Longtime fashion leader dies at 93

By Mary Kaigler

Frances Lane, Haskell's unquestionable purveyor and doyenne of high fashion and merchandising expertise through five decades of operating Lane-Felker women's dress shop, died in Abilene, Feb. 5.

With her innate sense of fashion, expertise and aptitude for upscale merchandising, she was indeed, the persona of Lane-Felker, the oasis of fashion successfully operating in the midst of the farm and ranch land of West Texas where distinctive retail operations were rare.

As schoolgirls, she and her sister, Mattie Muriel Felker, who died in 2003, dreamed of owning a dress shop. Thanks to the Great Depression it didn't happen for a long time.

They first opened the local women's wear shop in March 1940, operating on a 'shoestring' in a 20' x 40' space rented in a beauty shop. With an inventory of $27.00 worth of hosiery and thirty-five dresses, they paid $20.00 down on their fixtures. Most of their dresses sold for $3.00.

The business grew, and in 1946, they moved to the building which would house the phenomenal store with the gracious, friendly atmosphere that drew customers to Haskell from across the nation, and made a day of shopping at Lane-Felker the highlight of any visit to Haskell. The business continued to grow, with nineteen employees at one time, and a yearly dollar volume increase of around ten percent, to become the fashion mecca which brought a positive economic boost to the city.

Loyal to their hometown, in 1979, when they were asked to expand their business to the Abilene Mall, Lane said, "Expansion would mean separation at the expense of mystique, specialness and exclusivity. The chemistry between us and our love for this business, which is shared by our sales staff, is what makes this place tick."

Through their participation and attendance at the larger markets, they gained the attention of the world of fashion. They were honored in 1957 by The American Fashion Association. An article in Women's Wear Daily in 1981, said that their chemistry has been a calling card for them.

Feeling that their success was largely due to the courteous, individual attention they gave to each customer who entered the store, Lane remembered the dress size of almost all of them.

Such was the presence of Lane-Felker in the life of the family, that when the store closed on Fri., Feb. 13, 2001, her daughter Linda wrote in a poem of tribute, "The day Lane-Felker went away, there were no words to say that last farewell. No way to tell how empty life will feel, now that She's gone."

Caring and encouraging to others in the community, Lane was a charter member of the Progressive Women's Club and was active in the district and state activities of Texas Federation of Women's Clubs. She was a member of the Haskell Historical Society.

A lifelong member of the First

FRANCES LANE

Baptist Church in Haskell, she was supportive and active in all of the church programs and projects, and a member of Fidelis Sunday School Class.

When she moved to Abilene in recent years to live at Wesley Courts, she became an active volunteer, working in the gift shop one day a week. Ever the promoter, when one of the ministers visited the shop, she met him at the door and asked,

"Now, what can I sell you, today?"

True to her outgoing nature and interest in people, she joined in the activities of Wesley Courts. Last year she was chosen as the "Valentine Queen Of Wesley Courts." This year, in her honor, the contest has been suspended.

Never having had the extra time for hobbies, at Wesley Courts she started taking china painting classes, winning first place in the class at their fair.

Lane and her husband, R.A. "Shady" Lane, raised two daughters, Suzanne Starr and Linda Lane-Bloise, both of whom she was proud. She was also a proud and loving grandmother to her grandchildren. In her filmed biography, which the family produced and finished in November, many of them spoke of their grandmother.

Dynamic Frances Lane had uncommon verve, poise and a lively imagination, which well served her family, the business world and her whole community for a lifetime.

She is now gone from our presence, but the distinctive essence of who she was, and the melody of her life will linger on in the hearts and minds of those who came to know, love and respect her.

VA honors Livengood for 20 years of service

Durwood Livengood is a living example of what it means to like to serve others.

For the last twenty years, since June, 1986, he has been the Veterans Service Officer for Haskell County. Recently, he was awarded a plaque in commendation of his work with local veterans. A veteran himself, he served the country in China in World War II, during the time before China began to make changes for its people.

Born in Stamford, he returned to Haskell County after the war, and lives there with his wife. His four children live in the state.

