Hagerman Soil Conservation Group Meets

The supervisors of the Hagerman-Dexter Soil Conservation District, with ministers and superintendents as guests, met at the First Methodist Church of Hagerman, Tuesday, for a dinner meeting to promote "Soil Stewardship Sunday" designated for May 6, and sponsored by the National Soil Conservation Association.

E. O. Moore of Dexter, vice-president of the district and also an officer of the National Board, introduced Ernest Greer, District President, who opened the meeting with a prayer. Mr. Moore spoke on "Soil Stewardship" followed by a round-table discussion by the group, led by Moore.

Moore pointed out that the purpose of Soil Stewardship Sunday observance was to remind people in all walks of life that man is not owner, but a steward of God's soil, water, and plants. Statistics prove that farmers who are following conservation methods have increased their production by an average of 35 per cent, bringing about great social and economic changes. According to a booklet prepared by national church leaders, "The United States population is increased at the rate of about 9,000 per day or three million per year, yet our total area of productive land is shrinking by some 500,000 acres each year; thus each generation must conserve and improve the productivity of the land."

Moore reported that there were 2,700 Soil Conservation Districts in this country, 61 of these being in New Mexico. Today America holds world leadership in soil conservation.

Present for this meeting were guests, the Rev. Mebane Ramsay Moore and Mark McMillan.

Serving the dinner were members of the Methodist Youth Fellowship group, Teresa Oglesby, Sharla Menefee, Linda Menefee, Pat Johnson, Jodelle Freeman, Verma Greer, Kathleen West, Ida Chrisman and their sponsor, Mrs. Jack Menoud.

Mrs. Siegenthaler Made President

Mrs. William M. Siegenthaler was elected president of the Artesia Women's club at a meeting held at the club house Wednesday afternoon.

Other officers elected to serve with her were Mrs. Roy Richardson, first vice president; Mrs. Ray Fagan, second vice president; Mrs. George Teel, recording secretary; Mrs. Roger Durand, corresponding secretary; and Mrs. R. C. Higley, treasurer.

Mrs. Siegenthaler, program chairman, presented part of the musical department from the Junior High School, and then Claire Carper introduced the members of the flute quartet, Rita Caudle, Luba Landziak, Sally Turner and Claire Carper who played Scuzo-Brillante. The Madrigal Singers were introduced by Catherine Beaty and she gave the background and history of the singers. The girls are Lynette Wickersham, Claire Carper, Ann Beth Boteler, Karen Shaid, Sally Turner, Martha Watson, and Marie Cogburn, and they sang "Summer is A-Coming," and "In These Delightful Pleasant Groves."

Mrs. Siegenthaler introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. A. A. Kennitz of Hobbs, immediate past president of the New Mexico Federation Clubs and first vice president of the Western States conference. She spoke on general federation of Women's clubs, its origin, purpose, works, and told about the headquarters in Washington, D. C.

Delegates elected to the state convention April 10-12 in Portales were Mrs. L. F. Hamilton, Mrs. Siegenthaler, and Mrs. Ray Fagan, and alternates, Mrs. W. A. McGeachy, and Mrs. R. C. Higley.

A tea following the meeting featured a spring theme with spring flowers decorating the tea table and club room.

Mrs. Hamilton presided at the silver service. Hostesses were Mrs. Robert Parks, Mrs. H. C. Bidwell, Mrs. F. L. Bays, and Mrs. E. M. Perry.

Many French Believe U. S. Trying To Oust Them From North Africa And Take Over

By PRESTON GROVER

ALGIERS, French North Africa — Many Frenchmen here — and France for that matter — believe the United States is trying to oust the French from North Africa so the Americans can take over.

A lot of Arabs believe that too. It is a wonderful weapon for the United States to use as propaganda. One Frenchman told me that the day after an uprising last August, he went into a little village in the Atlas Mountains to find the villagers shouting: "The Americans are coming."

Terrorist agents had told them liberating armies both from Egypt and America were going to help them win their liberty. Neither army landed, but many are still hopeful.

In Constantine, an Arab virtually shadowed me for two days trying to find out who I was, then introduced himself.

"We want the Americans to come in," he said. "I was here in 1942 when the Americans landed in Oran. In 48 hours they were in Constantine and we were in the dollar zone. Every shoeshine boy had a thousand dollars by night. We want to be in the dollar zone."

The French are not happy about it. They are bitter. They blame the United States for inciting the Arabs to resistance.

For a long time the French have insisted that American should speak out for her ally. But the State Department has refused to run the risk of antagonizing the Arabs in the Middle East.

When, early in March, French colonists in Tunis sacked an American consulate, the State Department agreed it was time to speak out. Ambassador Douglas Dillon told Paris correspondents at a press luncheon that the United States stood solidly back of France's efforts to find a "liberal and equitable" solution of the Algerian problem.

