hief Bassett says 'It can happen here'

by Mary Kaigler If anyone living in Haskell thinks all the lawlessness is happening in Abilene or other larger places remote to our area, they need only to look at Haskell Police Chief Tom Bassestt's police docket for the last several months, to realize that, as Chief Bassett says, "it can happen here."

While we have escaped the greater trauma of crime we read of in other places, we do have it here, and Chief Bassett advises all citizens to be aware of what is going on around them and in their families.

In an interview with The Free Press he stated that his philosophy with dealing with lawlessness is one of no tolerance.

"When thieves learn you mean it they soon move off to other places," he said.

Activities that his department has dealth with during the last few months include:

Feb. 1, Burkett's Restuarant, Double A Drive Inn, and Lela's were burglarized. Four adults were taken into custody.

Feb. 6, additional burglaries occurred in the county. All were cleared by arrests. Several agencies including the Texas Rangers and Haskell Sheriff's Office worked together to help clear these and other offenses.

Mar. 26, two adult suspects passed five checks without permission at local grocery stores. They were arrested for forgery. In April two cases of assault, one involving family violence, and one simple assault were both cleared with arrests. Apr. 15, one vehicle was stolen from Larned Sales Center. Recovery was made the same day with 14

Apr. 21, two Haskell juveniles were taken into custody after many Haskell citizens for their cooperation in helping his department in many of these

Munday to speak at homecoming

Haskell native Steve Munday, Executive Vice President of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association will be the keynote speaker during the Haskell Homecoming celebration, Oct. 22-

In making the announcement, Homecoming Association President, Bob Aycock said the organization is very pleased to have Munday come, adding to what is planned as a great school reunion.

Appointed to the new post of Executive Vice President to the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association in 1995, Munday is in charge of daily management of the 122-year-old livestock trade association, headquartered in Fort Worth. He has a headquarters staff of 46 employees and a field staff of 118, including 12 field inspectors and 82 brand inspectors.

He also serves as assistant secretary of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Foundation, treasurer of the association's political action committee, and secretary-treasurer of TSCRA Legal Defense Fund.

Executive editor of The Cattleman and TSCRA News Update, Munday has served as the group's administrative assistant for media and government relations since 1981.

Munday began his career with TSCRA in 1972 as a field editor of The Cattleman. In 1976 he became the magazine's editorial director, and the Association's news director in 1978.

Isbell to attend U.S. Athlete games

by Mary Kaigler There is a world of difference and a lot of miles between Krooked River Ranch in Haskell County and the city of Newport in Rhode Island. Yet, Paint Creek student Stefanie Isbell will close that gap with a fast plane ride on June 25, when she goes there to participate in the Inaugural U. S. Scholar-Athlete Games at the University of Rhode Island. Accompanied by her mother, Becky Wilson, she will fly into Boston, where they will rent a car for the drive to Newport.

In Rhode Island Stefanie will be one of 1600 young scholars, talented in athletics or the fine arts, who have been selected from 50 states to be a part of the only program in the United States combining sport, culture and education at one site at one time. The concept is unique, yet dates back to the first modern Olympic Games of 1896.

Conceived by the Institute for International Sport, which is dedicated to promoting world friendship through sport and culture, the goals of the U.S. Scholar-Athlete games are: to promote ethical behavior, sportsmanship, understanding, acceptance and friendship among the youth of the United States; establish open, non-political, long standing relationships among tomorrow's world leaders; utilize sports and the arts as means of communication and learning rather than competition; and to identify and train young people to develop leadership skills and networking strategies as they pursue positions of leadership in government, education and other professional

Since those attending the games can participate in only one of the fourteen sports programs or one of seven cultural programs offered, Stefanie has chosen basketball. At Paint Creek the sixteen-year-old junior has been a starter on the varsity team for three years, being named to First Team All-District each season. She likes all sports and also participated in the Regional golf playoffs.

Society, is Varsity co-head cheerleader and involved in UIL and FHA Star Events. She is also listed in Who's Who Among American Students. A member of the Paint Creek Baptist Church, she does community service by baby sitting and spending time at local nursing homes. When she graduates from high school, Stefanie plans to attend South Plains College in Levelland, majoring in business management. Stefanie's parents are Roy and Becky Wilson of Haskell and Tony Isbell of Midland. Her grandparents are Bob and Carylon Veretto of Levelland, Letha and Jack Isbell of Haskell and Lee Roy and Frances Wilson of Rule. She has a sister, Lesli Isbell and a brother, Lee Taylor Wilson.

