Strategic planning session set by DCOH

By James Elam, Director
Development Corp. of Haskell
Today's communities face new competitive challenges. The rules of the game have changed. The sweeping economic changes of the past decade have altered the ways in which some states and communities seek to strengthen their economies and provide good jobs for their people. What seemed to work well and make sense for most of the last century is suddenly obsolete; pushed aside by a rush of new realities linked to the internationalization of the U.

S. economy and the introduction of information technologies into the workplace.

On September 9th and 10th, a City of Haskell Task Force

Committee will meet with Todd Thompson from the Oncon Economic Development Department to discuss and plan for the competitive challenges facing the community. The primary objective of the plan is to enhance Haskell's position in recruitment and expansion of commercial and retail businesses through strategic actions that are both realistic and achievable. There is no shortage of ideas for specific development projects that communities can undertake. The key concern is selecting those projects and efforts that make the most sense given a community's particular opportunities and resources.

Fortunately, during the last ten years, a new paradigm for economic development began to emerge in America's communities, which suggests some answers to these challenges. A decade ago economic development was synonymous with "smokestack chasing"—luring footloose branch plants to your state or locality. But during the past few years, a virtual revolution has occurred in state and local economic development strategies in response to the challenges of today's economy.

Communities need to better recognize the role of external forces—specifically, national and global economic trends—and their effects on the areas potential for development.

In today's environment, communities face not only the challenge of spurring growth, but also the challenge of repositioning their economies in light of global economic forces. Second, communities must focus on actions that are strategic in that they are realistic and achievable, as well as having potential for the maximum impact over the long term.

The following local citizens have made a commitment of their time to serve on the task force: Teri and Eddie Bland, James Frawner, Donnie Rieger, Lorie Rodriguez, Kenny Thompson, Robert Tribbey, Loutina White, Sam Watson, W. L. Wolf and Joe Yates.

They will be helping determine the direction of economic and community development and will be open to suggestions as the planning process takes place.

If you have ideas about projects in community development or economic development, please take the time to contact one of the task force members or the Development Corporation office to express your views.

STRATEGIC PLANNING TASK FORCE—Members of a newly formed task force for helping determine the direction of economic and community development, were introduced during an orientation session Fri., Aug. 30. From the left, front, are Eddie Bland, Teri Bland, Lorie Rodriguez, Loutina White and Joe Yates.

Back, Kenny Thompson, James Frawner, W. L. Wolf, Robert Tribbey, Donnie Rieger and Sam Watson. Introductions and orientation presentations were made by James Elam, director of DCOH, followed by comments by County Judge David Davis, Haskell Mayor Ken Lane and DCOH President Randy Hise.

Haskell Indians fall football campaign to kickoff Friday night in Munday

First down, touchdown, extra point, fifteen yard penalty; all terms we are used to hearing! And what do these terms mean? Football, the favorite game of a lot of Texans, is again upon the calendar for true sports fans. So circle the wagons! The Indians are on the warpath.

The Haskell Indians will kick off their 2002 fall campaign at 7:30 Friday night, Sept. 6, when they encounter the Munday Moguls in the opening game played in Munday.

Although small in size, the Haskell team will be big in heart and hustle, says the coaching staff, with a total of seven varsity lettermen returning this year.

Varsity playing experience will be one area that the Indian coaching staff will be working on during this preseason schedule, they said.

The Indians will be playing in District 8-2A, which is now a little different than last year's 8-2A. Eastland, Cisco, Hawley, Anson, Stamford and Haskell will comprise the new 8-2A District for the next two years.

The younger Indians, the JV, and the 7th and 8th grade Warriors, will start their season Thurs., Sept. 5. Kick off time for the 7th grade is 4:00 p.m., with the 8th grade and JV immediately following. The younger teams will host the younger Munday Moguls. Indian Field will be the game site.

Haskell Coach Brad Brunson invites everyone to make plans to come see these these young men play, and to back the Indians this year.

Ortiz receives Coast Guard's Gold Medal

On Aug. 4, 2001, Gavino Ortiz of the U. S. Coast Guard on Padre Island was honored for his efforts in saving several people during a storm at sea. At that time, it was reported that the Haskell native would be receiving the silver life saving medal.

