Kitty's Korner

By Kitty Montgomery

Parents here are again at odds with movies. Many mothers were irate over the previews shown before a recent picture which was advertised as a family movie.

I don't know how you avoid exposing your children to this sort of thing unless you keep them away from the movies. This is the best possible way to protest.

However, one mother who called suggested that parents go to the movies and observe the behavior of their youngsters. She said the bedlam created by kids made it almost impossible to see a show and absolutely impossible to hear a thing.

I am sort of impartial. Long ago I decided that the dirty movies pouring out of the film capitals of the world bored me so I just don't go. I don't have little ones to worry about anymore, so I can't feel a personal responsibility as I did years ago. However, when our son was in his impressionable years, I did read the reviews and a local club put out a rating on movies scheduled for our town. If I thought a movie was objectionable, it was simply off limits and that was that. Of course, I don't know how many dirty previews were shown before Walt Disney movies. It just never entered my mind.

We didn't have the problem with smut that parents have today. There are hundreds more dirty movies than clean ones in this day and age. Our kids went to the Saturday matinee and occasionally attended on Sunday afternoon. If they misbehaved, the parents were called and they got a good thrashing and were not permitted to go to the movie again until they mended their ways.

I don't know why kids are allowed to be so noisy that patrons cannot enjoy a movie if they want to. Maybe they out number the management. Neither do I know what I would do if I had some young ones these days. I do know that I would make it a point to know what they were seeing at the movies as well as what they were doing.

I am too old and too tired to start a crusade against dirty movies and previews and I know that I am out numbered. We can't expect to see good movies again until the wierdos begin bombing at the box office. As long as people pay to see them, they will make money and as long as they make money, they will keep making them. This cycle will not be broken until the American public decides to boycott movies.

Well football finally faded into the background for another year. Although the Super Bowl game has been played over and over since Sunday, the outcome has remained the same.

I don't know about you but I sort of got the feeling that I was watching a re-run.

I was surprised to see that most of the players on both teams had several inches of hair hanging out from under their helmets. I think this is a good sign that us old folks can't expect a return of crew cuts anytime soon, so we had best be tickled to death that our kids are content to wear the full hair styles instead of the page boys that seem to be in vogue for professional athletes and hippys as well.

When we played McCamey in our first district basketball encounter I thought they must have more school spirit than anyone in the district. In fact the only quite moments came when they sang their school song. However, after sitting through the hair-raiser with Crane here Friday night I decided that Ozona definitely deserved the spirit stick. And I truly believe the student fans had as much to do with the victory as the players. The three-minute overtime was so loud with cheering fans that the referees couldn't hear their (continued on last page)

