 c. dry white wine)
- 3 tsp. soy sauce
- 1 tsp. Caraway seed (Optional, but very good if you haven't)

NOW DO THIS:

Heat the chicken stock slightly and add the wine and soy sauce. Put it aside for a few minutes, but keep it warm. Shred the cabbage and chop the celery and onion. Put the oil in a skillet and heat it and then put the cabbage and celery and onion in that. Stir it around for about 1 minute on medium heat.

Now gear the heat up to high and add the stock mixture. Cook for only about 5 minutes, turning the vegetables over and over to make sure everything is acquainted with the stock.

Cook it until it is barely tender, but still crisp. That is very important. Add the caraway seed and stir once more.

Serve this at once, using a slotted spoon. My menu for this will include baked chicken and chilled, canned tomatoes.

Fiddlehead, an edible frond of the ostrich fern, is considered a delicacy.

Ernest Hemingway: one of the ghosts.

Tennessee is still typing

At the age of 68 and 34 years after his first great success, America's greatest living playwright, Tennessee Williams, is still at the typewriter.

Williams' Wear daily recently spent some time with Williams at his Key West hideaway, during which he revealed the plot of his latest work.

"I call it the 'ghost play'—about Scott and Zelda Fitzgerald. They're both dead. Zelda died in a fire the night before at the asylum in North Carolina and he's been dead something like nine years. I call it 'Clothes for a Summer Hotel.' Everybody's going to be a ghost."

Williams never knew the Fitzgeralds but he did once meet Ernest Hemingway, whose ghost will also appear, at a party in Havana.

"I was afraid of greeting him," Williams recalls. "It was a terribly rough image that he had, you know. When I did meet him, I found him quite gentle and charming."

And Hemingway's suicide was no great shock to Williams. "I think people should kill themselves when they can no longer function as writers and when they are going to, you know, disgrace themselves."

Fear is in the master's mind

Alfred Hitchcock is not going to bask in the glory of receiving the American Film Institute's rare Life Achievement Award. Moving right along, he plans to spend the summer in Finland celebrating his 80th birthday and shooting his 54th film. He told US maga-

Though he is the master of crime on film, Hitchcock revealed that he is scared to death of the police. In fact, he refuses to drive a car for

Dear Abby

by abigail van buren

DEAR ABBY: Because I read in your column about that toll-free number, which allows runaway kids to call and let their parents know they are OK, I re-established contact with my parents, went home and had the most wonderful Easter in my life. (I'm a 19-year-old boy who dropped out of school and hit the road 15 months ago.)

Will you please run that item again, Abby?
LUCKY IN ILLINOIS

DEAR LUCKY: With pleasure: Runaways, dial 800-231-6946. An operator will telephone your parents anywhere in the U.S. and convey a message from you. ("I'm alive, don't worry about me" is typical.)

There will be no lecturing or counseling. Your call will not be traced, and the only question asked of you will be: "Do you need anything?" If you do, you'll be told where you can obtain it free. No attempt will be made to bring you home, regardless of your age.

Runaways, please forget the past and call that toll-free number now. Let somebody know you are alive. You will sleep better tonight, and so will they.

P.S. This wonderful program originated in Texas and has been adopted by 37 states! It's staffed by volunteers, including some grateful runaways who have come home.

DEAR ABBY: I have a complicated problem. My grades were too bad to pass this year so I quit high school, intending to go back next year to do it right.

My father got mad at me for dropping out and he's using that as an excuse for not letting me use his car.

Abby, I need a car to get a job. Once I earn some money I'll get my own car. My father refuses to let me use his because of this drop-out situation, so I am stuck. No car, no job, no money.

My father is unreasonable. Every time I bring up the fact that his refusal to let me use his car is the root of all my trouble, he gets mad and a fight starts.

What should I do?
NO WHEELS

DEAR NO: I'll tell you what NOT to do. Don't expect your father to provide you with a car. Figure out some way to get a job on your own and to furnish your own transportation. How about public transportation? It may not be as convenient as having your own wheels, but it's a solution.