Recently, almost a year later, his honor for his heroic actions was upgraded by the Coast Guard, and he was bestowed something higher. On July 26, 2002, he was presented with the Coast Guard Gold Medal, one of the highest honors in the U. S. Coast Guard. According to the citation presented to Ortiz that day, the medal recognizes his efforts and fortitude during the extreme and dangerous situation. The award is authorized and presented by the President of the United States.

Although the surf waters were a serious threat to his own safety, when Gavino Ortiz arrived at the county beach that day of Aug. 4, 2001, and saw people in distress, he knew there was only one choice.

Refusing to let anyone perish, the 21-year-old went into the swirl of riptides without any safety line, managed to fight his way and rescue seven swimmers from drowning.

"We pulled up at beach access and couldn't get the vehicle through, with all the people around, so I got out and saw everybody standing on the beach. I saw five out there (in the water), and then I saw two people go under," Ortiz said. "Usually we hook a line to us, but there was no time for that, so I went in."

Fighting to get to the swimmers, Ortiz swam about 75 yards in high surf and was able to recover a 59-year-old man.

He then pulled in two more swimmers who were about two yards away. On two occasions, he had to dive underwater to pull the victims back to the surface.

As he was bringing in the group of five swimmers, Ortiz managed to also retrieve a Cameron County park ranger who was struggling in the surf.

Eventually, all six people were returned to safety. But, it was not over for Ortiz, as he spotted an Island firefighter who was caught in the riptide, being dragged out to sea.

"I was physically tired, but emotionally, I was wound up and the adrenaline was pumping. I was relieved that after it was all over, that seven people and myself were alive to live another day," he said.

Chief Warrant Officer Patrick Culver said that in 21 years, this is only the second time that he has seen the awarding of the prestigious medal, which ranks higher than the bronze star awarded for acts during combat. He said Ortiz deserves the high praise he is receiving, and is a fine example of what the Coast Guard has to offer. "He epitomizes all that's great in our service," he said.

Ortiz has also been selected to receive the Coast Guard's Person of the Year Award, presented by the Coast Guard Combat Veteran Association. It will be presented to him Oct. 31, in Reno, Nevada.

TAX PLANNING

Written By
Gerald Rodgers, CPA

CONGRESS FAILS TO KILL THE DEATH TAX

Recently, Congress rejected a measure that would have permanently repealed the estate tax. The reality is that high estate taxes still exist. Waiting around for Congress to change the law could cause you to lose a large chunk of your estate to taxes.

As you probably know, the 2001 Tax Act included major estate tax changes. From 2002 through 2009, the top estate tax rate gradually decreases, and the amount exempt from tax gradually increases. Then in 2010, the estate tax disappears—but only for one year. In 2011 the estate tax is due to return to the 2001 rules unless Congress changes the law. The uncertainty of permanent estate tax repeal coupled with the changes planned for the next eight years makes estate planning more important than ever.

Where do you start? Begin by making sure your plan documents utilize basic tax-cutting strategies. Outdated language in your will or other planning documents may prevent your estate from taking advantage of the changing rates and exemptions. If you own substantial assets, review your gifting program for ways to transfer your wealth tax-free. For example, in 2002 you can give away $11,000 per recipient to as many people as you want. If you're a business owner, planning is essential to ensure that your business will pass to your heirs as smoothly as possible.

As part of your estate review, pay attention to the nontax issues of estate planning. Make sure guardians are named for young children and that your will, durable power of attorney, and medical directives are up to date. Evaluate your beneficiary choices on your retirement accounts, life insurance policies, and annuities.

Estate planning is a very personal process, and each family plan is unique. If you'd like to get together to discuss your estate planning concerns, call us.

His project was made possible through donations made by many special friends.

In earning the Eagle Scout award, he became one of only 2 percent of all boys entering scouting who become an Eagle Scout.

HIGHLIGHTS

By Mike Cox

Senate subcommittee previews spaceport sites

AUSTIN — Realizing that the supply of oil and gas below is finite, future minded West Texans are looking to the infinite range of outer space.

The Senate Finance Subcommittee on the Spaceport Trust Fund met recently to hear testimony on the Fort Stockton area as the possible site for a spaceport envisioned for the state.

Pecos County, the state's second largest in area, is competing with Brazoria and Willacy counties as the location of the proposed port for future space traffic.