Lions Tied For Dist. Lead With Win Over Crane

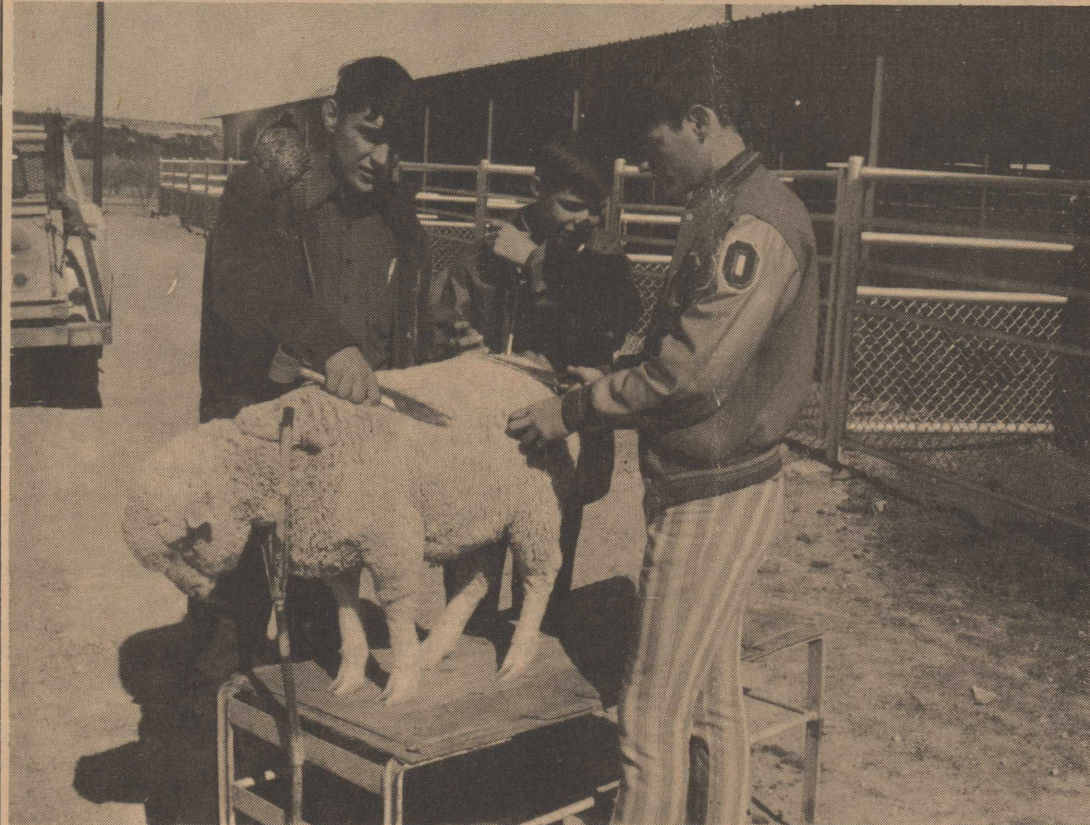

Coach Charles Spieker's Ozona Lions beat Crane here Friday night 49-48 in a three-minute overtime after tying the game 48 all in the final frame. The win gives the Lions a 2-0 district record and a tie for the district lead with Coahoma.

The Lions jumped out ahead of the Golden Cranes 6-0 in the first two minutes of play, but were behind 9-8 at the end of the first quarter and trailed throughout the game. Trailing three points, the Lions managed to tie the game in the final 30 seconds as wildly cheering fans hoped for victory. The Cranes hit from the free-throw line during the overtime, but the Lions hit a field-goal in the final seconds.

Leading the Lions point-wise was David Pagan with 12, Jim Montgomery 11, Ruben Tambunga 8, David Sewell 6, (including the winning field goal) Will Collett 6 and Greg Stuart 6. Neal of Crane was overall high point man with 20.

Scoring for the junior varsity were Gary Whitley 12, Monty Peltó 7, Bill Edgerton 6, Ricky Webster 5 and Gerald Huff 4.

Oil Painting Of Mildred North To Hang In Library

Supt. of Schools L. B. T. Sikes announced this week that a painting of Miss Mildred North, longtime Ozona High School librarian, will be presented in assembly at the high school auditorium next Wednesday, Jan. 27 at 9:45 a.m.

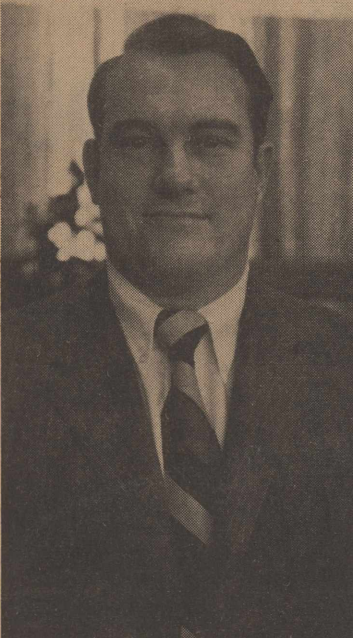

Miss North was stricken at her post in the library Sept. 4, 1970 and died shortly afterward in the Crockett County Hospital. She had served in the Crockett County school system since 1931 with the exception of four years spent in defense work in Washington D. C. during World War II.

For many years she was editor of the high school annual. She, more than any other one person, was responsible for bringing public library service to Crockett County residents. She worked tirelessly to interest clubs and various organizations in public library service for Ozona.

During her tenure with the school system, Miss North spent much of her time with the students, helping them with school work and giving her free time in counselling and guidance. Seldom has a community felt so keenly the loss of one of its members.

The public is invited to attend the presentation with a special welcome to Miss North's friends and her ex-students.

The painting will be furnished by the school board with art work done by Mrs. Cap (Celia) West. It will be hung in the library where Miss North spent most of her hours.

