WORLD EVENTS
World events seem to be moving in more satisfactory fashion these days. One cannot help hoping that sometime before long we may read that people who once thought that war was the only way to bring about satisfactory solutions to world difficulties may have reached the conclusion that there are possibilities of mutual co-operation. Acceptance of the fact that we are dependent upon each other, not only as individuals but as nations, for our well-being and that the ultimate solution of world problems will require a willingness to agree to this precept, seems the first step forward toward a peaceful world.

In these closing days of the International Student Service Institute in Eastport, Maine, the question of the way to make democracy meet not only our own needs, but world needs, has been discussed by Dr. Engleton and the students. Much interest and real thinking on the problem, I hope, will result.

I have, of course, spent a very short time with this group of young people and I have nothing whatsoever to do with the running of the institute. But one finds oneself receiving certain impressions. I have found first that after five weeks of hard work there is no real lessening of interest in the study of what democracy means and of how, as individuals, we can function to make democracy meet the needs of all the people.

FINE LEADERSHIP
Dr. Neilson has made a deep impression on all of us. Perhaps the students who have been under his direction at Smith college will understand what I mean when I say that these young men and women have sensed the benediction of his presence. It is character that really gets across to other people and there has been a recognition of the fineness and the gentleness of a human being who has lived up to his ideals and used his abilities to the utmost. Example is far better than precept.

In addition, I think Mr. Joseph Lash, who has really done the day-by-day management of detail and curriculum on which hangs much of the success of an undertaking such as this, has gained the respect and the affectionate co-operation of all the young people under his care in a way which is only possible when there is realization of a fine spirit. People grow through experiences, if they meet life honestly and courageously. This is how character is built and young people recognize this ability to grow in those with whom they come in contact.

CLEVE WILLIAMS PASSES

News was received here last Thursday of the passing of C. L. (Cleve) Williams at his home near Crowell, last Thursday the 7th, at midnight. He was stricken with paralysis Wednesday morning. Funeral and burial were held Friday at 4 p. m. Mr. Williams was a member of the Methodist church.

The writer has known Cleve Williams for the past 32 years, and always found him fair and square in every point. He had no disagreeable hobbies and loved his friends. At the time we first knew him, he had a farm some six miles east of town, but sold it and moved to Tahoka when the railroad came there in 1912, where he entered the hardware business. He had a very successful business there.

When the railroad came to Brownfield in 1917, he moved back here, forming a partnership with R. L. Bowers in wholesaling of heavy groceries and feeds. During the early twenties, he married Miss Minnie Bryant, he having been a bachelor up to that time. No children were born of this union.

During the twenties he sold his grocery and feed business to his partner and entered the hardware business on the north side of the square, which he managed until some two years ago, when he sold the building, lot and stock to Ial Copeland.

Soon after that time, he and wife moved to Crowell, which was his old home section, and where he purchased a good farm. Those attending the funeral from this section were Mr. and Mrs. Bayne Price, of Plains, and Joe Bryant of this county. Mrs. Price is a sister of Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Bryant a brother.

Mrs. W. T. Ince visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Bynum in Brownfield Thursday.

HOME OWNERS FORUM

BEFORE filling a hole or large crack in wall or ceiling plaster, clean out the area thoroughly, exposing at least one space between the lath to provide a firm anchorage for the plaster patch.

Cut a level all around the under edge of the break, so that the outside hole is smaller than the cavity next to the lath. This precaution gives added tooth for the adhesion of the patch.

Mix patching plaster with only enough water so as to level freely. Several commercial varieties are put up in powder form, requiring only moisture to apply.

Sprinkle water throughout the hole, taking considerable care to moisten the entire edge of the old plaster. This eliminates the danger of moisture absorption by the old plaster causing cracks in the patched area.

Press the plaster sufficiently firmly into the cavity to force the patch between the lath base. Pack in well and level off smoothly to produce a pleasing finish. A trowel, putty knife or even a large spoon is adequate to the task.

Q.—Will back-priming of redwood prevent future spotting?
A.—Redwood spotting is due to soluble extractives contained in the wood which leach out in the presence of moisture to stain the painted surface.