"You could crash something out here and wouldn't hurt anybody," County Judge Delmon Hodges quipped.

Noting that West Texas "is literally moving backwards" because of a decline in the oil industry and lack of water, Brenda Lee of the Midland College Technical Training Center said the space center would foster engineer programs and be advantageous to the entire region.

A major impediment to the development of the center anywhere in Texas is money, but Sen. Mike Jackson, chairman of the committee, seemed impressed with the West Texas presentation.

"It's gonna be a big battle over the money," he said, "but (West Texas is) way out in front."

Money for increased security

Texas has received $36.7 million in federal funds to upgrade security at 15 airports across the state, the Governor's Office announced recently.

The biggest chunk of the money will go to Dallas' Love Field, which will receive $7.6 million for terminal improvement with another $537,279 for runway rehabilitation.

"As a state with numerous ports of entry, we must take every precaution to keep citizens safe and to keep Texans traveling on business and pleasure."

Gov. Rick Perry said in announcing the Federal Aviation Administration grants.

Health Alert Network established

With the anniversary of the Sept. 11, terrorist attacks fast approaching, the state earlier this month activated the Health Alert Network, a secure Internet connection enabling government agencies and Texas' health-care authorities to react rapidly to any situation involving the release of a biological agent.

The Governor's office says 64 local health departments already are connected with 80 more expected to be online by Oct. 1.