DEAR ABBY: My husband must think he is immortal. He is getting on, but has not updated his will in the last 20 years. Our financial picture has changed radically. He has considerably more property and assets and, to top it off, he inherited quite a large sum from his mother.

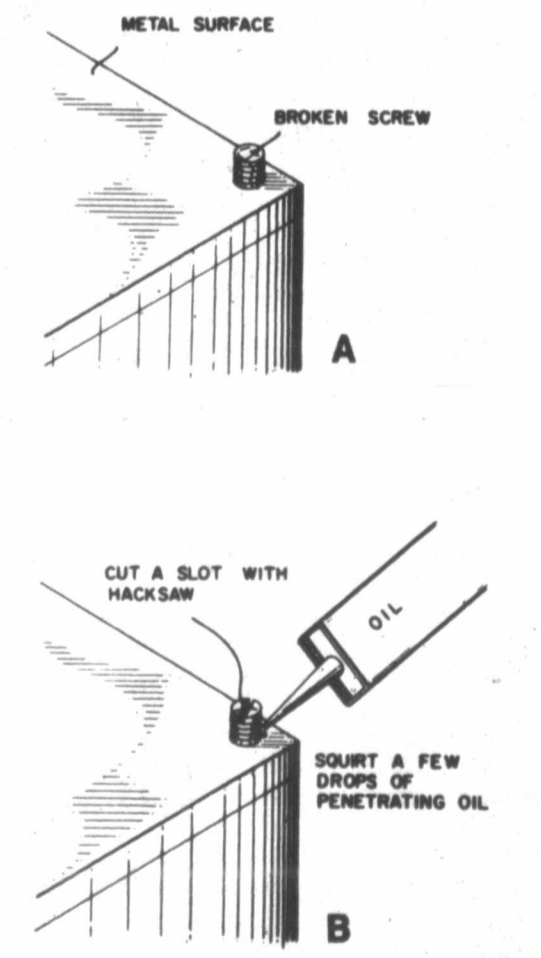

We have grown children and grandchildren, Abby, and I feel very uneasy knowing that unless my husband updates his will much of his estate will not be disposed of according to his wishes.

How can I get him to face this very important fact of life without giving him the impression that I am in a hurry to bury him?

You are not going to believe this, but he is an attorney!
MRS. G. IN BEL AIR

DEAR MRS. G.: Trying to get an attorney to update his will is like trying to get a doctor to quit smoking or lose weight. Don't give up. Keep reminding him until he does something about it. (P.S. I'm usually opposed to nagging, but in this case I recommend it.)

FIX-IT-FAST

All is not lost with broken screw

Fortunately you won't have to drive screws into solid metal very often, but when you do and the head breaks off a screw, leaving only a jagged bit of shank protruding, here is how you go about getting the shank out. You will need a hacksaw, screwdriver with blade to match hacksaw blade cut, soldering iron and penetrating oil.

1. The project should take approximately 25 minutes.
1. Use hacksaw to cut a slot across the top of the broken screw shank. Slot should be in center of the shank and be about one-sixteenth-inch deep.
2. Apply penetrating oil to screw and allow it to stand for at least an hour. If screw is on vertical surface, so oil won't remain around it, apply cotton saturated with the oil and hold in place with a long strip of masking tape.
3. After oil has penetrated, wipe area clean of oil.
4. Heat soldering iron and apply tip to exposed end of screw shank. Hold iron to shank only long enough to heat slightly.
5. Now place screwdriver in slot you have cut. Be sure screwdriver blade fits into slot and is same width as slot.
6. Turn counterclockwise. Apply downward pressure as you turn, and turn carefully. The slot is not as strong as the slot in the head of the screw, and the screw may break again.
7. If the screw doesn't turn the first time, repeat the oil and heat treatment until it does.

