 "This was a very rough season for all of us," said Coach Brad Brunson. "We had some young kids get varsity experience and our older kids did a good job of keeping this team's attitude in good shape. The boys worked hard all season and I am extremely proud of their effort. The fact of the matter is that we were out-manned every game. Every team we played was bigger, faster and stronger than we were. Our young kids just have to hang in there and continue to work hard. We need to have a good off season this spring and we need to maintain and build on that over the summer. Although it did not show in the win column, we made strides in the right direction this year."

HIGHLIGHTS

Tidal change washes over Texas politics

AUSTIN—As the election results came in last week and it quickly became apparent that all the Republicans on the statewide ticket were winning big, a retired librarian remembered her days as a teenage reporter in Sweetwater shortly after World War II.

She had been dispatched by her editor to the old Bluebonnet Hotel to interview three visitors to town—Republicans.

The trio, then about as welcome in rural Texas as union organizers, had come to Nolan County to see if there was any interest in organizing a local Republican party.

"From what I'd always heard and read about Republicans," she remembered, "I was a little scared."

One of them later complimented her father, the local Chamber of Commerce manager, on her politeness in listening to their case and her fairness in writing about it.

Back then, Republicans in Texas were as scarce as pine trees in Monahans.

Many Texans had heard from their parents or grandparents about the near-despotic reign of Reconstruction era Republic Gov. E.J. Davis in the early 1870s and they figured Republicans were still not to be trusted.

Not until Ronald Reagan went to the White House in 1980 did Texans begin voting for Republicans in any significant numbers. Eventually, the tidal change was so powerful that Democrats began announcing their conversion to the Republican side of politics like so many saved souls at a brush arbor revival.

The race for Lt. gov. attracted more Democratic votes than for any other Democrat statewide officer seeker on the ballot. Sharp got 46 percent of the vote.

Republican Carole Keeton Rylander got 64.21 percent of the vote in her successful bid to continue as comptroller. (And Democrat Marty Akins, running against her, got the lowest percentage of any of the Democratic candidates, 32.8.)

Laredo oil millionaire Tony Sanchez didn't break the 2 million mark in his effort to unseat Gov. Rick Perry, but he spent more than 30 times that many million in his unsuccessful bid.

"Talk about Texas values," one old time Texan said the day after. "What's Texas coming to when $70 million won't buy the Governor's Mansion?"

Even some Democrats were taken aback by Sanchez' "I'm not conceding" speech, delivered in time for Austin and other big TV market newscasts Nov. 5.

A smiling Sanchez, clearly already defeated, said he was going to continue to give Perry "hell" and later repeated it, comparing the contest to 1948. (That was a reference to the famous "Dewey Defeats Truman" newspaper headline, not to the 1948 Senate race that made Lyndon Johnson a U.S. senator.)

With only a couple hundred of 8,554 precincts counted, Perry had received 57.88 percent of the vote to Sanchez' 39.92 percent.

So what happened? Clearly, the name "Bush" continues to have political clout in Texas, even though the name was not on the ballot this time—the first time, in fact, in 22 years. The negative advertising probably cost both sides some points or fractions thereof. Finally, it just may be that Texas is a Republican state.

The day after the election, another important political campaign resumed after a pre-election hiatus: the behind-the-scenes work that will determine who will preside as speaker of the House when the Legislature meets in Austin in January.

Republican Tom Craddick of Midland was expected to announce that he had the votes to take over the job from incumbent Pete Laney of Hale Center, Texas' sole Democrat in a position of statewide power. That question will be settled Jan. 14.

Twenty-four hours after the polls closed, parking on 11th Street in front of the Capitol was even tougher than usual because of all the television station remote broadcast vans.

The scene in downtown Austin was of TV reporters standing in the bright, generator-powered light trying to explain to the voters of Texas what had happened the day before.

No matter what they said, no matter who won or lost, no matter how much money was spent by those who tried to get elected or didn't get elected, the big pink building at the head of Congress Avenue still stood.

From The Inside Out

By Mary Kaigler

As recently announced in this space, for a short while we plan to present a bit of information about a "Mystery Reader" each week, to test ourselves on how well we really know our fellow community family members, (even those who may now live somewhere else.)

From reading the responses from a random selection of readers who were sent a short questionnaire, we will no doubt learn something interesting about each one. While by no means being an in-depth study into any of the respondents, it may give us some interesting insight into the "person," he or she is.

The identity of each week's "Mystery Reader" will be revealed here the following week.

Who is this Free Press Reader? Considering that this week's "Mystery Reader" once dreamed of being a famous country singer, it isn't surprising that he is a big fan of country music.