Particularly looking forward to meeting other students from all over the nation, Stefanie says she will be 'dormed' with someone from another state. Each student is asked to bring souvenirs from their home state to exchange with one another. During an impressive opening and closing ceremony, each state delegation will march in carrying their state flag, much like the World Olympics Games ceremonies.

While in Rhode Island, Stefanie will be busy attending seminars, playing two games a day and attending education programs which will review the important themes of ethics, community service and global responsibility in the 21st century. Prominent speakers from throughout the world will address the participants and lead them in discussion.

The games will be from June 26 through July 2. Although she has been excited about going since she first learned she'd been accepted, Stefanie has been too busy with classes and TAAS tests to really get ready for it. Even with summer vacation from school coming up she won't have a lot of time, she says. Her busy schedule includes going to cheerleader camp in Abilene the first week in June, going to a family vacation the second week and working at her family's Krooked River Ranch the third week and first part of the fourth week of the month before she leaves for the games.

In the meantime she is busily working to raise the needed funds for her trip. Through help from a donut sale she held, donations from individuals and the upcoming benefit lunch to be held at Paint Creek School, May 16, she has started to make some progress in that direction, although she still has a way to go. She is thankful for any bit of help, she said.

A gift of money to help Stefanie take advantage of this opportunity seems like an appropriate gesture of appreciation from a community that values the efforts of its responsible young people.

By Ed Sterling TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN — Texas businesses that provide day-care services for their employees would get a tax cut under legislation passed 30-0 last week by the state Senate.

The legislation, which would cost the state $5.6 million through the 2000-2001 biennium — offers a franchise tax credit of up to $50,000 — or half the cost of offering day care.

Businesses would get the break by establishing and operating a day-care center or by purchasing child-care services for their em-

The bill's sponsor, Sen. Tom Haywood, R-Wichita Falls, said his proposal would:

■ help Texas attract new businesses; and meet the booming demand for child care because of welfare reform, thus making it easier for some Texans to get back to work.

Sen. Florence Shapiro, R-Plano, sees Haywood's bill as a solution to a difficult puzzle. "I think what we've done here is to combine two very important ele-

"We've combined the business community and their commitment and we've combined families and their commitment.

"And as you mesh those two you have a pro-business bill that is also a pro-family bill," Shapiro said.

Sen. Rodney Ellis, D-Houston, one of 17 co-authors of the measure, said nearly 3 million Texas children under age 18 have both parents or their only parent in the workforce.

Youth Violence Study Proposed

The high school campus murder spree last month in Littleton, Colo., and discoveries of plans to commit violence by Texas school students have inspired legislation to protect students from violence, filed by Rep. Dianne White Delisi, R-Temple.

Delisi's House Concurrent Resolution 256 would require state agencies, under the direction of the state Department of Health, to search for root causes of violent behavior and find ways to "reduce the number of youth inclined to inflict violence on others."

The inquiry would include the participation of parents, children, classroom teachers and school

What happens when domestic dog meets wild hog? Anyone who's read Texan Fred Gipson's classic boy-and-dog story "Old Yeller" or has seen the Disney film can tell you: it's bloody.

A Houston television station broadcast a report on staged hogdog fights, in which the animals were penned together for sport, much like cockfighting.

State Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, reacted by filing legislation to outlaw hog-dog fights. The proposed ban drew the praise of animal rights advocates.

It also drew the condemnation of some farmers and ranchers who use dogs to hunt down crop-destroying, livestock-killing and property-damaging feral hogs.

Wilson said his intention is not to curb the use of dogs for hunting. The purpose of the bill, he said, is only to stop the penning of hogs and dogs together to make them fight.

■ Last week, smoky haze from burn-offs in the Mexican states of Nuevo Leon and Tamaulipas clung to Corpus Christi and the Coastal Bend. Last May and June, health warnings were issued when burnoffs got out of control in Mexico, creating hundreds of forest and range fires that blanketed Texas with smoke.

■ Former Texas Attorney General Dan Morales has been subpoenaed in regard to Texas' lawsuit against the tobacco industry. The court order stems from a Houston lawyer's $260 million claim for his role in the $17.3 billion settlement.

A bill to build a new state history museum and name it in honor of former Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock has been approved by the Senate and the House. The measure by Rep. Tony Goolsby, R-Dallas, awaits Gov. Bush's signature.

■ A recent CNN-USA Today-Gallup poll shows Gov. George W. Bush would beat Vice President Al Gore in a presidential race by 16 percent of the vote.

Former U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop last week ran full-page ads in several Texas newspapers urging Gov. Bush to create a well-funded program to discourage cigarette smoking.