GRAY COUNTY HOMEMAKER COUNCIL:

The Gray County Homemaker Council will hold a business meeting at 9:30 a.m. Monday, April 23rd in the Courthouse Annex Meeting Room. Chairman, Pauline Beard will conduct the business session. All Council members should plan to attend. Following the business meeting, Mrs. Cecil Barnett will show how to make flowers on a fork. Club representatives should bring yarn and a fork to learn this activity.

KEEPING FROZEN FOOD SAFE:

Consumers should be aware of the safety of frozen food from the time they first look into the display case in the store. Be careful to buy frozen foods stored in commercial freezer cabinets only if they are stored under the line marked for safety level. Buy frozen or refrigerated foods last, then take them directly home to the freezer. Home freezer temperature should be kept at 0 degrees F. Labels on many frozen foods tell whether the product can be refrozen. It's not a good idea to refreeze unless the label says this won't harm the food.

When using frozen foods, plan ahead so they can be defrosted in the refrigerator. Thawing foods at room temperature for long periods can permit bacteria to grow producing illness. Thaw foods in the refrigerator.

HANDLING CREAM-FILLED PASTERIES SAFELY:

Improperly handled cream-filled pastries are one of the main sources of foodborne illness. To protect against staph bacteria growing and causing illness, cook cream filling for pastries and custard fillings to at least 165 degrees F. immediately after it is mixed. Then pour it into the baked shell or crust.

Custards should be baked in the serving dish or crust. Unless these are to be served immediately, refrigerate them promptly at 40 degrees F. or below - and keep them at this temperature until served. If pastries have a meringue topping, use only the whites from good quality, clean eggs with uncracked shells. After browning at 426 degrees F., the pastry should be served immediately or refrigerated.

The key to avoiding foodborne illness from cream-filled pastries is to be sure not to let them stand at room temperature - either eat hot from the stove or refrigerate immediately for later eating.

Can you believe it? It's only been a month since I last saw "The Wizard of Oz" on television and already I am having withdrawal symptoms.

I see the Tin Man's face in every oil can, the yellow Brick Road in my kitchen wax build-up, and the Wicked Witch in every store where I am trying to cash a check with only one ID.

Since "The Wizard of Oz" was filmed in 1939, it has been on television 21 times. Do you know what that means? It means Dorothy's clothes have come back into style six times and are currently "in" again.

I take nothing away from the mystical land of Oz. It is a beautiful children's story that should be seen by generations for years to come. I am only saying that after nearly a quarter of a century of viewing it, you get a little strange.

The first time I saw the movie, I was beside myself with the horror of the tornado hitting Dorothy's simple farmhouse in Kansas. How I shrieked and screamed in suspense when I saw her little bed turn and spiral toward the unknown:

By the eighth time I had seen it, I was able to ignore Dorothy's screams that the sky is falling in around her and, in fact, left the room to check a cake of yeast in the refrigerator to see if it had expired.

By the 16th time I saw "The Wizard of Oz," I did a curious thing. I actually applauded when the tornado sucked up Toto and yelled to the Wicked Witch, "Go for it!" I don't know why I did that.

My kids have a polite way of putting it. They say I am "over the rainbow," no longer have a childlike faith in goodness, or want to see anything from 1939 that looks better than I do.

That just isn't true. I love the classics and hope they'll be with us for a long time. But somehow, I dread the day when "Gone with the Wind" is being shown for the 97th time and as I watch Melanie writhe in the pain of childbirth while Atlanta is under siege, I yell at the set, "You think you got troubles now, Bunkie, wait until that ride in the buckboard back to Tara!"

I'll know the magic is gone.

Your money's worth

by sylvia porter

If you call a travel agent or airline reservation clerk to find out which airlines fly between any two cities in North America, the answer invariably will come from a single source - the "Official Airline Guide" (OAG).