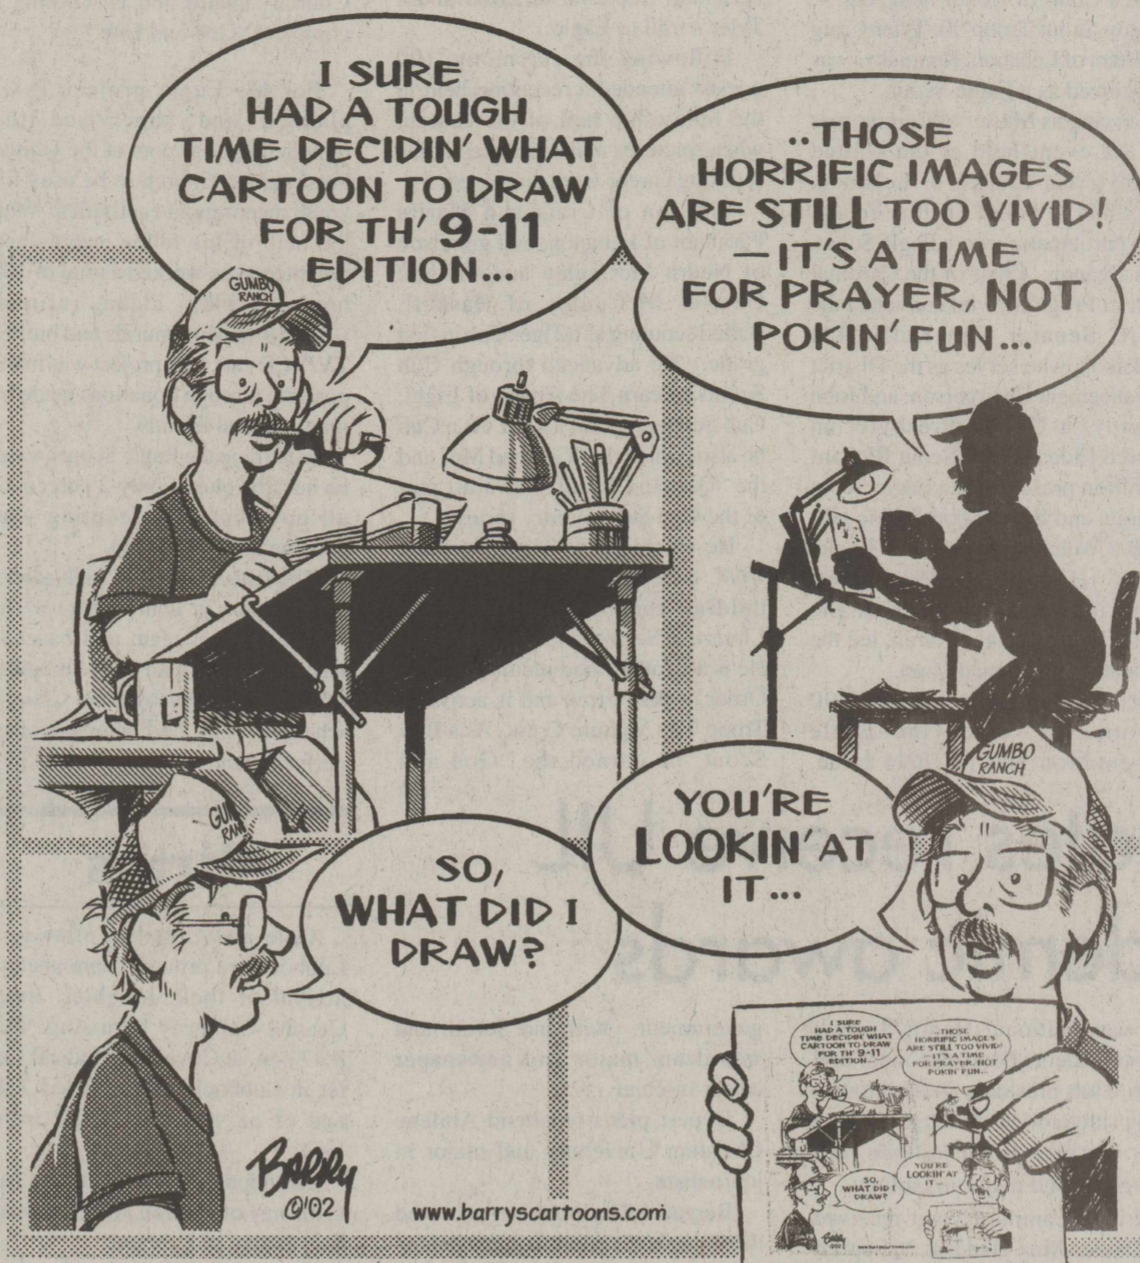

Partially funded with money from the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the network was set up by the Texas Department of Health and the Texas Association of Local Health Officials.

More high-lites

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department has added 11 new pieces of land in Floyd County for pheasant hunting this December. One catch: Hunters must have paid their $40 public hunting permit. The bad news is that a couple of good Central Texas dove hunting spots leased by the department in recent years for pheasant hunting were not available this year due to changes of ownership or "conversion to other land use not attractive to doves..."

A sobering statistic from the Texas Education Agency: Of 1.8 million Texas schoolchildren who enrolled in grades 7-12 last year, 1 percent dropped out. That's 17,563 children likely not to have a high school diploma. The drop out rate, though not good, at least represented an improvement from the year before, when the rate was 1.3 percent...

Head 'em up, move 'em out: The Texas Historical Commission has just released a new brochure on the Chisholm Trail, the 19th century cattle corridor credited with resurrecting Texas' post-Civil War economy. A combination map and history lesson, the brochure is designed for travelers interested in the state's colorful past. Seventh in the Texas Heritage Trails Program series, the brochure can be ordered from the commission's Web site, www.thc.state.tx.us.

Ask the AG

By John Cornyn, Attorney General

Q: Can I lose my driver's license or my hunting license if I don't pay child support?

A: Yes. Non-custodial parents who hold a State of Texas license, owe more than three months past due child support, and are not in compliance with an existing court-ordered or voluntary repayment schedule, may face license suspension.

Most adults have a driver's license. Many have professional licenses such as medical, dental, law and commercial vehicle. Others have recreational permits such as hunting and fishing licenses.

The Office of the Attorney General's Child Support Division matches its caseload with computer tapes from 60 different licensing agencies.

The system checks every six months for non-custodial parents who hold eligible licenses and meet the criteria for license suspension. When a match occurs, the Office of the Attorney General provides the license holder with a warning and an opportunity to resolve the outstanding delinquency.

If the non-custodial parent fails to respond, the Child Support Division will confirm the parent's location and other information necessary to suspend the license and refer the case for administrative or judicial prosecution. In State Fiscal Year 2001 (ending August 31), we filed 4,753 cases for administrative or judicial license suspension.

Q: Can any other state agency or private company handle child support enforcement cases, and if so, would I receive money sooner?

A: In Texas, county-operated domestic relations or child support offices, private attorneys, and private collection agencies also provide some child support enforcement services. Private agencies charge for their services.

