ADDRESS TO THE MUMMY, AT BELZONI'S EXHIBITION
The following lines are from the pen of a master. We never recollect to have met with any thing in the same strain, which pleased us so much.

And thou hast walked about, (how strange a story!)

In Thebes' streets three thousand years ago,

When the Memnonum was in all its glory;

And time has not begun to overthrow

Those temples, whose bases and piles stupendous,

Of which the very ruins are tremendous.

Speak! for thou long enough has acted dummy;

Thou hast a tongue—came—let us hear its tone;

Thou art standing on thy leg, above ground, Mummy

“Revisiting the gloom of the moon,”

Not like thin ghosts or disembodied creatures,

But with thy bones and flesh, and limbs, and features.

Tell us—for doubtless thou canst recollect—

To whom should we assign the Sphynx?—it is

Was Cheops or Cephrenes architec-

Of either Pyramid that bears his name?

Is Pompey's Pillar really a misnomer?

Had Thebes a hundred gates, as sung by Homer?

Perhaps thou wert a Mason, and forbidden

By oath to tell the mysteries of thy trade;

Then say what secret melody was hidden

In Memnon's statue which at sun-rise played!

Perhaps thou wert a jester—if so, thy struggles

Are vain, for priestcraft never owns its juggles.

Perchance that very hand, now pinion'd flat,

Has hobs-nobb'd with Pharaoh, glass to glass;

Or dropp'd a half-penny in Homer's hat;

Or done I thine own to let Queen Dido pass;

Or held, by Solomon's own invitation;

A torch at the great Temples dedication:

I need not ask thee if that hand when arm'd.

Has any Roman soldier man'd and knuckled;

For thou wert dead, and buried, and embalm'd;

Ere Romulus and Remus had been suckled;

Antiquity appears to have begun;

Long after thy primeval race was run.

Thou could'st develope, if that wither'd tongue

Might tell us what those sightless orbs have seen,

How the world look'd when it was fresh and young;

And the great Deluge had left it green;

Or was it then so old that history's pages

Contained no record of its early ages?

Still silent, incomunicative elf?

Art sworn to secrecy? then keep thy vows;

But pryhee tell us something of thyself,

Reveal the secrets of thy prison-house;

Since in the world of spirits thou hast slumber'd,

What hast thou seen—what strange adventures number'd?

Since first thy form was in this box extended,

We have, above ground, seen some strange mutations;

The Roman empire has begun and ended,

New worlds have risen—we have lost old nations;

And countless kings have into dust been humbled,

While not a fragment of thy flesh has crumbled.

Didst thou not hear the pother o'er thy head

When the great Persian conqueror Cambyses,

March'd armies o'er thy tomb with thundering tread,

O'erthrew Osiris, Orus, Apis, Isis,

And shook the Pyramids with fear and wonder,

When the gigantic Memnon fel asunder?

If the tomb's secrets may not be confess'd,

The nature of thy private life unfold;

A heart has throb'd beneath that leathern breast,

And tears adown that rusty cheek has roll'd;

Have children climb'd those'knees, and kissed that face?

What was thy name and station, age and race?

Statue of flesh; immortal of the dead!

Imperishable type of evanescence;

Posthumous man, who quist thy narrow bed,

And standest undecay'd within our presence,

Thou wilt hear nothing till the Judgment morning,

When the great trump shall thrill thee with its warning.

Why should this worthless tegument endure,

If its undying guest be lost forever?

O let us keep the soul embalmed and pure

In living virtue, that when both must sever,

Although corruption may our frame consume,

Th' immortal spirit in the skies may bloom.

ELEGIAC STANZAS.

Oh thou lamented absent one,

To thee my thoughts would stray,

In evening's consecrated hour,

Or mid the pomp of day.

Thine image is before me now,

Oh, would it ne'er depart,

That gentle mien, that angel smile,

Are graven on my heart.

From fancy in the festal hall

Thy fairy form recedes;

Thou art not at our trysting place,

And stricken memory bleeds.

And when thy favorite song is breathed,

In well remembered tone,

Thy voice upon its echo floats,

But where art thou—my own?

What was the strong, though nameless spell,

That bound my heart to thee?

It was not beauty, for around

I may fairer see.

It was a meek and holy charm,

An intellectual grace,

A mind of purity and truth,

More lovely than thy face.