Back-priming seals the most common avenue for the entrance of moisture, reducing the danger of spotting accordingly. The sealing and moisture resistant properties of pure white lead paint are such that a single priming coat provides adequate protection.

Q.—Suggest a method for cleaning an oven burner?
A.—Occasional scraping with a stiff brush and cleaning the holes with a piece of wire should keep your burner at maximum efficiency.

Miss Charlotte Gibson and Miss Gerry Louellen of Phoenix, Ariz., visited friends and relatives in Brownfield the first of the week.

Behind the Scenes in American Business

By John Craddock

NEW YORK, Aug 11—SIMMERING—Price control legislation, the new tax bill and eastern gas rationing all have sort of settled down for summer simmering on the back of the business stove. . . but retail trade is in front an sizzling! Instead of usual hof-weather lull, this summer is proving by far the best that retailers have known for more than a decade. Increased purchasing power traceable to defense "boom" is the dominant factor, of course, but lately "scare buying" has been increased as consumers tend to purchase beyond their current needs because of threats of shortages and price rises. This is especially true in the case of durable goods and staple clothing. One men's clothing chain is showing a gain of 51.4 per cent over last year, and big mail order companies which do a substantial business in durable consumer's items, have had gains from 30 to 42 per cent. A somewhat exaggerated example of how shortage and price-rise apprehension affects consumers is visible right now in the frantic rush at the silk stocking counters.

KNOWING HOW—The defense production program has produced what seem to be some "strange bedfellows" of industry—in assigning certain companies to handle defense jobs closely akin to their regular operations. Rat trap makers are turning out army cots; pipe organ manufacturers are making saddle frames, adding machine manufacturers are making automatic pistols; makers of cream separators are turning out gun tripod mounts—an so it goes. On closer inspection of many of these cases it is found that there is, after all, a basic kinship between the materials, or tools, or factory set-up for these companies' regular production, and the defense-goods productions. In other cases there is almost no physical relationship whatever, but established industrial organizations get the War Department call to operate new defense enterprises simply because of the need for proven skill in the management of big operations. Most recent example of the latter is organization of the Loife Star Defense corporation to construct and operate a $78,940,000 ordnance plant near Texarkana, Tex. It was organized as a subsidiary of the B. F. Goodrich company, pioneer rubber concern, and the latter's management personnel was given responsibility for construction and operation of the plant, where about 8,000 persons will be employed in loading shells and bombs.

ICELAND'S BATHS PLEASE MARINES They never call the janitor for hot water in Iceland. An endless supply is gushing from the hot sulphur springs, according to the U. S. Marines on duty there. Letters from the sea soldiers to the home folks state that they live in cylindrical huts built somewhat like igloos. They like the food and they are enjoying good health in the current springlike weather. There are no trees or any other of the familiar landmarks of America in Iceland. The landscape is covered with tall mountains of volcanic origin. Bit by bit the Marines are picking up words of the Icelandic language and in due course of time some of the native vernacular will be added to the already extensive vocabulary of the leathernecks. Best of all, however, they enjoy the warm sulphur springs where they shave, bathe and, incidentally, wash their own clothes. The latter art is learned by the sea soldiers at their training camps and the turn out a "wash" good enough to win the envy of a housewife. A free water supply of every temperature, from scalding hot to ice-cold, is obtainable due to the fact that the Marines perform their ablutions right where a cold stream joins a hot one. Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Bowers and family are leaving this week for Gallup, N. M., where they will witness the Intertribal ceremonies of New Mexico Indians. Later they will visit other points in New Mexico and Arizona. Red Brown, Gene Hurt and Lee Dodson of Fort Bliss and Miss Jane Brownfield and Miss Dorothy Swinton of Kansas were visitors of Mrs. L. M. Wingerd at Ruidoso, New Mexico. Tom Neely, T. E. Neely of Sayre, Oklahoma, Walter Gracey, Curtice Barrett and Nolan Tipps are on a fishing trip on Rio Grande.