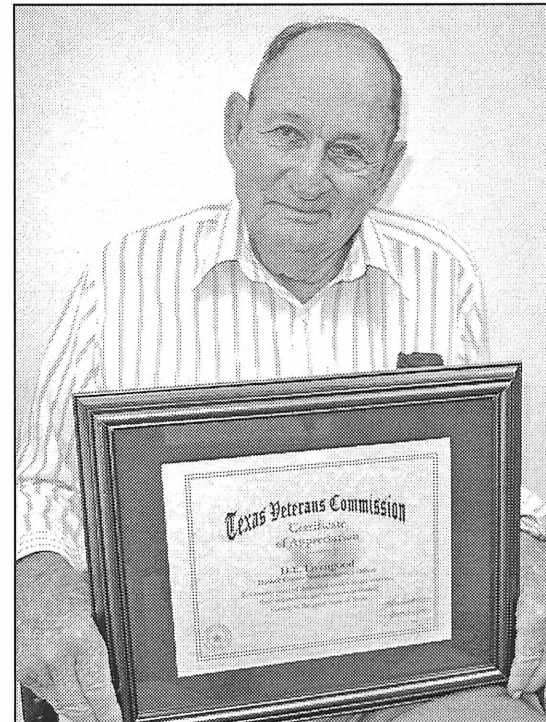

After retiring from Medford Buick in Haskell, he was hired by the Haskell County Commissioners in June 1986 as Haskell County Veterans Officer. He was sent to Austin for schooling, and he continues to go to the school every year.

Coming to the Haskell office on Tuesdays, he works to help veterans with their medical needs and their V.A. pensions.

With veterans passing away at the rate of 16,000 to 17,000 a day in this country, Livengood said that it seems that lately he has ordered more tombstones than anything else. He also sees more veteran's widows than he does veterans. Depending on their incomes, he helps them to get their husband's pension.

Proudly hanging the handsome, framed plaque on the wall of his office, Livengood said he still enjoys the job after twenty years.

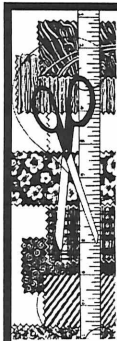

"It's the most wonderful job in the world," he said. "If you think you can do something to help someone, it's satisfying to your mind. As long as I feel like it, I intend to continue it."

VA HONOR-Longtime Veteran's Officer, Durwood Livengood, proudly shows the certificate of appreciation he has received from the VA Department.

Weathers Whys

Windy cities

Q: Chicago is often called "the windy city." Is it really the windiest city in the U.S.?

A: The answer is no, says Brent McRoberts of Texas A&M University. "In fact, it's not even close," he explains.

"Both the National Weather Service and National Climatic Data Center publish a list of the top ten windiest cities in the United States and Chicago is not among the leaders on those lists. Chicago's label as the windiest city might refer to several stories.

One is that the city's streets run from east and west, causing the winds that come from Lake Michigan to blow briskly through the streets and these winds might be stronger than in surrounding areas. Another story says that the windy city label refers to Chicagoans who are apt to boast or brag about their hometown, or even the numerous rumors that tend to blow through the city."

Q: So what are the windiest cities in the U.S.?

A: Alaska can claim the top three, McRoberts says.

"Those are St. Paul Island, averaging almost 17.5 miles per hour per day, Cold Bay (16.9) and Barter Island (13.2). Others are Dodge City, Kan. at 14 miles per hour, followed by Amarillo, Texas (13.5) and Rochester, Minn. (13.1) Chicago is considered average in terms of wind speed at 10.4 and it is topped by Boston at 12.5 and New York's Kennedy Airport (12.2). Even Milwaukee (11.5) and Dallas-Forth Worth (10.7) have higher average wind speeds than Chicago. As far as an actual place in the U.S., the windiest spot by far is Mount Washington Observatory in New Hampshire, where the wind blows at an average speed of 35.1 miles per hour every day."

The services are free and available twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week. She also mentioned that Abilene is in the process of building a new shelter.

TEEA group learns of various scams

The Haskell TEEA club met at the Haskell County Extension office kitchen Feb. 8. Thirteen members answered the roll call to "Pay a compliment to the person on your right." Lena Tidwell read the opening exercise, "Love Me or Love Me Not."

Jane Rowan reported on the past month's 4-H activities and numerous upcoming events, such as an all-night lock-in at the Rule School, nutrition programs, fashion and photography shows, consumer judging, safety day and various other activities. The annual TEEA District Meeting/Cultural Arts is scheduled for March 27 in Childress.

Sue McGee presented an EEA state workshop program entitled "Caveat Emptor, Let the Buyer Beware." Members learned that in order to be a wise consumer in today's changing market place, you have to be on the alert for shady deals and scams. McGee presented a checklist of things to do before and after you buy, to protect your money and avoid being a victim of fraud. Consumers are often harassed with offers that are not worth what you pay for them, such as extended warranties, credit life insurance, and payday and tax loans. McGee also gave information about free services to remove your name from most national telemarketing, junk mail, and e-mail lists.