If you use the services of a private child support collection agency, be sure that you fully understand any contract that you sign.

The majority of the Attorney General's incoming cases do not have established paternity or child support orders. These cases take longer to process than cases with established paternity and child support orders. Private child support collection agencies and county domestic relations offices generally handle only cases with established paternity and existing court child support orders.

The Office of the Attorney General is required to provide child support services to all families who apply for our services and to all families receiving Temporary Assistance to Needy Families (TANF). Moreover, the Office of the Attorney General provides the full range of child support services free of charge. As a result, the Attorney General's caseload is very large — much larger than that of any private collection agency.

A private agency may be able to process some cases more quickly. This factor should be balanced against the cost of hiring a private agency.

The 77th Texas Legislature passed a law regulating the activities of private child support enforcement agencies. Effective January 1, 2002, agencies are required to register with the Texas Department of Banking to operate in Texas. The Department of Banking has the authority to revoke the registration of an agency that does not comply with the law.

Q: How can the amount of child support be changed?

A: Only the Court can modify a child support order, which establishes the amount of child support to be paid. It cannot be done by agreement of the parties.

Grounds for a modification include a material and substantial change in the circumstances of a child or another person affected by the order, or the passage of three years since the last child support order and a difference in the existing monthly payment by either 20 percent or $100 from the amount that would be ordered according to an updated calculation using the child support guidelines.

A parent subject to a child support order can request a review of the ordered child support amounts every three years by contacting the Office of the Attorney General.

To request a modification, or for further information on Child Support Services offered by the Office of the Attorney General, call (800)252-8014. Information is also available on our website at www.oag.state.tx.us.

Haskell CISD Comments

By Eddie Bland, Superintendent

Excitement and energy levels are high as Haskell CISD begins a new school year. The year will be filled with new opportunities for our students. Our district remains committed to providing the best learning environment possible for each and every student in the district. While many of the staff members attended workshops, training and seminars to improve their knowledge and skill, others worked diligently preparing our buildings and grounds for this school year.

Haskell CISD enters this school year with high expectations. If you have had the opportunity to visit either of the campuses, you should have noticed the positive atmosphere. One of my favorite quotes explains what is happening in Haskell CISD. "Never doubt that a small group of thoughtful, committed people can change the world: indeed it is the only thing that ever has." The entire staff of Haskell CISD has been charged with making the commitment to do "Whatever it Takes" to promote positive attitudes and high achievements throughout our district and community.

We are proud of all of our achievements in and out of the classrooms in Haskell CISD. The achievements of our students and staff are due to the cooperation and support of the community and school. Parents and community members are encouraged to visit our schools and experience these achievements and successes in progress.

One thing you can count on is that there is never a dull moment at school. The fun and excitement begin on the first day of school and continue on until the last day of school. Working daily to insure the education of our students is a wonderful job, and an immense responsibility.

It is our privilege to participate in the growth and education of your children. On behalf of each staff member, I would like to thank you for allowing us this privilege. Please contact me with any questions, comments or concerns you might have about our district.

The problem keeps getting heavier

Five Texas cities recently received the "weighty" honor of being named among the fattest cities in the nation, with Houston again having the dubious distinction of being America's fattest city.

Other Texas cities on the list include Dallas at No. 5, San Antonio 7th, Fort Worth 8th and El Paso 15th.

More frightening than Texans' expanding girths is the rising number of overweight children. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), 25 percent of children and adolescents are overweight or are at risk of becoming obese.

Overweight adolescents have a 70 percent chance of becoming overweight or obese adults. That risk increases to 80 percent if one or both parents are overweight or obese. Among children ages 5 to 11 who are overweight, 61 percent have one or more cardiovascular disease risk factors such as elevated cholesterol levels or high blood pressure.

Dr. Nancy DiMarco, a research professor in the Department of Nutrition and Food Sciences, and nutrition coordinator for the Institute for Women's Health and the master's program in Exercise and Sports Nutrition at Texas Woman's University, says the reason is that American kids are simply not getting enough exercise.

She points out that fewer than 20 percent of students living within a one-mile radius of their school actually walk to school. Poor community planning has resulted in neighborhoods that have inadequate parks and recreation facilities. Parents' concern about children's safety has curbed both the amount of time and places children are allowed to play outdoors. Computers, video games and television viewing hold greater appeal for children than games that require physical activity.