It was a public endorsement of the French, to be sure, but it implied a demand on the French for a solution that would meet the Arabs at least halfway. That has been said on an official level for a long time. But American declarations won't, by themselves, solve the North-African crisis.

The Americans want French influence to remain in North Africa. But they would like to see the French move forward on a program of giving extensive home rule and near independence to the Arabs.

By this system, the United States hopes to keep North Africa friendly to the West. At the same time, it hopes to be able to point out to the Arabs in the Middle East that America is not supporting colonialism in North Africa.

But France has been so slow in moving that only in 1955 did it give home rule and near independence to Morocco and Tunisia and then seemingly only under the pressure of events, especially in Morocco.

The fact that the United States did not long ago come out openly and endorse this program irritates the French. It led to bold talks by the present foreign minister, Christian Pineau, that America was not supporting her allies.

The "bad blood" between the Americans and French extends all over North Africa. The French accuse American officials in North Africa of being too friendly to the Moslem population which has been trying to crowd France into granting home rule. On the other hand, many Moslems feel that America hasn't gone far enough in pressuring the French.

All this, of course, is complicated still further by the fact that North Africa is terribly important for America, which has air bases on the northwest corner of Africa, in Morocco. French naval bases and ports at Casablanca and Port Lyautey in Morocco and at Oran and Algiers in Algeria, are vital links in the defense of the Western Hemisphere and Europe.

There is talk both in France and here in Algeria of the need of American help, but it is never stated officially, because officially France doesn't want interference of any kind from outside. They didn't like it in Indochina.

But the hard fact is that France doesn't have the money for the job that must be done down here. The only source available outside the Iron Curtain is the United States.

Caught in an unhappy position, the United States can't do much except to try to avoid irritating either side too much.

It is not made any easier by the Israeli-Arab question. An important Moroccan official to whom I talked was very blunt about it: "If war breaks out between Israel and the Arab states, the whole Moslem world will slip into the Communist camp. We know in our hearts that the United States will support Israel."

"The Americans feel that all this Arab problem, so far as it affects North Africa at any rate, could have been avoided if the French had acted more wisely. But that is water over the dam. The problem still remains — what to do now?"

Hong Kong Is Unperturbed By The Fuss

By DAVID J. ROADS

HONG KONG — This British crown colony is a clearing house for a small legal trade in non-strategic materials between two enemies — Red China and the Nationalist Chinese on Formosa.

Hong Kong businessmen who boast they will sell to anyone merely shrugged their shoulders at a recent Washington controversy about trade between the Red and Nationalist Chinese. Since trade has been going on here for years.

A few days later Hoover told the investigators he had been wrong. He said the State Department had no evidence of any direct trade between Formosa and the mainland, but that indirect trade in nonstrategic items through Nationalist authorities have no control takes place through Hong Kong.

The controversy also turned up a U.S. government foreign aid report showing Nationalist China imported $1,300,000 worth of goods from Red China during the first eight months of 1955. Shipments to and from Hong Kong were listed separately.

Foreign aid chief John B. Hollister said in a subsequent statement that the Nationalist import from the Reds "were actually shipped from Hong Kong." He also said he had no evidence of any direct trade between Formosa and the Red mainland.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Oscar Pharo, 206, Birmingham, stopped Dan Vanderford, 200, Charlotte, 4.

PHILADELPHIA — Bobby Singleton, 120½, Philadelphia, stopped Cleo Ortiz, 118½, New York, 3.

Major items traded through Hong Kong between Formosa and Red China include: 1. Citronella oil from Formosa purchased by the Communists — about 20,000 U.S. dollars worth last year.

2. Camphor oil from Formosa bought by the Reds — about $100,000 worth last year.
3. Tung oil from Red China bought by Nationalist China—$60,000 worth last year.

Tourists And Dollars Create Bahamas Boom

By HAL BOYLE

NASSAU, Bahamas — Leaves from a touring notebook: Tourists and tax-fleeing dollars are creating the greatest boom in the 464-year history of the Bahamas.

The first tourist was Christopher Columbus, who landed in these islands of eternal summer in 1492 murmuring, "India, I presume?"

Although disappointed in his quest for a shorter route to Bombay and Cathay, Chris was cheered to find the climate was balmy and the sturdy natives had neither income nor inheritance taxes.

It is still that way.

Nassau for more than half a century has been a winter refuge for the wealthy few. Now, like Florida, its neighbor across the blue-green waters, it is becoming a year-round vacation haunt for the many. Visiting stenographers, flying in on a trip paid for on the installment plan, outnumber the millionaire sportsmen who steam or sail here in their own yachts.

The growth of the tourist industry can be seen in these figures. There were 32,018 visitors in 1949 and they spent $10,407,000. In 1955 more than 32,434 came and left $28,352,000. Actually, however, in both years the tourists probably spent far more than these figures indicate. This is a British sterling money area, and for one reason or another many dollars expended here don't get officially reported.

