> Such demonstration we concerve could be made most effectually, and might lead to results almost incalculable in the early future, provided we could at once in sestern Texas concur in banishing all mere petty local and sectional rivalry or jealousy, and agree heartily to make one pull together in this great work, which in our opinion could not fail, from the first instant of such combined movement, to confer greater benefit upon what may be termed the peculiar local interests of western Texas, than can possibly be hoped for from any measures which have yet been proposed.

By way of illustration, let us suppose that the charter to which we refer, with all its advantages of taking and securing prespectively the liberal donations of land which it proposes not only for its main trunk but also its branches,—were adopted and solely relied upon for securing to western Texas (so far as railroad facilities can secure them,) either the concentration of the trade from all the eastern slop of the Rocky Mountains west of the Brazos giver, or with that the larger portion icksburg, &c., be fixed upon as a main trunk, with thereby established. branches on the cast of it to LaGrange, Bastrop, Austin, &c., and to the west Gollad, San Antonio, such plan would instantly commend itself to the favorable consideration not only of the men Texas, but of intelligent capitalists abroad so as to command all the funds requisite for the entire and speedy accomplishment of one of the me seneficial and splendid enterprises of the age!

We have thus in a cursory manner merely venturned to offer one or two suggestions in relation to this most interesting subject, anticipating that we may probably at some early day in the future, have occasion to present some more matured and extended observations, for the consideration of

It will be remembered that in several articles in our paper some mouths since, we laid these riews and suggestions before our readers. The recent discussions in Congress, eliciting from northern and western members of Jistinction, declarations in favor of the great advantages of the route from this Bay; and the incorporation of some and probable incorporation of the Opelousas and Eastern Texas read, to run by way of Austin, give additional weight to views then and now exsed. The subject is one of momentous inter est and we trust will receive profound consideration from the people and government of Texas.

We had the pleasure the other day of visiting the new Masonic Hall in Indian ola, which has just been fully completed the interior paint ng and furniture. We but speak the feeling of all who have seen the the room when we say it is most beautiful and tasteful-a credit to the order and an ornament to the town. We understand the Lodge is in a highly prosperous condition, enjoying a monthly rent of twenty dollars for their lower room.

Approved, February 7th, 1853.

The bill before the Legislature setting apart two millions of dollars as a per manent common school fund, with a proviso that it might be loaned to rail road companies, at interest, with suitable security, was defeated in the House of Representatives, ayes 28, noes 26. Messrs, Hamilton, of Travis, and B. E. Taner, of Washington opposed the measure, most strenuously, on ty tax." constitutional grounds. For this course they have been assailed by several able presses We have not examined the constitutional bearing of the question; but that aside, the measure would certainly have given great satisfaction to the people, and would have been wise, if suitable guards and guaranties were thrown around the subject. The glory of a people cannot be permanent without a general diffusion of educational advantages among the masses, the rich and the poor. That or some kindred measure will doubtless be carried through the next session .-Education, internal improvements and the encouragement of emigration are the greatest measures to benefit our State.

IFOR THE BULLEYIN. Messes Brown & Brady -Allow me, through the Bulletin, to propose the formation of a volunteer company in Indianola. Such companies enliven the ities in which they exist, afford enjoyment to young men, and exert a happy influence generally. Section 30, of the militia law of the State, authorizes the formation of such companies, to Such a company, uniformed and supporting a band would be a great addition to our city. There are plenty of young men and married ones, too, who, I doubt not, would gladly join. To test the mat-ter, I would suggest that all those desirous of joining, would have their names at the Laveer House, on or before the 8th day of March, when, if the number is sufficient, the company may called together, organized and a uniform adopte called together, organized and a uniform a Respectfully, ONE WHO WILL JOIN.