Members were given copies of the 2007 Consumer Action Handbook as well as brochures on identity theft and advanced care planning.

Hostesses were Mildred Robertson and Lena Tidwell. Next meeting is scheduled for March 8.

HIGHLIGHTS

By Ed Sterling

Perry cites growing economy in State of State address

AUSTIN—Gov. Rick Perry on Feb. 6 delivered the State of the State address to the state Legislature, exclaiming "Texas is perched at the forefront of a new era of prosperity."

Perry said the economy is growing, tax collections are on the rise, frivolous lawsuits are down and so are the costs of insurance for homeowners and doctors. He also said teacher pay and student achievement have improved.

The pluses aside, Perry said nearly 4 million Texans are living in poverty, so during the next four years his goal will be to spread opportunity to more Texans "who are willing to take personal responsibility for their lives."

Perry indicated, nevertheless, that poverty is not necessarily tied to a lack of personal responsibility, saying the rising cost of health care is be "one of the greatest obstacles to personal prosperity."

"Of the 5 and one-half million uninsured Texans, 2 million are adults with incomes below 200 percent of the federal poverty level," Perry said. "Most are working Texans whose jobs offer health-care benefits they can't afford, or no benefits at all."

So, Perry announced the launch of "Healthier Texas," his program to redirect unspent federal health-care dollars to a pool that would serve Texans 200 percent below the federal poverty level.

Perry touched on other subjects, such as a Human papillomavirus vaccination program for girls entering sixth grade, his proposal to sell the state Lottery, and his plans build coal-fueled power plants and a statewide matrix of toll roads.

Perry also talked about border security, literacy, prisons, and a get-tough stance with the bureaucrats in Washington, D.C. State of State: response aired Austin News Channel 8 broadcasted via cable and Internet a Democratic response to the governor's State of the State address.

The response, by state Rep. Garnet Coleman of Houston, took Perry to task for not doing more to fund public education, the big increases in college tuition, and "teaching to the test" in the Texas Assessment of Knowledge and Skills.

Coleman also pointed out that under Perry 200,000 Texas children lost coverage under the Children's Health Insurance Program, leading to $893 million in cuts in federal matching funding.

He also criticized Perry's fast-tracking of coal-fired power plants instead of moving state policy further toward clean wind and solar power options.

And, Coleman called the governor's "Trans Texas Corridor" proposed highway project "unwanted, unwarranted and fiscally irresponsible."

Some don't swallow HPV program

Dozens of members of the Texas Legislature have come out in opposition to the governor's Feb. 2 executive order requiring Human papillomavirus vaccinations for girls entering sixth grade.

Chief among the opposers was Sen. Jane Nelson, R-Flower Mound, who chairs the Senate Health & Human Services Committee. Nelson, said she would seek an attorney general opinion on the executive order, to see if it is legally binding.

On the other hand, Chris Bell, the Houston Democrat who placed second in the race for governor, lauded the governor for "getting it right."

Lottery sale price climbs higher

A couple of weeks ago, when Gov. Perry sent up a trial balloon on his idea to sell the Texas Lottery to a private company, he estimated the value at $14 billion. Now the amount has been estimated as high as $20 billion.

If sold, what would Texas do with the money? Perry said he would divide up the billions of dollars into educational and cancer research and health insurance endowments.

Lt. Gov. David Dewhurst and House Speaker Tom Craddick don't seem to have warmed to the idea of selling the Lottery. Selling it would require a constitutional amendment.

Bill targets crowing roosters

Rep. Ana E. Hernandez, D-Houston, filed House Bill 1225, legislation that would make it a public nuisance to allow the crowing of a rooster outdoors in a neighborhood if a reasonable person would find the noise objectionable.

Hundreds protest coal plants

A crowd reportedly in the hundreds gathered at the Capitol Feb. 11 to protest the proposed construction of more than two dozen coal-fired power plants around the state.

Showing your love on Valentine's Day doesn't always involve flowers and heart-shaped boxes of candy, said a Texas Cooperative Extension expert.

One way parents show their love for their children is to make sure they are seated in proper restraint systems every time they ride in a vehicle, said Bev Kellner, Extension program coordinator for passenger safety.

That's why each February, during the week that includes Valentine's Day, Child Passenger Safety Week is observed, she said. This year that's Feb. 11-17.

"This year's focus is on the milestone reached in saving children's lives through the use of child safety seats," Kellner said.