But what you are told may be wrong or incomplete. Roughly the size of a major city's "Yellow Pages," the OAG is the only publication in the U.S. that combines the passenger flights and fares for all domestic airlines in the U.S., Mexico, Canada and the Caribbean. It is published by Reuben H. Donnelley Corp., a subsidiary of Dun & Bradstreet.

Subscriptions to the twice-monthly guide cost about $100 a year. The book is such a fixture in corporate travel departments and the offices of airline booking and travel agents that it's commonly known as "the Bible," reports my associate, Brooke Shearer.

But the guide's information is incomplete and biased, claims the Federal Trade Commission. In a recent, successful suit the FTC charged OAG's publishers with illegally conspiring with the major airlines to omit and bury facts about certain flights offered by smaller air carriers.

The result: commuter and intrastate airlines lost passengers, the major airlines gained them, and you (the public) spent more time and money flying than necessary.

Before the FTC began its probe, the Donnelley Corp. refused to print any of the connecting flights provided by small, commuter airlines. These carriers - Royale, Prinair, Metro Rocky Mountain, Pilgrim, etc. - generally specialize in transporting passengers from small communities (not serviced by the major airlines) to larger cities, which, of course, are covered by the big airlines.

Most of the more than 7 million passengers who fly on commuter carriers connect with other airlines, so the absence of any facts about commuter connections was "especially injurious," noted the judge who heard the case, James B. Timony.

Because reservation and travel agents themselves didn't know that commuter connections existed, you, the traveler, were forced to wait for flights offered by major airlines and which were listed by the OAG. This needless wait might cost you an extra business day or prompt you to rent a car to reach your final destination quickly.

Among the omissions from the guide were details on discount fares that most commuter carriers have arranged with the leading airlines. Since the OAG did not reveal such information to ticket agents, you ended up being overcharged.

In 1976, as a result of the FTC inquiry, the guide shifted policy and began printing commuter connections. Business on these airlines picked up almost at once. But the OAG continued discriminating against smaller lines in another way: it listed certain of their flights after those of the big carriers.

Silly or not, it's a well-established fact that being at or near the top of any list - political, social, airline flights - is a competitive advantage. As do many voters, reservation clerks make their selections by reading from the top down. The first convenient flight listed is the one they book - even if it's a competitor's.

To correct for this quirk of human nature, the OAG randomly listed identical flights of the major airlines. But it carried the commuter and intrastate airline flights which left at the same time and for the same destination in a separate category farther down the list.

These discriminatory editorial decisions, ruled the judge, were the product of both close financial ties between Donnelley Corp. and the big airlines - and a conspiracy.

In 1975 alone, Donnelley received roughly $3 million in subscriptions and other fees from the major carriers.

Also, in 1978 representatives of the leading airlines met with the OAG's publisher and another top manager in a downtown Washington, D.C., hotel. The chief topic was whether or not to integrate the flight listings of the minor carriers with those of the larger lines. All but American and National airlines voted "no."

The Official Airline Guide caught the message. It has maintained its discriminatory policies - at least until this recent court ruling directing the publisher to cease and desist.

Now, though, the next time you call for flight information, you may get the full story you need - accurate, complete, unbiased guidance on how to get from here to there in the fastest time you desire at the cheapest cost available.

Do you ever get sick and tired of watching all the drug commercials on television? You know, the ones that tell you to "break the grip of pain" with Brand X arthritis balm, or shrink hemorrhoids with Brand Y suppository, or cure dandruff with Brand Z shampoo?

I start to steam when I hear the benefits of a laxative being extolled as gentle and natural when I know that the ingredients are harsh and anything but natural. It is infuriating to be told that if I have trouble falling asleep all I need to do is pop somebody's special pill because I know that sleep researchers question both the safety and effectiveness of the ingredients in many of these products.

Unfortunately, most TV viewers don't have enough basic drug information to be able to evaluate these ads. In many ways people are at the mercy of the drug companies and all too often the claims are unsubstantiated and the messages are misleading.