How oft from revelry and mirth,

My wayward heart would flee,

The above land speech

press. It is emphatically “back woods” as the it of Major Downing are, “down east”—There isly an allusion in it that looks to the other side c Alleghenies, much less across the Atlantic, or to antiquity. There are, however, two excepton one occasion he ventures to compare a rise c stream Obion to “Noah's fresh;” and again he a that he had his fears, lest the earth-quake si swallow him in its jaws “like the big fish did nah”—But these are slight blemishes, and do no tract from the strictly Western character of his v Its language is purely Western; which, whether regard phrases or single words, is possessed of a raciness, more condensed vigour, more figur beauty, than any with which we are familiar. I illustrate; what finer combination of words could been devised as an exhortation to moral firm the people of Texas had reached the ears of the supreme Government, and anxious that those misrepresentations should be contradicted, and the Government advised of the true situation of that country, and feeling a deep solicitude for their fellow citizens the various Ayuntamientos of Texas, and the friends of Col. Austin, last August, appointed Peter W. Grayson, Esq. and myself commissioners to bear to the city of Mexico, and lay before the government their representations and memorials, praying for his release from confinement.

The commissioners were well received, and the representations had the effect of strengthening in the mind of his Excellency General Santa Anna, the favorable dispositions which he had ever entertained of the people of Texas. His Excellency has fulfilled the expectations of the world, and has distinguished himself as the friend and champion of liberal principles, and the firmest supporter of the Federal Republican system; and his conduct seems to be actuated by the same liberal and enlightened views as himself. His administration promises to the people of Texas, and to the whole Mexican Republic the happiest results.

About this time Colonel Juan Almonte, who had been sent to Texas by the General government, to inquire into the state of the country, and to ascertain the wants of the people, arrived in the city. His report to the Government was of the most favorable character, and did credit to him as a man of intelligence and observation. His report had a very happy influence in favor of Texas.

The prayer for the release of Colonel Austin was heard. The commissioners were informed that as the matter had proceeded thus far it was necessary that the forms and ceremonies of the law be observed, but that in a few days he should be released, and that in the mean time his situation should be rendered as comfortable as possible.

I conclude by expressing now my opinion that before this he has been released and is now on his return to his friends in Texas.

SPENCER H. JACK.

CURRIER.—No. 4.

"I think there be six Richmonds in the field"—Richmond, But the worst part of the central committee's report remains to be noticed. It is that in which they endeavor to delude the people into a support of their views by operating upon their sympathies. They endeavor to convey the impression that the object of the friends of a convention or provisional organization is the destruction of our agent Col. Austin—or at least they contend that such a measure would produce that result. They break out in strains of unmeasured eulogy on the faithful & fearless manner in which that individual has discharged his duties as agent ("and if you have tears prepare to shed them now") they tell us that he has been long confined in a dungeon and that a convention, or a provisional organization might be fatal to his liberty or perhaps to his life. This unfounded and ungenerous mode of operating upon and deluding the people cannot be characterized in terms too harsh. Now let it be understood that many of the advocates of having a convention as so many can be called together are the warm friends of Austin—many of them have never thought of him in the matter, and who have thought know that such a measure instead of injuring him—would redound to his advantage and procure his release. We well know that his imprisonment was commenced and has been lengthened on account of a strife in Mexico (which he himself helped to create and confirm) that the people of Texas were in a revolutionary attitude and determined to disregard the decisions of the General Government on their application for a state. Now if the Government finds that instead of organizing against their consent we again respectfully petition and solemnly pledge ourselves to abide their decision; their opinion of our disposition to rebel—will be changed and our agent will be believed as perfectly harmless—the Government believing that even if life is revolutionary himself he will find no materials in Texas on which to operate. The central committee appear to object to conventions on the grounds of their illegality. Let them recollect, that they themselves are the offspring of a convention and if conventions are unlawful, they are equally so and have no right to advise the people at all. They seem to be converts to that policy which has up to this moment so much retarded the growth and prosperity of Texas I mean (to use a sportsman's phrase) the policy of lying low and keeping dark. As a part of this system of policy advice has been given to the people of Texas from a respectable source, to have no more conventions &c. &c. With this advice the central committee must be considered as conciliating. Now in the name of God what possible harm has resulted, or can result from conventions!