"From 1975 to 2005, 7,500 children (nationwide) have been saved by the correct use of child safety seats."

Choosing a safety seat for children isn't as simple as going into a store and buying one, Kellner said. The child's height, weight and age must also be taken into consideration.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration's "4 Steps for Kids," lists four different types of child safety seating for children of different ages and sizes:

Show your love: Buckle up your kids

Step 1: For the best possible protection keep babies in the back seat, in rear-facing child safety seats, as long as possible up to the height or weight limit of the particular seat. At a minimum, keep babies rear-facing until a minimum of age 1 and at least 20 pounds.

Step 2: When children outgrow their rear-facing seats (at a minimum age 1 and at least 20 pounds) they should ride in forward-facing child safety seats, in the back seat, until they reach the upper weight or height limit of the particular seat (usually around age 4 and 40 pounds).

Step 3: Once children outgrow their forward-facing seat (usually around age 4 and 40 pounds) they should ride in booster seats, in the back seat, until the vehicle safety belts fit properly. Safety belts fit properly when the lap belt lays across the upper thighs and the shoulder belt fits across the chest (usually at age 8 or when they are 4 feet 9 inches tall).

Step 4: When children outgrow their booster seats (usually at age 8 or when they are 4 feet 9 inches tall), they can use the adult safety belt in the back seat, if it fits properly (lap belt lays across the upper thighs and the shoulder belt across the chest).

Parents and other caregivers who want to learn more about the correct use of child safety seats should plan to attend a checkup event or make an appointment at a fitting station, Kellner said. Information about fitting station locations is available at <http://www.seatcheck.org/>.

A schedule of child safety seat checkup events is on Extension's Family and Consumer Sciences Web site at http://fcs.tamu.edu/safety/passenger\_safety/calendar/index.php.

Proper use of a child's safety seat is not as easy as it sounds.

"Nationally the misuse rate of child safety seats is reported as 85 percent," Kellner said. "The Passenger Safety Project at Texas Cooperative Extension has seen a 99 misuse rate in the over 7,600 inspections that the program has overseen since 1999."

That's why certified technicians are available to help make sure young Texans ride safely, she said. For information on local certified child safety seat technicians, contact an Extension agent or Kellner at 979-862-1782 or bkellner@ag.tamu.edu or go to <http://buckleup.tamu.edu/>. ## Tips for growing roses

by Wes Utley

CEA-Ag/NR, Haskell Co.

The following tips are offered for growing roses.

Planting Site:

1. Plant in locations where roses will receive direct sunlight for eight hours or more each day.
2. Have good air movement over their leaves (i.e. do not plant in enclosed areas like courtyards or small backyards which are ringed by 8' fences).
3. No overhead irrigation during the evening hours or at night.

Bed Preparation:

1. Roses really respond to well-drained soils. The bed preparation recommended for the two major soil types are:
2. Sandy and loam soils: Incorporate 3-6 inches of organic matter such as compost.
3. Clay soils: Incorporate 3 inches of organic matter (e.g. compost) and 3 inches of expanded shale. Plant on raised beds that are at least 4-6 inches above the surrounding soil.

Fertilization:
1. Roses also like high levels of fertility, especially nitrogen. Roses need to be fertilized in March, June and lightly in late August.

2. Base selection of fertilizer analysis on the results of a soil test. For the March and June feedings, utilize fertilizers in which at least half of the nitrogen is in the slow release or slowly available form. In late August, apply fertilizers in which the nitrogen is readily available.

Maintenance:

1. Regardless of soil type, roses need to be protected year-round with a layer of organic mulch (e.g. cypress bark, tree leaves) 3-4 inches thick. In areas of the state plagued by salty irrigation water, it is very important to drip irrigate roses. Salty water applied to the leaves can burn the foliage badly.

There are several terms used to classify roses with good insect and disease tolerance or resistance. None of these terms have an exact botanical definition and on occasion this has created some confusion among home gardeners.

Antique roses are typically older cultivars that have survived the test of time and retain several valuable cultural and aesthetic qualities. Many of these antique roses have a known lineage that can be traced back hundreds of years. Some however, were discovered on abandon home sites, in cemeteries or in other unattended areas. Despite careful study, their origins remain unknown. These found roses constitute a group of very rugged plants that obviously possess outstanding insect and disease tolerance/resistance that enabled their survival.

Heritage roses are typically older or antique rose cultivars with a lineage that ties back to the early history of the state or region. Many heritage roses were brought by covered wagon by early settlers. These cultivars may also be referred to as Pioneer Roses.