Even a medical degree does not protect you from obnoxious and unscrupulous advertising. Doctors have to put up with the same sort of nonsense in their professional journals. Almost every major publication for physicians is jam packed and some magazines carry more ads than medical articles.

You might expect the promotional material aimed at physicians to be serious and sophisticated. However, the majority of these ads insult your doctor's intelligence. The illustrations are dumb, with anatomy diagrams that are often simplistic and inaccurate. Photographs appeal as much to the id as the intellect and all too often exploit women. You would be amazed at how much subliminal sex can be found between the pages of your doctor's medical journals.

One ad that appeared in many medical publications advertising a drug called clonidine, encouraged doctors to "Lower his blood pressure... Not his potency" the claim was made adjacent to a dramatic two page color photograph of a naked man and woman embracing in an intimate pose. Now if this ad were accurate many doctors might be tempted to give the drug a try since a lot of the medications that are prescribed for hypertension can interfere with sexuality. Unfortunately, the message is misleading.

According to "The Medical Letter on Drugs and Therapeutics," a highly regarded publication (that, by the way, accepts no advertising) the drug does indeed have sexual side effects. They report "that impotence and retrograde ejaculation in men and inability to achieve orgasm in women can occur in patients treated with clonidine... In one published report, the incidence of impotence in men treated with clonidine was 24 percent."

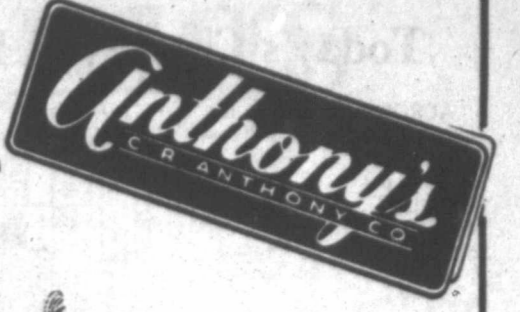

Well what can we do about the exaggeration, deception and downright false advertising that some drug companies resort to in order to promote their products? You expect your doctor to read the fine print and rely upon scientific articles to evaluate the medications he will go on to prescribe. You owe it to yourself to become as well informed about the non-prescription remedies you buy in the drug store.

Ask your pharmacist about the benefits and side effects of any over-the-counter medications you consider purchasing. Check with your librarian for books that will tell about drug ingredients. Consumers Union published an excellent book called "The Medicine Show" and Morton Rubinstein, M.D. wrote a good reference called "A Doctor's Guide to Non-Prescription Drugs."

Your best defense against misleading advertising is sound information. The next time someone asks how you spell relief for gas, remain skeptical: remember that many ads contain nothing but a lot of hot air.

Wolfe's novel to be aired

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "You Can't Go Home Again," on CBS, is adapted from Thomas Wolfe's lengthy autobiographical novel, so you might figure it to be heavygoing.

It is and it isn't. The love affair with the older woman remains a central theme, and they do claw each other in this two-hour film airing Wednesday night.

Chris Sarandon stars as the young novelist, George Webber, and Lee Grant is Esther Jack, a woman 20 years his senior. Hurd Hatfield is Webber's editor, Foxhall Edwards, a character based on the legendary Maxwell Perkins.

Just when you worry that the production is too much in awe of Wolfe's genius or that the whole thing's in danger of turning maudlin, it changes.

One moment it's heavy drama, the next appears set in the Theater of the Absurd. Overall, it's on-the-target social satire that takes a huge bite out of the pretensions of the 1920s.