A MAN WELL QUALIFIED

Recently the Seniority system for the selection of Congressional committee chairmen has come under increasing attack, largely by newly elected, "maverick," junior members of our national legislative bodies. It is these same junior members who, during the last session of Congress, were the major obstructionists to legislation — any legislation, except that precisely in accord with their own whims. One of our better newspaper columnists, William S. White, reports that "these, the junior members, have been pursuing a policy of all or nothing, of rule or ruin, that is leaving a litter of smashed legislation. They are not wise enough, because they are not experienced enough, to understand that politics in a free society must rest at last upon civilized compromise. They are not industrious enough to work their way forward by merit; they want to run the show before they understand the script."

The altogether disgraceful record of the last Congress should, in itself, demonstrate the shallow and self-serving nature of the campaign against the seniority system. But William White points out another compelling reason why the seniority system should be retained. "Another term for seniority is 'know how,'" he writes, "and while undeniably the system occasionally produces a chairman of limited ability, it could also fairly be said that the seniority system in the professions occasionally produces a senior law partner who is no Blackstone or a senior medical partner who is no Lister. On the whole, however, a man becomes senior — in the professions and in Congress — mainly because he knows more about the matter in hand, having studied and practiced it longer."

A convincing argument in favor of the seniority system can be found in the automatic advancement of the very able and experienced F. Edward Hebert of Louisiana to the office of Chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, to succeed the late Representative Mendel Rivers. Congressman Hebert (pronounced "A-Bear") is the first Louisianian to serve 26 consecutive years in the U. S. House of Representatives. His background, training and long years of experience — plus the year-after-year "vote of confidence" by the people of his district attest his qualifications for the important post.

Officers Named For Historical Society In 1971

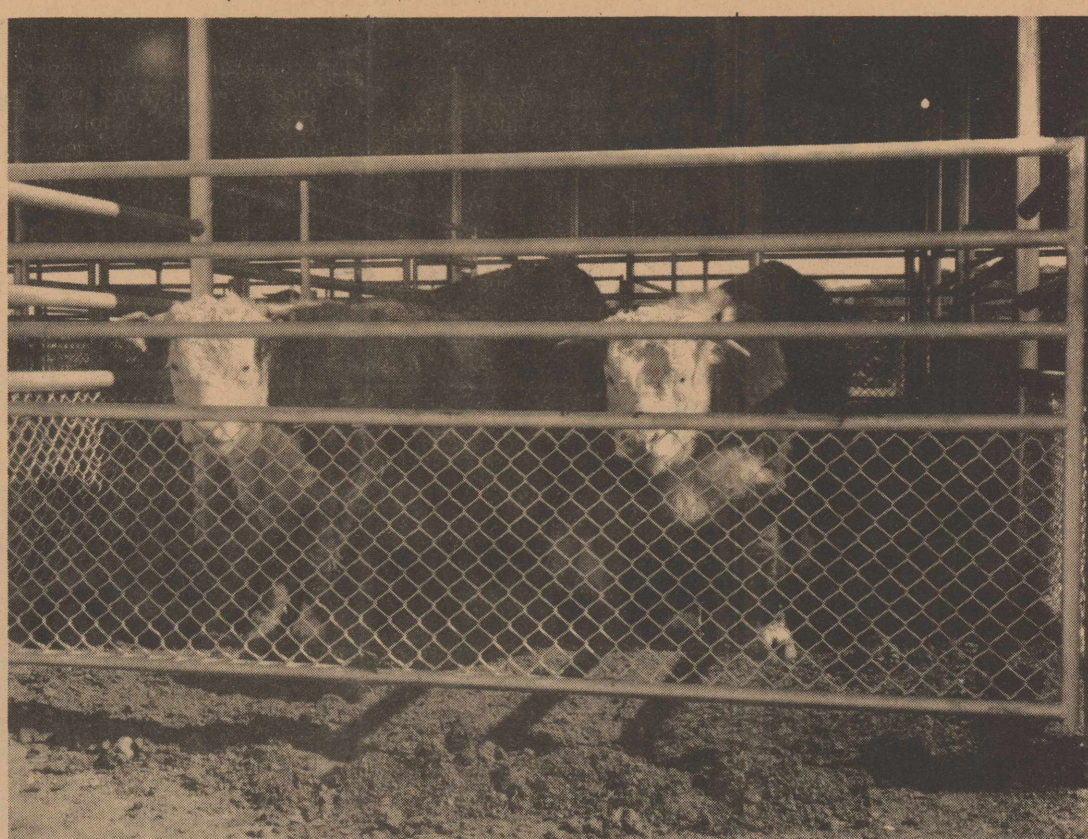

The Crockett County Historical Society held its Annual meeting in the auditorium at the Civic Center Monday evening. Twenty-six members were present.