Plants should be placed in a location that receives 8 hours or more of direct sunlight each day. Low light areas often result in plants that are leggy, weak and more susceptible to insects and diseases. The site should also provide good air movement over the leaves.

Proper bed preparation is another important consideration.

Following these basic guidelines for site selection and bed preparation will help ensure outstanding landscape performance while preserving and protecting the environment.

Haskell CISD receives two grants

The Learn and Serve America: S.T.A.R.S. of Texas Grant Program provides approximately 30 sub grants to public school districts, open enrollment charter schools, and fiscal agents of shared services arrangements (school districts or education service centers) to implement model initiatives that use the S.T.A.R.S. framework of service-learning (Student leadership, Thoughtful service, Authentic learning, Reflective practice, and Substantive partnerships). Haskell CISD is the recipient of two such grants, a public school grant and a shared services arrangement grant through Region XIV. Grant writers are Debbie Miller and Paula Everett. In particular, TxCSL seeks to fund programs that:

- Utilize student voice and choice in the design and implementation of service-learning activities;

- Involve students in service-learning activities that meet state and local needs;
- Increase the academic engagement of student participants;
- Utilize teacher-facilitated reflection to promote critical thinking and analytical skills;
- Develop meaningful partnerships with organizations and individuals to implement the projects successfully; and,
- Address state and local performance measures in the areas of Needs and Service Activities, Participant Development, and Strengthening Communities to Support Service-Learning.

Insurance course

 CEA-Ag/NR, Haskell Co.

A comprehensive course on federal crop and livestock insurance products will be presented from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Feb. 26 at the Texas A&M University Research and Extension Center southwest of Vernon. The program, "Incorporating Crop/Livestock Insurance into the Marketing Plan," is an Advanced Topic Series presentation of the Master Marketer Educational System of the Texas Cooperative Extension. Attendees will get an overview of current and new commodity insurance programs and products, as well as other products that may become available, said Stan Bevers, Professor and Extension Economist at the Vernon A&M Center. The featured presenter will be Dr. Art Barnaby, Professor of Agricultural Economics at Kansas State University, one of the country's leading agricultural insurance experts. Barnaby helped to develop the federal Crop Revenue Coverage insurance program and has served as a consultant, advisor, and reviewer for most agricultural insurance products developed over the past 20 years.

Among the federal insurance programs to be discussed are: Hail; Multiple Peril Crop Insurance; Revenue Insurance Plans; Group Risk Income Protection; Crop Revenue Coverage; Income Protection; and the new Forage Insurance Pilot Program. "This is a unique opportunity for area farmers and ranchers to learn the pros and cons of the various insurance products," Bevers said. "The program should give them the information they need to make more informed decisions on how to incorporate these risk management products into their management and marketing plans. Furthermore, if anyone has had any questions regarding how these products have been developed and/or performed, Dr. Barnaby is the guy to ask."

Pre-registration by Feb. 16 is required. For more information, call Bevers at 940-552-9941, ext. 231, or the Haskell County Extension Office at 940-864-2658.

Service-learning offers a unique opportunity for America's young people—from kindergarten to university students—to get involved with their communities in a tangible way by integrating service projects with classroom learning. Service-learning engages students in the educational process, using what they learn in the classroom to solve real-life problems. Students not only learn about democracy and citizenship, they become actively contributing citizens and community members through the service they perform.

Service-learning can be applied across all subjects and grade levels; it can involve a single student or group of students, a classroom or an entire school. Students build character and become active participants as they work with others in their school and community to create service projects in areas like education, public safety, and the environment. A national study of Learn and Serve America programs suggests that effective service-learning programs improve grades, increase attendance in school, and develop students' personal and social responsibility. A growing body of research recognizes service-learning as an effective strategy to help students by:

- Promoting learning through active participation in service experiences;
- Providing structured time for students to reflect by thinking, discussing and writing about their service experience;
- Providing an opportunity for students to use skills and knowledge in real-life situations;
- Extending learning beyond the classroom and into the community; and
- Fostering a sense of caring for others.

Service-learning also strengthens both education and local communities by:

- Building effective collaborative partnerships between schools or colleges and other institutions and organizations;
- Engaging parents and other adults in supporting student learning;
- Meeting community needs through the service projects conducted; and
- Providing engaging and productive opportunities for young people to work with others in their community.

