About the time John Bull was getting his final lesson from Uncle Sam, in 1812, a letter was written by a repentant Pennsylvania father to the discarded son, who never received it. The omance-freighted document has just been discovered at Lenni, Delaware county, Mississippi. Catherine Mahon, daughter of an old resident of that town, was looking over some old famfly papers and came across a package letters that had belonged to her grandmother. Among the collection was a sealed envelope, yellow with age, which bore the superscription: "For my son, Hiram, should he ever return. This was signed "Thaddens Mahon." THE BALL FROM THE HUNTER'S REVOLVER CRASHED THROUGH ITS Miss Mahon showed the letter to her his father speak of a brother who had child.