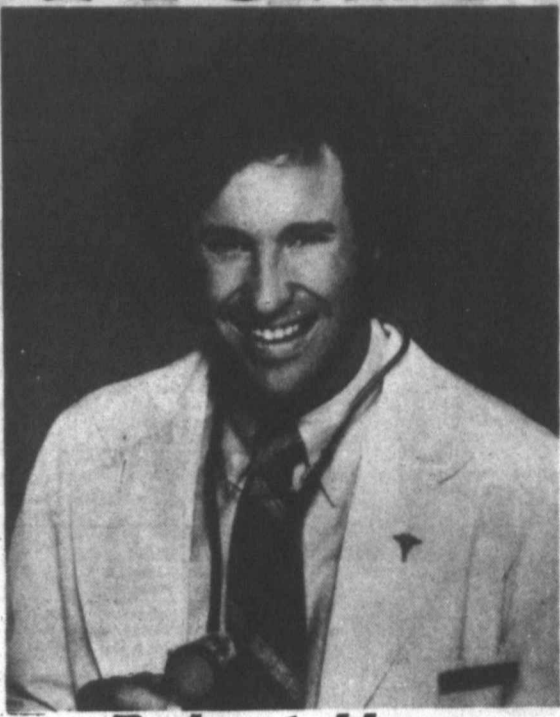

Devotees of Thomas Wolfe may scream heresy, but it is a most effective adaptation of a small slice of the novel. (It would be folly to attempt to adapt the entire novel—it would run as long, if not longer, than "Centennial.")

It was filmed on location in New York, with Jim Thorpe, Pa., standing in for Wolfe's Libya Hill.

"I like that relationship they have — that thing that people can't help doing to each other," Miss Grant said of her role. "I didn't reread Thomas Wolfe because I didn't particularly want to know his point of view of Esther Jack."

"Instead, I read things by Aline Bernstein. She had a long affair with Wolfe, and like Esther Jack she was a stage designer. One of her books, 'The Journey Down,' tells of her disintegration as the relationship is breaking up. It was the love of both of their lives. It consumed him."

Profile

Robert Hays

Robert Hays, who stars as wealthy young pediatrician Brad Benson in ABC-TV's "Angie," is the son of a colonel in the United States Marine Corps. Because his father traveled extensively as part of his career, Robert lived in many places during his youth, including Izmir, Turkey.

As a freshman at Grossmont College in San Diego, Robert found himself in a registration-day difficulty; the only available classes when it was his turn to register were track-and-field and beginning acting. He enrolled in both, but soon dropped track-and-field to devote more time to the art of stage acting.

When he transferred to San Diego State University, he joined the Actors Guild at the renowned Old Globe Theatre and performed in such plays as "The Glass Menagerie," "Man in the Glass Booth," "Richard III" and "Say Who You Are." He won the Atlas Award for his performance in the latter play. He remained at the Globe Theatre for five years and earned extra money by taking photographs of his actor friends and cleaning classrooms at a local college, using the gymnasium and showers there. He lived in an old van called "Buster."

In 1975, talent executive Eddie Foy III spotted Robert and cast him in an episode of ABC's "Harry O," then filming in San Diego. "Harry O" (and Foy) got the young actor into the Screen Actors Guild and up from San Diego to Hollywood where he has since appeared in dozens of television shows, including episodes of "The Love Boat," "Laverne and Shirley," "Most Wanted" and "Wonder Woman." In an NBC miniseries, Bob starred in the title role of "Will Rogers: Champion of the People." In the TV movie, "California Gold Rush" he portrayed the renowned California writer Bret Harte.

Robert Hays has a rich sense of humor, a genuine appreciation of people in all walks of life and a special love for animals. (He has three cats.) He is a skilled scuba diver, rock climber and horseback rider. He has a brown belt in karate, takes fencing lessons, enjoys surfing, skiing and playing his guitar. He is single and lives in West Hollywood.

BENGHAZI, Libya (AP) — "I've always reveled in controversial ethnic parts," said Anthony Quinn between scenes of "Omar Mukhtar" in which the veteran actor plays a 73-year-old Arab hero.

The film, being shot in the Libyan Sahara 400 miles south of here, depicts the bloody Bedouin uprising against Mussolini's invading Fascist troops in the 1930s.