The real-world nature of service-learning lends itself well to curriculum integration across subject areas and grade levels. Miller and Everett are excited about the possibilities of using these funds in Haskell and Rochester. Haskell CISD looks forward to building sustainable partnerships with local organizations, state agencies, higher education entities, and faith-based organizations. These partnerships will strengthen our community by connecting our students with real life experiences.

Students will be provided an opportunity to become active citizens, as well as, increase their academic performance. These skills will be practiced in the classroom and in the community, with hopes that these students will become life-long participants of service learning.

What is fiber?
 Dietary fibers are the parts of plants that cannot be digested by humans. In the past, fiber was called roughage or bulk. It includes the outer covering (bran) of grains, the pectin in apples and other fruits, and the skin and fibrous parts of vegetables and fruits.

There are two broad categories of fiber, soluble and insoluble. Soluble fibers dissolve in water and become sticky in consistency. Examples include:

- Pectin, found in fruits, legumes, nuts, and some vegetables.
- Gums, such as guar or carrageenan, found in algae, seaweeds, and the cluster bean.
- Mucilages, found in plant seeds and certain plant secretions.

Insoluble fiber passes through the digestive tract largely unchanged except for being broken into smaller pieces by chewing. Examples include:

- Cellulose, which helps to give plant walls stability and structure; it occurs in bran, whole grains, fruits, and vegetables.
- Hemicellulose, which is found in vegetables, fruits, nuts, and grains.
- Lignin, a woody substance found in bran, fruit skins, nuts, and grains.

Good sources of fiber

- Whole grain cereals and breads.
- Dried beans, peas and other legumes.
- Fresh or lightly processed vegetables.
- Seeds and nuts.
- Dried fruits.

This Week's Devotional Message:

THE FAMILY STRUCTURE REMAINS THE BEST HUMAN RELATIONSHIP

Many households are quite diversified these days in the lifestyles and interests of the members, as well as in the biological sense because of stepchildren and half-brothers and sisters living under one roof. Indeed, many families find it hard to remember the last time they all had dinner together. Some of this is unavoidable, as in the case of a father who must travel on business or a mother involved in committee work for a worthy cause. However, the family members should make an effort to be together whenever possible, to discuss problems or just to have some kind of fun that spans the generation gap. Moreover, they should attend their house of worship regularly, for this will help to cement the bonds. The family circle should be an unbroken one; a center of love and a haven of refuge from the outside world.

YOU MAY QUALIFY FOR A TELEPHONE TAX REFUND

Individuals and businesses will be eligible for refunds of federal excise taxes paid on their long distance phone bills, thanks to a recent court ruling. Applicable to calls made from March 2003 through July 2006, the refund is claimed by filing your 2006 income tax return. And better yet, you may not need to search through old phone records to receive it.

Instead of substantiating the actual excise taxes paid during the covered period, individuals may elect a standard amount based on the number of exemptions claimed on their 2006 tax return. For a person claiming one exemption, the reimbursement is $30; two exemptions—$40; three exemptions—$50; and four or more exemptions—a maximum of $60. No other documentation is necessary to receive the refund.

The IRS has created Form 8913 to be used by businesses and tax-exempt organizations to claim their refunds of this tax. They can either tally the actual tax paid on their phone bills during the 41-month period or use a "simplified" method approved by the IRS. The Simplified formula involves comparing the phone bill dated April 2006 (when taxes were still being charged) with the September 2006 bill (after the tax was removed). The percentage of the April bill paid in federal taxes is compared to the percentage of federal taxes paid in September, and the difference is your refund ratio. This ratio is multiplied times the total phone charges for the covered period and the result is your refund amount. The refund is capped at 1% or 2% of total telephone expenses, depending on the number of employees a business has. Options for requesting the refund vary for sole proprietors.

For more Americans, the excise tax refund is fairly negligible, but for businesses with substantial long-distance expenses, the reimbursement might be significant. To help you take full advantage of this and other tax breaks, give our office a call today.

The roads in which the County claims a public interest have been maintained for many years, beginning some time prior to 1981, have previously been listed in a notice included in the 2006-07 Ad Valorem Tax statement. ## Exterior siding

Temperature and humidity changes may cause siding and trim to expand or contract. Separation or cracks at joints may occur and nails or screws may protrude beyond the surface of the siding or trim as a result.

Simply reset any protruding screw or nail head slightly into the siding surface. If the nail or screw will not reset, replace it with the next largest size, or set another screw or nail approximately two inches above or below the existing one.

Refinish the wall as necessary. Generally, siding is not a waterproof barrier, so it may require routine refinishing.