Elected to serve as officers for the coming year were Mrs. Max Schneemann, president; Ted M. White, vice-president; Mrs. R. A. Harrell, Sec-treas. and Mrs. L. B. Cox Jr., Mrs. Joe Pierce, Mrs. Eldred Roach and C. O. Walker were elected to the board of directors. At a called meeting of the Executive Committee, Mrs. Dempster Jones was named Museum Board Chairman and Mrs. Joe Clayton was named Museum Library Chairman.

The program for the evening was presented by Mrs. L. B. Cox Jr., assisted by her mother, Mrs. John Bailey and her sisters, Mrs. Brock Jones and Mrs. Worth Odom of Sanderson. A brother, T. A. Bailey of San Angelo was unable to attend.

Mrs. Cox shared many interesting facts and stories from her extensive genealogical collection on the Bailey and Murchison families. Her grandfather, Robert Bailey, was born in 1879 on the family farm at Birdville Texas when that settlement was still the capital of Tarrant County. The family had moved there from Kentucky and Missouri bringing with them many slaves which were shortly set free at great financial loss to the family. They then began to deal in buying, raising and selling cattle and also had a mercantile business in Fort Worth for which merchandise was freighted from the early Texas port of Jefferson.

A son, John Bailey of Ozona, attended school at Birdville, Dublin and later Add-Ran College, now T. C. U. When he was 16 years of age, the family moved to Dublin where they bought steers for $7.50 per head, kept them a year and sold them for $15.00. It was while living in Dublin that Mr. Robert Bailey heard of cheap land for sale in West Texas and in 1898 moved his family to what is now Schleicher County. He brought with him cows and calves for which he had paid $16.00 and yearling heifers for which he had paid $4.00

ARE YOU THE JUDGE? Two Hereford calves are fat and sassy at the Junior livestock barn as the time approaches for the annual FFA commercial livestock show. The show is set for Saturday morning starting at 8 a. m.

He helped organize Schleicher County and the Eldorado Bank, serving as first president of the board. The ranch was about eight miles southwest of Eldorado and came to be known as the Bailey Community. After retiring from the ranching business, Mr. and Mrs. Bailey moved back to Fort Worth where they died and are buried in the family cemetery at Birdville.

October 29, 1889 John Bailey married Miss Robert Wilson Murchison, youngest daughter of neighboring rancher Murchison who had preceded the Baileys in that area a number of years.

Mrs. John Bailey was born December 25, 1879 in Concho County where P. A. Rock now stands. Because Indians so frequently came to camp on the nearby river, Mr. Murchison feared for his family's safety and moved them nearer Fort Concho where Christoval is now located. Still later he bought the Point Pleasant ranch about halfway between Sonora and Eldorado. It was here that the young neighbor boy came courting and with success. In 1903 the young couple bought 1 land in eastern Crockett County paying $2.50 an acre for it, known as the Zeb Owens Ranch. They homesteaded an additional four sections. Mrs. Bailey told of moving her family into a very small two-room house on the homesteaded land in order to honestly fulfill the requirements of the homestead laws. She told Mr. Bailey to never ask her to sign a deed to this land and to this day she has not done so.

Mrs. Bailey tells many interesting stories of her life on the frontier — when her children were very small she contracted tuberculosis and remained in bed for many months but completely recovered in time. She remembers the enormous and numerous rattlesnakes which infested the area, but said that Mr. Bailey finally eliminated most of them by dynamiting their large den which was near their house. She tells the story of her mother's successful encounter with outlaw Bill Ike Babb when her husband was near Beaver Lake gathering cattle — one of very few successful outcomes with this character. And once her father won a horse race and the horses from Sam Bass — another notorious outlaw. But this time Mr. Bass came out ahead for he raided the camp at night and recovered all the horses except "Rattler," the favorite pony of Mr. Murchison which he had tied to his bedroll. She remembers when both Sonora and Eldorado were located and of how she and her sister would ride wildly down the main street of Eldorado in order to impress the "Easterners." They became known as "those wild Murchison girls."