Is not the right to have them guaranteed by the constitution of the land? Are not the people authorized to assemble peaceably either in mass or through their representatives to petition for a redress of their grievances? Their right to do so is uncontrollable and to deny it to them, or to contend that they cannot be trusted to deliberate on their own governmental concerns, are doctrines better adapted to the disposition of Turkey, than to republican America. Moreover, conventions are no burthen or tax upon the people at large. The members pay their own expenses. They bring together the inhabitants of the remotest section of Texas. Their ideas are compared. Their grievances are discussed. Persons who otherwise might forever remain strangers are made known to each other. But for something like this, no concertaneousness of sentiment. No concert of action and no community of feeling can possibly exist among us—for we are scattered over a wide extent of country and without any means of disseminating timely or correct information. To conclude, I cordially coincide with the Political Chief in believing that a crisis has arrived when it is all important that Texas should be consulted through her representatives. What it will be necessary for those representatives to do, will depend upon the situation of the Federal State Governments when they meet. If anarchy should at the time every where prevail—promptitude of action and vigorous organization will be indispensable. If not, a respectful petition to the general government will I am confident be sufficient for purposes. The general government can have no interest in it. It take any delight in our being ground down and oppressed by anarchy and cupidity of Coahuila. Since our last convention we have been superadded three new and powerful causes for separation from Coahuila: 1st The present Anarchy. 2ndly Her taking away our lands, and 3dly The Mexican population of Texas are now warmly in favor of such separation and have always been—but been bitterly opposed to it. These three new reasons combined with the many preceding ones will I have no doubt induce the government to admit us to the dignity of a separate state. Let me recollect that Carrasco recommends no rash or revolutionary measures. This course of conduct I never will approve. Such the most reasonable and respectful and repeated petitions have been refused—or until anarchy that seems headless and hopeless and endless overshadows the land—or until oppression that is palpable and glaring renders further forbearance and submission wholly no better names—than meanness and cowardice.

NEW ORLEANS, DECEMBER 11.

SALES OF COTTON THIS DAY.

16 bales cotton were sold at 17 cents.

It was reported that 1,900 bales had been sold this morning but we could not learn particulars. It is thought a full report will be submitted to.

Extract of a letter from a merchant in New York, written on the 23d ult.

"Letters of cotton are giving way on the lower qualities, and for the fine descriptions purchasers can force concessions of discount of prices. Many of the mills are preparing to shut up their works; indeed I have already heard of 3 or 4 they cannot afford to pay the present rates of 18 to 21 cents per lb."

Extract of a letter from Mobile, written yesterday:

"In consequence of a rumour which was a few days ago circulated here, of an express to Liverpool, which was to carry favorable intelligence from Liverpool, there was considerable excitement amongst Cotton dealers, but as the following mail brought no confirmation, the market soon relapsed into its former dull state."

GALE IN THE GULF OF MEXICO.—We learn from Capt. Clark of the brig Splendid, from Vera Cruz, that on his passage to this port on the 16th ultimo, when 6 leagues north of Vera Cruz, he encountered the most severe gale he has ever known in his experience of thirty years, and before it ended, the Splendid was driven past Campeachy Banks, a distance of more than 250 miles. An English steamer company from Gibraltar, had her decks swept of everything, and had to throw over a part of her cargo, consisting of gold & silver. At the commencement of the gale there were two schooners in company, bound to Vera Cruz, which had not arrived on the 25th. The U. S. ship Frigate was in the gale, but suffered no damage of consequence. The sloop Elizabeth, Edwin Clark, master, from Mobile for Falmouth, was capsized, and all on board perished except John Fenton seaman, of Gloucester, Mass. who was picked up after being 11 hours on a plank, by an English schooner, which arrived at Vera Cruz on the 19th. In lat. 23 long. 90 dark spoke the British packet Swallow from Vera Cruz for Falmouth, under jury masts, having been capsized on the 23d, and had to cut away her main and leave her guns overboard, to right her. She intended to go into Havana. Capt. C. supplied her with water.

We know not the origin of the following touching sketch, though we well recollect the account of the death of the lady mentioned, in the summer of 1832:

The Thrilling Token.—In the cholera season, in the village of Harlem, near the city of New York, the Rev. G. L. Hersey, an excellent, warm hearted, classical and pious clergyman of the Episcopal Church, & his lovely wife, were both on their death beds, brought down by the pale destroyer. They were inseparable roommates, and when the interesting lady found her soul taking wing to the better world, she took off her wedding ring, & sent it to her husband as a last token.