Only 21 percent of middle and high school students participate in physical education classes at least once a week. Almost 50 percent of young people between the ages of 12 and 21, and more than a third of high school students, get no vigorous exercise on a regular basis.

Girls, and particularly minority girls, are especially vulnerable to less activity. On average, middle school girls' participation in PE drops off dramatically.

On the upside, a bill passed by the Texas Legislature and signed by the governor in the last session requires daily physical activity for students through sixth grade, although the details are still being worked out.

Nutritionally, children are eating too much fat, too many sweets and only half the recommended five servings of fruits and vegetables. Children are also consuming more than three daily servings of "junk food" or nutrient-poor choices, such as soft drinks, fast food, candy and salty snacks.

For children who are already overweight, aggressive medical intervention and treatment are recommended, beginning with a thorough physical examination to rule out any serious health problems. A registered dietitian (RD) may also need to be consulted. After that, weight gain should be carefully monitored.

In addition, the child needs to participate in regular activity. And strong parental support is a must in setting the standard, both by avoiding overeating and by encouraging physical activity for themselves and their children. By playing with their children - tossing a ball, running, walking, skipping, jumping rope or pickup games of baseball or volleyball - parents can lead by example and teach their children that physical activity is fun and makes them feel great.

Schools can play an important role in helping children maintain healthy lifestyles. One of the most important ways is to change the way PE classes are structured.

Making fitness fun and leaving no one on the bench is the paradigm shift that must happen to make physical education relevant in students' lives. The "new" PE class being advocated by the National Institutes of Health means doing away with competitive team sports that marginalize students as well as the dreaded fitness tests that have humiliated many.

Adding a variety of games and activities, especially for smaller groups, allows everyone to participate and find something they enjoy and will do long after the class is over. For those who are athletically inclined, team sports are great, but for those who are out of shape, overweight or self-conscious, the new PE class may be a real lifesaver.

Dr. DiMarco says that, "By taking an aggressive approach to solving childhood obesity, we, as parents, friends and relatives, can show our children the benefits of healthy eating and physical activity so that their generation can be known as the fittest, not the fattest."

Is Your Irrigation System Really Protected When Disaster Strikes??

INTRODUCING...
DIVERSIFIED AGRISURANCE CO.
NOW PROVIDING

Multi-Peril/Replacement Cost Coverage with Protection for Damage Caused by a Mechanical or Electrical Failure

Do I want to insure expensive Irrigation Equipment separate from my farm blanket?

Yes, you want the broadest coverage available on your most expensive equipment.

What type of claims do I need to worry about?

Wind, tornado, flood, fire, lightning, collision, vandalism, theft.

Won't I be paid in full on a 7 year old unit?

Most often, if insured on a farm policy, the aged unit suffers a deduction for depreciation.

You checked your irrigation unit last night and it was fine, this morning you drive out and it has collapsed. Does your policy pay for this collapse?

Standard insurance policies exclude losses to irrigation units due to mechanical/electrical failure and resulting damages.

Can a mechanical/electrical failure cause substantial damage to my irrigation unit?

It is not uncommon for losses of this type to result in damages over $5,000.

(Losses under warranty items are not covered.)

4 reasons why Diversified Ag has the most popular insurance policy available for irrigators:

- #1 Multi-Peril Protection
- #2 Quick Claims Service
- #3 Replacement Cost Coverage
- #4 Optional Coverage for Damage Caused by a Mechanical or Electrical Failure

How can I find out more about this irrigation equipment policy?

Quite easily, either call or write to:

A DAY TO REMEMBER

will be a day of coming together as a community to join hands and hearts in a time of remembrance of our fellow Americans; the innocent victims suffering the terrorism of Sept. 11, 2001, the wounded families and the courageous heroes, both uniformed and civilian, tirelessly working and sometimes losing their life, to rescue others. A remembrance of one of the worst of times when our national heart was troubled and touched and brought together in one of the best of times of our collective outpouring of reaching out, binding wounds and caring concern for others. As the flame is passed in the community candlelight vigil of remembrance, may the candles' glow inspire us to use our powers to heal and not to harm, to help and not to hinder, to bless and not to curse. And may their radiance pour out upon our hearts and spread light into the darkened corners of the world.