From The Inside Out

By Mary Kaigler

Many bits of information and lists of facts confront us every day. Not always of interest unless it touches on our own special, (and perhaps narrow), range of study, expertise or interests, it often slips past us like ships in the night.

However, something that was faxed to me last week has caused me to think in some new ways about our world we live in today, and the way we view our place in

Not new, I'm sure, it came to me from my daughter in California where it had been taken off of the Japanese internet by a colleague. She thought I might find it to be interesting. She was right.

It is a statistical look at the whole world, as being made up of only 100 people. According to the study, it was found that if we could shrink the earth's population to a village of precisely 100 people, with all the existing human ratios remaining the same, it would look like the following.

There would be: 57 Asians

21 Europeans

14 from the Western Hemisphere (North and South

48 would be male.

70 would be non-white; 30

80 would live in substandard housing. 50 would suffer from malnutrition. One would be near death. One would be near birth. 70 people would be unable to

Only one would have a college education and only one would own a computer. The list ends with the observation that, "When one considers our world from such a compressed perspective, the need for both acceptance and understanding of one another becomes glaringly apparent."

In considering this compilation of facts, and seeing our world in this perspective, it seems that our own personal perspectives of the world are so often based solely on what we think, what we see and what we do. And certainly, with our thousands of computers up and running, our economy up and growing, and our advanced technology escalating, we may have an overblown perspective of what we should have, what we want, and what we expect in terms of the world's resources.

When we consider that 70% of those in the world cannot read we have to realize that those in any country who can't read, cannot progress very far. With a college education considered so basic, and being earned by so many of our young people in this country, it is hard for us to believe that most of us here are living in a vast minority when it comes to education and literacy.

When we consider that 50% of people in the world suffer from malnutrition and even its companions, hunger and starvation, we have to realize that we are indeed "on top of the heap" and privileged in so many ways.

Even taking into consideration all the diverse incomes and degrees of "having and getting" we've been able to achieve for ourselves, most of us have and enjoy far greater affluence than we could ever guess. Looking beyond our own little perimeters of interest, to the larger situation of a wide world that is getting smaller every day--an earth that's been given to every other human being along with us-- it seems to me that we have responsibilities we haven't yet addressed. As we consume so much of the earth's resources, we should be leading the way in sensibly looking to ways to conserve them.

And if, indeed, as some will tell us, it is not the responsibility of a country that has been blessed with such an environment of opportunity, to be our brother's keeper, it certainly should be our joyful choice as an individual to do whatever we can.

While we cannot solve all of the world's problems, we who can give even a cup of cold water to another, physically or figuratively, should thank God every day that we are in some kind of position to do so.

I'm glad to be reminded again of all these things we so easily take for granted and expect as our inalienable right as a citizen of this

Osteoporosis is national health problem

by Lou Gilly Haskell Co. Extension Agent Osteoporosis, a major health problem in America, will receive statewide attention during Osteoporosis Action Week, May

Each year 95,000 Texas women are among 1.5 million American women who receive fracture caused by osteoporosis. The cost to Texas today is about $1 billion or more in hospital and nursing home expenses. This figure is expected to increase to $16 billion in the next 50 years for Texans.

This bone-weakening disease affects an estimated 8 million Americans. An additional 17 million more are at increased risk due to low-bone mass. About one in two women and one in eight men are affected by osteoporosis.

While there are treatments for osteoporosis, there is no cure. This is why prevention is so important.

People can do several things to build and maintain their bone strength. They can take preventative actions by getting an adequate amount of calcium each day, maintaining a regular weightbearing exercise program, quit smoking or do not start and avoid excessive amounts of alcohol.

Dietary habits throughout life influence the risk of developing osteoporosis-a weakening of the bones that causes them to become so fragile that they fracture under normal use. Some dairy products are high in fat, but you can get calcium without excess fat calories by drinking more skim milk and low-fat milk products.

Following the recommended dietary allowances (RDA) of the U. S. Department of Agriculture Food Guide Pyramid is significant for everyone. Making a more healthful lifestyle choice is especially important for those who have or may be at risk for a chronic

People at high risk for osteoporosis are Caucasian and Asian females with small body frames who have a low calcium intake, smoke, have a family history of osteoporosis, receive steroid therapy, have estrogen deficiency or excess thyroid hormones and do not exercise.

For those with osteoporosis, foods rich in calcium are important in the daily meal planning. Dairy foods contribute nearly threequarters of the calcium in the food supply, which is well-absorbed by the body. Other foods that are good sources of calcium include dark leafy greens such as collards (drained and cooked) or broccoli, tofu (processed with calcium sulfate), dried beans and almonds.