The delicate and beautiful emotion of heart which possessed the beloved wife, when in her agonies of death, to return her ring to the dear one from whom she received it, is too holy and sublime to be fully appreciated, except by kindred minds. This was a most solemn and precious farewell. Its language was—Take this token, the dearest gift that was ever committed to my keeping by earthly hands. I have kept it in my hours of joy and sorrow; and whenever I looked upon it, a flood of love and divine affections would rush upon my heart. The dear child is upon the hand which it has adorned. These eyes cannot longer look upon it, and see its pure, yet simple brightness. I return the dearest object of my earthly affections, with all its associations. I go where earthly ties are changed to a more holy intensity—where all its spirit, and the bright empire of my thought and mind. I drop the ring in my upward flight, I could not carry the most precious gems of earth any further, I dedicated it to one who may long tarry, as my last token of unchanged undying love—farewell.

Well might the affectionate husband, as he received the expressive token, have bowed, as he did upon his bed, and prayed that as they had been one in life, they might be undivided in death.

He locked the ring, which is the last of earthly things which a wife may part, and as it touchingly spoke of a thousand scenes—of duty done—of life ended—the mystery of

We copy the following from the New-Orleans Commercial Bulletin:

New-Orleans, Dec. 11.

Believing that some interest is felt in this country in the fate of Texas, and for the situation of Col. S. F. Austin, who has been for some time a prisoner in Mexico; and that any correct information on the subject would be well received. It affords me a satisfaction to communicate the following brief statement:

Hearing that misrepresentations of the conduct of him or her life, & it was the lesson of life—the dim pledge of joys to come to be shadowed by earthly symbols—to put to longer enjoyed beneath the gloomy atmosphere of time.

Her spirit lingered, for a moment, in the clouds, and her companion, for a time, gazed after her eternity.

HAPPINESS.—It would form perhaps one of the most amusing, if not the most instructive chapter in poetic history, to compare the various opinions expressed by the inspired respecting happiness. He who dwells in a lonely valley believes happiness resides in the crowded city among company and books; while he who sighs amid the rattle of other men's chariot-wheels, and the smoke of ten thousand chimneys, fixes the source of happiness by the side of some purling brook—beside a green bank where the wind is ever fragrant, and the voice of nature alone is heard. The highborn bard, sick of the hollow courtesies of polished society, sighs for pastoral solitudes, where flowers never fade, and flocks never stray, and beauty is never out of blossom; the shepherd bard, on the other hand, who has to wander over moors and mountains, half choked in winter with drifting snow, and half scorched in summer with burning suns—who has to smear and chop his flocks, as well as keep clear from the fox, and save them, too, from smothering in a snow-storm, envies the opulent, and longs to be a lord. There was fine sense in the remark of a Schoolman, who, in reading the saying of Solomon, "Snow is beautiful in its season," exclaimed, "Aye, and doubt it was beautiful to you, sitting with the rich wines and the lasses of Jerusalem at side you; but had ye been a poor stone mason, ye would ha' said no such thing!"—[Cunningham's Edition of R. Burns.]

WRITTEN IN 1833.

And have ye gone forever,
Scenes of the happy past;

And sh'll your beauties never,
On like again be cast?

Must memory's magic pages
Alone the traces bear?

And tell that long gone pleasures,
Are living only there.

Where are the golden hours,
That glided swiftly by;

When lists arrayed in flowers,
Was like the morning sky.

And where's the loved of boyhood,
That played along the plain;

That roamed among the wildwood,
And filed the happy train.

This bosom fondly dearm'd her,
What fancy's self could paint;

It honour'd and esteem'd her
As its idol and its saint.

Now she is gently sleeping,
Within the green ear of her breast

While round the spot where sleeping
The pledges she has left.

Then flew the flood of feeling,
For fate is ever east;

And memory always stealing,
Will settle on the past.

Then on the darkened ocean
Where thousands love to leave;

Through its wild commotions,
I'll go with every wave.

PROPOSALS will be received from those desirous of undertaking the excavation of the CANAL to be opened from the head of Matagorda bay to Caney Bayou, at the dwelling house of Caleb R. Bostwick, Bay prairie; commencing on Saturday the 6th of December next, and the reception thereof continued from day to day, till a contract is closed.