"O thus be it ever, when free men shall stand between their loved homes and war's desolation! Blest with victory and peace, may the heaven-rescued land praise the Power that hath made and preserved us a nation! Then conquer we must, when our cause it is just; and this be our motto, "In God do we trust!" And the Star Spangled Banner triumphant shall wave o'er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

FOR THE FALLEN
They shall not grow old, as we that are left grow old Age shall not weary them, nor the years condemn.
At the going down of the sun and in the morning,
We will remember them.

Emergency farm loan applications now being taken

Applications for emergency farm loans for losses caused by flash flooding, excessive rain and hail that occurred on April 25, 2002 are being accepted at the Farm Service Agency (FSA) office located in Haskell, Larry P. McDaniel said.

Haskell County is designated as one of six contiguous counties named eligible by the Secretary of Agriculture for loans to cover part of actual production losses resulting from flash flooding, excessive rain and hail that occurred on April 25, 2002. Shackelford County was declared the primary county eligible for loans. The additional contiguous counties are Callahan, Jones, Eastland, Stephens and Throckmorton counties.

McDaniel said farmers may be eligible for loans of up to 80 percent of their actual losses or the operating loan needed to continue in business, whichever is less. For farmers unable to obtain credit from private commercial lenders, the interest is 3.75 percent.

"As a general rule, a farmer must have suffered at least a 30 percent loss of production to be eligible for an FSA emergency loan," McDaniel said. Farmers participating in the Federal Crop Insurance Program and disaster programs will have to figure in proceeds from those programs in determining their loss.

"Applications for loans under their emergency designation will be accepted until April 14, 2003 but farmers should apply as soon as possible. Delays in applying could create backlogs in processing and possibly over into the new farming season," McDaniel said.

FSA is a credit agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. It is authorized to provide disaster emergency loans to recognized farmers who work at and rely on farming for a substantial part of their living. Eligibility is extended to individual farmers who are U.S. citizens and to farming partnerships, corporations or cooperative in which U.S. citizens hold a majority interest.

The FSA office in Haskell is open from 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Flavored fitness waters complicate athlete's choices for replenishment

Is water from a bottle any better for you than water from the faucet?

Once upon a time, water was water. You could buy fancy bottled water, but it was still basically water. Now, though there are more varieties of water marketed as fitness water. Are these any different or better than regular water?

It depends on your needs, according to Lona Sandon, a clinical nutrition expert at UT Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas. These waters are flavored and may be sweetened, which could be a benefit to some athletes. During heavy exercise, some people's taste preferences change, and plain water isn't appealing enough for them to get all the fluids they need. The waters with sweet or salty flavors may encourage these people to drink more water and lower their risk for dehydration.

These fitness waters are also fortified with nutrients. The most beneficial added nutrients include carbohydrates, sodium and potassium, which help replenish the body's stores during exercise. Carbohydrates help maintain the energy stores in muscles, which is important for people who exercise often. Sodium and potassium help maintain the body's water balance and prevent dehydration.

Look at the label when you're choosing fitness waters. If you don't have a heavy workout, you may just need water and some electrolytes. But for endurance and energy, you'll also need carbohydrates to keep your muscles going.

This Week's Devotional Message:

GRANDPARENTS STAY YOUNG LONGER THAN EVER BEFORE

Thanks to better living habits, advances in medicine, and a wider variety of appropriate activities, people are not only living longer but staying active longer. The so-called "generation gap" is not narrower than it used to be, because Grandma and Grandpa no longer sit at home in their rocking chairs. They go to senior citizen lunches, play bingo and organize political action groups to secure better health care, insurance, etc. Some continue working, or even find new careers for themselves. In any case, we can learn much from their ability to enjoy and make the most of every day that remains of their lives. At our House of Worship, our children will learn to love, respect and communicate with their elders; a rewarding experience for all.

Sure, you can stand in the street in the middle of a major intersection every day for a week with an item you want to sell, put a couple of huge signs on it, and hope someone takes you up on the offer. It might just get the job done. Or you might just end up looking foolish.

The Easy Way.

Or, you can place a Private Party Classified ad with us and have people from all over the area clamoring to take your unwanted items off your hands for a handsome profit. Quickly and easily. And for a very small investment. So what are you waiting for? Call now!