Mr. Bailey died in Ozona April 22, 1963 and almost to the time of his death remained active and interested in community affairs. He served as president of the School Board, director of the Fair Association, and member of many industry-related organizations. Mrs. Bailey continues to live in the home that she and Mr. Bailey bought from Mr. S. E. Couch and one gets the impression that, given a spirited cow pony, she could more than hold her own with her children, grandchildren and great grandchildren, who have inherited the family love of horses and ranching.

SENSING the NEWS

By Anthony Harrigan

EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENT

Southern States Industrial Council

RELIGIOUS LIBERTY IMPERILED

The history of America is deeply involved with the struggle for religious liberty—freedom to worship and to teach religious principles. The French Huguenots in South Carolina, the Maryland Catholics, the Pilgrims who established Plymouth Colony and many other religious groups settled on this side of the Atlantic because they believed they would find true religious freedom. Today, however, this freedom is in jeopardy because of recent action by federal tax authorities.

A number of independent, fundamentalist schools and colleges are in danger of losing the tax exemptions they have long enjoyed as part of religious liberty in the United States. Americans of all faiths have reason to be concerned about this development, for, if small, underfinanced denominational groups are deprived of such exemptions, the larger denominations in time are likely to feel government pressure.

Indeed, churchmen with no sympathy for the beliefs of the fundamentalists should be keenly aware of the religious liberty issue at stake in the pressure on the independent religious schools and colleges.

Last fall, a number of small religious schools and colleges received notice from the Internal Revenue Service that they will be stripped of tax exempt status if they do not declare they have racially non-discriminatory admissions policies and that they widely publicize this fact in the news media.

Some of these religious educational institutions believe that they cannot, in good conscience, make such a declaration. They believe that alteration of their established admissions policies would violate Scriptural truth. These institutions are prepared to lose their tax exemptions rather than make a concession unacceptable in terms of their religious beliefs.

It is tragic and shocking that the federal government would make such a demand of these religious institutions. These aren't public schools. The admissions standards aren't the product of secular views. On the contrary, the policies stem directly from deeply-held religious convictions.

One may disagree with these convictions and regard them as incorrect or even hurtful. But the fact that they are religious in character should shield them from governmental pressure. The federal government, after all, honors religious convictions in the case of conscientious objectors. Why can't it honor the beliefs of the small Bible colleges?

Religious educational institutions should not be required to submit to a political test. If a fundamentalist institution isn't allowed to keep its tax exemption, because it has its own admissions policy, how can a tax exemption be given to the schools and colleges of major religious groups which have special criteria for admission? Certainly, no responsible citizen wants an Episcopal seminary to be compelled to prove that it is non-discriminatory by recruiting quotas of Baptists, Presbyterians and churchmen of other faiths. Roman Catholic institutions such as Notre Dame and Fordham should have an undisputed right to maintain admissions policies that favor Catholics. Yeshiva University's right to continue to serve as a Jewish theological seminary should be maintained without any question by tax authorities. It would be absurd and unjust to compel it to admit quotas of Mexicans, Puerto Ricans and other minorities.

The public may well ask: Why this pressure on the small Bible schools and colleges? They train law-abiding citizens. No riots take place on their campuses. They aren't bomb factories. Moreover, tax authorities aren't bringing pressure on major universities which have given extremists free rein. Last year, for example, Yale University provided aid and comfort to Black Panthers and their sympathizers gathered in New Haven, Conn., to protest a trial of Panthers accused of murder. Yale has not been denied the benefit of tax exempt status though a number of university activities seem injurious to the well-being of the public.

Something is wrong when small, fundamentalist schools and colleges are singled out for extraordinary pressure. Fair-minded citizens are likely to regard these threats of removal of tax exemption as a form of public pressure incompatible with American tradition. No religious educational institution should be penalized on account of its beliefs as evidenced in its admissions policies.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Copyrights And Copycats

To the would-be writer, few things are as precious as the words and ideas he has put together into a manuscript. Disquieting thoughts of literary copycats may cross his mind. Wouldn't it be wise to rush his manuscript off to Washington and have it copyrighted?