Born in Rising Star, he attended school in Rule. Married four years, he has six children.

Although his favorite place in Texas is San Antonio, his favorite vacation spot in the world is the Hawaiian Islands.

He considers his best quality to be that of being a "people person." (That seems to be a very appropriate quality, considering his occupation).

"Stubborn," is the way he defines his worst quality. (Now, do you know anyone who fits that description?)

"I hate it when people treat others bad," he says.

In answer to the question of what he considers to be his greatest personal accomplishment, he said, "I have done many things, but the most personal was meeting my wonderful, loving wife."

For this mystery Free Press reader, the best thing about Haskell is great friends and a wonderful family. "It's a great place to live," he says.

Coming up next week: Through an update about today's "Mystery Reader," find out how close you came to identifying this person. Also, read about another of your fellow Free Press readers.

A Thought for the Week In the introduction to A Grateful Heart, a collection edited by M. J.

Ryan, Daphne Rose Kingma writes, "In relation to others, gratitude is good manners. In relation to ourselves, it is a habit of the heart and a spiritual discipline."

Angeles Arrien writes that "The capacity to acknowledge others is directly equated with our ability to extend gratitude. Cross culturally there are four ways we acknowledge one another: Acknowledgment of skills, character qualities, appearance, and the impact that others make on us. The great healers of the world are gifted in their capacity to use the four acknowledgments in equal proportions. A daily practice of gratitude would be extending those four acknowledgments to ourselves, to our loved ones, toward our friends and colleagues."

During this month of thanksgiving would be a great time for all of us take a few moments each day to make those "healing" acknowledgments of gratitude to at least one other person.

And may we all, in the words of Thomas Berry, "Learn to live graciously together on this unique, beautiful blue planet."

Give wisely

by Lou Gilly

Haskell Co. Extension Agent

With the coming of the holidays, many people channel their cheer and generosity into charities. In fact, charitable organizations receive 40 percent of their contributions during this time of year. But before you give, beware of individuals who do not share in the holiday spirit.

Get the full name, address, telephone number, and any other identifying information of the organization. Find out if your donation will be tax deductible, how your money will be used, and what percentage of funds will go to the actual cause instead of non-charitable funding.

Also, never give out your credit card or bank account numbers to telephone solicitors. Do not send cash. Write checks to the actual charity, not an individual.

For more information on specific charitable organizations or on wise giving, contact the Better Business Bureau's Philanthropic Advisory Service at (703) 276-0100 or www.bbb.com.

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor,

I attended the Veterans breakfast and celebration Nov. 11 at the grade school. I was so impressed by the young boys and girls who greeted us at the door, the little girls who seated us and by the prepared cards and art work made for us.

All of this says something good for our school and teachers.

Commissioner's Court report

At the Oct. 22 special meeting of the Haskell County Commissioners' Court, the minutes of the previous meeting were approved with the following two corrections:

Commissioner Kenny Thompson was appointed as County Judge Pro-Tem.

All leases at the Anchor will go up $50.00 per year with residents not being responsible for their own trash.

A motion was approved to allow patrons to check out equipment from the County Library for two weeks with no deposit required. If equipment is not returned after two weeks, a $10.00 per day fine will be assessed.

Approval was given for buying a new radar unit for the Highway Patrol for $3,310.00, and to purchase the old unit for the Sheriff's Department.

The date of the next meeting of the Court was changed to Nov. 12, due to the Nov. 11 Veterans' Day holiday.

Clois Thomas was appointed as alternate judge for Precinct 2 for the November 5 General Election.

Reid leads team to playoffs

Under Larry Reid, first year head coach at Sands High School, the 6-man team defeated Klondike 51-6 to finish their regular season at 9-1 and 5-0 in district. Their one loss was to highly-ranked Sanderson in the third game of the season. Advancing to Bi-District, the Sands team will play Ft. Davis Friday night in Rankin.

Reid, who is the son of James and Marsha Reid of Rochester, has seen his teams advance to the play offs in seven of his nine years as head coach. In his two years at Ropesville, one team advanced to Bi-district. In six years at Groom, the Tigers advanced to Regional once, three times to Quarter-finals and once to State-finals. In his last four years, Groom was 49-5.

Reid is a 1987 graduate of Rochester High School.

Zinc's potential probed

by Lou Gilly

Haskell Co. Extension Agent

Zinc is essential to human health. But a USDA preliminary study shows the mineral may also help protect red-blood cell membranes against oxidative damage.

Some researchers believe this helps prevent heart disease. The membranes keep cell contents in place but allow salts and other compounds to flow in and out.