The ground selected for the route of the canal is a timberless prairie, almost level, and is believed to be of a formation highly favourable for such an opening. The length of the canal to be 2812 feet, from the bank of the bay to that of the bayou, and to vary in depth from 5 feet 7 inches, to that of 7 feet; to be 30 feet wide at the bottom, and to have a regular and uniform graduation thence to the top, or surface of the ground; making it navigable at all times for steam boats, and other water-crafts, drawing three and a half feet water.

The contract will be given to him, or them, who will perform the work on the most favorable terms, having due regard to the individual responsibility of the contractor, and to the time to be allowed for completing the excavation; requiring the undertaker to give good and approved security for the faithful, workman-like and acceptable performance of the undertaking, accompanied with a provision of forfeiture in damages, in the event of failure so to perform the same, to double the sum to be paid for the proposed work.

All the inhabitants residing near Caney for several miles up, have already subscribed to the plan proposed for raising and applying the means necessary to defray the expense of this enterprise; no difficulty, it is presumed, will be experienced in procuring supplies of subsistence, whilst engaged in performing the excavation.

Any explanation necessary, or further particulars required, for a more perfect comprehension of the nature and extent of the proposed undertaking, will be freely given, and fully made known at the time of receiving proposals, and closing the contract.

Gentlemen desirous of viewing the ground of the canal-route, previous to the time for receiving proposals, are requested to apply to Mr. G. W. White-side, living near the premises, who will pilot them to the spot.

WHEREAS Wm. P. Harris and Robert Wilson trading under the firm of Harris and Wilson and David Harris and Robert Wilson as administrators of the estate of John R. Harris deceased, made a surrender of all their property and that of said estate for the benefit of the creditors in one and the other case under conditions expressed in the act of surrender. The undersigned appointed Syndics, for the purpose of carrying into effect the stipulation contained in the surrender, in case the parties failed to make payment to their creditors within the time allowed them; and acting under the authority vested in them by the said parties in said act of surrender; as also acting under the authority granted to them the said Syndics by the decree of the honorable Judge of the first instance, citizen Robert Pebbles, dated in the town of San Felipe de Austin, on the 1st day of the present month, hereby give public notice that they will proceed on the 1st day of January next, to sell at public sale at the town of Harrisburg to the highest bidder all the property real and personal belonging to the before mentioned parties, and surrendered by them in conformity with the schedule filed in the Alcalde's office in the town of Austin, on a credit of one and two years, the purchaser giving a judicial bond with approved security, and the real estate remaining mortgaged until final payment. The property will be divided into parcels or lots wherein its nature or locality will admit of proper division, so as to suit purchasers, and lists of the property will be ready on the day of sale. Speculators and others who may be desirous of becoming possessed of valuable lands and other real property, will find it their interest to attend the sale as it will be remembered that there is a very valuable steam Saw and Grist Mill to be sold, and several valuable and well timbered tracts of land, lying contiguous on a navigable stream. The sale will commence on the day before mentioned at the hour of 10 o'clock A. M. and continue until all the property shall be sold or enough thereof to cover the debts due by the parties. Titles will be made by the Syndics and approved by the parties to the surrender, at the expense of the purchaser.

EDMUND ANDREWS.

TOWN OF

AUGUSTA.

THE most valuable portion of the league of land granted to H. H. League, and situate on the Colorado river about twenty five miles above Matagorda, is appropriated by the undersigned and present owner, as the scite of this town. The locality and other advantages of this point on the river, for the establishment of a town, have induced the proprietor to appropriate several hundred acres for the accommodation of the public. The situation is contiguous to timber suitable for building, and has an unobstructed navigation to the lumber region above; it has an inexhaustible supply of excellent water, and the soil is equal to any in the country for gardening. The place has been settled for many years, and has been found as healthy as any on the river. It is on the great trading thoroughfare to the Interior of the country, and will be found a more eligible position than any other American Texas, for concentrating the trade, and supplying the markets of the interior. As such, therefore, its peculiar position commends it to the notice of the steady and enterprising portion of the community, and invites the attention of speculators & adventurers.

TERMS—A sale of lots will be opened at the dwelling house of the proprietor, on Wednesday the 24th of December next, and closed on the 28th of the same month. A credit of one, two, and three years will be given to pure buyers, requiring notes bearing eight per cent interest for the amount, retaining a lien on the property sold, till final payment.

THOMAS CAYCE.