The trouble is, most kinds of literary material cannot be copyrighted in that manner. The only way to copyright a book or an article or a story is to actually publish it and to include, with that first publication, a "notice of copyright" (the kind of notice usually found on the back of the title page of a book).

Only after publication will the Copyright Office accept the material for registration. The registration, although not a copyright in itself, is useful in establishing the writer's rights in case of dispute.

Then what does protect his manuscript before it is published? It is protected, very effectively, by an ancient rule of law often called "common law copyright."

Under this rule, the writer owns his work automatically—just as the man who builds a bookcase owns it automatically. He need not go through any particular formalities in order to establish his rights.

Nor must he keep the manuscript secret to protect his "common law copyright." He may let friends read it. He may submit it to editors for possible sale. By doing so, he no more gives up his ownership than a person gives up ownership of a watch by submitting it to a jeweler for appraisal.

Furthermore, his ownership has no time limit. While an ordinary copyright cannot last more than 56 years, a "common law copyright" may last indefinitely—so long as the work remains unpublished.

In one famous case, an unpublished story of Mark Twain came into the possession of a collector. But his plans to publish the story were blocked in court.

The judge held that even though 73 years had gone by since it was written, and even though Twain had been dead for 38 years, his "common law copyright" was still good.

WASHINGTON NEWS LETTER

Cong. O. C. Fisher

THE 91st CONGRESS, as was true of previous sessions, was often prone to favor any legislation calculated to corral minority bloc votes.

Ignoring inflation and budget deficits, for example, the House in closing days of the session approved a $14-billion Administration measure, with few guidelines and controls, to be used on school integration projects. The Senate, fortunately, didn't reach it. But it'll be back next year.

Another bill, also with Administration support, breezed through the Senate, then was okayed by a House committee but never cleared by the Rules committee, is considered extremely dangerous. Its disastrous effect has been under-publicized.

This measure would give to the Great Society's Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) cease-and-desist enforcement powers, whereas at present it investigates alleged discrimination in employment and seeks voluntary solutions by persuasion and mediation.

But EEOC wants more authority, backed by full judicial and police enforcement powers of the government.

Thus, if this proposal is enacted, this agency in dealing with private employment would become the investigator, prosecutor, judge and jury. Jury trials would be outlawed. Employers would be at the mercy of the mercy of the whims of biased bureaucrats. The employer could be told by EEOC whom to hire, fire, or promote - - where it decides race, sex, or religion are involved - - and would have jails to back up its orders. What a wall to free enterprise!

Educational institutions, State and local officials, would also be covered.

One big trouble would be the Commission and its staff—notoriously lacking in objectivity, with resulting harassment. WARNING: As the matter now stands, unless the public becomes aroused and makes itself heard, loud and clear, this police state legislation may become the law of the land during the 92nd Congress.

Tips For Gardeners

From The Ozona Garden Club By Mrs. Bailey Post

After the warm weather in December, many of the early-blooming shrubs are beginning to show buds. Branches of Pussy Willow, Forsythia, Spiraea and fruit trees may be brought indoors soon, and stood in containers of water in a warm light room. In no time at all, it seems, they will be in full bloom, providing a foretaste of spring. Watch for the buds to swell enough to almost show color.

If you have a Wisteria vine that is shy-blooming, root pruning often stimulates it to produce a good crop of flowers. Take a sharp-shooter or sharp spade and cut the roots all around the plant two or three feet from the main trunk.

If the front of your house receives only about four hours of morning sun and is shaded most of the afternoons, there are several evergreens that bloom or furnish beautiful foliage. Some that do well here are the evergreen Rhipidolepis, Indica (Springtime) is a pink blooming shrub of the Hawthornes, Aucuba, an Asiatic evergreen foliage plant, boxwood, mahonia, and any of the hollies grow well in the shade. If an acid soil is provided azaleas will be early bloomers.