Quinn, 63, a two-time Oscar winner, said: "I've played Mexicans, Germans, Greeks, Jews, Italians, Mongols, so why not an Arab hero for a change? The West has a great misconception of what the Arab character is."

"Omar Mukhtar," an epic with a $25 million budget, is being produced and directed by Moustapha Akkad, an American of Syrian ancestry who is a Moslem. Four years ago, Quinn starred in Akkad's first film, "The Message," the story of the prophet Mohammed.

Election may answer question

TORONTO (AP) — Canadians choose a new Parliament next month in an election Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau says may determine whether Canada stays whole or loses Quebec. But voters seem to care more about inflation, unemployment and a tax proposal that could put more dollars in their pockets.

Much of the debate is over a tax break Americans have enjoyed for decades — the right to deduct mortgage interest from income taxes. A proposal by opposition leader Joe Clark to allow it in Canada is popular with the middle class.

But the 39-year-old Clark has an image problem. His style, voice and jowly looks recall former President Richard Nixon, and his inexperience troubles many Canadians.

"Trudeau's got to go," retired steamfitter Ronald Edwards told a reporter on a Toronto street. "but I don't think Clark could stand up to the big-money guys."

Most political specialists predict neither party will win a majority of seats in the May 22 election for a new, expanded 282-seat House of Commons. In that case, the party with a plurality will try to govern as a minority in Parliament.

It will require the support of a smaller third party, the strongest of which is the New Democrats, a socialist party that wants to pull Canada out of NATO.

The latest Gallup poll gives both the Liberals and Conservatives 41 percent of the decided vote, with 15 percent going to the New Democrats. But 35 percent of the voters say they are undecided.

Trudeau's Liberals now have 133 of the 264 seats in Commons. Trudeau, 59, has led the Liberals to victory in three previous elections and has been in office longer than any incumbent leader of a major Western nation. He has the admiration of many, and even a book by his estranged wife, Margaret, packed with revelations of marital and personality problems in the Trudeau household, seems not to have hurt him politically.

When Trudeau dissolved Parliament March 26 as its maximum five-year term neared an end, he said the principal issue would be the fight to keep Canada whole in the face of French-speaking Quebec's push for secession. Conservatives, who have virtually no following in Quebec, could not deal well with the issue, he said.

The campaign plodded along dully until Clark made his proposal to give tax breaks to homeowners, an idea that has caught the imagination of countless middle-class voters. It would allow taxpayers to deduct up to $5,000 a year for interest paid on a home mortgage, and up to $1,000 a year for property taxes.

Clark contends the plan, which would cost $1.6 billion, would make it easier for Canadians to own homes and would stimulate the sluggish economy.

Trudeau says it would help the rich at the expense of the poor and economists say it would worsen Canada's 9 percent inflation rate.

"Alone of the three leaders, the New Democrats' Ed Broadbent daily criticizes a major influence on Canadian life — American control of industry, resources and culture. "We have got to cease being tenants in our own land," he told a crowd last week.

Clark blames Trudeau for unemployment and inflation and says the prime minister's tough attitudes on keeping Canada whole has fractured society. Trudeau says Clark's reluctance to assert federal power autonomous, "minded provinces would make him a headwaiter taking orders for the provinces."

Officials say warplanes hit base

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Rhodesian officials said warplanes hit a guerrilla base in Mozambique Saturday as government officials celebrated a higher-than-expected turnout at the close of the nation's first universal suffrage elections.

Government officials claimed 65 percent of the eligible voters had cast ballots in the election, which started Tuesday. They had predicted a 60 percent turnout, saying that figure would force Western nations to recognize the legitimacy of the new black majority government.

The military said the raid occurred in the northwestern province of Tete and that all planes returned safely to base. The raid was the second into Mozambique in two days. Planes hit southern Mozambique on Friday.

There has been no comment from Mozambique or from guerrilla leader Robert Mugabe's Zimbabwe African National Union, which has fought the 6-year-old war against Rhodesia from bases in Mozambique.