Researchers worked with eight healthy men, aged 27 to 47, in a 20-week experiment. For the first- and last-five weeks, the subjects ate 4.6 milligrams of zinc. They also consumed capsules that added an additional 9.1 milligrams. Half-way through, the capsules were discontinued. The volunteers' red blood cell membranes became more fragile.

Eating foods such as beans, whole grains, shellfish, red meat, and dark-meat poultry increase zinc's dietary levels.

This Week's Devotional Message:

WE WELCOME GOD'S MOST COLORFUL SEASON OF AUTUMN
 When summer fun begins to pall
 And cooler winds pervade the night,
 The temperatures will start to fall
 And frost will paint a brilliant sight,
 In which the leaves turn red and gold;
 A truly colorful display
 That signifies a year grown old,
 Against a sky of cloudy gray.

It's harvest time from tree and field,
 For food on which we all rely;
 By reaping what the earth will yield,
 Before the snow begins to fly.
 Our House of Worship makes it clear:
 God shows His love in many ways,
 From indications that appear
 With autumn's beauty all ablaze.

—Gloria Nowak

Fall is ideal time for planting trees and shrubs

by Brandon Anderson
Haskell Co. Extension Agent
Finally, fall is here. The weather is becoming slightly cooler, and gardeners are slowly migrating back outdoors after record-breaking heat this summer. Now is a perfect time to add a new tree or a grouping of shrubs to the landscape. Or perhaps you have an area in the landscape that needs "remodeling" or rejuvenating. The fall may be the best season to plant, surpassing even the spring.
Many people prefer January through March for planting, but the fall months of September through December have distinct advantages. Fall planting follows the heat of summer, and precedes a cool winter season. Trees and shrubs planted use this to good advantage. Plant roots grow anytime the soil temperature is 40 degrees or higher, which may occur all winter in Texas.
During the winter months, the root systems of the fall-planted specimens develop and become established.

When buying plants for your landscape, be sure to get healthy, well-grown plants. Always buy from a reputable dealer. Those in the plant selling business year-round depend on repeat customers, and only by selling customers quality plants can there be assurance of future business.
Beware of plant bargains. They can easily turn out to be real headaches. A bargain is no good if it dies. The price tag, especially the cheapest one, is not the best guide to quality.
All plants have growing requirements. Think about the plant's needs before you invest.
Is it adapted to your area's soil? Will it grow in sun or shade? Does it need a wet or dry location? Is it cold hardy? Some nurseries have this type of information on tags beside the plant.

If not, ask a nursery professional or the county Extension agent.
'Plan before you plant' is always a good rule of thumb. Whether you are planting a single plant or an entire landscape, plan first, then plant. Good planning is a worthwhile investment of time that will pay off in greater enjoyment of attractive and useful home grounds, and in increasing the value of your home. It's much easier to move plants on paper than to dig them after planting in the wrong place. A plan saves many planting mistakes.
Every plant in the landscape should serve a purpose. Ask yourself if you want a plant for screening, for privacy, or for shade.
How large will it be five years from now? Plants, like people, grow up. Remember, that a small one-gallon size plant will look entirely different after a few years of growth in your landscape.

in the hole. Handle the plant by the root ball, not by the trunk. A broken ball of earth can mean a dead plant. Always remove any container before you plant.
4. Backfill the hole, using only the native soil removed from the hole; do not use soil amendments when planting large shrubs and trees. Fill the hole, and firm the soil around the plant. Water thoroughly to settle the soil around the roots and to eliminate any air pockets.
5. Do not fertilize your tree or shrub after planting. Wait until early in the spring to do this, and even then, go lightly. Heavy applications of fertilizer may burn and injure the root system, and could possibly kill the plant.
6. Watering has been and remains paramount in transplanting. At the time of transplanting, soak the root ball and surrounding soil. A thorough watering every 7 to 10 days dramatically increases the success ratio. More frequent watering may encourage root rot. Remember more trees and shrubs fail from over watering than from under watering.
7. Before calling it a day, add 4 to 6 inches of mulch around the base of newly planted trees and shrubs. This helps to keep down weeds and conserve soil moisture. Use pine bark, compost, grass clippings, or leaves.
Fall is for planting. Visit your nursery today, and beautify and add value to your home.

Plant properly for success. Here are a few guidelines on getting the job done right:

1. Dig a hole large enough in diameter so that the root system has at least six inches of clearance on all sides. The root ball should rest on a solid soil foundation, so don't dig the hole much deeper than the ball.
2. Plant the tree or shrub slightly above the level of the surrounding soil, to allow for settling and increased soil drainage.
3. Carefully place the tree or shrub