To determine if you have osteoporosis or if you may be at risk for the disease, see a physician. Based on a comprehensive medical assessment, your doctor may recommend that you have your bone mass

A bone mass measurement is the only way to tell if you have osteoporosis. Specialized tests called bone density tests can measure bone density in various sites of the body. A bone density test can help detect possible fractures before they occur. Medicare beneficiaries prone to osteoporosis are now able to get a screening once every two years.

Contact Lou Gilly, your local County Extension Agent in Family and Consumer Sciences for more information about the treatment and prevention of this devastating disease. The Haskell County Extension Office is located at 101 S. Ave. D in Haskell. The telephone number is (940) 864-2546 or 2658

This Week's Devotional Message: YOU NEVER GRADUATE FROM THE SCHOOL OF FAITH

college, brings you literally to the threshold of life. You have now been given all the skills you will need to go out into the "real" world and face whatever problems and challenges will be thrown in your way. In the same manner, your religious education will prepare you to come to grips with life; only there is no "graduation" from this school. Faith must be continually studied, renewed and practiced, and your education never stops; but the rewards are the confidence and peace of mind which enable you to face any situation that may arise. This knowledge is available to you at the Church of your choice

The completion of your education, whether high school or

Haskell Healthcare Center

by Betty Hearn Activities Director

The month of May started with a "Mother's Day Party," honoring the mothers of the facility. Herman Hearn, Jim Burt and W. H. Patterson entertained the residents with guitars and fiddle music. They sang and played favorites of the residents. Laela Martin sang "Amazing Grace." Refreshments of frosted Cokes and cookies were served. Charles and Flossie Bates helped serve the refreshments.

Other guests were Eloise Reese and Bobby Medford. We would like to thank all those that made our party a big success!

Several residents, Betty Hearn and Flossie Bates enjoyed a trip to the Haskell Park. We had ice cream and the duck and geese had bread, fed to them by the residents. All reported a good time.

We have a new resident who has come in for therapy. We welcome Betty Davis, who will be with us until she is able to return home.

Local students race solar power car

Some Haskell Jr. High students recently competed in Texas Utilities 4th Annual Solar Car Race held at Wylie Jr. High in Abilene April 10. The Haskell Jr. High students were among 28 schools participating in the race. The students built a solar-powered car from a kit provided to them from TU Electric/Lone Star Gas. The solar car kits are delivered to participating schools in the TU Electric/Lone Star Gas service areas. They are provided with a solar panel, motor, axles and other moving parts, but the students had to develop the car's body and assemble the final product. The students had approximately two months to construct their car.

The Haskell Jr. High students competed for prize money for their science department and a chance to compete at Texas Utilities EarthFair commemorating Earth Day which was held April 17 in

Maidens team ends successful season

A successful season has come to an end for the Haskell Maiden Softball team. After only two years of playing high school softball, the Maidens found their place in the playoffs.

Mon., April 26, the Maidens fell to the Petrolia Lady Pirates in the Bi-District championship game with a final score of 3-2.

The Maidens led 2-0 until the fifth inning when Petrolia began rallying. The score was soon 3-2 and remained that way. The Maidens hit the ball, but the Lady Pirates just made the plays. It was a well fought battle, but in the end it just wasn't enough.

"It was the best game we've ever played. The loss was hard, but we went down fighting," said junior Brittany Bartley.

For Maiden softball, this year has definitely been remarkable. The Maidens have proved themselves this year by being named runner-up in district 3-2A, winning two tournaments and appearing in the playoffs. "This season has been the most fun and rewarding through my nine years of coaching. The girls have worked hard and proved to be a great team. It has been an honor to coach these athletes," said Head Coach Robb McClellan.

Although, the team will be losing senior starters, 1st baseman, Amanda Crawford and shortstop, Rosalinda Gonzales, they will be returning thirteen lettermen and seven starters. The team looks forward to next season and continued success. "We will miss the leadership and play of these two Seniors," remarked Coach McClellan.

Team awards given at the All Sports banquet included: Defensive Player of the Year, Caitlin Frierson. Frierson led the Maidens with a 12-8 pitching record, a .928 fielding percentage and added a .324 batting average to round out her year. April Villarreal took the honors for Offensive Player of the Year. Villarreal led the team in batting average, with .382 average, runs batted in with 29, end up second in On Base Percentage with .466 and ended the year with an .809 fielding percentage.