Before the start of elections, Rhodesian planes and troops struck into Zambia, Botswana, Mozambique and Angola to prevent the guerrillas from disrupting the elections. Election violence was mostly in rural areas, and most voting was not impeded.

Officials were predicting that Bishop Abel Muzorewa, a member of Smith's interim biracial government, would be the country's first black prime minister.

Both black and white voters were to choose 72 blacks to serve in the 100-member Parliament. The 28 white members were chosen earlier in a whites-only vote.

Rhodesia broke with Britain in 1965 over the issue of minority white government. Rhodesia has been hobbled by an international trade embargo against it and by the guerrilla war.

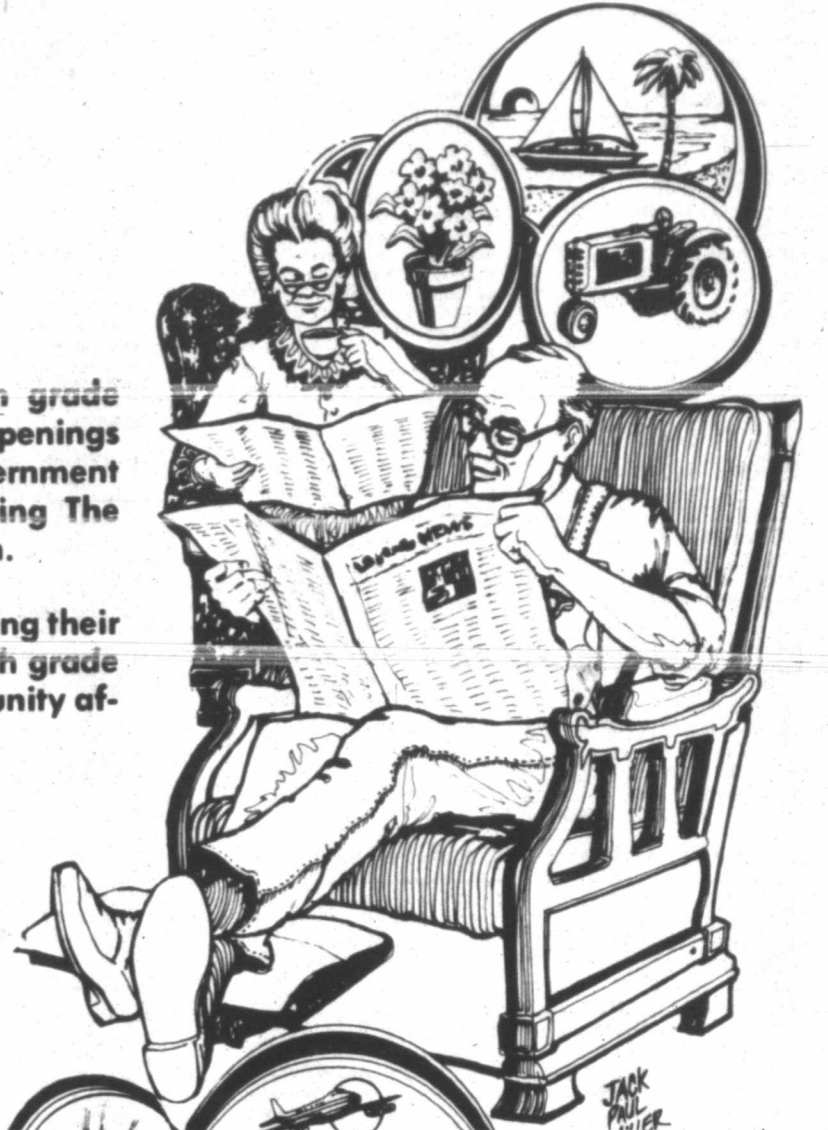

Muzorewa is one of three black moderates who joined an interim transitional government with Smith to pave the way for black majority rule. Under the elections, however, whites will retain substantial powers in the government for at least five years.