A few oldtimers fear the influx of tourists will turn conservative Nassau into "another Miami," but most Bahamians are glad to see a fellow from out of town and sell him anything from a $150 straw hat to a $50,000 motor sailboat.

Not all the visitors are sun-seekers for a brief season on the beach or to make a sociological study of the effects of drinking four rum-filled Planters Punches in a row.

Many are hard-headed businessmen from America, Canada, Britain and other countries looking for ways to invest capital that will enable them to escape high inheritance or income taxes in their homelands. There are no such taxes here. The colony is financed largely by an import tax on all products brought in from abroad.

Just how can this tax situation help a foreign capitalist? As explained to me, there is a long-accepted principle in international law that no country attempts to tax real property situated in another country.

Suppose you are a rich American with a couple of million bucks or so you'd like to leave your heirs without having Uncle Sam take his usual big whack.

You couldn't start a big chain of liquor stores here. The colony has a rule you have to be a resident for seven years before you can launch a business competitive with one already in existence.

But you could buy up a lot of island real estate and either develop it or just let it lie there enjoying the sunshine.

After your death your heirs can sell the property — probably to some other wealthy old man who wants to protect his heirs — and pocket the money practically free, as the American inheritance law wouldn't apply. If the property

Too Much Time Lag In Release Of Information

ALBUQUERQUE — New Mexico's atomic developments are "jewels in the crown" of the nation's research program.

Operations at Sandia Corp. are "marvelous" declared Dr. C. C. Furnas, assistant secretary of defense for research and development, who visited the Armed Forces Special Weapons Project and Atomic Energy Commission's sites here yesterday.

However, "there will be no new installations for the Albuquerque area in the near future," Dr. Furnas said, "but the level of effort will remain what it is now for many years to come."

The assistant secretary said the government is using "the best people in the business" for operations at New Mexico sites, and the atomic and guided missiles programs are progressing at a steady pace.

"Many things the public doesn't know about our programs are unavailable because of security factors," Dr. Furnas said. But the "time lag" of information reaching the public is far in excess of what it should be, he said.

Dr. Furnas said the system of screening security items is "basically sound" but "so many things had gone up in value and it is going up right now, they might even turn a tidy profit."

I might be tempted to employ this device myself, except the only thing I plan to leave my heirs is a wrist watch.

which should be available to the public have been put in a classified category after their discovery," it is sometimes years before they are released to the public, he said.

For instance, the announcement that radiation will be used in the preservation of food is only recent whereas it should have been made as soon as it was found to be practical. By 1960 radiation will be used extensively in the preservation of meats and grains, he predicted.

In a democracy, Dr. Furnas said, people must know about the government or they will discontinue support of it. "Confidence goes up and down and at present I think it is up."

"As we are engaged in a research and development war, we have the confidence of the people who know what the purpose of this is the prevention of a third world war."

"Men for the first time in history are able to completely destroy each other," the research expert said. "It is a grim prospect."

"Although the ideal circumstances surrounding the relationship between men are brotherly love and self-understanding, this possibility is a long way off."

In the meantime, Dr. Furnas said, "we must remain strong militarily so that no one will dare to attack."

For the future, Dr. Furnas foresees an acute shortage of young scientists. "I think the difficulty lies in the secondary schools. There is a lack of good science teachers in high schools, therefore students are not interested or prepared" for a scientific career," he said.

My new york

BY MEL WEIMER

NEW YORK — The handsomest, most interesting amateur father in Manhattan is a male model named Colin Leslie Fox.

The word amateur is used because the 34-year-old Colin is, in his own words, "too much of a coward to marry." However, he's a better father than most professionals, since every Saturday and Sunday he goes down to St. Barnabas House, an Episcopal home for abandoned and underprivileged children in Mulberry street on the lower East Side—and spends the whole afternoon and early evening showing them a good time. You know, ferry rides, trips to the zoo, visits to the Statue of Liberty, et al.

To the kids, he herds six or eight around on each trip. Colin is "daddy." Small fry of all sizes, shapes and color address him thusly—and on buses this is apt to confuse the other passengers. Since Fox is a top model and seems to be in all the better ads, the kids' routine greeting to him is, "Hey, daddy—ya famous! Ya pitcher's in the paper!"

WHAT TAKES FOX even more interesting to adults, however, is that in July, 1953, he blew into New York after having sailed alone across the Atlantic ocean in 89 days. A one-time bookie and boxer, Colin and a friend had left England in 1951 in the 23-foot cutter Deben Peace, paused in Morocco, where the friend quit the journey—and then on across the big drink. When I talked with Fox today, the envy stood out all over me like prickly heat. It is an enormously select company, those who have sailed the Atlantic alone.