Some have asked if they should remove the burlap before planting balled and burlaped shrubs purchased at a nursery. Unless it has been treated with a preservative, which is rare, the burlap need not be removed. It may be loosened around the trunk and rolled back so that you can see how deep to set the plant. Balled plants should never be lifted by the trunk or top growth as there's danger of the weight of the soil damaging the roots. Always place one hand under the ball, being careful not to break the soil.

Most pyracanthas purchased at the nursery have a tall main stem. If you want a hedge plant or a sturdy compact base-branching plant, cut this stem back halfway. New growth will appear in the spring, so when 8 to 10 inches long, cut out tips to encourage further branching. During the summer growing season, tip prune all new growth. Be sure to check to see if your evergreens need water through this dry period.

State Highway Maintenance Men On 40-Hour Week

Austin--The Texas Highway Commission today reduced the normal work week of hourly-paid maintenance employees of the Texas Highway Department from 45 to 40 hours a week.

The change is effective March 1. The action was taken to bring the work week of hourly-paid maintenance employees into line with those of salaried employees of the Department who have been on a regular 40-hour work week for several years.

The Commission has had under study for a considerable time a proposal to place all employees on a uniform work week without a reduction in gross pay. The action today implements this proposal.

TO TURN AGAIN

In winter the pond freezes over, and the old mill wheel is idle. But although the landscape appears dormant, there is hidden life beneath the surface. One day it will be spring again, with water rushing over the mill wheel and corn being ground into meal.

If you have been living in a winter of your own, why not take a lesson from the old mill? The winters of our life are bleak—they are hard to weather. But forever and ever there is the chance to start again. Spring will come and your church will sustain you through doubt and disappointment and give you promise of another chance—another life.

Record Growth For Texas Hiway System In 1970

Joyce Kilmer once wrote that "life is a highway and its milestones are the years." The Texas Highway Department can claim many "milestones" for 1970.

The year was one of solid achievement for the State highway network. To begin with, the total designated mileage grew to 69,975 miles. About 700 of these miles were added during 1970.

The State blazed a trail for other states to follow in the Interstate Highway program. Texas has more designated interstate mileage than any other state, with a total of 3,179 miles.

At the end of the year, Texas had some 2,320 miles of Interstate open to traffic, with 329 miles under construction.

Another important highway system built, maintained and operated by the Department, matured during 1970. The Farm- and Ranch-to-Market road network grew to almost 40 thousand designated miles during the year.

This superb, all-paved system of secondary roads also grew in sophistication. Originally, the system was credited mainly with "getting the farmer out of the mud."

Now the FM system has taken on new roles in the economic life of Texas. FM roads provide access for industrialization in virtually every part of the state.

FM roads supported the recreational travel industry in a big way during 1970. FM roads provided primary or partial access to the State's nearly six thousand square miles of inland waters.

Emergency Care Training Program Set At Eldorado

Eldorado, Texas, has been selected as the site for a four-night training program designed to give emergency care personnel the knowledge to save lives and limbs during that critical period before a patient can reach the hospital. The program is headed by Doctor J. B. Brame of Eldorado. This training is offered by the Tom Green Eight County Medical Society and the Texas State Department of Health, Division of Civil Defense and Traffic Safety under the direction of Charles E. King.

Doctor Brame has voiced concern for the needless deaths and injuries caused by the lack of proper training of emergency personnel. The Eldorado physician points out that a fast ride to the hospital by ambulance or other means has practically never saved a life. A national study shows that 25-thousand persons were permanently disabled because emergency personnel were not trained in the techniques required and 20-thousand persons lost their lives because of inadequate care prior to reaching the hospital.

The emergency care personnel must be able to make a quick survey, determine medical priority, and take the necessary life-saving measures. The school now offered in Eldorado, free of charge, will provide an opportunity to learn those skills. Invited to attend this course are ambulance personnel, policemen, firemen, safety engineers, rescue squads members, nurses, public health and civil defense officials, and others who deal with the care of the sick and injured.

Students in this program will learn techniques in resuscitation, cardiac massage, splinting of fractures, burns and other medical emergencies. Aid to snake and spider bite victims, smoke and gas victims, handling of emotionally disturbed patients, emergency childbirth, and traffic control will also be covered. The school will be held January 25, 26, 27, and 28 in the main room of the Memorial Building in Eldorado. This training is open to all emergency personnel in the Southwest Texas area.