"I suppose," said Fox, an intelligent man with a wide streak of humor, "it could best be described as a disturbing experience. I did it because I wasn't very satisfied with myself as a man and thought it would help me prove, or achieve something. I'm not sure what. However, at times it was almost macabre."

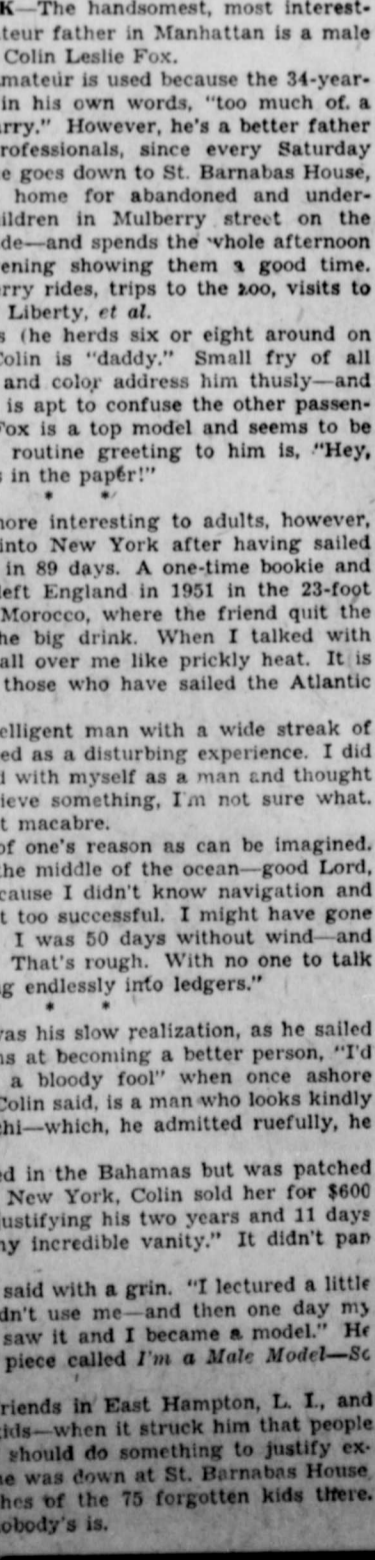

"I fancy it's as stern a test of one's reason as can be imagined. Not to know where you are in the middle of the ocean—good Lord, man. That happened to me, because I didn't know navigation and tried to teach myself and wasn't too successful. I might have gone mad. Maybe I did temporarily. I was 50 days without wind—and three months without company. That's rough. With no one to talk with, my only outlet was writing endlessly into ledgers."

WHAT UPSET TIM MOST was his slow realization, as he sailed along that, despite his lofty aims at becoming a better person, "I'd undoubtedly go back to being a bloody fool" when once ashore again. This sort of bloody fool, Colin said, is a man who looks kindly on luxury, easy living and chi-chi—which, he admitted ruefully, he still does.

The Deben Peace was wrecked in the Bahamas but was patched up and made it north. Once in New York, Colin sold her for $600 and then tried to write a book justifying his two years and 11 days of wandering and "adding to my incredible vanity." It didn't pan out.

"It was a 48-hour wonder," he said with a grin. "I lectured a little and the movies sent for but didn't use me—and then one day my photo was in Vogue, somebody saw it and I became a model." He has written, but not yet sold a piece called I'm a Male Model—So What?

One day Colin was visiting friends in East Hampton, L. I., and horsing around with their two kids—when it struck him that people were too hanged selfish and he should do something to justify existence. Next thing you know, he was down at St. Barnabas House, playing daddy to assorted batches of the 75 forgotten kids there. If his existence isn't justified, nobody's is.

Loss and Gain

The older man is saying, "I have worked hard to make this farm pay. But I wonder if that is enough. What is ahead... how much loss and how much gain? He has asked this minister to explain it all. What does it profit a man if he gains the whole world and loses his own soul? Things do not satisfy. Man is a spiritual creature. He cannot be content with food and shelter. He was made for fellowship with God and his soul will always be hungry until he knows that he is a son of God and learns to walk with the Eternal Spirit. He must go forward with Christ. He must go to church and live in daily consciousness of the favor and blessing of his God. As he sharpens his tools to lose or gain, so must he sharpen his mind and his heart for God. Any business will pay when God is the senior partner."

YOU IN THE CHURCH THE CHURCH IN YOU

Character is a by-product of the church. It is here that young and old alike are showered with benedictions that family and influence for a better citizenship and a stronger democracy in the church ministerial and a making religious character. Statesmen today declare that the church alone can furnish leadership to handle the affairs of state in these perilous times. Then we with our children should go to the church of our choice on Sunday. You in the Church and the Church in you form a combination for good. Be a regular CHURCH-GOER and a daily BIBLE READER.
